- ❑ RECONCILIATION. “And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath He reconciled in THE BODY of His flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreprouvable in His sight” (Col 1:21-22). In Christ’s death, sinners were brought back to the God from whom they were alienated by sin.

- SANCTIFICATION. “By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of THE BODY of Jesus Christ once for all” (Heb 10:10). The presentation of Jesus’ body as an offering for sin qualified us for Divine acceptance and employment.

In our baptism we were effectively united with Christ’s sacrificial body. All of the benefits that flowed from that sacrifice passed to us as we were united with Him in His vicarious death. That effective unity is what brought about our death to the Law—our release from its condemnation. It moved us beyond its jurisdiction.

CHRIST AND LAW CANNOT UNITE

It is not possible to be under the Law and united to Christ at the same time. When we are joined to the Lord, we are necessarily dead to the Law. Believers are now in covenant with Christ NOT Law. They now live for Him, not with a mind to fulfill a code or an obligation.

Some might imagine this arrangement to be less demanding than that of Law. This is a delusion. The person in covenant relation with God through Christ has more demands placed upon him than any law can place. No thought or deed can be his own. His body is not his own. He affection is to be placed on things above, and self is to be denied. With these more strenuous demands comes an abundance of grace that we may be able to keep them with great joy and peace.

The Law as a covenant condemned us. As a means of defining sin, it helps us. Seeing this distinction brings great liberty to the soul.

Robert Haldane said of Martin Luther, “When Luther discovered the distinction between the law as a covenant and as a rule, it gave such relief to his mind, that he considered himself as at the gate of paradise.” That view is one that joyfully acknowledges we are, in Christ, “dead to the law.” Yet, the believer holds the Law in the highest regard, hiding it in the heart, and serving it with the mind (Psa 119:11; Rom 7:25).

THE PURPOSE FOR OUR DEATH

^{4a} ... that you may be married to another; to Him who was raised from the dead, that we should bear fruit to God.” There is a reason why we have become “dead to the Law.” In our unity with Jesus in His death, our sins were put away, and the “flesh” circumcised, or cut away, from our essential persons (Col 2:11-13). However, separating us from our sins was not the major objective. Rather, it was the MEANS to a large purpose.

THAT WE MIGHT LIVE TO GOD

From a Summary point of view, the purpose of our death to the Law was that we might live toward God Himself. “For I through the law died to the law that I might live to God”^{NKJV} (Gal 2:19). To “live to God” is to live for Him, doing His will, and furthering His purpose on the earth. It is to be absorbed with His revealed agenda, engaged in casting down imaginations and high thoughts, and wrestling against principalities and powers. There is no purpose for dying to sin and the Law is this does not take place. Death must lead to life!

Let it be clear, until a person has died with Christ, or been “buried into His death,” life toward God is not possible. Prior to our death with Christ, we were “slaves of sin,” and had neither the will nor the capacity to live toward God. Only a death can resolve that situation.

WHY BE SUBJECT TO ORDINANCES?

“Therefore, if you died with Christ from the basic principles of the world, why, as though living in the world, do you subject yourselves to regulations; Do not touch, do not taste, do not handle, which all concern things which perish with the using; according to the commandments and doctrines of men? These things indeed have an appearance of wisdom in self-imposed religion, false humility, and neglect of the body, but are of no value against the indulgence of the flesh”^{NKJV} to sin, pass away, and everything becomes new (2 Cor 5:17). We develop a certain disdain for sin that can keep us from it if we will live by faith. Now our emphasis is doing what God pleases, not trying in the flesh avoid what He hates.

THAT YOU MAY BE MARRIED

From one point of view, we are “betrothed”, or “espoused” to Christ (2 Cor 11:2). Here a marriage between the believer and Christ is mentioned, and it is on an individual basis. Ordinarily, being Dying with Christ moves us beyond the need to be subject to elemental ordinances. When we die with Christ we receive a new heart, a new nature, and a new spirit. Old things, such as preferring to sin, pass away, and everything becomes new (2 Cor 5:17). We develop a certain disdain for sin that can keep us from it if we will live by faith. Now our emphasis is doing what God pleases, not trying in the flesh avoid what He hates.

Dying with Christ moves us beyond the need to be subject to elemental ordinances. When we die with Christ we receive a new heart, a new nature, and a new spirit. Old things, such as preferring wedded to Christ is a collective view, taking the entire church into account, which is Christ’s “bride” (John 3:29; Rev 21:2,9; 22:17). How refreshing to learn it is also an individual view.

This is a further development of the thought of being freed from the Law, which was our first husband. As long as we were under the Law, we could not be married to Christ. Our sin was still with us, and Christ cannot be joined to a person under the rule of Law and servitude to sin.

Our marriage with Christ has not taken place in its fulness, but it has, in a very real sense, started. We belong to Him as surely as Mary belonged to Joseph before their marriage had been fully culminated. "Before" they came together, she was found with child by the power of the Holy Spirit. And, "before" they came together, before Joseph knew the real situation, he was minded "to put her away privily (privately or secretly)" (Matt 1:19).

Raised with Christ

Marriage, in this passage, is viewed as being joined to the Lord in the first fruits the times in which we live. Sin is altogether too prominent in the modern church. There is too much of it in its leaders, and it is allowed too much in its constituency.

Under the Law, there was a perpetual "remembrance" of sin, year after year (Heb 10:3). The Law could not get rid of sin, but only remind people of its continual presence. But in Christ, this is not the case. Now the blood of Christ purges our conscience "from dead works to serve the living God" (Heb 9:14).

UNITED WITH A RISEN CHRIST

We are united with a RISEN Christ, and share His resurrection life. We have been freed to be married "to Him who is raised from the dead." Our lives are now "hid with Christ in God" (Col 3:3). We are presently participating in the "Divine nature" (2 Pet 1:4), and made "partakers

This "fruit" is the consequence of Christ living within us. As it is written, "I have been crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me" ^{NKJV} (Gal 2:20). It is also the result of God working in us, "both to will and to do of His good pleasure" (Phil 2:13). Again, this fruitage is to be viewed as God working in us "that which is wellpleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ" (Heb 13:21).

Notice that it is "fruit unto God." He is the prominent member of the Godhead. From the very beginning, the result of believing on Christ accrues to God's glory.

- We turn from Satan "unto God" (acts 26:18).
- We are now "alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom 6:11).
- We yield our "members as instruments of righteousness unto God" (Rom 6:13).
- We are to present our bodies as a living sacrifice "unto God" (Rom 12:1).
- In Christ, we are a "sweet savor of Christ" unto God (2 Cor 2:15).
- Jesus has reconciled both Jew and Gentile "unto God" (Eph 2:15).
- We are to give diligence to show ourselves "approved unto God" (2 Tim 2:15).
- One of the benefits of the New Covenant is that we can "draw nigh unto God" (Heb 7:19).
- We "come unto God" through the Lord Jesus (Heb 7:25).
- Jesus has made us "kings and priests unto God" (Rev 1:6).
- Strong faith that does not stagger at the promises gives "glory to God" (Rom 4:20).
- Through His death, Christ has reconciled us "to God" (Rom 5:10).
- The person who serves God in righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit, is "acceptable to God" (Rom 14:18).
- In Christ, our sacrifices and offerings are "acceptable and well pleasing to God" (Phil 4:18).
- We have "turned to God" to serve Him (1 Thess 1:9).

This is a further development of the thought of being freed from the Law, which was our first husband. As long as we were under the Law, we could not be married to Christ. Our sin was still with us, and Christ cannot be joined to a person under the rule of Law and servitude to sin.

sense. We are, after all, "risen with Christ" (Col 3:1). Not only were we "buried with Him in baptism," we are also "risen with Him through faith in the operation of God" (Col 2:12). That experience started the "married" experience of our text.

SIN HAS NO PLACE IN THIS MARRIAGE

The person who is dead to the law is not free to sin. God does not take a tolerant view toward sin in those identified with His Son. Ananias and Sapphira confirm this to be the case (Acts 5:1-10). The infamous fornicator at Corinth also cries out to us about the total unacceptability of sin in those who have named the Son (1 Cor 5:1-4).

Let it be clear that no person who is serving sin is "dead to the Law," for the Law is, indeed, "for the lawless." This whole matter points out the seriousness of of Christ" (Heb 3:14). Our life is resurrection life, and is moved along by the "power of His resurrection" (Phil 3:10), the power which God "wrought in Christ when He raised Him from the dead," exalting Him to His own right hand in the heavenly places (Eph 1:20). How radically this life differs from living under the domination of the law!

FRUIT UNTO GOD

"... that we should bring forth fruit unto God." Here is why we died to the law! Here is why we were raised with Christ and are married to Him. It was to bring forth "fruit unto God." This is the "fruit unto holiness" mentioned in 6:22. It is the fruit that glorifies God, to which Jesus alluded in John 15:8. It is the fruit of the Spirit, all of which is presented to God "in all goodness, righteousness and truth" (Eph 5:9). This is "the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God" (Phil

All of this is fruit – fruit “unto God.” In Christ, “much fruit” brings glory to the Father (John 15:8), and a lack of fruit results in removal from the Vine, who is Christ Himself (John 15:2).

It should be noted that all works previous to our union with Christ are “dead works,” from which our conscience must be purged (Heb 9:14). They were “dead” because they were not produced from its condemnation and married to the risen Christ. While it is true that David loved and served the Law prior to Christ (Psa 119:48,97,113,127,159,167), he did so as a spiritual pioneer, ahead of his time. Like Abraham, he had a faith that transcended the day in which he lived.

But for those in Christ Jesus, loving and serving the Law is the standard or norm, not the exception. We have been elevated to the heavenly places in Christ, truth of the gospel; which is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth” (Col 1:5-6).

SOME CONCLUDING THOUGHTS

Note with what care the Spirit speaks on our deliverance from the Law and new life in Christ Jesus. He ever holds before us the Divine intention behind this marvelous transformation. It is that we bring forth “fruit unto God.” This is designed to put a damper on the flesh, removing any tendency to be lenient with sin, or excuse our indulgence in it.

When a person sins, regardless of the reason, he has departed from the will of God. He has ceased to bring forth fruit unto God, for such fruit cannot come from sin. In Christ, fruit is related to “holiness” (6:21,21). Being in Christ NEVER results in sin. Faith, or believing God, will never yield a harvest of sin. Walking in the Spirit cannot lead to sin. Sin always springs from unbelief and alienation. In my judgment, there is a great need to emphasize this aspect of spiritual life. We are living in an indulgent age, and amidst a transgressing society. Unless “by reason of use,” our spiritual senses are “exercised to discern both good and evil” (Heb 5:14), we will find ourselves condoning what God condemns. In such a case, sin will surely express itself through us.

But for those in Christ Jesus, loving and serving the Law is the standard or norm, not the exception. We have been elevated to the heavenly places in Christ, and are capable of bringing forth consistent fruit to God in large measures. This is a most marvelous circumstance.

out of a oneness with Christ. Whether they were works of imagined goodness, or expressions of sinful lusts, they were “dead,” and were not “fruit unto God.” Our conscience must be “purged” of any trust in imagined “good works,” and any defilement caused by transgressions of the Law. All of this is involved in being freed from the Law and married to Christ.

VIEWING THE LAW

We will never be able to serve the Law with our minds until we are liberated and are capable of bringing forth consistent fruit to God in large measures. This is a most marvelous circumstance.

The circumstance of bringing forth fruit to God is beautifully stated in the Epistle to the Colossians. Paul gave thanks for the Colossians, praying diligently upon hearing of their faith in Christ and love toward “all the saints.” This, he said, was because “the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the

WHEN WE WERE IN THE FLESH

“For when we were in the flesh, the sinful passions which were aroused by the law were at work in our members to bear fruit to death.” As Paul progresses in opening spiritual life to our understanding, he masterfully weaves our past with our present, showing what a marvelous transition we have undergone. Under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, he speaks in strict harmony with what has occurred to us in Christ Jesus. He does not judge according to appearance, but righteously, appealing to the “new man” which is “renewed in knowledge according to the image of Him who created him” (Col 3:10). There is power in this approach because it serves to remind us of the great work God has done in us through Jesus Christ and by the Holy Spirit. To show us more fully how much we have been blessed, the Spirit will take us into the past, confirming our former condition. It will be precise, but it will be seen as the past, not the present.

WHEN WE WERE IN THE FLESH

Most of the modern translations maintain the word “flesh,” although the NIV uses the expression “sinful nature,” adding the footnote, “Or, the flesh.”

The phrase “IN the flesh” means controlled by the flesh, or the unregenerate part of our being. This is the part that came from Adam, or was “born of the flesh” (John 3:6).

An Argument for Consistent Terminology

One of the great disservices of so many translations is the loss of consistent and meaningful terminology. The text of Scripture has become so diluted by the great variety of translations that the meaning of some key words has been significantly obscured. The word “flesh” is a case in point.

Many translators have taken the liberty of interpreting the word “flesh” rather than translating it. From the etymological point of view, there is no question concerning the propriety of the word “flesh.” Taken from the word σαρκί, the word, from a translators viewpoint, is undoubtedly “flesh.” This precise word is used forty times from Romans through Second John. While various contexts do give it a slightly different significance, the meaning ALWAYS has to do with the natural, or temporal, part of us.

For those whose minds are cultured by Scripture, the word “flesh” rarely speaks of good. It is one of those terms that is undeniably related to sin and degradation. A few such uses will suffice to illustrate this point.

- ❑ “For I know that in me (that is, in my FLESH) nothing good dwells” (Rom 7:18).
- ❑ “I thank God; through Jesus Christ our Lord! So then, with the mind I myself serve the law of God, but with THE FLESH the law of sin” (Rom 7:25).
- ❑ “There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus, who do not walk according to THE FLESH, but according to the Spirit” (Rom 8:1).
- ❑ “For those who live according to THE FLESH set their minds on the things of THE FLESH, but those who live according to the Spirit, the things of the Spirit” (Rom 8:5).
- ❑ “So then, those who are in THE FLESH cannot please God” (Rom 8:8).
- ❑ “Therefore, brethren, we are debtors; not to THE FLESH, to live according to THE FLESH you will die” (Rom 8:12-13a).
- ❑ “But put on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make no provision for THE FLESH, to fulfill its lusts” (Rom 13:14).
- ❑ “Therefore, having these promises, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of THE FLESH and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God” (2 Cor 7:1).
- ❑ “Are you so foolish? Having begun in the Spirit, are you now being made perfect by THE FLESH?” (Gal 3:3).
- ❑ “For you, brethren, have been called to liberty; only do not use liberty as an opportunity for THE FLESH, but through love serve one another” (Gal 5:13).
- ❑ “I say then: Walk in the Spirit, and you shall not fulfill the lust of THE FLESH” (Gal 5:16).

- ❑ “For THE FLESH lusts against the Spirit, and the Spirit against THE FLESH; and these are contrary to one another, so that you do not do the things that you wish” (Gal 5:17).
- ❑ “Now the works of THE FLESH are evident, which are: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lewdness, idolatry, sorcery, hatred, contentions, jealousies, outbursts of wrath, selfish ambitions, dissensions, heresies, envy, murders, drunkenness, revelries, and the like; of which I tell you beforehand, just as I also told you in time past, that those who practice such things will not inherit the kingdom of God” (Gal 5:19-21).
- ❑ “And those who are Christ’s have crucified THE FLESH with its passions and desires” (Gal 5:24).
- ❑ “For he who sows to his FLESH will of THE FLESH reap corruption, but he who sows to the Spirit will of the Spirit reap everlasting life” (Gal 6:8).
- ❑ “Among whom also we all once conducted ourselves in the lusts of our FLESH, fulfilling the desires of THE FLESH and of the mind, and were by nature children of wrath, just as the others” (Eph 2:3).
- ❑ “For we are the circumcision, who worship God in the Spirit, rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in THE FLESH” (Phil 3:3).
- ❑ “For when they speak great swelling words of emptiness, they allure through the lusts of THE FLESH, through lewdness, the ones who have actually escaped from those who live in error” (2 Pet 2:18).
- ❑ “For all that is in the world; the lust of THE FLESH, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life; is not of the Father but is of the world” (1 John 2:16).

After reading these verses, the thought of being “IN THE FLESH” should strike fear into the heart. The use of words like “sinful nature” (NIV, NASB), “natural self” (NJB), “natural inclinations” (NJB), and “sinful passions” (ASV), have not served to clarify the concept of “flesh.” While there may be some helpful facets in these words, they have introduced a certain inconsistency in Scripture itself. That inconsistency has, in my judgment, diffused the power of the word. It is the peculiar prerogative of Apostolic doctrine to make clear that “no good thing” dwells in this part of the human makeup.

“Flesh” is what is “born of the flesh.” It is more than the chemical makeup of our bodies. There is the “will of the flesh” (John 1:13), “the things of the flesh” (Rom 8:5), “filthiness of the flesh” (2 Cor 7:1), “lust of the flesh” (Gal 5:16), “works of the flesh” (Gal 5:19), and the “body of the sins of the flesh” (Col 2:11). There is also “fleshly wisdom” (2 Cor 1:12) and “a fleshly mind” (Col 2:18).

Make no mistake about this, no good thing can come from “the flesh.” It “profits nothing” (John 6:63), leading to death and ultimate condemnation.

When, therefore, we were “in the flesh,” we were in a hopeless condition. We were not good. We were not righteous. We were “dead in trespasses and sins.” Sin controlled us, and we were its slaves. We were, by virtue of being dominated and controlled by the flesh, alienated from God and shut out from heaven. Earlier, in chapter six, the Spirit said we were “free from righteousness” at that time (6:20). It was a hopeless condition.

Now, this is the condition from which we have been liberated as a result of being baptized into Christ's death. Although we are "in the body," we are no longer "in the flesh." Later, the Spirit will affirm, "But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you" (Rom 8:9).

THE MOTIONS OF SINS

When we were "in the flesh," or in a state of nature, dominated by the temporal and enslaved to sin, there were certain activities within us. The KJV calls it "motions of sins." Other versions read, "sinful passions,"^{NKJV,NIV,NRSV} "passions of sins,"^{DARBY} "evil passions,"^{BBE} and "sinful desires."^{NLT}

The "motions of sins" are sin working within the individual, pulling him downward into the spiral of indulgence. Sin is not dormant. It has "motions," or passions and emotions that refuse to keep quiet. When we were "in the flesh," sin was like a bubbling volcano, erupting at every opportunity, and defiling everything about us. It certainly is not a lovely picture, but that is how it was when we were "in the flesh." We were governed by sin, which worked within us through lusts, or godless desires.

PASSIONS AROUSED BY THE LAW

Herein is a most marvelous circumstance. These sinful "motions," or the Law,"^{ASV} "which came into being through the Law,"^{BBE} and "the law aroused these evil desires."^{NLT} The New Century Version gives an unusually strong reading. "The law made us want to do sinful things." The Children's International Bible reads the same way. God's Word, a 1998 version of Scripture, says sin was "Stirred up by Moses' laws."

Whatever one may think about this verse, there is a resounding unanimity in all of the versions of Scripture. Care must be taken, however, not to ascribe fault to the holy Law of God. The text does not say the Law MADE us sin, but that it aroused the passions, or "motions," of sin. It is as though it awakened lusts, causing them to spring into action, and thereby defiling us. The Law excited, provoked, or inflamed sinful passions. It did not do this because it was evil, but because natural man is evil.

This is why the Scriptures affirm, "the strength of sin is the law" (1 Cor 15:56). As this will be developed at length in verses 7-14, I will reserve further comments for our coverage of those verses.

Do you wonder about the sinfulness of man? Are you confused about how far man fell when sin and death entered into the world? Ponder that God's holy Law aroused sin, causing it to express itself which I am familiar. For the most part, the people in those sectarian precincts are woefully ignorant of the nature and power of sin. It is a most tragic circumstance.

FRUIT UNTO DEATH

And what was the result of the awakening of the sin principle within us? How were we affected by it? The "motions of sins" worked in our "members to bring forth fruit unto death." Mind you, this is a condition that existed when we were married to the Law—when it was our master, and we were responsible to it.

All of our faculties were impacted by the motions, or emotions, of sin. Sin proliferated through our entire beings, infecting our thoughts, desires, ambitions, judgments, and perceptions. All of this happened while we were wed to the Law, and we could not extricate ourselves from the dilemma! There was not a single part of our complex persons that was not tainted by these lusts. They "worked in our members," driving us further from God and deeper into sin and transgression.

Those who can see these things have reason to thank God we have died to the Law in order that we might be married to another. That death to the Law was the prelude to living unto God. The new life we receive in Christ Jesus is aroused by the Gospel, and fueled by the promises. It has no propensity to sin, but is a more precise image of God than ever born by even Adam, the "first man."

Our marriage to Christ has brought power to us that can never be realized through the principle of law. Life in Him is superior in every way. Now, praise the Lord, we can "awake unto righteousness and sin not" (1 Cor 15:34), rather than have sinful passions awakened and inflamed by the holy Law of God. Now God works in us to will and do of His own good pleasure. What a "great salvation" has been brought to us! Let us see to it we do not neglect it in any way (Heb 2:3).

All of our faculties were impacted by the motions, or emotions, of sin. Sin proliferated through our entire beings, infecting our thoughts, desires, ambitions, judgments, and perceptions. All of this happened while we were wed to the Law, and we could not extricate ourselves from the dilemma!

NOW WE ARE DELIVERED FROM THE LAW

"^{6a} But now we have been delivered from the Law, having died to what we were held by . . ." Never forget this: we have to be "delivered from the Law!" Whatever you may think of the human will and man's power of analysis, they were wholly inadequate to remove men from the dominion of the condemning Law! In my judgment, there has been far too much emphasis placed on the “you can do it” approach to salvation. The truth of the matter is that we could NOT do it. We could not get rid of our sin or the inclination to sin. We were impotent to come out from under the dominion of the Law. We could not stop it from condemning us. In fact, when it spoke to us, sin broke out the more, expressing itself in all of our capacities.

Our condition apart from Christ was one of death (Eph 2:5), alienation (Col 1:21), captivity (2 Tim 2:26), servitude to sin (Rom 6:17), darkness (Eph 5:8), and hopelessness (Eph 2:12). We had hard and stony hearts (Ezek 11:19), were blind (Eph 4:18), and our ears were uncircumcised (Acts 7:51).

DELIVERED FROM THE LAW

Let it be clear that all who are NOT delivered from the Law ARE condemned by it. It was given that “every mouth might be stopped, and all the world become guilty before God” (Rom 3:19). The fact that people run quickly to sin does not mean they are not under the Law. Because sinful souls do not feel the restraint of Law does not mean they are not ruled by it. Their involvement in sin is only accruing wrath for them. In the words of Scripture, “But the hypocrites in heart heap up wrath” (Job 36:13). Again, “But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath” (Rom 2:5).

Verse fourteen of the sixth chapter said, “for you are not under Law.” Now the Spirit tells us why we are not under the domination of law. It is certainly not because we have fulfilled it. It is not, as some imagine, because the Law has passed away, or been erased. We have been “DELIVERED from the Law,” or “released”^{NASB,NIV} from its domination.

Not only were we “delivered from the power of darkness” (Col 1:13) and “the wrath to come” (1 Thess 1:10), we were also “delivered” from the Law that condemned us. In both cases, we were helpless to change our situation. We could not break loose from the powers of darkness, and we could not reverse the sentence of the Law.

The accomplishment of Christ’s mission is pictured this way in the second chapter of Hebrews. “Inasmuch then as the children have partaken of flesh and blood, He Himself likewise shared in the same, that through death He might destroy him who had the power of death, that is, the devil, and release those who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage” (2:14-15).

The “fear of death” was induced by the Law, which declared “The soul that sinneth, it shall die” (Ezek 18:4,20; Rom 6:23; Gal 3:13). In fact, this was the very first curse pronounced by God—and it had to do with breaking Law. “But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die” (Gen 2:17). Like a ruthless master, the Law stood over us, refusing to let us go, all the while calling for our well-deserved execution. If we were ever to experience freedom from its condemnation, we would have to be delivered.

Now We Are Delivered

Whatever our former condition, “now we are delivered from the Law!” God delivered us through Christ and by the Holy Spirit. He did it, as will be confirmed, with inscrutable wisdom. No mortal could ever have conceived of this means of deliverance.

WE DIED TO WHAT HELD US

We died to what held us! Other versions read as follows. “Having died to what we were held by,”^{NKJV} “having died to that by which we were bound,”^{NASB} “by dying to what once bound,”^{NIV} “dead to that which held us captive,”^{NRSV} “having been made dead to that which had power over us,”^{BBE} “having died to what was binding us.”^{NJB}

Did We Die, or Did the Law Die?

Some versions read as though the Law is what died. “That being dead wherein we were held,”^{KJV} “That being dead by which we were held,”^{WEBSTERS} “that being dead by which we were held,”^{REVISEDWEBSTERS} “that being dead in which we were held,”^{YOUNGS LITERAL}

While these readings may appear to say the Law died, none of these translations actually say that. If we apply the word “that” to the Law, the text appears to justify the conclusion that the Law died. On the other hand, if read the word “that” in the sense of “in order that,” the death applies to believers. That is the sense of the text.

If the language does not appear to justify this conclusion, the doctrine will. Beginning with Romans 6:2, the death of believers is the emphasis. “We that are dead to sin” (6:2), “baptized into His death” (6:3), “buried with Him by baptism into death” (6:4), “in the likeness of His death” (6:5), “our old man is crucified” (6:6), “he that is dead is freed from sin” (6:7), “reckon yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin” (6:11) “those who are alive from the dead” (6:13). As if this was not enough, the statement is nailed down firmly in 7:4. “Therefore, my brethren, you also have become dead to the law through the body of Christ, that you may be married to another; to Him who was raised from the dead, that we should bear fruit to God.”

It is difficult to conceive of the Spirit declaring then matter with any more clarity. The notion that the Law has somehow died is an absurdity unworthy of embrace. If that was the case, we would not need to be delivered, for a dead Law could not hold us! Further, if the law itself had died, or had been abrogated, it could neither condemn or have dominion over anyone, sinner or not. But this is not the case, for the Law is still “for the lawless” (1 Tim 1:9). It still is a “schoolmaster” to bring men to Christ. Men are not released way. The NRSV reads, “erasing the record that stood against us with its legal demands.” It was the Law’s CLAIM against us that was cancelled and nailed to the cross.

EPHESIANS 2:15. Here again, the delivered from what “held us,” or “what we were held by.” Other versions read, “by which we were bound,”^{NASB} “what once bound us,”^{NIV} “that which held us captive,”^{NRSV} “that wherein we were held,”^{ASV} “wherein we were detained,”^{DARBYS} “that which had power over us,”^{BBE} and “what was binding us.”^{NJB}

The Law will not let a guilty man go! It holds him fast, even defiling his conscience after he has offered sacrifice after sacrifice (Heb 10:1-4). Whenever the Law makes a demand upon the sinner, even if those demands are seemingly fulfilled with a most exacting precision, the law shouts “GUILTY” in the face of the transgressor.

But when we become “dead to the Law through the body of Christ,” the Law condemns us no longer. By being joined to Christ, we have died to the order over which the Law presides. It cannot condemn us, for the God who spoke the Law has Himself justified us (Rom 8:33). The Law, therefore, very much alive and speaking, looks at the person who has died with Christ, and condemns him not. He is in the heavenly places, and his sin has been washed away. The part of him that is in fellowship with Christ is clean and pure, and is the dominant part.

What is even more, the Law of God, far from being abrogated, has been written upon the heart of the believer and put into his mind. Now, the righteousness of the Law is fulfilled by the believer (Rom 8:1,4), something that would be utterly impossible if the Law had died or been abolished.

It is absurd to think that God would write a law upon a heart that had been abolished. Or, that He would put into our minds a Law that had been nailed to the cross. Further, to affirm that the righteousness of a law that had been abrogated is fulfilled in those who are in Christ Jesus is, indeed, stretching our imagination.

It appears to me that men have attributed their own ignorance to God, representing as acting not only in contradiction of His word, but also in violation of His Divine nature. That is particularly reprehensible when you consider we partake of that nature.

If we have died to the law in order to be freed from its dominion and condemnation, and in order to serve God in the newness of Spirit, let us once and for all have done with everything that is lifeless and unproductive! Such things are out of place in the Lord’s service.

from that “schoolmaster” until “faith comes” (Gal 3:24-25).

Wasn’t The law Nailed to the Cross?

Some will respond by saying the Law was nailed to the cross, removed and taken out of the way once and for all. It is written, “Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross” (Col 2:14). And again, “Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace” (Eph 2:15). And again, “For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth” (Rom 10:4).

In each of these verses painstaking precision can be seen. None of them say the Law was abolished, abrogated, or removed. It was not the Law that was judged in the cross, but the transgressions of the Law. Sin could not be removed by destroying the Law, for it was in the world before there was a law (Rom 5:13).

COLOSSIANS 2:14. The point here is not that the Law itself was nailed to the cross, but the indebtedness that was created by violating its precepts. The NASB therefore reads, “having canceled out the certificate of debt consisting of decrees against us.” The Law in its condemning capacity was taken out of the Spirit carefully states the case. He does not say the commandments were “abolished,” but “the commandments contained in ordinances or regulations.” These were not the Ten Commandments, the platform of the Law, but the commandments pertaining to the ceremonial Law. These commandments forced men to deal with their sin, offering various and frequent sacrifices. It also imposed washings and other formalities upon the constituents of the Old Covenant that were required because of their sin. However, when Christ removed our sin, that brought an abrupt end to the “ordinances” of the law, for sin is what required them all.

ROMANS 10:4. Again, the case is stated most precisely. The Law was ended as a means to righteousness, and not as a moral standard: “the end of the Law FOR righteousness.” Because faith is the exclusive means of appropriating righteousness, and because the death of Christ has opened the door for faith to be given to men, the Law has been terminated as the way to become righteous.

Law Has No Claim Over the Dead

Apart from these several observations, the whole point of the text is that the Law has no claim over the dead—and we have died with Christ!

WE WERE HELD CAPTIVE

Our text affirms that we have been

THE REASON FOR THAT DELIVERANCE

^{6b} . . . so that we should serve in the newness of the Spirit and not in the oldness of the letter.” Why is it that we have died with Jesus? For what purpose have we been raised to walk in newness of life? What is the reason for being released from the Law by our death with Jesus? All of this has been done that we might serve the Lord “in newness of Spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.” Right here we will come to grips with some of the major deficiencies in modern religion, particularly in the Western world.

NEWNESS OF SPIRIT

Pet 3:13). Under such marvelous conditions, it is utterly unreasonable to attempt to serve God in old and lifeless routines.

Serving God in “newness of Spirit” is serving Him in the energy, and under the direction, of the Holy Spirit. This Spirit has been “poured out upon us richly through Jesus Christ our Savior”^{NASB} (Tit 3:5). In addition, the Lord Jesus Himself is appropriately described as a “life-giving Spirit”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 15:45).

Serving God “in newness of Spirit,” is ministering to Him in the power of the is NOT an enviable position.

“Newness of Spirit” is not fleshly hype. It is driven by spiritual insight, godly joy, and faith that sees Him who is invisible. Where “newness of Spirit” is not found, God is not being served, and His will is not being done. It makes little difference how elaborate the institution or appearance may be.

OLDNESS OF LETTER

Attempting to serve God in the “oldness of letter” is Old Covenant religion. It is trying to serve God without the Spirit of God. It is following procedures instead of Jesus. It is a liturgy instead of a living sacrifice. “Oldness of letter” involves the heartless observance of rules and procedures. It has no spiritual life in it, does not perceive God, or have a heart for His great salvation.

Before we were in Christ, “oldness of letter” was all that was available to us. Most of us did not even follow that. But whether we did or not, life was vain and pointless—even religious life. Now we have been delivered from lifeless religious procedures—serving God in “the oldness of the letter.” That kind of service allows you to keep a hard heart and a defiled conscience, yet go through a religious routine. Such things are altogether too common in our world.

If we have died to the law in order to be freed from its dominion and condemnation, and in order to serve God in the newness of Spirit, let us once and for all have done with everything that is lifeless and unproductive! Such things are out of place in the Lord’s service, and damaging to our hearts and minds.

Attempting to serve God in the “oldness of letter” is Old Covenant religion. It is trying to serve God without the Spirit of God. It is following procedures instead of Jesus. It is a liturgy instead of a living sacrifice. “Oldness of letter” involves the heartless observance of rules and procedures.

Newness is essential to the service of God. Old manners are not acceptable. We have been given “new life” (Rom 6:4), a “new heart,” and a “new spirit” (Ezek 36:26). We have even been given a “new covenant” (Heb 12:24), and are ourselves a “new creation” (2 Cor 5:17). We have been given a “new man” that is to be “put on” (Eph 4:24), and come to God by “a new and a living way” (Heb 10:20). We are “newborn babes” (1 Pet 2:2), and are even looking for “a new heavens and a new earth wherein dwells righteousness” (2 new creation. It is living under the domination of the “new man,” while subordinating the “old man,” not allowing him to govern our lives.

But none of this could happen until we died to sin and the Law, and were made alive to God through Jesus Christ. Until we die with Jesus, and are buried with Him, and raised with Him, we are shut up to lifeless and unacceptable service to God—if, indeed, there is any effort to serve Him at all. It should be apparent that this

CONCLUSION

In Christ Jesus we have been brought to the end of lifeless formalities. Having been raised from death in trespasses and sins, and buried with Jesus into death to sin, we are now “children of light” (Eph 5:8), possessing “the light of life” (John 8:12). However, all of this is to no avail if we are ignorant of what has happened to us in Christ Jesus. Many of God’s people are regularly served doses of law and do-goodism. They are told what they ought to do, with little regard to what has happened to them, and what they possess, in Christ Jesus. Too often they are addressed as though they were still enemies of God, and with a near-total disregard for the fact that they have been reconciled to Him.

These unfortunate conditions have compelled multitudes to devote themselves to temporary pursuits, perceiving the service of God to be futile and without genuine benefit. They are completely unaware of the “much more” (Rom 5:9,10,15,17) aspect of spiritual life and the “do you not know” (Rom 6:3,16;, 7:1; 1 Cor 3:16; 6:2-3) approach to living.

In Christ both death and life are experienced, and both are a blessing. We are dead to sin and alive to God. We are dead to the Law and married to Jesus. Our situation has been reversed by the grace of God, and through the Lord Jesus Christ. We were once dead to God and alive to sin. Now we are dead to sin and alive to God. Once we are barren and now we bear fruit.

If there is one thing that should come across to our hearts in this text, it is the marvelous advantage that we have in Christ Jesus. Our sin has been forgiven, and the Law cannot condemn us. We have died to what cursed us, and are alive to the One who blesses us. All of this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes (Psa 118:23). The Law cannot condemn us, and the flesh has been robbed of its power. In Christ, you are united with Him in His death, burial, and resurrection. WYou have every reason to rejoice and be glad!

Lesson Number 22

SIN GAINS THE ADVANTAGE THROUGH THE LAW

7:7-14 What shall we say then? Is the law sin? Certainly not! On the contrary, I would not have known sin except through the law. For I would not have known covetousness unless the law had said, "You shall not covet." ⁸ But sin, taking opportunity by the commandment, produced in me all manner of evil desire. For apart from the law sin was dead. ⁹ I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died. ¹⁰ And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death. ¹¹ For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it killed me. ¹² Therefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy and just and good. ¹³ Has then what is good become death to me? Certainly not! But sin, that it might appear sin, was producing death in me through what is good, so that sin through the commandment might become exceedingly sinful. ¹⁴ For we know that the law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin. – Romans 7:7-14 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

The nature of spiritual life can easily elude us. It is a life in which conflict with sin is realized, even though sin does not have dominion over us. We confront sin, though we are not dominated by it. Some have imagined that when we are born again, every part of the sinful nature is removed from us. This is taught prominently in many conservative circles. The notion is founded upon the sixth chapter of Romans, which states the following: "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin" (verse 6). The NIV reads, "For we know that our old self was crucified with him so that the body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves to sin."

DESTROYED DOES NOT EQUAL NON-EXISTENT

The phrase "body of sin might be destroyed," or "done away with," is not to be equated with "no longer existent." The latter part of the seventh chapter will strongly confirm this to be the case. The action that takes place when the "body of sin" is "destroyed" is twofold. First, it is cut away from our essential persons by means of the "circumcision of Christ" (Col 2:11-12). It has, therefore, no part whatsoever with the "new man" (Col 3:10), or the "new creation" (2 Cor 5:17) that is experienced in the new birth. Just as the Canaanites and other godless nations were not part of Israel, even though they dwelt in the same land for a season, so the "body of sin" is not part of the "new creation," even though it is found in the same house of clay.

Second, the "body of sin" is destroyed in the sense of losing its dominance. It is impotent against faith. In this sense, it has been "destroyed" just as Satan was destroyed in the death of Christ (Heb 2:14). He exists, yet is powerless when the believer walks in the Spirit and by faith. Sin, therefore, has no power over us when we walk in the Spirit. As it is written, "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh" (Gal 5:16).

NOT A SIMPLISTIC CIRCUMSTANCE

The matter of our deliverance from sin and the Law, therefore, is not a simplistic circumstance. It is not to be viewed as though we were already out of this world and in the presence of the Lord. We remain in the body, and while there, we are, in a very specific sense, “absent from the Lord” (2 Cor 5:6). While “in the body” (Heb 13:3), we have to contend with sin, even though it has been dethroned.

David had to contend with his wayward son Absalom, who, though not actually king, sought to dethrone David and usurp his throne (2 Sam 15-17). Moses had to contend with Korah and his cohorts, who sought to displace him, even though they were not the true leaders (Num 16). Joshua had to contend with at least thirteen hostile kings in the very land given to Israel by God (Josh 9-10). It should not surprise us that we still struggle against sin, even though we have been forgiven all trespasses and sin has lost its dominion over us. Just as entering Canaan did not mean struggle was over, so entering into Christ does not mean our struggles cease. In fact, this chapter will confirm our rebirth has actually initiated a struggle of epochal, and often confusing, proportions.

THE RELEVANCE OF THIS

All of this has very much relevance to the matter before us. Because we still have to contend with sin, we are obliged to know more fully of our relationship to the Law. This is required lest we be drawn back to a system of law, imagining it is sufficient to make us righteous.

Not only does sin no longer have dominion over us, it has lost its mastery over us because we “are not under the law, but under grace” (Rom 6:14). There is no grace under Law, no leniency, no kindness toward the transgressor. Rather than offering a remedy for sin, the Law actually accentuates sin. It not only points out the guilt of sin, but aggravates and inflames it: i.e., “sinful passions aroused by the law”^{NIV} (verse 5).

To be “delivered from the law,” therefore, involves being emancipated from the condition produced by Law—God’s Law: i.e., “the sinful passions aroused by the law.”^{NIB} Now, rather than God’s Word inflaming sinful passions, it feeds the soul, nourishes the spirit, and enlightens the heart. This marvelous condition has come to pass because of our unity with Christ’s death. In that unity, we died to the Law in order that we might be married to Jesus.

LEST WE THINK WRONGLY

Now, lest we begin to think wrongly about the Law, the Spirit will confirm there was no fault in the Law. Sinful passions were not awakened in us because of any flaw or deficiency in the Law of God. Rather, it pointed out our sinful condition in order that we might see the need of salvation, for the worse sin gets, the more we need a Savior.

The Law Did Not Cause Sin

With great care, the Spirit shows how we cannot blame the Law for our condition. If there were not sinful passions in us, they could not have been aroused by the Law. If sin did not dwell in us, the Law could not have been its “strength” (1 Cor 15:56). God has already proved that all men, Jew and Gentile alike, are sinners by nature. Now He will show us it is no fault of the Law.

The Law did not cause sin, but was its “strength.” It did not make us sinners, but aroused the sinful passions that resided in the human nature. Men were sinners before the Law, not because of the Law. Under Law sin dominated us because it persistently pointed out we had sinned and come short of the glory of God.

Protection Against Returning

If we take seriously the teaching that follows, we will see the utter absurdity of returning to a system of Law. If we seek to be regulated by Law—even God’s Law—sin will only gain the dominancy over us once again. This is because we still have a fallen nature—“the flesh.” Even though it has been cut away from our essential persons by the “circumcision of Christ,” yet it lives in these bodies with us. Should we choose to serve God under a system of Law, it will arouse the passions of that “old man” that is still with us (Eph 4:22).

The teaching before us is most vital. Though rarely heard in the modern church this is a precious elixir of soul-healing ointment from heaven! It reveals the magnitude of our deliverance from both sin and the Law.

With great care, the Spirit shows how we cannot blame the Law for our condition. If there were not sinful passions in us, they could not have been aroused by the Law. If sin did not dwell in us, the Law could not have been its “strength”

WHAT SHALL WE SAY?

“7:7 What shall we say then? Is the law sin? Certainly not! On the contrary, I would not have known sin except through the law. For I would not have known covetousness unless the law had said, ‘You shall not covet.’” When speaking to us, the Lord frequently demands a response. Divine communication is not intended to merely convey information, or increase our knowledge of facts. There is such a thing as “walking in the truth” (3 John 3), a condition where the human spirit is brought into the “communion of the Holy Spirit” (2 Cor 13:14). By saying “What shall we say then?” the Spirit is drawing us into a more profound and effective consideration of the truth. This is necessary because there is more to what has been said than can be comprehended in a cursory or surface consideration. The spiritual roots of those who linger on the surface of truth will not grow deep. Shallow thought is an enemy to those who live by faith because it is too close to the world, and too far from God. One of the great tragedies of our time and culture is its commitment to shallow thought and surface considerations. Extended thought, like meditation (Psa 19:14; 104:34), cogitation (Dan 7:28), and musing (Psa 39:3), are not common among professed believers. The desire for appearance, entertainment, and brevity, have yielded shallow and unproductive thoughts and weak faith.

Knowing this proclivity among religious people, and the devil’s aggressiveness to promote shallowness, the Spirit demands our involvement. “What shall we say then?”

IS THE LAW SIN?

The question is a most intriguing one! One might imagine it would better be asked, “Does the Law promote sin?” Rather, we are asked if the Law itself “IS sin.” Every translation, with the exception of the New Living Translation, reads the same way. That exception reads, “am I suggesting that the law of God is evil?”

I understand the question to mean, “Can we credit the Law with our sin? Does the role of the law in the matter of sin relieve us of the responsibility for our sin?” Just as flesh produces flesh and spirit produces spirit (John 3:6), so only sin can produce sin. If the Law caused us to sin, it would itself be sin. But that is not the case. Sin came from the principle of sin that dwells, by nature, within the flesh. Therefore, the Spirit forbids us to think of the Law as itself sin: “God forbid.” May it never be!

Those who are reconciled to God hold the highest respect for the Law of God. They do not demean it because it is holy, being spoken by the Almighty Himself. When put to the test, they will come to the defense of the Law, siding with Jesus who magnified the Law and made it “honorable” (Isa 42:21). The motions, or passions, of sin were aroused “by the Law.” However, the “motions” or “passions” were not created by the Law. They were “aroused” or “inflamed” by it.

There is a principle here that must be seen. When there is enmity between God and man, Divine Law accentuates that enmity, but can by no means resolve it. Outside of Christ, sin so dominates man that the righteous demands of the Lord’s Law only make him worse.

A Principle

There is a principle here that must be seen. When there is enmity between God and man, Divine Law accentuates that enmity, but can by no means resolve it. Outside of Christ, sin so dominates man that the righteous demands of the Lord’s Law only make him worse. To make Law the means of righteousness more firmly entrenches men in sin. This, of course, is why we have died with Christ, that we might be delivered from the Law.

I WOULD NOT HAVE KNOWN SIN

“Indeed I would not have known what sin was except through the law.” ^{NIV} Notice, Paul does not say “I would not have sinned,” but “I would not have KNOWN sin.” Outside of Christ, the reality of sin is not the question, but the acknowledge and acknowledgment of it.

Personal Sin

This is not the knowledge of sin in general, although the law did define sin in a general sense. This is the knowledge of personal sin—the awareness that I am a sinner. This is the most precise meaning of the statement made earlier: “for by the law is the knowledge of sin” (3:20). This is not an academic definition, but a consciousness of sin. In fact, that is how the NIV reads: “through the law we become conscious of sin.” This is a matter of conviction, not factual knowledge for the intellect.

This, then, refers to the knowledge of personal sin—particular infractions of the Law. It is as though he said, “I would not have been aware of my own involvement in sin except through the Law.” We must zealously seek deliverance from academic, or pedantic, approaches to spiritual life. These are lifeless approaches that have no personal relevance. They leave the individual pointing at the sins of others, and unaware of his own.

A proper understanding of the Law reveals our personal transgressions. It is not designed to give us a merely theoretical grasp of the definition of sin. Rather, it convinces its students of their transgression, and consequently of their need for a Savior. It is in this way that the law was “our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith” (Gal 3:24). Thus, when he said “I had not known sin, but by the law,” Paul states that apart from the Law he would not have realized he was guilty of sin. The New Living Translation says it very well: “but it was the law that showed me my sin.”

What Sin Was Made Known to Paul?

God convicted Cain of murder (Gen 4:10-11). He convicted David of adultery (2 Sam 12:7-10). Of what sin did the Law convince Paul?

Elsewhere Paul testifies to his outward and sincere piety. His words are found in Philippians 3:6: “as to the righteousness which is in the Law, found blameless.” Before a condemning Jewish council Paul confessed, “I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day” (Acts 23:1). Even in his persecution of the household of faith, his deeds were done “in ignorance and unbelief,” thinking he was serving God in opposing those who believed on Jesus Christ (1 Tim 1:13; Acts 26:9). Prior to his calling, Saul of Tarsus was not an indulgent man, feeding his fleshly appetites, and going after the things of the world. The Law did not cut him down with the conviction of baser sins, or with the neglect of the Sabbath day, or a lack of zeal for the Lord of hosts. Outwardly, Paul kept the law and walked orderly.

Unlawful Desires

The Word of the Lord is a “a accommodating. It does not allow for a single wayward thought, but forthrightly condemns it.

Lust Is Deeper Than The Will

I understand “lust” and coveting to be deeper in man than the will. Lust provokes the will, but is not synonymous with it. “Lust” is the means by which we rejection of the “lust,” with the individual refusing to dwell upon it or fulfill it. This was the case of Paul before he was in Christ. We know he did not fulfill the lusts, for he was “blameless” concerning the righteousness of the Law (Phil 3:6).

However, under the Law, the subordination of lust has no merit. The presence of lust, even if it is not cultured or fulfilled, is condemned by the Law. Even if it does not work itself out into external expressions, and is subdued by the mind, yet the Law condemns it.

This is a critical distinction, and will be developed throughout the remainder of this chapter. It will confirm how marvelous and indispensable it is to be “delivered from the Law,” and have the old nature cut away, or “circumcised” from us. Keep in mind, regeneration does not change “the flesh.” It remains the same in its nature and bent. Before and after the new birth, “no good thing” can be found in the flesh (Rom 7:18).

THE LAW BROUGHT THE KNOWLEDGE

Through the Law, particularly the last of the ten commandments (“Thou shalt not covet”), Paul came to see that sin was at the very root of the fallen nature. If there was no other commandment but the tenth one, the entirety of the human race would have still been condemned.

Although man was created to desire and fellowship with God, the entrance of sin into the world so corrupted him that he desired and sought after self gratification only. The spiritual appetite of men became corrupted. Even though God “determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live,” in order that they might “seek Him and perhaps reach out for Him and find Him” (Acts 17:26), yet this did not occur. Men did NOT seek after God.

We know this is the case because the Spirit has already affirmed, “there is none that seeketh after God” (Rom 3:11). The explanation for this condition is found in this single word: “lust.” “Lust” is the cause behind every overt act of sin. It is the mother of all willing involvement in transgression.

I understand “lust” and coveting to be deeper in man than the will. Lust provokes the will, but is not synonymous with it. “Lust” is the means by which we are drawn into sin. “Lust,” or unlawful desire, is resident in the flesh, and is part and parcel of it.

discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart” (Heb 4:12). It probes human motives and hidden desires. It uncovers unlawful desires, or “lusts,” showing them to be purely in the interest of self, with no regard for God. Thus Paul says, “for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet.” Later versions use the word “covetousness.” This, in my judgment, is too weak. The word translated “lust” is ἐπιθυμίαν, and is unusually strong. It is often translated “concupiscence” (Rom 7:8; Col 3:5; 1 Thess 4:5). It refers to a strong longing for what is forbidden, and can have a wide range of objects.

The point of the text is that such lusts were covered in the commandment, “Thou shalt not covet.” I would venture to say that very few people have made that association. But Paul, formerly Saul, was an astute thinker in the Law. In his pondering, it came home to him that while he may not had coveted his neighbors house, wife, or possessions (Ex 20:17), he had desired things that were not right.

It is vital to see the point being made. Men do not think lusting is sinful. Some have even said, “You can’t go to hell for what you are thinking,” a stupid saying from past days. Another popular song in the 1950’s heralded youthful innocence with the words, “Standing on the corner, watching all the girls go by.” By nature, men do not look upon the secret and unexpressed desires of the heart as being sinful. But the Law is not so are drawn into sin. “Lust,” or unlawful desire, is resident in the flesh, and is part and parcel of it. Thus it is written, “put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts” (Eph 4:22). These “lusts,” or “deceitful desires”^{NIV} are part of the fallen nature. They parallel the “spirit of your mind” that is found in the “new man,” or regenerated nature (Eph 4:23). Just as the spiritual mind (Rom 8:6) is drawn to heaven, so the “lust” resident in the flesh is drawn toward earth.

The Old Testament word that parallels this idea of “lust” is “imagination,” as used in the following texts (Jer 3:17; 9:13; 16:12; 18:12). Most contemporary versions translate the word “stubbornness,” or “stubbornly.” Others read with more focus rendering the word “perversity,”^{DARBY} and “wicked inclinations.”^{NJB} It is the bent, or frame, of the heart—the way it leans, so to speak. Thus the above texts refer to an “evil heart.” The unregenerate heart does not crave the right thing, but the wrong thing. Thus Jeremiah wrote, “The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?” (Jer 17:9).

“Lusts” speak of the corruption of the natural man. They are inherent appetites for what the law forbids. They provoke the individual to want the wrong thing. These are awakened by the law, not created by it. They are part of human nature, and only need provocation to rise up in dominating vigor. There may be a

WHEN SIN TOOK OPPORTUNITY

“But sin, taking opportunity by the commandment, produced in me all manner of evil desire. For apart from the law sin was dead.” “Sin,” in this case, equates to the sinful nature (for want of a better term). It is the principle, or law, of sin that is resident in unregenerate man. Later Paul will make much of this use of the word “sin” (verses 9,11,13,17,20,23,25). Here, “sin” is not the same as transgression, or a specific act or deed. Rather, it is the cause of transgression, disobedience, and iniquity.

The passage before us is scarcely known by those with whom I have been identified. It is as though it was altogether cut out of their theology. For far too many people, what they have heard preached all of their lives would not have been affected one whit if this passage had been removed from the Bible.

But this text has not been removed. Rather, through the inspiration of the Holy spirit, it has been inserted in Scripture. That fact alone proves how critical it is, for “all Scripture” is intended to make the man of God “complete, thoroughly equipped for every good work” (2 Tim 3:17). Even the higher critics of Scripture, with all of their literary butchery, have not managed to explain or take the text away.

There is not person, apart from Jesus Christ, who has not sinned. Thus it is written, “all have sinned” (Rom 3:23; 5:12). Yet, even if no actual expression of sin had taken place, the principle of sin is still found within the natural man. It is even in the innocent infant, who has not yet come to distinguish good and evil.

David correctly assessed the situation when he said, “Surely I was sinful at birth, sinful from the time my mother conceived me”^{NIV} (Psa 51:5). He did not mean he had committed transgressions from birth, but that the sin-principle was resident in him from birth. That is the sense in which “sin” is used in this verse.

Elsewhere, the wicked are said to “go astray” from the womb (Psa 58:3). Following the flood, the Lord said “Never again will I curse the ground because of man, even though every inclination (“imagination”^{KJV}) of his heart is evil from childhood”^{NIV} (Gen 8:21). Even in Job’s spiritually primitive day, those with only a cursory acquaintance with God knew man was fundamentally “unclean” (Job 14:4), and drinks iniquity “like water” (Job 15:14-16).

These words are not in the Bible as mere historical dialog, to be ruled out by contextual or historical considerations. These are in Scripture according to Divine intent, and represent man as he is apart from Christ, or in an unregenerate state.

Paul will now tell us the effect the Law had upon corrupted human nature. He has already said its “sinful passions” were “aroused by the Law” (7:5). Now he elaborates on the effects of that arousal.

TAKING OPPORTUNITY BY THE COMMANDMENT

“But sin, seizing the opportunity afforded by the commandment.”^{NIV} If ever the natural corruption of man can be proved, it is in this statement! If men doubt whether or not the new birth is imperative, here is a verse to ponder. If there was a spark of natural goodness in man, a holy and just Law would have awakened it. If man was fundamentally, or primarily, good, God’s spiritual Law would have brought that goodness to the surface. Men may argue about the extent to which the Divine image was effaced by sin, but they cannot argue about the effect of the Law upon those who are not born again. This is a matter of revelation, not conjecture. The sin principle in men actually sees the holy law of God as an occasion, or opportunity to express itself. It seizes upon that opportunity.

We have before us one of the premier members of the human race. Prior to being in Christ, he was a member of the chosen people. He was also a member of the “strictest sect” of that revealed religion (Acts 26:5), even excelling above his equals in that rigid group (Gal 1:14). He maintained a good conscience toward God, refusing to violate it (Acts 23:1). Concerning outward piety, or the righteousness of the Law, he was “blameless” (Phil 3:6). His persecution of the church of God was not prompted by political considerations, or a desire for personal glory. He thought he was serving God in that aggressive opposition. That, of course, is precisely why he was forgiven that grievous sin—because he did it “in ignorance and unbelief” (1 Tim 1:13).

How will “the commandment” effect a man like that?—one whose life is devoted to fulfilling the Law after the most strict manner?

When “sin” heard the commandment, it “sized the opportunity” to work within Saul, or took “occasion by the commandment.”^{KJV} One man has said that, in the Law, sin found “a starting place from which to rush into acts of sin.”^{Robertson} Martin Luther once likened sin seizing an opportunity by the Law to the properties of lime. He said lime had heat in it, but that heat was not known until water was poured upon it. The water did not cause the lime to have heat, but brought out the fact that it was there. So it is with the Law. It did not cause sin, but brought out the fact that it was resident in fallen men.

A Premier Example Seen in Israel

In Israel we have a classic example of the truth affirmed in this text. When they were slaves in Egypt, we read not one word about them being given over to immorality or baser expressions of sin. They certainly had not risen above sin, but were not noted for transgression. Much of this is probable owing to the rigor with which they were made to serve the Egyptians.

Upon arriving at Sinai, sin was brought to its peak among these people. They heard the Law of God for the first time. It was spoken audibly, and under the most fearful of circumstances. It was such a frightening occasion that the Israelites said to Moses, “Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die” (Ex 20:19). Under such circumstances, you would think sin would be far from the mind of the people.

After Moses had been in the holy mount for some time “the people gathered together to Aaron, and said to him, ‘Come, make us gods that shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man who brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we do not know what has become of him.’”

Pressured by their aggression, Aaron had them remove the golden earrings from their wives, sons, and daughters, and bring them to him. He then formed a mold, and from it fashioned a golden calf, telling the people “This is your god, O Israel, that brought you out of the land of Egypt!” The next day, the people got up early and “offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings.” After that, the people “sat down to eat and drink and got up to indulge in revelry,”^{NIV} or “gave themselves to pleasure.”^{BBE}

God said of that occasion, the people “have corrupted themselves. They have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them . . . behold, it is a stiffnecked people” (Ex 32:1-9). Why had they so reacted? They did not do this on the night of the exodus. Every Israelite came out of Egypt, with not a hoof left behind (Ex 10:26). They “all” passed through the Red Sea, with not a disobedient one among them (1 Cor 10:1-2). What happened to them at Sinai?

Their nature did not change. They did not become different people. Rather, the principle of sin, that was within them, took occasion by the commandment. Consequently, the “motions of sin” were aroused by the Law.

The principle stated in this verse can also be seen in little children, although it is not limited to them. While their conscience is yet unformed, and they lack understanding, sin does not break forth in them. Yet, when they become subjects of the Law, able to hear and understand what it says, wrong desires, stubbornness, and transgression break forth in them like a floodtide. The innocency of youth cannot be maintained one second beyond the time of youth.

INWARD PRODUCTION

“But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence.” Sin, seizing upon the opportunity afforded by the law, erupted like a inner volcano, producing “all manner of evil desire.”^{NKJV} Because of the associations men make with covetousness,

What Paul is saying is this. “Because of my relation to Adam, sin was imbedded in my very nature. Yet, I was not aware of its extensive pervasion into my being. But when the commandment forbidding covetousness came home to me, I had to contend with a barrage of evil desires I never realized were within me. The lusts were divers and many, and I could not stop them from erupting in my mind.”^{GOB} this appears a rather weak expression. When, however, “Thou shalt not covet” is correctly understood, the power of the expression is more clearly seen.

It is as though unregenerate, but devoutly religious, Saul was bombarded with evil desires. What Paul is saying is this. “Because of my relation to Adam, sin was imbedded in my very nature. Yet, I was not aware of its extensive pervasion into my being. But when the commandment forbidding covetousness came home to me, I had to contend with a barrage of evil desires I never realized were within me. The lusts were divers and many, and I could not stop them from erupting in my mind.”^{GOB}

The Nature of Sin

Sin is personified in this section of Scripture. It is pictured as a ruthless murderer dwelling within us, looking for an opportunity to slay us. It “wars against the mind” (7:23), “wars against the soul” (1 Pet 2:11), “easily besets us” (Heb 12:1), and, apart from Christ, dominates us (Rom 6:12). Sin is like a mighty armed adversary against whom we “strive” (Heb 12:4).

In this text, “sin,” is not referring to specific transgressions, but to the principle, or law of sin. It is a law resident in the flesh, and that cannot be separated from it.

What Summoned up Sin?

It is important to take note HOW this statement is made. Paul does not say the Law produced every kind of evil desire, but that SIN produced it. It was not the nature of the Law that summoned up these despicable lusts, but the sinful nature of man! Men must learn that sin is more diverse than they are prone to think. Resident in the fallen nature, there are capacities and desires that far transcend our imaginative capacities.

Once again, these erupting desires were not welcomed by Saul of Tarsus, and eagerly fulfilled, as they were among “sinners of the Gentiles” (Gal 2:15; 1 Thess 4:4-5; Eph 4:17-19). He could not have maintained a good conscience if this were the case. He was not reconciled to God, and, like others, was “dead in trespasses and sins.” Yet, he managed to subdue the outbreak, overflowing, or “superfluity” of sin (James 1:21). Even then, however, he was all the while contending with evil desires which came in copious numbers and kinds.

We must keep before us the point of the text, lest we get bogged down in its details. In Jesus, we have died to sin and to the Law. This has resulted in our deliverance from the Law, which was our accuser, judge, and executioner.

Throughout the seventh chapter of Romans, Paul is dealing with the principle of sin, and not with overt expressions of it (i.e., fornication, murder, theft, etc.). Deliverance from the Law is critical in this consideration. That is because the Law does not allow for deviate thoughts, whether they are fulfilled or not. They are summarily condemned, wanted or not.

If, therefore, we are not delivered from the Law, we will be condemned by it, whether we outwardly broke a commandment or not (although no such person can be found). The Law condemns the principle of sin within, even if it is not welcomed or fulfilled on any noticeable scale.

WHEN SIN WAS DEAD

“For without the law sin was dead.” Other versions read “sin IS dead.”^{NASB,NIV} The New Living Translation reads, “sin would not have that power,” which does appear to be the sense of the text. This verse does not mean sin did not exist prior to the law, or that it could not work within us. We know this is the case, because the Spirit affirmed earlier, “for before the law was given, sin was in the world”^{NIV} (5:13). While the existence of sin, therefore, does not depend upon the Law, its apparenacy and dominance is occasioned by the Law. To put it another way, sin exists without the Law, but a personal conviction of it does not. Salvation from sin cannot come until the awareness of sin comes.

Further, the phrase “without the Law” does not refer to that period of history before God gave the Law through Moses. This is an expression describing the condition of a heart that does not SEE or perceive the law. On the lower end of the spectrum, this principle applies to infants and little children who have no consciousness of the Law. On the higher end, it applies to those who are of age, yet the Law,” but that the knowledge of it was not possessed. Further, this applies to life outside of Christ, and before the new birth. In that state, Paul imagined he was righteous, even though he was not.

It is also important to note that this passage is not a mere personal testimony. This is common in all believers, and is buttressed by Paul’s own experience.

If, therefore, we are not delivered from the Law, we will be condemned by it, whether we outwardly broke a commandment or not (although no such person can be found). The Law condemns the principle of sin within, even if it is not welcomed or fulfilled on any noticeable scale.

have not been thoroughly tutored by the Law because of their failure to see its real intent. Paul is citing himself, prior to be regenerated, as an example of the latter

The words of verse eight mean that the knowledge, or awareness, of sin was, as it were, buried without the Law. The idea is that Paul, as long as the true sense of the law was unknown, imagined he was free from sin—free from its dominion, and free from its guilt. Thus, Paul does not mean that sin was non-existent “without Through him, the Spirit is teaching men about sin, the Law, and our deliverance from them both. This is not a biography of Paul, although he tells us what he personally experienced. He is presenting himself as an example because he has seen the truth. Now, in an expert manner he is tracing it out for us through his own life. He is showing the development of a consciousness of sin, and of the consequent unfolding of a need for a Savior who delivers from sin. In this, he is an example of all believers.

I WAS ALIVE, BUT I DIED

“⁹ I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died.” It is important to understand Paul is NOT referring to a time when the Law did not exist, but to the time of His life when he did not get the message of the Law—when he did not see its real intent. The New Living Translation captures this sense of the text: “I felt fine when I did not understand what the law demanded.” He was not the first or last person who was subjected to the Law, yet failed to grasp what it was saying. The Ten Commandments still are placed and read in public places where their message is not grasped. There are still people who affirm they “keep the Ten Commandments.” There are still inquirers like the rich young ruler, who, after hearing the commandments, declared, “All these things have I kept from my youth up” (Matt 19:20). In the sense of our text, all such people are “alive.”

Once again, while this does, in a rudimentary way, apply to the period of infancy, it is not limited to it. In a fuller sense, it applies to the time when our senses were dulled to the shattering message of the Law, which condemned us.

I WAS ALIVE ONCE

The phrase “I was alive” does not mean “alive unto God,” as in 6:11: “Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord.”

Again, this is not a reference to the time of Paul’s infancy, as many theologians imagine. Such a view robs the text of its power, and encourages the adoption of juvenile and damaging beliefs. Paul is referring to his adult life, when he was a Pharisee, brought up and tutored in the strictest manner in the Law (Acts 26:5). This is when Paul only associated the Law with outward actions. He had ordered his life in such a manner as to be “blameless” concerning the righteousness of the law—at least, as he perceived it (Phil 3:6). For this reason, his conscience did not condemn him (Acts 23:1), and he fancied he was qualified to even stamp out the name of Jesus among the people (Acts 26:9-11). He was, in this sense, “alive,” imagining himself to have been accepted by God.

During that time when Paul persecuted the church, he had the Jewish attitude described in chapter two. “Indeed you are called a Jew, and rest on the law, and make your boast in God, and know His will, and approve the things that are excellent, being instructed out of the law, and are confident that you yourself are a guide to the blind, a light to those who are in darkness, an instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, having the form of knowledge and truth in the law”

I again want to emphasize this is not a reference to infancy. I do this because of a significant number of theologians that have taught this. An infant is “alive” only in the very elementary sense. As I understand it, a conscience has not yet been developed in the infant, nor a rational sense of well being. Whatever knowledge is possessed is purely intuitive, i.e., knowing its mother, desiring food, etc. This type of existence does not qualify to be included in the “alive” of this text. Here, “alive” does not mean merely existing, but thinking the demands of the Law have been met. Being “alive,” in this sense, was the assessment of Saul of Tarsus, not a mere physical circumstance.

Contemporary Application

It seems to me the circumstance of our text exists in our time. There are people upon whom the message of the Law has never really registered. They fancy themselves to be “alive” because they are think they are keeping the commandments. In many cases, they are not even the commandments of God, but the paltry tenets of some institution. Such people imagine they are accepted by God, but only because they have been deluded. They are not living by faith or walking in the Spirit (Gal 3:11; Gal 5:17,25). They are not pressing toward the mark, mortifying their members that are upon the earth, or placing their affection on things above (Phil 3:14; Col 3:5; Col 3:1-2). They are not in fellowship with Christ, are not being led by the Spirit, or laying hold on eternal life (1 Cor 1:9; Rom 8:13; 1 Tim 6:12).

Churches are literally filled with this kind of people. They open their mouths and sing what they call praise, yet in their minds they are alienated from the life of God. They have no appetite for the things of God, and can go for long seasons without the slightest exposure to the Word of the Lord. Yet, they call themselves after Christ, wearing His name and identifying themselves with His church. They are a contemporary example of what it means to be “alive” without the Law. They have a sense of well being, even though they are treading over the bottomless pit.

It may seem harsh to speak in this manner, but it is necessary to do so, else we will not get the sense of this text. Paul, prior to being in Christ, was scrupulously diligent in his service to God. He excelled above his equals, and was zealous for the “tradition” of his fathers (Gal 1:14). Yet, he was dominated by sin, even though he did not know it. He only thought he was alive! Now, the Law will prove the kind of condition he was really in. It will do so with great effectiveness.

WHEN THE COMMANDMENT CAME

“ . . . but when the commandment came ” And when did the commandment come? Some imagine this refers to the giving of the Law at Mount Sinai. Others think it pertains to the awakening of the conscience in youth. Both of these views, in my judgment, are incorrect.

A Specific Commandment

First, the reference is not to the Law in its entirety, but to a commandment. I understand that some believe the word “commandment” refers to the totality of the Law. While there are times when the Spirit uses “the commandment” in this way (Mk 7:9; Rom 7:12-13), this is not one of them. This refers to “the commandment” that convinced Saul of Tarsus of sin: “Thou shalt not covet” (verse 7).

The “commandment came” when it was comprehended, or came home to the heart, that the Law outlawed the desire of anything that Law prohibited. When the letter of that was understood with the intellect, it registered no conviction upon the heart. The commandment did not “come” in the sense of bringing its deeper message home to the heart.

Until “the commandment” came home in its fulness, the root of sin was not perceived as resident in the human nature itself. That “root” is “lust” or “concupiscence.” It is what compels men to commit transgression, and is characteristic of the human nature. It does not speak of something that is actually done, but of the law, or principle that causes men to commit sin.

At what point the commandment in all of its awful implications “came” to Saul, we do not know. But when he realized that “the commandment” was forbidding something that was resident in his very personality or soul, it “came” to him in condemning power. The commandment actually condemned what he was as well as what he did! It is then that one realizes he is a sinner by nature, an enemy of God, and utterly “without strength” (5:6). He cannot recover himself from sin, for the principle of sin is within him by nature, sitting upon the throne and dominating him. Apart from faith in Christ, men are shut up to this condition.

A Travesty of Our Time

There is a travesty that has occurred in our time that is most serious. It is the undue emphasis that has been placed upon the ability and wisdom of man. Great confidence is being placed in natural abilities and disciplines. The current emphasis on formal education, earthly credentials, and various forms of human knowledge is most dangerous. It has caused men to overestimate their power. As a result, they do not sense their deep need of a Savior and His grace. The fact that the very root of sin is resident in desires, or move the person to earnestly seek a Savior and the remission of sin.

Instead, when “the commandment came, SIN REVIVED.” Like a sleeping monster it “sprang to life”^{NIV} or “became alive.”^{NASB} This is not sin in its various forms, but sin as a governing principle—the “law of sin” that is resident within us by nature, or by virtue of our relation to Adam (Rom 7:23,25). The New Jerusalem Bible reads, “sin came to life.”

The picture is one of sin easily dominating the individual because of a lack of conviction. It is as though the principle, or law, of sin so dominated us by nature that it could slumber within us while we drank iniquity like water (Job

As this will be developed more fully later in this chapter, these comments will suffice for this time.

I DIED

“ . . . I died.” This is a very vivid expression, captured well in the Basic Bible English Version: “sin came to life and put me to death.” The meaning is, “The life I thought I had was wrenched from me. I became conscious of my basic sinfulness. I was dead before, but did not know it. Now the realization that I was, in fact, ‘dead in trespasses and sins’ registered upon me. I could no longer speak well of myself, or claim that I was righteous.”^{GOB} He “died” in every spiritual sense. Hope died. Confidence died. Self-worth died. Boasting died. Perceived goodness died. Then he learned what he later taught with such power, “But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident” (Gal 3:11).

Another Kind of Death

Here is yet another kind of death. Already we have read of several different deaths.

- There is the death of Jesus (5:10).
- There is the death “passed upon all men” because of sin (Rom 5:12).
- There is death IN sin (Eph 2:1).
- We also read of death TO sin (Rom 6:2).
- There is death WITH Christ (Rom 6:4)
- There is death TO the Law (Rom 7:6).

Now there is the death of all reliance upon the flesh—an awareness that there is nothing about self that can be salvaged. The totality of self is governed by “the law of sin.” That is the compelling reason why we must be “born again” (John 3:7).

Examples of “I Died”

By saying “I died,” Paul means his heart and conscience could no longer sustain him. The commandment came, filling the heart with condemnation.

This is what happened on the day of Pentecost when Christ’s murderers cried out, “Men and brethren, what shall we do!” (Acts 2:37). They could no longer cry out “crucify Him,” thereby seeking to justify themselves.

This was also the experience Isaiah had when, becoming aware of the Living God, he cried out, “Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean

Having been discovered, the “law of sin” began to work tirelessly, penetrating every thought. It was like a water dam that breaks, flooding the countryside with water than had been pent up. This sin principle, or “law of sin,” began to be more productive and more dominating.

the natural man is altogether obscured. Men speak as though they were more capable than they really are. They conduct their lives as though there was no sinful principle within them—no root that is condemned by God. The commandment has not come home to them, and thus they live as though their intellect and will were the superior parts of their persons.

The impact of this upon religion has been devastating. It has ushered in an era of a “form of godliness” that “denies the power thereof.” These are the “perilous times” of which the Spirit spoke (2 Tim 3:5). They are times in which “the commandment,” with all of its power, has not come to the conscience of the people.

SIN REVIVED

“ . . . sin revived . . . ” When “the commandment came,” it did not bring a blessing. It did not gently lift the sinner and tend to his wounds, pouring in mollifying ointment, so sorely needed. It spoke no word of comfort. It brought no word of cheer, pointing to good things to come. It did not awaken good and holy 15:16). But when “the commandment came” home to the conscience, sin woke up, infuriated by Divine demands. Now sin became “exceedingly sinful” (Rom 7:13). The human, or fleshly, nature, once thought to be fundamentally good was now seen in all of its repulsiveness. There was an engine that was driving the flesh that was like a grotesque monster. It was “sin” in its essence—“the law of sin.” From the standpoint of our text, it was “lust,” or corrupted desire—the root from which all transgression springs. Now, with sin, as it were, awakened, the defilement in the recesses of the heart became evident.

Having been discovered, the “law of sin” began to work tirelessly, penetrating every thought. It was like a water dam that breaks, flooding the countryside with water than had been pent up. This sin principle, or “law of sin,” began to be more productive and more dominating. All of this was occasioned when “the commandment came”—when “thou shalt not covet” was comprehended in its deeper meaning. Many a religious soul has never had such an experience.

lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts" (Isa 6:5). Suddenly no desire seemed appropriate, that the sons of Israel could not look intently at the face of Moses because of the glory of his face, fading as it was, how shall the ministry of the Spirit fail to be

The danger of a theology of the letter is that it only affects the mind, never the heart. It leaves the individual thinking there is more in him than there really is. The need for Christ and the Holy Spirit is not seen. A necessity of an Intercessor in heaven and one within the individual is not perceived. In such a relationship, the commandment never comes home to the people. They never see what they are.

and all words were out of order. No deeds could be cited that would count one worthy of God.

In this expression ("I died"), the real ministry of the Old Covenant is confirmed. Its job was to verify that the people were in a state of death and condemnation. Thus it is written, "But if the ministry of death, in letters engraved on stones, came with glory, so even more with glory? For if the ministry of condemnation has glory, much more does the ministry of righteousness abound in glory"(2 Cor 3:7-9). When "the commandment came" to Saul of Tarsus, he saw he was dead and condemned. It was then that he "died," and all self-confidence was dissipated.

THE THEOLOGY OF THE LETTER

I personally have a background in, what I will call, a theology of the letter. It is an approach to religion that looks at the text of Scripture as an outline for human conduct. It perceives in Scripture neither the nature of God nor the nature of man. Such an approach to religion does not produce humility in its constituents. A lively sense of the grace of God and the need for it are virtually unknown where "the letter" dominates. That is why the Holy Spirit witnesses, "for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life" (2 Cor 3:6). When there is no life in the individual, the Law becomes a "letter" that kills and condemns. It bludgeons the sinner, contaminating his conscience.

The danger of a theology of the letter is that it only affects the mind, never the heart. It leaves the individual thinking there is more in him than there really is. The need for Christ and the Holy Spirit is not seen. A necessity of an Intercessor in heaven and one within the individual is not perceived. In such a relationship, the commandment never comes home to the people. They never see what they are, and thus rarely seek after the Lord.

THE COMMANDMENT BROUGHT DEATH

⁴⁰ And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death." It is with great care that I enter into a discussion of this passage. We must not allow any disrespect for the holy Law of God to be found in us. The fact that it brought death to us was not owing to any fault in the Law. The Law itself is not hostile, but brings out man's natural hostility toward God. In a sense, "the commandment" is a litmus test which reveals the corruption of human nature.

WHICH WAS TO BRING LIFE

The Law did offer life to the one who kept it flawlessly, and what was true of the Law is true of the individual commandment. Let us hear the Law and its offer of life. "Ye shall therefore keep my statutes, and my judgments: which if a man do, he shall live in them: I am the LORD" (Lev 18:5). "And I gave them my statutes, and showed them my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them" (Ezek 20:11). Later in Romans, the Spirit makes a special point of this. "For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them" (Rom 10:5). Distinguishing the Law from faith, Galatians 3:12 affirms, "And the law is not of faith: but, The man that doeth them shall live in them."

Paul is referring to this promise of the law when he refers to the commandment, "which was to bring life." From another viewpoint, however, the Law was never intended to bring life, but to point out that men could really not live up to its righteous demands.

It is clear from our text that prior to being in Christ, Paul felt he had lived up to God's Law. He was "alive," and confident in his standing with God. At that time, he did not see the real message or intent of the holy Law, even though he had extended academic knowledge of it.

THE COMANDMENT BROUGHT

DEATH

And what of this commandment "which was to bring life?" As soon as it "came," or was comprehended, it brought death! It discovered consistent and enormous sin in the one toward whom it was directed, even though that person thought his obedience was satisfactory.

Now that a fuller understanding of "the commandment" was attained, surely the individual will be able to enter into the work of keeping it more fully! But this was not the result. Instead of becoming better, the sinner became worse. Unable to stem the tide of lust, it broke over the boundaries, flooding the mind and drowning men, pushing them beneath the floodtide of sin. Rather than being an occasion for celebrating life, it became the occasion for the singing of a funeral dirge. Sin was deeper than man thought. The infection was more pervasive than he imagined. He was nearer to condemnation than he ever dreamed possible. He found himself capable of more great sin.

"The commandment" did not bring blessing. If did not bring life, and it surely did not bring exceeding great and precious promises. It was a light that exposed the real nature of fallen man. It confirmed to those who understand it that they were separated from God and in a state of spiritual death.

DO NOT FORGET!

This is a retrospective look. Paul is speaking of his own past, but he also is speaking for all who are in Christ Jesus. He is showing us how the Law was our schoolmaster. It was not a tutor in the sense of proclaiming factual data. Rather, as illuminated by the Spirit of God, it uncovered our corruption, offering no remedy for it and no hope for us.

We were not able to extricate ourselves from the condemnation and death brought upon us through the law. If God did not deliver us, we should have expired in that state, forever cut off from God. But the point of our text is that we have been "delivered from the Law," having become "dead" to it "through the body of Christ."

This passage is showing us how precious that deliverance from the Law is. It is also confirming how blessed is our marriage to Christ, for we were delivered from the Law, becoming dead to it, that we might be married to another, even to Him who is risen from the dead.

In view of these things, those who promote a system of Law as a means to justification have rendered an unspeakable handicap to men. Thinking themselves to have brought the means to life to men, they have actually become the promoters of death. They are shutting people out from God, not bringing them to Him. They are giving strength to sin, not making it weaker.

If Jesus died to deliver us from the Law, then those who magnify Law above faith are working against Christ and are enemies of His cross. They hurt believers, and do not help them.

WHEN SIN DECEIVED ME

⁴¹ For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it killed me. Other versions read, "For sin, seizing the opportunity afforded by the commandment, deceived me, and through the commandment put me to death."^{NIV} "Sin took advantage of the law and fooled me; it took the good law and used it to make me guilty of death."

^{NLT} This language is precise and powerful. It paints a vivid picture of the dilemma from which we have been marvelously delivered. This is no small thing, not a mere theological technicality. Ponder the strength of the words: "seizing . . . deceived me . . . killed me."

SIN

Keep in mind, when the text says "sin," it does not mean a specific deed or expression. This is the "law of sin" that is in our members. In particular, it is what I have called the root, or fountainhead, from which all transgression springs. Without being too redundant, it is the "lust" introduced in verse seven. This is the natural trait within man that compels him to seek self-interests. The compelling effects of those interests range from failing to seek and serve God, to striving to gratify the baser "desires of the flesh and of the mind" (Eph 2:3). The extent of sinfulness may vary, but its presence will not.

Care must be taken not to view "the law of sin" as a mere philosophical and lifeless term. The remainder of this verse will confirm the importance of this law.

TAKING OCCASION

The words "taking occasion" ^{KJV,NKJV} may lead one to think this is a gentle and incentive] from the commandment . . . "

The Spirit is taking care here not to make the Law the cause of our transgression. The Law is the "strength of sin," not its cause. That "strength" is seen in the increase of our guilt, the contamination of our conscience, and the awakening of the hostility resident in the fallen human nature.

Keep in mind, when the text says "sin," it does not mean a specific deed or expression. This is the "law of sin" that is in our members. In particular, it is what I have called the root, or fountainhead, from which all transgression springs.

It is something like this: when the natural man, with its propensity to sin, hears the commandment, it immediately suggests disobedience. It concludes the commandment is restrictive, taking all good from us. It reasons in accord with the "lusts" of its father Satan (John 8:44): "For God knows that in the day you eat of it your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God, knowing good and evil" (Gen 3:5). SATAN SEIZED THE OPPORTUNITY AFFORDED BY THE COMMANDMENT.

Just as Satan himself seized an opportunity in the Divine commandment, so the sinful nature, now resident in man, hears the commandment of God and takes it as an occasion to transgress. That very thing occurred at Mount Sinai. As soon as the commandments were heard, the "law of sin" seized upon the opportunity to relatively unthreatening expression. But this is not at all the case. The word translated "taking" comes from the Greek word λαβουσα, which means take hold of, take advantage, take into possession, and seize. It is an aggressive word that reveals the power and swiftness with which the principle of sin works within us. The Amplified Bible captures this sense of the word. "For sin, seizing the opportunity and getting a hold on me [by taking its commit iniquity. The Israelites requested of Aaron, “Up, make us gods, which shall go before us” (Ex 32:1). That single request broke the first three commandments, and the tenth as well. SIN SEIZED THE OPPORTUNITY AFFORDED BY THE COMMANDMENT.

The Law Reveals Man’s Condition

The carnal mind will reason, “If sin seized an opportunity when it hears the commandment, then it is better not to hear the Law of God, or be subjected to His commandment. Then sin will not break forth in us.” But this is flawed reasoning. The Law did not make us sin, it discovered the sinful nature within us. Expressions of sin existed before the coming of the commandment. They were accentuated by the perception of the commandment, not created by it.

Man cannot be accepted by God until his nature is changed—until he becomes a new creation in Christ Jesus. The fact that an individual may not have committed transgression in variety and quantity brings him no closer to God. It is his nature that condemns him! As it is written, we “were by nature children of wrath” (Eph 2:3). If anyone doubts that is the case, consider that the nature within man used the holy law of God as an occasion to sin! To say it another way, man is not a sinner because he sins, but sins because he is a sinner.

DECEIVED ME

Once again, the personification of sin is pointing us to the “law of sin” that is resident in “the flesh,” of sinful nature. That sinful principle, Paul says, “deceived me.” Other translations read, “beguiled me,” ^{ASV} “seduced me,” ^{DARBY} “I was tricked,” ^{BBE} and “fooled me.” ^{NLT} That confirms our fundamental ignorance.

But how did sin deceive Saul of Tarsus, and all others who are unregenerate? There are several areas of deception fostered by the “law of sin.”

- ❑ It blinds men to the full intent of the law, constraining a surface view of it.
- ❑ It leads men to believe they can fulfill the law in their own energy.
- ❑ By promising satisfaction in “other things,” unrelated to God.
- ❑ By suggesting there are no real penalties for transgression.
- ❑ By suggesting that the sins already committed were not too serious.
- ❑ That the standard set forth in the Law is only a suggestion, and is not to be taken seriously.

It is as though the principle of sin used the very Law Saul thought he could keep, to condemn him. Where once it awakened all manner of unlawful desires within him, now it bludgeoned him with a guilty conscience. All confidence was destroyed, and the very commandment in which life was sought became the occasion for devastating death. To put it another way, the commandment which Saul thought was leading to life, actually led him into death. It did so because it discovered in him a principle that would not go away, and could not be subdued. As a result, his conscience was defiled, his confidence destroyed, and his hope shattered.

Man cannot be accepted by God until his nature is changed—until he becomes a new creation in Christ Jesus. The fact that an individual may not have committed transgression in variety and quantity brings him no closer to God. It is his nature that condemns him!

On a practical basis, the outcome of the deception was that sin was minimized and self strength and worth were magnified. Although the “pleasures of sin” are only for a “season,” the deceived person stumbles on in transgression, oblivious of the destruction that awaits him. Yet, our text provides an additional view. The result of deception is not described as one of momentary pleasure, but of death.

KILLED ME

“ . . . and by it [the commandment] killed me.” This equates to be driven out from the presence of the Lord, in which Saul of Tarsus imagined he was welcome. This is another way of saying the conscience became defiled, forbidding the person to stand in the presence of the One who desires to save Him.

All of this because of the “law of sin!” It was awakened and aroused by the Law. Because of the hostility that it had against the holy Law, it worked more vigorously to provoke sinful indulgences. It caused all manner of wayward desires to erupt within—things Saul knew were not right. As a result, his conscience became a goad that prodded him, convicting him, and contaminating all of his thoughts. All of the exalted thoughts Saul had of himself were swept away in the deluge of condemnation. He had trusted in the Law to save him, and to give him life. However, in the end, it condemned him, causing his death. He was stripped of all delusion that he was good. Sin deceived and killed him. It is utterly hopeless for a person in that condition to save himself—and that is the condition we all were in.

THE LAW IS HOLY

“¹² Therefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy and just and good.” Here is classic example of spiritual reasoning and sound mindedness! He has just finished saying that the sin principle used the Law of God to deceive him and kill him. Now, looking back on the occasion, Paul says that circumstance proves “the Law is holy, and what it commands is holy and upright and good.” ^{NJB} The “strength of sin is the Law,” yet it is “holy.” The Law was given that “every mouth might be stopped and all the world become guilty before God," but it is "just," or righteous. The Law aroused the sin principle resident within fallen man, yet it is "good."

AN EXPRESSION FROM DAVID

This verse is to be considered against the background of a statement made by David. "Who can understand his errors? cleanse thou me from secret faults. Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression" (Psa 19:12-13).

Because of his faith, David sensed sin was more dominant in him than he was able to detect or even understand. That is why he exclaimed, "But who can detect their errors?"^{NRSV} He knew he had hidden propensities, but knew neither their number or what they were. Thus he cried out, "Forgive my hidden faults."^{NIV}

The very fact of David's prayer reveals he had come to exactly the same conclusion as Paul. The failure of their lives to measure up to the Law of God moved them to fault themselves, not God's Law. They did not complain that the law was too demanding.

Why did he speak in this manner? Why did he not excuse his errors as faults, saying he was "just human?" It was because of the holy Law of God that had defined sin for him, and made him acutely aware of the "law of sin" within him. He knew any seeming goodness in men was only a veneer, and did not reveal their real persons. Thus he prayed, "Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me." Presumptuous sins are sins coming from pride; sins of insolence and arrogance. If the human nature is not basically sinful, such a prayer is a foolish absurdity.

The very fact of David's prayer reveals he had come to exactly the same conclusion as Paul. The failure of their lives to measure up to the Law of God moved them to fault themselves, not God's Law. They did not complain that the law was too demanding, or that it asked impossible things of us—even though it does.

THE NATURE OF THE LAW

Our society, as well as the professed church itself, could do with a good dose of this perspective. The Law of God is "holy and just and good." Keep in mind, this conclusion is drawn from the fact of man's basic sinfulness, not from a Divine statement describing the character of the Law. Man's impurity has underscored the law's virtue!

The Law is holy because it reflects the character of God. "Holy" means blameless, without fault. It is pure and without mixture. There are no hidden agendas in it, no directions that are ungodly. The law of God always tells the truth and properly represents God's will.

The Law is just because there is no inequity in it. It precisely declares the truth, and that without respect of persons. It aims to glorify God, and perfectly reflects His mind on things of which it speaks. It is ethically proper and right. It is not unfair in its demands upon those who are made in the image of God.

The Law is good because it helps us to discover what was latent within the flesh. It leads us to realize our sinful condition, and to see our need of a Savior. It is useful, beneficial, and sound in every part. What it commands is holy. What it requires is just. What it demands is good.

Why Men Recoil from the Law

Why do men recoil from the Law of God? Why do they want it removed from their public places, houses of government, and public schools? It is because they do not believe it is holy! It is because they have not been persuaded that it is just! It is because they are convinced it is not good! It is too threatening to their conduct, and exposes their ways and persons as unacceptable to God.

They may cite political or social reasons for their opposition to the law, but they are deceived in doing so. The Law scrapes against their sinful nature. It is like a scouring pad upon their corrupt natures. While they seek to lay the blame on the Law itself, the fault is found in their very nature.

Paul confessed the Law did all of the things to him that people of our day complain it does to them. But he did not ask that the Law be removed. Rather, he allowed the law to bring him to Christ, that He might be delivered from condemnation.

LIFE PRIOR TO BEING IN CHRIST

We must ever keep before us that this is a picture of the Law's ministration BEFORE we were in Christ. It did not change our condition, but revealed it. Because of this, it could not justify us, but could only condemn us. We possessed within us a principle that is not allowed in heaven—"the law of sin." We had a nature that is not allowed in the courts of the Lord, and the Law exposed it.

GOD IS JUSTIFIED IN HIS SAYING

This passage glorifies God because it upholds what He has said, even if it condemns man. This confirms what was said earlier—a word taken from David. "Let God be true, but every man a liar; as it is written, That Thou mightest be justified in Thy sayings, and mightest overcome when Thou art judged" (Rom 3:4; Psa 51:4).

While sinful men seek to justify themselves, the person living by faith insists that anyone speaking in contradiction of God is a "liar." That person desires God to be openly "justified" or vindicated in everything He has said. The person living by faith knows man has judged God when he violates His commandments, then seeks to justify himself in doing so. The believer wants God to "overcome" in all such situations. For He alone is righteous. That person knows the Law is holy, and the commandment holy, just, and good.

DID WHAT WAS GOOD BECOME DEATH?

⁴¹³ Has then what is good become death to me? Certainly not! But sin, that it might appear sin, was producing death in me through what is good, so that sin through the commandment might become exceedingly sinful.”The Holy Spirit is careful and zealous to protect the glory and righteousness of God. He teaches us in such a manner as leaves us bowing at the feet of our Lord, and holding up His Law as honorable and above all reproach. We are not “under the Law,” but we love and respect it! We have been “delivered from the Law,” yet we find no fault in it, confessing that its weakness was owing exclusively to us. As it is written, “The Law was weak through the flesh . . . ”(Rom 8:3).

DID THE LAW CAUSE OUR DEATH?

There is good reason for asking this question. We have been told that the Law aroused the sin principle within us. Sin worked through it to deceive us, and finally remove any hope of life we were deceived into thinking we had. The NASB reads, “Therefore did that which is good become a cause of death for me?”

If this is true, then what is good proved to be as dangerous as what is evil. Sin and the Law are then occupants of the same room, and are engaged in the same ministry.

Is it not written that the Law, or First Covenant, was the “ministration of death” (2 Cor 3:7)? Does it not follow, therefore, that is caused our death? “God forbid!” Neither the Word nor the character of God will allow for such a conclusion!

SIN PRODUCED DEATH

It was SIN that produced death in us, not the holy Law of God! Until the Law, or until the “commandment came,” sin did not appear as sin. It did not wear the tag of “transgression,” or represent itself as being unlawful. It came under the guise of “It is my right to do so.” It hid its true nature by deceiving men into thinking, “Everyone has a right to their opinion,” or “I can do as I please.”

The philosopher looked at sin and concluded the very appetites condemned by God were born in us, and therefore should be gratified. The psychiatrist pondered sin and concluded it was the result of some birth defect, disease, or bitter experience. The sociologist thought upon sin and determined it was the unavoidable effect of ones environment. The idolater considered sin and made a god out of it, deifying his own lust. The educator looked at sin and deduced that more information was needed. The politician ponders it and concludes that laws should be passed that allow for its expression. The favored of this world refuse to see sin as it is!

Remember, this is the sin nature—what compels the individual to commit transgression and violate specific laws of God. It is the NATURE of sin that is being exposed by the holy Law! It is elsewhere called “the flesh.”

But sin is known by the trail of tragedy it leaves behind. It is so corrupt, so diabolical, that it produced death in us “through what was good.” That is what the root of human nature did! Had it not been for the Law, men would have tended even more to listen to the world’s foolish wise men.

This is a day when the perspective of this text is sorely needed. It is vital that sin be seen as “sin,” and not as a mistake, disease, or maladjustment. It must “appear [as] sin,” not as an infirmity. It is not an addiction, but a character, a nature, an inner law or principle.

EXCEEDINGLY SINFUL

Through the commandment of God, sin became “exceedingly sinful.” Other versions read, “utterly sinful,”^{NASB} “sinful beyond measure,”^{NRSV} “much more evil,”^{BBE} “how terrible sin really is,”^{NLT} and “unbounded sinful power.”^{NJB}

The wickedness of sin cannot be measured. It has no boundaries. There are no depths to which it will not sink. There is no extent to which it will not go to justify its presence. If Cain sees his brother offer a more acceptable sacrifice than his own, he will murder him. If Joseph’s brothers are offended by his dreams and favored status, they will think nothing of selling him into slavery. If the Jewish council does not like the words of Stephen, they will stone him. If the Jews at Lystra are offended by the powerful preaching of Paul, they will drag him out of the city and stone him.

There is no boundary to sin, no limits to its depravity and innate wickedness! If Haman does not like Mordecai’s refusal to do obeisance to him, he will seek his death. If the three Hebrew children will not bow down to Nebuchadnezzar’s idol, he will have them thrown into a furnace of fire. There are no depths to which sin will not descend!

The Sin Principle

Remember, this is the sin nature—what compels the individual to commit transgression and violate specific laws of God. It is the NATURE of sin that is being exposed by the holy Law! It is elsewhere called “the flesh.”

There is a Divine strategy revealed in the giving of the Law. Sin had to work death in us in order for us to see its true nature. The Law was given to make this happen. Men greatly error when they summon the psychologist to scenes of human tragedy, to explain the what and the why of brutality and violence. In vain men ask the philosophers and sociologists for an explanation of deviate conduct that is outside of the bounds of both reason and propriety. It is the sin-nature that causes these things to happen.

A time must come when men are brought to realize the problem is in human nature! Every person out of Christ is dominated by “the law of sin” that is resident in their nature, or basic constitution. The fact that it does not break forth in deluges of violence or deviate indulgence in all people does not mean such a thing is not possible. Given the opportunity, together with the removal of Divine restraint, the darling Absalom can try to wrench the Kingdom from his own father David, even seeking to kill him.

When the Spirit refers to sin BECOMING exceedingly sinful, He does not mean that the nature of sin becomes worse and worse. Rather, it is PERCEIVED as being “exceedingly sinful.” The fact that it worked death in men through a holy, just, and good commandment proves that to be the case.

HUMAN DEPRAVITY

While some theologians argue against the notion that man is depraved, or utterly corrupt, they cannot make their argument from this passage! If the human nature is not utterly fallen, what need is there for a Savior (John 4:42; 1 John 4:14)? Why must man be given both repentance and remission (Acts 5:31)? How is it that Divine grace in abundance is needed if there remains a single vestige of goodness in the natural man (Rom 5:17)? Why must we be drawn to Christ (John 6:44)? Why is deliverance necessary (Heb 2:15)? Of what purpose is the enlightening of the eyes of the understanding if man is not sinful at the core (Eph 1:18-20)?

Again, I must remind you that we are speaking of the principle of sin, not of individual transgressions. This is the law that, as an engine, drives the transgression. It is embodied in the word “lust,” and is awakened by the holy Law of God, as though an intruder had entered its house.

The awfulness of the sinful nature would never have been correctly known if it was not for the holy Law of God. The Law provoked that wicked nature to arise from seeming slumber and work prodigiously to produce sin and death in us. For the sensitive, the volume of sin that was within was stunning.

THE LAW AND ME

“¹⁴ For we know that the law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin.” Here is a grand summary statement, and an introduction to the marvelous section that follows. You see at once that this is a profoundly strong statement. It is also in the present tense, where verses seven through thirteen are all in the past tense: “had not known sin. . . had not known lust. . . wrought in me . . . sin was dead. . . I was alive . . . the commandment came . . . sin revived . . . I died . . . I found to be unto death . . . taking occasion by the commandment . . . deceived me . . . slew me.”

The Spirit will now draw some conclusions upon the basis of what He has taught us. He will bring things together, and that in a most marvelous way. Paul appeals to our comprehension, acknowledging that he has received the point, and expecting that we have done the same: “WE KNOW.” This is knowledge common to the household of faith. It is not philosophical knowledge, but something that has been realized in the inner recesses of our hearts. We know it to such an extent that we will immediately recognize the truth of what is said. The statements that follow are not for information, but for confirmation.

THE LAW IS SPIRITUAL

This is a profound statement, as becomes abundantly evident when you try to explain it. “Spiritual,” in this case, is

First, this is the Law of God—the Law that stopped every mouth and caused the world to become guilty before God (3:19). It is the Law which brought “the knowledge of sin” (Rom 3:20). It is summarized on tables of stone, and called “the words of the covenant, the ten commandments” (Ex 34:28). That Law is “spiritual.” It is the Law that convinced Paul of his sin, and it is that Law that brings us to Christ (Gal 3:24). As a covenant, it was temporary, and characterized by fading glory (2 Cor 3:7-11). However, by nature, it “is spiritual.”

The Law was unsuitable as a means to justification, but it “is spiritual.” It brought no power or mercy to us, but it “is spiritual.” We died to it in Jesus, but it “is spiritual.” It is not of faith, but it “is spiritual.” We were delivered from the law in order that we might be married to the risen Jesus, but the Law “is spiritual.”

Given by God. The law “is spiritual,” because it was given by God Himself. “All Scripture is given by the inspiration of God,” (2 Tim 3:16), and the Law was “given” and “written.” The breath of the Holy Spirit is upon the Law, empowering it for its assigned work.

used in its highest sense. There is such a thing as “spiritual wickedness” (precisely the same word—Eph 6:12). That is wickedness of an unseen and dominating order. We do combat with it in a higher realm—above the order of flesh and blood.

But our text means more than that. He is not saying the Law is “spiritual” merely in the sense of being of a higher order, or from an unseen realm.

Harmonious with the Divine nature. The Law “is spiritual” because it is in harmony with the Divine nature. It is at variance with nature of fallen man, but not with the nature of God. It articulates His mind, and carries His perspective.

Characterized by heavenly rationality. The Law “is spiritual” because it possesses a heavenly form of rationality. It is not ethereal, but appeals to the mind, provoking thoughts and profound considerations.

It deals with spiritual matters.

The Law “is spiritual” because it deals with spiritual matters—things that have to do with the real issues of life. It defines the proper direction of inner life.

It reaches into the spirit of man.

The Law “is spiritual” because it reaches into the inner part of man—into his spirit. Like a sharp two edged sword, it discovers and delineates between the soul and the spirit of man. It uncovers sin at its root—in the human spirit.

Because the Law “is spiritual,” we have the utmost regard for it. It originated with God and brings glory to Him. It does God’s work and prepares men to receive Christ. Let there be no disdain for the Law of God among us.

I AM CARNAL

At this point we begin to see more clearly why man must be justified. When Paul says, “I am carnal,” he speaks for all of us. He is not writing a biography, but unveiling the reason why we have been delivered from the Law. Other versions read, “I am of the flesh,”^{NASB} “I am unspiritual,”^{NIV} and “I am fleshly.”^{DARBY}

When Paul says “I,” he is referring to his natural self—how he is without Christ and apart from justification. No person in Christ can be described in the words of this verse. In fact, the Spirit will tell us later, “But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you” (8:9). “Flesh,” or carnality, is a state of nature, not of grace!

It is possible to refer to a part of a person as though it were the whole of the person. Thus, when Lazarus died, Jesus asked, “Where have you laid him?” (John 11:34). The same terminology is used of the burial of Jesus: “And when they had fulfilled all that was written of Him, they took Him down from the tree, and laid Him in a sepulchre” (Acts 13:29). Technically, in both cases, they only buried the body, not the soul or the spirit. Yet the body is spoken of as though it were the whole person. This is because the body was a part of the person, though not the whole of him.

Thus Paul could refer to the part of himself called “the flesh” as though it were he himself. While here he admits to owning that part (“I am carnal”), the latter part of this chapter will find him disowning this part. For now, he speaks in this way to bring to our attention the sharp contrast between the natural man and the spiritual law of God.

Carnal Christians?

Some might object, saying there are “carnal Christians,” even though no such combination of words is found in Scripture. And, if such words are not found in the word of God, they can hardly connote a Scriptural meaning!

Immediately, some flee to the third chapter of First Corinthians, pointing out Paul’s indictment of the Corinthians for being “carnal.” And, indeed, he did charge them with carnality. “And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men? For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?” (3:1-3).

Were these Christian traits? Are they the marks of those who are in Christ? The point of the text is that they were conducting their lives as though they were not even in Christ. They had allowed the sinful nature to again assert itself. As a result, they were not able to be addressed as spiritual people. There was envying, strife, and divisions among them. They were walking like unregenerate men, even calling themselves after men. Anyone who imagines this passage sanctions the presence of carnal people in Christ’s church needs to rethink their foolish position. These people were soundly rebuked for being in that state. Later in the chapter he speaks of those mingled in the church who were “wood, hay, and stubble” that could not withstand the sure judgment of God (1 Cor 3:10-13). With great solemnity, he went on to say, “If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are” (verse 17).

When Paul says, “I am carnal,” he was not saying he was like the Corinthians. He was not confessing to being envious, fomenting strife among believers, and being the cause of ungodly division. Rather, he was speaking of his person apart from Jesus – the part that was crucified with Christ, and cut away from his essential person by the “circumcision of Christ.”

While he will disown this part of himself later in this chapter, referring to it as “not I” (7:16,17,20), he says here it is “I.” He means it is still with him, though separate from him. If it was possible for Rebekah to have children with contrary natures within her womb, it should not surprise us that those in Christ have contrary natures within their bodies.

It is as though Paul speaks for the natural part of himself, knowing it will not acknowledge its true nature itself: “I am carnal.”

What Does It Mean to be Carnal?

In the sense of our text, what does it mean to be “carnal?” First, this is a condition that is opposite of the spiritual Law of God. To be “carnal” is to be the opposite of God’s holy law, and hostile toward it. Carnality involves minding earthly things, which constitutes one an “enemy of the cross of Christ” (Phil 3:18).

To be “carnal” is to be fleshly, with appetites that are anchored to the earth. This is the “natural man” which “cannot receive” or know “the things of the Spirit of God” (1 Cor 2:14). To be “carnal” is to be locked into the state of nature, which God has condemned.

By confessing “I am carnal,” Paul was doing two things. First, he was acknowledging that the Law was spiritual, and had successfully uncovered the sin principle that was resident in himself. Second, he was affirming his need of Christ Jesus and his refusal to trust in the flesh. This is what he was of himself and apart from the Lord Jesus.

In the ultimate sense, Paul is showing us why men cannot be justified by the law. In their natural state, they are everything that the Law condemns, and nothing that it commends. This is precisely why we had to die to the law, being delivered from it.

SOLD UNDER SIN

Here again the Spirit moves Paul to use most powerful words. Other versions read, “sold in bondage to sin,”^{NASB} “sold as a slave to sin,”^{NIV} “given into the power of sin,”^{BBE} and “I am sold into slavery, with sin as my master.”^{NLT} It is not possible to miss the strength of this language. It is most arresting, indeed.

I must emphasize that Paul is showing why it is imperative that we be delivered from the Law as a means to justification. The requirement for remission, justification, and a Savior to effect both, is absolutely essential. By nature we are enslaved to sin, unable to remove its shackles from us. Apart from Christ we are not capable of righteousness. Sin is our master, and we do its bidding eagerly. When the Law makes demands of the flesh, it only rushes with more eagerness headlong into sin. Robertson says of this phrase (“sold under sin”) “Sin has closed the mortgage and owns its slave.”

In the beginning chapters the Spirit confirmed there was “none righteous, no not one” (3:10). Now he is telling us why. It is because there is nothing good about the flesh—about the natural man, or the person without Christ within. Such people do not merely have “the law of sin” within upon the sons of disobedience”^{NKJV} (Col 3:5-6). “For if you live according to the flesh you will die; but if by the Spirit you put to death the deeds of the body, you will live”^{NKJV} (Rom 8:13). “And they that are Christ’s have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit” (Gal 5:24-25).

Such exhortations would not be necessary if the flesh was recoverable. But it is not. It is “carnal, given into the power of sin.”

FLESHLY RELIGION

By nature we are enslaved to sin, unable to remove its shackles from us. Apart from Christ we are not capable of righteousness. Sin is our master, and we do its bidding eagerly. When the Law makes demands of the flesh, it only rushes with more eagerness headlong into sin.

them, they are ruled by it. Sin is their uncontested master, and they are not able to do anything about it. They are “sold under sin.”

THE FLESH HAS NOT CHANGED

When we are born again, “the flesh” does not change. It is reduced to obsolescence, now being called the “old man” (Eph 4:22-24; Col 3:9-10). With energy, he is to be “put off” and denied expression. He has not changed, he is still “sold under [the dominion of] sin.” The flesh is not included in the phrase “all things are become new” (2 Cor 5:17). Our perspective of it has “become new,” but its nature has not changed. Blessed is the person who sees it.

The seriousness of this matter is seen in various exhortations to believers. “Therefore put to death your members which are on the earth: fornication, uncleanness, passion, evil desire, and covetousness, which is idolatry. Because of these things the wrath of God is coming

The danger of a religion that centers in the flesh and its corrupted appetites ought to be evident. It is a sin grievous beyond description to make a religious appeal to the flesh—the fallen part of man. It is not capable of doing what is right, and has been rejected in its totality by the Living God.

No one whose lineage can only be traced to Adam will dwell forever in the house of the Lord. Those who lived in spiritually primitive times, before the coming of Christ and the declaration of the Gospel, will be righteously judged upon the basis of their longing for and anticipation of a Savior.

In regeneration, our old nature is not made good, but a good nature is created within us. This is done by virtue of our connection with the Lord Jesus Christ. That blessed affiliation frees us from the condemnation of the Law, and from the power of the flesh as well. That blessed circumstance needs to be proclaimed.

CONCLUSION

When you ponder the rarity of a message like this in our day, it becomes even more precious. God is greatly to be praised for unfolding the magnitude of His great salvation. I have often said this, but must do so once again. There are at least two things that have eluded the modern church. First, the depth to which sin has taken man. Second, the extent to which God has gone to save us. Both of these realities have been expounded with power in this text.

Sin took us to depths from which we could not recover ourselves. We had to be delivered by another, even Jesus Christ. Not only did sin send us to a moral bottom, the "law of sin" penetrated every part of our person. The root of sin was found in us, and we could not pull it out. In our dealings with sin, it is important that we do not limit ourselves to the expose of particular and reprehensible transgressions. While they must be exposed and condemned, men must also hear of the root, or cause, of sin.

The principle of sin is resident in the flesh, and men must know it. It is only as this is seen to a measurable degree that the grace of God and a Savior from sin will be properly seen. Half-heartedness and inconsistency are the direct result of NOT seeing that "no good thing" dwells in the flesh.

In my judgment, contemporary problem-solvers fail to take this into consideration. They deal too much with surface issues, and do not come to grips with the root of the problem. That root is the sin nature that is part of the flesh, or our natural being. As long as we deal with on the surface, we will be shut up to a law-system. The irony of that whole approach is that the Law arouses the sin principle, causing it to be more active than it ever was before.

The thoroughness of salvation is exhilarating to consider. First, it deals with the transgressions we have committed, forgiving us all trespasses. Our account is settled, and our iniquities are blotted out like a thick cloud. The conscience is purged, thereby allowing the believer to come into the very presence of God, to obtain mercy and find grace to help in the time of need.

In regeneration, the corrupt nature, tied to our flesh, is cut away from our essential persons and put upon the cross. Thereby the sin principle is put to a disadvantage. We are then buried with Christ into a state of death to both sin and the Law. We die to sin in the sense of it no longer dominating us. We die to the Law in the sense of it no longer being able to condemn us.

In being joined to Christ, we come into an area of unspeakable advantage and provision. Not only did Jesus deliver us from sin, the law, and the devil, He is leading us to glory. His intercession and mediation assure that we will always have what is required to make it safely from earth to glory.

All of this, and more, is opened to us in a marvelous Gospel, that is itself "the power of God unto salvation." There is no reason why any believer should ever be dominated by sin. God has made provision for us to abstain from fleshly lusts, put to death the part of us that gravitates to sin, and resist the devil. These provisions are for all who are in Christ Jesus. Our text has strongly affirmed these realities.

INWARD STRUGGLE CONFIRMS JUSTIFICATION

7:15 For what I am doing, I do not understand. For what I will to do, that I do not practice; but what I hate, that I do. 16 If, then, I do what I will not to do, I agree with the law that it is good. 17 But now, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me. 18 For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) nothing good dwells; for to will is present with me, but how to perform what is good I do not find. 19 For the good that I will to do, I do not do; but the evil I will not to do, that I practice. 20 Now if I do what I will not to do, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me. 21 I find then a law, that evil is present with me, the one who wills to do good. 22 For I delight in the law of God according to the inward man. 23 But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. 24 O wretched man that I am! Who will deliver me from this body of death? 25 I thank God; through Jesus Christ our Lord! So then, with the mind I myself serve the law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin. – Romans 7:15-25 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

When believers become preoccupied with Law, or a regimented and lifeless approach to God, the real nature of spiritual life is obscured. Everything related to life and godliness are thrown out of focus when men address life as though they were merely measuring up to a moral standard. In such a case, they set their objectives too low, and think too small, coming under great restriction.

Make no mistake about this, the saints of God ARE being conformed to the image of Jesus (Rom 8:29), and they ARE being changed from one stage of glory to another (2 Cor 3:18). That change, however, is facilitated through faith, not works. Those who walk by faith and live in the Spirit have an intense regard for HOW they live. Like Paul they confess, “I have been crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me” ^{NKJV} (Gal 2:20). Armed with spiritual weaponry, they engage the powers of darkness, striving with all that is within them to “stand against the wiles of the devil” (Eph 6:10-18). Faith constrains us to “abstain from fleshly lusts that war against the soul” (1 Pet 2:11), and the grace of God teaches us how to do it (Tit 2:11-12).

In the process of this type of living, tremendous outbreaks of unwanted thoughts occur within. These are the eruptions of “the flesh,” which remains linked to our earthly bodies. There is no limit as to how vile these thoughts can be, or how frequently we may have to contend with them. They may “pop” into our minds when we are engaged in the most focused spiritual activities, and when we least want them to show themselves.

The “good fight of faith” (1 Tim 6:12) involves dealing with these wayward and unwanted thoughts. Spiritual weaponry has been provided in Christ that can be used to throw down these thoughts, refusing to allow them to dominate our minds, even though they enter into them. The Spirit says this of these weapons. “For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal but mighty in God for pulling down strongholds, casting down arguments and every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God, bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ” (2 Cor 10:4-5). These weapons, however, cannot stop the thoughts from occurring.

This situation is a source of consternation to the believer. You will sense this in the text we are to consider. If there is no understanding of what is actually occurring, the child of God may conclude he is surely condemned, or has not even been born again. Many a fainting soul has interpreted the eruption of the “old man” as a personal decline in spirituality.

AFTER NEW LIFE, NOT BEFORE

Theologians, as men are wont to call them, have argued for centuries over this text. Some insist that it is the perspective of Paul BEFORE he was in Christ—a sort of lament of one who is under the Law. Others insist that it is the contemporary experience of believers. If we do not have the proper view of the text, it will only minister confusion.

The Theme of the Chapter

The theme of this chapter, as well as that of the sixth chapter, is life IN Christ, not out of Christ. Ponder the statements that have been made—statements that form the inspired context of the seventh chapter.

- We are “dead to sin” (6:2).
- We were baptized into Christ’s death (6:3).
- We also should walk in newness of life (6:4).
- We have been planted together in the likeness of Jesus’ death (6:5).
- Our “old man” is crucified with Christ (6:6a).
- Henceforth we should not serve sin (6:6b).
- He that is dead is freed from sin (6:6).
- We are to reckon ourselves to be dead indeed unto sin (6:11a).
- We are to reckon ourselves as alive unto God through Jesus Christ (6:11b).
- We are not to allow sin to reign in our mortal bodies (6:12).
- We are not to yield our members as instruments of unrighteousness (6:13a).
- We are to yield ourselves to God as those who are alive from the dead (6:13b).
- We are to yield our members as instruments of righteousness unto God (6:13c).
- Sin will not have dominion over us because we are not under law, but under grace (6:14).
- Salvation makes no provision for continuance in sin (6:15).
- We obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine delivered to us (6:17).
- Made free from sin, we have become servants of righteousness (6:18).
- Now we are to yield our members as servants of righteousness (6:19).
- We are free from sin and are servants to God (6:22).
- We have become dead to the Law through the body of Christ (7:4a).
- Our death to the Law in order that we might be married to Christ (7:4b).
- We have been delivered from the Law, becoming dead to it (7:6a).
- Our lives are now lived in service to God in the newness of spirit, not in the oldness of letter (7:6b).

It should be apparent that the perspective being presented is that of one

IN Christ, not one outside of Christ. The foundation of our acceptance in Christ is proclaimed in chapters four and five. The extended commentary on our past is found 1:20-3:20.

References to the Past

In the sixth and seventh chapters of Romans there are references to our past, but not in an extended way. A few comparisons are made to accent the glorious benefits that are realized in Christ Jesus.

- We were the servants of sin (6:17).
- We did yield our members as servants to iniquity and uncleanness (6:19).
- When we were the servants of sin, we were free from righteousness (6:20).
- We bore no fruit in our past, and are now ashamed of it (6:21).
- When we were in the flesh, the motions, or passions, of sin, were aroused by the Law (7:5a).
- In the flesh, our passions worked in us to bring forth fruit unto death (7:5b).
- Under the law, sin awakened, and we died, losing any sense of acceptance before God (7:8-9).
- The commandment of God produced death in us, not life (7:10).
- Sin worked through the commandment of God to deceive and slay us (7:11).
- Sin worked death in us through the good commandment of God, showing sin to be exceedingly sinful (7:13).

None of these statements are the central theme. They are all mentioned within the greater context of salvation, and what the believer experiences in Christ Jesus. The remainder of this chapter is a continuation of the Spirit’s exposition of our experience in Christ.

ONLY PRESENT TENSE WORDS

Previous to this passage, there were occasional references to the past: “were baptized. . . were baptized. . . have been planted . . . were the servants of sin . . . have obeyed from the heart . . . ye have yielded. . . were the servants of sin . . . were free from righteousness . . . were in the flesh . . . motions of sin did work. . . I was alive once without the law . . . sin revived and I died . . . I found to be unto death . . . sin deceived me and slew me.”

How dramatically the passage before us differs. There is NO reference to the past. It is all in the present, and speaks of a present experience. "I do . . . allow not . . . I would . . . do I not . . . what I hate . . . that do I . . . I do that . . . I would not . . . I consent . . . it is good . . . It is no more . . . sin that dwelleth . . . I know . . . dwelleth no good thing . . . to will is present . . . that which is good . . . I find not . . . I would . . . I do not . . . which I would not . . . that I do . . . I would . . . I do not . . . I would not . . . when I would . . . do good . . . evil is present . . . I delight . . . I see . . . in my members . . . warring against . . . bringing me . . . which is in . . . man that I am."

There is no a single reference to the past. It takes an extraordinary amount of imagination to view this passage as a commentary on life when we were dead in sin. Such an approach would clash with the entirety of the passage. Having made these observations, the meaning and weight of the passage will be very apparent to you. Here is an experience common to all believers, yet little understood by great segments of them. You will find yourself entering into this text as it shines Divine light upon your life. The nature of life in Christ will be clarified, and you will find great delight and revelation in that clarification.

THE SUBJECT IS THOUGHT, NOT DEED

It is important to see that thoughts are the subject of this text, not deeds. Remember, Paul has already said that the Law caused him to recognize lust, or unlawful desire, at the very core of his being. Lust is inherent in the flesh—it is part and parcel of it, and cannot be separated from it. It would be absurd to introduce a lengthy dialog on outward deeds after elaborating so extensively on the matter of "lust."

When Paul says "doing" or "do," he is not referring to an outward act, but to activities of the mind, which is the battleground. He has already told us that the Law forthrightly condemned "lust," which is an inward thing. In order to confirm how great our deliverance from the law is, he will now confirm that we cannot stop the flesh from lusting. It will throw its thoughts into our minds whether we want them or not. While the Law condemns those desires because they found a way into our thoughts, we are not condemned for them in Christ Jesus. That is because they conflict with what we really want, or will to do.

SPIRITUAL FRUSTRATION

"^{7:15} For what I am doing, I do not understand. For what I will to do, that I do not practice; but what I hate, that I do." People that are driven by Law, and seeking to establish their own righteousness (Rom 10:3), cannot make such a statement. First, they are not inclined to do so. Second, it is too incriminating and condemning for them. Christians who are serious, yet uninformed about the nature of the Kingdom, consider the condition described in this verse as an evidence they are wicked. They ponder the possibility of being unacceptable to God, and think maybe they were never really "converted" (Acts 3:19). The prevalence of the tenets of psychology in the professed church has only served to further obscure the significance of this experience. Approaching the various aspects of the believer's life from the standpoint of the human psyche as perceived by psychology, brings no advantage to those in Christ.

The Holy Spirit never approaches the inner-experience of the believer from the earthly point of view. Because there "is neither Jew nor Greek . . . bond nor free . . . male nor female . . . in Christ Jesus" (Gal 3:28), those distinctions are never presented as the basis for the analysis of life. If you are familiar with current religious trends, there is a

We have before us a classic example of true spiritual reasoning. The Spirit will analyze inner turmoil and the frustration that proceeds from it. He will not introduce a single word concerning racial, gender, or social considerations—not a syllable. Rather, He will go beneath the surface into the realm where human spirits have no such distinctions.

phenomenal amount of such examinations in the Christian community. People are taught to view their emotional and intellectual lives from their status as men or women, ethnic origin, of other social distinctions. This is neither innocent nor inconsequential. Such approaches throw sand into the eyes of God's people, and are to be rejected.

We have before us a classic example of true spiritual reasoning. The Spirit will analyze inner turmoil and the frustration that proceeds from it. He will not introduce a single word concerning racial, gender, or social considerations—not a syllable. Rather, He will go beneath the surface into the realm where human spirits have no such distinctions.

Inner struggle within the child of God will be viewed as a consequence of salvation. It will be set forth within the context of justification by faith and the imputation of righteousness. Our baptism into the death of Christ initiated this struggle, and our release from the body of flesh and blood will loose us from it. In the meantime, because it is not the basis for condemnation, the nature of it must be understood, even though the experience itself goes beyond our understanding.

I DO NOT UNDERSTAND
"For what I am doing, I do not understand." Here is a most remarkable expression! Other versions read as follows. "For that which I do I allow not."^{KJV} "I do not understand what I do."^{NIV} "I do not understand my own actions."^{NRSV} "For that which I do I know not."^{ASV} "And I have no clear knowledge of what I am doing.”^{BBE} “I don’t understand myself at all.”^{NLT}

Several preliminary observations are in order. First, Paul is declaring a present circumstance, not a past one: “I AM doing . . . I DO not . . .” Second, this is a circumstance that goes beyond human understanding: “I do NOT understand.” Third, he knows WHAT is happening, and later will affirm he knows WHY it is happening (v 23). Yet, that knowledge brings no satisfaction to him. How could wicked thoughts come to him unbidden and unwanted? The KJV reads “allow not,” emphasizing he had made no provision for such thoughts. He did not willingly go into areas that nurtured such thoughts. He had not sought them out. Yet they came to him.

We conclude from these things that faith is superior to knowledge. It brings a higher form of understanding than is possible in nature. If this were not the case, the experience that is now described would prove to be the total undoing of the tender hearted. With care, the Spirit moves Paul to open up a fact of spiritual life that is common to all believers.

By faith Paul is speaking of the unwanted expressions of the sinful nature. He is not confessing sin or transgression, but a grievous condition.

What I Am Doing

Remember, this is an expression of a sensitive heart. Those with calloused hearts will have no idea what he is talking about. “What I am doing” does not refer to the thrust of life, but to unwanted intrusions into the thought life. Further, it does not refer to an outward deed, although what is described can cause outward expressions. He is not speaking of an immoral deed he committed again and again. This is describing the battle between the flesh and the Spirit (Gal 5:17).

By saying “I do not understand,” or “I allow not,” Paul is saying he did not fully understand the corruption of his own human nature. It is as though he was stunned by the depth of the wickedness found in the “old man.” It is one thing to know theologically that man is corrupt by nature. It is quite another to experience the outbreak of that corruption in our thoughts.

The use of the word “actions” in some translations tends to confuse the text, leading some to believe the reference is to an outward deed. This is not the case.

The thrust of Paul’s life was Godward. He had turned his back on the past, renounced the things that had separated him from God, and was pressing toward the mark with unrelenting zeal (Phil 3:7-14). Outwardly, he lived “holily, justly, and unblameably” (1 Thess 2:10). But there were inconsistencies within. He was not struggling with his will—that was consistent, and he confesses that to be the case. But his will was not able to stop the eruptions of the “old man.” He wanted no unacceptable thoughts in his mind, and yet they were found there

In this case, the phrase “I do” refers to any thoughts Paul did not want to have. By saying “I do not understand,” he means that he was unable to stop them. There were times when he was broadsided, so to speak, by defiled thoughts and lusts that exceeded what he thought was possible. He actually had to grapple with unwanted and intruding imaginations. He had to cast them down violently, even though he had made no place for them in his mind. That was the frustrating part of it all.

In using the word “frustrating,” I do not mean the undoing of the believer, or his utter defeat. Rather, I am referring to discouragement, being humbled, and being baffled. The earnest desire to be utterly without spot NOW, is thwarted. The tender desire to be pleasing to the Lord in every part of our being is blasted by the entrance of things displeasing to us, to say nothing of our Lord.

WHAT I WILL TO DO

“For what I will to do, that I do not practice.” Paul will now show us that the human will, even when sanctified, is not the seat of our power. Through his will, as sanctified by faith, he was able to stop persecuting the church. After he believed on Christ, his will never again allowed him to consent to the stoning of a believer in Christ. There are things the will CAN do, and do well. It can move you to want to be absent from the body and present with the Lord (2 Cor 5:8). It can provoke you to give beyond your means (2 Cor 8:3,12). The will can move a rich believer to share his wealth with others (1 Tim 6:18). It can constrain us to “live honestly” (Heb 13:18). However, there is an area where the will is powerless! It is in the matter of stopping unwanted thoughts and lusts from entering the mind!

Other versions translate this expression as follows. “For what I would, that do I not.”^{KJV} “For what I want to do I do not do.”^{NIV} “For I do not do what I want”^{NRSV} “For not what I would, that do I do, I do not”^{BBE} “For I really want to do what is right, but I don’t do it.”^{NLT}

This is an arresting word! It reveals a heart that has been sensitized by grace. Here is a condition in which the individual is acutely aware of the nature of everything that courses through the mind. “I DO NOT DO WHAT I WANT!” And what is it that Paul wanted? What was his will on the matter being considered?

At this point, we must rise above the details of life. “What I want” refers to the fervent desire for total purity before the Lord, with not a single deviation. Speaking through Paul, the Spirit here throws down the notion that man can please the Lord in the energy of self strength, without the help of the Lord. Even when the will is strengthened by the Spirit, and the affection is set on things above, it cannot close the gate of the mind tight enough to forbid the entrance of profane thoughts. "I do not do what I want!"

It is as though he said, "I do not want my flesh to lust against the Spirit, but it does anyway. I want no part of my thinking to be unacceptable, yet I find such a part." Do not think for one moment that when Paul acknowledged he was not "already perfect" (Phil 3:12), it was a casual statement. He fervently desired to be "absent from the body and present with the Lord" (2 Cor 5:8), but he was not. His presence in the body, and current absence from the Lord, produced all manner of things he did not want. There were deviate thoughts so close to him they had to be taken captive and made to obey Christ (2 Cor 10:5).

"What I want," then, refers to a perfectly consistent life for the Lord, with no interruptions or inconsistencies—particularly in the mind. However, Paul was not able to achieve such a condition because of the presence of the flesh, or sinful nature.

WHAT I HATE TO DO

"... but what I hate, that I do." It requires an honest and informed soul to make such a confession. This is not the acknowledgment of a murderer like Cain! It is not the acknowledgment of a covetous man like Achan. It is not the admission of a profane person like Esau. It is not even the confession of a godly person who sinned like David. This is the admission of a person who lived holily, justly, and blamelessly. If he had not told us of this, we would never have known it.

Other versions read as follows. "But what I hate, that do I."^{KJV} "But what I hate I do."^{NIV} "But I do the very thing I hate."^{NRSV} "But what I have hate for, that I do."^{BBE}

Again, this is the statement of a sensitive soul. He hated more than the outward show of sin, or the baser sort of transgressions. Some people who wear the name of Jesus do not "hate iniquity" as fully as they should (Psa 97:10). Romans 12:9). They are too calloused toward things that are hated by God, and are an abomination unto Him. For this reason, they cannot comprehend why Paul speaks as he does.

It is important to see that Paul is not speaking as a sort of spiritual superman. His analysis is the result of living in the energy of the new creation—a privilege vouchsafed to every person in Christ Jesus. This is the experience of those who live by faith, walk in the Spirit, and press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

The conditions declared in this passage were not sought, but were the result of living in the fellowship of Jesus (1 Cor 1:9) and the communion of the Holy Spirit (2 Cor 13:14).

I am sure Paul did not seek "despair of life," but there was a time when he wrestled with it (2 Cor 1:8). He would rather have not experienced "sorrow," but he did (Phil 2:27). I know he would not have preferred "fears" to come into his mind, but they did (2 Cor 7:5). These are the better part of unacceptable thoughts. There are also "imagination" that must be thrown down (2 Cor 10:5).

DOES THIS APPLY TO WORDS AND DEEDS?

Some might ask if doing what is hated applies to words and deeds. There is certainly a senses in which we can say or do things we actually hate. But that is not the sense of our text. There is a critical difference, however, when we say or do things that we ourselves loath, and when unwanted lusts and thoughts invade our minds. We must confess ill-spoken words and contrary deeds as sin, and procure forgiveness for them. God is "ready to forgive" (Psa 86:5) these faults, and to "cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9). We DID them, and we must be forgiven of them.

However, this is not the situation in the text before us. Unwanted lusts and thoughts are not credited to us as sin, and are not to be confessed as sin. This is the whole point of this text. Paul will establish with unusual strength that such expressions do not belong to us. If we do not respond to them by entertaining and fulfilling them, they are not credited to us as personal transgression. This will now be developed more fully.

The New King James Version renders the word "do" as "practice." This is based on the use of the word in the Greek (ποιῶ). However, "practice," as used in ordinary speech, does not reflect the intent of this verse. As ordinarily comprehended, the word "practice" speaks of voluntary and willing expressions. Indeed, this word is often used in Scripture to denote this type of action—a willing and preferable word or deed (Matt 21:24; John 4:34; 1 Cor 9:23; 2 Cor 11:12). But that is NOT the meaning of the word in this passage.

Two Natures

As this text will develop, there are two distinct natures resident in the believer: the "old man" and the "new man." Like Jacob and Esau before they were born, they reside in the same domain, and struggle with each other (Gen 25:22).

Each nature has a distinct personality, mind, and will. Each is ruled by a different master, and motivated by different principles, or laws. Both are powerful, and aggressively seek their own way. One is good, and one is evil. One is from Christ, one is from Adam. One is earth-centered, the other is oriented for heaven. The devil works in one, and the Holy Spirit in the other.

The phrases "what I hate, that I DO," and "I DO what I will not to do," refer to the DOING, or expressions, of the "old man." They are internal, not external, acts. Paul refers the word "I" because they occur within him. They are part of his total makeup, but are NOT part of his essential person. They are foreign to his identity in Christ, and contrary to His new heart and spirit. They challenge him like Goliath, and taunt him like Sennacherib. Yet, they are not him!

I AGREE WITH THE LAW

“¹⁶ If, then, I do what I will not to do, I agree with the law that it is good.” This is the first of a series of conclusions—conclusions drawn by faith, not by human knowledge or wisdom. The point under consideration is doing what is really hated: “but what I hate, that do I.” Once again, this is speaking of the intrusion of corrupt imaginations and thoughts. The perspective now put before us is that of a person who is in fellowship with Christ Jesus. This is NOT the view or utterance of a person alienated from God, and “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1).

While it should not be necessary to say this repeatedly, a veil of ignorance has been thrown over this passage by those who lack spiritual understanding. The result is that a very essential aspect of the Kingdom has been obscured to the people of God. They have been left to struggle with the corruption of the “old man,” thinking they are dealing with their basic self. As a result, some have doubted whether or not they are really saved. Others consider their baptism to have been invalid. Still others are persuaded they waffle in and out of God’s favor because of uncomely thoughts and imaginations within. These can extend into the area of dreams, which are often troubling to those who are tenderhearted.

The Spirit will now show us how to reason upon these things. When involuntary imaginations overtake us, intruding into our thoughts, here is how the believer is to reason about the situation.

DOING WHAT I WILL NOT

First, the believer is to acknowledge these are unsought and unwanted. The phrase, “If, then, I do what I will not to do” means this. If something occurs in me that is against my will – something I have neither sought nor cultured. The eruption is something I actually hate and despise. It is like a robber that comes to steal, kill, and destroy. It is as much out of order as a Philistine in Israel, a heathen in the Holy of Holies, or the devil in heaven. It does not represent my preference. It is not what I muse and meditate upon. It is contrary to who I really am and where I am really going.

Erroneous Teaching

Those who insist this passage is referring to Paul prior to his life in Christ have revealed their failure to comprehend the nature of salvation. It makes little difference how they bend the words of the evil, precisely what is the difference between that person and the saved? How is it that a sinner can eat the fruit of redemption, without having access to its tree of life?

Emphatically, this passage refers to those with a new will, a new heart, and a new spirit! That newness is precisely what has produced this experience. It is not one of rote, but one flowing from the heart. “What I will not” is what I do not will, or want, to do, and it applies to THOUGHTS, not deeds.

A novice may very well imagine that a sinner, under the domination of the Law, does not really want to murder, or steal, or commit adultery. That is, from one point of view, conceivable. But what about coveting, lusting, or desiring—for that is the matter now being discussed? Where is the person outside of Christ that is alarmed when they want something that displeases God?

If the matter still seems too distant, think of wanting to be secure in this world, as opposed to desiring to be with the Lord (2 Cor 5:1-8). Ponder fearing death (Heb 2:15), or being occupied with thoughts of what we will eat, or what we will wear (Matt 6:25). What of the love of money, or an inordinate attachment to mother, father, brother, and sister (Lk 14:26). What of a failure to WANT to crucify the flesh, together with its affections and lusts (Gal 5:24). What about wanting to stay in this world, and not being “willing to depart” (Phil 1:23). Such conditions DOMINATE the sinner, even though they are covered with the veneer of culture. They show that sin is really not hated, even though some more heinous expressions may be repulsive.

Sin Hated in its Totality

The words “I do what I do not want to do,” ^{NIV} refer to the outbreak of the old nature in any sinful thought. They do not speak of a certain class of sin, but of sin in text, or attempt to correlate what is being said with other texts of Scripture. In their teaching, they have affirmed those outside of Christ, (in their very best state noted for “ignorance and unbelief” – 1 Tim 1:13) have no preference for sin. Rather, they hate it, and have no desire to do it. What is more, if these pretentious teachers are right, the alienated sinner is not even guilty of sin at all, as will be affirmed later in this chapter.

There is not a person outside of Christ who does not prefer to sin. That sin may take a mild form that is not offensive to an insensitive society, but it is enough to bring the wrath of God upon the sinner. If “A haughty look, a proud heart, and the plowing of the wicked are sin” (Prov 21:4), how can goodness be ascribed to such people? And, it is good to love righteousness and hate iniquity, a trait of Jesus Himself (Heb 1:9).

If the sinner, or the person under the Law, prefers to do good and hates to do its totality. The intrusions may take the form of questioning the reality heaven, or the validity of Scripture. They may include imagining God has abandoned us, or that there is no need to fight the good fight of faith. They may take the form of discouragement, fear, or hopelessness. They may be the intrusion of mysterious dreams that are so contrary to our nature in Christ that they cause confusion within the believer.

These sinful intrusions include all manner of evil lusts, but are not limited to them. The temptation to commit adultery, for example, may take the form prostituting our affection for Christ. We may be tempted to seek counsel or solace from men. We may be tempted to steal time and money from God, with never a thought of taking them from men.

The closer one is to the Lord, the profitable to the individual. It is seen as precious, needful, honorable, and comforting. All of that is inherent in the word "good."

The Law IS good, whether men see it that way or not. There is no flaw in it, and no disadvantage in its statutes. It reflects the nature of God, and is therefore good. It defines sin, and is therefore good. However, when someone acknowledges, consents to, or agrees that it is good, a milestone of life has been reached.

Not Heartless Agreement

This is no mechanical or academic agreement! It is not agreeing with your back, so to speak, pinned against the wall, as though you were forced to agree. This is the expression of the heart. The affection consents. The will consents. Even the intellect consents. No part of the essential person—the "new creation in

- ❑ "So shall I keep thy law continually for ever and ever" (Psa 119:44).
- ❑ "I have remembered thy name, O LORD, in the night, and have kept thy law" (Psa 119:55).
- ❑ "I have not forgotten thy law" (Psa 119:61).
- ❑ "I delight in thy law" (Psa 119:70).
- ❑ "Thy law is my delight" (Psa 119:77).
- ❑ "Unless thy law had been my delights, I should then have perished in mine affliction" (Psa 119:92).
- ❑ "O how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day" (Psa 119:97).

- ❑ "I have longed for thy salvation, O LORD; and thy law is my delight" (Psa 119:174).

Consenting that the Law is good involves delighting in it, preferring it, not forgetting it, and meditating upon it. David's expressions were preparatory for what would be realized in Christ. Paul is acknowledging participation in the salvation for which David longed (Psa 119:81,123, 160,174).

THE STRUGGLE IS THE EVIDENCE

The invasion of his mind with unwanted passions and desires were Paul's evidence that he agreed with the Law. He made no attempt to justify such thoughts, but acknowledged that he hated them. That hatred was only possible because he consented to the goodness of God's holy Law.

But the word "consent" also carries the idea of verbalization, or confession. Coming from the word σύμφημι, "consent," or "agree with," means to affirm or confess. It is as though the intrusion of unlawful desires into his mind caused him to shout out, "THY LAW IS GOOD!" It was good by contrast as well as nature.

The closer one is to the Lord, the broader the range of sinful expression. Just as surely as there will be more the person WILLS to do, there will be more he WILLS NOT to do.

broader the range of sinful expression. Just as surely as there will be more the person WILLS to do, there will be more he WILLS NOT to do.

AGREEING WITH THE LAW

"I agree with the law that it is good." Here is a most blessed conclusion, comforting to the heart and strengthening to the spirit. Make no mistake about this! God Almighty places a high value on agreeing with His Law! Those who are at variance with it in their wills, are headed for disaster!

Other versions read, "I consent unto the law that it is good," ^{KJV} "I am in agreement with the law that the law is good," ^{BBE} "I still acknowledge the Law as good." ^{NJB} Notice, the heart does not admit the Law is right, but agrees that it is GOOD. "Good" means flawless by nature and perceived as desirable and Christ Jesus—disagrees with the good Law of God!

Much before his time, David, the "sweet psalmist of Israel" (2 Sam 23:1), put this "consent" or "agreement" into words. Although he lived and died under the Old Covenant, his faith took him beyond the perimeter of the Law. In his measure, he was able to speak in harmony with the New Covenant, even though it was not enacted until nearly 1,000 years after his death. That is a most remarkable circumstance! Read some of David's expressions and see if they do not reflect the nature of the New Covenant.

IT IS NOT REALLY ME

¹⁷ But now, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me. Here we come to grips with the heart of this passage. This is the second conclusion drawn from the intrusion of foreign desires and thoughts—expressions of the “old man.” Without controversy this is one of the most liberating practical proclamations of Scripture. I use the word “practical” because the affirmation is associated with human experience. Foundational freedom is based upon the belief of the Gospel and consequent identity with Jesus. That aspect of liberty was powerfully declared in the sixth chapter. We were freed from sin: liberated from guilt, and emancipated from an obligation to the flesh. It is essential that this liberty be grasped by the heart. It is not enough to only know it theoretically.

BUT NOW

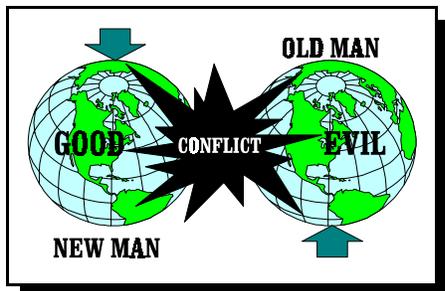

The words “But now” refer to our status in Christ Jesus. This is the life that has resulted from our burial, death, and resurrection with Christ. It is equivalent to saying, “But now that I am in Christ,” or “Now that I am justified,” or “Now that I have received the righteousness of God.” It is the same as saying, “Now that the body of the sins of the flesh has been removed,” or “Now that I am risen with Christ.”

Here is something vital to see. This is not the result of perception, but of identity with Jesus. This is true whether the believer sees it or not. It obtains power when it is seen, but it exists as soon as a person is “joined to the Lord.” If you are in Christ, what follows is true of you, whether you have ever seen it or not. The role of this passage is to show us the condition of the saved, not their potential!

IT IS NO LONGER I

On the surface, this may appear to contradict what Paul has just confessed. First he says, “For what I hate, I do” (verse 15). Then he says, “I do what I will not to do” (verse 16). Now he says, “It is no longer I who do it.”

Among other things, this shows the complexity of life in Christ Jesus. Too often there is an oversimplification of life in Christ. Actually, the believer is a microcosm of world conflict—a sort of miniature world in which both good and evil reside, temporal and eternal, earth and heaven. Within the child of God two worlds collide! One is favorable and one is unfavorable. One promotes destruction and the other promotes life. One is tainted, and one is pure.

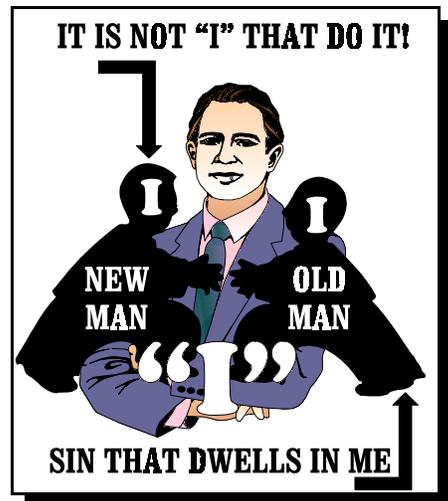

In Christ we receive a new identity. “Therefore if any man is in Christ, he is a new creature; the old things passed away; behold, new things have come”^{NASB} (2 Cor 5:17). The “old things” have “passed away” in several ways.

- They are no longer the center of our attention.
- They no longer have dominion over us.
- They no longer condemn us.
- They are no longer an integral part of us.
- Our view of them has changed.

“Old things,” however, have not become extinct, or non-existent. We still have to contend with them, even though they cannot exercise total control of us. We are required to mortify, or put to death, our “members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry: For which things’ sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience: In the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them. But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth” (Col 3:5-8). In the place of “your members that are upon the earth,” the NIV reads, “whatever belongs to your earthly nature.” That is the sense of the text. The members properly belong to our body and the Adamic nature, or what we are by natural birth. They are a part of our human constitution, even though they have been circumcised from our regenerated self, or the “new man.”

IT IS NO LONGER I because these eruptions do not come from my “new man,” or identity in Christ Jesus. The part of me that is in fellowship with Christ has nothing to do with them, and in that sense, “It is not I.” That part is real, not merely theoretical.

It is important to understand this is not a mere excuse or alibi, as the wicked are wont to make. It is not a “devil-made-me-do-it” explanation for transgression. There is no transgression here. Paul is not admitting to having fallen into immortality. Something was done, but it was not overt or external. He is speaking of the expressions of old nature that remains in him, tied, as it was, to his tabernacle of clay.

It was not him because he did not WANT what was expressed. His will was against it. His heart was not in accord with it. That is why he did not allow it to foam out through his words and deeds.

IT IS SIN THAT DWELLS IN ME

If “I do” it, yet “I” do not do it, then who is it that really does it? It may sound like a lot of double-talk, but it is not. The guilty party is that part that has been circumcised from the regenerated part. It is the “law of sin,” or sin principle, that remains in me, and expresses itself exclusively through the “old man.”

This is a powerful example of the meaning of Titus 2:11-13. There “the grace of God” is said to effectively teach us “that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.”

This denial is not pretending the “ungodliness and worldly lusts” do not exist, or saying they are not in us. Rather, it is denying they are an expression of our will and preference. It is also a refusal to allow them to sit upon the throne of our heart and mind. It is as though we rejected their appeals, rejecting them through the energy and direction of the Holy Spirit (Rom 8:13).

Being made “kings and priests unto God” (Rev 1:5-6), we rule over the petitions of our lower and sinful nature. We can reject their appeals in the power of the Holy Spirit. When they say “follow me,” we say “NO!” They are like Sanballot and Tobiah were to Nehemiah. They are in the place where we are. They shout at us as though they belonged to us, but they do not. They are enemies, living within the borders of our personality, but separate from our real persons. Whatever they say to us, and whatever suggestions they make, we say, “It is not I! That kis not the expression of my true desires!”

In a sense, it is a humbling experience to find that we have “sin” dwelling in us, cohabiting with us in the same vessel. But it is a temporary situation from which we will be delivered. Until that deliverance comes, learn to capitalize on the truth revealed in this text. You are not responsible for what the sinful nature suggests! That is a privilege vouchsafed to you by the grace of God in Christ Jesus.

I KNOW ABOUT FLESH

^{18a} For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) nothing good dwells . . .” The dichotomy of our experience is frustrating, but we are not totally ignorant concerning the situation. When

Ignorance is lethal for the child of God. As soon as understanding eludes us, sin deceives us. What Paul here confesses must be the aim for every believer. Otherwise, Satan will gain the advantage over them through his craftiness and shrewd devices.

Here, the word “know” is unusually strong. Unlike many other uses of the word “know,” this does not come from the Greek word γινώσκω, which means experiential knowledge. Here, the Greek word οἶδα is used, which refers to a different kind of knowledge. This particular word is used eighteen times in Romans (1:11; 2:2; 3:19; 5:3; 6:9,16; 7:7, 14,18; 8:22,26,27,28; 11:2,22; 13:11; 14:14; 15:29). It means perceive, discern, understand, or be skilled in a given area. This is knowledge that comes through faith, not experience. Some examples of its use will serve to illustrate the point.

present yourselves slaves to obey, you are that one’s slaves whom you obey, whether of sin leading to death, or of obedience leading to righteousness?” (6:19).

☐ “What shall we say then? is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not KNOWN sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet” (7:7).

This does not refer to mere academic knowledge. Paul is not reciting the tenets of a discipline of life. This is something he understood. He had a grasp of the situation, and was able to reason upon it.

IN MY FLESH

It is one thing to have a sort of knowledge about the flesh itself. It is quite another to understand about your own flesh—to have insight into the nature of your natural man.

Doctrinally, the Spirit has already delineated the flesh in general. “There is NONE righteous, no, NOT ONE: There is NONE that understandeth, there is NONE that seeketh after God. They are ALL gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is NONE that doeth good, no, NOT ONE.” (3:10-19). That should be an end of all controversy. Yet, it is not enough to merely memorize those facts and spout them heartlessly. The sense of them must be grasped for them to have power in the individual.

Concerning the flesh, Paul had some of the most respectable flesh that has ever been on earth. Hear him speak about it. “Though I might also have confidence in the later versions of Scripture read “I do not understand what I do” (v 15), it can be a bit misleading. This is an expression of frustration, not one of ignorance. Paul knew these unwanted intrusions were not issuing from His real self. He will now affirm he also knew that nothing good was resident in the natural self. This is now the third conclusion drawn concerning the involuntary outbreaks of the flesh within.

I KNOW ABOUT MYSELF

Ignorance is lethal for the child of God. As soon as understanding eludes us, sin deceives us. What Paul here confesses must be the aim for every believer. Otherwise, Satan will gain the advantage over them through his craftiness and shrewd devices.

☐ “But we KNOW that the judgment of God is according to truth against those who practice such things” (2:2).

☐ “Now we KNOW that whatever the law says, it says to those who are under the law, that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God” (3:19).

☐ “And not only that, but we also glory in tribulations, KNOWING that tribulation produces perseverance; and perseverance, character; and character, hope” (5:3-4).

☐ “KNOWING that Christ, having been raised from the dead, dies no more. Death no longer has dominion over Him”* (6:9).

☐ “Do you not KNOW that to whom you the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more: circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee; concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless” (Phil 3:4-6).

Mind you, this is distinction among a distinct people—a people chosen, led, and defended by God Almighty! These people had received more than any other people. They were the only people given a holy Law and a covenant with God. Paul excelled among those people. All of the prophets and all of the promises were directed to them. And Paul excelled among THEM!

NOTHING GOOD DWELLS

I am interested to hear what a man like that will say of himself. He is not hesitant to speak on the matter. “For I know that nothing good dwells in me, that is, in my flesh.”^{NASB} He does not say some good is found in the flesh, but that NO good is found there. Not only is nothing good found in the flesh generally, nothing good is found in HIS flesh. This is what he comprehends about himself. He can see the truth of it.

There are professed Christian teachers who say they do not understand how Paul could say such a thing. By saying this, they only betray their own ignorance. Paul KNEW, they do not. You can rest assured if they do not understand NO good was in Paul’s flesh, they surely are not aware that no good is found in theirs.

What did Paul mean by this statement, and what compelled him to affirm it? He is speaking of his natural self, which he calls “my flesh.” The word “flesh” is used in distinction to “spirit,” and stands for everything that is indissolubly united with the body.

Whatever I will be freed from in death and the resurrection is “my flesh.” Whatever part of me cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven, is “my flesh.” If it must be controlled and brought under subjection, it is “my flesh.” If it comes from Adam, it is “my flesh.” Everything about me that required my new birth is “my flesh.”

This is “the natural man” that cannot receive “the things of the Spirit of God,” and to whom they are “foolishness” (1 Cor 2:16). Flesh is absolutely consistent in all of its ways.

Paul calls it “MY flesh” because it is resident in him, not because he is charged with its defense and protection. He preferred not to have it, but there it was with him, ever being a source of aggravation and inner contention.

Jesus Speaks

Jesus spoke to this point when He said, “the flesh profits nothing” (John 6:63). By this, Jesus did NOT mean the flesh was profitable in some, but not all, areas. He does NOT mean there are a few circumstances in which “the flesh” can yield benefit. Men may say this, but Jesus Christ does not.

Stated another way, Jesus said “without me, you can do nothing” – and “the flesh” is “without” Christ in every sense of the word (John 6:63). It is “weak,” incapable of contributing to or sustaining the “new man” (Matt 26:41). It cannot generate a child of God (John 1:13). It even made the law of God “weak” (Rom 8:3). This is the only part of you in which Satan can gain a foothold, for he cannot touch what has been born of God (1 John 5:18).

NO GOOD THING

This is not a lifeless theological statement. It is the confession of something that has been seen or perceived. In “my flesh dwells no good thing.” There is nothing there that will be honored in heaven, nothing that can be salvaged. Everything about “the flesh” must eventually be separated from me!

Knowing this, Paul could consider everything bringing gain to that part of him to be “dung” – worthless and to be discarded (Phil 3:8). He did not look to the flesh for spiritual support. Those who remained in that realm could not edify him or bring heavenly benefits to him.

By nature, nothing good was found in Paul– or us! Any good must be received, for “EVERY good gift and EVERY perfect gift is from above” (James 1:17). If nothing good is found in us by nature, then it follows that men are “evil” by nature, for evil is the total absence of good. This is why Jesus said to His disciples, “If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask Him?” (Matt 7:11). By this, Jesus did not mean His disciples were the dregs of humanity, wallowing in perversion and moral corruption. Rather, he meant they were not good in the eyes of God, and thus required regeneration, or the new birth.

Paul calls it “MY flesh” because it is resident in him, not because he is charged with its defense and protection. He preferred not to have it, but there it was with him, ever being a source of aggravation and inner contention.

This is the same as “concluding all under sin” (Gal 3:22). Sin has leveled the playing field of humanity. The part of us that made us sinners in the first place, remains with us. Although it is not the dominant part of us, it is a part with which we must contend. What Paul now says of himself is to be applied to everyone.

This circumstance was perfectly clear to Paul, even though he did not know the depths of it, he did realize the reason for and nature of the warfare. That is precisely why he was able to stand in the heat of the conflict, keep the faith and fighting the fight. Because he knew the situation was not unique to him, he elaborates upon it. He will show he knew this by spiritual reasoning as well as by revelation. The argument is unusually powerful, bringing liberty to the soul.

THE WORD “FLESH” SHOULD STAB US AWAKE, SOUNDING THE NEED FOR SOBRIETY AND CHALLENGING US TO TAKE THE WHOLE ARMOR OF GOD.

^{18b} . . . for to will is present with me, but how to perform what is good I do not find. ¹⁹ For the good that I will to do, I do not do; but the evil I will not to do, that I practice.” Again, I want to point out the present tense of every aspect of this verse: “IS present . . . I DO not find . . . I will to DO . . . I WILL not to do . . . I PRACTICE.” This is not an exposition of the past! Nowhere in Scripture is the believer’s past assessed as though it was still going on. When reference is made to our former lives, the language itself confirms it is in the PAST. “For when we WERE yet without strength . . . while we WERE yet sinners . . . when we WERE enemies . . . ye WERE the servants of sin . . . when ye WERE the servants of sin . . . when we WERE in the flesh . . . such WERE some of you . . . who WERE dead in trespasses and sins . . . Wherein IN TIME PAST ye walked according to the course of this world . . . also we all HAD our conversation IN TIMES PAST in the lusts of our flesh . . . at that time ye WERE without Christ . . . you, that WERE sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works . . . we ourselves also WERE sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another . . . who through fear of death WERE all their lifetime subject to bondage . . . Which IN TIME PAST were not a people.” (Rom 5:6,8,10; 6:17,20; 7:1; 1 Cor 6:11; Eph 2:1,2,3,12; Col 1:21; Tit 3:3; Heb 2:15; 1 Pet 2:10).

There is a sharp line of demarcation between our lives of alienation and our reconciliation to God. There came a point in time when we were no longer in sin but in Christ, when we were no longer enemies but made friends. No good purpose can be served by speaking of those times of death, enmity, and alienation, as though they were still present. Such vernacular would only serve to further confuse believers. Those experiencing a struggle within would then be led to conclude they were NOT in Christ, and that they remained dead in their sins. If the erroneous assumption that this text refers to Paul’s past life, inward struggle is actually a sign that we have NOT passed from death unto life. It is evidence of NOT being saved and reconciled to God. There is no other way to view this passage! This is Paul’s assessment of the PRESENT – of our life in Christ, and the conflict it has produced with the flesh.

Confirmed in Galatians

The very experience declared here is confirmed in the book of Galatians, leaving no doubt as to its application. “For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would” (Gal 5:17). The NASB reads, “For the flesh sets its desire against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; for these are in opposition to one another, so that you may not do the things that you please.”

Here is the frustrating part of the faith-life. While we remain in the body, there are good things we want to do, yet cannot find a way to do them! Every believer knows this is the case. Daily we seek grace to help in these times of need, when we are, of ourselves, impotent to do what we already know is good.

This is a brief description of the inner warfare explained more fully in the seventh chapter of Romans. The point being made in Galatians is precisely the one made in Romans. The struggle itself is not sinful, and does not condemn us. “But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the Law” (Gal 5:18). The leading of the Spirit is presented within the context of a struggle with the flesh. We choose to follow the Spirit rather than the flesh. While the Law condemns the flesh, together with all of its desires, it cannot condemn us if we follow the Spirit—even though the very lusts it condemns are found in our earthly constitution. That is good news!

I WANT TO DO WHAT IS RIGHT

“ . . . for to will is present with me.” Other versions read, “For I have the desire to do what is good,”^{NIV} “I can will what is right,”^{NRSV} With the person in Christ, it is not a matter of not wanting what is right. Faith effects the will!

However, while willingness is imperative, it is not omnipotent. A modicum of honesty will confirm that being willing is not the same as accomplishing the thing willed.

Paul is saying he is willing to do what the Law demands, down to the smallest detail. To state it another way, he did not want to sin, and he did want to walk perfectly before God. That was his heart. These were such consistent desires that the thoughts presented by the flesh were foreign to his thinking—unwanted intrusions into his mind.

Being “willing in the day of His power” (Psa 110:3) is essential, but it is not the total answer. We will yet be delivered from a state wherein we are willing, yet cannot fully do what we want.

I DO NOT KNOW HOW TO DO IT

“ . . . but how to perform what is good I do not find.” Other versions read, “but I cannot carry it out,”^{NIV} “but I cannot do it,”^{NRSV} “but to accomplish that which is good, I find not,”^{DARBY} “I have the mind but not the power to do what is right.”^{BBE}

Here is the frustrating part of the faith-life. While we remain in the body, there are good things we want to do, yet cannot find a way to do them! Every believer knows this is the case. Daily we seek grace to help in these times of need, when we are, of ourselves, impotent to do what we already know is good.

The word “DO” is not a casual word, as though Paul was satisfied with some token expressions of his will. Rather, he wanted to perfectly execute his will, with no element of dissatisfaction. It is like the disciples falling asleep when they really wanted to stay awake (Matt 26:41).

THE GOOD THAT I WILL TO DO

This does not refer to obeying moral laws, civil laws, and helping our neighbor. Faith moves our will into a higher realm—one that governs the domain of external expression. “The good” of reference is consistent and uninterrupted.

The individual being led by the Spirit wants no deviate thoughts—not a single one. He wants to “attend upon the Lord without distraction” (1 Cor 7:35). The desire is for uninterrupted communion with God. “The good” that is willed is to always have the things of God fresh, always be joyful, strong, and dominated by the peace of God.

The desire is for no taint, however small, to be found upon our service to God. It is for no spot or blemish to be found upon our lives. That is what we want! But who has discovered the power to realize those desires? That is the point of our text. Faith has made us willing, but not all-wise or all-powerful.

THE EVIL I DO NOT WANT TO DO

The believer does not want to contend with waywardness in his own self. We would to God we had no part of us that had to be subordinated, for evil does have to be subordinated. But such a condition, however greatly it is willed or desired, is not with us!

There are thoughts that have to be “cast down.” As it is written, “For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds; casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ” (2 Cor 10:4-5). There is a sense of aggression and strong violence in the text.

Our will is not to have imaginations that must be thrown down, and thoughts that must be captured. Such things are “evil.” But who is the soul that has experienced such a state? “The evil I do not want, I do.” “DO” does not mean fulfill. It means something surfaced in ME that needed to be put down!

We are NOT willing to have thoughts and lusts that must be denied, or rejected. Things like this are “evil.” Yet, such things DO arise in us. We must even be taught by the grace of God to reject them, thrusting them from us. “For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts”

We are NOT willing to have thoughts and lusts that must be denied, or rejected. Things like this are “evil.” Yet, such things DO arise in us. We must even be taught by the grace of God to reject them, thrusting them from us.

(Tit 2:11-12). Our wills are NOT to ever have a worldly passion to which we must say “NO!”^{NIV} But what believer has ever experienced the thorough satisfaction of that desire in this world? “The evil I do not want, I do.” “DO” does not mean I executed the desire. It means something came up in ME that had to be denied, or rejected!

How grand it would be, says our will, if there was nothing in us that needed to be crucified, mortified, and put to death. Things that require crucifixion and death are evil. Are such things resident in our total makeup? Indeed they are! “Therefore put to death your members which are on the earth: fornication, uncleanness, passion, evil desire, and covetousness, which is idolatry” (Col 3:5). These things are “evil.”

Is there any among us who dares to boast they have no “members” that need to be put to death—mortified? “Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul” (1 Pet 2:11). Who is the believer that will affirm he has not confronted “fleshly lusts” from which he had to “abstain?” “The evil I do not want, I do.” “DO” does not mean carry out. It means something arose in ME that had to be put to death—something from which I had to abstain!

Our will prefers not to have anything about us that needs to be subdued or conquered. After all, we have been called to an inheritance into which nothing defiled can enter (Rev 21:27). That is the environment we want. Anything that has to be subjugated is “evil.” Ponder what Paul says of the body. “No, I beat my body and make it my slave so that after I have preached to others, I myself will not be disqualified for the prize”^{NIV} (1 Cor 9:27).

Here is an enemy you carry with you night and day. We are painfully aware of its presence every conscious moment. It shouts its desires and preferences in our minds at the most inopportune moments. “The evil I do not want, I do.” “DO” does not mean I followed the dictates of my body. It means I have a body that is wayward and must be ruled!

Withheld From the Saints

It is tragic beyond description that this perspective has been largely withheld from the saints. Even though the circumstance exists in every person that is in Christ Jesus, relatively few have any understanding of it, and no one totally comprehends it.

The perception of this text is a precious key that unlocks Kingdom mysteries to us. No person who sees this will question the need for the grace of God. The demand for an indwelling Spirit will not be doubted by those who see this. The need for perseverance and an aggressive fight of faith makes perfect sense to those who identify with this text! They will not question the need for edification, meeting with kindred spirits, or ingesting the Word of God. Their understanding moves them to seek every advantage possible. They will seek all of the graces afforded them in God’s great salvation.

SOUND SPIRITUAL THINKING

“²⁰ Now if I do what I will not to do, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me.²¹ I find then a law, that evil is present with me, the one who wills to do good.” It is not enough to merely know what is happening within us. We must be able to draw valid conclusions from our condition—conclusions that make for edification and comfort. Men have considered this passage and arrived at all manner of erroneous and dangerous conclusions. Such reasonings have brought no advantage to the saints of God, but have been like weights upon them, hindering them in the race set before them.

The degenerative effects of much of the preaching of our time it most serious. Many contemporary interpretations of Scripture are no more than the mere opinions of men. They are subtle “doctrines of demons” designed to turn men in the wrong direction. As when Peter “walked on the water to go to Jesus” (Matt 14:29), these teachings constrain men to look at the storms of life instead of the Ruler of the storms. They do not culture a proper view of self, God, Christ, salvation, or life in this world.

IF I DO WHAT I WILL NOT

Now Paul begins to reason concerning his condition. He has acknowledged his will is far ahead of his ability to fulfill it. That acknowledgment is not intended to apply only to himself. He is elaborating on our death with Jesus—death to sin and death to the Law. He is expounding the truth of deliverance from condemnation and the appropriation of righteousness.

In Christ, a new WILL is received. This is the result of having God’s holy and spiritual law put into our minds and written upon our hearts (Heb 8:10). It flows from having our conscience purged from dead works so that we may “serve the living God” (Heb 9:14). Now, the thoughts that once found a home in our minds are unwanted and repulsive. When they present themselves, we have done what we did not want to do! We have thought what we did not want to think! These intruding thought have not been summoned by our wills, but shot into our thinking like poisonous arrows from our

How are we to reason when this grievous circumstance introduces itself? Are we to throw up our hands in despair, concluding that we must be walking at a distance from God? Are we to deduce that we have not been regenerated, or that we must be forgiven for such things even asserting themselves in our thought processes? The Spirit will now teach us how to reason on these things.

IT IS NO LONGER I

This is the fourth conclusion drawn by the Apostle. Allow me to remind you of these four conclusions drawn at this point.

- “If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good” (verse 16).
- “Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me” (verse 17).
- “For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing” (verse 18).
- “Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me” (verse 20).

“No More”

“It is no more I that do it!” “It no longer I who do it!”^{NIV} The same expression was used in verse seventeen: “NO MORE I that do it.” At this point, we need to more fully expound this expression, “no ,more,” or “no longer.” Why not say “It is not I?” Why add the words “no more,” or “no longer.” There is a reason for this manner of speaking.

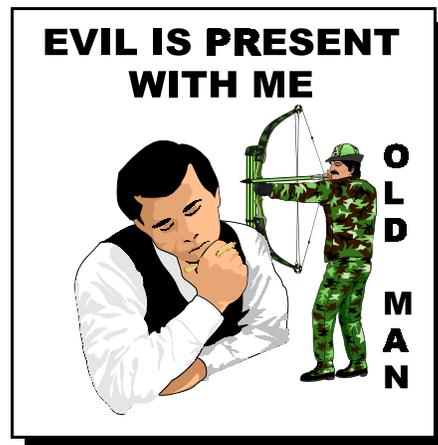

The lusts which now intrude into our minds were once welcomed by us—often the very same lusts. What is now “the old man,” or the “not I,” was once us! That self was not “old” then, but in the vigor of its youth. It is what caused us to be dead in trespasses and sins, alienated from God, and condemned. Our old self loves to remind us of our old self, and suggest to us that we return to the old ways, like a dog to its vomit, and a sow that was washed to its wallowing in the mire.

But we are “no more,” or “no longer” that person. We are a “new creation” (2 Cor 5:17), the “sons of God” (1 John 3:1-2), and “joint heirs with Christ” (Rom 8:17). We admit those desires once felt at home in us, but “no more!” They are “no longer” an expression of our will. They are “no longer” welcome in our minds. They do not belong to our real self! What unspeakable liberty is realized by the soul who has a grasp of this reality!

I FIND LAW

“I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me.” Other versions read, “I find then the principle that evil is present in me, the one who wishes to do good,”^{NASB} “So I find this law at work: When I want to do good, evil is right there with me,”^{NIV} “So I find this rule: that for me, where I want to do nothing but good, evil is close at my side.”^{NJB}

This law is to spiritual life what the law of gravity is to nature. Every time a person wants to go up, he confronts a law, or principle, that pulls him down! No matter how often or how high the person jumps, the law of gravity is there. He cannot get rid of it, but must learn how to live with it. He can take measures that can counteract the law of gravity, like flying, or climbing, but he cannot get rid of the law.

So it is in spiritual life. The desire to do good is always mixed with the suggestions of our old nature. This is a spiritual principle, and should not surprise us. The point is not the source of this law, but the PRESENCE of it. It is an ever present truth that the determination to do good is always neutralized by the presence of "evil."

"Evil," in this case, refers to all inner influences that compete with the good we want to do. While they are not always evil morally, they ARE "evil" because they draw us away from the "good" we intend to do. Good and evil are always contending within us. It is a principle that remains with us while we are in the body.

This aspect of spiritual life will be further developed in verse twenty three. It has only been introduced in this verse. But it is a vital principle, and must be seen in larger measures by the elect.

THE RECONCILED WAY OF THINKING

"²² For I delight in the law of God according to the inward man." This is the sixth conclusion Paul draws from his perception of the turmoil within—the struggle of good and evil within the womb of the mind. I cannot overemphasize the importance of knowing how to assess our inward experiences. Many believers are at a tremendous disadvantage simply because they are ignorant of the cause and nature of inner conflict. They can imagine they are better than they really are, unaware of the "evil" that remains associated with them. They can also conclude they are worse than they really are, not understanding that the evil with which they struggle is IN them, yet is not an expression of their real persons. Thus, the high value of this passage is accentuated. Once seen, it becomes a weapon with which to do battle. It also becomes a sweet elixir to assuage the weary warrior.

DELIGHTING IN THE LAW OF GOD

The glaring absence of a delight in the Law of God is abundantly apparent in far too many assemblies. A lack of appetite for God's Word, and a studied effort to avoid being exposed to much of it, are altogether too common. This is a most serious condition, even though it is not common to so regard it.

"For I delight in the law of God." Other versions read, "I joyfully concur with the law of God,"^{NASB} "I take pleasure in the law of God,"^{BBE} "I dearly love God's law."^{NJB} How is it that Paul can conclude he delights in the Law of God, when evil has erupted within him? Does not "evil" being "present" with him suggest the law of God is not within him? Indeed not!

He knows he delights in the Law of God because he recognizes "evil" when it asserts itself. This is no academic recognition, but one of the heart. He knows competing influences when he experiences them. Delighting in the Law of God shapes the will of the believer, causing him to want to do right things, and be repelled by the wrong things.

Rejoicing in the Law of God, and being satisfied by its message, are the results of having it written upon the heart and put into the mind (Heb 10:16). Delight includes the following conditions: approval of, preference for, and pleased with. This frame of mind is expressed by holy men of old time.

- ☐ JOY. "Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart" (Jer 15:16).
- ☐ VALUE. "I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food" (Job 15:16).
- ☐ DESIRED. "The judgments of the LORD are true and righteous *altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb" (Psa 19:9-10).

- ☐ NOT FORGET. "I will delight myself in thy statutes: I will not forget thy word" (Psa 119:16).
- ☐ TRUST. "So shall I have wherewith to answer him that reproacheth me: for I trust in thy word" (Psa 119:42).
- ☐ KEPT. "Before I was afflicted I went astray: but now have I kept thy word" (Psa 119:67).

- ☐ HOPEIN. "They that fear thee will be glad when they see me; because I have hoped in thy word" (Psa 119:74,81).
- ☐ BETTER. "The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver" (Psa 119:72).
- ☐ LOVED. "O how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day" (Psa 119:97).
- ☐ PROVOKES HOLINESS. "I have refrained my feet from every evil way, that I might keep thy word" (Psa 119:101).
- ☐ SATISFYING. *How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" (Psa 119:103).
- ☐ REJOICING. "Thy testimonies have I taken as an heritage for ever: for they are the rejoicing of my heart" (Psa 119:111).
- ☐ MEDITATE IN. "Mine eyes prevent (are awake in) the night watches, that I might meditate in thy word" (Psa 119:148).
- ☐ STAND IN AWE OF. "Princes have persecuted me without a cause: but my heart standeth in awe of thy word" (Psa 119:161).
- ☐ A TREASURE. "I rejoice at thy word, as one that findeth great spoil" (Psa 119:162).
- ☐ TALK ABOUT. "My tongue shall speak of thy word: for all thy commandments are righteousness" (Psalm 119:172).

While all of these are surely involved in delighting in the Law of God, yet many of them may seem distant from us when "the law of sin" erupts within. Even at that time, however grievous it may be, the very fact that we abhor the expressions of the "old man" proves we really do "delight in the Law of God." That not only is a valid conclusion, if we are to overcome sin, it is an essential one!

The Absence of Such Delight

The glaring absence of a delight in the Law of God is abundantly apparent in far too many assemblies. A lack of appetite for God's Word, and a studied effort to avoid being exposed to much of it, are altogether too common. This is a most serious condition, even though it is not common to so regard it. Many a local congregation tailors its activities for those who have no delight in, or high regard for the law of God. Various forms of entertainment and a variety of family activities are thought to be sufficient for the people. However, Jesus did not pour out his soul as an offering for sin in order for such things to occur among His saints.

The prophet Jeremiah spoke of people who lacked a delight in the Word of the Lord. Through the Spirit he defined their condition most precisely. You may rest assured, if this was true under the limited perspective of the Old Covenant, it is much more true in the "day of salvation."

Hear the prophet as he laments. People would not hear the Word, for whatever reason. As a result, they became subjects of the wrath of God. "To whom shall I speak, and give warning, that they may hear? behold, their ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot hearken: behold, the word of the LORD is unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it. Therefore I am full of the fury of the LORD; I am weary with holding in: I will pour it out upon the children abroad, and upon the assembly of young men together" (Jer 6:10-11).

An "uncircumcised ear" is the result of an unregenerate state. No good can be said about it, and there is no acceptable excuse for its presence (Acts 7:51). Such are people to whom God has not given "an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear" (Deut 29:4).

There exists in contemporary churches a completely intolerable situation. All of the vain explanations for this are unacceptable. In Christ Jesus there is forgiveness, regeneration, righteousness, the law written upon the heart and mind, and the conferment of a new nature. For people to live as though they were under the Old Covenant, with the same manners as Israel in the wilderness, is only evidence of their failure to believe the Gospel and be born again. For such people, the seventh chapter of Romans has no comfort and no instruction.

THE INWARD MAN

"For I delight in the law of God after the inward man." Other versions read, "in the inner man,"^{NASB} "in my inner being,"^{NIV} "in my inmost self."^{NRSV} This part of our being is associated with our hearts, or essential, persons. It is where the Law of God is written (Heb 10:16). It is where the Holy Spirit resides (Gal 4:6), and wherein we are "sealed" as God's own people (2 Cor 1:22). This is where the love of God is "shed abroad" (Rom 5:5). The heart is where the light of the knowledge of the glory of God is beamed, so that we come to know the Lord through Jesus Christ (2 Cor 4:6). It is also where assurance is placed (1 John 3:19). The "inward man," or the heart, is the focus of edification and comfort.

An "uncircumcised ear" is the result of an unregenerate state. No good can be said about it, and there is no acceptable excuse for its presence (Acts 7:51). Such are people to whom God has not given "an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear"

The delight and pleasure in the Law of God is found in the "inward man." This is not, as already confirmed, simply the unseen part of our being. Rather, it is "the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him" (Col 3:10). This is the re-created part, where Divine strength is imparted by the Holy Spirit of God! As it is written, "That He would grant you, according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man" (Eph 3:16). He is an "inward," or "inner" man as compared with our bodies, which are called the "outward man."

Renewal Within

made, where we are being "conformed to the image" of God's Son (Rom 8:29). It is where ongoing spiritual change takes place, as the Holy Spirit changes us from one stage of glory to another (2 Cor 3:18).

In a very vivid portrayal of the "inward man," the Spirit confirms it is the focus of Divine attention and blessing. "Therefore we do not lose heart. Even though our outward man is perishing, yet the inward man is being renewed day by day. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we do not look at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things which are seen are temporary, but the things which are not seen are eternal"^{NASB} (2 Cor 4:16-18).

An excellent example of the renewal and revitalization of the "inward man" is found in our text. There, fatiguing and frustrating inner conflict becomes the evidence of a delight in the Law of the Lord. It becomes the occasion for the discovery of a wayward law within us – a law that shoots evil into our thinking as soon as we intend to do anything good and well pleasing in the eyes of the Lord. The knowledge of our real condition strengthens us for the battle, and enabled us to say "NO!" To the suggestions of our own "sinful flesh" (Rom 8:3).

Out of Touch

The Christianity (falsely so called) of our day causes people to be more aware of the outward man, which is "perishing." You can hear the effects of this emphasis in the prayer requests of the people. It is perceived in the administrative staff of their churches. Even the means of obtaining ministerial credentials roots in the "outward man." Sermons, programs, and even literature have very little for the "inward man."

As a result, believers are not acquainted with their "new man," or "inward man." The flesh speaks louder to them that the Spirit, and their eyes and ears are more closely tuned to things that are seen than to things unseen.

There are disadvantages to this condition that have eternal ramifications.

Unless we see something of what is being expounded in this seventh chapter, Satan WILL gain the advantage over us.

However, once our real situation is seen, or comprehended, we will be more demanding about feeding and nurturing the inner man. We will not be content with religious novelties, powerless preaching, and distorted emphases.

A CONTRARY PRINCIPLE WITHIN

I SEE ANOTHER LAW

Because of the war within, Paul sees, or perceives “another” working principle within his total self. Other versions read, “I see a different law in the members of my body,”^{NASB} “I see another law at work in the members of my body,”^{NIV} “But there is another law at work within me,”^{NLT} “but I see that acting on my body there is a different law.”^{NJB}

This law, or principle is presently within all believers. It is a law associated with our bodies – our “members.” It works in a temporal environment that is dominated by both sense and time. As long as we are “in the body,” we must contend with this law. No amount of discipline, or even deep spirituality, can get rid of this law. When we walk in the Spirit, we neutralize its power, and are able to subdue its lusts. However, we are not able, even in that state, to get rid of it. It travels with the body, and cannot be separated from it. When we lay the body in the grave, we will lay the working of this principle in the grave also. When our spirit flies free from this body, it also moves beyond the influence of this wayward law.

Those who argue that this section of Scripture merely refers to our former lost condition have greatly erred. In that state, and in the sense of our text, we did not delight in the law of God after the inward man, which has an entirely new frame of reference. It “is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him” (Col 3:10).

Paul did not see this law by his intellect, but through his spiritual experience. This understanding was not induced by a statement of Scripture, but by participation in the Divine nature.

Paul did not see this law by his intellect, but through his spiritual experience. This understanding was not induced by a statement of Scripture, but by participation in the Divine nature. It is quite true that “all have sinned,” committing transgression, saying and doing things contrary to both God’s nature and Law. However, it is also true that they “come short of the glory of God,” having in themselves things that do not exist in God (Rom 3:23). It is not merely that they have not done everything God does, or that they have not fully measured up to His law. Rather, there exists in us a condition that does NOT reflect the glory of God. That condition involves the presence of a contrary law within—a law that is tied to the flesh, and cannot be dissolved. Even though it is cut away from us through the “circumcision of Christ” (Col 2:11-12), yet it exercises influence over us. It erupts against our will, and causes us to think things we abhor.

If we remained under the law, that circumstance would condemn us. The fact that we do want the things the flesh suggests has no relevance whatsoever under the Law. That is why this contrary law must be understood.

WARRING AGAINST THE LAW OF MY MIND

This principle is not only a working one, it is an aggressive one. It wages relentless war against “the law” of our mind, which is the result of having the Law written upon our minds. Other versions read, “waging war against the law of my mind,”^{NASB} “at war with the law of my mind,”^{NRSV} “fighting against the law of my mind,”^{DARBY} “which battles against the law in my mind.”^{NJB}

Not A Casual Circumstance

This is not a casual circumstance, and we dare not consider it as though it was. Nor, indeed, is it an obsolete experience, formerly endured, but at last far from us. It requires stupidity and ignorance to contend no such law exists in the believer. Only those who are strangers to “the law of my mind” are unfamiliar with “another law in my members.”

Inferior, But Powerful

Although this “law” is an inferior one, it is nevertheless a powerful one. The Canaanites were inferior to the Israelites, even though unbelief made them appear superior. By faith, Goliath was inferior to David, even though, in the flesh, he appeared superior to him.

Those who fail to take the “flesh,” or sinful nature seriously, will be overcome by it. Those who nourish the flesh, always looking at things according to appearance, and speaking continually of life in the body, have brought inner war to a feverish and dangerous level. There is a continual war going on within the believer. It may reach very high levels, or be decidedly reduced, but it is always there. Flesh and Spirit are locked in unending combat. Sin and grace are competing with one another. Faith and works are engaged in an unending contest. Good and evil are always against each other—within us.

But our text says this contrary law carries the battle against us. It forces the issue, and floods us with evil notions as soon as we determine to do good. This is not a docile principle, nor is it merciful and considerate. In times of great stress and difficulty, it will throw doubts and fears into your mind, and many wicked notions as well. It does not volunteer to cease the battle, nor does it refrain from its aggression. A departed brother from many years ago, Tzeror Hammer (early 1700's), once said, "As long as the righteous live, they are at war with the corruption of their nature. When they die, they are at rest."

The Corruption of Human Nature

Human nature is corrupt at its very foundation. It is not capable of yielding good or delighting in the Law of God. Even when it sits side-by-side with the new creation, it remains unchanged. It desires the same things it always desired, and is relentless against the "new man" and the "law of your mind."

Being evil-affected by the psychological thrust of our day, there is great resistance against this aspect of "spiritual understanding." If you are ever tempted to doubt the total corruption of human nature, consider that you must "partake" of the "Divine Nature" (2 Pet 1:4) and Jesus Christ (Heb 3:14) in order to dwell with the Lord.

If human nature could be reformed, do you not think God would be capable of doing so? Instead of a reformation program, however, through Christ God has instituted a transformation program. One in which we are born again, and created anew. That new creation is what launched the war now being described.

BRINGING ME INTO CAPTIVITY

As you can see, the expressions keep getting stronger and stronger. First, there was an acknowledgment that we did what we did not want (v 15). Then, it was admitted that nothing good could be found in the flesh (v 18). The deficiency of the will was also declared, for Paul could find no way to do what he really wanted (v 18). It was also confessed that the good that was desired was not being done, and the evil that was abhorred was being done (v 19). There was a law resident in him that always competed with the good he wanted to do (v 21). Although he delighted in the Law of God after the inward man, there was a contrary law within that viciously attacked that holy propensity.

domination by sin, but to captivity by the law of sin. Briefly stated, he means the "flesh," or "law of sin," can assert itself whenever it desires. To put it another way, he cannot stop it from shouting out from the cross. That law cannot force him to sin, but it can force him into the position of having to deal with it.

There is a vast difference in captivity to the law of sin, and enslavement by sin, which was our former condition. Unwanted thoughts course through the mind of the believer. Often they are like floods that wash away spiritually

But our text says this contrary law carries the battle against us. It forces the issue, and floods us with evil notions as soon as we determine to do good. This is not a docile principle, nor is it merciful and considerate. In times of great stress and difficulty, it will throw doubts and fears into your mind, and many wicked notions as well.

As if that was not enough, Paul now makes one of his strongest and most arresting statements. He does not refer to the past, but to the present. This contrary and wickedly militant law, he says, is "making me a prisoner of the law of sin which is in my members." ^{NASB} The statement is equally strong in every version of Scripture.

Not to Sin, But the Law of Sin

There is an important distinction to see here. The captivity is not to sin, but to "the law of sin" that resides in our "members," or human constitution. That is, Paul does not find himself continually transgressing the law, or falling into moral failures. It is not that he does not want to lie, but finds himself continually doing so. Or, that he does not want to be a thief, but continues to steal everything he can. Improvement in that area of morality can be achieved under the law, or even by those embracing a heathen religion.

Some, driven by a shallow understanding, assume this is the description of a person alienated from God—a person "under the Law." However, Paul says this of himself. He does not speak of the past, but of the present! Further, it does not refer to total productive thoughts, forcing the believer into the defensive mode. Of course, for the spiritually insensitive, all of this is of no consequence. Sinful thoughts are not painful for them, so they think nothing of their entrance. But for those who walk in the light and live by faith, they are most abrasive and grievous. They contradict what the new heart seeks, enjoys, and ponders.

The very wording of our text confirms the regenerated person is under consideration. To be brought into captivity shows the individual was NOT in captivity before the described experience. But that is not the case with the sinner, for they live every day of their lives enslaved to sin, as formerly described (6:17-21). That is precisely why they need a Savior (5:8-10). That is why we were "delivered from the Law" (7:6). If men could control sinful impulses, they would need no Savior, no Intercessor, no hope by which they could be saved.

PUT THE TEXT TO THE TEST

If you want to put this text to the test, make some resolves for tomorrow. I trust you can do it heartily, with the full consent of your will. Determine to carefully guard your mind, so that no sinful thought will weave its way into your thinking. Resolve to meditate day and night upon the Word of the Lord, and to fill your mind with wholesome Kingdom realities. Decide that you will fully comply with the exhortation, “Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things” (Phil 4:8).

You have all the tools that are necessary for the realization of that commitment. Your will is in it. You have armor to protect you. The peace of God can keep your heart and your mind. You have an Intercessor in heaven (Heb 7:25), and One in your heart as well (Rom 8:26). You have the fellowship of the Son (1 Cor 1:9), the communion of the Holy Spirit, and access to God. Surely you will be able to boast tomorrow night that your resolve has been realized!

I will tell you that the morning will not pass until you will be required to do battle. Your shield will have to be hoisted, and your sword unsheathed. You will have to call upon the name of the Lord, resist the devil, and deny ungodliness and worldly lusts. There will be imaginations you will have to cast down, and thoughts you must take captive.

What will have happened to you? Why were you not able to perfectly do what you wholeheartedly wanted to do? It is then that you will be able to join in the confession of Paul. “But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members.”^{NKJV} Can you see this law? Can you identify with Paul’s conclusions? They are for every believer to know.

YEARNING FOR DELIVERANCE

“²⁴ O wretched man that I am! Who will deliver me from this body of death?” This is the eighth conclusion provoked by the incessant struggle with the sinful nature. What a heart-wrenching cry! This is no casual word of a half-hearted church member! Here is the cry of a person with an undivided heart, but a divided nature. It pours out of a person whose inward man is growing strong, but whose outward man is weakening, and in the throes of death. This is a person with the law of God upon his heart and in his mind, and the law of sin in his earthly nature.

I AM A WRETCHED MAN

Virtually every version of the Scripture uses the word “wretched.” Some paraphrased translations use the words “unhappy”^{DARBY,BBE} and “miserable.”^{NLT} The word “wretched” means one who is enduring troubles and afflictions, and is in deep misery. It speaks of one who has been given “the bread of affliction” to eat (Deut 16:3; 1 Kgs 22:27). It is the kind of cry that came from Isaiah when he saw the Lord “high and lifted up.” “Woe is me! For I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips” (Isa 6:5). To even a greater degree than Isaiah, we have reason to lament, for the remnant of our fallen nature remains in our bodies. We would long ago have escorted it from our frail tabernacles, but we have not been able to do it. It lives where we live, and goes where we go. “Wretched man that I am!” It is humiliating and fatiguing to have to deal with an enemy in the land!

the pure heart desires. It is the lament of Galatians 5:17: “For the flesh sets its desire against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; for these are in opposition to one another, so that you may not do the things that you please”^{NASB} (Gal 5:17). Blessed is the person who is able to so lament. Such a person reveals a tender heart, a determined spirit, and a sanctified will.

DELIVERANCE FERVENTLY SOUGHT

“Who will deliver me from this body of death?” Notice that the association is with the “body,” not the heart or a condemning conscience. That is a critical distinction. The body is our source of shame, being a “vile body,” weak and frail, and requiring subjugation (Phil 3:20-21; 2 Cor 4:7). This is the point of our vulnerability—a “lowly body,”^{NKJV} that makes for “humiliation.”^{NRSV}

The is not wretchedness because of the guilt of sin, as expressed by David when he sinned against Uriah the Hititte. “I have sinned against the LORD” (2 Sam 12:13), or when he numbered Israel: “I have sinned greatly in that I have done” (2 Sam 24:10). This is not penitential wretchedness! It is not the wretchedness expressed by Judas when he betrayed our Lord. “I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood” (Matt 27:4).

Our body is called “this body of death” because it has no inheritance in the kingdom of God. It is a part of the order that has been cursed—given the sentence of death. From yet another view, it is dead toward God. As the Spirit says later, “And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin” (Rom 8:10).

This is the wretchedness that comes from knowing everything that is said or done is expressed imperfectly, and not as

If our bodies is to be employed in the service of the Lord, they must be “quicken,” or given life through the Holy Spirit. As it is written, “But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you” (Rom 8:10).

The “deeds of the body,” or the things it is inclined to do, must be put to death, for they have nothing to do with God. In fact, those deeds stand between us and God. If they are not mortified, they will from temptations to persecution, come because we are in the body. It is the arena of battle in which the Spirit and the flesh converge for war. When we are liberated from our bodies, we will be done with the inward struggle, persecution, and every form of inability and restraint.

This is Groaning

The exasperating expressions of Romans seven are the groans of the eighth chapter of Romans. “And not only chapter of Second Corinthians. “For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven: if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life” (2 Cor 5:2-4).

The Reason for the Condition

There is a reason for this experience. In it, we reveal our preferences. The strength of our determination is made known in this inner conflict. Our faith is tested, and our affection examined.

The first responsibility given to us as kings and priests unto God is the subduing of our own bodies. Bringing them into subjection is the testing area. How much we receive from God will be determined by how well we do in subduing the body and bringing it under subjection.

The first responsibility given to us as kings and priests unto God is the subduing of our own bodies. Bringing them into subjection is the testing area. How much we receive from God will be determined by how well we do in subduing the body and bringing it under subjection. In the work of subduing it, we will personally experience the feelings and frustrations of the seventh chapter of Romans. Although the battle wearies us, it also produces proof that we have a new nature. It confirms we have something from God. Truly, this is a “good fight.”

exclude us from the everlasting kingdom. Thus it is written, “if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live” (Rom 8:13).

The body is also associated with death because we can only be “present with the Lord” when we are “absent from the body” (2 Cor 5:6,8). All forms of suffering, they, but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body” (Rom 8:23). Our spirits long for the time and the place when there will be no more struggle.

It is also the groaning of the fifth

DUAL NATURES, DUAL SERVITUDE

“²⁵ I thank God; through Jesus Christ our Lord! So then, with the mind I myself serve the law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin.” This represents the ninth and final conclusion to which the understanding of inner conflict led. Perhaps it will be well to enumerate those conclusions once again. They exemplify the godly way of assessing inner conflict.

- “If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good”* (verse 16).
- “Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me”* (verse 17).
- “For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing”* (verse 18).
- “Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me”* (verse 20).
- “I find then a law, that, when I would* do good, evil is present with me” (verse 21).

- “For I delight in the law of God after the inward man”* (verse 22).
- “But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members”* (verse 23).
- “O wretched man that I am!”* (Verse 24).
- “So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin”* (verse 25).

THANKING GOD THROUGH JESUS CHRIST

It is not the condition itself that produces this thanksgiving, but the understanding of it. It also comes because the answer to the dilemma is seen. In answer to the question, “Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?” the renewed heart shouts back, “I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord!” That is, God is going to deliver me from the source of this frustration. He will do it through Jesus Christ, when He returns for His own. As it is written, “For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself” (Phil 3:20-21). Indeed, deliverance is on the way! This battle has an appointed time and place of termination.

SERVING WITH THE MIND

“So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God.” And what is the summation of all that Paul has seen—all that we can see in this battle with the flesh. We can see there is a real “me,” and an imposed “me.” There is a part of me that expresses my real desires. There is also a part of me that expresses things contrary to my desires.

When it comes to the real “me,” the part that is regenerated, in which the Holy spirit dwells, and which is reconciled to God, “I myself” serve “the Law of God.” That is what the real me thinks about, ponders, loves, and desires. I live by every Word of God, delight in it, and expresses itself.

This means that regeneration confers upon men a mind that is devoted to the Word of the Lord. Wherever this is missing, a most serious condition exists.

SERVING WITH THE FLESH

“... but with the flesh the law of sin.” “The flesh” is the natural part of us. Nothing good is found in it, as has been powerfully affirmed. The “law of sin” is desire it more than my necessary food. My mind is devoted to the Law of God. That is not surprising, for God has put it into my mind. He has given me the same nature as possessed by the Law: holy, just, and good. He has made me “spiritual” like the Law, and able to gladly receive what God has to say. Like Jesus, I also “delight” to do His will.

The “law of sin” is the sin principle that dwells within the flesh. It is not that the flesh CAN serve this dreadful law. This is what it does. In fact, it cannot do anything else. “The flesh” cannot serve God or the law of God. It has been corrupted and cannot be changed.

I understand “my mind” to be the part that has been “illuminated,” which comprehends the “good and acceptable and perfect will of God” (Rom 12:2). The “mind” is not merely the part where thinking is done, for he has spent considerable time reminding us that is also the place where “the law of sin”

the sin principle that dwells within the flesh. It is not that the flesh CAN serve this dreadful law. This is what it does. In fact, it cannot do anything else. “The flesh” cannot serve God or the law of God. It has been corrupted and cannot be changed.

From time to time, novices in the faith may imagine they have made good progress in the faith. Satan will lead them to believe they are better in the flesh than they once were. As soon as they let down their guard, “the flesh” breaks forth, confirming that it consistently and without exception serves “the law of sin.”

There is a particular teaching that is making the rounds these days. It is not a new teaching, but an ancient heresy that has been revived. It states that we can be morally “perfect,” with no flaw whatsoever. Those who embrace it generally make no claim to having achieved this perfection. However, they do say it is possible here and now, while we are in the body. They reason that if Jesus told us to “be perfect” (Matt 5:48), then it surely must be possible.

This passage has devastated this false teaching. It is the testimony of one of the premier members of the human race. Among the most elite, the Apostles, this man “labored more abundantly than they all” (1 Cor 15:10). In a remarkable text, the Holy Spirit calls Paul to the witness stand to confirm the faith of the saints. With unmistakable words he states nothing good resides in the flesh. It is the realm in which “the law of sin” resides, and is the part of us which serves that law of sin. The very presence of the flesh, together with the “law of sin” that resides in it, makes us imperfect—whether sin has been expressed externally or not.

How thankful we must be for the promised deliverance from this vile body. Then nothing about us will serve “the law of sin.” Then we will never again have to contend with that law, or confess to its presence within us. It will never raise its ugly head, for be forever removed from us. In the meantime, we will receive help from God when we are able to identify and confess our real situation. In this case, what you do not know can really hurt you! You do well to make it your aim to see the conflict within correctly.

CONCLUSION

We have briefly reviewed one of the pivotal sections of Scripture that deals with our experience. Many a soul has succumbed to the battle simply because they were unaware of what was going on within them. The warfare that has been described reveals the foolishness of those who say we should be happy all of the time, and that there is never cause for any other feeling. Perhaps such people are sadly lacking in their desire for holiness, and a fervent desire to dwell forever with the Lord.

When heaven is in your eye, and your affection is set on things above, and not on things on the earth, it is frustrating to confront the waywardness of the flesh, and have to contend with its imaginations. To be sure, there is grace for the battle, and we can come away with the victory. But that victory will not be achieved with a light-hearted spirit and undiscerning heart. If we do not “know” that nothing good dwells in our flesh, we may be prone to listen to it, and entertain its lusts. That inclination will either result in giving in to its desires, or concluding that we may not be in Christ at all.

We have heard a telling explanation of why deliverance from the Law is necessary. Under the Law, men are condemned for the very presence of wayward thoughts and desires, whether they are honored or not. When the commandment "Thou shalt not covet" came home to Paul's understanding, that was the very thing he saw. He saw that his nature was ungodly and condemned.

If it is true that, even after we are in Christ Jesus, we cannot stop the eruptions of the flesh, we must come away from any notion that we are justified by the Law. If there is no grace, there is no hope! If there is not a new creation in Christ Jesus, there is no hope! If we have not died to the Law, there is no hope. It will do no good to concoct a theology that says the Law has died, or that it has been abolished, or that it no longer exists. That foolish teaching does not come to grips with our situation. Salvation is so marvelously thorough that it will sustain us while the Law remains in full vigor! The grace of God is so sufficient that it will uphold us in the heat of an inward struggle that seems to contradict our profession of faith. It makes us equal to the battle.

The flesh has not changed! The natural man remains the same. All of the weaknesses of the flesh remain, and it still has no capacity to desire or please God. But that is not all there is to us. We are more than "the flesh." There is more to us than the "old man." The "law of sin" still remains within our earthly natures, but it cannot dominate us as we live by faith. You must never allow anyone or any teaching to rob you of this awareness! Now, be strong and of good courage to fight the fight of faith with confidence. You do have something from God!

FREED FROM CONDEMNATION

8:1 There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus, who do not walk according to the flesh, but according to the Spirit. ² For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made me free from the law of sin and death. ³ For what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God did by sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, on account of sin: He condemned sin in the flesh, ⁴ that the righteous requirement of the law might be fulfilled in us who do not walk according to the flesh but according to the Spirit. ⁵ For those who live according to the flesh set their minds on the things of the flesh, but those who live according to the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. ⁶ For to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. ⁷ Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, nor indeed can be. ⁸ So then, those who are in the flesh cannot please God. ⁹ But you are not in the flesh but in the Spirit, if indeed the Spirit of God dwells in you. Now if anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, he is not His. ¹⁰ And if Christ is in you, the body is dead because of sin, but the Spirit is life because of righteousness. ¹¹ But if the Spirit of Him who raised Jesus from the dead dwells in you, He who raised Christ from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through His Spirit who dwells in you.

– Romans 8:1-11 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

Just as the seventh chapter of Romans is a mountain peak of doctrine concerning the experience of the believer, so the eighth chapter is a towering peak of teaching on the completeness of salvation. When it comes to stabilizing the soul of the believer, this chapter is unexcelled. The condition of the person in Christ Jesus is described with unmatched power. On every side salvation is a bulwark for the soul, fulfilling the prophecy of Isaiah.

*“In that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah; We have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks” (Isa 26:1). Speaking of the day of redemption, Isaiah also said, “But you shall call your walls Salvation” ^{NKJV} (60:18). The words of David the psalmist can be applied to our position in Christ Jesus. “Blessed be the LORD: for he hath showed me his marvelous kindness in a strong city” (Psa 31:21).*

It might appear strange that a strong affirmation of security follows the exposition of a fierce inner struggle. For some, the struggle of good and evil within produces fear and doubt. The Spirit, however, is strengthening our faith, confirming that God has begun a good work in us, and will perform it “until the day of Christ” (Phil 1:6). We have been joined to the Lord Jesus, baptized into His death, and raised with Him by the glory of the Father (6:3-4). We are “dead” to sin and “alive unto God” (6:11). We have been liberated from the guilt and power of sin, and from the Law in its condemning capacity (6:18,22; 7:4).

In regeneration a new and dominant nature is given to us. It is harmonious with heaven, and in sharp contention with the world and all that is within it (1 John 2:15). If this was the only nature we had, our circumstance would be one of ease. However, this is not the case. The remnants of the old nature remain with us. They are tied, so to speak, to our bodies, and cannot be separated from them. Considered as a whole, these remnants are called “the old man” (Eph 4:22-24) “the flesh” (Rom 7:18) and “the natural man” (1 Cor 2:14). This nature, to be thrust from us when we are separated from the body, resists and wars against the “new man” that is “created in Christ Jesus” (Eph 2:10). It is aggressive, hostile, and unrelenting in this warfare. Without the extensive exposition of Romans seven, this battle would be so confusing we would lose heart. However, without the proclamation of Romans eight, the intensity of the battle would soon wear us out. Aware of this, Satan has sought to hide the truth unveiled in these two chapters. He has been phenomenally successful in this endeavor.

In spite of this circumstance, it is still correct that truth believed liberates souls captivated by ignorance. Our blessed Lord said, “And you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free” (John 8:32). When you take hold on the realities proclaimed in this text, you will experience a portion of the liberty of which our Lord spoke.

The power of God is confirmed in His effectiveness to do what the Law—His Law—was not capable of doing. In Jesus, God condemned sin without condemning the sinner—something the Law was impotent to do. Sin HAD to be judged and condemned. It could not be excused.

The Spirit will make a sharp distinction between those who live according to the flesh and those who live according to the Spirit. He will affirm the total unacceptability of the flesh. He will also begin developing the indispensable ministry of the Holy Spirit.

All of this is done out of necessity. This is no dead academic lecture! God is exposing our souls to realities that will give us the advantage in the good fight of faith—realities that must be grasped by the inner man. Believers who attempt to face life and grapple with the challenges of inner warfare must know what this chapter affirms.

Although we are not free from the sin principle, or “law of sin,” we are free from the guilt of and enslavement to sin. As long as we are “in the body,” we do have to confront this “natural” law, but we are under no obligation to obey it. Therefore, it is written, “Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh” (Rom 8:12). This is involved in the freedom declared in Romans 6:7: “For he that is dead is freed from sin.” While we struggle with “the law of sin,” we can confidently rejoice in our standing in Christ Jesus. The battle is only temporary, and good things are being realized because of it. We are being tutored in the nature of both the “flesh” and “the Spirit” (Gal 5:17), “the natural man” and “the spiritual man,” (1 Cor 2;14), the “old man” and “the new man” (Col 3:9-10). The teaching of this section confirms both the liabilities of the flesh and the advantages of the Spirit.

THE ENTIRE GODHEAD IS INVOLVED

Every member of the Godhead is extensively involved in our salvation. In the passage before us (8:1-11), “God” is referred to eight times in four verses (vs 3,7,8,9,11). Jesus is referred to nine times in five verses (vs 1,2,3,10,11), and the Holy Spirit is pointed out twelve times in seven verses (vs 1,2,4,5,9,10,11). This is a remarkable circumstance! In eleven verses there are no less than twenty-nine references to Deity—and they ALL have to do with OUR salvation.

- “Them that are in CHRIST . . . ” (v 1).
- “Then that are in . . . JESUS” (v 1).
- “Who walk . . . after THE SPIRIT” (v 1).
- “The Law of THE SPIRIT” (v 2).
- “Life in CHRIST . . . ” (v 2).
- “Life in . . . JESUS” (v 2).
- “GOD sending His own” (v 3).
- “HIS own . . . ” (v 3).

- “They that are after THE SPIRIT” (5).
- “The things of THE SPIRIT” (v 5).
- “Enmity against GOD” (v 7).

- “Raised up CHRIST” (v 11).
- “HIS SPIRIT that dwelleth in you” (v 11).

Salvation is a Divine enterprise in which men participate – not a human initiative in which God participates. The failure to embrace this critical distinction occasions the development of all manner of erroneous doctrines and emphases. If we are going to build the confidence of the people of God, they must hear of His working, His presence, and His commitment to their salvation. If they are to have a proper view of the liabilities of their natural persons, they must be told that at every point “flesh” rises to prominence, salvation is placed on a shaky foundation.

The passage before us will affirm the truth of salvation with unquestionable power. It will give no countenance to the flesh, nor will it allow anyone to remain comfortable that relies upon it. The Spirit will speak emphatically to us. There will be no ambiguity or vagueness in His words.

POWERFUL AFFIRMATIONS

We will read powerful affirmations of the truth – affirmations addressed to your faith. They are to be believed and heartily embraced.

- “There IS therefore NOW.
- Hath MADE me free .
- What the Law could NOT do.

- Condemned sin.*
- They that are after the flesh DO mind the things of the flesh.*
- They that are after the Spirit [DO mind] the things of the Spirit.*
- To be carnally minded IS death.*
- To be spiritually minded IS life and peace.*
- The carnal mind IS enmity against.*
- It IS NOT subject to the Law of God.*
- Neither indeed CAN be .*
- They that are in the flesh CANNOT please God.*
- You are NOT in the flesh.*
- If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is NONE of His.*
- The body IS dead because of sin.*
- The Spirit IS life because of righteousness.*
- He . . . shall also quick your mortal bodies .*
- The Spirit that DWELLETH in you.”*

If you are not accustomed to this type of language, it will sound strange to you. We are living in a time when preaching and teaching, together with much religious writing, is philosophical. Relatively little is affirmed or declared, and a lack of confidence spouts from the pulpit like Mount Vesuvius.

All such preaching is powerless, and unworthy of falling upon the ears of believers. If ever we are to make progress to glory, our thoughts must be established, not placed upon the flimsy foundation of human wisdom and theological speculation. Solomon once wrote, “Commit thy works unto the LORD, and thy thoughts shall be established” (Prov 16:3).

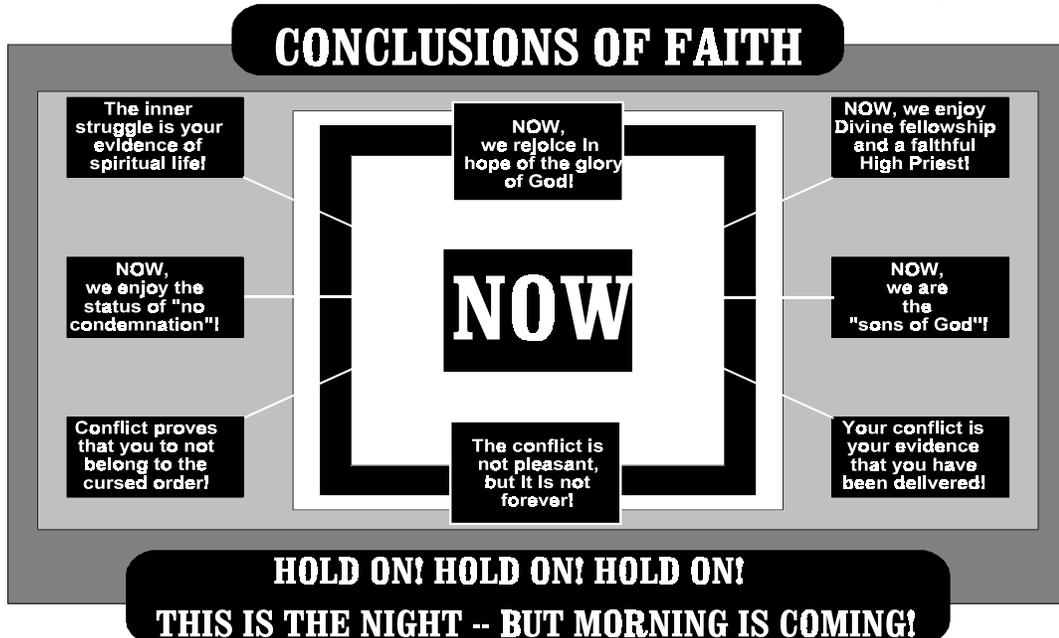

There is no better way to commit our works unto the Lord than to have our hearts and minds filled with Divine affirmations. The Spirit will now give us such provision.

THOSE WHO ARE NOT CONDEMNED

^{8:1} There is therefore NOW no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus, who do not walk according to the flesh, but according to the Spirit.” The seventh chapter closed with a powerful exclamation of assurance and confidence: “I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord!” This is the shout of faith, and it is the result of “spiritual understanding.” It confirms those who make such a declaration are in “heavenly places,” surrounded with realities that make for “the full assurance of hope” (Heb 6:11). It also confirms that the avoidance of condemnation is on the heart of every person who believes in Jesus. Faith moves the individual to do whatever is required to avoid being condemned by God almighty!

THEREFORE

This is a conclusion—a spiritually logical conclusion. It is the judgment of faith, and it is based upon perception. And what has led Paul to this grand conclusion—this inspired deduction? To be sure, he has written it through the inspiration of God (2 Tim 3:16). However, the inspiration of the Holy Spirit has blended with the experience wrought by faith. Thus, Paul’s statement is not only truth, it is truth experienced. That means what is here declared is common to all believers, for no Scripture came by, or was limited to, the interpretation or experience of the Prophet (2 Pet 1:20-21).

“Therefore” means, in view of what has been affirmed before. It refers to the inner struggle that was delineated in the seventh chapter—the frustrating warfare that takes place within the saved. Lest we forget the magnitude of that warfare, ponder again some of the statements that described it.

- ❑ FRUSTRATION. “For what I am doing, I do not understand. For what I will to do, that I do not practice; but what I hate, that I do.” (7:15)
- ❑ POWERLESS. “For to will is present with me, but how to perform what is good I do not find. (7:18)
- ❑ CIRCUMVENTED. “For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do.” (7:19)
- ❑ COMPETITION. “I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me.” (7:21)
- ❑ AGGRESSIVE OPPOSITION. “But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members.” (7:23)
- ❑ WRETCHEDNESS. “O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?” (7:24)
- ❑ TWO MANNERS OF LIFE. “So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin.” (7:25)

Confirming this cannot have reference to inner conflict prior to being in Christ, Paul now concludes something that cannot possibly be said of anyone except the person who is in Christ Jesus. He takes the very thing that has driven many to conclude they are unacceptable, and affirms that it proves acceptance. In view of the inner warfare – in view of the incessant struggle with sin – here is the inspired conclusion.

THERE IS NO CONDEMNATION!

“There is therefore now no condemnation . . .” What a wonderful statement! This is the description of the person who has been described in chapters six and seven.

- ❑ The one baptized into Christ’s death is not condemned (6:3).
- ❑ The one who is walking in the newness of life is not condemned (6:4).
- ❑ When the “old man” is crucified, we are no longer condemned (6:6).
- ❑ When we reckon ourselves to be dead to sin and alive to God, we are not condemned (6:11).
- ❑ When we are not under the law, but under grace, there is no condemnation (6:14).
- ❑ When we have obeyed the form of the doctrine delivered to us, we are not condemned (6:17).
- ❑ When we find ourselves unable to implement what we desire in our hearts, we are not condemned (7:15).
- ❑ When we consent that the Law is good, even though there is a part of us that struggles against it, we are not condemned (7:15-16).
- ❑ When we see that in our flesh nothing good resides, there is no condemnation (7:18).
- ❑ When we find a law within us that produces evil when we desire to do good, we are not condemned (7:21).
- ❑ When we find a law within us, warring against the law of our minds, and even captivating us, there still is no condemnation (7:23).
- ❑ When we feel our own wretchedness, there is no condemnation (7:24).

- ❑ When our minds serve the Law of God, while our flesh serves the law of sin, we are not condemned (7:25).

This is the meaning of this text. The glory of it is accented by our deliverance from the Law, which soundly condemns the very condition described.

This is too strong for some, for they imagine this gives license to sin. But that is a miserable delusion, foisted upon the simple by the prince of the power of the air. The point is that regeneration has made sin repulsive. It is hated and loathed at its source—in the thought processes. No person, however disciplined, can hate iniquity who has not been delivered from it! It is deliverance from sin that has provoked a hatred of it, and a love for the law of God!

Jesus said the person who does not believe on Him is “condemned already.” Our text affirms the opposite condition, where “no condemnation” exists “now.” Is that not a wonderful sound?

“Now”

It is essential to know the present status of the people of God—those who have believed the report of the Gospel, and are living in the vitality of their faith. The book of Romans frequently reminds us of the “now.” For those outside of Christ, alienation and condemnation describe their present condition. But that is not the case with those who are “in Christ Jesus.”

- ❑ FULLY EXONERATED FROM SIN. The state of the children of God is described as “being NOW justified by his blood” (5:9).
- ❑ RECONCILED TO GOD. Through Jesus, “we have NOW received the atonement,” or reconciliation (5:11).
- ❑ RELEASED FROM SIN. “NOW,” we have been “made free from sin” (6:22).
- ❑ FREE FROM THE TYRANNY OF A CONDEMNING LAW. “NOW, we are delivered from the law” (7:6).
- ❑ UNWANTED DESIRES NOT IMPUTED TO US. Concerning the struggle within, the child of God can say, “NOW then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me” (7:17).

The point is that regeneration has made sin repulsive. It is hated and loathed at its source—in the thought processes. No person, however disciplined, can hate iniquity who has not been delivered from it! It is deliverance from sin that has provoked a hatred of it, and a love for the law of God!

Even though the believer struggles with evil within, there is no condemnation in Christ Jesus.--by Given O. Blakely

Let there be no drawing back from the strength of the Spirit's affirmation. The unrelenting contest within the child of God confirms he is NOT condemned! Even though we are assaulted by the "law of sin" within us, there is "no condemnation!" Jesus declared the very same thing when He said, "He that believeth on him is not condemned" (John 3:18). In another place Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24).

"No condemnation!" That means we can boldly approach the throne of grace to obtain mercy, and find grace to help in the time of need (Heb 4:14-16). "No condemnation!" That means we can confidently draw near with a true heart, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water (Heb 10:22). "No condemnation!" That means Divine power is devoted to us—power that makes us adequate for any Divine assignment, and superior to any foe aligned against us. "No condemnation!" That means we can have the "full assurance of faith," the "full assurance of hope," and the "full assurance of understanding" (Heb 10:22; 6:11; Col 2:2). "No condemnation!" That means we have an Intercessor in heaven (Heb 7:25), and One within our hearts (Rom 8:26). "No condemnation!" That means our labor is not in vain in the Lord (1 Cor 15:58). "No condemnation!" That means no one can effectively lay anything to our charge (Rom 8:33). "No condemnation!" That means we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us (Phil 4:13).

No person who has been joined to the Lord can afford to be without this knowledge. They must see that the Father has received them because they have received His Son. Their acceptance of the reconciliation He wrought out in their behalf, is reason enough for God to justly receive them. Rather than condemning them, His eye is upon them, and His ear is open to their cries (1 Pet 3:12). Even though they struggle with the law of sin that is resident in their members, he does not condemn them. Even though thoughts and desires rise in them against their will, often draining their resources, He does not condemn them. They are in His Son by virtue of their faith, and He will not condemn such a soul, regardless of the seemingly contradictory struggles they may endure.

No Warrant for Sin

It should not be necessary to say so, but this condition does not justify sin.

If salvation is from sin, then how is it that God would be able to tolerate it after one comes into Christ? Does spiritual life sanctify sin? Does the Lord Jesus, in whom is no sin, overlook and even condone what is contrary to the Divine nature?

Because of the pervasiveness of demonic doctrines, some are led to believe the expression of sin is of no consequence in Christ Jesus. But this is not so, and reveals a reprobate heart and mind. If salvation is from sin, then how is it that God would be able to tolerate it after one comes into Christ? Does spiritual life sanctify sin? Does the Lord Jesus, in whom is no sin, overlook and even condone what is contrary to the Divine nature? If sin is repulsive to the believer, as is declared in the seventh chapter, how must it appear to the One who has saved us from it? Sin is never right, and it is never excused. If it is not forgiven, and if we are not freed from its guilt and power, it will be the cause of our condemnation. Further, if the reality of this does not register upon the human spirit, no acceptable level of effort will be expended in the good fight of faith.

THOSE WHO ARE IN CHRIST JESUS

Throughout the seventh chapter, Paul spoke of his personal fight of faith.

However, he was not speaking only of himself, but as a representative of the household of faith. We know this is the case because of the confident note that is sounded in this verse. In view of the described conflict, "There is therefore now no condemnation to THOSE who are in Christ Jesus."

There are no eternal benefits outside of Jesus Christ. God has hinged everything relating to life and godliness to His Son. Further, redemptive benefits can only be ministered to those who are "in Christ Jesus."

The immediate context of this statement, however, relates to being "under the Law." From the standpoint of a covenant, only the Jews were "under the Law." Yet, considering the spiritual status of humanity, everyone outside of Christ is condemned by the Law. After all, it was given that "every mouth might be stopped and all the world become guilty before God" (3:19). By saying, therefore, "those who are in Christ Jesus,"^{NASB} the Spirit means those who are no longer under the condemnation of the Law. Our release from the Law and its consequent condemnation was in order to our marriage to Jesus. As it is written, "Therefore, my brethren, you also were made to die to the Law through the body of Christ, that you might be joined to another, to Him who was raised from the dead, that we might bear fruit for God" (7:4).

God cannot deal favorably with us unless we are NOT condemned. Further, we cannot be in that condition unless we are free from the Law and in Christ Jesus. However we may imagine that God loves us, He cannot bestow His intended favor upon us unless we are "dead to the Law" and "in Christ Jesus." Redemption is "in Christ Jesus" (3:24). We are "alive to God in Christ Jesus"^{NASB} (6:11). In all of its remarkable facets, salvation is ministered to us "THROUGH" Jesus Christ. The benefits come to us BECAUSE of Him. They are also administered BY Him, as the Mediator of the New Covenant (Heb 9:15; 12:24). Additionally, the Son of God ministers these benefits ONLY to those who are "IN" Him. It is God Himself who puts us into Christ (1 Cor 1:30), thereby qualifying us for the state now described: “NO condemnation.”

Although generally neglected by the Christian world, the Spirit has said considerable concerning being “in Christ.” He has left no doubt about the point at which this occurred. We were “baptized into Christ,” being “baptized into His death” (6:3). We were “buried WITH HIM by baptism into death” (6:4), and are therefore “dead with Christ” (6:8). While this may appear a technical point, we are not in Christ Jesus because we were baptized, as though that were the reward for obeying “the form of the doctrine” (6:17). It was THROUGH our baptism that we were brought into Christ Jesus. It was the passage way through which this was accomplished.

To be “in Christ Jesus” is to be “joined” to Him—made “one” with Him (1 Cor 6:17). It is not simply that Jesus is with us, but we are “IN Him.” In a telling expression of this circumstance, the Scriptures say “we are members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones” (Eph 5:30). Being “in Christ” involves all of the benefits that are in Him passing to us.

When we are “in Christ.” all that is in Him becomes ours. A brief representation of these benefits follows.

- Redemption is in Christ Jesus (3:24).
- Sanctification is in Christ Jesus (1 Cor 1:2).
- We are caused to triumph in Christ Jesus (2 Cor 2:14).
- In Christ we become a new creation (2 Cor 5:17).
- We have liberty in Christ (Gal 2:4).
- True unity is found in Him (Gal 3:28).
- All blessings are in Him (Eph 1:3).
- We are brought near to God in Christ (Eph 2:13).
- The objective of God’s calling is realized in Him (Phil 3:14).
- The promise of life is in Christ Jesus (2 Tim 1:1).
- True faith and love are in Him (2 Tim 1:13).
- The grace of God is appropriated in Christ (2 Tim 2:1).

- Salvation in its entirety is in the Lord Jesus Christ (2 Tim 2:10).

Now our text boldly announces there is “no condemnation” to those who are in Christ Jesus. God does not condemn them. The Law of God does not condemn them. They are NOT condemned, even though they struggle with the law of sin that is resident in their flesh (7:23). They are not condemned even though they are not able to fully do what they desire (7:18). The struggle induced by faith is the personal proof those in Christ are not condemned.

While this may appear a technical point, we are not in Christ Jesus because we were baptized, as though that were the reward for obeying “the form of the doctrine” (6:17). It was THROUGH our baptism that we were brought into Christ Jesus. It was the passage way through which this was accomplished.

WHO WALK NOT AFTER THE FLESH

Later versions of Scripture eliminate the latter part of verse one: “who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.” All versions, however, do include the words in verse four, the latter part of which reads the same way. I shall take them as proper words that reflect the intent of this passage. As will be confirmed later, this phrase does not describe the CAUSE of condemnation being lifted, but the EVIDENCE of it.

Eleven times “the flesh” is mentioned in this chapter. It stands for everything about us that is unregenerate. It is the natural part of our persons, that is traced back to Adam. We have already been apprized there is “no good thing” in the flesh (7:18)—nothing that God will receive. Notwithstanding, the flesh aggressively seeks to direct the manner in which we live. To “walk in the flesh” is to live according to natural drives and impulses. It is to live as though this world was the main world, and heaven was of no importance. Those who walk “after the flesh” think like men. They reason with this world at the center of their thoughts, and are driven by time and circumstance.

Those who are not condemned, do not yield to the impulses of the flesh, allowing it to manage their lives. They may struggle with “the law of sin,” but they do not yield to it. The direction of their life is heavenward, not earthward (Phil 3:20). Their manner of life is their confirmation they are NOT condemned.

WHO WALK AFTER THE SPIRIT

Walking after the Spirit is being “led” by Him in the mortifying of the deeds of the body (Rom 8:13). It is the opposite of quenching or grieving Him (1 Thess 5:18; Eph 4:30). The ONLY way to live “not after the flesh” is to walk after the Spirit. This is living in the “communion of the Holy Spirit” (2 Cor 13:14) and the “fellowship of the Spirit” (Phil 2:1). It is when life is lived in willing harmony with the revealed purpose of God. Approached from the perspective of the seventh chapter, those who do not walk after the flesh, but after the Spirit are those who:

- Hate the very suggestion to do evil (7:15).
- Willingly and heartily consent that the Law is good (7:16).
- Discern and confess that nothing good resides in the “flesh” (7:18).
- Recognize the competing law within their members, and refuse to yield to it (7:23).
- Delight in the Law of God after the “inward man” (7:22).
- Sense the wretchedness of their natural condition, anticipating their deliverance from it (7:24-25a).
- Serve the Law of God with their mind (7:25).

Even though the believer struggles with evil within, there is no condemnation in Christ Jesus.--by Given O. Blakely

Those expressions are the result of refusing to follow the dictates of the flesh. They are something of what is involved in walking in the Spirit. To such, “There is therefore now no condemnation.” The fact that there is a struggle with sin and not concession to it, proves this is true. Because this aspect of spiritual life is again addressed in verse 4, I will reserve further comments for later. Remember, this is evidence of justification. The inner war, fierce though it may be, confirms that a new principle of life has been introduced! That life is more powerful than death—vastly superior to it.

TWO INEXORABLE LAWS

“For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made me free from the law of sin and death.” This verse is an extension of the thought introduced in the opening of the first verse: “There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus.” The evidence of this condition, as I have already stated, is found in the manner in which saints live, obediently following the leading of the Holy Spirit. Now the Spirit will declare the reason for their removal from condemnation: “FOR.” This reason is carefully traced back to the working of God, not the manner of life we are living.

This is a critical distinction, and must be seen with the “eyes of our understanding.” As long as men imagine that release from condemnation is caused by what they do, they will, at the very best, come short of the joy and peace that comes from believing (Rom 15:13). In salvation, valid DOING is always a response. It constitutes evidence of Divine working, as we will now see.

THE LAW OF THE SPIRIT OF LIFE

Here is a principle, or law, employed by the Holy Spirit. He is the One who makes this law effective, for it does not operate on its own, or independently of Divine power. This is nothing less than a description of the manner in which the Holy Spirit works—“the LAW of the Spirit.” It describes how we were freed from the power and consequences of sin.

This freedom has already been announced to us: “he that is dead is FREED from sin” (6:7), “being made FREE from sin” (6:18,22). Prior to this freedom, we were “servants of sin” (6:17,20) and “slaves to impurity” (6:19^{NASB}). In this chapter, freedom from enslavement to sin will be traced to being led by the Holy Spirit (8:13). Only the inexorable law, or principle, through which He works can free us from bondage to sin.

There are principles, or laws, at work in spiritual life with which we must be familiar. Our spiritual acquaintance with persons that aggressively opposes the new creation in Christ Jesus. This is contrasted with the “law of my mind.”

- ❑ The Law of the Spirit of life (8:2). This is the working principle by which the Holy Spirit brings spiritual life

As long as men imagine that release from condemnation is caused by what they do, they will, at the very best, come short of the joy and peace that comes from believing (Rom 15:13). In salvation, valid DOING is always a response. It constitutes evidence of Divine working, as we will now see.

them will give us an advantage in the good fight faith. If we are ignorant of them, we are thrust into disadvantage.

- ❑ The Law of God (7:12,14,16,22,25). This is the Law through which the knowledge of sin comes. It is summarized in the Ten Commandments, and was given as a covenant to Israel. This contrasts with “the law of sin.”
- ❑ The Law of the mind (7:23). This is the result of having God’s law put into our minds and written upon our hearts. This is contrasted with “another law in my members.”
- ❑ The law of sin (7:23,25; 8:2). This is the principle of sin that is resident in the human nature. This law is also referred to in verse 21: “When I would do good, evil is present with me.” This is contrasted with “the law of God.”
- ❑ Another law in our members that wars against the law of our mind, and brings us into captivity to the law of sin (7:23). This describes the bent of human nature. There is a principle at work in our natural and liberty to us. This law will be contrasted with “the law of sin and death.” Here we see one of the vital aspects of spiritual life—liberating us from the tyranny of sin.

“The Spirit of Life”

This is a reference to the Holy Spirit, who is the immediate Author of spiritual life. That is why we are said to be “born of the Spirit” (John 3:8). Throughout the life of faith, it is ever true: “the Spirit gives life” (2 Cor 3:6). In Ezekiel’s valley of dry bones, it was the Spirit that enabled the reassembled and enfolded bones to stand on their feet, “an exceeding great army” (Ezek 37:10).

- ❑ The Spirit leads us to “mortify the deeds of the body,” which is an aspect of life (Rom 8:13).
- ❑ It is “through the Spirit” that we “wait for the hope of righteousness,” another facet of true life (Gal 5:5).
- ❑ The people of God are “built together for a habitation of God through the Spirit” (Eph 2:22).
- ❑ The presence of Divine qualities within the saints is nothing less than “the fruit of the Spirit” (Gal 5:).

- ❑ Obeying the truth, the initial and consistent indication of life, is accomplished “through the Spirit” (1 Pet 1:22).
- ❑ Our washing, sanctification, and justification, were all accomplished “by the Spirit of our God” (1 Cor 6:11).
- ❑ Those in Christ are presently being changed “from glory unto glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord” (2 Cor 3:18).

direct contradiction to “the law of sin and death.” This is an enlarged view of “the law of sin,” or the sin principle, that is irrevocably associated with our bodies (7:23,25). Not only does this principle gravitate to sin, it also leads to death—separation from God. Thus, it is called “the law of sin and death,” for these two things cannot be separated. Sin leads to death (6:23) death is the result of sin (5:12).

Once again, this is a “law” associated with our earthly nature, which centers in the body. As long as we are in the body, we will contend with this law. No amount of theological reasoning will rid us of contention with the flesh! After all of the fanciful and conflicting arguments concerning the meaning of this passage, every honest believer in this world knows that contention with the flesh is anything but over!

FREEDOM

Here some believe a serious difficulty is introduced. On the one hand, Paul has [for all believers] acknowledged we are brought “into captivity to the law of sin” that is in our “members,” or earthly constitution (7:23). How is it that we can be brought into captivity to the “law of sin,” yet also be freed from it?

To resolve this seeming dilemma, some have said the reference in 7:23 pertains to our lives prior to being in Christ, while 8:2 refers to life in Christ. This seems to relieve them of any difficulties with the text. However, this cannot be, for both are in the present tense. Also, if this explanation is true, then those outside of Christ are not really guilty of sin at all (7:17,20), have a delight in the law of God (7:22), thank God through Jesus Christ their Lord (7:5a), and are serving the law of God with their minds (7:25b). And who is the person who would care to affirm such representations apply to those who are dead in trespasses and sins (Eph 2:1-2), and alienated from the life of God (Eph 4:18)? Such a conclusion betrays spiritual ignorance.

In What Sense Are We Free?

The Spirit has already declared this freedom. We are not obliged to sin. Although we contend with the “law of sin,” we are under no obligation to obey it.

- ❑ Those who are dead to sin live no longer in it (6:2).
- ❑ Being raised up with Christ, we walk in newness of life (6:4).
- ❑ Our old man is crucified with Christ that should no longer serve sin (6:6).
- ❑ The person who is dead with Christ is freed from sin (6:7).
- ❑ We are to reckon ourselves to be dead indeed unto sin and alive unto God (6:11).
- ❑ We can refuse to allow sin to reign in our mortal bodies (6:12).
- ❑ We are admonished not to yield our members as instruments of unrighteousness (6:13a).
- ❑ We are to yield our members as instruments of righteousness to God (6:13b).
- ❑ Sin shall not have dominion over us because we are not under law, but under grace (6:14).
- ❑ Being made free from isn, we became the servants of righteousness (6:18).
- ❑ Now we are to yield our members as instruments of righteousness, with the result being holiness (6:19).
- ❑ Now being free from sin, and become servants to God, we have fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life (6:22).

All of these statements postulate conflict. There can be no such thing as YIELDING if there are no contrary impulses. It is absurd to think that being under grace is necessary if we are once and for all rid of the sinful nature. Those who imagine such a thing simply are not honest.

Our freedom consists of release from servitude to sin. We are free to “deny ungodliness and worldly lusts” (Tit 2:12), which would not be necessary if they did not exist. Further, ungodliness and worldly lusts can ONLY exist where the law of sin and death exists. Once we are, by death or the change that will occur when Jesus comes, liberated from this body, we will never again struggle against “the law of sin and death.” Until then, we are free from the domination of that law. It need not rule us. In fact, if we will walk

All of these statements postulate conflict. There can be no such thing as YIELDING if there are no contrary impulses. It is absurd to think that being under grace is necessary if we are once and for all rid of the sinful nature. Those who imagine such a thing simply are not honest.

- ❑ It is “through the power of the Holy Spirit” that we are enabled to “abound in hope” (Rom 15:13).
- ❑ It is the Holy Spirit that brings us to obedience and the cleansing and sanctifying blood of Jesus (1 Pet 1:2).

All of these, and more, are accomplished through the Holy Spirit who works in strict accordance with heavens laws, or principles. The Holy Spirit does not employ fleshly means to accomplish spiritual results! This is, of course, devastating to much of the spurious Christianity that abounds in our time. It is no wonder church members are often found in bondage to sin. They are being subjected to a Gospel (falsely so called) that employs earthly means to obtain heavenly results. It simply does not work. If the Holy Spirit does not employ a certain principle, you may be certain God will not honor it if men choose to use it!

THE LAW OF SIN AND DEATH

The Holy Spirit works powerfully in

Even though the believer struggles with evil within, there is no condemnation in Christ Jesus.--by Given O. Blakely in the Spirit, it CANNOT rule is (Gal 5:16).

Believers who feel trapped and condemned by the flesh can rise higher! The Holy Spirit is working within them to free them from the domination of sin and death. When the sinful nature erupts within, spewing thoughts and desires into our minds, we can resist them, casting them down with the effective weaponry we have been given (2 Cor 10:5-6). “The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made me free from the law of sin and death.”

“Life”

This freedom from the domination of sin and the rule of death is accomplished within the framework of “LIFE.” This refers to our involvement with the living God, for we are “alive” only to the degree we have fellowship with the Father and with the Son (1 John 1:3). Eternal life, which is nothing less than spiritual life, or life administered by the Holy Spirit, is “knowing” God, “and Jesus Christ” whom He has sent (John 17:3). It is the peculiar prerogative of the Holy Spirit to accomplish this fellowship between God and the redeemed. Elsewhere, it is depicted as the Spirit changing us from one degree of glory into another—making us more and more like the Lord (2 Cor 3:18).

Freedom from the law of sin and death is legally accomplished the moment we become one with Jesus Christ. All of the heavenly resources required to resist this law are then made available to us. However, the practicality and consistency of that victory is accomplished only within the context of a vibrant fellowship with God and Christ.

The subordination of the flesh cannot occur while a person is walking at a distance from God! There can be no advancement in the faith while living under the domination of the flesh. This second verse is affirming that everything is made accessible to us when we come into Christ. It then becomes a matter of appropriating the victory through faith. It is not automatic, as the remainder of text will confirm.

GOD DID WHAT THE LAW COULD NOT DO

“³ For what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God did by sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, on account of sin: He condemned sin in the flesh.” The Spirit will not let us forget that salvation is traced back to God, and God alone. It is not the result of a joint effort between God and man, however desirable that may appear. In Christ, we are truly “workers together with God” (1 Cor 3:9). However, that is a post-reconciliation posture. It is NOT the way we are delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of God’s dear Son (Col 1:13).

Prior to being in Christ, we were “under the Law.” For we Gentiles, it was not given to us as a covenant, but was the means of defining our condition. It “stopped” every mouth, rendering all the world “guilty before God” (3:19).

The Spirit will now show us what the Law could NOT do. His words are of relevance to both Jew and Gentile. The Jew was given the Law in a codified form, and the Gentiles had it imprinted upon their conscience (2:15). Whether we are speaking of “the Law” in a covenantal sense, or as a means of alerting the conscience to good and evil, the words that follow apply. This will declare the weakness of a law-system.

WHAT THE LAW COULD NOT DO

There were things the Law COULD do. It could define sin (3:20). It could pronounce “GUILTY” upon the entire human race (3:19a). It could contaminate the conscience, stopping every mouth, while shutting the door to the throne of all grace.

The Law was an administration for the flesh, not the spirit. As a covenant, it was fleshly, temporal, and impotent to accomplish the ultimate will of God. However, it was not inherently weak; i.e., it had no weakness of its own.

But there was something the Law (any Law) could “NOT do.” It could not forgive sin or purge the conscience. It could not take sin away from the face of the Lord, or constrain Him to be gracious to sinners. In order for people to be saved, sin had to be dealt with; it could not be ignored or passed over as though it did not exist. The requirements of the Law could not be put aside, permitting God to receive those who had transgressed it.

WEAK THROUGH THE FLESH

The Law was an administration for the flesh, not the spirit. As a covenant, it was fleshly, temporal, and impotent to accomplish the ultimate will of God. However, it was not inherently weak; i.e., it had no weakness of its own. The inability of the Law was “the flesh,” or the constitution of the ones to whom it was addressed.

The Law demanded more than “the flesh” was capable of giving. Its weakness was found in the ones attempting to fulfill its requirements. Although addressed to those in the flesh, the Law placed necessities before them that were beyond their reach. The very purpose of the Law was to make this evident, so that men might see the need of a Savior. As long as men see no need for a Savior, they will not seek one. The Good News of a Savior means nothing to a person convinced of their own goodness, or their ability to achieve goodness. This accounts for the general lack of interest in Christ Jesus.

Even though the believer struggles with evil within, there is no condemnation in Christ Jesus.--by Given O. Blakely

The failure of the contemporary church to aggressively seek the benefits of the Gospel, and its amazing penchant for brevity and spiritual shallowness, are directly owing to its failure to perceive a need for the salvation of God. It does not see God as demanding more than they can give of themselves, and thus is not assertive in its demands for the Gospel.

A Modern Likeness

The weakness of the law can be likened to the use of steam in a steam engine. In bygone days, steam-driven locomotives were the iron horses of the railway system. The larger part of these locomotives was a massive metal boiler. Water was heated by means of a coal furnace, forming steam in this large boiler. Then, as the steam was released by controlled valves, it would drive the wheels of the great iron horse, moving it down the track. The steam was the means of generating the power of the engine.

If one attempted to construct one of those boilers out of cardboard, the power of the steam would dissipate at once. It would burst the cardboard, disintegrating it quickly. In such a case, the steam would be weak through the cardboard. There would be nothing wrong with the steam itself, or with the means through which it was produced. The weakness was in the container of the steam.

That was the situation with the Law. The flesh could not contain it. It was to the law what cardboard is to steam. It simply cannot harness the power of the Law. For “the flesh,” or the natural part of man, to keep the Law would be tantamount to people in an ICU ward of the local hospital running a brisk marathon race. Just as the demands of the race would exceed their ability, so the demands of the Law exceed the ability of men without Christ. It is “weak through the flesh.”

Because of this condition, God undertook the responsibilities inculcated by the Law Himself. He would not simply do away with the Law, but would see to it that its demands were met. The just penalty for infracting the Law would be paid by means of an appropriate sacrifice.

THE LIKENESS OF SINFUL FLESH

“ . . . God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin . . . ” Other versions read as follows. (1) “God did by sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, on account of sin.”^{NKJV} (2) “God did: sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and as an offering for sin.”^{NASB} (3) “God did by sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful man to be a sin offering.”^{NIV} (4) “By sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and to deal with sin.”^{NRSV} (5) “God, sending his Son in the image of the evil flesh, and as an offering for sin.”^{BBE} (6) “But God put into effect a different plan to save us. He sent his own Son in a human body like ours, except that ours are sinful. God destroyed sin’s that were unlike the ones for whom they were offered, both in appearance and nature. They were not in the image of God, as was man. Neither, indeed, were they rational or moral. That is precisely why “it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins” (Heb 10:4).

Thus God, in preparing an effective sacrifice, sent His Son “in the likeness of sinful flesh.” Although He had no sin of His own, He was clothed in a frame precisely like that of those He came to save—“the likeness of sinful flesh.” He did not come in “sinful flesh,” but in its “likeness.” He took upon Himself the “form of a servant” (Phil 2:7). Scripture makes much of this circumstance. The sacrifice offered for the sins of humanity must be offered by one who was made like the one’s to be saved.

The Deliverer Was Like the Delivered

It is written, “Inasmuch then as the children have partaken of flesh and blood, He Himself likewise shared in the same, that through death He might destroy him who had the power of death, that is, the devil, and release those who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage”^{NKJV} (Heb 2:14-15). Here, the successful defeat of Satan had to be accomplished by one who bore the image of the ones Satan had defeated. The means of Satan’s overthrow would be death itself. In this way, those who had been held in bondage through the fear of death could be righteously released from that servitude.

This may seem to be too technical. We already know Satan can be defeated by angelic hosts. It is said of Michael and his angels, “And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him” (Rev 12:7-9). If it was simply a matter of Satan being Under Law, the sacrifice bore no essential likeness of the ones for whom it was made. A lamb, a bull, a heifer, a goat—they were all animals that were unlike the ones for whom they were offered, both in appearance and nature. They were not in the image of God, as was man.

“control over us.”^{NLT} (7) “God did, sending his own Son in the same human nature as any sinner to be a sacrifice for sin.”^{NJB}

A Precise Offering

The offering presented by God differed from that demanded by the Law. While the offering of Christ, and the offerings made under the Law, were both substitutionary, there was a significant difference in them. Under Law, the sacrifice bore no essential likeness of the ones for whom it was made. A lamb, a bull, a heifer, a goat—they were all animals defeated, why not choose Michael and his angels for the job?

It is because such a victory could not be accomplished the release of sinners. The experience of Satan being thrust out of his former place could not bring benefit to those bearing another image. The angels were different in nature, and thus their victory could not be imputed to men.

His Heavenly Ministry Demanded He Be Like the Ones He Saved

More was involved in the Lord's death than the remission of our sins. Once our sins were forgiven, we needed to be sustained by a heavenly minister who knew what we required—knew by experience. We needed a High Priest who

His tenure in the flesh would uniquely qualify Him to sustain those who were tempted—assaulted by the evil one. Now we have a High Priest who can be "touched with the feeling of our infirmities" (Heb 4:15-16). This is possible because He is the Son of man. Because He is the Son of God, He is able to do something about our situation.

Because of Sin

The solitary reason for Christ's entrance into this world was "for sin." The presence of sin is what necessitated His coming! "In the likeness of sinful flesh and FOR SIN." The sin problem HAD to be addressed, and only the "Second Man" from heaven could do it (1 Cor 15:47). Jesus offered "one sacrifice FOR sins

Jesus Christ must come to grips with the matter of sin. That is why the Father sent Him into the world—to deal with sin: OUR sin!

CONDEMNED SIN IN THE FLESH

Sin had to be effectively condemned before we could be made free. This is something that should certainly be seen more clearly by the average Christian. Not only did sin have to be judged and condemned, it had to be judged and condemned "in the flesh," or in a person bearing the likeness of the transgressors. God could not condemn sin in the animal sacrifices. He could not condemn it by the law, but only identify it.

The wrath of God had to be expended against sin—enfleshed sin! Thus He condemned sin in the flesh of Jesus, His only begotten Son. Thus it is written, "He made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him" (2 Cor 5:21). Having "laid upon Him the iniquity of us all" (Isa 53:6), the Father "cursed" the Son (Gal 3:13), thereby condemning sin "in the flesh."

If you ever ponder how God feels about sin in one of His children, think what He did to His "only begotten Son" when He "bore our sins in His body on the tree" (1 Pet 2:24). Those who do not avail themselves of the sacrifice of Christ will themselves taste of the wrath and curse of the Almighty God! That is a result that cannot be avoided if unbelief persists. God is serious about the matter of sin—serious enough to curse His Son when He bore our sins. If men choose not to receive that atonement, they will suffer the vengeance of God, and that without remedy.

More was involved in the Lord's death than the remission of our sins. Once our sins were forgiven, we needed to be sustained by a heavenly minister who knew what we required—knew by experience. We needed a High Priest who was sympathetic with our situation.

was sympathetic with our situation. Thus it is written, "Wherefore in all things it behoved Him to be made like unto His brethren, that He might be a merciful and faithful High Priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. For in that He Himself hath suffered being tempted, He is able to succor them that are tempted" (Heb 2:17-18). Thus Jesus was sent into this world "in the likeness of sinful flesh," bearing the image of the ones He came to save.

forever" (Heb 10:12). It is true, "Christ SUFFERED FOR SINS, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us unto God" (1 Pet 3:18). Again it is written, "Christ DIED FOR OUR SINS, according to the Scriptures" (1 Cor 15:3). Galatians 1:4 reads, "Who gave Himself FOR OUR SINS, that He might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father."

Those who seek to gain benefit from

THE LAW'S DEMANDS FULFILLED IN US

"⁴That the righteous requirement of the law might be fulfilled in us who do not walk according to the flesh but according to the Spirit." It was not enough to simply remove sin. There had to be a realization of true righteousness, for the lack of which we were condemned outside of Christ. The reason for the forgiveness of sin was our need for righteousness.

THE RIGHTEOUS REQUIREMENT OF THE LAW

In summary, the "righteousness requirement of the Law" involves loving the Lord with all of our heart, soul, mind, and strength, and our neighbor as ourselves (Matt 22:37-39). Because we were "delivered from the Law" does not mean that requirement has been dropped! Because we have been forgiven "all trespasses" does not mean those requirements have been obviated, and are of no concern to us. There are countless people who wear the name of Jesus who have no regard whatsoever for "the righteous requirement of the Law." They conduct their lives as though God had little interest in this matter. What the Law "could not do" did not remove the necessity of the righteousness it demanded. God's nature still required that spotless and unimpeachable righteousness!

FULFILLED IN US

Essentially, the righteousness of the Law is realized in the remission of sins. Thus it is written, "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin" (Rom 4:7-8). That cleansing is so thorough, that no vestige of guilt can be found in the person joined to the Lord. Upon the basis of Christ's atoning death, God righteously remitted our sins.

The Confirming Walk

The fulfillment of the righteous requirement of the Law, however, does not end in remission. That forgiveness is confirmed in a godly walk: "who do not walk according to the flesh but according to the Spirit."^{NKJV} The Spirit will make clear to us that remission is not divorced from our conduct of life. While righteous conduct did not cause remission, it does evidence remission. Those who walk in accord with the sinful nature are not in fellowship with God, and have no evidence their sins are forgiven. While this is not a matter on which we are to become judges of others, it is a factor to be considered in examining ourselves, "whether we be in the faith" (2 Cor 13:5).

The spirit will now elaborate on what it means to "not walk according to the flesh but according to the Spirit."^{NKJV} The seriousness of the considerations will become apparent in the strength of the various statements that are made.

TWO DISTINCT WAYS OF LIVING

"For those who live according to the flesh set their minds on the things of the flesh, but those who live according to the Spirit, the things of the Spirit." There are only two ways in which life can be lived. They are summarized as "according to the flesh," and "according to the Spirit." These two manners cannot be lived out simultaneously. Other versions read, "they that are after the flesh" and "they that are after the Spirit,"^{KJV} "Those who live according to the sinful nature" and "those who live in accordance with the Spirit,"^{NIV} and "Those who are dominated by the sinful nature," and "those who are controlled by the Holy Spirit."^{NLT} Let it be clear, there are no other types of living! Every person is living in one of these two ways: "according to the flesh," or "according to the Spirit."

fellowship with the body of Christ. This is a manner of life that can easily associate with the world, adopting its manners and preferences.

Living "according to the flesh" can appear respectable. However, it opens the whose glory is in their shame; who set their mind on earthly things" (Phil 3:18-19). Notice the strength of these words.

- They are not simply enemies, but "THE enemies of the cross of Christ."
- They will be destroyed.
- Their god is their earthly appetites.
- The source of their boasting is really the source of shame.
- They "set their mind on earthly things."

Living "according to the flesh" can appear respectable. However, it opens the door to Satan because it closes the door to the Lord. Earthly appetites are primary, and temporal things are the objects of the individual's quest.

Let me be clear about this matter. There is not the slightest chance that such people will go to heaven. Any religious affiliation they claim is spurious, for God has no children of this type. If these traits exist, they must be forthrightly abandoned, and that with great zeal.

LIVING ACCORDING TO THE FLESH

This is a life driven by natural impulses. It may not be a life of gross immorality, but it is a life without God. The dictates of "the natural man," which cannot receive the things of God (1 Cor 2:14), are honored and pursued.

This world is the center of a life lived according to the flesh. Time outweighs eternity, and thus heavenly things are of little or no consequence. Living "according to the flesh" does not require the Word of God. Therefore, those so living can go long seasons without the slightest exposure to Scripture. Such a life also sees no need for door to Satan because it closes the door to the Lord. Earthly appetites are primary, and temporal things are the objects of the individual's quest.

Notice how the Spirit states this condition: "those who live according to the flesh set their minds on the things of the flesh." Their thoughts gravitate to the earth, and their minds are preoccupied with natural things. Elsewhere the Spirit says such individuals are opponents of Christ's cross. "For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: whose end is destruction, whose god is their belly, and

This is the kind of mind-set Jesus described when He once said to Peter, "Get behind Me, Satan! You are an offense to Me, for you are not mindful of the things of God, but the things of men" (Matt 16:23). I have no doubt but that Jesus repeats these words regularly in many respectable assemblies! There is altogether too much talk about the views and things of men, and too little about the "wonderful works of God" and His "exceeding great and precious promises." Such people are walking "as mere men"^{NASB} (1 Cor 3:3). Their minds do not get off of the earth, but remain nailed there like Sisera's head.

Even though the believer struggles with evil within, there is no condemnation in Christ Jesus.--by Given O. Blakely

LIVING ACCORDING TO THE SPIRIT

Living according to the Spirit is being moved along by the influence of the Holy Spirit. He is not quenched or grieved, and the “things of the Spirit of God” are desired (1 Cor 2:14). The heart eagerly hears “what the Spirit is saying to the churches” (Rev 2:7,11,17,29; 3:6,13,22). These are “led by the Spirit” (Rom 8:14), being easily directed in the way of life.

Those who live “according to the Spirit” set their minds on “the things of the Spirit.” This does not mean they seek to know more things about the Spirit Himself, merely seeking to obtain more information about the Spirit. Rather, they devote themselves to the things He reveals and ministers. They “set their affection on things above, not on things on the earth,” and “seek those things that are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God” (Col 3:1-2). They set their mind to “be filled with the Spirit,” and to let “the Word of Christ dwell” in them “richly” (Eph 5:19; 1 Col 3:16). They are preoccupied with another world, and repulsed by this present evil world.

The “things of the Spirit” are the realities He reveals, and the blessings that He ministers. This includes the marvelous “fruit of the Spirit” (Gal 5:22-23; Eph 5:9). The abounding hope He ministers is in this category (Rom 15:13). There is the pervading “joy of the Holy Spirit” (Rom 14:17; 1 Thess 1:6). These, and kindred matters, are the subjects of thought in those who live “according to the Spirit.” They are engrossed with the things with which the Spirit is occupied. His agenda has not become theirs, and they find great delight in the presence and will of God.

TWO DISTINCT MIND-SETS

“⁶ For to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace.” Because of the devastating effects of modern religion, there is little concern about minding the things of the flesh. Spiritual mindedness is actually scoffed at in many churches. Not a few of God’s people have been chided for being so heavenly minded they are of no conceivable earthly good. I cannot begin to tell you how often some stunted Christian has admonished me to “lighten up,” and become more casual in my stance of life. Serious and sober believers are at a premium these days. The institutional gurus have dulled the senses of the people, so they scarcely have thought upon the expressions of this text. Indeed, I should not be surprised if vast multitudes have never even heard this text, even though it has a most alarming tone and arresting message.

TO BE CARNALLY MINDED

Other versions read as follows. “For the mind set on the flesh is death,”^{NASB} “The mind of sinful man is death,”^{NIV} “To set the mind on the flesh is death,”^{NRSV} “For the mind of the flesh is death,”^{ASV} “For the wisdom of the flesh is death,”^{DARBYS} “If your sinful nature controls your mind, there is death,”^{NLT} and “And human nature has nothing to look forward to but death.”^{NJB} There should be no need to affirm the seriousness of the text. It breathes of sobriety and solemnity.

Carnally Minded

There is no possible way to derive the meaning of this phrase from the original language. This is a classic example of the manner in which the Holy Spirit teaches us. He uses words, but often assigns to them His own unique meaning. The word translated “carnally,” or “according to the flesh,” is σαρκός, which primarily means the muscular part that covers the bones of

It should not surprise us to find this kind of mind dominating the religious scene. The world is actually being consulted by religious men as though it contained the reservoir of wisdom. Its academic approval is eagerly sought, and its values embraced. Just how serious is a condition like this?

It Is Death!

The Spirit registers Divine disapproval of all carnal, or fleshly, mindedness. No person dominated by “the fashion of this world” (1 Cor 7:31) can walk with God! To be “carnally minded IS death!” By this, the Spirit means such a mind separates the individual from God. It removes sensitivity and tenderness toward God, and renders it impossible to hear Him who is “speaking from heaven” (Heb 12:25).

As soon as people begin to think in harmony with “this present evil world” (Gal 1:4), they begin to die toward God. A distance forms between the soul and God, as the one with a carnal mind moves into the domain dominated by Satan himself.

a human or animal body, the physical body as a whole body. However, in this text, “carnal,” or “fleshly,” is applied to the mind.

This is a mind placed on life in the body-life in this world. As long as men pursue the path of nature, governed by what they see and feel, they are actually falling headlong into death. Chiefly, this has to do with the “wisdom of this world” (1 Cor 1:20) and the “wisdom of men” (1 Cor 2:5). It involves having the world’s sense of values, and maintaining its priorities.

As soon as people begin to think in harmony with “this present evil world” (Gal 1:4), they begin to die toward God. A distance forms between the soul and God, as the one with a carnal mind moves into the domain dominated by Satan himself. Such a mind is impervious to Divine wooing, and thus incapable of receiving from the Lord.

Mark this well! When you are among people whose mind is ruled by the flesh—people who “mind earthly things”—the things of God will suddenly appear out of place. Such people are repulsed by a heavenly emphasis, or conversation that is governed by the consideration of heavenly things.

The point of our text is that salvation delivers people from such a condition. To be found in that circumstance, therefore, betrays a lost state. Those who ignorantly defend what they call “carnal Christians” need to give heed to this verse—if, indeed, they are capable of doing so. If “death” is the state of those who are “carnally minded,” then such a mind is a sinful mind, for “the wages of sin is death” (Rom 6:23). Note, carnal mindedness does not lead to death, but IS death! It is anything that appealed to the flesh. There was not a syllable of His powerful words that appealed to those having no fundamental interest in eternal things and a vibrant fellowship with the Living God.

Faith cannot reside in a carnal mind, nor can hope and peace. Such a mind repels the Spirit and invites Satan and the hosts of darkness to take control.

TO BE SPIRITUALLY MINDED

What a remarkable contrast! “But to be spiritually minded is life and peace.” Other versions read, “the mind set on the mind that has been “illuminated” (Heb 10:32) and “enlightened” (Heb 6:4). Spiritually minded people live by every word of God. They savor the things of God, talk about them, and hunger for them. They are their happiest when the things of God are clear to them. They live for the world that is to come, and anticipate dwelling in the house of the Lord forever.

Life and Peace

Every version reads the same way: “life and peace.” This is the result of being “spiritually minded”—of having a mind that is “controlled by the Spirit.” “Life” involves reciprocity to God. It is thriving in the presence of the Lord, knowing Him, and delighting in Him. This is “eternal life,” and is the ultimate objective realized in Christ Jesus. As it is written, “And this is the promise that He hath promised us, even eternal life” (1 John 2:25). This is why Jesus is come, to give “us an understanding, that we may know Him that is true, and we are in Him that is true, even in His Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life” (1 John 5:20).

Faith cannot reside in a carnal mind, nor can hope and peace. Such a mind repels the Spirit and invites Satan and the hosts of darkness to take control.

separation from God! It does not merely cause, or lead to, separation, but evidences that the separation has already taken place. That is precisely what the text says. “To be carnally minded IS death.”

A Practical Consideration

There is a current practice of catering to the “carnal mind” as though this was a valid means of reaching the lost. In some circles, “seeker friendly” services and small informal “cell groups” are in vogue. While there may be some commendable aspects to these approaches, it appears to me they represent more of a compromise than a godly initiative.

If “to be carnally minded IS death,” then God’s people do well to exercise themselves to avoid any encouragement for the entrance of such a mind. Neither our formal nor our informal studies should leave the door ajar for the entrance of the flesh. If you will consider the words of Jesus, you will note the total absence of

Spirit is life and peace,”^{NASB} “the mind controlled by the Spirit is life and peace,”^{NIV} “to set the mind on the Spirit is life and peace,”^{NRSV} “But if the Holy Spirit controls your mind, there is life and peace.”^{NLT}

If this verse is true, and it surely is, then spiritually minded people are the ONLY people who are alive to God! These have minds “controlled by the Spirit,” a thought some cannot embrace. Yet, such a mind has been yielded to the Holy Spirit, submitted for faith, strength, and Divine tutelage. The influences of the Spirit have not been quenched, and His gracious leading has not been resisted. The Spirit can “control” the pure in heart without imposing His will upon them.

The “spiritual mind” is the mind in which Divine fellowship can be realized. It is where the Law of God can be written, and “the spirit of wisdom and revelation” can be experienced (Eph 1:17). This is the

This life is not conferred independently of spiritual mindedness. Those whose minds are riveted to the earth need not tell us how they have eternal life. If being spiritually minded IS life, and being carnally minded IS death, then those whose minds dwell upon the earth are not alive to God. It makes no difference what profession they make.

The spiritually minded person possesses a peace that “passes all understanding” (Phil 4:7). It undergirds the soul and keeps the individual from wavering (Phil 4:7). This is a peace that can actually “rule in your hearts” (Col 3:15), bringing personal stability in an unstable world. These two qualities flow out from being spiritually minded.

THE UNCHANGING BENT OF THE CARNAL MIND

“⁷ Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, nor indeed can be.” The Spirit will now elaborate on WHY the “carnal mind” is death. He knows men will attempt to justify their carnal mindedness, but will have none of their feeble attempts to do so. He will speak candidly with us, unveiling the nature of “flesh,” the “carnal mind,” and the “natural man.” There will be no provision for such a mind among God’s people—or anyone else, for that matter. It is condemned by God because of its nature, and what it compels men to do.

Even though the believer struggles with evil within, there is no condemnation in Christ Jesus.--by Given O. Blakely

In keeping with the struggle introduced in the seventh chapter, the “carnal mind” is the expression of the “old man,” or “the flesh,” in which dwells “no good thing” (7:18). To be “carnally minded” is to be dominated by that “old,” and totally unacceptable, nature.

In order to confirm why “no condemnation” can only exist in Christ Jesus, the Spirit will reveal three aspects of “the carnal mind.” Remember, this is the mind that is not “controlled by the Spirit.” It is the mind that functions without regard to the God of heaven.

THE CARNAL MIND IS ENMITY AGAINST GOD

Here is an unusually strong affirmation. Other versions read, “the mind set on the flesh is hostile toward God,”^{NASB} “the sinful mind is hostile to God,”^{NIV} “the wisdom of the flesh is an enemy to God,”^{DARBYS} “the mind of the flesh is opposite to God,”^{BBE} “the sinful nature is always hostile to God,”^{NLT} and “the outlook of disordered human nature is opposed to God.”^{NJB}

This is the mind that is NOT motivated by the Holy Spirit—the opposite of a spiritual mind. It is the mind that perceives and thinks without God at the center. It is the mind set of the “old man,” which is crucified with Christ.

Such a mind is hostile, warlike, and belligerent against God. It contends with God, refusing to accept His ways, and fights aggressively against them.

The word “enmity” comes from the Greek word ἐχθρα, and means hatred, animosity, and discord. Thayer’s lexicon defines it as “the CAUSE of enmity.” This is the mind that actually alienates a person from God, causing him to become God’s enemy. This mind reasons against God, and is against His being. It is the mind that seeks to get rid of God by pushing Him away from all considerations. When the Word or will of God is affirmed, “the carnal mind” aggressively fights against it. It finds a reason to denounce God and His Word. It will question the Scripture, deny its authenticity, and find a reason to negate what it says. It will do this in the name of self-preference, or what it conceives to be the best course. It will even appeal to scholarship, higher learning, and expediency. But in the last analysis, its objections flow from its nature. The “carnal mind” is antagonism against God.

This mind will quarrel with God’s judgments, even getting angry when God does something that is not conceived as right. It hates what God loves and loves what God hates.

THE CARNAL MIND IS NOT SUBJECT TO THE LAW OF GOD

Here is a recalcitrant mind, one that does not bow to the will of God. Other versions read, “for it does not subject itself to the law of God,”^{NASB} and “It does not submit to God’s law.”^{NIV} Wherever the Word of God is not honored, preferred, and obeyed, “the carnal mind” is in control. This mind does not merely admit it has failed to surrender to God’s law, it refuses to do so. This is the nature of “the carnal mind.”

THE CARNAL MIND CANNOT BE SUBJECT TO THE LAW OF GOD

The Spirit now shows us why we must be born again—why a “new heart” must be received. You cannot train “the carnal mind” to be submissive to God and His Law. It CANNOT be subject to the Law of God! If men walk in the flesh, they, by that very circumstance, CANNOT love and obey God! The “carnal mind,” or “mind of the flesh,” “IS NOT EVEN ABLE” to be subject to the Divine will.^{NASB} It not only will not, it CANNOT—“it cannot do so.”^{NIV} ! It is not only steeled against the Lord, but zealously fights against Him.

If God does not write His law upon the hearts of men and put it into their minds, they CANNOT obey Him, or render acceptable service to Him. It is important to note this writing is done on the “new heart,” given to us in rebirth. If men who profess Christ choose to live by the impulses of the old nature, they make themselves incapable of loving and submitting to God’s Law.

All who are outside of Christ are in an impossible situation! They, by their very nature, are hostile against God. If they do not appear to be so, it is only because they have not yet confronted God. Even when “the carnal mind” is cultured by Divine ordinances, and surrounded by countless benefits, it will go so far as to kill the Son of God! It will not balk at beating the Apostles, stoning Stephen, or driving Paul from the city. You cannot make the things of God attractive to the carnal mind. Only the Holy Spirit, working through the marvelous Gospel of Christ, can convince alienated people they are precisely that—alienated—and in need of a Savior. Wherever there is a genuine inclination toward God, the Holy Spirit has been at work.

This solemn warning is necessary because believers still contend with “the carnal mind.” That is the mind that controls the lower nature, and to which Satan has access. The contention is fierce and consistent. Lest we attach little significance to the warfare within, the Spirit shows us the results of yielding to the flesh. It puts us at odds with God, and brings us into war with Him.

WHEN IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO PLEASE GOD

⁸ So then, those who are in the flesh cannot please God. Here is the spiritually logical conclusion to the facts that have been adduced. Do not forget how powerfully the case has been stated.

- ❑ Those living after the flesh set their minds on the flesh (v 5).
- ❑ To be carnally minded is death (v 6).
- ❑ The carnal mind is enmity against God (v 7a).
- ❑ The carnal mind is not subject to the Law of God (v 7b).
- ❑ It is not possible for the carnal mind to be subject to God's law (v 7c).

Other versions read, "Those controlled by the sinful nature cannot please God," ^{NIV} "So that those who are in the flesh are not able to give pleasure to God," ^{BBE} "those who are still under the control of their sinful nature can never please God," ^{NLT}, and "those who live by their natural inclinations can never be pleasing to God." ^{NJB}

THOSE WHO ARE IN THE FLESH

Those who are "in the flesh" are those who are directed by natural appetites, not spiritual ones. Rather than abstaining from "fleshly lusts that war against the soul" (1 Pet 2:11), they culture those appetites. They follow the dictates of nature, and are not being led by the Holy Spirit.

Not Limited to Those Out of Christ

While this verse does apply to those outside of Christ, it is not limited to them. Indeed, that is not the emphasis of this verse. Paul has already acknowledged that nothing good can be found in the flesh (7:18)—even the "flesh," or sinful nature, of the one who is reconciled to God. We have been exposed to the reality of inner warfare—the struggle of the flesh and the Spirit (Gal 5:17). If it was impossible for the redeemed to succumb to the flesh, it would not be possible to struggle against it. Wherever there is struggle, there is vulnerability.

The strong admonitions to reckon ourselves as alive to God (6:11), and yield ourselves to God and our members as instruments of righteousness (6:13,16,19) confirm spirituality is not an automatic process. In the context before us, "those who are in the flesh" are the professed believers who do not reckon themselves to be dead to sin and alive to God. These are the ones who do not yield themselves to God, or yield their faculties as servants of righteousness. These do not take seriously the war within, do not put on the whole armor of God, and thus do not stand against the wiles of the devil. What can be said of such people?

Those who yield to the flesh, indulging its appetites time after time, must be told this. They must be apprized of the fact God will receive nothing from them, nor can He be pleased with them. Even their imagined "righteousness" is nothing more than "filthy rags" before the God of heaven

CANNOT PLEASE GOD

Those who are "controlled by the sinful nature CANNOT please God." ^{NIV} It simply is not possible for them to do so! Those who yield to the flesh, indulging its appetites time after time, must be told this. They must be apprized of the fact God will receive nothing from them, nor can He be pleased with them. Even their imagined "righteousness" is nothing more than "filthy rags" before the God of heaven (Isa 64:6).

Everyone Yielding to the Flesh

All who yield themselves to the flesh, obeying its lusts, make themselves reprehensible to God. They can make no claim to grace, for the grace of God teaches us to "deny ungodliness and worldly lusts," living "soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world" (Tit 2:12). Those who are in the flesh" are those who are NOT denying those lusts, and are NOT living godly in this world. All such people "cannot please God."

If we should be tempted to think pleasing God is not a critical matter, we must remember we are told we "ought to walk and to please God" (1 Thess 4:1). In fact, we are to "walk worthy of the Lord unto ALL pleasing." The very power of God is devoted to enabling us to do this very thing (Col 1:10-11). However, Divine power or not, should we choose to follow the dictates of the flesh, we will not be able to please God. It should be apparent that no one displeasing to the Lord should imagine they will be gathered to the Lord in that state.

This is yet another way of saying, "without faith, it is impossible to please God" (Heb 11:6).

An Example of the Effects

The alienating effects of being controlled by the flesh is seen in our Lord's remark to the Jews, who were set against Him. "How can you believe, who receive honor from one another, and do not seek the honor that comes from the only God?" (John 5:44). Their preference for the honor of men rendered them incapable of believing on Christ! In that state, they could not please God in the fundamental matter of believing on His Son. Only when they were freed from that condition would they be able to believe!

Thus the real nature of "the flesh" has been set before us. This is what we are without Christ, related only to Adam. It is what we are on our own. If this were suddenly to be perceived by the professed church, there would be such a jarring revival it would boggle the minds of the beholders! How vital it is to see this.

ONE MORE THING

It should be noted that the inability of those in the flesh to please God does not exclude them from the responsibility to do so. No person should imagine their natural incapacity for pleasing God means they are to be content with their state. God has provided a means through which we can please God, doing things that are even “well pleasing” in his sight.

Even though the believer struggles with evil within, there is no condemnation in Christ Jesus.--by Given O. Blakely

This inability to please God can be overcome by believing and obeying the Gospel of Christ. The Holy Spirit will aid us in these efforts. Salvation provides an effective remedy for the situation. Further, God will not hold him guiltless that refuses this remedy, choosing to depend upon his natural resources. If God has provided a solution to sin, woe to the person who chooses to refuse it! God will not hold him guiltless! His salvation is too great to excuse those who reject it.

THE INDISPENSABILITY OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

“But you are not in the flesh but in the Spirit, if indeed the Spirit of God dwells in you. Now if anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, he is not His.” Having duly warned us of the wretchedness of “the flesh,” the Spirit now returns to the matter of our salvation, regeneration, or being made righteous. He will confirm the essential difference in us in not owing to what we do, but what we possess. There is something very different about those who are in Christ Jesus.

YOU ARE NOT IN THE FLESH

“But you are not in the flesh.” This is a Divine commentary on the statement, “But now, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me,” and “Now if I do what I will not to do, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me” (7:17,20). It is one thing for a variant law to be found in us (7:23), it is quite another for us to be “in the flesh.” It is one thing to acknowledge nothing good dwells in our flesh (7:18), it is something else to be “in the flesh.”

To be “in the flesh” is not the same as being “in the body” (2 Cor 5:6; Heb 13:3). It is not simply being in a house of clay (2 Cor 4:7). We know this is the case because the Spirit has just said, “So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God” (8:8). To be “in the flesh,” in this sense, is to be under the domination of the unregenerate part—our natural self.

Other versions read, “however, are controlled not by the sinful nature,” ^{NIV} and “You, however, live not by your natural inclinations.” ^{NJB} As confirmed by the sixth chapter, in Christ we have been liberated from servitude to the flesh (6:18,22). We have also been “delivered from the Law” which held us prisoners until faith came (7:6; Gal 3:23).

The flesh is no longer the domain in which we live. We have been raised up with Christ to occupy higher and more profitable realms. We have a body, but are “not in the flesh.” We wrestle with sinful inclinations, but are “not in the flesh.” God does not behold or receive us “in the flesh.” There is a higher domain.

Being “in the Spirit,” able to resist the demands of the flesh, is evidence that the Spirit does dwell within us. Where that evidence is lacking, there can be no claim of possessing the Holy Spirit. You cannot have the effects without first possessing the appointed cause.

IN THE SPIRIT

“But you are not in the flesh but in the Spirit.” Ordinarily, the Holy Spirit is said to be “in” us. (8:11; 1 Cor 3:16; 2 Cor 1:22; Eph 3:16). But here, we are said to be “in the Spirit.”

Elsewhere it is written that we have “begun in the Spirit” (Gal 3:3). If we “walk in the Spirit, we will not fulfill the lusts of the flesh” (Gal 6:16). We “live in the Spirit,” and are to also “walk in the Spirit” (Gal 5:25). Prayer is to be made “in the Spirit” (Eph 6:18), and we love the brethren “in the Spirit” (Col 1:8). You will recall that John, on the Isle of Patmos, was “in the Spirit on the Lord’s day” (Rev 1:10). What does it mean to be “in the Spirit?”

This is synonymous with being “controlled by the Spirit” (8:6, NIV).

From a more general perspective, it is the same as being “in Christ Jesus” (8:1). To put it another way, those who are “in the flesh” are attached to the earth, while those who are “in the Spirit” are attached to heaven. To be “in the Spirit” is to gather your resources from Him and be directed by Him. It is to have the Word of Christ dwelling in you richly (Col 3:16) and enjoy communion with Him (2 Cor 13:14).

The state of being “in the Spirit” was initiated by God Himself. When we were raised up to sit together with Christ in the heavenly places, we were put into the Spirit (Eph 2:6). This is what brought life to us—being put into the Spirit. Our life continues as we walk in the Spirit. Thus it is written, “If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit” (Gal 5:25).

THE SPIRIT OF GOD DWELLS IN YOU

“... if indeed the Spirit of God dwells in you.” We are not “in the Spirit” merely by profession. Nor, indeed, is our standing to be considered the result of a Divine decree, as though there was nothing personal about it. Our text does not take being “in the Spirit” for granted, and neither should we. We are NOT in the flesh, but ARE in the Spirit “if in fact the Spirit of God dwells” in us. ^{RSV} Being “in the Spirit,” able to resist the demands of the flesh, is evidence that the Spirit does dwell within us. Where that evidence is lacking, there can be no claim of possessing the Holy Spirit. You cannot have the effects without first possessing the appointed cause.

The Indwelling Spirit

Carefully note HOW the circumstance is represented. He does not say we are “in the Spirit” if we have received the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Nor, indeed, does He say we are “in the Spirit” if we have been immersed. He does not say we are “in the Spirit” if we are members of the right church. The blessing of being “in the Spirit” is conditioned upon the Holy Spirit DWELLING in us. Alternate versions read, “if the Spirit of God lives in you,”^{NIV} “since the Spirit of God has made a home in you.”^{NJB}

The word “dwelt” comes from a word used to describe a husband and wife living together. It refers to a relationship, not a mere presence. The individual in whom the Spirit dwells is not quenching, grieving, or resisting that Holy Spirit.

All such people, and ONLY such Personhood. The second (“Spirit of God”) reveals His Person and work are related to the purpose of God. The third (“Spirit of Christ”) confirms the indissoluble affiliation of the Spirit with the Son of God. The Holy Spirit, therefore, must never be thought of as independent from God’s “eternal purpose” or Christ’s redemptive work. Further, the Spirit personally dwells within believers, but is not devoted to their agenda.

Some who do not believe the Holy Spirit dwells within those who are in Christ say “the Spirit of Christ” is the attitude or character of Christ, and not the Spirit Himself. “The Spirit” is mentioned nineteen times in the eighth chapter of Romans. It is beyond all question that they have reference to the Holy Spirit Himself. He joins the Father bodies by HIS SPIRIT that dwelleth in you” (8:11).

- ❑ “. . . but if ye through THE SPIRIT do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live” (8:13).
- ❑ “For as many as are led by THE SPIRIT of God, they are the sons of God” (8:14).
- ❑ “. . . but ye have received THE SPIRIT of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father” (8:15).
- ❑ “THE SPIRIT itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God” (8:16).

- ❑ “Likewise THE SPIRIT also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but THE SPIRIT itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered” (8:26).
- ❑ “And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of THE SPIRIT, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God” (8:27).

Only those motivated and directed by the Holy Spirit are actually pleasing God. The unhindered, unquenched, and active presence of the Holy Spirit is essential to pleasing God. If He is not working in the individual, the flesh, by default, assumes the control of the individual.

It should require nothing more than the exposure of our minds to the text to confirm the Person of the Spirit is the subject. If men are unable to see that, it is because their hearts are hard and their minds are blinded.

The postulate of the text is that walking “according to the Spirit” (v 4), setting our minds on “the things of the Spirit” (v 5), and being “in the Spirit” (v 9), require the PRESENCE of the Spirit within. All of these activities are too aggressive and extensive for the “flesh,” or the “natural man.” Nature simply is not equal to heaven’s demands.

Again, this affirmation is significant. “But if anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, he does not belong to Him.” This will be developed at length in the remainder of this chapter. It is enough to say here that believers must not be casual in their acceptance of this affirmation.

people, are NOT in the flesh. Those in whom the Holy Spirit is not dwelling ARE in the flesh, and consequently unacceptable to God. Only those motivated and directed by the Holy Spirit are actually pleasing God. The unhindered, unquenched, and active presence of the Holy Spirit is essential to pleasing God. If He is not working in the individual, the flesh, by default, assumes the control of the individual.

HAVING NOT THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST

“Now if anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, he is not His.” In this verse, there are three separate references to the Holy Spirit: “Spirit,” “Spirit of God,” and “Spirit of Christ.” The first (“Spirit”) accentuates His Divine and the Son in salvation.

- ❑ “. . . who walk not after the flesh, but after THE SPIRIT” (8:1).
- ❑ “. . . THE SPIRIT of life in Christ Jesus” (8:2).
- ❑ “. . . who walk not after the flesh, but after THE SPIRIT” (8:4).
- ❑ “. . . they that are after THE SPIRIT the things of THE SPIRIT” (8:5).
- ❑ “But ye are not in the flesh, but in THE SPIRIT, if so be that THE SPIRIT of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not THE SPIRIT of Christ, he is none of His” (8:9).
- ❑ “. . . THE SPIRIT is life because of righteousness” (8:10).

THE BODY AND THE HOLY SPIRIT

Spirit is life because of righteousness.” To this point, our bodies have been identified as the seat of the “flesh,” or sinful nature. They are the visible evidence that our regeneration is not yet complete. Further, the body is something that must be subjected—made subordinate to the will of the Lord (1 Cor 9:27). It is essential, therefore, that we have a proper view of our bodies.

IF CHRIST IS IN YOU

The previous verse refers to the “Spirit of God” dwelling in us. Now we read of Christ Himself being in us. Essentially, both references refer to the same thing. Like God, Christ is in us “through the Spirit” (Eph 2:22). The Holy Spirit is called “the Spirit of Christ” because through His ministry we realize the indwelling Christ. Elsewhere it is said that God strengthens us “with might through His Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith”^{NKJV} (Eph 3:16-17). It is understood, therefore, that Christ “is in you” through the ministry of the Holy Spirit. The purpose of this indwelling is realized through Jesus manifesting, or revealing Himself to us (John 14:23).

The Holy Spirit does not assume Christ is in us. He presents this teaching in such a manner as to provoke personal examination. This perfectly corresponds with the exhortation found in Second Corinthians 13:5. “Examine yourselves to see whether you are in the faith; test yourselves. Do you not realize that Christ Jesus is in you—unless, of course, you fail the test?”^{NIV}

THE BODY IS DEAD

If Christ is, in fact, “in you,” what is the result? “THE BODY IS DEAD BECAUSE OF SIN.” This is not the “body of sin” mentioned earlier (6:6). That referred to the whole of the sinful nature. This refers to our fleshly bodies in which the “law of sin” resides. The affirmation: they are “dead.” They have been purchased, and do not belong to us (1 Cor 6:19). Because of this, they are called “the members of Christ” (1 Cor 6:15). But this is in prospect of the resurrection, the time when Christ will “change” our “vile bodies,” that they might be fashioned like unto His glorious body (Phil 3:20-21). Only then will our bodies be acceptable in glory.

The body is “dead because of sin.” Although our consciences have been purged (Heb 9:14), and our hearts and souls purified (Acts 15:9; 1 Pet 1:22), that is not the case with our bodies. The remnants of sin have not been removed from them, and they have not yet been purified. The Lord can, at His discretion, heal the body, but it remains a “vile body,” healed or not. They have been “washed with pure water” (Heb 10:22), but are not themselves pure.

The body is “dead” in at least two

The remnants of sin have not been removed from our bodies, and they have not yet been purified. The Lord can, at His discretion, heal the body, but it remains a “vile body,” healed or not. They have been “washed with pure water,” but are not themselves pure.

ways. First, it has no immediate association with God. Second, it has been assigned to death; i.e., we will eventually be separated from it, either in death or by transformation at the coming of the Lord. Until then, it is appropriately called “the body of this death” (7:24). It is a frail “earthen vessel” (2 Cor 4:7), and cannot enter into the Kingdom of God (1 Cor 15:50).

The point of this teaching is that the body, together with its appetites, cannot be the center of our lives. God is alive, and is the “God of the living.” Those who follow the dictates of the flesh give more glory to the body than is appropriate. For them, the visible transcends the invisible, and the unseen is forfeited in favor of the seen. On the other hand, the person who lives by the Spirit is described in these words. “Therefore we do not lose heart. Even though our outward man is perishing, yet the inward man is being renewed day by day. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we do not look at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things which are seen are temporary, but the things which are not seen are eternal” (2 Cor 4:16-18). That is a spiritual confession that “the body is dead because of sin.” It is unworthy of emphasis, and cannot be the source of glory.

THE SPIRIT IS LIFE

“... but the Spirit is life because of righteousness.” The source of our real life is not within ourselves, but in the Holy Spirit. Some translations do ascribe “spirit” to the human spirit. “yet the spirit is alive because of righteousness,”^{NASB} and “yet your spirit is alive because of righteousness,”^{NIV} “your spirits are alive because of righteousness.”^{RSV} However, even in this case, the life has been caused by the “Spirit of life,” which was affirmed in verse two.

Jesus said, “It is the Spirit who gives life; the flesh profits nothing” (John 6:63). That is the sense of our text. Whereas sin had rendered the body “dead,” the Holy Spirit had brought life to the human spirit. This transaction has been accomplished “because of righteousness.”

This is a most marvelous declaration. The imputation of righteousness is the very subject that is being expounded. It is that righteousness, imputed to us because of our faith, that brings life to us. That is what brings Divine recognition and sustenance to the individual. Without that righteousness, the human spirit remains “dead in trespasses and sins.”

This correlates with the rest of Scripture which consistently associates life with the Holy Spirit. “For he who sows to his flesh will of the flesh reap corruption, but he who sows to the Spirit will of the Spirit reap everlasting life” (Gal 6:8). “And after three days and an half the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them” (Rev 11:11). “Who also made us sufficient as ministers of the new covenant, not of the letter but of the Spirit; for the letter kills, but the Spirit gives life” (2 Cor 3:3).

The perspective of the text is this: Sin brought about our death in trespasses and sins, but the Holy Spirit defeated that death, bringing us life that is honored in heaven. Life triumphed over death in our spirits. That life was inaugurated when the righteousness of God was imputed, or credited, to us. It was at that point that death was overturned, and we were made accepted in the Beloved (Eph 1:6). The Holy Spirit administered that life.

MORTAL BODIES ACTIVATED FOR GOD

“¹¹ But if the Spirit of Him who raised Jesus from the dead dwells in you, He who raised Christ from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through His Spirit who dwells in you.” The Spirit will now show us how salvation addresses the matter of the body, which is “dead because of sin.” Although it cannot inherit the Kingdom of God, and is consigned to the grave, yet the Spirit will not allow us to ignore it. It must be brought into the matter of our salvation. The manner in which this is done is glorious.

IF THE SPIRIT DWELLS IN YOU

Here the Holy Spirit is identified once again with God: “the Spirit of Him who raised Jesus from the dead.” This confirms that the Holy Spirit, and not the human spirit, is the subject of verse ten. It also corroborates that the Holy Spirit, and not the attitude of Jesus, is the reference of verse nine.

Again, the reference is not merely to a temporary presence of the Holy Spirit, or some sort of epochal experience that is here proclaimed. We are speaking of God’s Spirit “dwelling,” or taking up residence, in the child of God. Because we are sons, “God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father” (Gal 4:6).

The life that He will minister is nothing less than the resurrection life of Jesus. That is why He is referred to as “the Spirit of Him who raised Jesus from the dead.” That is fortified by the continued exposition, “He who raised Christ from the dead will also give life. . .”

This is nothing less than “the power of His resurrection,” eagerly sought by insightful believers (Phil 3:10). It is also the very power that is “toward those who believe” (Eph 1:20-23).

GOD WILL GIVE LIFE TO YOUR MORTAL BODIES

These are the bodies that are “dead them (1 Cor 6:19-20). Even though the body is “vile” and a source of constant humiliation, yet it is “for the Lord,” to be used in His service (1 Cor 6:13).

By quickening our “mortal bodies,” the Holy Spirit brings them into spiritual life. They are to us what the Arabians were to Solomon. Even though they were because of sin.” Here, death does not refer to the grave, and this “life” does not refer to the resurrection of the dead, or the graves yielding up their dead. While it is certainly true that “this mortal must put on immortality” (1 Cor 15:54), that is not the subject of this passage. Our text speaks of the sanctifying work of the Holy Spirit, wherein the remnants of our old nature are subdued, and our members are yielded as servants unto righteousness.

By quickening our “mortal bodies,” the Holy Spirit brings them into spiritual life. They are to us what the Arabians were to Solomon. Even though they were technically his enemies, and did not reside in the promised land, yet they brought tribute to him because of his superiority.

Herein is a most marvelous work! Although our bodies are the weakest part of our constitution, and are “dead because of sin,” yet they can be employed in service to God. Through the Spirit, we can glorify God in our bodies, which do not belong to us, but to the Lord who bought technically his enemies, and did not reside in the promised land, yet they brought tribute to him because of his superiority. It is written, “And all the kings of Arabia and governors of the country brought gold and silver to Solomon” (2 Chron 9:14).

The Spirit gives life to our bodies in the sense of making them pay tribute to God. Our tongues are employed for God ((Psa 66:17). Our hands are lifted up to the Lord in holiness (1 Tim 2:8). Rather than being swift to shed blood (Rom 3:15), our feet now bring the glad tidings of the Gospel of peace (Rom 10:15). Now, by the grace of God, Christ can be “magnified in my body, whether by life or by death” (Phil 1:20). That circumstance is a powerful witness to the power of God.

CONCLUSION

You see what a large text we have covered. The Holy Spirit has pointed to the most difficult and taxing part of spiritual life—inner warfare—and has affirmed it proves we are not condemned. We are not condemned because we have lost our appetite for sin, and hate its intrusions into our minds. We are not condemned because our sins have been

Even though the believer struggles with evil within, there is no condemnation in Christ Jesus.--by Given O. Blakely remitted and we are now awaiting deliverance from “the body of this death.” We are not condemned because we recognize our natural wretchedness, and refuse to acknowledge the cries of our sinful flesh. Grace has taught us to reject the appeals of the sinful nature, and to eagerly pursue holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord.

All of these marvelous benefits have flowed from the wonderful works of God. In the last analysis, He did what “the Law could not do.” He not only raised Jesus, He raised us also. He has provided the help essential to walk in the Spirit and not in the flesh. Although we acknowledge our imperfection, it is not credited to us, for we have been made accepted in Christ Jesus. These are things that could not be accomplished by Law. Only God’s grace, his only begotten Son, and His blessed Holy Spirit could accomplish them. Praise God for His marvelous works!

Lesson Number 25

THE HOLY SPIRIT and SONSHIP

8:12 Therefore, brethren, we are debtors; not to the flesh, to live according to the flesh. ¹³ For if you live according to the flesh you will die; but if by the Spirit you put to death the deeds of the body, you will live. ¹⁴ For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God. ¹⁵ For you did not receive the spirit of bondage again to fear, but you received the Spirit of adoption by whom we cry out, "Abba, Father." ¹⁶ The Spirit Himself bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God, ¹⁷ and if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, if indeed we suffer with Him, that we may also be glorified together.— Romans 8:12-17 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

In some Christian circles, the subject of the Holy Spirit has been hotly debated. These contentions involve theological positions of extreme opposition. On one side of the theological pendulum, some choose to make the Holy Spirit and His work their emphasis. On the other side, some affirm the Spirit is strictly confined to the text of Scripture, never working directly with the believer. Additionally, all sorts of claims are being made concerning the work of the Holy Spirit upon the individual. Key expressions like "slain in the Spirit," "the baptism of the Holy Ghost," and "the Spirit works only through the Word," though never used a single time in Scripture, are treated as though they came from God, and are used to divide the body of Christ. It appears as though many believers are very rarely subjected to the Apostolic doctrine of the Holy Spirit.

It is tragic that the Christian community has chosen to debate the Person and work of the Holy Spirit, rather than availing themselves of His indispensable ministry.

The text before us affirms the role of the Spirit in readying us to dwell in the house of the Lord forever. He effectively leads us in this preparation, which consists of subduing the flesh and culturing our spirit. The need for His ministry was introduced in the seventh chapter and the first part of the eighth chapter. We need help!

AN AREA WHERE WE ARE POWERLESS

In summary, we are in a situation over which we have no power. The flesh inserts itself into our thoughts, and we are unable to stop it from doing so. We are forced to do battle with a nature we desire was not even there. How the words ring, so to speak, in my ears: "For what I will to do, that I do not practice; but what I hate, that I do . . . For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) nothing good dwells; for to will is present with me, but how to perform what is good I do not find . . . For the good that I will to do, I do not do; but the evil I will not to do, that I practice . . . I find then a law, that evil is present with me, the one who wills to do good . . . But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members" (7:15,18,19,21,23).

Where is the believer who cannot identify with these words? What soul is there who is joined to the Lord who has not felt the tug of the flesh, and engaged in a hearty effort to neutralize its power? And where is the individual who can boast of final victory in these areas?

While we do not have to give in to that nature, we do have to confront it. Divine power is required in this effort. That is where the blessed ministry of the Holy Spirit comes in.

THE LIABILITY OF "THE FLESH"

Let the children of God take the matter of "the flesh" too lightly, the Spirit expounds on its nature, and how it affects those following its dictates. Already we have been reminded "no good thing" can be found in our flesh (7:18). Ponder the strength of the Spirit's words.

"For those who live according to the flesh set their minds on the things of the flesh . . . For to be carnally minded is death . . . the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, nor indeed can be . . . those who are in the flesh cannot please God" (8:5,6,7,8). Those words are like a Divine trumpet blast, piercing into the heart of man, dividing the spirit from the soul, and unveiling the thoughts and intents of the heart (Heb 4:12). No person can receive the Spirit's diagnosis of the flesh and remain indifferent to the solemn obligation of subduing it.

The absence of condemnation is only confirmed in those who "walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit" (8:1,4). The flesh in its totality has been rejected by God, and nothing that emits from it is accepted by Him. Those are just the facts in the case, and they are sobering ones.

HOW CAN WE BE VICTORIOUS?

How can we be victorious in our battle with the flesh? How can we be successful in walking in the Spirit? Is all of this to be accomplished by mere human discipline and religious scholarship? Are we left to navigate the treacherous sea of life alone?

Although I have frequently referred to Colossians 2:20-23, it is appropriate to bring it to bear upon our present subject. In that text, the Spirit reveals the impotence of human power, wisdom and discipline in all of its facets. Nature, regardless of how it is disciplined and cultured, cannot produce or maintain spiritual life. Thus God's people are chided for relying on lesser things to achieve spiritual superiority. Here is how the Colossian text reads in the Amplified New Testament.

"If then you have died with Christ to material ways of looking at things and have escaped from the world's crude and elemental notions and teachings of externalism, why do you live as if you still belong to the world? - Why do you submit to rules and regulations? [such as], Do not handle [this], Do not taste [that], Do not even touch [them], referring to things all of which perish with being used. To do this is to follow human precepts and doctrines. [Isa 29:13.] Such [practices] have indeed the outward appearance [that popularly passes] for wisdom, in promoting self-imposed rigor of devotion and delight in self-humiliation and severity of discipline of the body, but they are of no value in checking the indulgence of the flesh—the lower nature. [Instead, they do not honor God] but serve only to indulge the flesh." (Colossians 2:19-23, Amplified Bible)

Faced with a recalcitrant nature and no inherent ability to subdue it, we stand in need of assistance—Divine assistance. The realization of that aid is called "walking in the Spirit" and "minding the things of the Spirit" (8:4-5). Let it be clear, there is no such thing as an individual who can conquer the flesh, or sinful nature, in the energy of nature. No amount of discipline, however rigid, can make us adequate for the assignment of subduing the flesh. Until this is learned, we are shut up to defeat and a defiled conscience. There simply is no such thing as a salvation that does not require the consistent involvement of Deity.

NO LONGER DEBTORS TO THE FLESH

^{8:12} Therefore, brethren, we are debtors; not to the flesh, to live according to the flesh. "Other versions read, "So then, brethren, we are under obligation, not to the flesh, to live according to the flesh,"^{NASB} "Therefore, brothers, we have an obligation--but it is not to the sinful nature, to live according to it,"^{NIV} "So, dear brothers and sisters, you have no obligation whatsoever to do what your sinful nature urges you to do,"^{NLT} "So then, my brothers, we have no obligation to human nature to be dominated by it."^{NJB}

You will notice the later and more general translations read "we have no obligation," while the more literal ones read "we are under obligation, but not to . . ." There is a reason for stating we DO have an obligation, but it is NOT to the flesh. In Christ, we have not come into an area where there are no obligations. We have not been set free simply to roam about in a moral vacuum. The obligation that is placed upon us is a strong one. It has two sides. First, we have an obligation NOT to follow the dictates of the flesh. Second, we have an obligation to follow the direction of the Holy spirit. We will be held strictly accountable for fulfilling these obligations.

Without being unduly critical, this line of thinking is not prominent in the modern church. Viewing the average Christian, one might be led to conclude no moral obligations exist at all. It will contribute greatly to our faith to “hear what the Spirit is saying to the churches.”

“WE”

There are teachings addressed exclusively to those who are in Christ Jesus. They have no application to anyone else. Examples of such texts are at the very heart of Apostolic doctrine (Rom 12:6-7; 13:12-13; 14:13,19; 1 Cor 5:8; 10:8-9; 2 Cor 7:1; Gal 5:25-26; Gal 6:9-10; Phil 3;15-16; 1 Thess 5:6-9). Many believers rarely have a word from God addressed specifically to them. Tragically, not a few churches are devoted, they profess, to the salvation of the lost, with hardly a word being ministered to the saints. But you foundations upon which godly living is based. It is imperative that these be known by the people of God.

“DEBTORS”

While we are “not under Law,” we are nevertheless “debtors.” A “debtor” is one held by an obligation, or bound by some duty. It speaks of someone who owes something, and who is obliged to fulfill a duty.^{STRONGS} This is a strong word.

Grace does not relieve us of responsibility and indebtedness. We have been freed, but not from obligation! The grace of God does not relieve us of obligation or duty. Being “justified freely” (3:24) has liberated us from guilt, condemnation, and enslavement to sin. It become servants to God” (6:18,19,22).

It appears to me that there is a general ignorance of this requirement among professing believers. The modern church is characterized by a level of casualness and indifference that betray a lack of commitment to the Living God. There is too much self, too much human will, and too much deference to the flesh to deny this condition.

Make no mistake about this, “WE ARE DEBTORS!” Our text will affirm what we are NOT debtors to, but it will not affirm indebtedness has been removed. Jesus paid the debt created by our sins and transgressions. We must pay the debt created by our redemption and justification.

Grace does not relieve us of responsibility and indebtedness. We have been freed, but not from obligation! The grace of God does not relieve us of obligation or duty.

LIVING ACCORDING TO THE FLESH

No believer follows the dictates of the flesh because of obligation: “we are under obligation, not to the flesh, to live according to the flesh.”^{NASB} To live “according to the flesh” is to obey its lusts, or desires. It is to cave in to the conflict described in chapter seven. Living according to the flesh is conducting our lives as though this world was the primary one, and the satisfaction of our earthly natures was preeminent.

will find no such trend among the Apostles. All of their Epistles, without exception, were written to the saints. They energetically, and in the power of the Spirit, spoke to the people of God.

The word before us is such a teaching. It is spoken to the saved; those who have been born again, and are in covenant with God through the Lord Jesus Christ. They are critical words because they unveil Divinely appointed has freed us from death and delivered us from the wrath to come. But it has not freed us from debt. There is something that we owe, a duty we must fulfill. In a very emphatic way, we are not our own, we have been “bought with a price” (1 Cor 6:19). This case has been made repeatedly in the book of Romans. “Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness . . . yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness . . . But now being made free from sin, and

A person in Christ who reverts to living according to the flesh has chosen to do so. Because there is no obligation in Christ to live in that manner, the person doing so has succumbed to the delusion of the wicked one and the cries of his own flesh. It is imperative that this acknowledged. The teaching that follows is unusually strong, confirming the blessedness of having no obligation to “the flesh.”

“^{13a} For if you live according to the flesh you will die . . .” The words are undeniable strong in every translation. Some examples follow. “For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die,”^{KJV} “if you live according to the sinful nature, you will die,”^{NIV} “if ye live according to flesh, ye are about to die,”^{DARBYS} “if you go in the way of the flesh, death will come on you,”^{BBE} “if you keep on following it, you will perish,”^{NLT} “If you do live in that way, you are doomed to die.”^{NJB} “If you live according to [the dictates of] the flesh you will surely die.”^{AMPLIFIED}

REMINISCENT OF EDEN

The words are reminiscent of the first Divine prohibition: “But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die” (Gen 2:17). The death of which Adam was warned was as real as the life he was experiencing. Because God had made Adam and put him into the Garden was no reason to imagine he would not die if he did what was forbidden. His life had come from God’s own breath (Gen 2:7), but it would leave Adam if he ate of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.

All of the strength of that first prohibition is in our text. It is to be approached with all of the sobriety required of Adam. Men may formulate theologies that attempt to neutralize this text, robbing it of its powers, but they will have no effect upon the Word of God. Just as surely as it was not possible for God to lie in Genesis 2:7, it is not possible for Him to lie in Romans 8:13. The death is real, not metaphorical.

LIVING ACCORDING TO THE FLESH Not to the Unregenerate

This is NOT a word to the unregenerate. To say this to someone outside of Christ would be superfluous. They are already dead in trespasses and sins (Eph 2:1-3), are condemned already (John 3:18), and the wrath of God is upon them (John 3:36).

To Those Who Are Justified

The “you” of our text are those who are in Christ Jesus. It is the same ones told they had “peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.” It refers to those who struggle with the conflict delineated in the seventh chapter (7:15-25). It addresses those who are emphatically told “There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus” (8:1).

If there is any doubt about this, the Spirit opens this teaching by saying, “Therefore, brethren, we . . . ” (v 12). There is, then, no question about who is being addressed.

According to the Flesh

To live “according to the flesh” is to live in agreement with, and subordination to, “the law of sin” that is in our “members” (7:23,25; 8:2). It is to follow the course of nature, without regard to the life of Christ and the direction of the Holy Spirit.

This warning is sounded because “the flesh” is still with us. As long as we are “in the body,” we must contend with our fallen natures. While we have no obligation to “the flesh,” and are indwelt by One who is “greater than he that is in the world” (1 John 4:4), we must take care not to assume our safety. Our faith is the only victory we possess (1 John 5:4-5)!

In my judgment, this warning (“if you live after the flesh you shall die”) is one of the least acknowledged truths among professed believers. Perhaps many who wear the name of Jesus have not even heard these words. It is certainly not fashionable to declare them.

If It Happened Suddenly

If all across our land, professing believers were to suddenly take hold of this word with both hands, there would be such a revolution within the church the gates of hell would be shaken! Entire church programs would be changed. Multitudes of staff members would be relieved of their duties. The thrust of Christian education would change.

The purported scholars would lose their prominence. Motivators and psychologists would no longer have a place among believers. Religious structures like multi-purpose centers and entertainment organizations would be moved to the back of the church’s agenda, if, indeed, a place was found for them at all. Men would not be venerated because of their education, degrees, or lofty titles.

The landscape of the Christian music world would be so altered one would scarcely be able to recognize it. Those who have been viewed as leaders in the local congregation, like elders, deacons, and various ministers, would be thrust from their offices. Christian literature, religious bookstores, and purveyors of religious paraphernalia would be drastically changed, or be put out of business. The trend of brief meetings, short sermons, and shallow approaches to Scripture would come to a grinding halt.

Why do I say such things? Because all of these are concessions to the flesh. They are the result of living according to the flesh, pacifying its desires, and conceding to its demands.

Living With Nature Being Central

Living according to the flesh is living with this world viewed as being primary. Such an approach to life perceives the needs and preferences of the body and life in this world as the most important. Little, if any, regard is given to the end of this world, the world to come, or standing before the Lord.

Living “after the flesh” includes, but is not limited to, immorality. Sins like adultery, fornication, sodomy, murder. . . etc., are at the bottom of the moral ladder. A person, however, can live “according to the flesh” without committing such reprehensible sins. Such a life ignores the appointed occupation of all men, which is to seek the Lord (Acts 17:26-27). It does not lay up treasures in heaven, where moth and rust do not corrupt (Matt 6:19-20). The person living “in the flesh” does not contemplate the return of Christ (Tit 2:13), the judgment day (Heb 9:27), or the subtlety of the devil (Eph 6:10). The Word of God is not perceived as essential to life (Matt 4:4), and plans are made as though this world, and life in it, had no appointed end.

Living “after the flesh” disrupts spiritual life. It is like a wedge forced between God and man, the Redeemer and the redeemed. Those who revert to the flesh no longer view Christ Jesus as essential, as when they first turned to God. Such people are their happiest when their earthly needs and desires are met, and most disappointed when they are not.

YOU WILL DIE

And what will be the result of living “according to the flesh?” Right here, at this precise point, the faith of all professed believers is put to the test. God will not debate with us on this subject, nor, indeed, will He allow for disagreement among ourselves about it. The sentence is unequivocal. Not even the linguists, with all of their etymological expertise, have been able to deny the affirmation or neutralize its power. “YOU WILL DIE!”

Throughout history, and in this present day, there are countless voices who deny this affirmation. Some say it is impossible for a person in Christ to ever walk after the flesh—even though this word is addressed to such. Others say if a believer reverts to the flesh, God will awaken him and bring him back—even though our text admits to no such nonsense. Those who espouse the “once saved always saved” absurdity acknowledge believers can again walk after the flesh, but emphatically deny that it will have any effect upon their eternal destiny.

Still others who deny all of the above doctrines live as though they did believe them. They starve their souls, give in to the flesh, and allow their human nature to dictate the whole of their lives. Just as surely as Satan said to Eve, “Thou shalt NOT surely die,” so the Tempter has deceived these poor souls into believing they will not die. However, he lied to Eve, and he has also lied to them.

The moment our ears are tuned to the flesh, death begins its work in us. Our hearts begin to be insensitive to God. Our eyes no longer see His glory. Our hearts are no longer nourished by His word. Like “the sorrow of this world,” which is a facet of walking in the flesh, a life lived in deference to the lower nature “worketh (or produces NKJV) death” (2 Cor 7:10).

Make no mistake about this. If we do not reject the demands of the flesh, it will dominate us! No person, regardless of the level of discipline attained, can prevent this from happening. The wrath of God is emphatically pronounced against all who do not live for Him. “You will die!” In this saying, the Spirit has confirmed what was stated in verse six: “to be carnally minded IS DEATH.” It does not lead to death, it IS death!

Those who walk after the flesh have no place before God, and therefore no place among His people. While institutionalism allows for their exaltation, God does not. It is in the church’s best interest to refuse to promote those consigned to death to places of leadership—and those living after the flesh ARE consigned to death. They must either be removed from that category, or there is no hope of them being forever with the Lord.

WHY SUCH A SOLEMN SENTENCE

It is obvious that the pronouncement is strong. Why is this so? Why is the Lord so intolerant of those who wear His name, yet follow the dictates of nature? There is a reason – a sound reason!

Believers have been “made free from the law of sin and death” (8:2). They have been “delivered from the law” (7:4). They have been united with Christ in His death, burial, and resurrection (6:1-4).

Those who walk after the flesh have no place before God, and therefore no place among His people. While institutionalism allows for their exaltation, God does not. It is in the church’s best interest to refuse to promote those consigned to death to places of leadership—and those living after the flesh ARE consigned to death.

WHAT IS INVOLVED IN DEATH?

Ultimately, this death is eternal separation from God. It is the lake of fire, hell, and “everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of His power” (2 Thess 1:9). This death, however, has an impact upon men while they remain in this world. The prayers of such people are not heard. The Lord Jesus will not teach them. The grace of God will not sustain them. The Holy Spirit will not lead them. Their religion is all in vain, because they have the spot of the world upon them (James 1:26-27). They are literally on their own, with no helper from heaven, and at the mercy of the devil.

Their “old man” was crucified when their new life began (6:6). They owe nothing to the flesh, and are under no obligation to obey its lusts, or desires (8:12).

Those who “live according to the flesh” have chosen to ignore these realities. They have quenched and grieved the Spirit, resisting both His warnings and direction. They have shut their ears to the voice of the Lord, and listened to the devil and their condemned earthly nature. They did not do this inadvertently, but deliberately and with focused attention. Every advantage was given to them, but they chose to crucify the Son of God afresh, rather than hear Him who is speaking from heaven.

If all of this seems too strong, ponder again the gravity of our text. There is not the slightest chance that those living “according to the flesh” will NOT die!

By listening and yielding to the “old man,” they have put themselves on the broad road that leads to destruction. The only hope is to NOT live according to the flesh!

The person who walks after the flesh is “the enemy of God” (James 4:4). He is hostile toward the Lord, and fights against His Law. God is not for that person, but against him. Such have degenerated to the state of an enemy, from which they were once delivered. When God says “YOU will die!”, there is no power or wisdom on earth that can negate the sentence! Men may object, but God will be “justified” in this saying (3:4).

WHEN SPIRITUAL LIFE IS CERTAIN

“^{13b} . . . but IF by the Spirit you put to death the deeds of the body, you will live.” Now we come to grips with the appointed means by which spiritual life is maintained—and it MUST be maintained! In Christ, we are not put into an automatic holding pattern. Our faithfulness is not an appointment, and is nowhere presented as though it was.

“IF”

When the word “IF” is used, human choice is involved, and faith is required. Neither the choice nor the faith are taken for granted. This key word–“IF”–is repeatedly used in Romans.

□ “But for us also, to whom it [righteousness] shall be imputed, IF we believe on him that raised up Jesus may be also glorified together.” (8:17)

 □ “But IF we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.” (8:25)
 □ “IF God be for us, who can be against us?” (8:31)
 □ “That IF thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.” (10:9)
 □ “For IF God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.” (11:21)

 □ “For IF we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection.” (6:5)
 □ “Now IF we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him.” (6:8)

 □ “Now IF I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.” (7:20)
 □ “But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, IF so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you.” (8:9b)
 □ “Now IF any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.” (8:9b)

 □ “For IF ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.” (8:13)
 □ “And IF children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we

□ “Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, IF thou continue in his goodness: otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.” (11:22)
 □ “And they also, IF they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graft them in again.” (11:23)

The word “IF” stands as a sort of line of demarcation. The result posed is conditioned upon the circumstance required by “if.” It simply is NOT possible to receive the righteousness of God if we do not believe on Him (4:24). If we have not been planted together in the likeness of Christ’s death, we cannot be in the likeness of His resurrection (6:5). If the Spirit of God is not in us, we are still in the flesh (8:9a). If we choose to live in the flesh, we will die!

The word “IF,” therefore, puts the ball into our court. At this point, the lot is cast into our lap (Prov 16:33). If we react to our responsibility properly, as we will see, the Lord will accomplish the work in us. If we do not, we are foolish to imagine the desired work will be completed.

BY THE SPIRIT

“... but if ye through the Spirit,”^{KJV}
 “But if through the power of the Holy Spirit.”^{NLT} Those in Christ Jesus have a challenging assignment set before them. However, they also have access to a power sufficient for the task. The Holy Spirit is mentioned nineteen times in this eighth chapter. All of them point out His pivotal role in the matter of salvation.

- Walking after the Spirit (8:1).
- The Spirit of life has freed us (8:2).
- Walking after the Spirit (8:4).
- Those who live according to the Spirit (8:5a).
- The things of the Spirit (8:5b).
- Not in the flesh, but in the Spirit (8:9a).
- The Spirit dwelling in us (8:9b).
- Those who do not have the Spirit of Christ do not belong to Him (8:9c).
- The Spirit is life (8:10).
- The Spirit dwells in us (8:11a).
- God enlivens our mortal bodies by the indwelling Spirit (8:11b).
- Through the Spirit, we put to death the deeds of the body (8:13).
- Those led by the Spirit of God are God’s sons (8:14).
- We have received the Spirit of adoption (8:15).
- The Spirit bears witness with our spirit (8:16).
- We have the firstfruits of the Spirit (8:23).
- The Spirit helps our weaknesses (8:26a).
- The Spirit makes intercession for us (8:26b).
- God knows the mind of the Spirit, who intercedes for us according to God’s will (8:27).

In all of these references, the Spirit is presented as working within and together with the saints of God. He is the empowering One from heaven, given to assist us in making it safely from earth to glory. The text clearly implies the necessity of the Spirit’s working within the believer.

The responsibility set before us cannot be accomplished independently of the Holy Spirit. No law, however clearly stated and rigid, can accomplish this appointed work. Further, this is not something that is optional.

The involvement of the Holy Spirit in our salvation is extensive.

- The love of God is shed abroad in our - hearts “by the Holy Spirit” (Rom 5:5).

- The offering up of the Gentiles is made acceptable “by the Holy Spirit” (Rom 15:16).
- We are enabled to keep what is committed to us “by the Holy Spirit” (2 Tim 1:14).
- Holy men of God wrote the Scripture as they were moved “by the Holy Spirit” (2 Pet 1:21).
- Righteousness, peace, and joy are “in the Holy Spirit” (Rom 14:17).
- We are washed, sanctified, and justified “by the Spirit of our God” (1 Cor 6:11).
- Various gifts are dispensed to the church “by the Spirit” (1 Cor 12:8).
- Believers are being changed from one stage of glory to another “by the Spirit of the Lord” (2 Cor 3:18).
- The message and implications of salvation have been revealed to God’s holy Apostles and prophets “by the Spirit” (Eph 3:5).
- The Word of the Gospel is effective in those who believe because of the working of “the Holy Spirit” (1 Thess 1:5).

will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me” (Mark 8:34). Again He said, “And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched” (Mark 9:43-44). Notice the aggressive nature of our Lord’s words.

Apostolic doctrine is equally strong on this matter. “Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin” (Rom 6:6). “And they that are Christ’s have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts” (Gal 5:24). “Mortify [put to death] therefore your members which are upon the earth . . .” (Col 3:5).

This is “the flesh” unveiled in Romans 7:15-25. It is the residue of the Adamic nature that remains with us until we are “absent from the body” (2 Cor 5:8). Absolutely no tolerance is to be given to admonishes us, “make no provision for the flesh, to fulfill its lusts” ^{NKJV} (Rom 13:14). This is abstaining from “fleshly lusts that war against the soul” (1 Pet 2:11). It is staying away from what feeds those lusts, and refusing to enter environments where they are encouraged and fed. When they assert themselves, intruding into our thoughts, mortifying them is saying “NO” to them, refusing to allow them to be satisfied (Tit 2:11-12).

And, how is such an aggressive stance to be accomplished? How can we who were once ruled by the flesh put it to death? Is it through some rule of discipline—some sanctified routine? Indeed not! This is done through the Holy Spirit—through His enablement. If we refuse to quench, grieve, or resist Him, He will lead us in the mortification of the flesh. However, He will not do so without our consent. People like Ananias, Saphirra, Demas, and the Corinthian fornicator will bear witness to the truth of that!

Proclaim the Ministry of the Spirit

How can anyone hope to mortify the deeds of the body if they remain fundamentally ignorant of the Holy Spirit? How can those who rarely, if ever, hear of His indispensable ministry gain the triumph over the flesh?

And what of those who only relate the work of the Spirit with mystical and ecstatic experience? Or, those who only relate the working of the Spirit with spiritual gifts—for them, mere external shows purported to be of the Spirit? To such people, what value is putting to death the deeds of the body? Perhaps that is why frequent outbreaks of immortality occur among those with distorted views of the ministry of the Holy Spirit.

To put to death the deeds of the body is similar to suffocating them. It is to deprive them of what they need to live. It is to not allow them to erupt in words and deeds. Thus the Spirit admonishes us, “make no provision for the flesh, to fulfill its lusts” ^{NKJV} (Rom 13:14). This is abstaining from “fleshly lusts that war against the soul” (1 Pet 2:11)

- We can build ourselves up in the most holy faith by praying “in the Holy Spirit” (Jude 20).

It should not surprise us, therefore, that the requirements of spiritual life depend upon the working of the Holy Spirit. The work set before us is not sensational, or appealing to the flesh. It is a necessary work, not an optional one.

PUTTING THE DEEDS OF THE BODY TO DEATH

When addressing the subject of “the flesh,” the Spirit always speaks with a tone of violence. Jesus said, “Whosoever

“the flesh.” It is to be put to death!

Those sophists who argue that the old nature has been destroyed, and thus causes us no more difficulty are fools. You cannot put to death, or mortify, something that is not alive, or with which you do not contend. Further, there is no need to mortify the deeds of the body if they pose no threat, or there is no liability in their influence.

To put to death the deeds of the body is similar to suffocating them. It is to deprive them of what they need to live. It is to not allow them to erupt in words and deeds. Thus the Spirit

“The Deeds of the Body”

Precisely what are “the deeds of the body?” We have already noted that the sinful nature itself, or “the flesh,” cannot be eliminated while we remain in the body. The “law of sin,” resident in our “members,” cannot be simply removed from existence. Neither, indeed, can the desires of the flesh, though hated, be utterly eliminated from human experience—even though a person is born again. No matter how strong the believer is, he will have to contend with wayward and degenerate thoughts. That is the whole point of Romans 7:15-25.

This eighth chapter is showing us that the presence of the sinful nature, as well as the desires that erupt from it, are not of themselves a source of condemnation. When, however, those desires find expression, whether in prolonged and willful thought, or overt action, sin has resulted. This is the point developed by the Spirit in the first chapter of James. “But each one is tempted when, by his own evil desire, he is dragged away and enticed. Then, after desire has conceived, it gives birth to sin; and sin, when it is full-grown, gives birth to death”(1:14-15).

The “deeds of the body” are the result of being “dragged away” from devotion to the Lord. They are when the lusts have been nurtured and allowed to express themselves in intentional actions. This is why Ananias and Saphirra were judged so harshly. They did not “put to death the deeds of the body,” refusing to give expression to the “law of sin.” Rather than the “law of sin” simply being within them, they allowed it to produce a “deed,” and thus were judged. The Holy Spirit could have assisted them in mortifying that “deed,” but they chose to quench His holy work, and welcome the deviate thought.

Mortifying “the deeds of the body” is putting to death the expression of sin. It is refusing to allow our bodies to become the vehicle of transgression. Every word or deed is produced by either the “old man” or the “new man.” Either we have been moved to action by the “law of the Spirit of life,” or the “law of sin.” No deed, regardless of its seeming insignificance, is neutral. Blessed is the person who sees this, and develops a keen sensitivity to the circumstance.

When “the deeds of the body,” or the outward expressions of inward unwanted lusts, are not mortified, or put to death, sin has been committed. In keeping with the provisions of the New Covenant, those “deeds” are to be “confessed” and forgiveness appropriated (1 John 1:7). This is not mentioned in our text because of its focus. In it, the Spirit is dealing with us on a higher level. HE is showing us the secret to subduing the sinful nature, convincing us of the marvelous provisions of this great salvation.

THE HOLY SPIRIT WILL EMPOWER US TO DENY UNGODLINESS AND WORLDLY LUSTS.

The grace of God will teach us to do this, and the Spirit will assist us in the doing of it. This is one of His primary functions.

A PROGRESSIVE WORK

The mortifying of the deeds of the body is nothing less than sanctification—learning how to possess our vessels “in sanctification and honor” (1 Thess 4:4). It is a progressive work in which we are to become more proficient. The NASB emphasizes this perspective: “but if by the Spirit you are putting to death the deeds of the body . . .” Several things become apparent when we consider this verse.

- ❑ We are never rid of “the deeds of the body” while we remain in this world.
- ❑ Too, these “deeds,” or expressions, are so powerful they can only be put to death with the assistance of the Holy Spirit.
- ❑ The word “IF” confirms that a choice is involved in this matter.
- ❑ The involvement of the Holy Spirit in this work assumes He is not being quenched or grieved.

As we will see, it is imperative that this work be done. It is not an instant accomplishment, nor is it one that is imputed to us.

YOU WILL LIVE

Spiritual life is not to be taken for granted. It is not maintained independently of our involvement. The “living” of reference is conscious and effective participation with the living God, the Source of true life. It is having the blessing of God upon you, being heard by Him, and acknowledged as His own. The prophets used this same kind of language, even though Israel never realized its fulfillment under the Old Covenant. “Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live” (Ezek 37:5). “And shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live” (Ezek 37:14). “For thus saith the LORD unto the house of Israel, Seek ye me, and ye shall live . . . Seek the LORD, and ye shall live” (Amos 5:4,6).

Mortifying “the deeds of the body” is putting to death the expression of sin. It is refusing to allow our bodies to become the vehicle of transgression. Every word or deed is produced by either the “old man” or the “new man.” Either we have been moved to action by the “law of the Spirit of life,” or the “law of sin.”

The “life” of reference is not to be divorced from eternal life. While it is not our purpose to judge who possesses eternal life, it is our responsibility to show its relationship to the ongoing work of the Holy Spirit. No person is “alive to God” who consistently yields to the flesh. Further, “life” is never promised to those who continue to live “according to the flesh,” yielding their members as instruments of sin.

This affirmation is to be taken seriously! “But if by the Spirit you are putting to death the deeds of the body, you will live.”^{NASB} The “newness of life” into which we were raised in baptism is maintained through the power of the Holy Spirit (6:4). We are to reckon ourselves to be “alive unto God through Christ Jesus our Lord,” humbling yielding to the sanctifying influence of the Holy Spirit (6:11). While we are, indeed, “alive from the dead,” that life must be maintained through the Spirit (6:13).

Too frequently, spiritual life is considered without due regard for the subduing of the sinful nature. Those who insist on being sloppy about their relationship to God, whether young or old, will not be able to sustain fellowship with God and Christ (1 John 1:3). Where a commitment to putting to death the deeds of the body is not found, life toward God cannot and will not be sustained. It is only a vain imagination to think God can be served and man advantaged by a life that is not devoted to war against sin. Sin is always the evidence of death. It is always the result of not putting to death the deeds of the body. By the same token, where the deeds of the body are being put to death, and refused expression, there is undeniable evidence of the life ministered by the Holy Spirit. Those making progress in this area are to be encouraged by the precious promises of God.

“AS MANY,” AND ONLY “AS MANY”

“¹⁴ For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God.” It should be apparent to you that we are speaking of weighty matters. By “weighty,” I mean things pertaining to life and godliness, acceptance by God, and everlasting life. Many approach the book of Romans as though it were too profound for most believers. It is not uncommon for purported schools of theology to reserve courses in this book for more advanced students. All of this is an absurdity borne out of the flesh, and not the Spirit. In Christ, critical matters are not for the more learned, but for all of the sons of God. They deal with common needs and provisions, without which no person can make it safely to the heavenly harbor.

Light and frivolous views of Scripture are enemies to the soul. They rob the individual of Divine provisions, pamper the flesh, and give the advantage to the “law of sin.” It is altogether too fashionable for self-appointed preachers and teachers to walk upon Scripture like a spider walks on water, always dealing with the superfluous and relatively inconsequential. Such men treat life in this world as though it was the most important life. By so doing, they give the devil an advantage, who is the “god of this world,” as well as its “prince” (2 Cor 4:4; John 14:30). If any person imagines this to be too strong, the due consideration of this verse will throw that imagination down to the ground, where it belongs.

“AS MANY”

Here the Spirit makes a critical distinction among men—even those who profess to be in Christ Jesus. He will make no allowance for a lifeless theological position, identity with a religious institution, or self-accessed worth. The blessing pronounced will ONLY apply to the ones mentioned—“as many.”

Further, it will include everyone in the category mentioned—“as many.” No one identified by the description is excluded, and no one not so identified is included. This will be a single test that has been determined by God, ratified by the Son, and validated by the Spirit.

LED BY THE SPIRIT

Some contemporary versions read “guided by the Spirit.”^{BBE,NJB} Again, the involvement of the individual is assumed.

Again, the involvement of the individual is assumed. The Holy Spirit does not coerce people, but leads them. They are not forced into certain paths of life, but guided in them. Leading assumes effectiveness on the part of the Spirit, and willingness on the part of the ones being led. If either of these is not true, the leading cannot occur.

The Holy Spirit does not coerce people, but leads them. They are not forced into certain paths of life, but guided in them. Leading assumes effectiveness on the part of the Spirit, and willingness on the part of the ones being led. If either of these is not true, the leading cannot occur.

The word “led,” as you might expect, is not a casual one. It indicates an aggressive, though not coercive, stance. The idea is that the Spirit is leading us where HE is going, which is the primary meaning of the word: “to lead, or take with one.” The Holy Spirit never leads someone in a path He Himself is not walking! He never steps out of the will of God to guide individuals. While it should not be necessary to say this, the current religious climate demands that I do so. Those who live out of harmony with the revealed will of God are not being led by the Holy Spirit. Any and every action that is in conflict with the purpose of God has been wrought independently of the Spirit’s influence.

To be “led by the Spirit” is to be brought to a Divinely appointed destination. It is to be conducted in the way of life through the personal guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Let there be no ambiguity about the kind of leading being referenced. This is speaking about putting to death the deeds of the body. It is not speaking about buying houses and lands, accumulating wealth, or determining an earthly vocation! Those who are not subduing the flesh are not being led by the Holy Spirit, regardless of their laudable works.

Not A Reference to Scripture

The leading of the Spirit does not refer to the Scriptures themselves, as some suppose. It is true that He always directs men according to the Scriptures, and in strict harmony with the revealed purpose of God. There is no question about this. However, this is not the point of our text. This is a personal direction, where the individual is directly impacted by the influence of the Holy Spirit.

There are some who emphatically deny this to be the case. Unfortunately, these advocates are largely part of the religious movement with which I was identified. These affirm the Spirit works “only through the Word,” although such an expression is not found in God’s Word. Let it be clear, the leading of the Spirit is never in contradiction of Scripture. It is never into territories not revealed in Scripture, or that cannot be explained by Scripture. Yet, His leading is personal, and thus effective.

The Holy Spirit is actually leading men into uprightness, or a life that is in harmony with the nature of God. As it is written, “Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God: Thy Spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness” (Psa 143:10). How wonderfully the desire is stated!

Guidance From Within

This Direction occurs WITHIN the believer, not external to his person. This is where the Holy spirit has been sent by God. As it is written, “And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father” (Gal 4:6). And again, “Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts” (2 Cor 1:22).

quenched, for this is His appointed work.

THE SONS OF GOD

Lest we be tempted to view this text in a cold and lifeless manner, the subject is related to being “the sons of God.” There are great masses of church people who have never heard this Divine declaration, and even greater numbers who have never heard it expounded. There exists in the modern church a phenomenal number of people who never associate being the sons of God with being led by the Spirit to put to death the deeds of the body. Some would consider such a view to be salvation by works. But salvation is NOT by works which we have done (Tit 3:5), yet only those who are led by the Spirit to subdue the flesh are the sons of God. Both affirmations are from heaven!

Evidence! Evidence!

If you are going to build the confidence to be received by faith, and faith requires no other evidence than Divine declaration. In fact, faith itself “is the evidence,” or assurance (Heb 11:1).

The Spirit's use of evidences

When dealing with proofs, or evidences, the Spirit deals with our faith, our sonship, and our acceptance with God. One such expression is found in First John. “By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments” (5:2). Again, “We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death” (1 John 4:14).

This is the kind of evidence declared in our text. The proof of sonship is found in the effective mortification of the “deeds of the body.” That will appear too strong for some, but no person can allow himself the luxury of competing with God in his thoughts. The Spirit is firm and precise in this pronouncement. “For all who are being led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God” ^{NASB} (Rom 8:14). Men may reason that God has some wayward sons who are NOT led by the Spirit—but they cannot argue their case from this text! If, in fact, it is possible to be God's son, yet NOT be led by the Spirit, this text falls to the ground and must be declared spurious and worthless.

Further, the purpose of this text is not to produce endless wrangling, as the legalist is prone to do. The Spirit has no regard for the foolish prattling of men, and gives no honor to their carnally contrived doctrines. His purpose is to build up those into whom He has been sent. His aim is to confirm their salvation to them, and to convince them of their new life in Christ Jesus.

One of the fundamental ways through which He accomplishes this vital ministry is effectively leading the believer to deal with the eruptions of the “law of sin” within. He has already told us we will have to contend with this unwanted law. Now He shines a ray of hope upon our hearts and minds, assuring us that contention does not mean we must be defeated, and war does not mean we must lose. He will assist us in gaining the victory over sin! When we are able to perceive that victory, we will have in our

If you are going to build the confidence of God's people, and destroy the confidence of pretenders, you must deal with evidences. By this, I mean proofs of affiliation with God that can be determined by spiritual perception.

This takes place in fulfillment of the prophecy of Ezekiel: “I will put My Spirit within you and cause you to walk in My statutes, and you will keep My judgments and do them” ^{NKJV} (Ezek 36:27). And again, “I will put My Spirit in you, and you shall live” (Ezek 37:14).

The Holy Spirit, then, working from within our hearts, and in harmony with the human spirit, guides us in the subduing of the sinful nature, or the mortification of the deeds of the body. Wherever success is realized in this sacred work, the Holy Spirit has led. Wherever success is not realized, He has been of God's people, and destroy the confidence of pretenders, you must deal with evidences. By this, I mean proofs of affiliation with God that can be determined by spiritual perception.

Man's use of “evidences”

In the theological world, the word “evidences” deals with the field of apologetics. It is an effort to substantiate the existence of God and the fact of His creation through visible and logical evidences. Let it be clear that no such approach is found in Scripture! There are no extended efforts by inspired men to prove the existence of God or the fact of His creation. That is because both are hand the evidence that “we are the sons of God”(1 John 3:1-2). Forever remove from your mind the notion that confidence can be achieved while nurturing sin or pampering the flesh. If you do not mortify the flesh, it will mortify you.

WHAT YOU DID NOT RECEIVE

“^{15a} For you did not receive the spirit of bondage again to fear . . .” Other versions read as follows. “For you have not received a spirit of slavery leading to fear again.”^{NASB} “For you did not receive a spirit that makes you a slave again to fear.”^{NIV} “For you did not receive a spirit of slavery to fall back into fear.”^{NRSV} “For you did not get the spirit of servants again to put you in fear.”^{BBE} “So you should not be like cowering, fearful slaves.”^{NLT} “For what you received was not the spirit of slavery to bring you back into fear.”^{NJB}

This verse confirms the truth declared in Second Timothy. “For God hath not given us the spirit of fear . . .” (1:7). By this, the Spirit means that in Christ, we have not been brought into a condition that strikes fear into the heart. Salvation is not a circumstance where we are dominated by torment and anxiety, fearful of being rejected by the Lord we have embraced. Many believers live under the cloud of doubt, unable to rest confidently in the Lord. They daily wonder if they have done anything that may have excluded them from the Lord’s favor, even though they desire only to please Him. Their fears have been produced by a Law-approach to God. This is an approach that relies on human effort alone.

YOU DID NOT RECEIVE

Salvation does involve RECEIVING. It is not a program that requires achievement before reception. Rather, achieving follows receiving. Because of the warfare inside of the believer, it is first stated that we have NOT received the spirit of bondage again to fear. The conflict with the flesh is apt to produce bondage within the believer, particularly if it is not understood. Immediately, therefore, the Spirit assures our hearts that what we have been given in Christ in no way enslaves the believer.

THE SPIRIT OF BONDAGE

The “spirit of bondage” is the result of being under the Law. Paul has already described this bondage. “But sin, taking opportunity by the commandment, produced in me all manner of evil desire.

in the presence of the Lord. It does not mean being afraid of men, or of circumstances. Rather, it has to do with drawing back from the Lord because of the misconception that He is austere, and

When sinners are told the truth about sin and its alienating effects, yet are provided no remedy for their condition, they are even more enslaved to sin. Cast upon their own resources, they are dashed upon the rocks of despair. Fear then enters with great power, driving the guilty from the presence of the Lord, and destroying any hope of recovery.

For apart from the law sin was dead. I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died.” (7:8-9). Rather than the Law liberated men from sin, it actually resulted in their enslavement to sin. This was because their nature was not changed. As a result, the Law enhanced the conflict between men and God, offering no resolution for the dilemma.

When sinners are told the truth about sin and its alienating effects, yet are provided no remedy for their condition, they are even more enslaved to sin. Cast upon their own resources, they are dashed upon the rocks of despair. Fear then enters with great power, driving the guilty from the presence of the Lord, and destroying any hope of recovery.

The “spirit of bondage” compels men to view themselves as enemies of God, alienated from Him, and dominated by the law of sin. This is precisely what moves men to say Christians are just like the Israelites of old—recalcitrant and wayward. It is what causes men to immerse themselves in religious activities, all the while remaining aloof from God, fearful to come into His presence.

This fearfulness has to do with being looking for a reason to condemn. This is accentuated by the inner conflict believers experience. They suppose the presence of the “law of sin” causes them to be condemned, or at least judged harshly, by the Lord. They are unable to distinguish between “the law of sin” and sin itself. As a result, they are afraid of being in the presence of the Lord.

AGAIN

The word “again” reminds us of our former state under the Law. The Law condemned us for the very thoughts with which we now struggle. When we were under the Law, we did not hate those thoughts as we do now. However, the Law condemned us because they were present in our persons: i.e., “Thou shalt not covet!”

This is not the kind of spirit we have received in Christ Jesus. To put it another way, we have not simply received a new set of rules—a new law that is to be executed in the energy of the flesh. The New Covenant is “not according” to the covenant made with Israel. It is of another order. It is another kind of covenant. We were not simply given a new set of rules, and a new start with a clean slate, but one with a new nature, and the power to maintain it.

THE GOOD FIGHT OF FAITH IS TO BE FOUGHT!

WHAT YOU DID RECEIVE

“^{15b} . . . but you received the Spirit of adoption by whom we cry out, ‘Abba, Father.’” Other versions read as follows. “But you have received a spirit of adoption as sons by which we cry out, ‘Abba! Father!’”^{NASB} “But you received the Spirit of sonship. And by him we cry, ‘Abba, Father.’”^{NIV} “But you have received a spirit of adoption. When we cry, ‘Abba! Father!’”^{NRSV} “But the spirit of sons was given to you, by which we say, Abba, Father.”^{BBE} “You received the Spirit of adoption, enabling us to cry out, ‘Abba, Father!’”^{NJB}

At once you will notice the various translations fall into two categories. The first views “the Spirit” as applying to the Holy Spirit Himself (KJV, NKJV, NIV, NJB). The second views “the spirit” as meaning an attitude, or frame of mind (NASB, NRSV, BBE). There is a sense in which both views are correct, but what is the intention of the Spirit in this text?

First, the Holy Spirit is referred to no less than twenty-one times in this chapter.

- “. . . who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.” (v 1)
- “. . . the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus.” (v 2)
- “. . . who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.” (v 4)
- “. . . that are after the Spirit.” (v 5a)
- “. . . the things of the Spirit.” (v 5b)
- “But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit.” (v 9a)
- “. . . if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you.” (v 9b)
- “Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His.” (v9c)
- “. . . but the Spirit is life because of righteousness.” (v 10)
- “But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus . . .” (v 11a).
- “. . . shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you.” (v 11b)
- “. . . if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.” (v 13).
- “For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.” (v 14)
- “. . . but ye have received the Spirit of adoption.” (v 15)

- “The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit.” (v 16)
- “. . . but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit.” (v 23)
- “Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities.” (v 26a)
- “. . . but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.” (v 26b)
- “And He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit.” (v 27)

In view of the dominating theme of the Holy Spirit in this chapter, I will expound

- “And he that keepeth His commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that He abideth in us, by the Spirit which He hath given us.” (1 John 3:24)
- “Hereby know we that we dwell in Him, and He in us, because He hath given us of His Spirit.” (1 John 4:13)
- “Or do you not know that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit who is in you, whom you have from God, and you are not your own?”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 6:19)
- “Then Peter said to them, ‘Repent, and let every one of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the

the text as referring to the Holy Spirit, also called “the Spirit of Christ” and “the Spirit of God.” It does not refer to a mere attitude or frame of mind, for we cannot be made sons by such a mind. A proper mind set is the result of being made sons, not the cause of it.

YOU RECEIVED THE SPIRIT

Upon coming into Christ, we received the Holy Spirit. That is a fundamental part of Apostolic doctrine. This is declared frequently, and is beyond all controversy.

- “Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God.” (1 Cor 2:12)
- “Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts.” (2 Cor 1:22)
- “Now He that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit.” (2 Cor 5:5)
- “He therefore that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us His Holy Spirit.” (1 Thess 4:8) remission of sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit.”^{NKJV} (Acts 2:38)

This is not a gift received by SOME who are in Christ Jesus, but by ALL of them!

THE SPIRIT OF ADOPTION

The Holy Spirit is called “the Spirit of adoption” because His presence within is what confirms we are God’s sons. His presence ratifies or confirms our status. Thus it is written, “And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father” (Gal 4:6).

Why use the word “adoption”? Why not refer to regeneration as a new birth, as elsewhere (John 3:5,8; 1 Pet 1:23)? This is not an uncommon view of our status in Christ. Later in this very chapter “the adoption” will be equated with the “redemption of our body” (v 23). Later, “the adoption” is said to have pertained to Israel “according to the flesh” (9:4), among whom we have been grafted (11:17). Galatians 4:4-5 declares “God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.” Ephesians 1:5-6 associates our adoption with the predestination of God Himself. “Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will, to the praise of the glory of His grace, wherein He hath made us accepted in the Beloved.”

The word “adoption” emphasizes the legality of our status as sons. To put it another way, it underscores the choice of God—that we are His sons because He desired it to be so. The word also opens how we have been placed into the status of sons against the constraints of nature. There is nothing in us by nature that brought about our adoption. It was purely “according to the good pleasure of his will” (Eph 1:5).

The term “the Spirit of adoption” instructs us that while our acceptance was according to God’s predetermined purpose, it was carried out by the Holy Spirit. We were, in fact, “born of the Spirit” (John 3:6). Thus, God is said to have “chosen” us “through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth” (2 Thess 2:13). Again, those in Christ are said to be “Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit” (1 Pet 1:2).

BY WHOM WE CRY OUT

It is “by” or “through” the Holy Spirit that we “cry out, Abba, Father.” To “cry” conveys the idea of energetic and loud calls. Coming from the Greek word κρᾶζομεν, “cry” means “cry out, cry aloud, and speak with a loud voice” – exclaiming. It is not a gentle word, and does not convey the idea of a soft and casual plea. This is best explained by the Spirit’s reference to our Lord’s agony in the garden. “Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt” (Mk 14:36). The book of Hebrews refers to this prayer as Jesus offering up “prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears” (Heb 5:7).

This is a cry of dependence. It is a call for support and strength. It is also an insightful call in which the relationship to God is known. This is a cry of confidence, where a loud voice is raised toward heaven in expectation of needed resources.

word “Abba.” It was a word intended only for sons, not servants, and depicted a degree of confidence that only comes when the individual is convinced of his sonship.

There is a two-fold teaching in this word. First, there is no longer a division

This is a cry of dependence. It is a call for support and strength. It is also an insightful call in which the relationship to God is known. This is a cry of confidence, where a loud voice is raised toward heaven in expectation of needed resources.

Galatians 4:6 declares precisely the same thing taught in this passage. “And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father.”

“ABBA, FATHER”

There is a lot of nonsense taught by some regarding this phrase. Some affirm “Abba” is a synonym for “Daddy,” a sort of child-like reliance upon the Father. While there may be an element of truth to this, it is certainly minuscule and unworthy of emphasis. It is, in my judgment, an attempt to impose casual Western culture upon the Word of God. The family relations of Western culture were not the manners of the Eastern world. There was a level of respect among the ancient people that is scarcely known in our society.

In all three times where the word “Abba” is used, it is joined with the word “Father.” It is never used alone (Mk 14:36; Rom 8:15; Gal 4:6). The word “Abba” is a Syriac, or Chaldean word. It was used, authorities say, by the Jews also. We are told there was a law among the Jews that forbade servants to call their masters “Abba.” ^{Haldane} This is confirmed in the Hebrew canon, Berachoth, fol. 16.2. It appears to me that all of these views are to be seen in the between Jew and non-Jew in Christ Jesus. Both come to God as their “Father.” Second, we do not approach unto God as mere servants, with no inheritance or rights. Rather, we come as sons, with rights and privileges that have been righteously conferred upon us through the Lord Jesus Christ and by the Spirit of our God. We have been freed to come to God, and the Spirit assists our coming by enabling us to confidently cry out “Abba!”

The word “Abba” is a transliterated word, with the letters simply being converted to another language, rather than translating the word. That makes the word universal, like “Amen” and “Hallelujah.” From this perspective, all believers everywhere call upon the Father with one voice. In this, there an acknowledgment of our oneness in Christ.

I want to emphasize that this is not an infantile cry, but one of spiritual maturity. Insight and strong faith characterize it, neither of which is childish. It comes from one engaged in a fierce battle with the flesh. The use of the word “Daddy” in reference to God can only be used when dominated by spiritual ignorance. No person acutely aware of the Almighty God could approach Him in such a casual manner. Such an approach is not found before, during, or after the Law.

THE WITNESSING SPIRIT

“ ¹⁶ The Spirit Himself bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God.” God has established the necessity of two witnesses. Under the law, two witnesses were required before capital punishment could be enacted. One witness was not enough (Deut 17:6). A solitary witness was forbidden to rise up “against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established” (Deut 19:15). The Revelation portrays the message of God as being delivered by God’s “two witnesses” (Rev 11:3). In confirming His promise to His children, “God willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath: that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us” (Heb 6:18). It is the Divine manner to buttress critical matters

The witness of reference is not through the Scriptures, although it is in perfect accord with them. It is not the witness of our brethren, although it will be in agreement with those who have spiritual understanding. This is the witness of “The Spirit Himself.” This is the “Spirit of adoption” who confirms the reality of that adoption to us.

The confirmation of our sonship will not come through a reasoning process, or through human logic. It will come from “the Spirit Himself.” Our confidence will not come from human deduction, but from Divine witness.

BEARING WITNESS WITH OUR SPIRIT

The Spirit bears witness with our essential persons—the part of us that is “born of God.” Here is where the “new

Scripture says “with our spirit.” The Duoay-Rheims version says “to our spirit.” The New Jerusalem Bible seems to capture the real sense of the text. “The Spirit Himself joins with our spirit to bear witness that we are children of God.”

A Confirming Witness

This is a confirming witness. It is a witness already declared by the cry “Abba, Father!” It is confirmed by a new affection, an appetite for the “things of the Spirit,” and a hatred or all iniquity.

The witness of our own spirit is declared a most unique way in John 3:33. “He that hath received His [Christ’s] testimony hath set to his seal that God is true.” The expression “set to his seal” reads more clearly in the NASB: “set his seal to this.” The NKJV reads, “has certified.” The idea is that in the acceptance of Christ’s testimony the individual will become convinced that God is true. Faith will expel doubt from the soul, bringing joyous confidence.

The Spirit joins with our renewed spirit, confirming what has already been sensed by faith. This drives the truth of our status as sons of God home to the heart, producing the confidence required to finish the course set before us. No child of God can be without the witness of the Spirit. It is a necessity, not a luxury.

THE CHILDREN OF GOD

The objective of the Spirit’s witness is spelled out. It is that we are “the children of God.” Our own cries (Abba, Father) declare this, and now the Spirit does also. John refers to this very witness when he says, “He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself” (1 John 5:10). No enemy can reach this witness, or deprive the redeemed of it. It speaks to us in quiet and in storm, in good times and in trying ones. When we have no one else to confirm we are the children of God, we have the witness in ourselves, and it is confirmed by the certification of the “Spirit Himself.”

The inner witness is involved in our Lord’s most remarkable statement to the Samaritan woman. “But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be IN HIM a well of water springing up into everlasting life” (John 4:14).

The Spirit joins with our renewed spirit, confirming what has already been sensed by faith. This drives the truth of our status as sons of God home to the heart, producing the confidence required to finish the course set before us. No child of God can be without the witness of the Spirit. It is a necessity, not a luxury.

Now, in the matter of our sonship, the Lord has also established two witnesses. One is His Word. In it He has declared those in Christ Jesus are His sons. All who have been justified are His children, and He is their Father. Now the Lord provides us with a personal Witness.

THE SPIRIT HIMSELF

“The Spirit Himself testifies with our spirit that we are God’s children.” ^{NIV} Herein is a marvelous truth: that the Spirit of God could bear intimate witness to the spirit of man! This reality confirms that we have been justified, and are accepted in Christ. If this were not the case, the Holy Spirit could bear no such testimony to us. To those outside of Christ, His ministry is one of conviction, confirming that men are alienated from God (John 16:8-11).

man” exists. It is associated with our “heart,” which is the inmost part of our being. This is the part of man declared in Job 32:8. “But there is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.” There is no more noble understanding than this, that we are the sons of God! Every facet of spiritual life hinges on this understanding, and it can only be ministered by the Holy Spirit of God.

The Spirit does not bear witness to our minds, or to our souls, but to our spirits. This is the part of us that can be enlightened from above—the part where there is accord with the Living God.

There is significance in saying the Spirit “bears witness WITH our spirit.” He does not say “to our spirit,” as though He were merely instructing or enlightening us. Nearly every version of

This is an accurate statement of our status: “the children of God.” God has begotten us with the Word of truth, and thus we are His children (James 1:18). We were born again, not of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but “of God”. Thus we are “the children of God” (John 1:13). This is what we should be called. As it is written, “Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God . . . ” (1 John 3:1-2a).

How frequently the saints are identified as the sons, or children, of God. Ponder the power and ministry of these words.

- ❑ “For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the SONS OF GOD” (Rom 8:14).
- ❑ “For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the SONS OF GOD” (Rom 8:19).
- ❑ “That ye may be blameless and harmless, the SONS OF GOD, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world” (Phil 2:15).
- ❑ “Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the SONS OF GOD” (1 John 3:1).
- ❑ “Beloved, now are we the SONS OF GOD, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is” (1 John 3:2).

- ❑ “Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be MY SONS AND DAUGHTERS, saith the Lord Almighty” (2 Cor 6:17-18).
- ❑ “To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of SONS. And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father” (Gal 4:5-6).
- ❑ “For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many SONS glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings” (Heb 2:10).
- ❑ “Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the CHILDREN OF GOD” (Rom 8:21).
- ❑ “For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus” (Gal 3:26).
- ❑ “In this the CHILDREN OF GOD are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother” (1 John 3:10).
- ❑ “By this we know that we love the CHILDREN OF GOD, when we love God, and keep his commandments” (1 John 5:2).

A GREAT DEFICIENCY

Right here there is a great deficiency in the modern church. A remarkable lack of assurance exists among believers. Great numbers of them acknowledge they are not sure of their relation to God. The relative silence of the pulpit on this subject has only served to make the condition worse.

This is not at all acceptable! Modern religion has silenced two witnesses, drowning out their testimony with its trumped up agendas and misplaced emphases. The witness of the renewed spirit has been silenced, as well as the confirming witness of the Holy Spirit. The result is that sin is blazing out of control within the very society that has received power to assist us in overcoming it.

Let here be no doubt about this! In order to wage the warfare described in Romans 7:15-25, some assurance of our adoption by God is required. I am not prepared to define a particular level of that knowledge, but some level must be possessed.

I have every confidence that, when realized, the witness of the human spirit and the Holy Spirit will grow louder and louder. In the wake of that witness, strength will be renewed, and victory over the flesh will be realized.

When our conscience is awakened to the inner witnesses salvation brings, we will have less difficulty with the hard experiences of life. Our enemies will not trouble us as much, and Satan will be more readily and effectively resisted.

THE STATUS OF THE SONS OF GOD

“^{17a} and if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ . . . ” Are there any advantages to being a child of God? The devil would have us think there are not. That, in essence, is what he deceived Eve into thinking (Gen 3:1-6). With subtle aggressiveness, the Tempter promotes the idea that the world has more to offer than God. This is why people are not seizing the Kingdom with violence, as a prize to be obtained (Matt 11:12). It is why church meeting houses are empty on Lord’s evening, and only briefly occupied on Lord’s day morning. It is the reason why believers are in the minority in our country, State, and city. People have been duped into believing there are no significant advantages to being a child, or son, of God. It is why more men are not preaching. It is why people ignore their Bibles, preferring entertainment to edification. It is why supposedly Christian concerts are preferred to powerful Right here there is a great deficiency in the modern church. A remarkable lack of assurance exists among believers. Great numbers of them acknowledge they are not sure of their relation to God. The relative silence of the pulpit on this subject has only served to make the condition worse.

preaching. It is why there has been a decline in evangelistic and revival meetings. This is the reason for compromise in Christian colleges. Satan has convinced people there are no real advantages to being the children of God. Thus, satisfaction is sought elsewhere.

The epitaph over these conditions is, "An enemy hath done this!" (Matt 13:28). There are wonderful advantages to being the children of God. The world has nothing that can compare with them. They will survive the end of the world, and minister to the believer in both life and death. Here is something we must speak of more frequently. The words "reward" (Matt 5:12; 1 Cor 3:8,14; Col 3:24), "crown" (2 Tim 4:8; James 1:12; 1 Pet 5:4), and "prize" (1 Cor 9:24; Phil 3:14) must find their way into the vocabulary of the church! Preachers and teachers must get their heads out of the sand and deliver a message that speaks of a glorious future for the children of God. The subject of heaven needs to be revived. Words like "inheritance" (Eph 1:14; Heb 9:15; 1 Pet 1:4), "treasures in heaven" (Matt 6:19-20), and "reign with Christ" (Rev 22:5 2 Tim 2:12) must become familiar to the saints!

There is too much earth being thrown on the saints of God from the pulpit! Much of the supposed Christian literature of our time is nothing more than dust thrown in the eyes of believers. It becomes obsolete too quickly, and does not pull back the veil so men may see the glorious future of the children of God.

IF CHILDREN

Everything hinges on whether or not we are "the children of God." Nothing else matters if this is not true! It is therefore imperative that every believer be confirmed in the persuasion he is a child of God. If, in fact, we are "children," what a glorious circumstance belongs to us!

HEIRS

The flesh reasons that "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." Thus it would rather have something now than wait patiently for something greater. But this is not the spirit of the Kingdom! If we are children we are "HEIRS," and that has to do with the future.

What Is An Heir?

An "heir" is someone who shares in the possessions of another. They did not earn what they will receive, nor did they purchase it. The heir receives something wrought out or procured by another.

The "heir" receives something that has been determined and apportioned by someone else. The provider is a benefactor who has been constrained by an affection for the appointed "heir."

Isaac was the immediate "heir" of Abraham's possessions, as well as the promises given to him. Of him God said, "but he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir" (Gen future—to the coming of the Lord. That is when we will receive our real possessions!

A Forward Posture

Wherever a forward posture is not found, defeat is ever present! When believers do not think of their inheritance, they will find it easier to think of life in this world. They will overestimate earthly treasures and advantages. They will experience more disappointment, and will more readily fall into doubt! But when they consider the fact that they are "heirs," the horizon of the future will grow brighter. The promises will become more precious, and the coming of the Lord will be longed for with great anticipation and eagerness.

It is no wonder the children of God are called "heirs according to the promise" (Gal 3:29). By God's grace they have been "made heirs according to the hope of eternal life" (Tit 3:7), and are the "heirs of salvation" (Heb 1:14).

"Heirs of God"

What a word is this—"heirs of God!" Here, in one word, the summation of our inheritance is stated. It is God Himself! The "heirs of God" will inherit God! As Galatians 4:7 says, "Therefore you are no longer a slave but a son, and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ."

How well David stated it: "My flesh and my heart fail; But God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever" (Psa 73:26).

Inheriting God Himself is involved in the wonderful promise, "and I will be their God" (Jer 31:33; 32:38; Ezek 11:20; 37:23,27; Zech 8:8; 2 Cor 6:16; Heb 8:10). Full and unhindered access to God will be given to us as "heirs of God." This is the inheritance of all who are "the children of God."

"Joint Heirs with Christ"

This too is a most marvelous phrase! It is too large for worldly wisdom to receive. The bag of nature is too small to hold this promise! If ever a person is to gain some insight into these things, he must put a large distance between himself and the world. The bigger the world, the smaller the promises of God. Conversely, the 15:4). Ishmael, the son of Abraham through Hagar the Egyptian was "not heir" with his son Isaac (Gen 21:10; Gal 4:22-31).

An inheritance is reserved for the "heirs," and "heirs" are appointed to obtain the inheritance. Those with little or no interest in rewards or an inheritance must remember there is no point to being God's children if there is no inheritance. Notice the reasoning of our text. It is most powerful. He does not say, "And if children, then comfortable." Or, "And if children, then happy." Or, "and if children, then prosperous." The Word lifts our eyes and points them toward the larger our inheritance looms before us, the more inconsequential this world is.

Sharing the Inheritance

A “joint heir” is one who shares the inheritance of another. Such a person no small thing, therefore, to be a “joint heir with Christ!” In that status untold riches are found.

A Word from Heaven

participates with one who has inherited the assets of another. And what can be said of Christ’s inheritance? Presently God is speaking to us “by His Son, whom He has appointed Heir of all things” (Heb 1:2). Notice, God has “APPOINTED” the Son as “Heir” of everything! Whatever can be inherited WILL be inherited by the Lord Jesus Christ! The “heathen” have been given to Him for His “inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession” (Psa 2:8). The whole of God’s government has been put upon His shoulder, and He will “establish it with judgment and justice from that time forward, even forever” (Isa 9:7). Because of His uncontested Headship, “the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in His hand” (Isa 53:10). Everything has been “put under His feet” (Eph 1:22). It shall yet reverberate throughout the universe, “The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and He shall reign for ever and ever” (Rev 11:15). It is promise, a cry sounds from the heavenly throne room. It is intended to buoy up the spirit of the faithful, encouraging them to fight the good fight of faith and finish their course. “He who overcomes shall inherit all things, and I will be his God and he shall be My son” (Rev 21:7). The Lord Jesus alluded to this when he promised, “Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth” (Matt 5:5).

Throughout eternity, as it rolls its ceaseless cycles on, the saints will not be sitting on clouds and strumming harps. Indeed,, they will be “joint heirs with Christ.” Whatever He is doing, they will be doing. His activity will be their activity! The “world to come” will be given into their charge, as “joint heirs with Christ” (Heb 2:5-10).

In their appointed role of “joint heirs,” they will “judge the world,” and even “angels” (1 Cor 6:2-3). The saints are the “strong” with whom Jesus will divide the spoils (Isa 53:12).

Daniel’s Prophecy

Something of the greatness of being “joint heirs with Christ” was revealed to Daniel. Let these words sink down into your ears. “But the saints of the Most High will receive the kingdom and will possess it forever – yes, for ever and ever . . . until the Ancient of Days came and pronounced judgment in favor of the saints of the Most High, and the time came when they possessed the kingdom . . . Then the sovereignty, power and greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven will be handed over to the saints, the people of the Most High. His kingdom will be an everlasting kingdom, and all rulers will worship and obey him [them, ^{NRSV}]” (Dan 7:18,22,27) ^{NIV}

Abraham’s Seed

In confirmation of this blessed status, the Spirit reasons with us concerning the Lord Jesus and those who are in Him. This particular reasoning is found in the book of Galatians, and it is marvelous. “Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He does not say, ‘And to seeds,’ as of many, but as of one, ‘And to your Seed,’ who is Christ . . . And if you are Christ’s, then you are Abraham’s seed, and heirs according to the promise” (3:16,29).

Salvation has forged a unity between Christ and the redeemed that is so close and so effectual that they are counted as “Abraham’s seed!” It is in that capacity that they are “joint heirs with Christ.” A marvelous condition, indeed! Once this is seen, victory will be realized, and a high degree of confidence and boldness attained.

THE BIG “IF”

“^{17a} . . . IF indeed we suffer with Him, that we may also be glorified together.” Here is another one of those “IF” clauses. Wherever an “if” is found, choice is required. This is not the “if” of happenstance. Make no mistake about this. Those who do not meet the requirement will not enjoy the benefit! I realize it is not fashionable to speak in this manner among certain people, but that is no to concern to me. Those who speak of unconditional love, and the impossibility of coming short of the rest do well to adjust their theology, for it is flawed at the core. There is not a syllable in Scripture that suggests salvation, the most magnanimous display of Divine love, is without conditions. Faith is a condition (Heb 11:6). Repentance is a condition (Lk 13:3,5). Obedience if a condition (Acts 5:32; Heb 5:9). Hearing what the Spirit is saying is a condition (Rev 2:7).

Now we come to another condition. The issues are great. Let no one be foolish enough to disassociate this text from salvation. We are speaking of being “heirs,” “heirs of God,” and “joint heirs with Christ.” The person who imagines it is possible to miss these things and still be saved is a fool. Such a person has been deceived by the devil and thrown into a state of spiritual insanity. Being an “heir,” an “heir of God,” and a “joint heir with Christ" IS salvation.

IF INDEED WE SUFFER

Again, the language is strong. The KJV reads, "if SO BE that we suffer with Him." Other versions read, "if indeed we suffer with Him," ^{NKJV,NASB} "if indeed we share in his sufferings," ^{NIV} "if, in fact, we suffer with him," ^{NRSV} "provided we suffer with him," ^{RSV} "we must also share his suffering," ^{NLT} This is not, then, a casual suggestion.

Two things are required. First, the suffering must be genuine, or germane to the faith-life. Second, it must be "with Christ," experienced in the crucible of fellowship with the Son, into which God has called us (1 Cor 1:9). These two views are worthy of further development.

Genuine Suffering

The suffering must be "indeed," and "in fact." The status of an "heir" is conditioned on this suffering: "provided we suffer." That means there is a suffering that does not qualify for the blessing. Suffering as an "evil doer," for example, does not count (1 Pet 4:15). There are also sufferings related to living in this world—sufferings that are common to all men, whether they are believers or not. They do not qualify for the blessing either.

Genuine suffering includes reappraisals for being godly—suffering "for righteousness sake" (1 Pet 3:14). It is the result of separation from the world and an earnest quest for heaven. It is written, "Yes, and all who desire to live godly in Christ Jesus will suffer persecution" (1 Tim 3:12). Such people are promised their suffering is not the end of the matter. Their day is coming! In them the promise will be fulfilled, "The LORD will make you the head, and not the tail; you shall be only at the top, and not at the bottom" (Deut 28:13).

Those who recoil from such suffering put a distance between themselves and the promises of God. If they do not take up their cross every day and follow Jesus, they will not be "heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." If, however, they bear up patiently under the harsh treatment of the world, God will richly reward them. For them, there is coming a day when they will not recall a single wrong. Their eternal inheritance will drown out such remembrances in a blaze of everlasting glory.

With Christ

For suffering to be valid, it must be "with Christ," not merely for Him. This speaks of the "fellowship of His sufferings" (Phil 3:10), sharing the same rejection and opposition our Lord experienced. This is not the suffering Jesus did when He bore the sins of the world. No person can share in that sufferings. They can only share in the benefits that flow from them. This is the suffering of which Jesus spoke when He said, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you" (John 15:18).

When we get into the yoke with Jesus, taking His yoke upon ourselves (Matt 11:28), men will react to us as they do to Him. His enemies will become our enemies, and His friends will become our friends. Those who disagree with Him will disagree with us. Those who reject Him will reject us. It is His life in us that produces these conditions. As Paul confessed, speaking for all who are in the Son, "I have been crucified with Christ; and it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me, and delivered Himself up for me" ^{NASB} (Gal 2:20).

If you will bear up under the suffering that results from this fellowship, you are an heir, an heir of God, and a joint heir with Christ! Pass the word along to fellow sufferers! They need to hear it. You need to hear it! I need to hear it! Jesus has left a remnant of suffering behind for us—suffering in which the choicest Divine fellowship will be realized. Paul referred to this suffering when he wrote, "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for His body's sake, which is the church" (Col

1:24). These are not redemptive sufferings. They do not remove sin, either yours or the sins of others. But they ARE sufferings appointed as the prelude to inheriting God and being a joint heir with Jesus! Embrace them with zeal!

GLORIFIED TOGETHER

There is a stated objective to suffering "with Christ." It is that "that we may be also glorified together." This means "together" with Christ, as indicated by

If you will bear up under the suffering that results from this fellowship, you are an heir, an heir of God, and a joint heir with Christ!
Pass the word along to fellow sufferers! They need to hear it. You need to hear it! I need to hear it!

other versions: "in order that we may also be glorified with Him," ^{NASB} "in order that we may also share in His glory," ^{NIV} and "in order that we may also be glorified with Him." ^{RSV}

The idea is that when Jesus appears in His glory, we will also appear in glory. That is precisely how it is stated in Colossians 3:4. "When Christ who is our life appears, then you also will appear with Him in glory." Christ being "our life" now involves suffering with Him. But when He shall appear in all of His glory—the glory He presently possesses—then we will be glorified "together with Him."

Then we will be seen for who we really are—"the children of God." Our real self will become apparent, and the “body of this death” will be discarded. Then Jesus “will transform our lowly body that it may be conformed to His glorious body, according to the working by which He is able even to subdue all things to Himself” (Phil 3:21). Until then, we just run the race with patience, not desiring a premature showing. Better to be glorified together with Christ than to seek glory independently of Him!

One additional word is in order. The point here is not that suffering causes us to merit glory. Rather, it is that suffering necessarily precedes glory. Just as Jesus suffered, then was glorified, so must we suffer with Him before we can be glorified with Him. That is the Kingdom manner as lived out in the Lord of glory Himself. He set the tone for spiritual life. The individual who seeks to avoid suffering with Christ, by that very action, forfeits being glorified with Him.

CONCLUSION

What we have received in Christ Jesus is far superior to all that was before Him. Nothing about salvation promotes debilitating fear, or moves one to withdraw from the Lord in shame and dread. Instead of that, we have received the Spirit of adoption, or the Spirit of sonship. We have been marked down in heaven as sons of God, and the impact of it has registered upon our spirits.

What we have received in Christ Jesus is far superior to all that was before Him. Nothing about salvation promotes debilitating fear, or moves one to withdraw from the Lord in shame and dread. Instead of that, we have received the Spirit of adoption, or the Spirit of sonship. We have been marked down in heaven as sons of God, and the impact of it has registered upon our spirits. Rather than crying out in terror at the thought or presence of the Lord, we cry out confidently, “Abba, Father,” knowing that He hears us and will supply our need according to His riches in glory. “For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father” (v 15).

greatness of salvation has been expounded in a most effective manner. With great power, we have been apprized that we owe nothing to the flesh. We have no obligation to it, and need not extend ourselves to pacify it. Nothing good is found in it, and it cannot inherit the Kingdom of God (1 Cor 15:50). We must not, therefore, allow the flesh to enter our lives in general, or the focused parts of life in Christ, including personal devotion and our assemblies. Flesh insists on dominating, and will do so whenever given an opportunity. “Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh” (v 12).

We must also gird up the loins of our mind and accept the fact that following the dictates of the flesh eventuates in death—spiritual death. It negates all progress that has been made and throws us into the death process once again. It is not possible to survive living “after the flesh.” God has spoken, and experience confirms it to be true. “For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die” (v 13a).

Just as surely as living after the flesh produces death, putting to death the deeds of the body through the Holy Spirit results in life. We are sensitive to God only to the degree that the deeds of the body are mortified. The Spirit will empower and direct us in refusing to allow sin to express itself through our members. It is our business to believe that. It simply is impossible to enjoy Divine fellowship and benefits if we allow sin to erupt in words and deeds. However, if we subdue such expressions, we will become more sensitive to the Lord and His direction. “But if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live” (v 13b).

Being the “sons of God” is a most blessed privilege, and is to be guarded at all cost. This state is not to be taken for granted, for it is conditioned upon being led by the Spirit of God. Those who are not easily directed by the Spirit are standing in “slippery places” Psa 73:18).

Those, however, who hear what the Spirit is saying to the churches, and can be easily directed by Him are in safety, and have every reason to be of good cheer. Their triumph is as sure as their faith is strong. Faith IS the victory that overcomes the world. “For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God” (v 14).

All of the complexities of our nature are met in Christ Jesus. Not only do we have a sense of Divine acceptance that is attested by Scripture, a personal Witness is given to us to assure us we are the children of God. That witness is the Holy Spirit, who comes along side our Spirit and joins it in confirming we are the children of God. “The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God” (v 16).

The benefits of being God’s children extend far beyond time and circumstance. Presently, we are enjoying the firstfruits of salvation, with the bulk of our inheritance to come. There is a birthright up ahead that goes beyond the capability of the human mind. As it is written, “But as it is written: ‘Eye has not seen, nor ear heard, Nor have entered into the heart of man The things which God has prepared for those who love Him’” (1 Cor 2:9). However, God has not left us in a quandary about these things. Rather, He “has revealed them to us through His Spirit. For the Spirit searches all things, yes, the deep things of God" (1 Cor 2:10). Part of that revelation has been made known in our text. It is in summary form, but it is challenging to ponder. It involves being "heirs," "heirs of God," and "joint heirs with Christ." Obtaining that status is worth the most arduous effort! It will be granted to you if you suffer with Christ, filling up the small measure of suffering He has left behind.

Now, put yourself into the work.

Extend yourself for Christ. We only have a short while to wait. "And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together" (v 17).

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 26

SUFFERING is the PRELUDE to GLORY

8:18 For I consider that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. ¹⁹ For the earnest expectation of the creation eagerly waits for the revealing of the sons of God. ²⁰ For the creation was subjected to futility, not willingly, but because of Him who subjected it in hope; ²¹ because the creation itself also will be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. ²² For we know that the whole creation groans and labors with birth pangs together until now. ²³ Not only that, but we also who have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, eagerly waiting for the adoption, the redemption of our body. ²⁴ For we were saved in this hope, but hope that is seen is not hope; for why does one still hope for what he sees? ²⁵ But if we hope for what we do not see, we eagerly wait for it with perseverance. ²⁶ Likewise the Spirit also helps in our weaknesses. For we do not know what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit Himself makes intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. ²⁷ Now He who searches the hearts knows what the mind of the Spirit is, because He makes intercession for the saints according to the will of God.— Romans 8:18-27 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

ADJUSTING OUR FOCUS

The eighth chapter of Romans is a Divinely appointed means of adjusting our spiritual focus, or tuning our spiritual perspective. It clarifies the nature of salvation as well as its marvelous provisions. After we have been confronted with the world and all of its delusions, this wonderful chapter causes us to look upward, where our Lord resides.

NO CONDEMNATION

After we have grappled with the law of sin within our members, and experienced the frustrations that attend the fierce inward war brought on by faith, we are told “There is therefore now no condemnation” (8:1). Without that precious facet of understanding, the warfare would soon get the best of us.

FREE FROM THE LAW OF SIN

The flesh presses us relentlessly, demanding its own way, and aggressively seeking to once again dominate us. In mercy, the Lord reveals through this chapter that “the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus” has made us “free from the law of sin and death” (8:2). We have no obligation to “the flesh,” and can confidently refuse its demands.

SIN HAS BEEN CONDEMNED

Sin looms before us like Goliath, seeking to intimidate us. Using our prior sins, the devil can harass us with our past, dredging up transgressions that have been forgiven. He craftily reminds us we are capable of doing those things again, and seeks to lure us back to living in the flesh. His advances are thwarted when we lay hold of the Word. The Spirit affirms God was in Christ and has “condemned sin in the flesh,” robbing it of its power (8:3).

CLARIFYING CARNALITY

The religious world beats upon our ears with a compromising message that makes allowances for the flesh. It offers explanations for living beneath the privileges of salvation, and makes provision for a spiritual life that lacks commitment and advancement. However, as we pay heed to this choice chapter,

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. THE CONSIDERATION OF FAITH (8:18)
- II. CREATION IS WAITING (8:19)
- III. THE EXTENT OF THE CURSE (8:20)
- IV. CREATION TO BE RELEASED (8:21)
- V. ALL CREATION IS INVOLVED (8:22)
- VI. FELLOWSHIP IN GROANING (8:23)
- VII. THE CRITICAL ROLE OF HOPE (8:24-25)
- VIII. HELP IN OUR IGNORANCE (8:26)
- IX. EFFECTIVE INTERCESSION (8:27)

heaven shouts to us, “For to be carnally minded is death . . . the carnal mind is enmity against God . . . they that are in the flesh cannot please God” (8:6-8). It brings us back to the understanding that no provision whatsoever has been made in Christ for following the dictates of the flesh or being carnally minded.

BELIEVERS HAVE THE ADVANTAGE

When the old serpent tempts us to imagine we are not equal to the rigors of spiritual warfare, we are told “But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you,” and “if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness,” and “But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you” (8:9-11). The heavenly Helper has been assigned to us, to bring us through the morass of sin, and land us safely on the shores of glory.

AN AGGRESSIVE STANCE

When the devil tempts us to imagine an aggressive spiritual stance is not necessary, we read, “For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live” (8:13). The Spirit will lead us in a victorious battle against the flesh, like God led Israel against mighty Jericho, and David against Goliath.

In all of these matters, life in Christ is seen more clearly, thereby enabling the child of God to wage effective war, and live a productive spiritual life.

ONLY THE BEGINNING

The bulk of the privileges and involvements related to our sonship are ahead of us. In this world, we have, at best, only been introduced to them. The passage before us will refer to our present participation in God’s “great salvation” as the “firstfruits of the Spirit” (v 23).

THE ROLE OF SUFFERING

While the saints remain in these bodies (and consequently in this world), sufferings constitute a major part of their experience. A primary facet of these sufferings was introduced in the seventh chapter, which elaborated on our struggle with the flesh. The Spirit will now deal with the whole range of sufferings that have resulted from our identify with Christ Jesus.

We have already been introduced to this in the verse preceding this section: “And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together [with Him]” (verse 17). There is a sense in which a glorified future depends upon successfully negotiating through present sufferings. The real issue for believers is NOT whether they will suffer or not, but whether they will survive the suffering.

For this reason, the Spirit will now reveal the extensiveness of the help God gives us in these sufferings. He will also confirm they are vastly inferior to what we will receive in the future. He will even show us that we have joined a great chorus of suffering that is rising from the realm of the curse.

Generally, this section of Scripture is little known to the saints of God. It simply does not fit well into an institutional agenda. Further, this exposition of suffering is in sharp conflict with the psychological approach that has been popularized in our day. Once declared, however, the glory of the truth will be at once seen by those who believe.

THE CONSIDERATION OF FAITH

“^{8:18} For I consider that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.” As with all Scripture, this passage is not the personal interpretation of the writer. It is ever true, “Above all, you must understand that no prophecy of Scripture came about by the prophet’s own interpretation. For prophecy never had its origin in the will of man, but men spoke from God as they were carried along by the Holy Spirit”^{NIV} (2 Pet 1:20-21). The fact that Paul says “I consider,” does not mean this view originated with him, or that it is a mere human opinion. From heaven’s point of view, this is a revelation given to Paul for the edification of the saints. From the human point of view, this is a deduction produced by faith, that is “common” to all saints (Tit 1:4). It is essential that we perceive this, else the passage will lose its significance to us, and be robbed of its Divine power.

CONSIDERING

weakness. “I am of the opinion,”^{BBE} and “In my estimation.”^{NJB}

Let it be clear that “reckoning,” or “considering,” is not a mere human exercise, or effort to analyze. In Scripture, considering is not a facet of human logic, but an aspect of faith. It involves reasoning, but not mere reasoning. It is rationale based upon revelation. While the things of God conflict with the worldly mindset, they are not irrational or unreasonable. Faith has a reasoning of its own, and “reckoning,” or “considering” involves arriving at conclusions mandated by faith. It is thinking that results from believing—and believing God does impact upon the way we think! Admittedly, this removes glory from man, but that is needful.

The word from which “reckon” or “consider” is translated is λογίζομαι, which etymologically means count, reckon, calculate, consider, think, suppose, or evaluate. Linguistically, it is thinking according to logical rules.^{Liddell-Scott Lexicon} However impressive these definitions may appear, they do not tell the whole story.

In Scripture, reckoning is based upon revelation, not human logic. It is an expression of faith, not of mere human nature. This reckoning or considering is also a spiritual conclusion. The book of Romans frequently uses the word in this manner.

- ❑ “Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the Law” (3:28).
- ❑ “Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord” (Rom 6:11).
- ❑ The word is also used in the book of Hebrews to describe how faith moved Abraham to reason. “Accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure” (Heb 11:19).

In each of these passages, the reasoning contradicts what appears to be, and violates the manner in which flesh thinks. The conclusion that man is justified “without the deeds of the Law” violates the human way of thinking, but perfectly conforms to the logic of faith. Considering ourselves to be dead to sin and alive to God contradicts thinking that is based upon experience, yet strictly comports with the rationale of faith. For Abraham to determine to offer Isaac as a burnt offering to God in hope that God would raise him from the dead defied every form of human reasoning. Yet, it was impeccably accurate for the reasoning patterns of faith.

What is here affirmed is not an appeal to mere human reason. Rather, it is a Divine affirmation made to faith. This does reflect the reasoning of Paul, but only because he had faith. It is not the conclusion of Paul the scholar, but Paul the believer. For this reason, every person in Christ can arrive at the same conclusion. Because of this, they can be both comforted and strengthened by reasoning in this manner.

THE SUFFERINGS OF THIS PRESENT TIME

“ . . . the sufferings of this present time . . . ” There are at least three senses in which “this present time” is used.

It is not the conclusion of Paul the scholar, but Paul the believer. For this reason, every person in Christ can arrive at the same conclusion. Because of this, they can be both comforted and strengthened by reasoning in this manner.

- ❑ First, it refers to the period of time itself, sandwiched between eternity past and eternity future.
- ❑ Second, it pertains to the period of time during which we live by faith—the period between our new birth and our glorification.
- ❑ Third, it relates to what believers are presently experiencing—today, and at this present time.

All three views are relevant to our spiritual understanding. The first teaches us to properly evaluate life itself. The second instructs us concerning life in Christ Jesus. The third helps us to properly evaluate what we are presently experiencing. This is a statement made for all believers of all time.

Sufferings Induced By Faith

These are sufferings brought on by faith, NOT sufferings common to all humanity, or miseries experienced in the routines of normal life (i.e., sickness,

These sufferings range from bloody persecution and social ostracization, to inner turmoil and conflict with our own flesh. All of them are very real, and all of them are limited to our time in “this present evil world” (Gal 1:4). Persecution and rejection are the result of becoming citizens of another world (Phil 3:20; John 15:19), and receiving a nature that is in sharp conflict with the spirit of this world (2 Cor 5:17). Inner turmoil and conflict with the flesh are the result of possessing a “new man” and an “old man” simultaneously (Eph 4:22-24) – a “spiritual man” and a “natural man” at the same time (1 Cor 2:14-15).

Both of these conditions – the outward and the inward – produce “sufferings.” These are afflictions that are painful, and hardships that chaff against the soul. By their very nature they can cause discouragement, sorrow, and spiritual stupidity. Under the stress of suffering, many a believer has been moved to think incorrectly. When suffering, some have even thought believing and serving God were not worth going through such grief, and have therefore went back to the past like a dog to its vomit.

Multitudes of believers live in a state of constant confusion and frustration because they cannot account for the difficulties they endure. “The sufferings of this present time,” though they may differ in intensity and type, are common to us all. We need the perspective of faith to be able to endure them.

NOT WORTHY OF COMPARISON

“ . . . are not worthy to be compared . . . ” You might call this comparative thinking. In order to obtain a proper view, one thing is compared with another. It is critical that we know how to make such comparisons. We are not, for example, to compare ourselves with other people (2 Cor 10:12). Consequently, our sufferings are NOT to be compared with the sufferings of others.

Although such comparisons are common (i.e., “We have not suffered as much as the martyrs of old,” . . . etc.), it is not proper for such analogies to be made. One may imagine they will yield a thankful spirit, but they rarely do. They are too shallow. Experiences in time are not to be compared with one another.

By saying “worthy,” the Spirit is not ascribing one level of worthiness to sufferings and another level to glory. It is the comparison itself that is “not worthy.” The purpose is to lighten the cross by affirming sufferings are NOTHING compared to glory. They seem significant, but they are not: they are “nothing.” They are not “nothing” because they do not hurt, but because they will not be remembered when we are delivered from time and this present evil world.

This type of reasoning (which is really the only proper way to reason) postulates that God’s people live with “the world to come” in view. They are fundamentally other-worldly, and not of this world. A worldly minded people simply cannot think in the manner of our text. In fact, such thinking is foolishness to those whose roots are not in eternity.

GLORY REVEALED IN US

“... with the glory which shall be revealed in us.” There are different views of this text presented in the various translations. The first affirms glory will be revealed “IN us” (KJV, NKJV, NIV, NIB, WEBSTERS, DUOAY-RHEIMS, YLT). Another view is reflected in the words “to us-ward,”^{ASV} “to us,”^{NASB} and “disclosed for us.”^{NJB} Yet another view places the emphasis on a future time: “in the future,”^{BBE} and “give us later.”^{NLT}

Let it be clear, the saints of God will not be mere spectators, as is suggested by some of these meager translations. Whatever justification may be presented for saying the glory will be revealed “to us,” that cannot be the intent of the words. Those who suffer are experiencing the suffering, and they will also experience the glory. If this is not the case, these words can bring us no comfort.

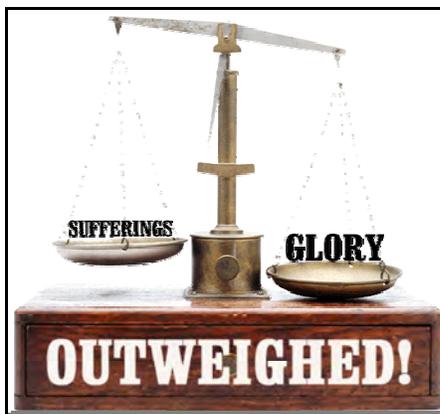

Glory Is Now In Us

These words posit that glory is presently “in us,” but has not yet been revealed. It is veiled, or hidden, by our flesh. The Scriptures confirm this is actually the case—i.e., we presently have glory. The intensity of this glory has not yet reached its pinnacle. We are presently being changed “from one degree of glory to another” by the Holy Spirit (2 Cor 3:18). Even now, when we are “reproached for the name of Christ,” “the spirit of glory and of God” rests, or resides, on us (1 Pet 4:14). In his address to elders, Peter affirmed he was “a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed” with them (1 Pet 5:1).

Glorified Bodies

Just as the glory of Jesus was hidden by His flesh, so the present and initial glory of the saints is hidden by their flesh. But it will not remain hidden. Who we really are will eventually be made known to the complete consternation of our enemies. “When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory” (Col 3:4). Then we will be clothed in a “glorious body,” free from weakness and inaccessible to our foes (Phil 3:21).

The Realm of Glory

When those in Christ are “glorified,” according to Divine appointment (Rom 8:30), they will be perfectly suited for the realm of glory. That is the realm to which God has called us (1 Pet 5:10), and to which Jesus is bringing us (Heb 2:10).

“Glory” is the realm where God is obvious to all, and there are no competitors. It is where perfection exists in all of its inhabitants, and where there is no conflict, sorrow, or regrets.

The realm of glory awaits those who now participate in Divine glory. Both the realm and the participants will soon be revealed. That revelation will be made known when the Lord Jesus is revealed in all of His glory. It is then that the people of God will become obvious. As it is written, “Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see him as He is” (1 John 3:2). The appearance of Christ is not simply visibility, but when He will be seen as He really is. In the blaze of His glory, those in whom God’s glory now resides will become “glorified,” with every vestige of the curse once and for all removed.

GLORY MUST BE CONSIDERED

When the Spirit says our present sufferings “are not worthy to be compared with the glory that will be revealed in us,” He is not saying a comparison of suffering with glory is not to be made. Rather, due consideration of glory will produce the comparison, verifying the smallness of our sufferings, and enabling us to endure them. As we ponder the coming glory that will be made known “in us,” the weight of our sufferings will diminish. This is precisely the point made in Second Corinthians 4:16-17. “Therefore we do not lose heart. Though outwardly we are wasting away, yet inwardly we are being renewed day by day. For our light and momentary troubles are achieving for us an eternal glory that far outweighs them all.”^{NIV}

Troubles and afflictions are not “light” unless they are offset in the scales of consideration by the coming glory! Whether we ponder the inner warfare of Romans Seven, or the tribulations of Romans Five, the contemplation of glory will reduce their weight, tipping the scales in our favor.

The saints must not be deprived of this perspective! Let it be clear that such deprivation takes place when the minds of believers are pushed to consider the affairs and experiences of this world. If we are basically citizens of heaven, then we need to hear about the homeland! If our lives are “hid with Christ in God” (Col 3:3), then we must hear more about them both! Too long the church has been pummeled with stones of worldly thought. The glories of the world to come, and the glory that will be revealed in us has been withheld by spiritual midgets attired with academic robes. The result of this is an anemic and confused church.

All of this may appear negative and unduly critical. However, in the light of passage before us, I have actually been very lenient in my assessment of contemporary teaching and preaching. The present condition of the church is largely the result of the diet it has been given. It has been sadly lacking in both quantity and quality. But this does not need to continue.

Men and women of God can rise up and declare the glories to come, and the marvelous benefits that await the sons and daughters of the most high God. When faith takes hold of these good words, sufferings will at once become tolerable. They will be lightened and zeal will be increased. Gladness will be enhanced, hope will flourish, and faith will grow, bringing glory to God. Boldness and confidence will also flourish.

CREATION IS WAITING

⁴¹⁹ For the earnest expectation of the creation eagerly waits for the revealing of the sons of God. The Spirit now widens our perspective of salvation, showing it to be far more extensive that unassisted reasoning can fathom. Other versions read, “For the anxious longing of the creation waits eagerly for the revealing of the sons of God,” ^{NASB} “The creation waits in eager expectation for the sons of God to be revealed,” ^{NIV} “For the creation waits with eager longing for the revealing of the children of God,” ^{NRSV} “For the strong desire of every living thing is waiting for the revelation of the sons of God,” ^{BBE} “For all creation is waiting eagerly for that future day when God will reveal who his children really are.” ^{NLT} The greatness of the text, then, should be obvious.

THE CREATION

Because sin brought a curse upon the entirety of creation, all of it is involved in redemption. The word “creation,” or “creature,” KJV refers to everything that has been created, or made. To be more specific, it is everything created by God. It does not refer to the works of men. Both the animate and the inanimate are included—the sub total of God’s creation. Scriptural phrases that connote the whole creation are as follows.

- ❑ “The heavens and the earth . . . and all the host of them” (Gen 2:1).
- ❑ “The things that are in heaven, and in the earth!” (Psa 113:6).
- ❑ “The heaven and the earth, and all that is therein. . .” (Jer 51:48).
- ❑ “. . . heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is. . .” (Ex 20:11).
- ❑ “. . . heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is . . .” (Acts 4:24).

The creation includes the firmament, or airy heavens. A immense array of stars, planets, galaxies, and other celestial bodies are included in the creation. There are waters and land, together with minerals and a vast array of stones and formations. Ponder the massive variety of vegetation, or seed bearing plants and trees. There are heavenly bodies, some of which emit light. There are creatures that live in the waters, fowls that fly in the air, creatures that walk upon the earth, others that crawl upon the earth, and still others that live underground. The immensity and variety of creation is staggering. All of this, and possibly more, are involved in this text.

and shown to have an immediate association with our own circumstance.

EAGERLY WAITING

It is the “earnest expectation” of the creation that “eagerly waits.” This involves fervent desire and anxious anticipation. It is something that cannot be quenched, and has been prompted by a form of revelation or intuition that is unknown to the sons of men. No matter how expert men become in the natural sciences, it is utterly impossible to arrive at the knowledge of this expectation apart from the Word of God. If He had not told us of this universal anticipation and longing, it could never have been known by us.

Why Mention This Expectation?

There is good reason for mentioning the earnest expectation of the whole creation. Hope has been affirmed to be a compelling incentive for the child of God. In contradiction of all human hope, our father Abraham “in hope believed” (4:18). When the Holy Spirit sheds the love of God abroad in our hearts, hope becomes dominate, and the child of God is not ashamed of it (5:5).

The Spirit has also declared the role of perseverance and patience in the life of faith. Eternal life will be given to those who “by patient continuance seek for glory, honor, and immortality*” (2:7). He has reminded us that “tribulation produces perseverance, and perseverance character, and character hope*” (5:3-5).

Now, in order to encourage us to be steadfast and unmoveable, the Spirit

The entire creation, animate and inanimate, are eagerly anticipating something. More than dependability and consistency are found in the impersonal creation. There is an ardent sense of expectancy that fills the whole creation.

EARNEST EXPECTATION

The entire creation, animate and inanimate, are eagerly anticipating something. More than dependability and consistency are found in the impersonal creation. There is an ardent sense of expectancy that fills the whole creation. This expectation will now be developed, asseverates we are surrounded by an entire creation that is patiently and hopefully enduring. For over six millennia the “whole creation” has been in a state of expectancy. Further, it has maintained that eager longing amidst the precise execution of its varied roles. Day and night, together with seasons and years, have faithfully been maintained while creation remains in a state of eager longing. What are a few short decades of our patience compared to that?

THE REVELATION OF THE SONS OF GOD

What is it that the whole creation is looking forward to and longing for? It is the revealing, or manifestation, of “the sons of God” –“who His children really are.” ^{NLT}

This certainly does not pertain to the angelic hosts, who are called “the sons of God” in the book of Job (1:6; 2:1; 38:7). The creation knows who the angels are, for they presently exercise authority over the creation. There is “the angel in charge of the waters”^{NIV} (Rev 16:5), another who has “charge of the fire” (Rev 14:18), and others who can hold back “the four winds of earth” (Rev 7:1). One angel authoritatively stood on the land and sea simultaneously (Rev 10:8-9). No, the revelation of the angels is not what the whole creation is waiting for!

The creation is waiting for the manifestation for those who are sons by “adoption”–the ones who have received the “Spirit of adoption” (8:15). These are the ones who are “led by the Spirit of God” (8:14). By virtue of their faith, they have been granted the right to “become the sons of God” (John 1:12). These are the premier people in the earth–the ones who are recognized and singularly blessed by God Almighty. The Almighty God refers to them as “my sons and daughters” (2 Cor 6:18).

Presently, these “sons and daughters” are incognito: that is, their identity is concealed. Only those within the family of God have any capacity to recognize these privileged people–and even some of them have considerable difficulty doing so. According to appearance, they seem no different than other people, even though they are “heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ” (8:17). Their sins have been forgiven, but there is no tangible proof that this is so. Their names have been written in the Lamb’s book of life, but you cannot determine this by their appearance.

It is certain that “the whole creation” is unable to detect these “sons of God.” When God created man, He placed all things under him. He made man “a little lower than the angels,” crowned him with “glory and honor,” and “set him

For over six millennia the “whole creation” has been in a state of expectancy. Further, it has maintained that eager longing amidst the precise execution of its varied roles. Day and night, together with seasons and years, have faithfully been maintained while creation remains in a state of eager longing.

over the works of His hands.” Nothing was omitted from this Divine subjugation: “For in that he put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him.” However, with the entrance of sin, an interim period was introduced during which “we see not yet all things put under him” (Heb 2:7-8). Creation is serviceable to man, but is not in thorough subjection to him (Gen 9:2-3).

Jesus Is The Pledge

The appointed subjection, however is slated for the future, and will come to pass. In the meantime, a pledge of the privilege to be vouchsafed to men is seen in the Lord Jesus Christ. Thus it is written, “But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings” (Heb 2:9-10). When He was among us, the winds and the waves obeyed Him. Trees withered at His command, and a fish delivered a coin to Peter at a word from Jesus. Now that He is exalted at the right hand of God, His reign is even more extensive, and is absolutely unquestioned.

The Sons Are Being Prepared

Presently, the Lord Jesus is preparing the sons of God to assume the rule with Him–i.e., “joint heirs.” That is one of the primary reasons for bringing them to glory. In sanctification through His blood, Jesus has set the sons aside for Divine employment. In practical sanctification, He is separating them from this world, and giving them familiarity with heavenly manners and purposes.

Christ’s intercessory ministry is not simply to get them through this world, but to prepare them for “the world to come.” It has been determined that they will be given “the kingdom” (Dan 7:18,22,27), and they are presently being readied for it. Jesus promised the Father would give His disciples a kingdom. “And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel” (Luke 22:29-30). That kingdom was not limited to the Apostles, for “the saints will judge the world,” and “angels” as well (1 Cor 6:2-3). Our walk with Jesus here is preparing us for a reign with Jesus there.

The Time of Revelation

The revelation of the sons of God will occur when the Lord Jesus Christ, the “only begotten Son,” is revealed. As it is written, “when He appears, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as He is”^{NIV} (1 John 3:2). And again, “When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory” (Col 3:4).

It is true the sons of God are revealed in their conversion. They receive a “new heart” and a “new Spirit,” and enter a process wherein they are being changed “from glory unto glory, even as by the Spirit of our God” (Ezek 36:26; 2 Cor 3:18). But this is not the revelation mentioned in our text. The evidence of the new birth is neutralized by the remaining remnants of our old nature. Too, our sonship is in the state of confirmation or verification. The work within us has not yet been completed. A modicum of honesty will confirm this to be the case in every honest and good heart.

Until the work is finished (Rom 9:28), performed (Phil 1:6), and completed

(Col 4:12), the creation eagerly waits for the unveiling of the sons of God. If the impersonal creation, void of reason, can eagerly and patiently wait, what of those who have received “the firstfruits of the Spirit?” Will not hope sustain them even more surely than it does the creation?

THE EXTENT OF THE CURSE

“²⁰ For the creation was subjected to futility, not willingly, but because of Him who subjected it in hope.” With the vaunting of an academic approach to Scripture, the extent of the fall of man became veiled. Religious leaders began to explain sin with words of worldly wisdom. They traced it to environmental influences, disease, physiological makeup, and differences in brain waves. As a result, the emphasis was changed from preaching the Gospel to counseling, therapy, work shops, and how-to-do-it literature. The result of this academic shift confirms it was all of the devil. Those subjected to this sort of leadership are abysmally ignorant of how far man fell, and how serious sin really is.

Our text stretches our hearts and minds beyond the reach of the worldly wisdom. It moves us into the area where faith alone can apprehend the real situation. A single sin, committed only one time, has sent a wake of destruction throughout the entire universe, or “worlds” (Heb 1:2; 11:3). The entirety of the realm involved in the creation of the “heavens and the earth” became defiled. Everything God created had to die because His chief creation had sinned! Now, death not only stalks and devours humanity, but the impersonal creation as well—both animate and inanimate. Let those who think lightly of sin, finding it easy to explain it away with carnal hypotheses, ponder the effects of sin—a single sin. It will assist in freeing them from the delusion that has engulfed them. Let it be clear, no measurable victory will be gained over sin until we are persuaded of its enormity. As long as sin is regarded as minor, men will be losers.

SUBJECTED TO FUTILITY

Other versions read, “the creature was made subject to vanity,” ^{KJV} “the creation was subjected to futility,” ^{NASB} “the creation was subjected to frustration,” ^{NIV} “creation had frustration imposed on it,” ^{NJB} and “everything . . . was subjected to God’s curse.” ^{NLT}

By these words, the Spirit means the whole creation is dying. “Subjected to futility” does not mean futility is possible, but that it rules. It also means that unless God does something about the situation, nothing can be done.

Contrary to the purported finding of scientists, new things are not being created, but all things are in a constant state of deterioration. Nothing in the realm of nature can remain in a made for him, and over which he was intended to have dominion. We learn from this that apart from mankind, creation has no real purpose. Not only, therefore, has man been appointed to death, he lives in a realm of death.

Solomon’s Observation

Solomon was granted unparalleled wisdom “under the sun” (Eccl 1:3,9,14; 2:11,17-22). In his consideration of the state of things, he saw “all is vanity,” or pointless (Eccl 1:2,14; 2:17; 3:19;12:9). He enunciated the truth of our text, except without sounding the note of hope.

NOT WILLINGLY

Other versions read, “not of its own will,” ^{NASB} “not by its own choice,” ^{NIV} “not by its own desire,” ^{BBE} and “against its will.” ^{NLT}

Contrary to the purported finding of scientists, new things are not being created, but all things are in a constant state of deterioration. Nothing in the realm of nature can remain in a continuous and permanent state. That is one of the aspects of death, or mortality.

The expression “not willingly” is intended to show at least two things. First, the imposition of mortality upon the whole of creation was not owing to its own disobedience or obstinance. It was because of man’s sin. Second, there was no desire on the part of creation for mortality. It had no inclination toward this condition. Rather, it was contrary to everything about creation.

We do not do well to take this text and go about saying there is some form of intelligence in the creation like that of man. No text of Scripture ever insinuates that creation bears the image of God, which image includes both choice and reason. There is, however, some form of intuitive knowledge resident in creation that makes death repugnant to it. Just as brute creatures have intuition that enables them to swim, so there is something innate continuous and permanent state. That is one of the aspects of death, or mortality.

This state of mortality was imposed upon the creation. It had no choice in the matter. Man’s transgression thus infected the whole of the environment that was within the whole creation that makes it disdain death and long for freedom from it.

It is my understanding that the purpose of this text is to show the utter unreasonableness of NOT living by hope. It is also to confirm to the saints that they are part of a vast and remarkably large chorus of hope that is rising from the earth.

THE REASON BEHIND THE FUTILITY

“ . . . but because of Him who subjected it in hope.” Other versions read, “but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope,” ^{KJV} “but because of Him who subjected it, in hope,” ^{NASB} “but by the will of the One who subjected it, in hope,” ^{NIV} and “but for the purposes of Him who imposed it.” ^{NJB}

God does nothing without a cause (Ezek 14:23). The imposition of futility upon the whole creation is no exception to that rule. The meaning of this verse is that God’s purpose was being served in the infliction of mortality upon the creation. It was not something the creation chose, as man did when he sinned. Rather, it was something God chose.

There is a remarkable truth to be seen here. While creation groans under the weight of mortality, it looks forward to the manifestation of the sons of God. Hope, therefore, grows and flourishes in the midst of unfavorable and difficult circumstances!

The creation functions in strict conformity to the will of God, never rebelling or straying from its appointed purpose. Faithfully “the sun rises and the sun sets” (Eccl 1:5), “which is like a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, And rejoices like a strong man to run its race. Its rising is from one end of heaven, And its circuit to the other end; And there is nothing hidden from its heat” NKJV (Psa 19:5-6). It is showing an example of obedience while waiting for the revelation of the sons of God.

Nature effectively speaks to us about the role of hope, and how it enables us to survive the difficulties of life. A living hope exercises a great power upon us!

CREATION TO BE RELEASED

“²¹ Because the creation itself also will be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.” This verse proclaims that redemption reaches as far as the curse, praise the Lord! It registers an even greater impact that transgression. As it is written, “But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound” (Rom 5:20).

THE CREATION ITSELF

The creation, or “the things that are made” (Heb 12:27), was contaminated by the sin of man, and thus corruption was imposed upon it. This is seen in the Lord’s word to Adam: “cursed is the ground for thy sake” (Gen 3:17). Only the ground is mentioned in Genesis because of the nature of the curse of man: “in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return” (3:17b-19).

Our text broadens the matter to include the entirety of creation. This agrees with the assessment of David, the Prophets, Jesus, and the Apostles. “Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed” ^{DAVID} (Psa 102:25-26). “Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath: for the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment” ^{ISAIAH} (Isa 51:6). “Heaven and heat?” ^{PETER} (2 Pet 3:10-12).

Corruption consists of two things. First, deterioration and death have been passed upon all creation. It is, in a sense, winding down. Second, there will be an abrupt termination to everything that is corrupt—a consumption by fire. As it is written, “But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men” (2 Pet 3:7).

This verse proclaims that redemption reaches as far as the curse, praise the Lord! It registers an even greater impact that transgression. As it is written, “But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound”

“The creation itself” refers to the heavens “with all their host,” the earth “and all things therein,” and the sea “and all that is therein” (Neh 9:6). All of them have been infected with the curse, and all will be affected by “the regeneration” (Matt 19:28).

DELIVERED FROM BONDAGE

The Prophets and the Apostles refer to this deliverance as the new heavens and the new earth. Through Isaiah, God said, “For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind” (Isa 65:17). And again, “For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me” (Isa 65:22). Peter affirmed, “Nevertheless we, earth shall pass away” ^{JESUS} (Mk 13:31). “The heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up. . . the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness” (2 Pet 3:13). From Patmos, John said “I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea” (Rev 21:1). This is nothing less than deliverance from the bondage of corruption, and the whole creation is waiting and longing for it.

No More Hostilities In Creation

Because hostility and friction are aspects of death, they will all be eliminated when creation is liberated from the “bondage of corruption.” While they do not dwell upon this, the Prophets give us a hint of what will be involved. “The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice’ den” (Isa 11:6-8). And again, “The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock: and dust shall be the serpent’s meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the LORD” (Isa 65:25).

Ezekiel wrote, “And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land: and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods” (Ezek 34:25).

Hosea wrote, “And in that day will I make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven, and with the creeping things of the ground: and I will break the bow and the sword and the battle out of the earth, and will make them to lie down safely” (Hos 2:18).

Creation Not Annihilated

We learn from this that the destruction or passing of the heavens and the earth does not mean they will be annihilated or eradicated. Rather, they will be “changed.” As it is written, “Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed” (Psa 102:25-26). They will be renovated, with all corruption burned away in the baptism of fire. They will pass away as we presently know them, and will be invested with a new appearance and manner. It will be much like our bodies, which are part of the natural order. They will be “changed” (1 Cor 15:52). As it is written, “For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality” (1 Cor 15:53). Again, it is said of the body, “It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body” (1 Cor 15:42-44). A CHANGE! That is what will

In the maintenance of spiritual life, distraction is lethal, and can even remove us from the Source of our life. We do well not to pursue an understanding of things the Spirit does not expound. After all, occur in the creation—from corruption to incorruption, and bondage to liberty!

Care Must Be Taken

Care must be taken not to take these texts and run about wildly in a theological maze of confusion. These passages are also related to the New Covenant, in which a degree of peace is realized that was never before experienced (Isa 11:9-10; 66:12; Ezek 35:29; Hos 2:23). This by no means indicates they have no applicability to “the world to come.” It does, however, serve to neutralize carnal curiosity about the ages to come.

There is no justification for saying ones pets will be in heaven. In fact, there is a certain absurdity to the whole notion, seeing we will be with the Creator of all things. That impersonal associations would remain dominate under such a condition is an absurdity unworthy of embracing.

The liberation of creation is nowhere associated with a resurrection. That applies to humanity alone. We should be willing to let the matter rest there.

Curious Details Are Omitted

For those with a compelling desire to pursue the nature of creation’s release from the bondage of corruption, this inspired passage will offer little satisfaction. Details about creation’s coming freedom are not approached from an academic point of view. In fact, it only has relevance because it is related to the glorification of the saints of God.

In my judgment, all of this is the deliberate work of the Holy Spirit, who is directing us in HOW to think about these things. In the maintenance of spiritual life, distraction is lethal, and can even remove us from the Source of our life. We do well not to pursue an understanding of things the Spirit does not expound. After all, “The secret things belong unto the LORD our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever” (Deut 29:29).

GLORIOUS LIBERTY

“...the glorious liberty of the children of God.” Creation’s deliverance from the bondage of corruption will be “INTO” the glorious liberty of God’s children. From bondage to liberty, and corruption to glory!

Other versions refer to this liberty as “the freedom of the glory,”^{NASB} “the glorious freedom,”^{NIV} “the liberty of the glory,”^{ASV} “the liberty of the glory.”^{YLT} This, then, is a freedom or liberty produced by glory. It is an aspect of glorification. The unspeakable freedom that will attend the total removal of mortality transcends our fondest imagination. The sentence of death was consignment to bondage! Presently, the saints have a heavenly treasure in an “earthen vessel,” or jar of clay (2 Cor 4:7). This frail vessel is responsible for weakness, ignorance, and conflict. It causes frustration, sorrow, and danger.

Because of it we must “put on the whole armor of God” (Eph 6:10), “fight the good fight of faith” (1 Tim 6:12), and “resist the devil” (James 4:7). All of this will be eliminated when we leave this “vile body” (Phil 3:21).

Liberty of Expression

However, there is an even greater liberty that will be experienced when we enter into our new body, our “house from heaven” (2 Cor 5:1-5). Then we will enjoy unexcelled liberty in expression and movement. No more souls will be “under the altar” crying out for vengeance (Rev 6:9-11). There will be no more “spirits in prison,” held in an interim state until the resurrection of the dead (1 Pet 3:19). Glory will bring thorough freedom. Instantly, it will propel the redeemed above even the angelic hosts, and they will be given “the world to come,” to govern and manage it with Jesus (Heb 2:5-9).

At the time the sons of God are revealed and obtain the freedom that comes from being glorified, the whole creation will also be effected by that glory. That freedom cannot come until the sons of God are revealed, or appear with Christ in glory. Glory itself will bring about this freedom from corruption and decay.

Do Not Think Lightly of Sin

The liberation of the whole creation is God’s compensation for enduring the judgment of corruption because of man. Should we choose to think lightly of sin, or excuse it as though it was a small thing, the consideration of creation should cause us to cease such foolishness. The universe is winding down because of man’s sin! Blights attack plants and vegetation because of sin. Wild and uncontrollable beasts exist and prey upon one another because of the sin of man. All of this was a caused by one sin, committed in a single act of disobedience! The knowledge of this circumstance will work sobriety within the believing heart. A certain revulsion for sin will be developed.

ALL CREATION IS INVOLVED

“²² For we know that the whole creation groans and labors with birth pangs together until now.” There is an aggressiveness depicted in this verse. Creation is like an expectant mother in the throes of her final birth pains. There is nothing casual or passive about this travail.

UNIVERSAL GROANING

Everything that is made is involved: “the whole creation.” There is an intensity in the groans: “labors with birth pangs.” For six thousand years this groaning has continued without interruption or relief: “until now.” The groaning is found in every place on earth, and in the most distant galaxy as well. If you have an ear, you can hear the discontent of nature. It is not satisfied with its present condition. It cannot adjust, so to speak, to death, for God subjected it “in hope.”

HARMONIOUS BIRTH PANGS

The groaning of “the whole creation” is like a harmonious chorus rising into the heavens. Everything that has been made is moving toward an appointed end. For “the whole creation,” the end will be liberating and glorious. No aspect of creation will be excluded from the coming liberty. One ancient poem says,

That God which ever lives and loves,
One God, one law, one element,

And one far-off Divine event,
To which the whole creation moves.
In Memoriam

The idea is that “the whole creation” is moving toward a Divinely appointed time. I do not know the extent to which creation is aware of the coming liberty.

serviceable nature was to Jesus. It is as though it welcomed a beneficent Ruler, submitting to Him.

God has promised, “Behold, I make all things new” (Rev 21:5). In some marvelous way, the whole creation knows this, and is yearning for it to occur. The world has had one new start following the flood. As it is written of the flood, “Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished” (2 Pet 3:6). It was, so to speak, baptized with water, and again appeared after the floods receded without the contamination of sinful multitudes. It will yet be baptized with fire, after which it will emerge thoroughly cleansed.

I do not know the extent to which creation is aware of the coming liberty. But it is aware enough to groan, expect, and look! Every aspect of the creation joins in the chorus, groaning in harmonious expectancy.

But it is aware enough to groan, expect, and look! Every aspect of the creation joins in the chorus, groaning in harmonious expectancy. Let no child of God live beneath the privileges of the impersonal creation. Let expectation be found within the church, which has been slated to spearhead the coming glory.

Methinks creation received a foretaste of the coming liberty when the Son of God entered into its domain. He commanded blustering storms, stilled raging waves, and walked on water. How

Our text associates this liberation with the revelation of the children of God. Nature is not an end of itself. It was made for man, and not man for it. The whole creation is now travelling in birth until the sons of God are made known—until they are glorified together with Christ, as God has predestined (Rom 8:29-30). Even the creation, in some way, knows the sons of God were not made for this world. It knows they are concealed by time and circumstance, and yet fervently and consistently longs for their full exposure and glorification. It is uncomely for the sons themselves to be less aware of this.

However marvelous all of this may seem, the point being made by the Holy Spirit is not the liberation of creation, but the glorification and manifestation of the sons of God. He is showing us that we ought not to balk at waiting and longing for the time when we will suffer no longer. We should patiently and joyfully endure the hardships of life as we wait for our coming liberty. After informing us of the involvement of the whole creation in redemption, we now return to the saints themselves. The Spirit takes care not to leave us marveling at the creation, as though it as the center of God's purpose.

FELLOWSHIP IN GROANING

“²³ Not only that, but we also who have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, eagerly waiting for the adoption, the redemption of our body.” The phrase “not only that” is translated in a variety of ways in other translations. “And not only they,” ^{KJV} “and not only this,” ^{NASB} “not only so,” ^{NIV} “and not only the creation” ^{NRSV} It is as though the Spirit said, The glory to which the saints have been appointed is so marvelous that even the impersonal creation, with neither mind nor reason as we have, are eagerly anticipating it. How much more, then, will the anticipation of that glory be found in those for whom it has been prepared.

WE ALSO and WE OURSELVES

Here again, Paul confirms he is speaking for all of the people of God. Romans seven and eight are not an autobiography of Paul, but an index to the experience and hope of every person who is in Christ Jesus. By saying “we also,” he means the saints join in the travailing chorus of creation. By saying “we ourselves,” he means this is no mechanical, or even intuitive groaning. Our groaning is deeper than that of creation because we have been given to more fully see the cause, necessity, and extent of the coming glory and its attending liberty.

THE FIRSTFRUITS OF THE SPIRIT

Here, the entirety of what we have received in Christ Jesus is called “the firstfruits of the Spirit.” This is a pregnant phrase that accurately depicts what we presently possess, while accentuating that the bulk of our salvation is yet to come. What we now have is to salvation what the small gleanings of Ruth were to the full harvest of the fields of Boaz. It is written that she “gleaned AFTER the reapers,” who had gathered the bulk of the harvest (Ruth 2:3). As with us, the gleanings left for Ruth were not left to happenstance. It is written that Boaz said to the reapers, “Let her glean even among the sheaves, and reproach her not: and let fall also some of the handfuls of purpose for her, and leave them, that she may glean them, and rebuke her not” (Ruth 2:15-16). So it is with the graces we enjoy in Christ Jesus. They have been deliberately left for us to gather.

Some consider that the Holy Spirit Himself is the “firstfruit” of the land. A few versions reflect this view: “having the first-fruit of the Spirit,” ^{YLT} “we have the Holy Spirit within us as a foretaste.” ^{NLT} There is certainly a sense in which this is true. Thus we read of the “earnest,” or pledge, “of the Spirit” (2 Cor 1:22), who is “the earnest of our inheritance” (Eph 1:4). Yet, I do not believe that to be the meaning of the text. The “firstfruits” are given to us by the Holy Spirit, and are thus said to be “of the Spirit.”

The Scriptures affirm the active role of the Spirit in our experience of the things blessings of God.

□ “Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance” are declared to be “the fruit of the Spirit”—what He gives to us, or causes to develop within us (Gal 5:22-23).

□ The “love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit” (Rom 5:5).

□ The essential attributes of the Kingdom of God, “righteous, peace and joy” are said to be “in the Holy Spirit” (Rom 14:17).

□ We also “abound in hope by the power of the Holy Spirit” (Rom 15:13).

□ The inner strength we receive in order that Christ can dwell without our hearts by faith comes “by His Spirit” (Eph 3:16).

□ Our washing, sanctification, and justification are accomplished “by the Spirit of our God” (1 Cor 6:11).

□ Our continued change from one stage of glory to another is accomplished “by the Spirit of the Lord” (2 Cor 3:18).

A few drops of the coming deluge of glory have been given to us by the Holy Spirit. That heavenly sampling has whetted our appetite for the whole of our inheritance. What the Spirit gives us now is like the “one cluster of grapes” from Eschol to the luscious vineyards of Canaan (Num 13:23-24). It is elsewhere referred to in these words: “those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come” (Heb 6:4-5). All of these blessed realities are introduced to us in salvation, but we by no means have experienced the whole of them.

GROANING WITHIN OURSELVES

The “sufferings of this present time,” combined with the sampling of our inheritance, produces deep groaning “within ourselves.” It is the groan of expectation, and it has made us discontent with “this present evil world.” We join the groaning chorus of all creation, lifting up the song of expectancy, and expressing our discontent with our present surroundings and abilities. We have freedom, but not complete freedom. We remain shackled to a body that cannot inherit the kingdom of God 1 Cor 15:50). Just as the Canaanite was in the promised land when Abraham entered it (Gen 12:6), so the remnants of our old nature remain with us while we are in the world.

Our groaning is not outward, erupting through murmuring lips. It is “within ourselves,” where the fight of faith is waged. Even as the birth pains of an expectant mother are at first known only to her, so these groans are known only to those who have them. As we will find, they involve an intense longing for liberation from this house of clay, which is coupled with a firm persuasion that our longing will be realized.

WAITING FOR THE ADOPTION

“ . . . waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body.” This groaning is also mentioned in the Second chapter of Second Corinthians. There it also has to do with our bodies. “For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven: if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit” (5:1-5).

We have already received the “Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba Father!” (8:15). However, we have not yet been openly revealed as sons: “it doth not yet APPEAR what we shall be” (1 John 3:1-2). What we are within will yet be beheld from without, and it will happen when the Lord Himself appears.

We have freedom, but not complete freedom. We remain shackled to a body that cannot inherit the kingdom of God 1 Cor 15:50). Just as the Canaanite was in the promised land when Abraham entered it (Gen 12:6), so the remnants of our old nature remain with us while we are in the world.

Our redemption is not complete until we occupy our new bodies. They are houses, as compared to our present bodies that are frail tents. Our desire is not simply to get out of these bodies. That is the meaning of “nor for that we would be unclothed.” We yearn to inhabit our new bodies, which are adapted for glory, and through which no adversary can approach us. Our present bodies are a weight to us. They burden us because of the vileness that is found in them, as well as their incapacity for the work of the Lord. We must “keep under them,” never allowing them to govern our actions. Rather, as we do to an enemy, we must bring them into “subjection” (1 Cor 9:27).

Notice that “the adoption” is related to the redemption of our body—or the change that will occur at the coming of the Lord. It is then that our present “vile bodies” will be changed to be like the “glorious body” of our Lord (Phil 3:20-21). Until then, neither adoption nor redemption is complete. If this was not the case, neither hope nor groaning would be in order.

There is a “salvation ready to be revealed” (1 Pet 1:5), and “the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 1:13). That is the time when our adoption will be fully ratified, and the fulness of the curse removed. In patience we are waiting for that day, when what we presently have embraced by faith will be received in all of its glorious fulness.

The change of our bodies is nothing less than “the redemption of the purchased possession” (Eph 1:14b). Our bodies have been “bought,” and do not belong to us (1 Cor 6:19-20). They are, in fact, “the members of Christ,” belonging to Him (1 Cor 6:15). Our adoption will be complete when those bodies are changed. Then Christ’s mediation, as we presently know it, will end. Struggle and disappointment will end, and there will be no more weakness or danger. There will be no more sin in our members, and nothing that can house “the law of sin.” How sweet to ponder this coming reality!

THE CRITICAL ROLE OF HOPE

“²⁴ For we were saved in this hope, but hope that is seen is not hope; for why does one still hope for what he sees?²⁵ But if we hope for what we do not see, we eagerly wait for it with perseverance.” This is the Divine explanation for why we are patiently waiting for “the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body” – “FOR.”

SAVED BY HOPE

Hope plays a vital and indispensable role in our salvation, which cannot be finalized without it. When we were born again, it was in order “to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead” (1 Pet 1:3). A “living hope” is a dominating one—one that is fed by the “power of the resurrection” of our Lord Jesus Christ (Phil 3:10). Having “access into this grace wherein we stand,” faith moves us to “rejoice in hope of the glory of God” (Rom 5:2): that is, rejoice in the anticipation of participating in that “glory.” Even the Scriptures were written to sustain this hope, keeping it vibrant and alive in the midst of tribulation.

Hope is one of the three dominate graces: “faith, hope, and love” (1 Cor 13:13). It is the soul’s anchor that keeps the believer’s soul from drifting from its appearing of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ” (Tit 2:12-13).

We cannot be saved without hope! We have not merely entered into a ship that is drifting to glory. We ourselves are involved in the process of salvation—and salvation is a process in which change and conformity to Christ’s image is taking place (2 Cor 3:18; Rom 3:29-30). The remarkable absence of a dominating hope heaven (1 Pet 1:4). You cannot feed hope by speaking of things in this world. It will not grow and flourish with practical tips on how to live in this present evil world. Hope withers and dies in a realm that is saturated with “here and now” thinking and speaking.

If hope is to flourish, it must hear about the country faith has moved us to seek (Heb 11:14). Word of the homeland must be heard, and the “powers of the world to come” must be experienced (Heb 6:5). It is no wonder that hopelessness and despair dominate the hearts of those who never hear about heaven, their inheritance, their reign with Christ, and “the ages to come.”

Hope has to do with the future, and it empowers you for the present. Hope knows what is coming, and in view of that knowledge makes appropriate preparation. We do not hope for what we already have: “hope that is seen is not hope; for why does one still hope for what he sees?” Although faith brings benefits to us here and now, it will not allow us to settle down there.

EAGERLY WAITING WITH PERSEVERANCE

Hope chooses to live now in the prospect of the future glory, when what we eagerly long for will be brought to us. It is willing to wait for the glory that is to be revealed, and to do so under great stress and trial. It can compel a sufferer like Job to shout, “If a man dies, shall he live again? All the days of my hard service I will wait, Till my change comes” (Job 14:14). And again, “And after my skin is destroyed, this I know, That in my flesh I shall see God, Whom I shall see for myself, And my eyes shall behold, and not another. How my heart yearns within me!” (Job 19:26-27).

eternal moorings (Heb 6:19). There is no point in the life of faith where hope is not required. As long as faith exists, hope must exist with it.

Hope “saves” us in the sense of sanctification, not of justification. Hope does not remove our sins, deliver us from the power of darkness, or translate us into the kingdom of Christ. It does not prompt the new birth, wash us, or write our names in the book of life.

Hope “saves” us in the sense of working out our own salvation “with fear and trembling” AFTER we have been born again (Phil 2:12). It moves us to “go on to perfection,” growing up into Christ in all things (Heb 6:1-3; Eph 4:15). It “saves” us by compelling us to purify ourselves, even as Jesus is pure (1 John 3:1-3). Those who are driven by hope avail themselves of the grace of God that teaches them “that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in the present age, looking for the blessed hope and glorious in much of the contemporary church is cause for alarm. Legion is the name of those who argue and dispute about various facets of the Lord’s return, yet are not hoping and longing for it! You cannot be saved by discussing the return of Christ! You must eagerly long for it, for that alone will empower you to endure all things!

THE NATURE OF HOPE

Hope has to do with the future, and it empowers you for the present. Hope knows what is coming, and in view of that knowledge makes appropriate preparation. We do not hope for what we already have: “hope that is seen is not hope; for why does one still hope for what he sees?” Although faith brings benefits to us here and now, it will not allow us to settle down there.

Hope is an aspect of faith, having to do with things unseen. It has been convinced of the truth of the Gospel, particularly the good news of an inheritance that is reserved for us in

Where there is no dominating hope, there will be no perseverance! If men are not “eagerly waiting,” they will not be “steadfast and unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord” (1 Cor 15:58). Those who speak to us about being faithful, yet withhold food for hope, have only hindered us, they have not helped us. Hope moves men to eagerly wait and persevere because it is sure of a blessed future, and anxious for the day when they will be liberated from corruption. Then everything inhibitive will abruptly end, and no enemy will be in the land! The surety of it all is most comforting.

HELP IN OUR IGNORANCE

“²⁶ Likewise the Spirit also helps in our weaknesses. For we do not know what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit Himself makes intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.”

Having established the essentiality of hope, the Spirit will now confirm the need of a Helper from heaven. Required perseverance cannot be accomplished in self-strength. However cultured and capable the individual may appear to be, he is not, in himself, equal to the rigors of living by faith. I do not believe this has registered upon the souls of average churchmen. They appear to rely too much on the flesh, and overestimate the power of nature. While men are made in the image of God, they cannot fulfill His will apart from Him. We need help, and the good news is that help has been provided!

THE DIVINE HELPER

What a humble ministry for Deity-helping men! The Psalms declare God dwells on high and "humbles Himself to behold The things that are in the heavens and in the earth? He raises the poor out of the dust, and lifts the needy out of the ash heap, that He may seat him with princes; with the princes of His people" (Psa 113:6-8). Now the Spirit will declare something of what is involved in lifting the needy out of the ash heap and setting them with the princes of God's people. To speak more from a New Covenant point of view, this is how God takes men from being the enemies of God to the point where they will reign forever with Christ.

"Likewise"

"Likewise the Spirit also helps..."

Other versions read, "And in the same way the Spirit also helps."^{NASB} "And as well as this, the Spirit too comes to help us."^{NJB} The idea is this: we are aided in our journey to glory by a living hope from God. In the same way, we are also assisted by the personal ministry of the Holy Spirit, who is given to us.

The ministry of the Holy Spirit is like unto the ministry of hope. What He does within us blends perfectly with the function of hope. His ministry is never out of harmony with the work of preparing men for the coming of the Lord and glory.

"Helps"

The word "helps" is an unusually strong word. In the flesh, one might equate this word with a sort of casual involvement with those in need. But there is nothing casual about this word. The Spirit helps us by assuming part of the burden, taking it upon Himself. He goes under the burden, and lifts us up, making us equal to the challenges of life. He "helps" us like the good Samaritan helped the man who fell among thieves, binding up our wounds, pouring in the oil and wine of sweet comforts, and taking care of us (Luke 10:34). He carries us to the house of comforts, where our vision is restored and our faith renewed. We could not safely negotiate to glory without the ministry of the Holy Spirit! If it were not for the marvelous help of the Holy Spirit, our groanings would get the best of us.

He "helps" us like the good Samaritan helped the man who fell among thieves, binding up our wounds, pouring in the oil and wine of sweet comforts, and taking care of us (Luke 10:34). He carries us to the house of comforts, where our vision is restored and our faith renewed.

OUR WEAKNESSES

The KJV reads "infirmities." Some versions use the word in the singular: "weakness."^{NASB,NIV,NRSV} This is not correct, however, for the word is in the plural. Like the high priest of old, we are "compassed with infirmity," or are "subject to weakness"^{NKJV} (Heb 5:2). That weakness takes many forms, and thus is used in the plural form in our text. This is weakness traced back to the presence of the "law of sin" that is resident in our bodies. The "old man" has neutralized our strength. We will see this particularly touches upon our abilities of expression.

Some would lead us to believe the saved have no weaknesses, but that is just an imagination foisted upon men by the devil. Those who admit to no weakness have not told the truth, and are deceived. The conflict of Romans seven loudly announced that we have weaknesses, and cannot rid ourselves of them.

Because of his understanding of the manner of the Kingdom, and of the very present help of the Holy Spirit, Paul gloried in his infirmities. He knew the power of Christ is devoted to those who know and acknowledge their weaknesses (2 Cor 12:5-9). The redeemed have weaknesses they cannot dismiss from their persons. There is no human discipline or procedure that can rid us of these weaknesses. That is precisely why the Holy Spirit helps us in them. One key weakness is now mentioned.

HANDICAPPED!

"For we do not know what we should pray for as we ought."

The NIV reads, "We do not know what we ought to pray for." It is not that we do not know that we SHOULD pray, but we do not know HOW to pray, or what we should pray for. The idea is that there are resources we need—Divine supplies and graces that are required to persevere and come at last into the glory. Our infirm condition, however, has produced this circumstance: "we do not know how to pray properly"^{NJB} concerning these matters.

To put the subject in a proper context, those in Christ feel the weight of mortality. They have a contrary law within them, competing with the law of their mind, and lusting against the Spirit as well (Gal 5:17). They find thoughts arising in their minds that they have neither desired nor cultured, and it grieves them deeply. Yet, they are surrounded by ignorance when it comes to praying about this condition. What resources do they need? How can they ask for them? When do they need them? How can they appropriate them? A few conscious moments in the battlefield will cause this confession: "I am not 'not able to make prayer to God in the right way.'"^{BBE}

Let it be clear, there is no course of study that can teach men to pray properly—no catechism that will make this text obsolete. This is a statement of the truth. It is not a mere possibility, but a very real condition. It is in the framework of this situation that the Holy Spirit goes to work in our behalf. The revelation of this circumstance is not to be doubted or debated, but believed. Faith will enable us to rely on this wonderful ministry.

THE SPIRIT'S INTERCESSION

"The Spirit Himself makes intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." This is not something done in us, but FOR us. It is not an intercession the Spirit enables us to make, but one He accomplished FOR us. Other versions read, "the Spirit Himself intercedes for us with groanings too deep for words," NASB "the Spirit himself intercedes for us with groans that words cannot express," NIV "that very Spirit intercedes with sighs too deep for words," NRSV "the Spirit himself asketh for us with unspeakable groanings," DOUAY-RHEIMS "but the Spirit puts our desires into words which are not in our power to say," BBE "But the Holy Spirit prays for us with groanings that cannot be expressed in words." NLT and "the Spirit personally makes our petitions for us in groans that cannot be put into words." NJB

Prays for Us

Benefits are not always received because of our prayers. Sometimes they come to us because of the prayers, or intercessions, of the Holy Spirit. Your needs are NOT totally dependent upon your prayers, for your needs transcend your abilities of expression. Also, there are needs that cannot be expressed in human language—any language. There are "groans" that are very real, yet cannot be explained or even articulated by men to God. These are matters that require the intervention of the Holy Spirit.

Note, the Spirit does not pray through us, but FOR us. He does not enable us to pray, but prays FOR us. This does not refer to a prayer language for men, uttered through their mouths, and apart from their understanding. The language of the text does not allow for such an interpretation, which is purely the tradition of men.

Unutterable Groanings

The prayers of reference burst forth in us "in groanings," not words. The groanings themselves are the work of the Spirit. He stirs within the saints deep and unutterable desires and longings. They are so deep the mind cannot contain them. They erupt in restlessness, discontent, and a sense of good things to come. More specifically, these are groanings of travail, or the expectation of good things to come. When attempting to explain such things, we sound like mere babblers.

These deep groanings are the expression of very real longings and needs. Yet, we cannot handle them with our understanding. They are too profound for us. Therefore, the Spirit takes these groanings and makes intercession FOR us. His intercessions exceed the capabilities of our minds. We are not capable of uttering them in speech. They must be uttered FOR us.

The Spirit Himself

Our text states the matter very carefully. In this case, it is not the spirit of man that prays. It is not an extraordinary ability that is given to the saved. They are not empowered to speak their prayers in special words. From our view, these intercessions are unutterable. It is "the Spirit HIMSELF" who makes them. He is devoted to our benefit, and always works to assist us in our weaknesses—even to the point of praying for us when we cannot properly pray for ourselves. Let your faith take hold of this marvelous reality. This is a very wonderful provision. But it is more than wonderful, It is essential!

EFFECTIVE INTERCESSION

"²⁷ Now He who searches the hearts knows what the mind of the Spirit is, because He makes intercession for the saints according to the will of God." The Spirit now clarifies for us that the intercessions of reference have been made by the Spirit Himself, and not by us. Further, their effectiveness is traced to the Spirit, not human expression.

At this point we will see that although we cannot understand the groanings that erupt from us, yet they are important. Even though we cannot articulate them, they are expressing very real needs that must be answered by God. Among other things, this confirms the relative poverty of the human intellect. Here is something we need—something for which prayer must be made. Yet, we are totally incapable of lifting a prayer to God about the matter.

THE SEARCHER OF OUR HEARTS

"He who searches the hearts . . ." This is referring to the Father Himself. It is God who "searches the heart." David said to his son Solomon, "the LORD searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts" (1 Chron 28:9). Through Jeremiah the prophet the Lord affirmed, "I the LORD search the heart" (Jer 17:10). Jesus said it this way, "your Father knoweth what things ye have need of" (Matt 6:8).

Frequently, the fact that God searches the hearts is a solemn warning to those whose hearts are impure and defiled. In this sense He "tries" the hearts of men (1 Chron 29:17; Psa 7:9; 44:21; Prov 17:3; Jer 11:20). This is NOT, however, the emphasis of this text.

Here, the Lord is searching the heart for the groanings produced by the Holy Spirit—deep spiritual longings that He desires to fulfill. This aspect of Divine searching is partially revealed in the words of Hanani the seer to king Asa: “For the eyes of the LORD move to and fro throughout the earth that He may strongly support those whose heart is completely His”^{NASB} (2 Chron 16:9). Such a heart has profound longings which cannot be articulated by those possessing them. Thus, the Lord has made provision for the gratification of such a heart.

The truth of the matter is that God is looking for a reason to bless His people! He looks deep within the heart, listening, as it were, for groanings that have been produced by His Holy Spirit. These are groanings brought about because the Spirit was not quenched or grieved. The individual has been easily led by the Spirit in the subduing of the deeds of the body, and thus profound spiritual groanings have been stimulated within. There is a strong desire to gain the blessing of the Lord that goes far beyond the believer’s ability of expression.

David, the “the sweet psalmist of Israel” (2 Sam 23:1), was a man ahead of his time. Many of his prayers reflected the spirit of the New Covenant. Here is one of them that unveils something of the magnitude of our text. “Lord, all my desire is before thee; and my groaning is not hid from thee” (Psa 38:9). Such a person has nothing to fear concerning the Lord’s searching of the heart.

For those who live by faith and walk in the Spirit, their heart is the repository for spiritual groanings that will be a source of blessing and benefit. The believer can only sense them, and is capable of taking them no further than that. But these groanings are not only real, they are a sort of call to God for necessary advantages. God is looking for these groanings, searching the heart to find them.

When He does, He will rely on the Holy Spirit to properly interpret them and make a petition for their fulfillment. You must believe that God is devoted to your salvation, else He would never have made such a marvelous provision!

THE MIND OF THE SPIRIT

“... knows what is the mind of the Spirit is . . .” There is perfect harmony between the Father and the Holy Spirit. Their thoughts never are in conflict, and there is perfect accord between them. That is not merely a theological position, it is a view that brings great solace to the struggling believer. It is especially relevant in this passage because the Spirit is speaking to

God “FOR us.”

Notice the wording of this text. It is significant. The Lord searches the hearts, but knows the mind of the Spirit. It does not say the Lord searches the hearts and knows what is in man—although that is certainly true. The idea is that the Holy Spirit is within the heart of the saints—in the same place where the groaning is found. As it is written, “And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father” (Gal 4:6).

It is as though the Father immediately looks to the Spirit to intercede for us. From another perspective, the Spirit is eager to speak to the Father about the groaning He has stimulated within us. He wants our deep spiritual needs to be met, and the Father wants to meet them.

Some do not think of the Spirit as having a mind. They think of Him in a heathenistic way—as a power, an influence, or an overpowering force, like electricity. Such views of the Spirit may be popular with men, but they are debilitating to the saints. The Holy Spirit is powerful, to be sure. That power, however, is channeled to the betterment of believers, giving them the advantage in the good fight of faith.

There is a certain manner in which the Spirit thinks, and a way in which He expresses Himself. His intercessions are made in strict accord with HIS mind, not that of man. While men may choose to be comfortable with clumsy expressions, God is not. If He is to give you what you need, there must be an spiritually intelligent presentation of that need. The Holy Spirit has been provided to make such intercessions. Every believer has good reason to be thankful for this.

INTERCESSION ACCORDING TO GOD’S WILL

“... because He makes intercession for the saints according to the will of God.”

When the Holy Spirit makes intercession for us, it is in strict accord with “the will of God.” It is never in order for men to seek to impose their will upon the Lord, approaching Him as though He was their servant. There is a Divine purpose that is being served in salvation as well as human need. Let it be clear that the primary purpose is NOT to meet human need, but to fulfill Divine purpose. As simplistic as that may appear, it is not commonly acknowledged.

The “will of God” is the driving force behind all of His workings. Jesus taught us to pray, “Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven” (Matt 6:10). When struggling with the temptation to withdraw from drinking the bitter cup God placed before Him, Jesus Himself prayed, “Thy will be done” (Matt 26:42). The Holy Spirit makes intercession in strict accord with that will. It is a predetermined will expressed as “the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord” (Eph 3:11). Both the groanings the Spirit produces and the intercessions He makes ready men for participation in that purpose.

Those who seek their own will and lack the strong inner groanings mentioned in our text are in a serious situation. I speak of those who lack spiritual appetites and longings—who have no driving compulsion to put away the flesh and all competing influences. Their condition betrays they have quenched the Spirit, and grieved Him in His holy work. Strong spiritual appetites are lacking where the things of God are not eagerly sought.

What is more, effective intercessions are not being made by the Holy Spirit for such people, for He interprets the groanings to the Father, who is looking for their presence.

But for those who are being brought from one stage of glory to another by the Holy Spirit, their appetites are increasing. They cannot be satisfied with the husks of human theologies and the learned disquisitions of religious experts. They are driven by a single desire—to “dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the LORD, and to inquire in his temple” (Psa 27:4). In embracing the Gospel by faith, they have become discontent with “this present evil world.” They are displeased that the flesh can intrude into their thinking, and they perceive that no good dwells in it.

All such people have solid grounds to be of good cheer. God is searching the hearts of such people, looking for the marvelous workings of His Holy Spirit. The Spirit Himself is there with them, ready to offer powerful intercessions in the behalf of the believer. He will make sure what is needed will be obtained by the one who is willing to live by faith.

CONCLUSION

We have seen that suffering is the appointed prelude to glory. If we live by faith, it cannot be avoided. From one point of view, it is not pleasant or to be desired. It is genuine suffering, and there is nothing pleasant about it. However, it is the path to glory, for we are leaving a cursed realm to enter into a blessed one. We are being brought out of defiled surroundings into a realm that is pure and unmixed with any form of weakness or corruption. The suffering is produced because we live in a body that is set to resist such a journey. We also have an “old man” that cannot be changed, and is firmly opposed to any progress toward glory. These circumstances are the cause of much frustration within our minds and emotions. They produce most uncomfortable situations.

The glory of salvation is found in the thoroughness with which it addresses our situation. It not only removes the defilement of the past, and secures a blessed future, it also completely meets the need of the present. In a sense, we are suspended between the past and the future. In this state inner warfare and outward opposition are experienced. They soon deplete our resources and prove our earthly wisdom to be impoverished. We cannot make it to glory without help—constant and powerful help!

We cannot control our own flesh, let alone our circumstances. We have a constantly erupting contrary law within that will not listen to reason. We shout at it to leave us alone, but it will not. We have a body that always has to be managed and controlled—that never volunteers to do the things our new heart desires. We have remarkable difficulty doing what our regenerated self desires, to say nothing of what the Lord of glory desires. Where is the enlightened soul that does not repeatedly say, “O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?” (Rom 7:24).

The complexities of our present circumstance extend beyond our abilities. The situation is such that we do not even know how to pray. But even that is addressed in salvation. First, we are given strong longings by the Spirit. They are deep within us, where human discernment cannot reach. There is no form of human language that can articulate these groanings. The intellect can never discover nor express them.

The marvelous salvation of God fully addresses this situation. He takes our sufferings and makes them a catalyst for even stronger desires for glory. As we embrace them by faith, the sufferings go to work for us, increasing “the weight of glory” that awaits us.

To assist us in perseverance, the Lord tells us something we could not possibly know if He did not tell us. The “whole creation” is in the same situation as ourselves—struggling with a curse and looking for the appointed blessing. It too is suffering under the weight of mortality and bondage, yet knows that liberty and freedom are coming. It is waiting for the sons of God to be revealed. So why cannot we eagerly anticipate the same thing?

The complexities of our present circumstance extend beyond our abilities. The situation is such that we do not even know how to pray. But even that is addressed in salvation. First, we are given strong longings by the Spirit. They are deep within us, where human discernment cannot reach. There is no form of human language that can articulate these groanings. The intellect can never discover nor express them.

But we are not without hope. The very Spirit who produced the groanings of anticipation within us will decipher them to God in effective intercession. He will present them within the context of God’s appointed purpose, thereby guaranteeing our need will be met. God will see to it that we are not without needed resources.

As a loving Father, our Lord is searching our hearts, looking for those uninterpretable groanings implanted by the Holy Spirit. He will not miss them. Their presence will rejoice His heart, for He takes delight in His children. They will even move the Spirit to take them and intercede for us to the Father, thereby helping our infirmities. With joy, the Father will receive the Spirit's intercessions, for He knows the mind of the Spirit, which is in perfect accord with His own beneficent will.

Tell me, is there not ground for good hope? Is there any reason why we saints of God should hang our heads in despair? Let us be strong in faith like our father Abraham, thereby giving glory to God. We are saved by hope while we suffer!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 27

GOD HAS PREDESTINATED

8:28 And we know that all things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are the called according to His purpose. ²⁹ For whom He foreknew, He also predestined to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. ³⁰ Moreover whom He predestined, these He also called; whom He called, these He also justified; and whom He justified, these He also glorified. ³¹ What then shall we say to these things? If God is for us, who can be against us? ³² He who did not spare His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? ³³ Who shall bring a charge against God's elect? It is God who justifies. ³⁴ Who is he who condemns? It is Christ who died, and furthermore is also risen, who is even at the right hand of God, who also makes intercession for us. – Romans 8:28-34 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

There is a remarkable progression of thought in the book of Romans. The spiritual advancement of the brethren in Rome provided an opportunity for the Spirit to open up some of the deep things of God. Their faith had been mentioned throughout the world (1:8) – and that without the presence of any Apostle. They had a “mutual faith” that would bring advantages to the Apostle Paul himself (1:12). With strong desire he longed to be with them, knowing they would profit from his presence (1:11). The brethren in Rome had proved faithful stewards of what had been given to them, and therefore the grace of God now brings them more. This is according to the manner of the Kingdom. As it is written, “For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance” (Matt 13:12; 25:29).

Whether it is a person or a congregation, those who handle the truth of God with thankfulness and faithfulness will be given more. Paul’s Apostleship is a confirmation of that. Remarkable insights were given to him because God counted him faithful (1 Tim 1:12). How is it that such marvelous insights were given to Paul? Hear him testify of the uniqueness of the things revealed to him. “If ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which is given me to you-ward: how that by revelation He made known unto me the mystery; (as I wrote afore in few words, whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ), which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto His holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit; that the Gentiles should be fellowheirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel: whereof I was made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by the effectual working of his power. Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ; and to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ: to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God" (Eph 3:2-10).

This same principle is unveiled in the book of Romans. There is a lofty pattern of thinking here that is not found in other Epistles. Because of the remarkable statements made in this book, this elevated reasoning can easily escape us—like missing the forest because of the trees. A brief overview will serve to better prepare us for the text before us.

A BRIEF OVERVIEW
The Gospel of Christ

From the affirmation that the Gospel is God's power in order to the experience of salvation, the Spirit has deduced that the power of the Gospel is owing to its revelation of the righteousness of God. That righteousness is given to men upon the basis of their belief of the Gospel and faith in Jesus Christ. God is upright in conferring this righteousness upon men because of the accomplishments of His Son (1:16-18).

Righteousness Is Needed

Because the need for righteousness is not readily perceived, the Spirit produced extensive arguments that confirmed that all men stand in need of this righteousness (1:19-3:20). Although men lived within the consistent and powerful testimony of creation, yet not a single offspring of Adam got the message. Although some engaged in a quest for the Lord, their quest fell short of Divine intention, and they ended up serving idols. Moral degeneracy also proliferated throughout the race (1:19-32).

If any are disposed to imagine that men only needed some direction to get on the right path, the Spirit shows us this is not the case. The Jews were given the Law, which identified sin with extraordinary precision. It also declared the consequences of sin and the rewards for righteousness. Both promises and curses were unusually strong. If any vestige of spiritual ability remained in fallen man, sufficient incentive was provided to awaken that latent ability.

But this did not prove to be the case at all. The Jews, in covenant with God, ended up doing the same things as the Gentiles, who had no covenant with God. The conclusion is that "all have sinned and [do] come short of the glory of God" (3:23). They could not achieve righteousness without verbal direction from God. Nor, indeed, could they achieve it with such direction. All men need the righteousness announced in the Gospel of Jesus Christ!

The Role of Faith

With great power, the role of faith is declared in this Epistle. It is repeatedly affirmed that the righteousness given by God is appropriated by faith in men. That righteousness has now been made known in strict conformity with the testimony of the Law and Prophets. It is also realized independently of the works of the Law. In this circumstance God has excluded all human boasting. Valid boasting, or glorying, can only be in the Lord, from whom salvation in all of its glorious fullness comes (3:21-32).

The Example of Abraham

To assist us in laying hold of the function of faith Abraham is held before us. God made a promise of blessing to this patriarch. The promise contradicted every form of human reasoning. There is not a law of human logic that could support what Abraham was promised. There was no possible way the promise could be fulfilled through natural means. What is more, it extended to generations after Abraham—even into eternity.

Confirming the power of faith, it is affirmed that "Abraham believed God." He did not stagger at the promises of God, but was "strong in faith, giving glory to God." As a result, God accounted, or imputed, Abraham's faith to him as righteousness. That is, he received the righteousness of God because he believed.

The record of Abraham is not for his sake alone. That is, it is not a mere historical account of the staggering accomplishments of a hero. Rather, he is an example of how God gives men His righteousness. His record is provided to assure us God will give us His righteousness if we believe the record He has given of His Son (4:1-25).

The Practicality of Faith

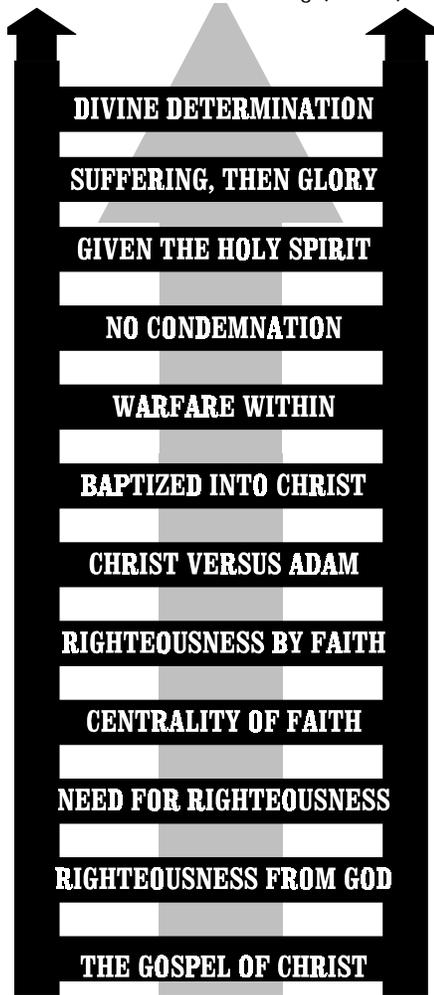

Faith is effective in the transformation of our lives. First, it brings the peace of God to us, in order that we may throw ourselves into the good fight of faith. Within the framework of that glorious peace, we come to glory in God, finding delight and great joy in His Person. The joy is so remarkable that we even glory in tribulations, aware that they are used of God to prepare us for glory.

Through faith we come into patience, or perseverance. Character is developed, which results in a dominating hope. The hope that is generated within us is so glorious, we are not ashamed of it. The love of God toward us is then shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit who is given to us. God's purpose is being realized in those who have received His righteousness by faith (5:1-5).

Christ's Death Is Effective

With great care, the Spirit refuses to allow us to glory in our growth, even though it is remarkable. Instead, He turns our attention to the death of Jesus Christ, which is the foundation for our reception of righteousness. He confirms to our hearts that if such great things were wrought by Christ's death, much more will be accomplished through His life. There is an upward movement that characterizes God's working (5:6-11).

Only Two Men

The condition of all men is traced to two men – Adam and Christ. They are federal heads of their respective generations. Everyone who is under them partakes of their likeness. The attitude of God toward each of them carries forward to all who are under them.

What is even more, the effect of each man, Adam and Jesus, is traced to a single deed of each. Adam's act of disobedience, and Christ's act of righteousness. Adam's act was eating from the forbidden tree. Christ's act was laying down His life a ransom for many. The single act of both Adam and Jesus effects everyone who is under them–“ALL.” That condition also removes all boasting (5:12-21).

Buried Into Death

Those who were once dead in sin, are buried by baptism into Christ's death. In that obedience they are “buried with him by baptism into death” –death TO sin. Their faith is to reckon, or reason, upon the reality of this experience. Those in Christ, because of their identity with Him, are “dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God.” Consequently, they are to no longer yield their members as instruments of unrighteousness. Rather, their capabilities are to be yielded to God Himself. In Christ there is no room for willing involvement in sin, the wages of which is always “death” (Rom 6:1-23).

Inner Warfare

Faith has spawned a war within the believers. The remnants of the old nature remain in them, being indissolubly tied to their bodies. Those remnants spew forth imaginations into the thought streams of the believer, causing great frustration. Faith has made sin repulsive in all of its forms. It produces a strong longing for Divine fellowship, and enables us recognize the vanity of this world and everything associated with it.

The person who is justified does not want to contend with sin, particularly in himself. Even though weaponry is provided whereby imaginations and contradicting thoughts can be cast down, deliverance from “the body of this death” is longed for (7:1-25).

No Condemnation

The Law does not allow for the thoughts with which the believer contends. Even though they are not wanted, the Law soundly condemns the individual in whom they are found. Notwithstanding this circumstance, we have been delivered from the Law in its condemning capacity (7:4).

Within the context of fierce inner warfare, the Spirit fairly shouts to us: “There is therefore now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus.” They are not condemned for having to contend with sin, for it is against their will. Their righteousness is not found in their personal accomplishments, but in their faith (8:1-4).

Lest we imagine this allows for carnal, or fleshly, mindedness, we are reminded that death ALWAYS follows carnality. The mind that is not spiritual fights against God, and consequently God will fight against it (8:5-11).

Given the Holy Spirit

To assist us in the good fight of faith and the casting down of the expressions of the “old man,” God has given us the Holy Spirit. Faithfully He leads us through our faith to certain triumph over the flesh, thereby preparing us for glory.

The Holy Spirit testifies to us of our sonship, bearing witness with our spirits that “we are the children of God” (8:12-17). It is an effective witness.

Suffering, Then Glory

The sufferings endured by the believer are the appointed prelude to glory. They range from the fierce inner conflict believers endure to the oppositions of sinful men, and other matters related to being in this world. Because of the greatness of the glory that will be revealed “in us,” these sufferings are unworthy to be compared with it. They are a small price to pay for the privilege of reigning with Jesus.

To assist us in our suffering, we are reminded the whole creation is groaning in travail, eagerly anticipating “the manifestation of the sons of God.” When they are unveiled at the appearing of Jesus, the whole creation will also be released from “the bondage of corruption.” Redemption will effect everything just as surely as sin did!

The deep groanings of the believer extend beyond the perimeter of both human understanding and expression. For this reason, the Holy Spirit Himself comes along side of us to assist us in bearing up under the present affliction. Sufferings have a way of depleting our spiritual resources, yet we do not know how to pray about such things, for the experience itself is not fully comprehended. Thus the Spirit effectively “makes intercession for us.” God, who is looking for groaning souls, knows how the Spirit thinks, and thus honors His faithful intercession for us. The outcome is that we receive what we need to survive this world and prepare for the next, even though we did not know how to pray about it (8:18-27).

Behold the progression of those thoughts. They are like the pinions of the flying eagle that mounts higher and higher, until it soars in lofty climes. If the saints of God are to survive this world, they must learn to fly high—to reason in the Spirit, and behold things from the heavenly point of view. Low and shallow thoughts do not serve God's purpose, even though carnal men cry out for the simplification of the things of God.

The Lord will not allow His children to grovel in the dust of simplicity. He calls them to "come up higher" (Rev 4:1; 11:12). As Solomon wisely said, "For it is better that he say to you, 'Come up here,'

Than that you should be put lower in the presence of the prince" (Prov 25:7). Better to reason in higher realms.

Far better to soar in Romans than to crawl in hermeneutics, philosophy, and the wisdom of men. Determine in your heart to rise into the heavenlies where you have been placed in Jesus (Eph 2:6). When you are there, living by faith makes more sense, and you receive more power to do so. This is the manner of Romans.

GOD IS WORKING NOW

^{8:28} And we know that all things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are the called according to His purpose. We have been presented with the complexity of spiritual life. It is being lived out in the crucible of conflict, suffering, and frustration. The matters over which we have no control are so numerous we cannot number them. It only takes a day of living by faith to confirm we are not reigning with Jesus yet. Those who boast of continual triumph have not told the truth. Either they are deceived, or they have deliberately misrepresented their circumstance—and either condition is inexcusable. Now, the Spirit will show us that the heavenly Architect is working behind the scenes. We have not been left to shift to and fro with the winds of circumstance. Eternal objectives are being worked out in us.

WE KNOW

Faith moves one into the realm of spiritual knowledge. This is not the mere knowledge of facts, but the persuasion of reality. This is NOT the knowledge of experience (from ginwskomen), or experiential knowledge. This is the knowledge of faith, which is not based upon experience. Rather, it is founded upon Divine affirmation. The word used here is oidamen, which is used throughout Romans (3:19; 7:14; 8:22,26,28). The only way such knowledge can be possessed is by believing what the Lord has declared. We will find there is no other proof for the reality embraced. It cannot be demonstrated in human experience or satisfactorily explained through human logic. This should become very apparent to us as the Spirit develops this thought.

WORK TOGETHER

Trouble and suffering, therefore, do NOT work against salvation. Rather, God works them together to accomplish the fulness of salvation.

"... all things work together for good . . . " Other versions read, "God causes all things to work together for good," ^{NASB} and "in all things God works for the good of those." ^{NIV} This is a high view, like viewing the earth from a distant planet. It will enable us to obtain confidence and live boldly in the world.

Trouble and suffering, therefore, do NOT work against salvation. Rather, God works them together to accomplish the fulness of salvation.

"All Things"

The "all things" have to do with the conflicting experiences of life—both the inward and outward ones. For the saints, no human experience stands on its own. It is part of a whole. It neither happens nor results in things unrelated to God's purpose for us. Nothing is omitted, everything is included.

"Work Together"

Things are not simply falling together by chance. They are BEING worked together by God Himself. Our experiences are the result of God weaving the tapestry of life, blending everything together like Joseph's coat of many colors.

Behind the scenes, undetected by the human eye, but discerned by faith, God is manipulating our circumstances. He is seeing to it that everything fits together. He will work the circumstances of Moses together, so that being raised in the king's palace, and keeping sheep on the back side of the desert will all fit together. He will take the circumstances of Joseph—being thrown in a pit, sold to Ishmaelites, falsely accused by Potiphar's wife, and life in prison—and will work it all together, making one harmonious whole of it all.

Do not imagine these are only for the choice servants of God. This is the manner in which God works with all of His children. That is the point of this passage. What is more, only the Lord can cause everything to contribute to the ultimate advantage of His children—but that is precisely what He does.

"For good"

It is possible for everything to work together for a curse—working against the individual (Deut 2:15). This is how it is with the ungodly. Everything is actually working against them. From time to time, it may seem to the saints like this is their lot also. But this is not the case. God is working everything together for their good—their ultimate advantage.

This does not mean that every experience of life is good of itself. Rather, it is being fitted into the whole of God's purpose. In the end, everything will fit together for the advantage of the child of God. The sea and the wilderness will prove to have been advantages. The barren desert and the fruited plain will both make the child of God better, fitting him for his eternal inheritance.

Allow Joseph to come to the witness stand on this matter. Although the good was not seen from the beginning, let him tell you how the adversity to which he was subjected was "worked together" by the living God. He speaks to his hateful brothers, who sold him into a most grievous slavery. "Do not be afraid, for am I in the place of God? But as for you, you meant evil against me; but God meant it for good, in order to bring it about as it is this day, to save many people alive" (Gen 50:19-20).

Joseph knew this AFTER the fact. In one place, Paul knew it BEFORE the fact. It will be comforting to hear him testify. "Some indeed preach Christ even from envy and strife, and some also from good will: the former preach Christ from selfish ambition, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my chains; but the latter out of love, knowing that I am appointed for the defense of the gospel. What then? Only that in every way, whether in pretense or in truth, Christ is preached; and in this I rejoice, yes, and will rejoice. For I know that this will turn out for my deliverance through your prayer and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ" (Phil 1:15-19). You can see what effect the spiritual knowledge of this has upon the elect of God. I say "spiritual knowledge" because it is above the ordinary knowledge of men, being driven by faith. Such knowledge does not require immediate evidence that everything is being worked together for good. A word from God will suffice to proceed confidently to live by faith. Faith needs nothing more than that!

The bottom line is this: the end of those for whom God is working everything together for good will be better than their beginning. The best words will be heard at the conclusion of their race. The largest advantage will be given to them after heaven and earth have passed away, and there is no more sea.

THOSE WHO LOVE GOD

This statement confirms that loving God is not natural for men, else there would be no point to this affirmation. Loving God is the response of a faith that perceives God loved us. As it is written, "We love him, because He first loved us"

It is not the portion of everyone to have God work everything together for their ultimate good. This is not common to everyone. Amos once spoke of everything working against those who displeased the Lord. "It will be as though a man fled from a lion, And a bear met him! Or as though he went into the house, Leaned his hand on the wall, And a serpent bit him!"^{NKJV} (Amos 5:19).

The blessing set before us belongs exclusively to "those who love God." God is not on the side of anyone else, but He IS on the side of everyone who loves Him. This statement confirms that loving God is not natural for men, else there would be no point to this affirmation. Loving God is the response of a faith that perceives God loved us. As it is written, "We love him, because He first loved us" (1 John 4:19). And again, "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us" (1 John 3:16).

In return for this love, God manages our lives, so that everything ultimately fits together, contributing to our good. The perception of this fuels both love and zeal. Those who try to love God out of a sense of mere obligation, as dictated by the first and greatest commandment, will experience great difficulty. But when they see the truth of this verse, their love for God will grow by leaps and bounds.

If our love for God wanes or diminishes, life begins to work against us. Not only is God working all things together for good to those who love Him, He is doing it in direct proportion to their love. One has only to consider men like Joseph, David, Daniel, and Paul to confirm this is true. If a waning of our love for God is not arrested, it can get to the point where God no longer works in us "both to will and do of His own good pleasure" (Phil 2:13). Candidly, that is a dreadful thing to contemplate, for if God is not working all things together for our good, it will not be possible for good to come to us.

CALLED ACCORDING TO HIS PURPOSE

The identity of the ones for whom God is working everything together for good is here expanded. Not only are they the ones who love God, they are described as "the called according to His purpose."

The Called

Several versions read "THE called" (KJV, NKJV, Websters). From a linguistic viewpoint, the article "the" is not in the original text. However, the use of the identifier "the" is proper. The word "called" is not a verb, but an adjective (klhtoij). That simply means it describes a people, not an activity. Here the word "called" is used to denote those who have accepted the call, and not the call itself. Even the versions that do not contain the word "the" emphasize that "called" refers to the people themselves: "those who are called,"^{NASB} "who have been called,"^{NIV} "who are called,"^{NRSV} and "them that are called."^{ASV} This emphasis is confirmed by the following verses that elaborate on the people themselves, and the God who has saved them: i.e., "for whom. . ."

By saying "the called," the Spirit places the EMPHASIS on the One who called rather than the one responding to the call. This is again confirmed by the Spirit's elaboration. He does not develop what men did, but what was done by the Lord. From another perspective Jesus said, "No one can come to Me unless the Father who sent Me draws him . . . Therefore said I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father" (John 6:44,65). No one comes to the Lord who is not first invited. Further, they only come because they have been invited.

Called by the Gospel

This call is facilitated through the Gospel, as affirmed in Second Thessalonians. "God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth: whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Thess 2:13-14). However, the calling by the Gospel does not in itself guarantee the benefit of Romans 8:28.

It may appear trite to say so, but it is not the Gospel that calls us. Rather, it is God Himself calling through the Gospel. There is an inward drawing that takes place in this call—a wooing toward the Lord Jesus through the Holy Spirit. Jesus referred to this drawing when He said, "No one can come to Me unless the Father who sent Me draws him . . . Therefore I have said to you that no one can come to Me unless it has been granted to him by My Father" (John 6:44,65). In that particular text, Jesus was not only explaining WHY people came to Him, He was also declaring why some did NOT come to Him.

"The called" are those in whom all of this has been accomplished. They are the ones who have heard the Gospel of Christ. They are the ones who have "believed through grace" (Acts 18:27). God has "drawn" them to Jesus, opening their hearts so they could "respond to the things spoken" ^{NASB} (Acts 16:14). "The called" are those who have "turned to the Lord shall be saved" (Rom 10:13). From one perspective, God does save men because they call upon His name, or cry out to receive what is promised in the Gospel of Christ. Our text, however, goes deeper into our salvation. In it, the Spirit is dealing with foundational matters. He does not want our faith to rest in the fact that we called upon the name of the Lord. Rather, it must rest on the fact that God called us according to an "eternal purpose."

It may appear trite to say so, but it is not the Gospel that calls us. Rather, it is God Himself calling through the Gospel. There is an inward drawing that takes place in this call—a wooing toward the Lord Jesus through the Holy Spirit.

God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven" (1 Thess 1:9-10). They have been called "with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was given to us in Christ Jesus before time began" (2 Tim 1:9).

Those in Christ Jesus are described as individuals "whom He called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles" (Rom 9:24). The expression "the called," therefore, is a weighty one indeed. What is here said concerning them powerfully confirms that: God is working everything together for their good. Further, what is said of these people in the following verses removes any notion that this is a loose and fragile concept.

According to His Purpose

The Spirit is now making a critical distinction. It is quite true that "whosoever shall call upon the name of

Our identity with God is NOT in order to the fulfillment of our purposes. Rather, it is that His "eternal purpose" might be fulfilled (Eph 3:11). Further, this is a purpose God has "purposed in Himself" (Eph 1:9). The NIV reads, "which He purposed in Christ." This accords with Ephesians 3:11: "According to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord." This objective will be expounded in the next two verses with a most unusual power.

The point being made is simply this: for everyone who has been effectively called into the execution of God's eternal purpose, God is working everything together for their ultimate good. Their path is being Divinely orchestrated so as to conclude in their good and God's glory. The ultimate objective to be realized is "good." It is our business to take hold of this by faith.

DIVINE DETERMINATION REVEALED

" ²⁹ For whom He foreknew, He also predestined to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren." Here we confront one of the most controversial verses in all of Scripture. However, we must not allow ourselves to approach it as though it was controversial. Rather, it is to be seen as a Divine expression that will sustain faith and bring confidence to our hearts. As for myself, I will approach this verse as a precise and inspired statement of truth. Its meaning will not hinge upon word definitions, but on Apostolic doctrine. Its purpose is to confirm to our hearts what God's intention is, and to persuade us He is fully able to accomplish it in us.

Divine Determination is not only a Reality, it is the Foundation upon which Faith rests --by Given O. Blakely

DIVINE FOREKNOWLEDGE

"For whom He foreknew. . . ." Nearly all versions, both older and contemporary, use the word "foreknew" or "did foreknow." Some freer translations read, "those of whom he had knowledge before," ^{BBE} "God knew his people in advance," ^{NLT} and "He decided beforehand who were the ones." ^{NJB} I give these translations to confirm this is a very weighty expression.

The word "foreknow" emphasizes Divine choice, not mere foresight. The teaching of the passage will confirm this. It is also supported by the meaning of the word itself. One of the primary meanings of the word used here (proegnw), which meaning lexicographers apply to this text, is "select in advance, choose, or appoint before hand." ^{BarclayNewman} Doctrinally, when it comes to what is done, God's foreknowledge applies to what HE does. "Known to God from eternity are all HIS works" (Acts 15:18). This even applies to the birth and positioning of men. "From one man he made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth; and he determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live" (Acts 17:26). ^{NIV}

It should be clear to us that God did not conceive of an eternal purpose in view of what man would do. Those whom God "Foreknew" are those upon whom His favor rested, even before the foundation of the world. These are the individuals toward whom He was inclined. In our consideration of this facet of the Divine character, care must be taken to allow the Scriptures to form our concepts, and not theological positions developed by men.

Associated with Determination

The foreknowledge of God is also associated with Divine determination. It CAUSES things to happen. This use is seen in Acts 2:22-23. "Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know: Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain." Other versions read "determined purpose and foreknowledge of God," ^{NKJV} "predetermined plan and foreknowledge of God," ^{NASB} and "God's set purpose and foreknowledge." ^{NIV}

Surely no one would affirm God simply foresaw that Jesus would be delivered to death. Rather, God's foreknowledge related to what He had determined to do. Peter uses the word in the same way when, through the Spirit, he refers to saints as "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ . . ." (1 Pet 1:2).

Christ's Foreordination

This is further confirmed in First Peter, where the same word for foreknowledge is used (proegnwsmenou). "For He was foreknown before the foundation of the world, but has appeared in these last times for the sake of you" ^{NASB} (1:20). Other versions read "foreordained," ^{KJV,NKJV} "chosen," ^{NIV} and "destined." ^{NRSV}

When Christ was among us, He traced His total involvement in the will of God to the Father Himself. He did the will of the Father (John 5:30), said the words the Father had given Him to say (John 12:50), and did nothing except what he saw the Father doing (John 5:36). There is only way to account for "the Man Christ Jesus," and that is the determination of God Himself. Indeed, Jesus did volunteer to do God's will, but only after (speaking as a man) it had been established (Heb 10:4-8). Can you imagine the absurdity of the children of God standing before the throne of the Almighty upon the basis of their own words and deeds? Their involvement in salvation must be upon the same basis as that of their Savior!

Both doctrinally and linguistically, therefore, the word "foreknow" is related to Divine purpose and intent, not merely to prescience, or seeing things ahead of time.

Further Confirmation

To further confirm that our salvation is not the result of God knowing ahead of time what we would do, the Spirit declares, "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began" (2 Tim 1:9). However difficult it may be to receive these things, it is on the part of wisdom to simply believe them. Faith is fully capable of acknowledging this truth and deriving comfort from it.

The foreknowledge of God is also related to the placement of His love. This is the sense of the passage before us. It is also referred to in the eleventh chapter. "God has not cast away His people whom He foreknew. Or do you not know what the Scripture says of Elijah, how he pleads with God against Israel, saying, 'LORD, they have killed Your prophets and torn down Your altars, and I alone am left, and they seek my life?' But what does the divine response say to him? 'I have reserved for Myself seven thousand men who have not bowed the knee to Baal'" (Rom 11:2-4).

There Are Special People

God has revealed those to whom He is attracted, and for whom, He will make provision. All of these are affirmed in full awareness of the fall of man, and the corruption that resulted from that fall. A few Divine utterances on this matter will suffice to establish who will find favor in the eyes of the Lord.

1. "For the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward Him" (2 Chron 16:9).
2. "For all those things hath Mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the LORD: but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at My word" (Isa 66:12).
3. "The LORD is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart; and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit" (Psa 34:18).
4. "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise" (Psa 51:17).
5. "Though the LORD be high, yet hath He respect unto the lowly: but the proud He knoweth afar off" (Psa 138:6).
6. "But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with Him" (Acts 10:35).

28:9). He "tests the hearts and minds" of men (Psa 7:9), and "sees the mind and the heart" of every man (Jer 10:12).

In all of these searchings, it is my understanding that God perceives capacities and inclinations as well as accomplishments.

This is involved in God knowing and separating Jeremiah before he came out of his other's womb (Jer 1:4-5). It is also is no difference between Cain and Abel, neither of which were born again. Nor, indeed, does it suggest there was no inner distinction between Hezekiah and Sennacherib, or David and Saul. So far as being dominated by sin is concerned, "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." No person is able to change their condition themselves. All of them need a Savior. There is no inherent goodness in any of them. On this, there is no question. It is a matter of revelation (3:10-12).

Tenderness of heart is what endeared people like Jacob, Joseph, David, and Cornelius to the Lord. None of these individuals were born again at the time God's favor came to them.

Yet, there is a depth to the human nature, into which God alone can peer. He has declared in His Word that He does search the inner recesses of the heart. In my judgment, His foreknowledge relates to the hidden part of man, known only to Him. I gather these are the things God has declared He looks for.

A Case In Point

We have an example in Scripture of people who responded to the Gospel according to Divine appointment. Although a highly controversial passage, its wording is quite clear. The occasion was the preaching of Paul in Antioch of Pisidia. The whole city was set on fire with the powerful preaching of the Apostle, with "almost the whole city" coming together on the Sabbath day "to hear the Word of God" (Acts 13:44). However, "when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy; and contradicting and blaspheming, they opposed the things spoken by Paul." Intolerant of their heartless opposition, Paul and Barnabas "grew bold and said, 'It was necessary that the word of God should be spoken to you first; but since you reject it, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, behold, we turn to the Gentiles. For so the Lord has commanded us: 'I have set you as a light to the Gentiles, That you should be for salvation to the ends of the earth'" (13:46-47).

No person should balk at these statements, imagining that the fallen nature of man forbids the presence of such qualities. Tenderness of heart is what endeared people like Jacob, Joseph, David, and Cornelius to the Lord. None of these individuals were born again at the time God's favor came to them. Three of them lived before an atoning sacrifice for sin and the indwelling of the Holy Spirit had been given. Yet God called David "a man after Mine own heart" (Acts 13:22). He said of Jacob, "Jacob have I love" (Rom 9:13). Cornelius, a Gentile centurion, was told, "Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God" (Acts 10:4). Whatever deficiencies they may have possessed, and whatever failures may have been found in these men, their sensitivity to God was their premier quality.

The Lord "looks upon the heart" (1 Sam 16:7), and "weighs the spirits," or motives, of man (Prov 16:2). The Lord "knows the hearts of the children of men" (1 Kings 8:39), "searches the hearts," and "understands all the imaginations of the thoughts" (1 Chron related to God loving Jacob before he was born, or had done any good or evil (Rom 9:11-13). This aspect of God is also revealed in Paul, who was separated from the mother's womb, then called (Gal 1:15). Those who desire simplistic views of profound utterances need faith.

Some Difficulties

I am aware that this introduces some difficulties. The Spirit has already informed us "there is none righteous, no not one" (Rom 3:10), and "there is none that doeth good, no not one" (Rom 3:12). With power He has affirmed, "There is none that understandeth, there is none that seekth after God" (Rom 3:10). What, then, is the point of the eyes of the Lord scanning the whole earth in quest of a man "whose heart is fully committed to Him?"^{NIV} Why search the heart, weigh the motives, and test the mind?

In order to resolve this difficulty, some have said there are no distinctions at all among men. After all, the Scriptures affirm, "there is no difference, for all have sinned" (Rom 3:23). However, that does not mean there

The Holy Spirit declares the Gentiles were glad when they heard this, adding, "And as many as had been appointed to eternal life believed" (Acts 13:48)^{NKJV}.^{NASB} The KJV reads "ordained to eternal life." Other versions read, "appointed for eternal life,"^{NIV} "destined for eternal life,"^{NRSV} "those marked out by God for eternal life,"^{BBE} "those marked out by God for eternal life,"^{NewCentury} "as many as were destined (appointed and ordained) to eternal life believed."

Amplified

Every major translation reads the same way—"appointed," or "ordained." Every paraphrased version but one reads that way also, the single exception being the Living Bible, which reads "and as many as wanted eternal life, believed." No small number of people have adopted this view—i.e., that the word "ordained," or "appointed," refers to what the people themselves desired, and not God. This view is based on a variant meaning of the Greek word meaning: "disposed toward," or "agree upon." Thus the verse is imagined to say, "as many as were disposed to eternal life believed." If Acts 13:48 was the only place where such a thing is declared, we might be more tolerant of these would-be scholars. However, when God speaks on the subject elsewhere with even greater clarity, and when the combined linguists of the centuries agree on the general use of the word, we can hold no sympathy whatsoever for such a meager and watered down view.

Believing, or having faith, cannot be accounted for by human disposition. It is the Lord who opens the heart in order that people may respond to the Gospel (Acts 16:14). Faith is "obtained" (2 Pet 1:1). Those who believe do so "through grace," not human disposition (Acts 18:27). Faith does come "from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ" (Eph 6:23).

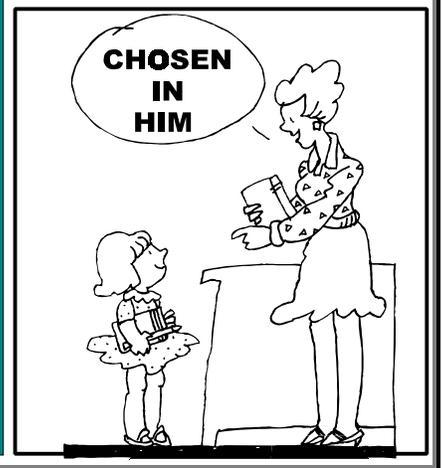

The people of God must be willing to accept Divine affirmation without questioning it. What God does will not violate any aspect of His person, nor will it find Him imposing a blessing upon those who do not desire it. That is the genius of salvation. It also is the reason why salvation in its totality will, in the end, be ascribed to God, and God alone (Rev 7:10; 19:1).

Thus, the "foreknowledge" of God is associated with His choice, His determination, and His will. It is just, and will not overlook any tender heart, or

THE FACT OF PREDESTINATION

"For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate . . ." At this point, the Holy Spirit is very specific. Remember, He is building the confidence of the people of God, providing a foundation for their faith. That foundation will not be what they have done, but what the Lord has done!

God alone effectively predetermines things that will come to pass. He has clearly revealed this aspect of His nature. God Almighty determines, and brings to pass, certain things in a moral arena, where it looks as though human choice is the sole factor. A few reminders should suffice to establish this fact.

7. The birth of Isaac was according to God's appointment, and at an appointed time (Gen 18;14).
8. The plagues leveled against Egypt took place at a Divinely appointed time (Ex 9:5).
9. The good and sound counsel of Ahithophel was overthrown by God's appointment (2 Sam 7;14).
10. The laws of nature were appointed by God (Jer 33:25).
11. The purchase of the potter's field with the betrayal money of Judas "as the Lord appointed" (Matt 27:10).
12. The times and exact places where people would live were appointed by God (Acts 17:26).

13. The day of judgment has been appointed by the Lord (Acts 17:31).
14. Jesus appointed a kingdom to His disciples (Lk 22:29).

With great power, the Lord declares that predetermination is a part of His nature. "Remember the former things of old, for I am God, and there is no other; I am God, and there is none like Me, declaring the end from the beginning, And from ancient times things that are not yet done, Saying, 'My counsel shall stand, and I will do all My pleasure,' calling a bird of prey from the east, the man who executes My counsel, from a far country. Indeed I have spoken it; I will also bring it to pass. I have purposed it; I will also do it"^{NKJV} (Isa 46:9-11).

Categorically we are told believers were "chosen" in Christ "before the foundation of the world" (Eph 1:4). The living God "predestinated" them "to adoption as sons by Jesus Christ to Himself" (Eph 1:5). Those in Christ obtain an inheritance because they have been "predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will" (Eph 1:11). The Thessalonians were told, "God from the beginning chose you for salvation through sanctification by the Spirit and belief in the truth, to which He called you by our gospel, for the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Thess 2:13-14). God's choice was implemented through the separating power of the Spirit and the belief of the truth of the Gospel by the people. However, just as in the passage we are considering, the call by the Gospel came after the Divine determination had been made. None of that removes the responsibility to believe, or excuses the presence of unbelief.

When the early church effectively prayed for boldness and power, they explained the death of Jesus through the hands of lawless men, by tracing it back to God's pre-determination. "For truly against Your holy Servant Jesus, whom You anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and the people of Israel, were gathered together to do whatever Your hand and Your purpose determined before to be done" (Acts 4:27-28). They did not have the theological confusion and difficulties that characterize our generation. They were more interested in declaring the Gospel with power than preserving the wilted doctrines of an emaciated institution. Oh, for a return to the purity of faith in and love for the Lord.

The Gospel itself is associated with the predetermination of God: "but we speak God's wisdom in a mystery, the hidden wisdom, which God predestined before the ages to our glory"^{NASB} (1 Cor 2:7). This, of course, accounts for the effectiveness of the Gospel – why it is "the power of God unto salvation" (Rom 1:16).

Fulfillment Is Certain

When we speak of predestination, we are speaking of something that is sure, and cannot fail of fulfillment. That is the whole purpose of this passage, to anchor our faith in the certitude of God's "eternal purpose." What God predestinates, or determines, comes to pass. Jesus was not only the one "foreordained before the foundation of the world" (1 Pet 1:20), He actually "laid down" His life, "a ransom for many," in fulfillment of that predetermination.

The vocabulary of the Holy Spirit, or words "taught by the Holy Spirit"^{NASB} (1 Cor 2:13), include "predestinate" (Rom 8:29-30), "predestinated" (Eph 1:5,11), "foreordained" (1 Pet 1:20), "foreknow" (Rom 8:29), "foreknew" (Rom 11:2), "foreknowledge" (Acts 2:23; 1 Pet 1:2), "determined before" (Acts 4:28), "chosen" (Eph 1:4; 2 Thess 2:13; 1 Pet 2:9), and "elect" (Matt 24:24; Rom 8:33; Col 3:12; Tit 1:11 Pet 1:2), and "elected" (1 Pet 5:13). The fact of predestination, therefore, cannot be effectively negated or questioned. God has extended Himself to make this aspect of His character known. Those who make a studied practice of either ignoring God's predestination, or disputing its existence, will eventually have to explain to God why they did.

PREDESTINATED CONFORMITY
The predestination of God is not a

The meaning of this passage is this: God has predetermined that everyone He adopts as sons (8:19) will be fashioned to bear the "image of Christ." That is not a commandment, it is a predetermination. It is not a possibility, it is a predestined purpose.

lifeless doctrine. Nor, indeed, does it center around the individual believer. The Lord's determination has to do with the culmination of His work. This is the revealed destiny of everyone who lives by faith, or is "in Christ Jesus." "For whom He foreknew, He also predestined to be conformed to the image of His Son." Other versions read, "the likeness of His Son,"^{NIV} "be made like His Son,"^{BBE} and "become like His Son."^{NLT}

The meaning of this passage is this: God has predetermined that everyone He adopts as sons (8:19) will be fashioned to bear the "image of Christ." That is not a commandment, it is a predetermination. It is not a possibility, it is a predestined purpose. It is not a goal for which we are to strive, but a work God will do.

The "IMAGE" of His Son

Why does the Spirit say "image of His Son?" Why not simply say "conformed to His Son?" Remember, the passage before us is elaborating on the manner in which we are being brought to glory. We are coming through the veil of sufferings, being "saved by hope." What we will ultimately be is determining the pathway through which we are being led. We are "heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ" (8:17). That has to do with our future, and our present affiliation with God, through Christ and by the Spirit, is preparing us for that future. In this glorious work, the Son of God is set before us through the Gospel. That presentation is, in a very real sense, "the image of His Son."

The idea is that God, through the Gospel, has set before us the Image to which we are being conformed. Of particular emphasis is that suffering is one of the means through which this conformity is being accomplished. As the Spirit said through Peter, "But when you do good and suffer, if you take it patiently, this is commendable before God. For to this you were called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that you should follow His steps" (1 Pet 2:21).

Not A Sudden Departure

Our text is not a sudden departure from the line of reasoning being developed. Ponder again what marvelous thoughts have been presented to us.

15. Faith has brought us into a fierce struggle with the flesh (7:15-25).
16. We are not condemned, even though we struggle and are tempted (8:1-4).
17. No concessions can be made to the flesh, even though it makes demands upon us (8:5-8).
18. The Holy Spirit is assisting us in the struggle with the flesh, directing and empowering us to mortify it (8:9-13).
19. The Spirit testifies to our spirit that we are the sons of God, even though we are engaged in warfare (8:16).
20. Our sonship and future glory are related to our present sufferings (8:17).

21. Our sufferings are not worthy to be compared with the glory that will be revealed in us (8:19).
22. The whole creation joins us in the travailing groans of expectation (8:20-22).
23. The redeemed are groaning in travail, expecting the redemption of their bodies (8:23).
24. The expectation of hope enables us to fight the good fight of faith (8:24-25).
25. The Holy Spirit helps our infirmities, making effective intercession for us, because we do not know what to pray for (8:26-27).
26. God Himself is working everything together, including our suffering and groaning, for our ultimate good (8:28).

Verses 29-30 explain WHY all is being worked together for our good. It is not just happenstance. Divine purpose is behind it all. God has predestinated that His children will be conformed to the "image," or representation, of His Son. That predetermination is what guarantees the outcome—that all will work together for our good.

Conformity to the Image Involves Means

This verse is not teaching a mere Divine appointment, but the means through which that sure and unaltered assignation will be realized! Because we are standing on holy ground, great care must be taken to properly present what is declared in this passage. I have sought to make a distinction between being conformed to the "image of His Son," and being conformed to the Son. Let it be clear, we "shall be like Him," according to the promise of God (1 John 3:1-2). When Jesus appears, we will also "appear with Him in glory" (Col 3:4), receiving bodies "like unto His glorious body" (Phil 3:20-21). That is a precious truth that must be heartily embraced by the saints.

However, this is not what is being taught in the verses under consideration. God has predestinated His children will be conformed to the "image," or representation, of His Son. In my judgment, this is declaring the same thing affirmed in Second Corinthians. "But we all, with open [unveiled] face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord" (3:18). Later in the same book, this reality is stated again: "For it is the God who commanded light to shine out of darkness, who has shone in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ" (4:6).

In our sufferings, the Holy Spirit so powerfully intercedes for us that God enables us to see Christ Jesus, His Son, more clearly and precisely. As we behold that revealed "image of His Son," we are actually conformed to what is perceived.

This process refers to being changed by what we have beheld of Christ. God is conforming us to what we see, or perceive, of Christ Jesus. This is not cast into the area of personal opinion, for God Himself is the One revealing the Son. He does this through the Gospel, but in an intensely personal way. The principle is precisely the same as experienced by Moses in the holy mount. His person was altered by what he saw of God—which is precisely the point in Second Corinthians 3:7-18).

In our sufferings, the Holy Spirit so powerfully intercedes for us that God enables us to see Christ Jesus, His Son, more clearly and precisely. As we behold that revealed "image of His Son," we are actually conformed to what is perceived.

An Example

We have a concrete example of this in the death of Stephen. When this mighty man of God was rejected by the Jewish council, Scripture says, "he, being full of the Holy Spirit, gazed into heaven and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God." The sight was so glorious he shouted, "Look! I see the heavens opened and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God!" ^{NKJV} (Acts 7:55-56). Now, we will see how that perception influenced Stephen.

The council immediately led Stephen out of the city and stoned him. As the stones struck upon this saint, he knelt down, crying out with a loud voice: "Lord, do not charge them with this sin" (Acts 7:60). What had happened? In his sufferings, Stephen was given to see the Lord Jesus, and was conformed to the image he perceived! His response to his own sufferings precisely conformed to the Lord's own response to those who killed Him: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do" (Lk 23:34).

Our Ultimate Conformity

We are being conformed the "image" of Christ now through the ministry of the Holy Spirit. To the degree we see Jesus, that change is accomplished "from one stage of glory to another." When Jesus comes again, the conforming process will reach its culmination. Then, in the fullest and most precise sense, "we shall be like Him!" And what is the means through which that blessed conformity will be accomplished? We are not left to speculate on the matter: "because we shall see Him just as He is." (1 John 3:2). We will be conformed to "the image" – what we behold. Then our beholding will be unfettered and complete—"just as He is." For that reason, the conformity will be thorough! This is the predestinated purpose of the Almighty. It begins now, and will be consummated at the appearing of Christ.

Jesus is, then, a pattern of what believers are pre-appointed to become. While this must become our purpose also, that is not the point of this text. Here the Spirit affirms this to be God's predetermined and unwavering purpose. This is the settled objective of the whole redemptive enterprise. There is not the slightest chance this will not be accomplished.

As demonstrated throughout Divine history, God is fully capable of accomplishing His purpose. His word has gone out on this matter, and it will not return unto Him "void," or "without accomplishing" what He has determined ^{NASB} (Isa 55:11). Those whom He foreknew will be "conformed to the image of His Son." Their perception of Jesus will precisely determine what they become. It all begins here, in the midst of suffering. It will be brought to a glorious consummation when God shows, or unveils, "the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords" (1 Tim 6:15).

The Relevance of Seeing Jesus

All of this accents the importance of perceiving Jesus now—knowing and understanding Him! Preaching and teaching that opens Jesus to the understanding of people prepares them for transformation. When men do not see Jesus, they are shut up to nature. Through the revelation of the Gospel "we see Jesus" (Heb 2:9) – that is His "image." It is through that perception that we are conformed to what we behold by faith!

A Sterling Example for Us

Allow me to bring Paul to the witness stand. He will confirm what I have said, and show the marvelous reality of God's predetermined purpose. In a rare and extended declaration of what motivated him, Paul revealed the powerful effects of perceiving Jesus.

When Paul confronted Jesus, it constrained him to change his whole purpose and focus. Although he was part of an elite group within an elite race, and although he had unparalleled religious advantages, he counted all of them "loss for Christ." He willingly and zealously did this "in view of the surpassing value of knowing Christ Jesus." ^{NASB} In comparison to "gaining Christ" he saw everything else to be "dung." With unparalleled fervency Paul desired to "know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being conformed to His death." ^{NKJV} He was unrelenting in his pursuit of this objective.

Although confronted by seemingly insurmountable obstacles, Paul "pressed on," that he might "lay hold of that for which Christ Jesus has also laid hold of me." ^{NKJV} Although he knew full well he had not yet apprehended, his aim became single, as he forgot the things that were behind and stretched forward to "things which are ahead." He pressed "toward the goal for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus" (Phil 3:7-14). The result was that his labors were indefatigable. In fact he "labored more abundantly" than all the other apostles (1 Cor 15:10). He approached his appointment with the same kind of zeal the Son of God approached His (Lk 9:51).

What made the Apostle do this? Why was he so radically transformed from being a persecutor to being a member of the household of faith? It is because he saw Jesus! He was being conformed to Christ's perceived image! He knew this is how God has determined valid change to take place, and therefore determined to "know" Christ, experience the "power of His resurrection," and be made "conformable to His death" through sufferings.

Deliver Us From Mere Academic Views

How the church needs to be delivered from lifeless academic views of Jesus! The Gospel contains the only valid view of the Son of God, and it is to be believed, embraced, and heartily sought. Historical views of Jesus, however interesting they may appear, will never conform anyone to "the image of His Son." Philosophizing about Jesus will not change anyone, or make them more like their Savior!

Comforting to Know

It is comforting to know God has predestinated conformity to Christ's image! From a practical point of view, that means you WILL become like what you see of Jesus. This does not refer to an intellectual view, but the persuasion of faith, which is "the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen (with the eye)." What faith perceives of the Son of God will have as sure an effect upon man's spirit as the sight of God's glory had an effect on Moses' face! The final transformation will come when those who were being changed in the earth behold the Lord Jesus in all of His glory!

Furthermore, earth cannot produce a situation where the sight of Jesus can be effectively blocked! He can be seen while Stephen is being stoned. Paul and Silas can see him from prison, while their feet are in stocks. Peter can see him from a prison cell, and John the Baptist while he is on his way to be beheaded.

Not Predestinated to Be Sons, But Sons Predestinated to be Like THE Son

This text is not teaching that God predestinated who would be saved, or become His children. I do not question this is taught elsewhere, although care must be taken in drawing unwarranted conclusions from those affirmations (Eph 1:4-5,11; 1 Thess 1:4; 2 Thess 2:13; 2 Tim 1:9; 1 Pet 1:2).

Our text declares what God has predestinated concerning His children—those who are born of the Spirit. They will become like Jesus Christ! The process begins now, being especially made known in the crucible of suffering. It will be brought to completion when we behold the "only begotten Son" in all of His glory.

All of this has a significant bearing on us now. Those who are presently being "changed from glory unto glory" have, in that change, the pledge of future glory. Those who are not being changed are not beholding Jesus! If it is true that God has predetermined that men will be conformed to the "IMAGE of His Son," we had better keep that "image" in Christ's brethren are also His children. They are His brethren because God is their Father as well as His. As it is written, "For both He who sanctifies and be "like Him." All of His brethren will be "like Him."

That is God's predestinated purpose. It cannot be negated or changed. It only remains whether or not we become involved in the conforming process here and now. If we do, we will be fully conformed to the "image His Son" when He appears. If we do not, His appearance will find us consigned to perdition.

Let it be clear in your mind that God's aim is not simply to remit your sin – although that is necessary for the larger purpose. Neither, indeed, is His objective form you to reach all of the world for Jesus – although that too is involved in the ultimate purpose.

Salvation Is Not A Mere Formality

With the era of an academic approach to the things of God, salvation began to be viewed as a mere formality. All manner of doctrines have been foisted upon men that represent salvation as a once-for-all experience that takes place at a given point in time. No essential change is perceived as taking place after that. Some have formulated this into a doctrinal statement. Others, refusing to adopt a credal statement, simply live as though that were the case.

Thus churches are literally filled with people who have made no apparent progress in the faith at all. They appear to see Christ no clearer than they ever did, and perhaps even less. There is no obvious conforming work going on. They do not seem to think more and more like Jesus, or increasingly see things with "the mind of Christ." Most of these people have little or no confidence or assurance, and it is no wonder. It is difficult to have any degree of assurance when you are almost totally lacking any evidence of being related to Jesus!

It is not our purpose to sit in judgment upon other people. There is One who is able to save or destroy (James 4:12). However, it is our obligation to boldly proclaim the revealed purpose of God—even, His predestinated purpose. Where that purpose is not taking place, there is no evidence of salvation. It is conceivable that God is conforming those who, because of flawed teaching or spiritual immaturity, are not yet aware of it. That is one of the reasons for this strong section of Scripture.

view. This is not a mere mental image, or an impression created by human imagination. Rather, it is the "image" developed by faith when the Gospel is believed, embraced, pondered, and preferred above all else.

THE REASON FOR PREDESTINATION

What is the reason for God predestinating that His children be conformed to the "image of His Son?" It is marvelous for simplicity, yet mysterious because of its profundity. It is in order "that He might be the firstborn among many brethren." The objective was to have a whole race of personalities that were like Jesus Christ. He was the "Firstborn," the first of a new race who would all become like Him. They would be changed into His image.

Let it be clear in your mind that God's aim is not simply to remit your sin – although that is necessary for the larger purpose. Neither, indeed, is His objective form you to reach all of the world for Jesus – although that too is involved in the ultimate purpose. The revealed purpose is not to build an institution or give you extraordinary health and wealth! Such delusions are unbecoming for the saints of God. Whatever good may be seen in them, they are centered in this world, not "the world to come." The "image of His Son" is the point of conformity.

Christ's Brethren Are His Children

those who are being sanctified are all of one, for which reason He is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, I will declare thy name unto My brethren" ^{NKJV} (Heb 2:11). This circumstance is also reflected in the resurrected Lord's words to Mary Magdalene, the very first person to whom He appeared following His resurrection. " . . . go to My brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto My Father, and your Father; and to My God, and your God" (John 20:17).

The same individuals are also called Christ's "children." Thus, He is depicted as standing at last before the Father saying, "Behold I and the children which God hath given me" (Heb 2:13). Isaiah prophesied that the vicarious death of Christ would yield multitudinous offspring. "But the LORD was pleased To crush Him, putting Him to grief; If He would render Himself as a guilt offering, He will see His offspring, He will prolong His days, And the good pleasure of the LORD will prosper in His hand" (Isa 53:10). The Psalmist boldly announced, "A seed shall serve him" (Psa 22:30). Jesus is like "a grain of wheat" that went into the ground, but brought forth "much fruit" (John 12:24).

Aaron's children were not like him (Lev 10:1). Eli's children were not like him (1 Sam 2:12). David's children were not like him (2 Sam 13). Joseph's brethren were not like him (Gen 37). David's brethren were not like him (1 Sam 17:28). But all of Jesus' children will

CHRIST'S BRETHREN ARE ALSO HIS CHILDREN, AND THEY WILL BE CONFORMED TO HIS IMAGE.

THE APPOINTED PROCEDURE

“³⁰ Moreover whom He predestined, these He also called; whom He called, these He also justified; and whom He justified, these He also glorified.” In our text, the Lord is “declaring the end from the beginning . . . the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure” (Isa 46:10). This is a marvelous proclamation of the involvement of God in every aspect of our salvation, from beginning to end. Several objectives are achieved in this declaration.

- 27. What God is doing in Christ Jesus is clarified.
- 28. The surety of salvation is established.
- 29. The processes by which we are being brought to glory are affirmed.
- 30. The preeminence of God Himself in salvation is declared.
- 31. The points at which we are identified with the processes are made known.
- 32. A basis for strong confidence and assurance is substantiated.
- 33. The critical choices—the ones guaranteeing the completion of our salvation—belong to God alone.

Allow me to underscore that this is a commentary on the working of God, not the response of men. HE predestinated. HE calls. HE justified. HE glorifies. Faith can build on that foundation!

It is another way of saying, “He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ” (Phil 1:6).

The Lord knows all of those to whom these words apply. As it is written, “Nevertheless the solid foundation of God stands, having this seal: ‘The Lord knows those who are His’” (2 Tim 2:19). The text has been clear on this. God foreknew all of His children, and predetermined they would be conformed to the image of His Son. This is WHY “all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose” (v 28). This is the Spirit’s explanation for the safe arrival of “the elect” in the world to come. It is not given to cause confusion, but to spawn and nourish hope. If we will believe, that is precisely what this proclamation will do for us. It will help us, and will not hinder us.

CALLING

“Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called . . .” At this point we learn that while Divine choices are not always known to us, we can now associate our calling—something we DO know—with God’s predetermination. In fact, Peter puts calling and election together: “Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure . . .” (2 Pet 1:10). Predestination, or election, is not to be viewed as a cold and lifeless doctrine! A Living God cannot proclaim lifeless doctrine!

will turn you back by the way which you came” (Isa 37:29). This is not, however, how salvation is implemented! The salvation of God is set in motion by a call.

Those who are predestined are called. From the beginning, God has made known He calls, invites, or summons. This is the very first response of God to the fall of man: “And the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?” (Gen 3:9). A call is how Abraham was brought into the working of the Lord (Gen 12:1-3). God brought Moses into the work of appointed deliverance when he “called unto him out of the midst of the bush” (Ex 3:4). Samuel was summoned into Divine employment when “the Lord called” him (1 Sam 3:4). When Jesus chose His disciples, He did it by calling them unto Himself (Matt 10:1).

Those who are predestined are called. From the beginning, God has made known He calls, invites, or summons. This is the very first response of God to the fall of man: “And the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?”

In all of the examples, the ones called were first chosen. It is the same in our text: “those He predestined, He also called.” ^{NIV} Elsewhere in Scripture, we are told that God calls men by the Gospel of His Son. “God from the beginning chose you for salvation through sanctification by the Spirit and belief in the truth, to which He called you by our gospel, for the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ” (2 Thess 2:14). The Spirit uses the Gospel to awaken conviction and deep desire within those who are “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1). The Gospel boldly announces “Whoever desires, let him take the water of life freely” (Rev 22:17). That is obviously an invitation that is open to every person.

Divine Choice Implemented by Means

Immediately we see that the foreknowledge and predestination of God are carried out by appointed means. In the matter of salvation, God does not accomplish His determinations by decree, or Divine fiat. His people are not spoken into existence.

The Predestinated Are Called

Those God foreknew and determined to be conformed to the image of His Son are “called.” God can put a hook in the jaw of His creation, and draw them in, so to speak. Thus He said to Sennacherib, “Therefore I will put My hook in your nose, And My bridle in your lips, And I

But our text does not say every person is called – only those who are “predestinated.” This does not mean the Gospel is not addressed to everyone, or that a general summons is not sounded to “every creature” (Mk 16:16). Rather, this is viewing the totality and conclusion of salvation from the beginning. These are common factors to all who ultimately will be glorified.

God Knows How

God knows how to get the Gospel call to those He foreknew. He can, for example, get the Gospel to the treasurer of the Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, whom no one but God knew was searching to know the meaning of Isaiah's prophecy of Jesus (Acts 8:26-29). The Lord once directed Paul to remain in Corinth for, He said, "I have much people in this city" (Acts 18:10). Who can forget the whole city of Samaria responding to the Gospel call (Acts 8:5-6), or the centurion Cornelius and his entire household, directed miraculously by God so they could hear the call (Acts 10:1-48). Lydia and several women by a river praying, unexpectedly heard the call from Paul and Silas (Acts 16:13-15). The Philippian jailor, awakened by tumult and chaos, heard the call of the Gospel and responded (Acts 16:25-34). What of Saul of Tarsus himself, arrested by a Divine call from the glorified Christ (Acts 9:1-19).

These occasions did not happen by mere chance. They were Divinely orchestrated! A holy angel directed Philip to go to the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:26). The Lord Himself appeared to Paul, directing him to remain in Corinth (Acts 18:9). An angel of God appeared to Cornelius, preparing him for the Gospel, and instructing him what to do (Acts 10:3). A vision and voice "from heaven" informed Peter of his role in Cornelius hearing the Gospel (Acts 10:11-16). Lydia, the Philippian jailor, and those with them, heard the Gospel because of a vision Paul had in which "There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us" (Acts 16:9). As for Saul of Tarsus, he heard what he was to do because the glorified Christ Himself appeared to him saying, "Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do" (Acts 9:6).

When you view salvation from the perspective of the day of judgment, it will be easy to loudly confess, "those He predestined, He also called." ^{NIV} He has provided us the details of particular conversions to assure us of this. If we are unable to see the details of our own calling, we are still to believe it was not the result of mere chance. Nothing in Scripture will lead a person to such a conclusion. We must be sure we do not allow man-made theology to do so.'

An Inside View

What we are reading is an inside view of salvation. It is not intended to be declared to the lost, providing them with an excuse for not seeking the Lord. This word is meant to comfort the people of God, assuring them He will complete the work He has started in them.

Jesus offered a word of explanation concerning the reception of His word by some, while others failed to receive it. "He who is of God hears God's words; therefore you do not hear, because you are not of God" (John 8:47). When reading this, keep in mind, "The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the LORD hath made even both of them" (Prov 20:12). Particularly when contemplating responding to the Gospel call, it is God "that planted the ear" (Psa 94:9). There are those who DO have "ears to hear" (Matt 11:15). Those who lack such ears do so because "the LORD hath not given [them] an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear" (Deut 29:4). That explanation is revealed and should be accepted.

Those "with ears to hear" have NOT escaped the attention of God. Whether they are in a lonely desert, by a river, or in an idolatrous Grecian city, "whom He did predestinate, them He also called."

He will appeal to their volition and to their will! He will see to it that the Gospel gets to them just as surely as it did to you!

Not Intended to Make Us Slothful

God forbid that any should conclude that this circumstance justifies a slothful stance in regard to preaching the Gospel "to every creature." Rather, as we walk by faith and lean not to our own understanding, the Lord will direct our path (Prov 3:5-6) into productive service.

Do Not Draw Fine Lines

Some have drawn fine theological lines that allow for the formation of a highly systematic theology. They conclude that because men are "dead in trespasses and sins," they cannot respond to God. They must first be awakened from the "sleep of death." But this is not the reasoning or declaration of the Holy Spirit. The cause of our salvation is so presented that we may conclude in faith, "all things are of God" (2 Cor 5:18), and "For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things, to whom be glory forever" (Rom 11:36).

You were called by God because He foreknew you and predestinated you to be conformed to the image of His Son. That is how you are to reason on the matter. That way of thinking will produce an abundance of thanksgiving and propel you into hearty labor for His great name.

No wonder the saints of God are referred to as "the called" (Rom 1:6; 8:28). No marvel they are admonished to "see" their "calling" (1 Cor 1:26). We have been "CALLED" into Christ's fellowship (1 Cor 1:9), "to peace" (1 Cor 7:15), and "into the grace of Christ" (Gal 1:6). Believers have been "CALLED" into liberty (Gal 5:13), God's "kingdom and glory" (1 Thess 2:12), and "unto holiness" (1 Thess 4:7).

JUSTIFICATION

"... and whom He called, them He also justified..." The text does not say that justification is offered to every one that is called, but that the ones He calls are "also justified." That tells us He is not speaking of the general call that goes out to the whole world. These are those who were effectively drawn to Christ by God, and whom Jesus did not cast away (John 6:44). This is admittedly a high view, but faith needs to hear it. Jesus said, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out" (John 6:37).

These are the people who are "justified" – those effectively called. Justification is the imputation of God's righteousness. From the underside, it is the complete acquittal from all guilt. As it is written, "And by Him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses" (Acts 13:39). From the top side, justification is being "made the righteousness of God in Him [Christ]" (2 Cor 5:21). Justification involves the complete removal of the curse brought on by sin. It also involves the impartation of the Divine nature (2 Pet 1:4).

And to whom is this singular blessing given? It is for those whom "He also called!" The invitation of the Gospel, then, is necessarily joined to "justification," or being "made righteous" (Rom 5:19). This involves reconciliation to God (Col 1:21), deliverance from indebtedness to the flesh (Rom 8:12), and liberation from the defiled conscience (Heb 9:14). It includes peace with God (Rom 5:1), fellowship with Christ (1 Cor 1:9), and access to the Father and His grace (Rom 5:2; Eph 3:12).

God Himself justifies: "HE also justified." It is not the result of human ingenuity or mere conformity to a code. It follows the call of God: "whom HE called, them HE also justified."

The Association with Our Text

We cannot allow our minds to drift away from the subject at hand: suffering with Christ (8:17). We are suffering together with the "whole creation." Christians, particularly those who know very little about the magnitude and glory of their salvation, will be tempted to recoil from suffering. They may even consider modifying their commitment to Christ, or no longer confessing Him before men.

The reasoning of our text is this: "If you are tempted to despair because of suffering, consider what marvelous benefits have come to you because you were sensitive to the call of God! If such blessings followed your calling, what will attend your justification? Even though the world is against you, all of heaven is for you. Do not draw back from suffering, it is the appointed means of coming into an eternal reign!"

GLORIFICATION

"... and whom He justified, them He also glorified." This is the language of

If you are tempted to despair because of suffering, consider what marvelous benefits have come to you because you were sensitive to the call of God! If such blessings followed your calling, what will attend your justification? Even though the world is against you, all of heaven is for you. Do not draw back from suffering, it is the appointed means of coming into an eternal reign!

hope. It is something that has not yet been experienced, but is as sure as our calling and justification. Glorification is as much a part of salvation as being "called." It is as essential as being "justified." It is something that man can no more accomplish than his own calling or justification. This is something that God must do, or it will not be done. The point of our text is that He WILL do it.

Being "glorified" is the final stage of being "conformed to the image of His Son." It is when we will "be like Him," and it will happen because we will "see Him as He is" (1 John 3:1-2). Glorification involves the complete removal of every competing and inhibiting influence. It also involves receiving a glorified body that is like Christ's "glorious body" (Phil 3:20-21).

This is glory that is eternal, and does not pertain to life in this world. It is the appointed answer to inward struggle, and "the sufferings of this present time" (8:18). We are told that salvation is "with eternal glory" (1 Tim 2:10), and that we have been called "unto His eternal glory by Christ Jesus" (1 Pet 5:10). The Lord Jesus, in His mediatorial ministry, is "bringing many sons to glory" (Heb 2:10). All of this confirms that the purpose of God's "great salvation" is primarily related to the world to come, not this one. It is in prospect of the time when death will be "swallowed up in victory," and "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away" (Rev 21:4).

Although believers have not yet been "glorified," it is spoken of as though it was already accomplished. The reason for this is that God has already determined it. But why is there such an unwavering note in this text? Is it not possible to fall into sin again, and actually be overcome by it, producing a worse state than at the first. Indeed, it is! As it is written, "For if, after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are again entangled in them and overcome, the latter end is worse for them than the beginning. For it would have been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than having known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered to them" (2 Pet 2:20). Why, then, speak of being glorified as though it had already occurred—especially since we remain in a danger zone? Can faith lay hold of a word like this?

This Is the Norm

Settle it in your mind that while falling away is possible, it is certainly not the norm of the Kingdom. Those who are "fallen from grace" (Gal 5:4) or "depart from the faith" (1 Tim 4:1), have neglected the means of salvation. Presently, the benefits of salvation are ALL held by faith. Glorification will remove the necessity of faith, at least as we know it.

As long as we live by faith, glorification is sure. It is appointed to follow justification. That justification is both obtained and maintained "by faith" (Rom 3:28; 5:1; Gal 2:16; 3:24). It is not possible to have faith without being justified. Equally true, it is not possible to be justified and not be glorified.

Jesus prayed for the glorification of those who had been given to Him by the Father. "Father, I desire that they also, whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am, in order that they may behold My glory, which Thou hast given Me; for Thou didst love Me before the foundation of the world" (John 17:24). John clarified that beholding Jesus as He is will result in us being "like Him" (1 John 3:2).

This appointed procedure is also proclaimed in Second Thessalonians. "For this purpose He called you through our proclamation of the good news, so that you may obtain the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ"^{NRSV} (2:14).

All of this is intended to confirm to our hearts the fulness and surety of salvation. As faith lays hold of this word, it will strengthen us to endure suffering in anticipation of being glorified. It is as sure as our calling and justification.

Why Is So Little Being Said

If God has called us to obtain glory, and if that is the appointed result of being justified, why is so little being said about glory these days? Why is such a stress being placed on "the affairs of this life," to the neglect of the coming glory? Why is the church being flooded with supposed experts in solving problems, rather than men who are able to assist men and women in preparing for glory? And why, with all of these experts, do we appear to have more problems than ever before? Why aren't these specialists more special?

Why do we hear so little about heaven, being glorified, and reigning with Jesus? Why are such things as the coming of Christ, the end of the world, and the day of judgment so rarely declared? Why does hope languish and faith wither? It is because the matters declared in this passage are perceived as having no real significance to the institutional program. They simply are not seen as relevant, and are thus neglected, and often despised.

THE RESPONSE OF FAITH

³¹ What then shall we say to these things? If God is for us, who can be against us? It is not enough to simply adopt a proper theological position. The truth must touch our hearts, provoking us to think correctly about the opposition we face. If opposition from the enemy is an integral part of spiritual life, then we should be able to view it properly. Thus the marvelous things set before us demand a response from us.

The Spirit has lifted us into the heavenly realms. He has told us the reason for our sufferings, and that we are not alone in them. He has announced that nothing about salvation has been left to chance. From beginning to end, the Lord Himself is involved. He knew us before the foundation of the world. He determined we would be conformed to the image of His Son. He called us. He justified us. He will yet glorify us. These are not suppositions or possibilities, they are bold proclamations to be believed. Now it is necessary to arrive at a God-honoring conclusion.

WHAT SHALL WE SAY?

If we could look into men's hearts,

many would say, "I do not believe 'these things!'" Others would not say that, but they never declare "these things." Although the Spirit has stated some very remarkable realities, they have not registered upon the hearts of such people. They think nothing of simply eliminating them from their preaching and teaching.

The Spirit, however, will not allow us to brush these things aside. He bring them to bear upon our hearts and minds. If we will hear what the Spirit is saying, He will lead us to consider these matters and think correctly about them. The persuasion of them is critical to our triumph in both life and death.

GOD IS FOR US

"If God is for us . . ." This does not suggest that God is NOT "for us," but actually affirms that He IS. This is family language. The "us" refers to those who have been justified by faith and against whom there is no condemnation. The fact that God foreknew us proves He is "for us." Predestinating that we be conformed to the image of His Son confirms He is "for us." Consider how our God broke through the silence of ignorance, the deadness of sin, and the forces of darkness, calling us to Himself. That proves He is "for us." The fact that He justified us declares that He is "for us." His revealed intentions to glorify us also substantiates that He is "for us." Let no one doubt this fact, or suppose that God is against them if they have believed the record He has given of His Son (1 John 5:10-11)!

Who is the professed believer who will dare to question that God is "for" them, working everything together for their good? Who will question His benevolence because they face hardship, suffer, or experience fierce opposition? One of the great tragedies of our time is that self-acclaimed Christian teachers lead people to imagine that questioning God or even being angry with Him is all right. It is not all right! It is evidence of unbelief, and without faith, it is impossible to please God!

The point of the words, "If God be for us," is to establish that there can be no justified doubt of this. This is so firm we can reason upon the basis of its reality, and derive comfort for our souls.

WHO CAN BE AGAINST US

"... who CAN be against us?" Some versions read, "who IS against us." NASB, NIV, NRSV It is like saying, "Is Goliath effectively against David? Can Nebuchadnezzar really do anything against Daniel? Are the 450 prophets of Baal really jeopardizing Elijah? If God is for Joseph, will his brothers be able to bring him down? If God has decreed Sarah will have a son, will anything be able to stop it?"

Oh, the people of God do have enemies. But all of them, to a person, are under the governing power of God. Every child of God can say to every one of their enemies, "You would have no authority over Me, unless it had been given you from above" NASB (John 19:11). Not even the devil himself can harass us without permission (Lk 22:31).

This question ["Who can be against us?"] is affirming that the process revealed cannot be aborted by any foe from any realm! No enemy can stop the process of being conformed to the image of God's Son! No foe can stop those foreknown by God from being called. No hostile forces can prohibit God from justifying those He calls. There is no opponent that can keep God from glorifying those He has justified! That is the way it is, and faith accepts it!

The "ransomed of the Lord" can cry out with David, "I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people Who have set themselves against me all around" (Psa 3:6). And again, "In God I have put my trust; I will not be afraid. What can man do to me?" (Psa 56:11). And again, "The LORD is my light and my salvation; Whom shall I fear? The LORD is the strength of my life; Of whom shall I be afraid?" (Psa 27:1). These are proper conclusions to the doctrines set before us. They make for confidence, boldness, and great joy. No person who has received the love of the truth has cause to be fearful of man or circumstance! Child of God, believe this: God IS for you!

THE REASONING OF FAITH

"³² He who did not spare His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?" There is more to be said on this matter: "What shall we say to these things?" They are too great and powerful for simplistic responses. Faith can reach into the depths of sanctified reason, coming up with conclusions that bring glory to God, honor to Jesus, and strength to the heart.

GOD DID NOT SPARE HIS OWN SON

Jesus once cried out to be spared: "O My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me" (Matt 26:39). Of this occasion it says, "Who in the days of His flesh, when He had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto Him that was able to save Him from death, and was heard in that He feared" (Heb 5:7). The Father did not deliver Jesus in the sense of not allowing Him to die. Instead, He delivered Him from being swallowed up of death. In other words, He raised Him from the dead. However, He did not spare Him from death.

Who was more worthy to be spared than Jesus? He had not sinned, and there was no guile in His mouth. He had spoken all the Father had given Him to say, and did only what He saw the Father doing. He had went about doing good and healing all who were oppressed of the devil. Who was more fitting to be spared? But God "did not spare His OWN SON."

GOD DELIVERED JESUS UP

Peter declared Jesus was "delivered by the determined purpose and foreknowledge of God" (Acts 2:23). Paul goes even further, declaring it was God Himself who delivered Him up. It was the Father who delivered Him "for our offenses" (Rom 4:25). The Savior was not victimized by the powers of darkness. God delivered His Son over to them. As Jesus Himself said to those arresting Him, "Have you come out, as against a robber, with swords and clubs? When I was with you daily in the temple, you did not try to seize Me. But this is your hour, and the power of darkness" NKJV (Lk 22:52-53).

Jesus was "the Lamb of God," and God Himself offered Him! He "delivered Him up for us all!" Never forget, we are not saved by what men did to Jesus! It is not the opposition of Caiaphas, Pilate, and Herod that saved us! It was God's opposition to the Son, when He laid on Him the stripes by which we are healed! The wrath of God thrashed Jesus on the cross in order that we might go free. In the deepest and fullest sense of the word, Jesus "tasted death for every man" (Heb 2:9).

GOD FREELY GIVES US ALL THINGS

The Spirit is confirming to our hearts that God is "for us," and nothing can be effectively "against us." If God did not spare His Son, delivering Him over to death in order that we might be reconciled, what will He do for us now that Jesus is raised and we are justified? If He extended Himself for us when we were enemies, what will He do for us now that we are reconciled. If we received grace when we were sinners, what will we receive now that we are righteous? Here is the same line of reasoning stated earlier in Romans. "But God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, being now justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life" (5:8-10).

The Father did not deliver Jesus in the sense of not allowing Him to die. Instead, He delivered Him from being swallowed up of death. In other words, He raised Him from the dead. However, He did not spare Him from death.

Now that we have received the Spirit of adoption, God will "freely," or graciously and abundantly, give us "all things." These are "all things that pertain unto life and godliness" (2 Pet 1:3). They are everything required to safely negotiate through the straits of suffering and opposition, weakness and trouble, to the other side!

If God did not withhold His Son when we were "dead in trespasses and sins," will He refuse to give us what we need to resist the devil, go on to perfection, and endure suffering? Indeed, He will not! When we are "without money," we can "come," "buy," and "eat" at the Masters table. Now that we are "in Christ Jesus," "no good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly" (Psa 84:11). Child of God, you can count on that! You can receive precisely what you need, when you need it!

THE CONFIDENCE OF FAITH

"³³ Who shall bring a charge against God's elect? It is God who justifies." With great power, the Spirit continues to teach us how to respond to the question, "What shall we say to these things?" Proper questions are deserving of proper answers! Thus the Spirit does not leave the answer up to men. Rather He tutors us in how to answer, knowing that faith will at once recognize the validity of the response and derive help from it.

BRINGING A CHARGE

The saints of God have been declared to be "justified" – fully exonerated of all guilt. Is that justification thorough? Is there a personality in heaven, earth, or hell, that can level a charge against the person the mighty God has justified? Can someone dredge through our sordid past and find something that can be charged against us?

Let us bring Joshua the high priest to the witness stand, and let him testify on this matter. In his case we will confront the ultimate enemy who will raise the ultimate accusation. The accusation will also be attempted before the ultimate tribunal, the throne of Almighty God. This vision was revealed to Zechariah the prophet.

"And he showed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the LORD, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him. And the LORD said unto Satan, The LORD rebuke thee, O Satan; even the LORD that hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee: is not this a brand plucked out of the fire? Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments, and stood before the angel. And he answered and spake unto those that stood before him, saying, Take away the filthy garments from him. And unto him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment" (Zech 3:1-4).

There you have it! A charge sought to be leveled against someone serving the Lord. Other versions say Satan was at Joshua's right hand "to accuse him." NASB,NIV The situation was even complicated by the fact that Joshua was "clothed with filthy garments." Surely this is a case where a valid accusation can be made. The most crafty of all enemies is set to make it. The person against whom it is to be leveled has no righteousness of his own.

Satan does not get a chance to raise the accusation. Although Joshua was standing before the angel of the Lord, the Lord Himself intervenes. He does not rebuke Joshua for having filthy garments, but Satan for seeking to accuse him. Joshua is a "brand plucked from the fire," and God will allow no accusation to be made against him!

But that was not the end of the matter. God said to those standing by Joshua, "Take away the filthy garments from him." He then informed Joshua what had happened. "Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment." See, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

GOD'S ELECT

The "elect" are the ones God foreknew, predestinated to be conformed to the image of His Son, called, and justified. Furthermore, He has also determined to glorify them. In fact, that is His predetermined and unalterable purpose. Now, who will lay anything to the charge of these "elect."

These are not people who elected God. God elected them. They are "God's elect," God is not their elect! It is true that they know God. It is "rather" true that they are known by God (Gal 4:9). They are called "the elect" – that is one of the terms by which they are known. Jesus called them "the elect" (Mk 13:22). Paul called them "the elect" (Col 3:12; 1 Tim 5:21). John called them "the elect" (2 John 1). The church is "elected" (1 Pet 5:13). God's purpose stands "according to election" (Rom 9:11). There is an "election of grace" (Rom 11:5). Even though great masses of Israel were cut off from salvation, "the election hath obtained it" (Rom 11:7). The "election of God" can be known (1 Thess 1:4). It is our business to give diligence to make our "calling and election sure" (2 Pet 1:10).

Now, who is going to level a successful charge against a people so identified? Furthermore, what would move people to resist such an appellation—"God's elect?" To "elect" is to choose or select. No person should question there are people God has chosen, or selected. In fact, the saints are called a "chosen generation" (1 Pet 2:9). Believers are emphatically told, "He has chosen us in Him" (Eph 1:4). Those identified with Jesus "are called, and chosen, and faithful" (Rev 17:14). Who is there that can raise a charge against these people? Who can burst before God and accuse His "elect"?

By this, He means that the debt incurred by sin has been fully paid, and the complete penalty exacted at the hands of Christ Jesus. He was "made a curse for us," enduring the judgment of God, and treading the winepress of the wrath of God alone

GOD JUSTIFIES

The inability to accuse these people is not owing to a law that has been issued against doing so. It is not that accusations are illegal. When God justifies people, there simply is nothing that can be found against them! They may be wearing filthy garments because of an untrained and guilty conscience, but they have been plucked from the fire of condemnation, and no record of transgression can be found against them.

Micah said God would "subdue" the "iniquities" of the people, and "cast all their sins into the depths of the sea" (Micah 7:19). By this he means they cannot be accessed. They are beyond the reach of the accuser!

Isaiah foretold the coming age of grace when God spoke through him, "I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins: return unto me; for I have redeemed thee" (Isa 44:22). They no longer exist! They have been "removed" from us as "far as the East is from the West," and can no longer be joined to us (Psa 103:12).

That is the state of those whom God has justified. No one can lay an accusation against them and make it stick! Eventually, before an assembled universe, all accusations against them will be thrown down. In it God will be vindicated in the purity of His people.

EVERY NEED IS ADDRESSED

³⁴ Who is he who condemns? It is Christ who died, and furthermore is also risen, who is even at the right hand of God, who also makes intercession for us. The climax to this lofty argument is marvelous. Truth soars like a mighty eagle into the heavenly realms, summoning faith to follow. This chapter began with the words, "There is therefore no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus" (8:1). Now the Spirit hurls the challenge in the face of the adversary, and into the conscience of the believer as well. He is going to confirm that salvation has, indeed, been established as protective "walls and bulwarks" (Isa

HE WHO CONDEMNS

Who is the one who will condemn God's justified ones? If there really is "no condemnation," do not those who seek to censure God's people do so in vain? Because Goliath charged David with coming to him with sticks, cursed him by his gods, and condemned him to be eaten by the birds of the air and the beasts of the field, does that make it do? Can Nebuchadnezzar really condemn Daniel to be consumed in a den of lions? Or the three Hebrew children in a furnace of fire? If God is for them, can the enemies of God really pass judgment against them?

To condemn is to judge against, or pass sentence against because of some injustice. The person who seeks to condemn God's people attempts to pass a lasting sentence against them. That people make such attempts cannot be denied. The Sanhedrin condemned Stephen. Herod condemned James. Antipas, faithful martyr of Jesus, was condemned by his enemies. But know this, none of that condemnation will stand the test of the judgement seat of Christ. It will not survive the confrontation of the throne of Almighty God! God will reverse all of those condemnations made by his enemies, and his saints will “judge the world,” setting the record straight (1 Cor 6:2).

CHRIST WHO DIED

The Spirit now reasons with us, confirming it is impossible to condemn someone God has justified. First, “It is Christ who died.” By this, He means that the debt incurred by sin has been fully paid, and the complete penalty exacted at the hands of Christ Jesus. He was “made a curse for us,” enduring the judgment of God, and treading the winepress of the wrath of God alone (Gal 3:13; Isa 63:3). No one can condemn those who have been buried into the death of Christ! Christ’s death becomes their death also.

Even when our conscience condemns us because of our past, “How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?” (Heb 9:14). There is “no condemnation” to those who are in Christ Jesus!

FURTHERMORE IS RISEN

The work of Christ did not end at His death. “It is finished” John 19:30) referred to His death, not His work! I prefer the reading of the KJV–“yea, rather.” That is a more proper rendering of the word mallon, which means “very much, exceedingly, as a high point, more, and to a greater degree.” The idea is that if Christ’s death wrought such great things, what will be brought by His resurrection! He was “crucified through weakness” (2 Cor 13:4), being brought to His weakest point.

The “power of His resurrection” will now work even greater effects than His atoning death. As it is written, “For if while we were enemies, we were reconciled to God through the death of his Son, much more surely, having been to it by God Himself (Heb 3:1-2). Christ’s intercessory work is not merely keeping us from being condemned – that issue was settled by His death. We were reconciled by His death (Rom 5:10). His intercession is the means by which we are reconciled, will we be saved by his life”^{NRSV} (Rom 5:10). If no one can condemn us because Christ died, surely no one can condemn us now that He has risen from the dead and representing us in heaven!

If no one can condemn us because Christ died, surely no one can condemn us now that He has risen from the dead and representing us in heaven!

EVEN AT GOD’S RIGHT HAND

Behold how truth soars to lofty realms! Not only did Christ die, and was even more raised from the dead, He “is at the right hand of God,” where all final judgments are made, and from which all blessings are issued. He is not merely there for Himself, He is there for us! When the Father beholds the Son, He thinks of us, for we are some of His “many brethren.”

ALSO MAKING INTERCESSION

Jesus is not idle at the Father’s right hand. He “ever lives to make intercession for us” (Heb 7:25). His intercession is not a mere attempt to speak for us, it is an effective intercession. This is His High Priestly work, and He has been appointed sustained. This is the appointed way of getting supplies to us–“every good and perfect gift.” In His intercessory work He manages our trials, ensuring that none of them exceeds our ability (1 Cor 10:13). Angels are dispatched to protect us (Heb 1:13-14), and the Holy Spirit is sent by Him to minister to us.

No one can condemn the people of God because every provision required for their calling, justification, and glorification has been supplied in Christ. Nothing is lacking, therefore none can effectively accuse or condemn them. Praise the Lord! Additionally, He that is in them is greater than he that is in the world (1 John 4:4). Child of God, lift up your head! God is for you! Jesus is for you! The Spirit is for you! The holy angels are for you! Everything is being worked together for your ultimate good. They that are for us are more and greater than they who are against us. Be strong! Be strong! Lift up those feeble hands!

The passage we have just reviewed is to Scripture what the Holy of holies was to the tabernacle. Though brief in words, it is abundant with sanctifying truth. Everything is in the hand of God, who has appointed Jesus as the Arbiter of every facet of salvation.

helps us to not only make sense out of our sufferings, but endure them to the glory of God. In salvation nothing is left to chance. Everything is in the hand of God, who has appointed Jesus as the Arbiter of every facet of salvation. As with all pivotal or central proclamations, men have chosen to argue and debate over this text. Such great confusion has been generated by these controversies that unskillful preachers have chosen to ignore the text, withholding this precious and refreshing elixir from the saints. The results have been devastating. The confidence, boldness, and joy that can be ministered by the persuasion of these things can hardly be found among professed believers. Thousands of churches exist in which hardly a single person can be found that is being noticeably conformed to the image of God's Son. There is scarcely a spark of understanding that even sees such a conformity as necessary, much less predestinated.

Theological schools have elected to put their accent on other things – and what a conglomeration of things they are! They range from developing happy families and smooth running institutions, to resolving domestic difficulties and revising the music of the church. Those who are seemingly more astute give themselves to critiquing the Bible, providing such valuable information as what books and texts do or do not belong in the Bible. They can even develop a theological template through which we can read the Bible, just to ensure we come to the same deceptive conclusions they have.

All of this may seem quite innocent, but it is not. The weak and emaciated churches that clutter the landscape of the Christian world are the direct result of their leadership. Blind guides have led them, and they have all fallen into the ditch. This is precisely why such a high level of Scriptural illiteracy exists in the churches. It is why the people stumble through life without a strong confidence, knowing whom they have believed, and being persuaded He is able to keep what they have committed unto Him until "that day." I do not mean to be overly critical, but the serious of the situation demands that strong words be spoken. Jesus is not honored by such conditions. They betray a high level of unbelief.

This passage will give great assistance in resolving these unfortunate difficulties. It is to be faithfully and powerfully proclaimed in faith. It has been given to the children of God for sustenance and encouragement.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 28

GOD'S EVERLASTING LOVE

8:35 Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? ³⁶ As it is written: "For Your sake we are killed all day long; We are accounted as sheep for the slaughter." ³⁷ Yet in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him who loved us. ³⁸ For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels nor principalities nor powers, nor things present nor things to come, ³⁹ nor height nor depth, nor any other created thing, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Romans 8:35-39 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

From the human point of view, the situation of the believer is fragile, and the prospect of making it safely to glory impossible. That is precisely why the Spirit is opening to us the real condition of those who are in Christ Jesus. Although they are surrounded by opponents that are vastly superior to their natural abilities, yet they are safe and protected in the Lord. However, only faith can perceive this circumstance. Therefore, powerful affirmations of the protective aspect of salvation will now be declared.

The approach of the Spirit will be to fortify our faith, not clarify our obligation. This is not to be construed as a minimization of duty or a license for laxness. God forbid that such thoughts should be entertained by those in whose hearts the Holy Spirit has shed abroad the love of God (5:5). Without exception, those who seek a way to glory that places no demands upon them are "blind, and cannot see afar off" (2 Pet 1:9). If the Savior Himself was required to enter wholeheartedly into His work, it is utterly absurd to imagine we are not to enter energetically into ours.

ADDRESSED TO BELIEVERS

The passage before us is addressed to those who are in Christ Jesus. All of the glorious affirmations of their situation are taken to be true. Allow me to reaffirm some of them.

- We have peace with God (5:1).
- Faith has given us access into the grace wherein we stand (5:2).
- We are rejoicing in hope of the glory of God (5:2).
- We glory in tribulations, knowing the effectual work they accomplish in us (5:3-4).
- We are not ashamed of our hope, because the love of God has been shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy spirit (5:5).
- We joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ (5:11).
- We are dead to sin (6:2).

- No one can condemn us (8:34a).
- From God's right hand, Christ is making intercession for us (8:34b).

There are FORTY-TWO affirmations of the condition of the children of God. Our text is a further elaboration of our status. It is not a cold and calculating doctrine to be propagated as a lifeless dogma. Further, it is not intended to build confidence in those who are living in the flesh, or neglecting "so great salvation" (Heb 2:3). Those who approach this section of Scripture to justify themselves in sin or slothfulness are wicked. We have no time to hear their miserable explanations of this passage.

The affirmations of our text are for those who are fighting the good fight of faith, endeavoring to lay hold on eternal life (1 Tim 6:12). These are words addressed to those who are living in hope, in anxious anticipation of being forever with the Lord (5:24-25). These are words for those who are patiently running the race that has been set before them (Heb 12:1-2), resisting the devil (1 Pet 5:8-9), and have put on the whole armor of God (Eph 6:10). They will offer no "everlasting consolation" to anyone else!

To the degree we are able to identify with the declarations of the status of the redeemed, we will receive great comfort and encouragement from the promises of the text before us. The Holy Spirit freely declares who we are, and the provisions that are made for us. There is no revealed limit to the involvement with God that is possible through our faith.

WHO CAN DO IT?

^{8:35a} Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Some versions provide varied readings, all with the same essential meaning. "Who then shall separate us from the love of Christ?" ^{Douay-Rheims} "What shall separate us from the love of Christ?" ^{Revised Webster} "Who will come between us and the love of Christ?"^{BBE} "Can anything ever separate us from Christ's love?" ^{NLT} and "Can anything cut us off from the love of Christ?" ^{NJB} This is a question addressed to the heart!

The question is a rhetorical one. The Spirit is not asking for an answer, or even suggesting that there is something or someone who CAN separate us from the love of Christ. This is like a challenge to the sceptic or the faint-hearted to ponder the greatness of the salvation that is "in Christ Jesus with eternal glory" (2 Tim 2:10). We will find that the love of God is strong as well as tender.

Erroneous Questions

is asked. We are living at a juncture in human history when the effects of false teaching have saturated the theologies of men. In defense of their dogmas, they pose questions that are NOT submitted in Scripture. Some examples will suffice to acquaint us with their nature. (1) "Can we lose our salvation?" (2) "Once a person is saved, can they ever be lost?" (3) "Once we are in God's grace, can we ever fall out of His grace?" (4) "IS it possible to fall away?" All such questions come from the mind, not the heart.

Men enter the theological battleground to resolve these questions. Debates and lengthy disquisitions are developed to answer them. Yet, all of them miss the mark. They are not stated acceptably, and thus answers to them are not found in Scripture. To put it another way, God does not approach salvation in this manner. There is only one reason for these questions. The Christian community is plagued with members who do not reflect the spiritual life described in Scripture. Thus these doctrines have been concocted to justify the conclusion they are still Christians, even though any evidences of such a conclusion are sadly lacking.

Our text presumes involvement and fervent desire. It postulates a longing for the redemption of the body, and an aggressive discontent with “the law of sin” that is resident in our members (7:23,25; 8:2). Where these are lacking, a discussion of the safety of the believer is out of order! Those who are not living by faith have no right to indulge in either thoughts or discussions about Divine safety. If they are living in the flesh, they are enemies of God (8:8:7; James 4:4). The wrath of God is abiding upon them (John 3:36), and they are “condemned already” (John 3:18). What the worldly church calls “carnal Christians” are a flagrant contradiction of the Spirit’s affirmation of life in Christ. They are not “dead to sin” or “alive unto God” (6:11). They are not walking in the Spirit (8:4), mortifying the deeds of the body (8:13), or waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body. No doctrines must be presented to such people that would only serve to complicate their situation. Our text is comforting the faithful, not salving the conscience of the unfaithful!

SEPARATE US

Having been reconciled to God, and possessing peace with God, is there any inimical influence that can negate what we have received, or put us beyond its reach? Who can thrust from the presence of the Lord those who have been brought near to Him?

The question is NOT whether or not we can leave our “first love” – we can (Rev 2:4). Here, the focus is on influences outside of ourselves. The point here is that those who are convinced of this truth will “stand against the wiles of the devil” confidently and boldly. When the dark night of affliction surrounds the saints of God, the brightness of Divine love bursts through that darkness to warm their hearts and produce the “full assurance of understanding” (Col 2:2).

The word “separate” means to divide, be separate from, or be at a distance from. The question is whether or not anything can drive a wedge between the saved and the love of Christ. Are there any personalities or influences that can put a distance between the “saved of the Lord” and His love?

When the dark night of affliction surrounds the saints of God, the brightness of Divine love bursts through that darkness to warm their hearts and produce the “full assurance of understanding” (Col 2:2).

This is not a question regarding temptation. Can our relationship to the Redeemer be altered by personal or impersonal influences outside of ourselves?

THE LOVE OF CHRIST

Prior to this, we have read of “the love of God,” which is “poured out within our hearts by the Holy Spirit” ^{NASB} (5:5). Later, we will read of the “love of the Spirit,” which has a powerful influence upon the people of God (15:30). Now, for the first time in the book of Romans, we read of “the love of Christ.” In all three cases, the love is toward the believer. It is not speaking of the believers love for God, the Spirit, or Christ—even though all three are found in the redeemed. Here, the reference is to Christ’s love for us. His love is the stronger and more effective love! Our love derives its effectiveness from His.

“The love of Christ” for the saved is mentioned five other places in Scripture.

- ❑ “For the love of Christ compels us, because we judge thus: that if One died for all, then all died; and He died for all, that those who live should live no longer for themselves, but for Him who died for them and rose again”^{NKJV} (2 Cor 5:14-15).
- ❑ “That He [God] would grant you, according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened with might through His Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; that you, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all the saints what is the width and length and depth and height; to know the love of Christ which passes knowledge; that you may be filled with all the fullness of God”^{NKJV} (Eph 3:16-19).
- ❑ “Christ also loved the church and gave Himself for her, that He might sanctify and cleanse her with the washing of water by the word, that He might present her to Himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that she should be holy and without blemish” ^{NKJV} (Eph 5:25-27).
- ❑ “I have been crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me”^{NKJV} (Gal 2:20).

- ❑ “And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given Himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savor” (Eph 5:2).

Christ and the Church

Christ’s love is exclusively related to His children, or brethren—the church. It was in this sense that He said to His disciples, “He who has My commandments and keeps them, it is he who loves Me. And he who loves Me will be loved by My Father, and I will love him and manifest Myself to him” ^{NKJV} (John 14:21). While God’s love is said to have been focused on the world in Christ (John 3:16), this is never said of Jesus Christ. There is an exclusive relationship He holds with the saved, and His love focuses upon that.

The Reason for this Representation

There is a reason for this representation, and we do well to consider it. No one should conclude from these remarks that Christ has no interest in the world, or that His atoning death was not for them. This is not, however, how Christ's love is proclaimed.

In the Divine economy, God turns the saved over to Jesus. They are referred to as those whom God has given to Christ. He trusts His Son to bring them home.

- "And I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish; neither shall anyone snatch them out of My hand. My Father, who has given them to Me, is greater than all; and no one is able to snatch them out of My Father's hand" (John 10:28-29).
- "This is the will of the Father who sent Me, that of all He has given Me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up at the last day" (John 6:39).

- "I pray for them. I do not pray for the world but for those whom You have given Me, for they are Yours" (John 17:9).
- "Now I am no longer in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to You. Holy Father, keep through Your name those whom You have given Me, that they may be one as We are" (John 17:11).
- "Father, I desire that they also whom You gave Me may be with Me where I am, that they may behold My glory which You have given Me; for You loved Me before the foundation of the world" (John 17:24).
- "And again: 'I will put My trust in Him.' And again: 'Here am I and the children whom God has given Me'" (Heb 2:13).

These are the people Christ shepherds (John 10:11,14), leads (John 10:3), teaches (Eph 4:20-21), and for whom He faithfully intercedes (Heb 7:25). His mediatorship is exclusively for them (Heb 12:24), and He is bringing them alone "to glory" (Heb 2:10). He is the "Captain of their salvation" (Heb 2:10), and ministers in "the true tabernacle" exclusively for them (Heb 8:2). He is actually ruling the entire world with them in mind, marshaling favorable forces for them.

Separated from the Love of Christ

To be separated from the love of Christ is to be pushed beyond His loving care as the "good Shepherd." It is to be moved where His intercession is ineffectual, and where He no longer teaches. To be separated from the "love of Christ" is to be no longer led to glory, or taste of the benefits of His heavenly ministry.

For any person interested in this "great salvation," this is a pertinent question, indeed! Is there something in earth's battle zone that can cut off the heavenly supplies? Is there an enemy that can suffocate our spirits by shutting off communication with the Lord of glory? Can circumstance separate us from God's love? That is what it means to be separated from the love of Christ! It is essential that we know if we can face any adversary or circumstance that can effectively move us beyond the perimeter of Christ's loving care, thus separating us from it.

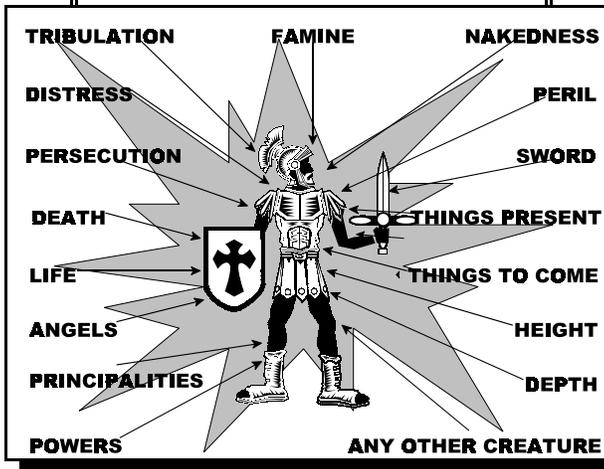

SEPARATING CIRCUMSTANCES

^{4:35b} Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?"

There are at least two reasons why men philosophize about the safety of God's people. First, they do not recognize the essentiality of faith. Second, they are blissfully unaware of the forces that are aligned against us. The knowledge of either or both of these realities will move us away from philosophizing, to a fervent quest to lay hold on the hope that is set before us (Heb 6:18). Any approach to life in Christ that imagines there is no danger, has been foisted upon men by the devil himself. It is a doctrine of demons, and is to be thrust from us with zeal.

The Spirit will first draw our attention to general circumstances that are designed by the enemy to lure us away from believing, and into trusting in the flesh. If you remove Divine protection from the picture, any of these experiences are sufficient to move us from "the love of God which is in Christ Jesus." They all have the ability to so distract the heart that fear and doubt will rush in like a torrential flood. Further, there is a natural fear of all of these experiences. The believer is given the peace of God that is able to "rule in your hearts," and "keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus" (Col 3:15; Phil 4:7).

Why Are They Mentioned?

Why are these oppositions mentioned? To some, they seem to contradict, what is called, "the victorious life." Others perceive Divine protection as prohibiting the experience of such things. These misconceptions are particularly prevalent in the Western world, where opposition to the faith is not as aggressive as other places in the world. The passage before us is more readily received in places like China and Sudan than in our own country. Nevertheless, saints everywhere, whether enjoying quietness from the Lord, or fierce and open opposition from the "old serpent," must embrace this passage by faith. In some way, and to some degree, these are matters that we all will face. Here is the truth about them.

TRIBULATION

The word “tribulation” means anguish, burden, affliction, oppression, or trouble. The literal meaning is “a pressing together, or pressure.” It is being pressed down under the weight of opposing influences.

This word is used seven times in Scripture, and is always accompanied with a most somber tone.

- ❑ “For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be” (Matt 24:21).
- ❑ “For in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created unto this time, neither shall be” (Mark 13:19).
- ❑ “Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Canaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance” (Acts 7:11).
- ❑ “Tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile” (Rom 2:9).
- ❑ “And not only so, but we glory in tribulations also: knowing that tribulation worketh patience” (Rom 5:11).
- ❑ “For I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened” (2 Cor 8:13).

Tribulation is a weight upon the soul that exceeds the natural capacity of the individual. It is an experience in which the person must be sustained by a power outside of himself.

Faith does not exempt us from “tribulation.” Whatever you may think of resisting the devil (1 Pet 5:8) and overcoming the world (1 John 5:4-5), they cannot put you beyond the experience of “tribulation.” If that were the case, the verse before us would have no meaning, and could certainly bring no comfort to the believer. The question before us now is if “tribulation” can separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus.

DISTRESS

“Distress” emphasizes a different aspect of living by faith. Whereas “tribulation” stresses what puts pressure upon us, “distress” underscores the effect it has upon our spirits. This word means “anguish.” It is the result of being put into a narrow place where we have no mobility – a sort of spiritual claustrophobia. “Distress” takes place when all of our own resources run out, and no alternatives are placed before us. It is like Paul spending “a day and a night in the deep” (2 Cor 11:25), or Joseph being in the pit (Gen 37:28-29). Do not think that such an experience cannot happen to you! David once said, “In my distress I cried unto the LORD, and He heard me” (Psa 120:1). The question put before us is whether or not “distress” can separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus.

PERSECUTION

“Persecution” occurs when the enemy pursues and chases us with aggression, inflicting pain and sorrow upon us. It can come from oppressive words spoken against us, like the people said against Jeremiah (Jer 18:18). It can be the flogging of Paul (2 Cor 11:24-25), the imprisonment of Peter (Acts 12:5), or the stoning of Stephen (Acts 7:58).

In persecution, the enemy seems invincible, gaining the advantage over the saints. He makes them flee like David and Paul (1 Sam 19:10; Acts 14:6), hide like Israel (1 Sam 13:6), and suffer like John the Baptist (Mark 6:25-27). There is no question about whether or not the saints will suffer persecution, for “all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution” (2 Tim 3:12). The question before us now is if “persecution” can separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus.

FAMINE

A famine is a dearth, a scarcity of food. Sometimes there is no food at all during a famine. In a famine, there is no harvest, no reaping, no replenishment of the food supply.

The first famine of Scriptural record took place when Abraham first entered into Canaan. Not only was “the Canaanite in the land,” but “there was a famine in the land: and Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there; for the famine was grievous in the land” (Gen 12:6,10). About the time Esau sold his birthright to Jacob, “there was a famine in the land” (Gen 26:1). Joseph was exalted to the throne of Egypt because God had revealed to him how the land could be sustained during a grievous famine that lasted seven years (Gen 41:27-36). In the land of promise, where Jacob and his sons resided while Joseph was in Egypt, “the famine was sore in the land” (Gen 43:1). The record of Ruth is couched in as time when “there was a famine in the land” (Ruth 1:1). In the days of David, there was a famine for three consecutive years (2 Sam 21:1). When Elijah confronted wicked Ahab, “there was a sore famine in Samaria” (1 Kgs 18:2). A similar one rose in the same country during the time of Elisha (2 Kgs 6:25). Elisha told of a famine God called for, which lasted seven years (2 Kgs 8:1). All of these famines touched the saints of God. Some had to seek means by which they could be sustained, while God miraculously supplied the needs of others.

The question before us now is if “famine” can separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus.

NAKEDNESS

Nakedness is destitution that erupts in a lack of adequate clothing, or a state of poverty. This is the condition of Lazarus, who was daily placed at the gate of “a certain rich man” (Lk 16:20). It was the state of many faithful saints of old, of whom it is said, “they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented” (Heb 11:37).

Paul once told of the pathway into which faith led him. In carrying out his ministry, he did so “in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness” (2 Cor 11:27). Again Paul writes, “Even unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwellingplace” (1 Cor 4:11). On one occasion, while in prison, Paul wrote to Timothy, “Bring the cloak that I left with Carpus at Troas when you come” (2 Tim 4:13). The question before us now is if “nakedness” can separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus.

PERIL

Peril is danger, risk, jeopardy, or hazard. There is a note of uncertainty in “peril,” as the danger is not always seen. It rather lurks in the darkness of uncertainty, thus promoting fear in those who are in peril. Paul once testified of the many perils to which he was subjected. “In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren” (2 Cor 11:26).

The Spirit also testified of the last days when “perilous times shall come,” endangering the souls of believers (2 Tim 3:1). Indeed, the Lord can make His people “dwell in safety” (Psa 4:8), and “safety is of the Lord” (Prov 21:31). But let no soul imagine this means there is no peril, no danger, no jeopardy to which the saints are subjected. The question put before us is whether or not “peril” can separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus.

SWORD

The “sword” speaks of more than a mere weapon wielded by some despot. It stands as a symbol of violent death, often carried out by political powers. The word is used in this manner in the thirteenth chapter of Romans, where the principle of governmental power is said to come from God. Of the ruler it is said, “he does not bear the sword in vain; for he is God’s minister, an avenger to execute wrath on him who practices evil” (Rom 13:4).

However, many despots have turned their sword against the saints of God. Wicked Herod “killed James the brother of John with the sword” (Acts 12:2). Other saints, of old time, “were slain with the sword” (Heb 11:37). Thus wicked Jezebel “cut off the prophets of the Lord” (1 Kgs 18:4), and by the sword some of the very chosen people “devoured” the prophets like a “destroying lion” (Jer 2:29). One of the “sins of the people” that Peril is danger, risk, jeopardy, or hazard. There is a note of uncertainty in “peril,” as the danger is not always seen. It rather lurks in the darkness of uncertainty, thus promoting fear in those who are in peril.

Jeremiah declared was that they had “shed the blood of the just in the midst of her” (Lam 4:13).

It is quite true that it is written, “No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper” (Isa 54:17). However, no person must conclude from this that absolute safety is guaranteed to all who trust the Lord, or that such a conclusion is to be drawn from that text. Should they do so, a host of righteous men will rise in refutation of such a naive conclusion – men like Abel, Isaiah, Zechariah, John the Baptist, James, Stephen, Antipas, Peter, and Paul. The meaning of Isaiah’s statement is that the intentions of the godless against the righteous will not be realized. God’s purposes will be fulfilled in spite of the opposition of the wicked.

The question put before us is whether or not “the sword can separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus.

THE LIFE OF EASE IS A DELUSION

The text before us declares the nature of spiritual life. Life in Christ Jesus does not involve exclusion from hardship and difficulty. There are texts that seem to indicate saints are exempted from the type of difficulties mentioned in our text. “I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread” (Psa 37:25). “No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the LORD, and their righteousness is of Me, saith the LORD” (Isa 54:17). Jesus said, “And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to day is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall He not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?” (Matt 6:28-30). It is vital that we comprehend these texts.

These texts do not mean John the Baptist cannot be killed by Herod, or that the Apostles cannot be beaten by the Jews, or that Stephen cannot be stoned by the Jewish council. They do not mean Paul and Silas cannot be beaten and thrown in the inner prison, or that Joseph cannot suffer because of the false accusation of Potiphar’s wife. Our Lord’s words do not mean Lazarus will never be a “beggar,” or that Paul cannot experience “nakedness.” Often God is glorified by sustaining His people in such grievous circumstances, rather than delivering them from them.

The text in Psalms does not say the righteous will never beg bread, but that their “seed,” or offspring, will not do so. The text in Isaiah is affirming that nothing shall abort the purpose of God for His people. Our Lord’s words in Matthew confirm that we are in the care of the Lord. The lilies of the field are not always robust and beautifully attired, and those who imagine they are do greatly err. Christ’s words assure us we are not left to the power of circumstance, and that no situation is capable of putting us beyond the loving care of God. The love of God is powerful as well as tender. It is never abrasive, and always effective.

The power of this text is seen in the experience of the things mentioned, not in being exempted from them. If such things could not occur to the people of God, the text would have no meaning. God has designed to save them “in” these things. The comforting power of this affirmation is found in the total inability of such things to effectively separate us from the love of God which is in Christ.

THIS IS HOW IT LOOKS

⁴⁶ As it is written: ‘For Your sake we are killed all day long; We are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.’ Other versions read, “Just as it is written, ‘For thy sake we are being put to death all day long; we were considered as sheep to be slaughtered.’”^{NASB} “As it is written: ‘For your sake we face death all day long; we are considered as sheep to be slaughtered.’”^{NIV} “As scripture says: For your sake we are being massacred all day long, treated as sheep to be slaughtered.”^{NJB} This is a confirmation of why grievous circumstances cannot separate us from the love of God.

The reference is found in Psalm 44:22. “Yea, for thy sake are we killed all the day long; we are counted as sheep for the slaughter.” A similar expression is found in Psalm 141:7. “Our bones are scattered at the grave’s mouth, as when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth.” It was even prophesied of our blessed Lord, “He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter” (Isa 53:7). Why do such things occur?

Let it be clear that this is not a mere complaint because of difficult and unpleasing circumstances. This is an expression of spiritual insight, not one of Satanic delusion. It is not an insightful cry of the flesh, but of the spirit. It confirms the commonality of trouble among the faithful, and the extreme difficulties to which they are subjected in this world.

FOR YOUR SAKE

While sufferings are common to all of humanity, and man is “born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward” (Job 5:7), our text speaks of a special category of sufferings. These are sufferings for the sake of the Lord, or because we have embraced Him and His promises by faith. When we take hold of the Lord and His Word, the world at once begins to oppose us. It is driven by hatred (John 15:18; 1 John 3:13). It is animated by the prince of the power of the air, who has focused all of his wrath against the remnant of the “seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ” (Rev 12:17).

Here are severe sufferings that have NOT come because of a departure from the Lord, as with Israel. Rather, they have come because of a close and productive affiliation with Him—“For YOUR sake.”^{NIV} Make no mistake about this, God does not overlook such wicked treatment of His people. Rather, it furnishes Him with a justifiable reason for repaying the wicked. As it is written, “Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you” (2 Thess 1:6). And again, “For thus saith the LORD of hosts; After the glory hath He sent me unto the nations which spoiled you: for he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of His eye” (Zech 2:8).

In these difficult sufferings, the present possession of the saints of God is confirmed. As our Lord said, “Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness’ sake: for theirs IS the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great IS your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you” (Matt 5:10-12).

KILLED ALL THE DAY LONG

To be “killed all the day long” is to be undeservedly subjected to the brutality and inhumanity of the ungodly. It is to live under the threat of the worst dangers possible to men in the body. It is for Abel to be subjected to the hatred of his own brother while in the field of labor (1 John 3:12). It is for David to live under the aggressive and malicious quest of king Saul (1 Sam 23:14). It is for Elijah to be subjected to the evil intents of Jezebel (1 Kgs 19:2). It is for Paul to receive “stripes above measure,” be “in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft.” It is for him to receive “forty stripes save one” five times from the Jews, be thrice “beaten with rods,” and “stoned” (2 Cor 11:24-26).

By saying “we,” both David and Paul refer to the host of the godly. Every day, to this day, some of them are escorted by holy angels from this world to the unseen world. Somewhere today, our brethren are being “killed” and persecuted by the ungodly.

This is the result of faith – of receiving the atonement, and walking in the Spirit. And what is the reason for it all? Why are the people of God subjected to such maltreatment? The answer is shouted back to us by the Holy Spirit: “But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead" (2 Cor 1:9). That is the reason for our afflictions—to remove any tendency to imagine that we are sufficient of ourselves!

ACCOUNTED AS SHEEP FOR THE SLAUGHTER

From the standpoint of appearance, it seems as though the righteous have been raised up to be slaughtered, maligned, and subjected to the evil intentions of the godless. How else can we account for the heartless and undeserved death of the holy prophets (1 Thess 2:15) and those who were "stoned, they were sawn asunder [and] slain with the sword" (Heb 11:37).

One of the purposes of this passage is to encourage the hearts of the saints not to balk at suffering, or faint when they are exposed to the harsh treatment of the ungodly. Too, we must not overemphasize our sufferings, failing to accent the love of God. Our faith will be strengthened and confirmed in the crucible of suffering.

Often that suffering has come in the harshest and most severe forms. The Spirit informs us that this is according to Divine appointment. Of the Apostles Paul says, "For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men" (1 Cor 4:9). Of the general body of the redeemed it is written, "That no man should be moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto. For verily, when we were with you, we told you before that we should suffer tribulation; even as it came to pass, and ye know" (1 Thess 3:3-4).

The point of our text is that nothing appointed by God is capable of separating us from His love. This includes the most grievous of circumstances, all of which are designed to wean us away from this present evil world, while promoting faith in God. How blessed to see this truth! This is needful and profitable instruction.

CONQUERING IN CONFLICT

"³⁷ Yet in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him who loved us."

YET

The KJV reads more appropriately, "Nay . . ." instead of "Yet." The NIV and NRSV read, "No . . ." This verse is given in answer to the interrogation of verse 35: "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?" It is given in view of the overriding advantages that are given us in Christ Jesus.

- God is working everything together for our good (v 28).
- God has predestinated that those who are justified will be glorified (v 30).
- If God is for us, no one can effectively be against us (v 31).
- Through Christ, God will freely give us all things, even in the midst of seemingly impossible circumstances (v 32).
- No one can lay an effective accusation against those God has justified (v 33).
- No one can condemn those for whom Christ has died (v 34a).
- No one can condemn those for whom Jesus is presently interceding (v 34b).
- No earthly circumstance, regardless of its intensity and duration, can cause

God to cease to love us through Christ (v 35).

The words that follow are declared in the midst of an oppressive battlefield. These words are not spoken to those reclining on "beds of ivory," and reposing on "couches" of ease (Amos 6:4).

opposition and hardship meant they had been abandoned by God. It is one thing for Job, without the Law and without a Bible, to conclude such (Job 23:3-5). It is quite another thing for those who have been "illuminated" and "tasted of the heavenly gift" to assume such things (Heb 6:4-6; 10:32).

We must not allow the devil to deceive us into thinking God's greatest and most productive work only takes place in peaceful environs, where all is going well for the believer. Many a soul has stumbled at this, imaging that opposition and hardship meant they had been abandoned by God.

What will now be affirmed takes place IN tribulation! It is experienced IN distress! It is something that occurs IN persecution! This is our heritage IN famine! Here is what God gives His people IN nakedness. It is what happens to them IN peril. It is their lot IN opposition by the sword! "IN ALL THESE THINGS!"

"ALL" these things must be seen as meaning every one of them, and in every kind of them. It is all of them, whether experienced one at a time or all at once. It is true of each individual difficulty, or all of them collectively.

IN THESE THINGS

Here is a facet of salvation that is essential to see. We must not allow the devil to deceive us into thinking God's greatest and most productive work only takes place in peaceful environs, where all is going well for the believer. Many a soul has stumbled at this, imaging that

MORE THAN CONQUERORS

" . . . we are more than conquerors." Other versions read, "we overwhelmingly conquer,"^{NASB} "we overcome,"^{DUOAY-RHEIMS} "we are able to overcome all these things,"^{BEBE} "we conquer overwhelmingly,"^{NAB} "overwhelming victory is ours,"^{NLT} and "we come through all these things triumphantly victorious."^{NJB}

The phrase "more than conquerors" comes from a single compound Greek word (ὑπερνικῶμεν). It means to gain a surpassing victory, be completely victorious, or completely win out over something. It means the purpose of the adversary was thoroughly frustrated, and the intentions of the Lord completely dominated the circumstance.

Someone who is "more than a conqueror" overcomes the devil, principalities and powers, and trying circumstances. They are the better for their tribulation, even glorying in it because of their insight into the purpose of God (Rom 5:2ff). Their faith and their joy have only increased because of these hardships, thereby testifying to the greatness of God's salvation. They have gotten the victory over their adversaries "by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death" (Rev 12:11).

Such marvelous victory is not common in our day. However, that is not owing to any deficiency in the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. If men will embrace the Gospel by faith, they will become "more than conquerors" in THEIR AFFLICTION. Any other result comes from unbelief, and is unsatisfactory before the Lord.

Well did Solomon say, "If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small" (Prov 24:10). Again, Jeremiah challenges the people of God, "If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?" (Jer 12:5).

Hasty Conclusions Must Be Avoided

Those who cannot bear up under difficulty have reason to be concerned. But care must be taken not to arrive at a false conclusion. It is certainly not that they are condemned, and no one should allow themselves to think that is the case. What is revealed in such weakness, however, is a need for stronger faith. This can only be accomplished by taking a firmer grip on the Good News of Christ, and laboring to uproot trust from the soil of self and humanity.

THROUGH HIM

In Christ Jesus, full provision is made for the obtaining and sustaining of faith. Neither of them are found in the flesh. Both of them can be realized in the midst of adversity, and even while seemingly alone. There are times when the only consolation is this: "we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me" (Heb 13:6). In loneliness and seeming despair, faith can shout out, "The LORD is on my side; I will not fear: what can man do unto me?"

In Christ Jesus, full provision is made for the obtaining and sustaining of faith. Neither of them are found in the flesh. Both of them can be realized in the midst of adversity, and even while seemingly alone.

The LORD taketh my part with them that help me" (Psa 118:6-7).

The words "through Him" declare the appointed means through which the saints gain the victory. Faith, strength, and determination are given to them by God through the Lord Jesus Christ. Believers are never close enough to God to receive His blessings apart from Christ Jesus. Even though they are forgiven of all sin, enough of old nature remains in them that a Mediator is still required.

Faith is like a conduit between the saints and Jesus, through which Divine power sustains them in ever increasing measures. God gives nothing to His people that does not come through Christ Jesus. He is the "One Mediator between God and man" (1 Tim 2:5).

THAT LOVED US

"... through Him that loved us." Note, the text does NOT say "Him that loves us," but "Him that loved us." This is a vital distinction, for it takes us back to the Gospel of Christ, wherein the love of God was demonstrated. As it is written, "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us" (1 John 3:16). Our perception of God's love for us must not rest upon our feelings, or the assessment of our circumstances. It must firmly rest in the revelation of His love, not the experience of it!

This does not mean God's love is not experienced. It DOES mean that circumstances sometime make it appear as though He does not love us. Flesh will reason, "If God really loved us, He would not allow us to go through such grief." But faith reasons upon the basis of Christ's atoning death, not present circumstances.

The love that is mentioned is God's. Thus it is written, "But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us . . . Now our Lord Jesus Christ Himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us . . . Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another" (Eph 2:4; 2 Thess 2:16; 1 John 4:10-11). That indefatigable love is always sufficient and effective to "cause us to triumph in Christ" (2 Cor 2:14). Blessed is the person who can see these things.

A FINAL WORD OF WARNING

The saints of God must take care to avoid the tendency to base conclusions upon appearance, or even upon personal experience. Sound reasoning is always based upon Divine affirmation. By that, I mean a "thus saith the Lord," as found in the Scriptures. When rationale begins with human experience, it always leads away from God. Man does not live by personal views or even exalted feelings and persuasions. Rather, he lives "by every Word that proceeds out of the mouth of God" (Matt 4:4). When Jesus successfully repelled the attacks of the wicked one, He did it by quoting from the Scripture—even though He Himself was in constant communion with the Father. It is foolish indeed to assume that God would sustain us by some other means. Those who are persuaded of the truth of the Word can use it as a sword! This is particularly applicable in regards to the text we are considering.

THE PERSUASION OF FAITH

“³⁸ For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels nor principalities nor powers, nor things present nor things to come,³⁹ nor height nor depth, nor any other created thing, shall be able to separate us from the love of God . . . ”The power of faith is revealed in these words. The declaration of Divine intent has been made, and faith has taken hold of that word.

I AM PERSUADED

“For I am persuaded . . . ” Other versions read, “For I am convinced,”^{NASE,NIV} “For I am sure,”^{DOUAY-RHEIMS} “For I am certain,”^{BBE} and “For I am certain of this.”^{NJB}

First of all, let it be clear that Paul is not merely speaking for himself. This is the reasoning of faith, and is something available to all the children of God. If this were not the case, the text would be nothing more than the boast of a sort of hero. But that is not the case. This is a response that belongs to all who are in Christ Jesus.

And what is it that brought such a strong persuasion to the Apostle. It certainly was not the experiences of life! If he were to look at them alone, this is what he would see: “we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears . . . we were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life . . . We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed . . . after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus . . . and there are many adversaries . . . Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness” (2 Cor 7:5; 1:8; 4:8-9;

The ONLY way we can be persuaded that nothing can separate us from the love of God is to believe what God has said. That is the sole proof of the matter! Appearance seems to contradict the affirmation.

1 Cor 15:32; 16:9; 2 Cor 11:24-27). Of themselves, such experiences do not bring a powerful persuasion of the keeping power of God.

An Aspect of Faith

Persuasion is the aspect of faith described in the words, “Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen” (Heb 11:1). One in possession of “substance” and “evidence” cannot be ruled by doubt.

In this regard, our father Abraham is a noble example. It is written of Him, “And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah’s womb: He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God; and being fully persuaded that, what He had promised, He was able also to perform” (Rom 4:19-21).

And what was it that enabled Abraham to be “fully persuaded” of God’s ability? Ponder the circumstances in which he found himself.

He had no children.

- His own body, when it came to reproduction, was “dead.”
- He was about a hundred years old.
- Sarah’s womb was dead.

What wise man upon earth could have confirmed the possibility of the Divine promise that he would “become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be” (4:18). What archaeological find could have supported such a commitment? Was there some ancient manuscript that could confirm what was said? What form of human logic could confirm the promise? Was there a human feeling that could do it? Could our father Abraham find some hermeneutical principle that could console his heart, and persuade him he could have offspring as multitudinous as the stars of the heavens and the sand of the sea shore?

Indeed, the ONLY way he could be fully persuaded is to believe what God had promised. That was the ONLY evidence He possessed that the promise was true. God said it! However, this fully satisfies faith. It needs no more than God’s word.

So it is with our text. The ONLY way we can be persuaded that nothing can separate us from the love of God is to believe what God has said. That is the sole proof of the matter! Appearance seems to contradict the affirmation. Abel died. Joseph was unjustly imprisoned. The prophets were slain. John the Baptist was beheaded. James was killed by Herod. Stephen was killed. The early church was scattered abroad by a vicious persecution. Paul was imprisoned. On and on we could go. Such circumstances do not appear to justify a persuasion that nothing is able to separate us from the love of God. Flesh erroneously reasons, “If God loves me, why does He allow such things to happen to me?” Such questions are foolish, and unworthy of any attention from the child of God. The described circumstances are the lower view. They are very real, and have very real affects upon us. In Christ, however, we are given to rise higher, and perceive things from a loftier and more comforting perspective. The Holy Spirit is calling us up to that higher view.

We will find that faith does not gloss life. It does not ignore difficulties, or pretend they are not there. Rather, it looks them squarely in the face while taking hold of the promises of God.

What follows are very real. They are matters the saints of God will confront. Their magnitude is determined by God, not man, and not even the devil. Not a single one of them has power to drive a wedge between the saved and the Savior, or the children and the Father!

DEATH

Death is the necessary consequence of Adam's sin, and has been passed upon all men. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned" (Rom 5:12). Again, "For if by one man's offence death reigned by one . . ." (5:17). The reality and inevitability of death, therefore, is not to be questioned. In order to attest to the factuality of the unseen world, two men were exempted from death: Enoch and Elijah (Gen 5:24; Heb 11:5; 2 Kgs 2:1-11).

There will also be an entire generation that will not see death in the ordinary sense of the word—namely those who are "alive and remain" to the coming of the Lord (1 Thess 4:15-17). Even then, that generation will be "changed," being given new bodies (1 Cor 15:51-52). Apart from these exceptions, "it is appointed unto men once to die" (Heb 9:27).

While the appointment to death is common for all men, the manner in which they die is not. Abel was murdered (Gen 4:8). Abraham died "in a good old age" and in peaceful circumstances (Gen 25:8). The mighty prophet Elisha died of a sickness (2 Kgs 13:14). Stephen died a prolonged death by being stoned (Acts 7:58-65). Some were "sawn asunder" and "slain with the sword" (Heb 11:37). James the Apostle was killed with a sword by Herod (Acts 12:2). The "prophets of the Lord" were cut off by wicked Jezebel (1 Kgs 18:4). Lazarus, whom Jesus loved, died of an extended illness (John 11:6,13). All experiences of death are certainly not the same, and we should not approach them as though they was.

Death separates us from the world. In it we are separated from our worldly possessions, and from our family and friends. Death separates the spirit and soul from the body. Yet, with all of that, it cannot separate us from the love of God!

In death, the promise of God holds true: "No temptation has overtaken you except such as is common to man; but

The reference to death confirms that Satan will seek to work aggressively at that time to drive us from the Lord. He will try to constrain us to "curse God and die" (Job 2:9). He will promote despair, unbelief, and fear at that time.

God is faithful, who will not allow you to be tempted beyond what you are able, but with the temptation will also make the way of escape, that you may be able to bear it" (1 Cor 10:13). It is true, and it is possible to be persuaded of it, that death cannot separate us from the love of God. It may be attended by unusual misery, but it cannot drive a wedge between you and God's love for you! Death cannot bring us where God's love cannot reach us!

Among other things, this confirms that the love of God does not necessarily exempt us from hard experiences. We should not allow the devil to deceive us on this matter. When it appears as though we have been counted as sheep for the slaughter, and when we are required to pass through circumstances that terminate in our death, we still have not been separated from the love of God. God's love for Abel did not relieve him of a hard death, nor did it do this for John the Baptist and Stephen. Sometimes His great love is seen in supporting those who are in seemingly impossible circumstances.

Because of erroneous teaching and conceptions in this matter, I have known of people who have ceased to trust and serve God because a loved one died, whom they thought should not die. In their case, the death of someone whom they respected and relied upon took place. Yet, even in that circumstance, neither the ones who passed, nor those who dearly cared for them, were separated from the love of God. Faith can receive this.

Some of the greatest expressions of faith have occurred when people died. Jacob blessed his sons "when he was dying" (Heb 11:21). Stephen prayed for those who were killing him while he was dying (Acts 7:60). When his death drew near, Paul confessed, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Tim 4:7). Rather than separating us from the love of God, death can actually accentuate His love!

The reference to death confirms that Satan will seek to work aggressively at that time to drive us from the Lord. He will try to constrain us to "curse God and die" (Job 2:9). He will promote despair, unbelief, and fear at that time. Yet, in all of his efforts, he is absolutely impotent to separate us from the love of God in our death. Whatever may seem to pass from us while we are dying, the love of God will become more firm at that time.

LIFE

It is possible for life to become a burden. Our lives are frail and uncertain. As it is written, "For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away" (James 4:14). It passes "swifter than a weaver's shuttle" (Job 7:6), being "of few days, and full of trouble" (Job 14:1). David said his life was "as an handbreadth" (Psa 39:5). Notwithstanding, the brevity and uncertainty of life, however burdensome they may become, are not capable of separating us from the love of God.

Sometimes life can be spent under the oppression of the enemy, like Israel in Egyptian bondage (Ex 1:14). Sometimes it can be lived amidst the hatred of your own brothers, like Joseph (Gen 37:8), or in a prison with fetters hurting your feet (Psa 105:17-19). Life can be lived "in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth" (Heb 11:38). A lifetime can be filled with hardship, living as a beggar full of sores (Lk 16:20-21,25). Those who imagine that faith guarantees a pleasant life without hardship, do well to give heed to the Scriptural record of those who had no such life.

Life is not always fraught with hardship. Sometimes the Lord grants "rest" and comfort in the Holy Spirit, relieving men of stress and trouble (Acts 9:31). He can cause our enemies to be at peace with us (Prov 16:7), while we "dwell safely in the land" (Lev 26:5). Sometimes people move away from the Lord during these peaceful times (Lk 12:19). It is possible to "be full, and deny" the Lord (Prov 30:8).

Yet, whether life is lived in the crucible of difficulty, or in the domain of comfort and ease, life itself cannot separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus. Life does not have separating power. Therefore, whatever our lot in life, let faith be strong and unwavering.

Here also we learn that Satan will work consistently to sever us from the love of God in life. He will do all within his power to cause life to obscure the love of God. He will foster bitterness and fear, or self-confidence and forgetfulness while we live in this present evil world. His efforts, however, have no power to separate us from the love of God in life's experiences. Whatever may be withheld from us in life, the love of God will not be included in that exclusion for those who live by faith.

ANGELS

These are evil angels, not holy angels. The holy angels are not engaged in efforts to drive a wedge between us and the love of God. Instead, they are "all ministering spirits sent forth to minister for those who will inherit salvation" (Heb 1:14).

The devil also has angels. As it is written, everlasting fire has been "prepared for the devil and his angels" (Matt 25:41). These are "the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation," and have been "reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day" (Jude 6). These are "the angels that sinned," and have consequently been cast "down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment" 2 Pet 2:4).

This category of spiritual beings include "lying spirits" (1 Kgs 22:22), "demons" (1 Cor 10:20; 1 Tim 4:1), "unclean spirits" (Acts 5:16), "evil spirits" (Lk 7:21), "seducing spirits" (1 Tim 4:1), "a spirit of infirmity" (Lk 13:11), and "a spirit of divination" (Acts 16:16). These beings are vastly superior to natural men. Scripture records the influence of these spirits upon people. For eighteen years, one woman was "bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself" (Lk 13:11). Another evil spirit harassed a young boy, frequently throwing "him both into the fire and into the water to destroy him" (Mk 9:22). Another made a man "dumb," and unable to speak (Mk 9:32). Another caused a man to be both "blind and dumb" (Matt 12:22). Still another grievously "vexed" a young girl (Matt 15:22).

It will do no good for people to pretend as though these spirits do not exist. Nothing in God's word remotely suggests this is the case. These are very real personalities. However, they are all subordinate to the Lord Jesus, the "Captain of our salvation" (Heb 2:10). Their head, Satan, together with themselves, cannot "touch" the one who is born of God (1 John 5:18). With all of their cunning craftiness and superiority over nature, they are impotent to separate us from the love of God!

The chief wicked angel is Satan himself. He is called "the angel of the bottomless pit," and is set to destroy (Rev 9:11). He cannot change the fact that he is the primary fallen angel, but does transform himself "into an angel of light" (2 Cor 11:14). On a person-to-person basis, you are no match for him! He is more subtle and more powerful than you are in yourself. Your ONLY protection against him is "in the Lord," "by the Spirit," and "through faith." Yet, he has no power whatsoever to separate you from the love of God.

Often, the people of God are tempted to oversimplify life in Christ Jesus. They do not see themselves as in a volatile and hostile environment, teeming with spiritual personalities who are set against them. Such poor souls view life from an academic viewpoint, imagining they have somehow become smart enough and powerful enough to stand against "the wiles of the devil." That is a delusion. The ONLY way to stand against him is to "be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might," and to "put on the whole armor of God" (Eph 6:10-11). Know that in such a stance, the wicked angelic order, from Satan himself down to the lowest demon, cannot separate you from the love of God!

PRINCIPALITIES and POWERS

The unseen world has a sort of hierarchy. All personalities in the realm of the unseen are not the same. On the side of righteousness, for example, there are not only angels, but “arch angels” (1 Thess 4:16; Jude 9), cherubim (Gen 3:24; Ezek 10:3), seraphim (Isa 6:2,6), and four living creatures (Rev 4:6-8). There are also “principalities” among this mighty and holy host (Eph 3:10; Col 1:16). All of these are for us, not against us. These are NOT the “principalities” of reference.

There are evil “principalities” – powerful spirits that have dominion over regions. While we are not provided a lot of information about them, sufficient is revealed to make us glory in Divine protection. Were we given to actually behold the forces that are aligned against us, our hearts would fail because of fear.

The Testimony of Daniel

We are exposed to three these principalities in the book of Daniel. In the first year of the reign of Darius the Mede, Daniel “understood by books” that the Babylonian captivity was about to come to an end (Dan 9:2). The books are said to be those of Jeremiah, in which the captivity was specified to be seventy years in duration (Jer 25:11,12; 29:10).

Some time later, during the third year of the reign of Cyrus king of Persia, a message was revealed to Daniel. The message concerned a great conflict that would occur in the unseen realms. Daniel understood the message, beginning a vigil of mourning that lasted three full weeks. During that entire period, he ate no tasty food, no meat or wine touched his lips, and he put no refreshing ointments on his body (10:1-3).

Following this twenty-day vigil, a heavenly messenger appeared to Daniel. He informed the prophet that as soon as Daniel had begun to pray, he had been dispatched from heaven in response, to bring an answer to him. However, a spiritual power had confronted and detained him for twenty-one days. His words concerning this occasion are certainly arresting. “But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me twenty-one days; and behold, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me, for I had been left alone there with the kings of Persia”^{NJKV} (10:13).

It is staggering to consider the magnitude of the opposing power this mighty angel confronted. Angels, we know, have no difficulty in their confrontations with mortal men. A single angel slew 185,000 of Sennacherib’s army in a single evening, with no difficulty whatsoever (2 Kgs 19:35). Yet, “the prince of Persia” successfully detained this angel for twenty-one days! Not only that, “Michael, one of the chief princes” came to “help” him, thereby freeing him to bring the message to Daniel!

Here Daniel was told of three spiritual princes. One was “Michael,” who was holy. The other two were opposing forces who were apparently seeking the continued removal of Israel from their land. We know that one of Michael’s chief responsibilities is the people of Israel (Dan 12:1). He stands for them.

That was not even the end of the matter. After delivering his message, the angel said to Daniel, “And now I must return to fight with the prince of Persia; and when I have gone forth, indeed the prince of Greece will come” (10:20).

Here Daniel was told of three spiritual princes. One was “Michael,” who was holy. The other two were opposing forces who were apparently seeking the continued removal of Israel from their land. We know that one of Michael’s chief responsibilities is the people of Israel (Dan 12:1). He stands for them.

This record provides an explanation for the overthrow of the kingdom of Persia and the consequent dominance of the Grecian empire. It was not mere military power that overthrew Persia, even though historians may imagine that to be the case. There was a wicked “principality” over Persia, as well as one over “Greece.” Considering them within the framework of the government of God, they were the real governors of those nations.

When the angel of the Lord came to Daniel with a message from heaven, it appears as though “the prince of Persia” knew the intent of the message, and thus sought to stop it from being delivered. It would, after all, announce his own demise. Later, another “principality,” “the prince of Greece,” would overthrow “the prince of Persia.” That overthrow was evidenced in the fall of Persia and the rise of Greece to military and political prominence.

We have no doubt witnessed a similar deposing of spiritual forces in our time. The fall of Japan, Germany, and Russia was not the result of military strength or political expertise. Those falls took place in the higher realms.

Now the question before us is whether or not these “principalities” can drive a wedge between the redeemed and the Redeemer! Can they push us beyond the reach of the love of God? Emphatically, they cannot! That is the persuasion of faith, and it is founded upon unalterable reality.

The fact that they cannot separate us from the love of God is not owing to their weakness, but to the greatness of God’s salvation, and the pressing nature of His remarkable love.

These “principalities” have all been plundered by the Lord Jesus. The plundering occurred in His atoning death. As it is written, “And having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it” (Col 2:15). Other translations say He “disarmed” the principalities and powers.

We Now Wrestle Against Them

These “principalities and powers,” who once detained mighty angels, are now engaged by the saints of the most high God. It is written, “For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places” (Eph 6:12). The spoiling of them by Jesus, therefore, does not mean they have been utterly removed. Rather, they have been so disarmed that we can now struggle against them for the freedom and enlightenment of the people.

To be sure, they cannot separate us from the love of God. However, the love of God can separate us from their malicious intents! How good it would be to have a revival of awareness in this area. Oh, that men would not only see the magnitude of the real foes we face, but that they are impotent to turn God against us!

THINGS PRESENT

“Things present” are the circumstances we face today. They are the conditions of the here and now. This is what we are confronting at this time.

Trouble, sorrow, and affliction are challenges when they are “things present.” When we are of sound mind, the griefs of yesterday do not drag us down. Troubles and afflictions that are behind us have only become occasions for thanksgiving and praise. When we live by faith, we do not grapple with such things. But when they are “things present,” it is quite another story.

Right here is where many a soul needs to be strengthened – handling “things present.” Even when we endure chastening, it is the fact that it is “present” that makes it grievous. As it is written, “Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous” (Heb 12:11). There surely are “the sufferings of this present time” (Rom 8:18).

Rather than “things present” separating us from the love of God, we can take ownership of them, knowing our God is working all things together for our good. Do not the Scriptures say, “things present . . . are yours” (1 Cor 3:22)? There are distresses that are “present” (1 Cor 7:26), and “the present evil world” (Gal 1:4).

Still, “things present” cannot separate from God’s love toward us! The things we are going through right now may appear difficult and strong, but they are powerless to shut off the supply of Divine love. Still, “in the midst” of our enemies, our loving God can still prepare a table for us, laded with sustaining dainties (Psa 23:5).

THINGS TO COME

There have been generations who have been given grievous messages from God about “things to come.” Abraham was told that his offspring would be in bondage for 400 years (Gen 15:13). Gen Eli was told of the blotting out of his family name (1 Sam 3:12-14). Israel was told of the coming Babylonian captivity (Jer 25:11). Jesus told His disciples of the coming decimation of Jerusalem (Lk 21:24). Paul told of the days when “seducing spirits and doctrines of demons” would dominate the church (1 Tim 4:1), and times would be “perilous” (2 Tim 3:1-5). He spoke of a “falling away” (2 Thess 2:3).

All such fears are neutralized, and will eventually flee from us, if we are persuaded “things to come” are incapable of separating us from God’s love. Anything that is to come, regardless of its power, intensity, or longevity, will be bearable if God continues to love us.

Jesus spoke of a time when men’s hearts would fail “them from fear and the expectation of those things which are coming on the earth” (Lk 21:26). The dread of coming things have struck fear into many a soul! Some have been gripped with fear at the possibility of what might occur in the future, even though there is no revealed basis for their fear.

All such fears are neutralized, and will eventually flee from us, if we are persuaded “things to come” are incapable of separating us from God’s love. Anything that is to come, regardless of its power, intensity, or longevity, will be bearable if God continues to love us.

HEIGHT

There are several senses in which the word “height” can be taken, and all of them have merit. I understand these to involve things that are not sought. They are not aspirations, nor are they things for which the believer longs. These are matters into which we are led by Divine power and purpose.

Lofty Circumstances

“Height” refers to lofty circumstances in which the individual is raised above the norm, and higher than his peers. It can include wealth, honor, or rank. It is possible to come into a situation where unusual honor is put upon us, or we are given responsibilities that far exceed the normal lot of believers. Some examples will suffice to illustrate the possibility of such occurrences.

Moses experienced unusual elevation in two ways. First, prior to being called of God, he “was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds” (Acts 7:22). Second, he was exalted above whole generations, for “the Law came by Moses” (John 1:17). Yet, his lofty positions did not separate him from the love of God. When in Egypt, he was faced with a decision. Of that time it is written, he “refused to be called the son of Pharaoh’s daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward” (Heb 11:24-26).

Later, after he had received the Law, was its mediator, and led the people of God, it was said of him, “Moses was faithful in all his house” (Heb 3:2). His faith kept him, and thus the heights to which he was raised did not separate him from the love of God. These were not things to which he aspired, but things of which he was made a steward.

Aaron was chosen of God to be the first high priest of the people. This was a lofty position, indeed. Among the children of Israel, there was none higher, saving for Moses himself. Thus it is written, “For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins: who can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity. And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins. And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron” (Heb 5:1-4).

Later, in tribute to the faithful execution of the office of high priest, the Scriptures refer to “Aaron the saint of the LORD” (Psa 106:216). His exaltation did not separate him from the love of God.

Joseph was a rare person, indeed. No sin is recorded against him in Scripture. He was a person who experienced both height and depth in an unusual degree. From the prison of Pharaoh he was exalted to the second highest position in the land. His position was so significant that Pharaoh said to him, “See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt . . . I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt” (Gen 41:41-44). Yet, in humble faith, he gave the glory to God. “God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive” (Gen 50:20). Height did not separate him from the love of God!

Daniel had high political influence under the reign of four different kings. Nebuchadnezzar made him “a great man, and gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon” (Dan 2:48). Belshazzar “clothed Daniel with scarlet, and put a chain of gold about his neck, and made a proclamation concerning him, that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom” (Dan 5:29). Daniel continued to be a superior counselor “even unto the first year of king Cyrus” the Persian (Dan 10:1). During the reign of Darius the Mede Daniel “stood to confirm and to strengthen him” (Dan 11:1).

Yet, throughout this period of time Daniel was “greatly beloved” in heaven (Dan 10:11). High places did not separate him from the love of God.

There are sublime spiritual experiences that can neither be accounted for nor expressed in human wisdom. Paul spoke of one such experience, declaring it to have been transcendent to all human ability.

Challenging Circumstances
“Height” can also be challenging circumstances that require more strength and ability than we have by nature. David spoke of his own determination not to exercise himself in “matters too high for me” (Psa 131:1). That was not his aspiration. He spoke of knowledge that was “too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it” (Psa 139:6).

Yet, when, as a mere boy, he faced the giant Goliath, faith made him equal to the occasion. Too, he was given to see aspects of the Lord and His will that few people have seen to this very day. “Height” did not separate him from the love of God.

Sublime Experiences
There are sublime spiritual experiences that can neither be accounted for nor expressed in human wisdom. Paul spoke of one such experience, declaring it to have been transcendent to all human ability. “I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) such an one caught up to the third heaven. And I knew such a man, (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) How that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter” 2 Cor 12:2-4). Yet, this lofty experience did not bring about a separation from God’s love, or contribute to pride. Of the occasion Paul said, “Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities” (2 Cor 12:5). Height did not separate him from the love of God.

Some people have drawn back from exalted spiritual experiences, or positions of great authority, thinking they will of themselves drive a wedge between them and God. However, when God leads people into such high places, they will not be able to separate them from the love of God.

DEPTH

There are human depths that stagger the imagination. Both in the body and in the soul, we can plummet to such depths as cause fear to rise in our hearts. David referred to these as “the depths of the earth,” and knew God could bring him back from them (Psa 71:20). Once he said, “Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O LORD” (Psa 130:1). Let no person doubt that such circumstances can arise. There are times when the depths of human contempt are felt. There are times of deprivation and destitution. No person of sound mind seeks these occasions, but God has led some us “through the valley of the shadow of death” (Psa 23:4).

Lazarus experienced the depth of being a beggar full of sores (Lk 16:20). Joseph was laid in fetters in prison (Psa 105:18). Daniel had to spend a night with the lions (Dan 6:16-17). Paul and Silas were beaten and left in the stocks of a cold and dark “inner prison” (Acts 16:23-24). Jeremiah was thrown into a pit, in which he sunk down into the mire (Jer 38:6).

David once said of one of his deliverances, “He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings” (Psa 40:2). He knew depth could not separate him from the love of God. You must know it too!

ANY OTHER CREATED THING

Nothing opposes the believer that has not been created – that does not have a genesis, or beginning. For that very loved us” (1 John 4:19). His love is the river, ours is the tributary.

This text presumes the superiority of God’s love. It is the manner of the New Covenant to place the highest priority on God’s love for us. It is what we prefer, long for, and fervently seek. It is generally known by the faithful that the love of God is powerful, sustaining the soul and standing between the believer and the forces aligned against him.

This text presumes the superiority of God’s love. It is the manner of the New Covenant to place the highest priority on God’s love for us. It is what we prefer, long for, and fervently seek. It is generally known by the faithful that the love of God is powerful, sustaining the soul and standing between the believer and the forces aligned against him. That is precisely why the Holy Spirit pours out God’s love into our hearts. In so doing, our confidence is bolstered and our hearts made strong.

reason, such things will also have an end. The idea here is that anything beneath God cannot interfere with His love for us! Everything that is under Christ – and that is “all things” (Eph 1:22) – has any power to push us beyond the reach of Divine love. Whether it is a personality or a circumstance, it cannot diminish the love of God for us in Christ Jesus.

ABLE TO SEPARATE

In a sense, this text is a promise, but it is more than a promise. It is a declaration of the real situation right now. All of the things that have been mentioned are totally incapable of separating us from the love of God. They simply have no power to do so. If we begin to think they can separate us, then we have been deceived on the matter.

We know that if God loves us there is neither person nor circumstance that can turn Him against us. If God is for us, who CAN be against us? Faith confidently responds, “For I am convinced that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other created thing, shall be able to separate us from the love of God . . .”^{NASB} Any person convinced of that will have the victory! That is why faith is declared to be “the victory” that overcomes the world (1 John 5:4-5). See to it that you abide in God’s love, and the powers of darkness can do nothing about it.

There are no doubt opponents and circumstances confronted in the faith life

THE LOVE OF GOD

The love of reference is God’s love for us, not our love for God. Our love flows from His love, and not vice versa. As it is written, “We love Him, because He first

CONDITIONAL LOVE

“ 8:39b . . . which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.” There is much talk these days about God’s unconditional love. But it has no substance in Scripture. I believe I know what honest people are trying to say, but when they use such flippant speech, they do not do well. At best, they are trying to say that the love of God can reach us where we are, and that life is never hopeless if we will believe. It is far better to speak of God’s love in the words of our text, namely that nothing is able to separate us from it.

whom his love was placed (Deut 23:5). The second is applied to “a cheerful giver” (2 Cor 9:7). The words “the Lord loves” are mentioned eight times in Scripture. (1) “The Lord loves His people” (2 Chron 2:11). (2) “The Lord loves justice” (Psa 37:28). (3) “The Lord loves the gates of Zion” (Psa 87:2). (4) “The Lord loves the righteous” (Psa 146:8). “For whom the Lord loves He reproves” (Prov 3:12). “The Lord loves Him” (Jacob, Isa 48:14). “The Lord loves the sons of Israel” (Hos 3:1).

- “For the Father Himself loves you, because you have loved Me, and have believed that I came forth from God.” (John 16:27)
- “The Father loves the Son, and has given all things into His hand.” (John 3:35)
- “For the Father loves the Son, and shows Him all things that He Himself does; and He will show Him greater works than these, that you may marvel.” (John 5:20).
- “Therefore My Father loves Me, because I lay down My life that I may take it again” (John 10:17).
- “He who has My commandments and keeps them, it is he who loves Me. And he who loves Me will be loved by My Father, and I will love him and manifest Myself to him.” (John 14:21)
- “Jesus answered and said to him, ‘If

None of the above texts are general, and all of them are selective.

JESUS SPEAKS OF GOD’S LOVE

The grand Expositor of God is the Lord Jesus Himself. If anyone can speak with clarity on the matter, it is the Son of God, the appointed Savior of the world.

The primary condition of God’s love is stated in our text: “which is IN Christ Jesus.” If you remove the Lord Jesus Christ from the picture, Divine love goes with Him. The words “God loves” appear only two times in any major translation of Scripture. The first applies to Israel, upon anyone loves Me, he will keep My word; and My Father will love him, and We will come to him and make Our home with him.” (John 14:23)

Past Tense: “loved”

Jesus also referred to the Father’s love in the past tense—a love perfected BEFORE experienced by us.

- ❑ “For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have everlasting life.” (John 3:16)
- ❑ “As the Father loved Me, I also have loved you; abide in My love.” (John 15:9)
- ❑ “Father, I desire that they also whom You gave Me may be with Me where I am, that they may behold My glory which You have given Me; for You loved Me before the foundation of the world.” (John 17:24)

The Apostles Did the Same

- ❑ “Now may our Lord Jesus Christ

Himself, and our God and Father, who has loved us and given us everlasting consolation and good hope by grace.” (2 Thess 2:16).

- ❑ “But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us.” (Eph 2:4)
- ❑ “In this is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we also ought to love one another.” (1 John 4:10-11)

While the love of God is directed toward all people in Christ Jesus, we are to understand it to be active only in those who are in Him. His “great love” made abundant provision for us “when we were enemies,” but that love was focused upon the Lord Jesus Himself. It is only as we are “in Him” that experience that love.

Apart from the Son of God, men can, indeed, be separated from the love of God. In fact, that will be the ultimate portion of all who refuse to believe the record God had given of His Son (1 John 5:10-11).

God is pointed on this matter. It is His Son in whom He is “well pleased” (Matt 3:17; 17:52 Pet 1:17), and upon whom His love rests in a most unique way. Even then, Jesus affirmed the Father loved Him BECAUSE He laid down His life for the sheep (John 10:17). God’s love for Christ is so strong that He loves us BECAUSE we love Christ, believing He came from God (John 16:27). God “WILL love” any person who loves Christ (John 14:21,23).

This is why God’s love is said to be “in Christ Jesus.” He does not love us in a sentimental and tolerating sort of way, for such love is not strong and does not change the individual. However, because His love for us is “in Christ Jesus our Lord,” it is consistent, protective, and effective. Those who have faith in the Son and abide in His love will find there is no opposing force that can neutralize or void that love. It is invincible. It is both strong and gentle, firm and tender.

CONCLUSION

Every person who is living by faith finds this text to be of great consolation. It contributes to their confidence, and enables them to boldly approach to the throne of all grace. If the love of men fails, the love of God will not. If they are assaulted by supernatural powers, they will prove impotent to move them away from this love. When Christ is dwelling in our heart by faith (Eph 3:16-17), He secures the love of God to us. Because of Him we benefit from that love. The Father will send us wisdom from above (James 1:17). He will give grace and peace in copious measures (Rom 1:7). Love and faith will be given to us by Him (Eph 6:23), together with mercy (1 Tim 1:12). “Everlasting consolation and good hope” will be given to us when God’s love is upon us (2 Thess 2:16).

Now, what is there that can stop the flow of these benefits to us? Can tribulation stop the intercession of Jesus? Can distress cause God to cease to give us grace and peace? Will persecution, regardless of its intensity, stop the well of salvation from flowing into our hearts?

Jesus is living for us (Rom 5:10). He is interceding for us, and mediating the New Covenant to us (Heb 7:25; 9:15). He is leading, feeding, and teaching us (Heb 2:10; John 10:4; Eph 4:20-21). His love is made known in these activities, and more. God the Father is blessing us with all spiritual blessings in the heavenly places in Christ (Eph 1:3). He is orchestrating our lives so that everything will work together for our ultimate good (Rom 8:28).

Now, what is there that can stop the flow of these benefits to us? Can tribulation stop the intercession of Jesus? Can distress cause God to cease to give us grace and peace? Will persecution, regardless of its intensity, stop the well of salvation from flowing into our hearts? Will famine effectively hinder us from receiving everlasting consolation and good hope? What of nakedness or destitution? Cannot a beggar full of sores be carried by angels to Abraham's bosom? And what of peril and the sword? Can they take a single spiritual blessing in heavenly places from us? The answer should be obvious to you. These benefits are beyond the reach of our foes. What is more, they cannot no stop them from passing through their territory to us that Sihon could stop Israel from passing through his land (Num 21:23-26).

Can death of life stop Jesus from interceding for you? Can angels, principalities, or powers cause wisdom to cease to come to you from God? Is it possible for the things of today or the prospects of tomorrow to make God stop working everything together for your good? Is there a place too high, or a circumstance too deep for grace and peace to be multiplied unto you? Is there any created thing that can blot out the Sun of righteousness, causing it to rise no longer with healing in His wings?

The resounding answer to all of these rhetorical questions is "NO!" That is what it means to remain unseparated from the love of God. It means no one can separate you from the benefits of that love. No one can stop God from blessing and keeping you. No circumstance can put you in a place where Jesus does not work for and in you. It simply is not possible!

Now, let your faith take hold of what the Spirit has said. If you have ears to hear, hear what He is saying to the churches. You have every reason to be strong in faith, giving glory to God. You have no reason to be fainthearted and unbelieving. The Gospel has declared God is for you, and has provided for your "eternal salvation." If God be for you, who really can be against you! That is something you can heartily embrace without any fear of contradiction!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 29

ISRAEL'S NEGLECTED ADVANTAGE

9:1 I tell the truth in Christ, I am not lying, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Spirit, ² that I have great sorrow and continual grief in my heart. ³ For I could wish that I myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my countrymen according to the flesh, ⁴ who are Israelites, to whom pertain the adoption, the glory, the covenants, the giving of the law, the service of God, and the promises; ⁵ of whom are the fathers and from whom, according to the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, the eternally blessed God. Amen. Romans 9:1-5 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

Having affirmed the powerful nature of the love of God, and that no adversarial power is capable of separating us from it, the Spirit now unveils a remarkable example of the love of God. As we embark upon this section of the book of Romans, we enter into an extremely controversial subject: the children of Israel. Although God speaks with consistency and clarity concerning the Israelites, seriously corrupted views of these people have been perpetrated by zealous religious leaders.

In summary, those views declare that God has repudiated the people of Israel, replacing them with the church. The promises made to them have, according to these views, been abrogated, and no longer apply to them.

In the exposition of chapters nine through eleven, I will devote considerable time to revealing the absurdity of these views. I have no regard for them, nor do I highly respect those who have and are proclaiming them. I will show that the point of these three chapters is to show us the indefatigable love of God – how that it is never pledged by Him, only to be abandoned.

The text will also address the objections of the Jews who believed they had, in fact, been forsaken by God. In Divine history, frequent pleas were raised up to God asking why they had been forsaken. Gideon once asked, “O my lord, if the LORD is with us, why then has all this happened to us? And where are all

His miracles which our fathers told us about, saying, ‘Did not the LORD bring us up from Egypt?’ But now the LORD has forsaken us and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites” (Judges 6:13). The Psalmist lamented, “But thou hast cast off, and put us to shame; and goest not forth with our armies” (Psa 44:9). Again Asaph cried out, “O God, why hast thou cast us off for ever? why doth thine anger smoke against the sheep of thy pasture?” (Psa 74:1).

Yet, even during those dark times, those with faith appealed to the strong love of God, calling upon Him to turn His face toward them again. “Awake, why sleepest thou, O Lord? arise, cast us not off for ever. Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and forgettest our affliction and our oppression? For our soul is bowed down to the dust: our belly cleaveth unto the earth. Arise for our help, and redeem us for thy mercies' sake" (Psa 44:23-26). Again, listen to the cry of faith: "O God, thou hast cast us off, thou hast scattered us, thou hast been displeased; O turn thyself to us again" (Psa 60:1). Again, the faith of David, together with His acquaintance with the nature of God, compelled him to pray, "Wilt not thou, O God, who hast cast us off? and wilt not thou, O God, go forth with our hosts? Give us help from trouble: for vain is the help of man. Through God we shall do valiantly: for he it is that shall tread down our enemies" (Psa 108:11-13).

If ever there was a people undeserving of the love of God, it was Israel. Their history is cluttered with murmuring, disobedience, and rebellion. Yet, our text will show that no force on earth or in the realm of darkness was able to separate them from the love of God. That was not owing to His mere attraction toward them, but because of their fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

They will be shown to be enemies at this present time. Yet, a ray of hope will be beamed across the horizon of time. Their sin will not be excused, nor will the love of God for them be repudiated.

With godly wisdom, Paul will confirm that the judgment of God against Israel was thoroughly just. However, He will also show that God still has a regard for this people. He will yet reclaim them through inscrutable wisdom. He will do so without violating His own holy nature. He will accomplish it without denying His love, or repudiating His promises to the fathers: Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. They will not be coerced into returning to Him, but gently and effectively drawn by the Gospel, and the Deliverer, Jesus Christ.

Israel still stands as a testimony to the love of God. In all of this we must take care to see the consistency of Divine love. We must also look carefully at the purpose of God, which will not fail of fulfillment. When these things are clearly seen, they will generate a strong and compelling hope within our hearts.

Our condition is not precisely the same as that of Israel. We have been begotten by God, and His laws have been written upon our hearts and put into our minds. However, there is something that is similar about us. We too are loved for the sake of another. Israel is beloved "for the father's sake." For us, the love of God is "in Christ Jesus our Lord." For that reason, it is absolutely dependable, and will never fail those who believe.

TELLING THE TRUTH

^{9:1a} I tell the truth in Christ . . . " On the surface, it appears as though there is a sudden change in subject matter. However, this is not the case. In salvation, our feet have been set "in a large room" (Psa 31:80). When men are brought to reason in the Spirit, they navigate in exceedingly large realms.

Having expounded the profound truth of Divine purpose, the indispensable role of the Holy Spirit, and the inability of any created thing to separate us from the love God, Paul now speaks of what is in his heart. He is able to do this because of his accord with God.

This is an important acknowledgment. The Jews had charged Paul with despising their nation, saying that he taught things that was "not lawful" for them to receive (Acts 16:21). They said he taught "all the Jews who are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children nor to walk according to the customs" (Acts 21:21). While Paul did oppose circumcision as a means to justification, or Divine acceptance (Acts 15:1-2; Gal 5:2), he did not oppose it as a point of view, for His death (Acts 2:23; 3:15; 4:10; 5:30; 7:52; 1 Thess 2:15). It is necessary to establish their judgment was totally wrong in this matter. This is required for at least two reasons.

Still, Paul will show that he has not been unduly influenced by the hatred of his own countrymen. His attitude toward them is compelled by his fellowship with Christ. He views them from the heavenly perspective, crucifying the flesh.

custom. In fact, he even had Timothy circumcised because of the Jews in that region (Acts 16:3). That this was not the pattern of his behavior is confirmed by his refusal to circumcise Titus. In that case, surrounding Jews did not have good hearts or intentions (Gal 2:3).

The reason for this vigorous teaching concerning the Jews should be obvious. As a whole, the Jews had rejected the Lord Jesus, being responsible, from a human

- ❑ The promise of an anointed one who would deliver the people was true (Isa 9:6-7; 61:1-3).
- ❑ The Lord Jesus Christ was that One, the Savior of the world (Acts 2:36; 5:30-31; 13:32-33).

Both of these had been denied by the Jews, and that with great zeal. They rejected Jesus, even though He came to them (John 1:11). They also opposed Paul because he preached Christ. Five times they had him beaten with thirty-nine (forty save one) stripes (2 Cor 11:24). Paul said of them, they “have persecuted us”(1

In chapters nine through eleven, the Holy Spirit provides an extensive commentary of Israel’s present and future condition. There is no need for any soul to speculate on this matter.

Thess 2:15). Some of them once said, “we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul” (Acts 23:14).

Still, Paul will show that he has not been unduly influenced by the hatred of his own countrymen. His attitude toward them is compelled by his fellowship with Christ. He views them from the heavenly perspective, crucifying the flesh.

The Spirit enables Paul to show the enormity of Israel’s sin without removing hope from them. He will confess his deep concern for them and acknowledge their advantages. He will not summarily write them off, or affirm they are no longer a people. He will not say that the Gentiles have taken their place, or that they will never, as a nation, come to the Lord Jesus. These are all positions espoused by some Gentile theologians, and they are in sharp conflict with the Word of God.

An Extensive Commentary

In chapters nine through eleven, the Holy Spirit provides an extensive commentary of Israel’s present and future condition. There is no need for any soul to speculate on this matter. In fact, it is the height of ignorance to do so when God has gone to such great lengths to declare His mind and purpose on the subject. Paul will now declare that he is in full accord with the Lord on the matter of the Jews. Further, his heart is influenced by his understanding.

TRUTH

This is particularly significant because Paul was represented by many as hating the Jewish people. “Truth,” in this case, is more than stating something that is not a lie. This is the confession of his heart. It is not a mere statement of a formal creed. Paul is caught up in the truth he has been proclaiming. He has affirmed the Gospel is God’s power unto salvation “to the Jew first” (1:16). He has also declared that both condemnation and eternal life will be pronounced upon “the Jew first” (2:7-8). All of this has brought out his inmost person, and are expressions of his “new man.”

IN CHRIST

The words that follow flow out from Paul’s fellowship with Christ. They are like “rivers of living water” flowing from his “belly,” or inmost person (John 7:39).

While the words are intensely personal, they are joined to Omnipotence, because they have resulted from fellowship with Christ. They will therefore minister to our hearts, and assist in clarifying both the nature and intent of the Gospel.

God has called us into the fellowship of His Son (1 Cor 1:9), and as we traffic in the Gospel, that fellowship is enhanced. As we walk in the light (1 John 1:7), not only are our thoughts brought into accord with those of Jesus, we are able to confidently and accurately speak of them. The example before us is excellent, and worthy of our focused attention.

AN ELABORATION

The Apostle introduced us to the foreknowledge and predestination of God in chapter eight (8:29-30). He confirmed they are driving forces in the Kingdom of God, and are both employed in the matter of our salvation. They have been inexorably associated with our calling, justification, and glorification. Although they are the subject of much debate in the religious world, they are intended to buoy up the faith of the people of God.

Now, in a lengthy discourse, the Spirit uses the children of Israel to illustrate how these Divine qualities interface with the salvation of men. He will speak of Divine preferences and their outcome, relating them specifically to Israel. He will also be clear in his definition of Israel. The purpose is to confirm that we are justified in wholly relying upon the Living God through Christ Jesus. Divine favor rests upon Israel, but even more upon the Son, in Whom we have been made accepted (Eph 1:6).

THE WITNESS OF THE CONSCIENCE

“^{1b} I am not lying, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Spirit . . .” The strength of this statement confirms it is not the mere espousal of a theological position. Much of what is said about the Jews today is nothing more than heartless religious views. They are not insightful, and they have not effected the consciences and hearts of those embracing them. How differently Paul speaks on the subject.

NOT LYING

“I am not lying . . .” In this subject, Paul is unveiling his heart to us. It is not often that such an unveiling occurs, and it is a tribute to those to whom it is unveiled when done. You may recall it is written of our Lord, “But Jesus did not commit Himself to them, because He knew all men” (John 2:24). The Savior was a sterling example of one who refused to cast pearls before swine, something He Himself warned against (Matt 7:6).

In saying “I lie not,” the Apostle means that his words are to be taken precisely as they are uttered. They are not veiled or disguised. There is not guile in his words, no hidden inferences or deceptive tones. The spiritual integrity of the brethren in Rome allowed them to be exposed to some of the most profound longings and insights of the Apostle.

MY CONSCIENCE

“ . . . my conscience . . . ” One of the potential blights of academic pursuits is the tendency to ignore the conscience. Many a simple soul has lost their faith because they trusted in study and research rather than the Lord. They were brought to listen to men more than their own conscience.

Others have ignored their conscience, treating it as though it had no importance or directive qualities. Thus their conscience became “seared with a hot iron” of neglect. This is the declared condition of false prophets who gave heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons rather than the testimony of their conscience (1 Tim 4:2). I gather from this that they were eventually unable to distinguish between their conscience and the whisperings of demonic spirits. What a tragic condition! Even those hypocrites who brought a woman taken in adultery to Jesus eventually left, “convicted by their own conscience” (John 8:9).

The person who walks with God is zealous to maintain a “good conscience,” one that does not condemn him (Acts 23:1). Paul confessed he extended himself to maintain a “conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men” (Acts 24:16). He lived so that his conscience did not plague or condemn him concerning his conduct toward God or man.

Paul’s conscience, because he honored it and sought to keep it pure, bore testimony to what he said of himself, confirming it was the truth. “For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world . . .” (2 Cor

1:12). In fact, the goal of his teaching was to produce a similar conscience in others. “Now the purpose of the commandment is love from a pure heart, from a good conscience, and from sincere faith” NKJV (1 Tim 1:5).

The failure to maintain a good conscience will eventually lead to a the truth of his words. Those viewing things in this way consider this, and other Pauline affirmations, as his opinions. As such, if true, it could not be received as “sound doctrine.”

However, this is shallow and false thinking. The inspiration of the Almighty gives the human spirit understanding, shipwreck of ones faith. As it is written, “I give you this instruction in keeping with the prophecies once made about you, so that by following them you may fight the good fight, holding on to faith and a good conscience. Some have rejected these and so have shipwrecked their faith” NIV (1 Tim 1:18-19). The truth of the matter is that you can keep hold of the deep truths of the faith only when you have a “clear” or “pure conscience” (1 Tim 3:9). God is only served “with a pure conscience” (2 Tim 1:3).

Thus, when Paul says his conscience bears him witness, he is confirming he had lived in spiritual sensitivity, and that sensitivity matched his words. He was not spouting some lifeless dogma as the scribes and Pharisees. His doctrine had influenced his heart and tenderized his conscience.

THE WITNESS

Addressing an Objection

Some might object to such an affirmation, saying that the testimony of the conscience is vastly inferior to the inspiration of God. Thus, they reason, it would have been better to say God had inspired Paul to say this, rather than affirming his conscience bore witness to moving the individual to think and speak in concert with the Lord (Job 32:8). What had been revealed to Paul had been embraced by faith. His understanding was effected by this, and his conscience kept pure and profitable because of it.

The fact that the “witness” of Paul’s conscience perfectly correlates with Scripture confirms it reflected the very “mind of Christ.” That witness confirms he was inspired, making it incumbent that we receive these words as from the Lord.

IN THE SPIRIT

This further corroborates that Paul was not giving us a personal opinion—one that could be rejected, while another quite different view was preferred. The Holy Spirit Himself confirmed the testimony of Paul’s conscience. What he now declares is not only validated by his conscience, but by the Holy Spirit of God.

Paul’s attitude toward the Jews, which he will now declare, was not driven by human sentimentality. He was not brought to this position because he was a Jew, but because he was in fellowship with Christ Jesus. The truth of God had fashioned his persuasion, and it was in perfect accord with the promises of God.

THE COMPULSION OF GODLY CONCERN

“2 . . . that I have great sorrow and continual grief in my heart.”

Other versions read, “heaviness and continual sorrow,” KJV “sorrow and unceasing grief,” NASB “sorrow and unceasing anguish,” NIV “great grief and unceasing pain,”^{NLT} and “filled with bitter sorrow and unending grief.”^{NLT} To say the least, these are unusually strong expressions. They reveal a facet of spiritual life that is not common in our time. They reflect a spirit that is the opposite of pride and selfishness. This great sorrow and grief is not remorse for sin. It is not prompted because of the awareness of personal deficiencies. Rather, it is brought on by an acute awareness of the condition of someone run down mine eyes, because they keep not thy law” (Psa 119:36). This same sorrow was experienced by Jeremiah: “Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!” (Jer 9:12; Lam 3:48).

What Paul knew of the Jews caused “great sorrow,” or “great heaviness.” It was a burden difficult to be borne. It even influenced his outward manner, which I between this declared response to the state of the Jews and that of much of the contemporary church. Swathed in Divine fellowship, with a tender conscience confirming the properness of his response, and the Holy Spirit bearing witness to its truth, Paul declares he had “great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart” over the Jews. In view of this, I find it exceedingly difficult to tolerate the attitude of many who write the Jews off as though God had no heart at all for His ancient people.

What the Apostle now acknowledges is true, and is no lie. It is confirmed by his conscience, and by the Holy Spirit. It is in accord with the nature of God and His “eternal purpose.” It is a frame of spirit that is so precise, it will be a proper introduction to a declaration of the profound working of the Lord.

Ezekiel’s Experience

On one occasion, when God was getting ready to judge Jerusalem, He allowed the prophet Ezekiel to see what was going to happen. In a telling revelation of how God feels about those who sorrow because of the state of the Jews, He revealed to Ezekiel how such people had touched Him. “And the LORD said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof” (Ezek 9:4). When the harsh judgment began. The manner in which it is described tears at the heart. “Go ye after him through the city, and smite: let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity: 6 Slay utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women.”

else—particularly the children of Israel.

What the Apostle now acknowledges is true, and is no lie. It is confirmed by his conscience, and by the Holy Spirit. It is in accord with the nature of God and His “eternal purpose.” It is a frame of spirit that is so precise, it will be a proper introduction to a declaration of the profound working of the Lord.

GREAT SORROW

Here, I prefer the KJV word “heaviness” to “great sorrow.” This is when sorrow presses the human spirit down with sadness and distress. It is not that Paul was weighed down with sorrow all of the time. The idea is that the recollection of the Jews always was accompanied with great and oppressive sorrow. It is the kind of sorrow Samuel had when he wept for rejected Saul (1 Sam 15:35). It is the same sorrow experienced by David: “Rivers of waters gather to be the emphasis of “great sorrow.” It was associated with such things as tears and a fallen countenance—much like that experienced by Nehemiah (Neh 2:1-3). For this reason, Jesus “wept” over Jerusalem, being outwardly effected by their condition (Luke 19:41). A similar weeping took place at the tomb of Lazarus, when our Lord confronted massive unbelief (John 11:35).

CONTINUAL GRIEF

Whereas “great sorrow” was more external than internal, so “continual grief” focuses on inner effects. Thus he adds the words “in my heart”—or at the very center of his being.

It is important to again note the described condition was not brought on by personal sin or weakness. Paul’s heart was so sensitive it could be influenced by the condition of other people. I am struck with the sharpness of the contrast

The wrath of the Almighty had been stirred up by the wickedness of His people. Yet, the Lord gave one qualifying word, and it concerned those who had been sighing and crying because of the abominations found among His people. “But come not near any man upon whom is the mark; and begin at my sanctuary” (Ezek 9:5). In this case, God took due notice of those who were concerned for His people. His attitude has not changed, as our text will affirm.

THE CAPACITY OF A HEART IN FELLOWSHIP WITH CHRIST

“³ For I could wish that I myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my countrymen according to the flesh . . .” Remember, Paul has affirmed this is the truth, and that it is not a lie. He has declared that his conscience testifies to its truth, and that the Holy Spirit also bears witness to its reality. This is not, then, a rhetorical overstatement or exaggeration. It is obviously a strong statement, and thus must not be brushed aside as though it had no relevance for us.

I COULD WISH

"I could wish . . ." Nearly every translation reads the same way. A few depart from this expression: "I have a desire,"^{BBE} "I would be willing,"^{NLT}, and "I could pray."^{NJB} Grammarians point out that this is written in the past tense: i.e., "I wished myself,"^{Duoay-Rheims} "I have wished,"^{Darby} and "I was wishing."^{YLT} All of that, however, seems to me to be a distraction. The point Paul is making is not WHEN he had the desire, but WHAT the desire was.

The word "wish," contrary to its ordinary use, does not reflect a casual and inconsequential desire. Rather, it is a strong and compelling desire. Sometimes, it is translated "pray," as in "pray to God" (2 Cor 13:7). John used this very word (ἐύχομαι) to express his strong desire for Gaius, who was especially close to him. "Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth" (3 John 1-2). James also uses this word in James 5:16, where he admonishes "pray for one another."

This is not, then, a casual or heartless expression. Here is a desire driven by the heart, not the mind. It is one confirmed by a pure conscience and ratified by the Holy Spirit. It is the expression of someone in fellowship with Jesus Christ, and is the truth. I cannot think of a way of stating a valid desire more strongly.

The expression "could wish" means if God had provided for the Jews to be saved in this manner, Paul would gladly acquiesce to it. There was no lawful means he would shun for the salvation of his brethren.

ACCURSED FROM CHRIST

And what is it that Paul so strongly desired? It is too weighty for timorous or frivolous hearts: "that I myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren."

At once the stereotyped theologians rush to our aid, stating that such a thing is impossible – that it is incredible to even think one can be "accursed from Christ."

And thus their folly neutralizes the text, making it of no consequence whatsoever. It paints Paul as a hasty writer, who had little or no regard for the truth which had set him free. However, Paul said what he meant, and told us it was "the truth." His conscience attested to its accuracy, as well as the Holy Spirit, who "searches all things" (1 Cor 2:10).

There are at least two things revealed by those who cannot receive this saying. First, they are unaware of the intense desire of godly people for those to whom salvation is promised. Second, they lack acquaintance with the Divine estimation of the children of Israel.

Moses

The reaction of Paul to Israel is much the same as that of Moses. On one occasion, when the Lord was especially provoked by Israel, Moses returned to Him from the people. One of the strongest intercessions of Scriptural record took place at that time. Here are Moses' words. "Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold. Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin--; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written" (Ex 32:31-32).

Note that Moses' sentence is broken off abruptly, remaining unfinished: "if Thou wilt forgive their sin- ." At that point, words failed him, and there was no further plea he could make. He then laid himself, as it was, upon the altar of appeasement. Before returning to the Lord, he had told the people, "Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; peradventure I shall make an atonement for your sin" (Ex 32:30). Yet, he had taken no sacrifice with him, and had presented no atoning blood before the Lord. Instead, he offered himself for the "atonement," seeking the preservation of the children of Israel.

This appeal did have an effect upon God. First, He told Moses would only blot those out of His book who had sinned against Him—and Moses had not done that. "Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book" (v 33).

Those who say such a thing is not possible will have to answer to God for their insolent sayings. The Lord then told Moses, "Therefore now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: behold, mine Angel shall go before thee: nevertheless in the day when I visit I will visit their sin upon them" (v 34). Even though the Lord "plagued the people, because they made the calf, which Aaron made" (v 35), yet they had gained some mercy because of Moses' powerful intercession.

We have every reason to believe that Paul's profound desire for Israel also had an effect upon the Lord. He saw the salvation of Israel as something that would bring great glory to God, even if it was at the expense of himself being cursed.

Throughout the eleventh chapter of this good book, the reasoning will confirm the legitimacy of Paul's desire. It will also point out the absurdity of those who malign the Israelites, saying they are no longer a people.

MY COUNTRYMEN

Paul is not talking about spiritual Israelites, but of his "kinsmen according to the flesh."^{KJV} In Christ, we have no "kinsmen according to the flesh," for no such distinctions are found in Him (Gal 3:28). Further, the kinship was not through his father and mother, but through Abraham, the father of the nation. While the relationship was “kinsmen according to the flesh,” it was based upon Divine choice and favor.

It is true that there is a spiritual

Israel within Israel (Rom 9:6). However, that it not what Paul is talking about. He is speaking of the fleshly offspring of Abraham, to whom promises were made by a God who cannot lie. The relationship is founded upon “flesh and blood,” but his love for them is not. His heaviness and sorrow are flowing from a larger river.

THE ISRAELITES

“^{4a} . . . who are Israelites . . .” Let there be no doubt about the people intended. Paul is NOT referring to, what is commonly called, “spiritual Israel.” This is not a reference to the church, the redeemed, or those who are in Christ Jesus. These are his “kinsmen according to the flesh,” his “people, my Jewish brothers and sisters.”^{NLT} Of course, if God no longer recognizes these people, Paul could not have spoken in this manner. In fact, as we will see, it is precisely because of God’s attitude toward them that the Apostle has such strong feelings for them.

Years ago, I was with my beloved father when a young skeptic sought to challenge him with a question. Because he questioned the integrity of the Scriptures, he protested, “Give me one word that proves the Bible is true!” My father simply answered, “JEW!” This people cannot be accounted for apart from the working of the Lord. These are the only people for which an extensive history is provided in Scripture. Even though they were “the fewest of all people” (Deut 7:7), yet inspired volumes are written concerning them. Of the fifty chapters in Genesis, thirty-nine of them are about the beginning of this nation. The remaining thirty-four books of, what is called, “the Old Testament” deal preeminently with Israel. The books of Esther, Ruth, Jonah, and Obadiah, while mentioning other nations, obtain significance because of the Jews and their prophets. Other nations are mentioned primarily because of their identity with Israel.

Remove the Jews from the Scriptures, and what is left loses any semblance or of order of intelligence. Without the Jews, Jesus and the Gospel cannot be properly comprehended. They both postulate the existence of the Jewish nation—“Israelites.”

THE CALL OF ABRAHAM

In order to understand the meaning of “Israelites,” we must go back to Abraham, who was the progenitor of this nation. The first call of Abraham, originally called “Abram,” is recorded in the twelfth chapter of Genesis.

The word “Israel” is found a staggering 2,566 times in Scripture. Seventy-five of those references are found from Matthew through Revelation. Every child of God should have a good understanding of this name, and the nation with which it is identified.

Prior to Abraham

Prior to this, Terah, Abraham’s father, together with Abram, his wife Sarai, and Lot [his grandson], had “went out together from Ur of the Chaldeans in order to enter the land of Canaan.” We are told they “went as far as Haran, and settled there” (Gen 11:31). There, Abram’s father Terah died at the ripe old age of 205 (Gen 11:32). That was about the year 1921 B.C. This ended a period of nearly 2,000 years, to which only eleven chapters of the Bible are devoted. Of those eleven chapters, four are devoted to a period of about one year, the time of the flood (chapters 6-9). That leaves leaves seven chapters in Genesis in which nearly 2,000 are covered.

Why Bring This Up?

Remarkable and extended details of Divine history begin with the call of Abraham. This accentuates the importance of what started with Abram. When the Lord began working with him, He changed his name, as well as that of Sarai, his barren wife (Gen 17:5,15). The Lord was beginning a new thing. He was going to bring forth a chosen people from a chosen man and woman. God repeatedly made this promise to Abraham.

“And I will make of thee a great nation . . . And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered . . . Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them: and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee . . .

Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation . . . I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore.” (Gen 12:2; 13:16; 15:5-6; 18:18; 22:17).

I understand that the consummation of this blessing is found in those who are in Christ Jesus, who was the ultimate Seed of Abraham. However, as our text will confirm, the nation of Israel is integral to the Abrahamic promise. God’s promise included a fleshly nation coming from Abraham. That is the nation to which our text refers: “who are Israelites.”

THE ORIGIN OF THE NAME ISRAEL

The word “Israel” is found a staggering 2,566 times in Scripture. Seventy-five of those references are found from Matthew through Revelation. Every child of God should have a good understanding of this name, and the “father” (Jacob) and nation with which it is identified.

God called Jacob “Israel” when He changed his name. This occurred when Jacob wrestled with a heavenly messenger through the night. When the day began to dawn, and the angel demanded, “Let me go, for the day breaks,” Jacob responded, “I will not let You go unless You bless me!” It was then that the messenger responded, “Your name shall no longer be called Jacob, but Israel; for you have struggled with God and with men, and have prevailed” NKJV (Gen 32:26-28).

Jacob was the last among “the fathers,” Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Deut 1:8; 6:10; 9:5; 29:13; Deut 30:20; 1 Chron 29:18; Acts 3:13). In fact, in a most unique way, the Lord is called “the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob” (Ex 3:6,15; 4:5; Matt 22:32; Mk 12:26; Lk 20:37; Acts 7:32).

There are precious few people with whom God has so identified Himself. He is also called “the God of Shem” (Gen 9:26), one of the revealed Messianic progenitors (Lk 3:36). He is also called “the God of David” (2 Kgs 20:5; Isa 38:5), “the God of Hezekiah” (2 Chron 32:17), “the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego” (Dan 3:28), and “the God of Daniel” (Dan 6:26) – all Jews.

He is also called “the God of the Hebrews” (Ex 5:3), “the God of the Jews” (Rom 3:29), and “the God of Israel” no less than ninety times (Ex 5:1; 24:10; 32:27; 34:23; Num 16:9; Josh 7:13,19,20; 8:30; 9:18,19; 10:40,42; 13:14,33; 14:14; 22:16,24; 24:2,23; Judges 4:6; 5:3,5; 6:8; 11:21,23; 21:3; Ruth 2:12; 1 Sam 1:17; 2:30; 5:7,8, 10,11; 6:3,5; 10:18; 14:41; 20:12; 23:10,11; 25:32,34; 2 Sam 7:27; 12:7; 23:3; 1 Kgs 1:30,48; 8:15,17,20,23, 25,26; 11:9,31; 14:7,13; 15:30; 16:13,26,33; 17:1,14; 22:53; 2 Kgs 9:6; 10:31; 14:25; 18:5; 19:15,20; 21:12; 22:15,18; 1 Chron 4:10; 5:26; 15:12,14; 16:4,36; 17:24; 22:6; 23:25; 24:19; 28:4; 29:10; 2 Chron 2:12; 6:4,7,10, 14,16,17; 11:16; 13:5; 15:4,13; 20:19; 29:7, 10; 30:1,5; 32:17; 33:16,18,23;

In fact, it is not possible to think correctly about the Lord without being mindful of the Israelites! He has tied His name to that nation, which can only be accounted for by the intervention of God Almighty.

“Israel” (Lk 2:25), and “the King of Israel” (John 1:49; 12:13). He is declared to be the Prophet raised up unto Israel (Acts 7:37), and the embodiment of the Word “God sent unto the children of Israel” (Acts 10:36). The New Covenant has been made “with the house of Israel” (Heb 8:8,10). John the Baptist came baptizing in order that Jesus might “be made manifest to Israel” (John 1:31). God has exalted Him “to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). With strength Paul affirmed, “God according to his promise raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus” (Acts 13:23). Paul accounted for himself being a prisoner by saying, “for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain” (Acts 28:20). In our former lives, we Gentiles were characterized as “aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise” (Eph 2:12).

The Relevance of These Things

These facts have a great deal of relevance to the text with which we are dealing. If it is true that “All scripture is given by inspiration of God” (2 Tim 3:16), and that “no prophecy of Scripture is of any private interpretation . . . but holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit” (2 Pet 1:20-21), then we are brought to an obvious conclusion. The Holy Spirit has extended Himself to impress “the Israelites” upon our thinking. In fact, it is not possible to think correctly about the Lord without being mindful of the Israelites! He has tied His name to that nation, which can only be accounted for by the intervention of God Almighty. It is impossible that a single individual could have come from Abraham and Sarah, to say nothing of a “mighty nation.”

These are the people to whom our text refers. They are the ones who caused Paul to have great heaviness and sorrow of heart. There is no record of any person of God having such concern for any other people. Jeremiah’s tears flowed because of the condition of the Israelites (Jer 9:1; Lam 3:48). The Lord Jesus Himself wept over Jerusalem (Luke 19:41). Paul had heaviness and sorrow of heart because of them (Rom 9:1-2). There is no record of a Prophet, the Lord Jesus, or an Apostle weeping over a Gentile city. That does not mean God had no concern for such places. He did have an interest in the little children and cattle of Nineveh (Jonah 4:11).

An Exclusive Attitude

There is an overwhelming tone of Scripture concerning “the children of Israel” according to the flesh. It is true that they are consistently upbraided for their obstinance and unbelief (Rom 10:21). They were judged for their rejection of the Savior, because they did not know they were visited by the Lord of glory (Lk 19:44). Yet nowhere is it said they are “without hope.” The door of salvation has been left ajar for them! In fact, this section of Romans will affirm they will yet be forgiven and blessed, coming back from their spiritual deadness.

You should live close enough to the Lord that the word “Israelites” sparks both sorrow and anticipation within your heart. If David could say, “Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee,” and “Do good in thy good pleasure unto Zion: build thou the walls of Jerusalem,” how much more can we join with Paul in the attitude he evinces in our text (Psa 122:6; 51:18). There was good reason why Jeremiah admonished those surviving the assault of Nebuchadnezzar, “You who have escaped the sword, Get away! Do not stand still! Remember the LORD afar off, And let Jerusalem come to your mind” (Jer 51:50).

The Israel of God

In his letter to the Galatians, Paul refers to “the Israel of God.” “And as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God” (Gal 6:16). Many have taken this to mean “the church,” with no regard to the nation of Israel. However, that view is much too simplistic. It is true it does not refer to fleshly Israel. It does, however, refer to the “children of Abraham,” namely those who have believed. The third and fourth chapters focus on Abraham, showing that justification came by faith, not by works (3:7-18). He also shows that those in Christ Jesus are Abraham’s children—promised children, just like Isaac (4:22-31).

The point is that the expression “the Israel of God” has no significance if Israel as a nation no longer exists. Those whom God has accepted, both before Jesus and following Him, have been part of the true Israel, which is a nation within a nation. They are the “remnant” to which Paul will later refer (9:27; 11:5). Those of this number who are Gentiles in the flesh, have been grafted in to the Israelite tree, of which Abraham is the “root” and the promises are the “fatness” (11:17).

THE LAND GIVEN TO THEM

It would not be appropriate to leave this subject without mentioning the land that was given to Israel. This was a key aspect of the promise given to Abraham, and lends itself to the distinction of the nation springing from him.

In the entire history of the world, there is only one piece of real estate where God placed His name. He refers to this area as “My land” (2 Chron 7:20; Isa 14:25; Jer 2:7; 16:18; Ezek 36:5; 38;16; Joel 1:6). It is also called “His land,” and associated with His people (Deut 32:43; Psa 10:16; Ezek 36:20; Joel 2:18; Zech 9:16).

This land was promised to Abraham for a possession. He promised, “Unto thy seed will I give this land . . . And he said unto him, I am the LORD that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it” (Gen 12:7; 15:7).

The promise was renewed to Isaac. “Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swear unto Abraham thy father” (Gen 26:3).

It was also renewed to Jacob. “And the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee I will give the land . . . Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession” (Gen 35:12; 48:4).

The borders of the land are outlined in Numbers 34:3-12. “Your southern side will include some of the Desert of Zin along the border of Edom. On the east, your southern boundary will start from the end of the Salt Sea, cross south of Scorpion Pass, continue on to Zin and go south of Kadesh Barnea. Then it will go to Hazar Addar and over to Azmon, where it will turn, join the Wadi of Egypt and end at the Sea. Your western boundary will be the coast of the Great Sea. This will be your boundary on the west. For your northern boundary, run a line from the Great Sea to Mount Hor and from Mount Hor to Lebo Hamath. Then the boundary will go to Zedad, continue to Ziphron and end at Hazar Enan. This will be your boundary on the north. For your eastern boundary, run a line from Hazar Enan to Shepham. The boundary will go down from Shepham to Riblah on the east side of Ain and continue along the slopes east of the Sea of Kinnereth. Then the boundary will go down along the Jordan and end at the Salt Sea. This will be your land, with its boundaries on every side.”^{NIV} Is this text not arresting for its amount of detail? (See map above)

The land has never been fully possessed by Israel. Under kings David and Solomon it reached its greatest extent.

Yet, even then, the people did not occupy much of the land. Enemies resided there, although they paid tribute to both David and Solomon (1 Chron 18:2; 1 Kings 4:21).

The Relevance of the Land

Through the Prophets, and after the Babylonian captivity, God promised He would bring His people back to their land (Jer 16:15; 24:6; 32:37; Ezek 34:13; 36:24; 37:21; Zech 10:10). The things related to this return confirm it involved more than merely inhabiting the land. That return is associated with a dramatic change in the people themselves.

- They will be given a heart to know the Lord (Jer 24:7a).
- They will be His people, and He will be their God (Jer 24:7b; 32:38).
- They will return to him with their whole heart (Jer 24:7c).
- God will give them one heart and one way (Jer 32:39a).
- They will fear Him forever (Jer 32:39b).

- ❑ God will feed them and cause them to lie down in safety (Ezek 34:14-15).
- ❑ He will purify them from all uncleanness (Ezek 36:25).
- ❑ He will give them a new heart and a new spirit (Ezek 36:26a).
- ❑ He will remove the stony heart from them (Ezek 36:26b).
- ❑ He will put His Spirit within them, and cause them to walk in His statutes (Ezek 36:27).
- ❑ God will make them one nation, and they will no longer be divided (Ezek 37:22).
- ❑ They will be under the true Shepherd, and will walk in God's judgments (Ezek 37:24).
- ❑ They will be strengthened in the Lord (Zech 10:12).

These are only representative of a host of Divine commitments to the children of Israel – the ones for whom Paul had great heaviness and sorrow of heart. It is these commitments, and Israel's present failure to appropriate them, that causes the sorrow.

The Lord Jesus' Prophecy

Confirming that God has not abandoned the children of Israel, Jesus said this concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, which took place in 70 A.D. "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Luke 21:24). Our Lord left the door of hope ajar, showing that the judgment against Israel was temporal, and not like that of Sodom and Gomorrah, who "suffered the vengeance of eternal fire" (Jude 7).

Paul's Prophecy

Later, Paul will affirm that partial blindness has occurred. "Israel has experienced a hardening in part until the full number of the Gentiles has come in" (11:25). Again, a limit, known only to the Lord, is placed upon the blindness that has happened "in part" to Israel. The prophecies of both Jesus and Paul indicate a termination to the preeminence of the Gentiles.

CONCLUSION

Because Israel is the subject of chapters nine, ten, and eleven, this will suffice to introduce them. My point in giving this rather extensive introduction is to confirm WHY Paul had heaviness and sorrow of heart because of the Israelites. This was no sentimental reaction. Nor, indeed, did it reflect a mere fleshly attachment to his own nation. His attitude was driven by his possession of the mind of Christ, and fueled by his fellowship with the Son of God.

In this passage, God is speaking to us. He is confirming His commitment to what He has promised. He is showing us a concrete example of His foreknowledge and predestination. In this text, He unfolds some of the involvements of calling, justification, and glorification. He is unveiling what it means to be "for" someone, and how He can "work all things together for the good" of His people. The Spirit will not only speak candidly about these matters, but firmly, so as to anchor our faith in God. I want to emphasize that this is not a departure from the great theme of justification. We will see more fully what it takes to save!

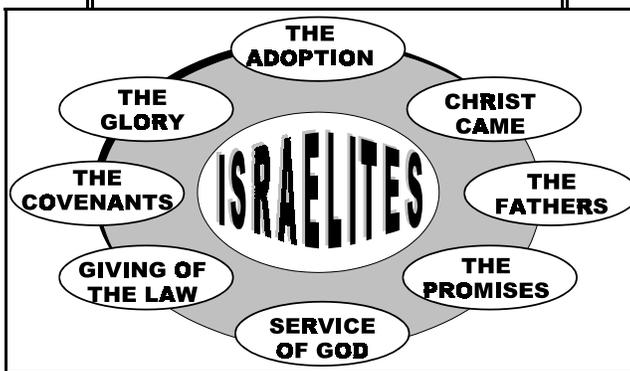

REMARKABLE ADVANTAGES

"^{4b} . . . to whom pertain the adoption, the glory, the covenants, the giving of the law, the service of God, and the promises; ⁵ of whom are the fathers and from whom, according to the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, the eternally blessed God. Amen."

Among other things, this text will confirm to our hearts that it takes more than information to save us. There are NO external advantages that can bring a person or a people into Divine favor. Without a change of nature and the obtainment of the righteousness of God, there can be no salvation!

What is more, it is inconceivable that any one could have received more outward advantages than Israel. If anyone could remain in the flesh and unregenerated, yet dwell in the house of the Lord forever, it would have been Israel.

Remember, the Spirit has declared there is "none righteous, no not one" (3:10). Now He will take us to the premier fleshly people, showing that, with all of their advantages, they did not attain to the righteousness of God. No person can feel safe who maintains only an outward identity; i.e., being associated with a church or some other religious body. Although it is common to find this sort of attitude, it is altogether unjustified. If Israel could not rely on the outward advantages they had, you can be sure no one today can. Her advantages came from the Lord, and yet they did not change her nature!

Why, Then, Mention These Advantages?

In view of this, why take the time to mention these remarkable advantages? As I have mentioned, it will show us that salvation is not of works, lest any man should boast. This will confirm to our hearts that our faith and hope must be in God, not in a system—even a revealed system!

However, it will show us something else. The Lord will confirm that while many of the Israelites did not partake of the benefit, God's Word to them was not in vain. The Lord is capable of fulfilling His word, even though everything seems to be against it. He can work everything together for good, even though there appears to be no possible way for that to be accomplished.

TO WHOM PERTAIN

The word "pertain" means "belongs to." Other versions read, "to whom belongs,"^{NASB} "Theirs is,"^{NIV} "to them belong,"^{NRSV} "whose is,"^{ASV} "who have,"^{BBE} and "they have."^{NLT}

Observe that every translation puts the word in the present tense, and properly so. No version puts the word in the past: i.e., "pertained," or "belonged," or "had," or "was." The Spirit will not present to us something that Israel had, but lost. These advantages still belong to THEM. They are not benefits that have passed from the Israelites to the Gentiles. Rather the Gentiles have passed from alienation into these benefits.

Moses' Plea

When the Lord declared He would destroy Israel and raise up a great nation from Moses, the servant of God, knowing the mind of the Lord, pled effectively with Him. "Why should the Egyptians speak, and say, 'He brought them out to harm them, to kill them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth?' Turn from Your fierce wrath, and relent from this harm to Your people. Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, Your servants, to whom You swore by Your own self, and said to them, 'I will multiply your descendants as the stars of heaven; and all this land that I have spoken of I give to your descendants, and they shall inherit it forever'"^{NKJV} (Ex 32:12-13).

Again, when the children of Israel provoked the Lord by refusing to take the land of Canaan, the Lord again said, "I will smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them, and will make of thee a greater nation and mightier than they" (Num 14:12). Quickly Moses pled with God again, and with great effectiveness. "Then the Egyptians will hear it, for by Your might You brought these people up from among them, and they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land. They have heard that You, LORD, are among these people; that You, LORD, are seen face to face and Your cloud stands above them, and You go before them in a pillar of cloud by day and in a pillar of fire by night. Now if You kill these people as one man, then the nations which have heard of Your fame will speak, saying, Because the LORD was not able to bring this people to the land which He swore to give them, therefore He killed them in the wilderness" (Num 14:13-16).

To this day, there remain precious few people who are able to so plead with the Living God! Moses saw that God would be dishonored by utterly removing or totally rejecting His people – something that is vehemently denied by many pretended theologians.

To this day, there remain precious few people who are able to so plead with the Living God! Moses saw that God would be dishonored by utterly removing or totally rejecting His people – something that is vehemently denied by many pretended theologians.

In this text, Paul is speaking after the manner of Moses. He is confirming WHY the Lord will yet deal favorably with Israel. His name is upon them, and great promises have been given to them.

We do well to take these words into our hearts, for they form the foundation for what the Spirit will affirm in the remainder of this chapter, together with chapters ten and eleven.

THE ADOPTION

Nearly all versions read "adoption." Some read "sonship,"^{RSV} "the place of sons,"^{BBE} "God's special children,"^{NLT} "God's chosen children,"^{New Century} and "adopted as children."^{NJB}

This is not the "adoption" previously mentioned (i.e., "the Spirit of adoption," or "the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body" – 8:15,23). However, it is related by type and shadow to the sonship of those in Christ, and the coming resurrection of the dead.

"The adoption," in this case, speaks of the national distinction of Israel before God Almighty. In "the adoption" of Israel, we have one of the singularly most remarkable matters in all of history. Here was an entire nation, a whole body of people, who were preferred and blessed by God completely independently of any merit. Their adoption was traced strictly to the will of God, not their own free will. Their adoption was not a matter of their choice, but of the choice of God Himself. I have no interest, at this time, in correlating this with the matter of our salvation. That is something I will address later. Now, however, it is imperative that we see this remarkable working of God: "the adoption" of Israel.

God spoke often of this matter, challenging Israel to consider their standing before Him. When preparations for Israel's deliverance from Egypt were set in motion by God, the matter of their identity with Him was brought up. Moses was commanded to say to Pharaoh, "Thus saith the LORD, Israel is My son, even My firstborn" (Ex 4:22). Hosea referred to this mighty deliverance in these words, "When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called My son out of Egypt" (Hos 11:1). That is a reference to "the adoption." Later, as they traversed through the wilderness, Moses told the people, "Ye are the children of the LORD your God" (Deut 14:1). That is a reference to "the adoption." Through Jeremiah the prophet, God lamented, "for I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is My firstborn" (Jer 31:9). That is a reference to "the adoption."

Even when Israel was inexcusably wayward, God spoke of this relationship. “Is Ephraim My dear son? is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still: therefore My bowels are troubled for him; I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the LORD” (Jer 31:20). That is a reference to “the adoption.”

God’s desire for Israel was unique. They remain the only nation with whom God has identified Himself. How eloquently Moses stated the case. “The LORD did not set His love on you nor choose you because you were more in number than any other people, for you were the least of all peoples; but because the LORD loves you, and because He would keep the oath which He swore to your fathers, the LORD has brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you from the house of bondage, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt” NKJV Deut 7:7-8). This is precisely the same reasoning the Spirit will introduce in this section of Romans – a preference for Israel because of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (11:28). Just as every one who has been adopted by God, whether it be fleshly Israel, or the body of Christ, insightful souls respond, “Not unto us, O LORD, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth’s sake” NKJV (Psa 115:1).

Should the Jews begin to boast in their national heritage, the Lord reminds them they were adopted through Abraham, not because of their works. “Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you: for I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him” (Isa 51:2). In this case, the people did not first increase, then experience the adoption. Rather, they were first chosen, and then increased, as confirmed in Deuteronomy 10:22: “Thy fathers went down into Egypt with threescore and ten persons; and now the LORD thy God hath made thee as the stars of heaven for multitude.”

There was no other nation of whom it was said: “Thou shalt be blessed above all people” (Deut 7:14). To this day, of what other fleshly nation can it be said, “Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the LORD, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency!” (Deut 7:14). While the saints of God are, indeed, a “holy nation” and a “royal priesthood” (1 Pet 2:9), it was first said of Israel, “And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation” (Ex 19:6).

It is no wonder that Paul said to the Gentiles at Rome, “For if the Gentiles have shared in the Jews’ spiritual blessings, they owe it to the Jews to share with them their material blessings” (Rom 15:27). Although he here refers to Jews who are in Christ Jesus, Paul states a principle that extends to the entire nation.

There was no other nation of whom it was said: “Thou shalt be blessed above all people.” To this day, of what other fleshly nation can it be said, “Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the LORD, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency!”

They remain the first nation birthed by God! It is the truth, “the adoption” pertains, or belongs to, them!

Paul knew all too well how Israel had departed from the Lord, even stooping to murdering His only begotten Son (Acts 5:30; 7:52). He knew God had given them a “bill of divorcement” (Jer 3:8; Isa 50:1). He knew Jerusalem was being left desolate because the Jews did not know the time of her visitation (Lk 19:44). He had confronted their obstinance in the rejection of the glorious Gospel he was given to preach (Acts 13:46). Yet, he also knew “the adoption” pertained, or belonged, to them. By faith, he had a high regard for the choice of God.

Yet, the Apostle also knew the nature of God and the immutability of His promises. He could sorrow and have hope at the same time concerning Israel, to whom pertained the adoption. He knew God had promised, *“With a little wrath I hid My face from you for a moment; But with everlasting kindness I will have mercy on you, Says the LORD, your Redeemer. For this is like the waters of Noah to Me; For as I have sworn That the waters of Noah would no longer cover the earth, So have I sworn that I would not be angry with you, nor rebuke you. For the mountains shall depart and the hills be removed, But My kindness shall not depart from you, Nor shall My covenant of peace be removed, Says the LORD, who has mercy on you” (Isa 54:8-10). To the Israelites belongs “the adoption!”

THE GLORY

Some versions read “the Divine glory.” NIV,NIB This is a proper rendering, for the glory of God is what belonged to them. The New Living Translation reads, “God revealed His glory to them.”

After the giving of the Law, Moses reminded the people of the true words they had said. “Surely the LORD our God has shown us His glory and His greatness, and we have heard His voice from the midst of the fire. We have seen this day that God speaks with man; yet he still lives” (Deut 5:24). There is not a fleshly people in all of history that have enjoyed such a revelation of Divine glory! To Israel belongs “the glory.”

Their deliverance. Israel’s deliverance through the Red Sea is associated with the glory of God. When the delivered people sang praise to God for the miraculous crossing of the Red Sea, they said, “Thy right hand, O LORD, is become glorious in power: thy right hand, O LORD, hath dashed in pieces the enemy” (Ex 15:6). To them pertained, or belonged, the glory.

Cloud and pillar. When God led the children of Israel, He did so with pillar of cloud by day, and a pillar of fire by night.

Of that cloud it is written, “behold, the glory of the LORD appeared in the cloud” (Ex 16:10). The glory pertained to Israel, and to Israel alone.

Dedication of the Tabernacle.

When the Tabernacle was dedicated, a cloud of glory rested upon it, and the glory of the Lord filled it. “Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the LORD filled the Tabernacle” (Ex 40:34). During this time, the glory of God was so great upon the Tabernacle that it is written, “And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation, because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the LORD filled the Tabernacle” (Ex 40:35).

On another occasion, when the leadership of Moses and Aaron was being questioned by the people, the glory of God again appeared over the Tabernacle. “And it came to pass, when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the Tabernacle of the congregation: and, behold, the cloud covered it, and the glory of the LORD appeared” (Num 16:42).

Ark of the covenant. The ark of the covenant was a key piece of furniture in the Tabernacle and Temple. There was a mercy seat of pure gold upon this ark—a sort of lid. It was a single piece, fashioned with two cherubim, one at each end. Their wings were spread, and they faced each other (Ex 25:17-18). The Lord communicated with the High Priest over this mercy seat. Scripture associates that communication with his glory. “Then the glory of the LORD departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubims. And the cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them, and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the LORD’S house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.” (Ezek 10:18-19). This is mentioned again in Ezekiel 11:22. The book of Hebrews also refers to “the cherubims of glory shadowing the mercy seat” (Heb 9:5).

The glory of God was not made known to any other nation. There were no favorable visible attestations of His presence to any other people. The glory belonged to Israel!

THE COVENANTS

When it comes to making covenants, Israel is unique. Prior to Abraham, the only recorded covenant God made with anyone was the one made with Noah. “But with thee will I establish My covenant” (Gen 6:18; 9:9,11). The “token,” or sign, of that covenant was the rainbow (Gen 9:12-17). The covenant, however, was not one of pervasive with Jacob” (Ex 2:24). When the Gospel was first preached, it was associated with the covenant God made with Abraham (Acts 3:25).

The Law, together with its attending statutes, was called “the book of the covenant” (Ex 24:7). The blood sprinkled upon the people was called “the blood of the covenant” (Ex 24:8). God refers to the whole Law as a “covenant” made with Moses “and Israel” (Ex 34:27). The commandments were called “the words of the covenant” (Duet 29:1). The priesthood, belonging exclusively to Israel, was called “the covenant of the priesthood” (Neh 13:29).

The glory of God was not made known to any other nation. There were no favorable visible attestations of His presence to any other people. The glory belonged to Israel!

The Lord made a covenant with David, establishing it forever. “I have made a covenant with My chosen, I have sworn unto David My servant, thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations” (Psa 89:3-4; 2 Sam 7:16). The New Covenant itself is said to be “with the house of Israel” (Jer 31:33). Whatever covenant of blessing you speak about, it belonged to Israel. God made no covenant with the Gentiles, or Gentile nation--only with Israel. The “covenants” belong to Israel.

THE GIVING OF THE LAW

Here is one of the epochs of history—the giving of the Law. It has global implications, because it was given “that every mouth might be stopped, and all the world become guilty before God” (Rom 3:19). In the Law, sin was precisely defined (Rom 3:20), and lawlessness was addressed (1 Tim 1:9). The revelation made known in the Law was given to Israel alone, but it applied to all the world.

Speaking of this unique revelation, Moses said, “*For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for? And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?” (Deut 4:7-8).

Earlier in this book, the Jews were blessing. Rather, it was the withholding of a curse: “neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth” (Gen 9:11).

Abraham, the father of the Israelites, was the first to receive a covenant of blessing. “In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land . . . And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly . . . As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations” (Gen 15:18; 17:2,4). That covenant was specifically associated with Israel. When, for example, the time came for Israel to be delivered from Egypt, “God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and said to have been given a fundamental advantage in receiving the law. “What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God” (Rom 3:1-2).

Nehemiah also referred to this marvelous privilege, not taking it to be, in any sense, ordinary. “Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and commandments: and madest known unto them Thy holy sabbath, and commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses Thy servant” (Neh 9:13-14).

The Psalmist also spoke of this honor, affirming no other nation was so blessed. “He showeth His word unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation: and as for His judgments, they have not known them. Praise ye the LORD” (Psa 147:19-20).

This indispensable and holy Law, used of God to define and convict of sin, belonged exclusively to Israel. To them pertained “the giving of the Law.”

THE SERVICE OF GOD

“The service of God” has to do with the worship and service of God, particularly as it related to the Tabernacle and Temple procedures. The book of Hebrews refers to this as “the Divine service” (Heb 9:1-10). This had to do with approaching God, representing the people, and keeping the people conscious of the Living God. This whole procedure was to be kept with care, as declared through Moses. “And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land which the LORD will give you, according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service” (Ex 12:25).

Although this has been greatly obscured by the modern church, serving God is a most unique privilege. It is not to be taken for granted. For instance, in summarizing the totality of life, Jesus said, “Ye cannot serve God and mammon” (Matt 6:24). Even those in Christ are admonished, “Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear: for our God is a consuming fire” (Heb 12:28-29).

Under the law, and with Israel, the “service of God” was procedural. While it was not ideal, as compared with the superior New Covenant, it served to develop a consciousness of what was involved in approaching God. It was imperative, for example, to be washed (Ex 29:4; 30:20), and to come with atoning blood (Heb 9:7). The approaching one must be appropriately clothed, approaching only in an acceptable time (Lev 16:4,34). A proper sacrifice must be made, and the right person must present it (Heb 8:3). Illumination and a sweet fragrance were also required (Ex 25:6; 30:7-8; 35:8).

In its essence, serving the Lord has to do with approaching Him, or drawing close to Him. No other people could come to God. No other people had a high priest who could stand in the presence of the Almighty for the people. No one else had a mediator like Moses, who could bring things from God to the people. Those privileges belonged exclusively to Israel.

All of these are gloriously fulfilled in Christ. They were, however, introduced through Israel, to whom belonged “the service of God.” In Christ, our service is now expanded and more precise, but it is still based upon the introductions made in Israel’s service to God. You will search in vain for any Gentile nation or group of people that are said to have “served God.” No other people were told how to serve the Lord, or what was required in approaching Him. That privilege belonged to Israel alone.

Approaching the Lord

In its essence, serving the Lord has to do with approaching Him, or drawing close to Him. No other people could come to God. No other people had a high priest who could stand in the presence of the Almighty for the people. No one else had a mediator like Moses, who could bring things from God to the people. Those privileges belonged exclusively to Israel.

THE PROMISES

The expression “the promises” refers specifically to the coming Messiah and the glorious Covenant He is now mediating. These promises are referred to as “His mercy; as He spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever” (Lk 1:54-55). In his remarkable response to the birth of John the Baptist, Zechariah spoke of these promises. “Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for He hath visited and redeemed His people, and hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of His servant David; as He spake by the mouth of His holy prophets, which have been since the world began: that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember His holy covenant; the oath which He swore to our father Abraham, that He would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve Him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before Him, all the days of our life” (Lk 1:68-75).

Outside of Christ, all Gentiles are said to be “strangers from the covenants of promise” (Eph 2:12). By nature, they are excluded from them. Only in Christ can they become a partaker of the promises that belong to Israel.

While this does sound strange to those who have been cultured in the corrupted Gospel perpetrated by the Gentile church, it does not sound peculiar to those familiar with Scripture. For example, the church at Rome was told, “For I tell you that Christ has become a servant of the Jews on behalf of God's truth, to confirm the promises made to the patriarchs so that the Gentiles may glorify God for his mercy . . . ^{NIV} (Rom 15:8). Again, Abraham is called "he that had received the promises" (Heb 11:17).

The Promises

The extent of the promises given to Israel are impressive. All of them were given to the Israelites, and none of them were give to the Gentiles, although the Gentiles were mentioned as eventually being included with the Jews (Isa 11:10; 42:1,6; 49:6,22; 60:3,5; 61:9; 62:2; 66:12,19; Mal 1:11). A sampling of promises relating to salvation will serve to illustrate the magnitude of them being given to the Israelites.

- A coming Messiah (Gen 49:10; Dan 9:25-26).
- A Man being given for a source of protection and sustenance (Isa 32:2).
- A New Covenant (Jer 31;31-33).
- A new heart (Ezek 36:26).
- A new spirit (Ezek 11:19).
- The removal of stony and obstinate hearts (Ezek 11:19; 36:26).
- God will put His Spirit within men, causing them to walk in His statutes and keep His judgments (Ezek 36:27).
- The people gathered to a single Person (Gen 49:10).
- A Prophet to whom the people would hearken (Deut 18:15).
- The salvation of all who call upon the name of the Lord (Joel 2:32).
- The people will be willing in the day of God's power (Psa 110:3).
- Liberty and release for the captives (Isa 61:1-3).
- A Shepherd who would lead and feed His people (Isa 40:11).
- A covenant in which everyone would know the Lord (Jer 31:34).
- A time when God would no longer remember the sins of His people (Jer 31:34).
- God would write His laws upon the hearts of men, and put them into their minds (Jer 31:33).
- A dramatic change would take place in the people, like the heart of the rash understanding knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerer speaking plainly (Isa 32:4).

- The deaf hearing and the blind seeing (Isa 29:18).

Partaking of the Divine Nature through the Promises

The importance of "the promises" is confirmed by a single statement in Second Peter. " . . . Him who called us by glory and virtue, by which have been given to us exceedingly great and precious promises, that through these you may be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust" (1:4). The greatness of this affirmation comes home to our hearts when we recognize

All of the marvelous Messianic promises of God were made to the Israelites. Not a single one of them was made to the Gentiles, or even A Gentile. Truly, with unwavering consistency and stability, "the promises" belong to the Israelites.

those promises were all made to the Israelites!

All of the Promises Are Ours

All of the promises relating to the coming salvation belong to those who are in Christ Jesus. Thus it is written, "For all the promises of God in Him are Yes, and in Him Amen, to the glory of God through us" (2 Cor 1:21). These include the days of the Messiah in which "the righteous will flourish" (Psa 72:7). They include salvation and safety (Jer 23:6). The promise of "the work of righteousness" being peace, and "quietness and assurance" being "the effect of righteousness" are also "YES" in Christ Jesus (Isa 32:17).

All of the marvelous Messianic promises of God were made to the Israelites. Not a single one of them was made to the Gentiles, or even A Gentile. Truly, with unwavering consistency and stability, "the promises" belong to the Israelites.

Changing the View of Scripture

All of this significantly alters the way we view Scripture. Some, raised with a perverted concept of "new testament Christianity," actually neglect the promises made to Israel. They are largely ignorant of Moses, the Prophets, and the Psalms (Lk 24:44). They imagine those marvelous books were only for the Jews, and their teachers zealously fortify that misconception.

But if "the promises" were made to Israel, and in Christ we are "grafted" into their tree, who can justify remaining ignorant of what was promised to them? The promises belong to them! These are "the promises" relating to the Savior, redemption, a change of nature, and showers of blessing.

THE FATHERS

Spiritual Babylon (the false church) has corrupted the word "fathers." We hear of the "church fathers," or on an even lower level, "the fathers of our country." However, how does the Spirit speak of "the fathers?"

The Spirit uses the term "fathers" to refer to the progenitors of the Israelites: Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Ex 3:15-16; 4:5; Deut 1:8; 6:10; 9:5; 29:13; 30:20; Acts 3:13; 7:32). Joshua 14:1, 19:51, and 21:1 extend "fathers" to include the heads of the twelve tribes (the sons of Jacob). In the broadest sense of the word, "fathers" refers to the leaders among the Israelites (1 Kings 8:1; 1 Chron 9:9; 2 Chron 19:8; Heb 1:1).

The promise of a Savior, Paul affirmed, was "made unto the fathers" (Acts 13:22). Romans 15:8 declares Jesus became a servant to fulfill the promise made "unto the fathers." Acts 3:25 affirms there were undeniable advantages to being children of these fathers. "You are sons of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying to Abraham, 'And in your seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed.' To you first, God, having raised up His Servant Jesus, sent Him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from your iniquities."

The importance of "the fathers," particular as regards Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, is confirmed by the following facts.

- ❑ The Gospels refer to "Abraham" thirty times.
- ❑ The Epistles refer to "Abraham" thirty-one times.
- ❑ The Gospels refer to "Isaac" eight times.
- ❑ The Epistles refer to "Isaac" eight times.
- ❑ The Gospels refer to "Jacob" thirteen times.
- ❑ The Epistles refer to "Jacob" five times.
- ❑ Jesus is called "the Son of Abraham" (Matt 1:1).
- ❑ In the "kingdom of heaven," the saved will sit down with "Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob" (Matt 8:11).
- ❑ Jesus referred to a woman with faith as "a daughter of Abraham" (Lk 13:16).
- ❑ Jesus spoke of a poor beggar who was comforted in Abraham's bosom following his death (Luke 16:23).
- ❑ Jesus referred to Zacchaeus as "a son of Abraham" (Lk 19:9).
- ❑ Jesus said Abraham "rejoiced to see" His day (John 8:56).
- ❑ Abraham is proclaimed as the premier example of faith that justifies (Rom 4:1-16).
- ❑ The Gospel was preached "unto Abraham" (Gal 3:8).
- ❑ Those who are in Christ Jesus are called "Abraham's seed" (Gal 3:29).
- ❑ When Jesus came into the world, He took upon Himself the nature of "the seed of Abraham" (Heb 2:16).

Not A Diversion

While this may appear to be a diversion from the grand theme of Romans, it is not. What God has done in Christ Jesus is fulfill the promises made to "the fathers," Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Therefore, a familiarity with "the fathers" will only serve to enhance our understanding and appreciation of the "salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory" (2 Tim 2:10). If God lavished the promises we now enjoy upon the Israelites, we do well to become acquainted with those utterances.

THE CHRIST

"... of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen." Here is the pinnacle of blessing, for which everything else was preparatory! This is the ultimate advantage, to be held in the highest regard.

through both Joseph and Mary (Matt 1:2-16). He uses the father who begat the children ("... begat") as the means of tracing the lineage.

- ❑ Luke traces the genealogy of Jesus backward from Jesus to Adam (Luke 3:23-38). He uses "the son of" of the means of tracing Christ's lineage.

Among other things, this confirms to us that Jesus was fully man, or fully human. While He was the "Son of God" as

While this may appear to be a diversion from the grand theme of Romans, it is not. What God has done in Christ Jesus is fulfill the promises made to "the fathers," Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Concerning the Flesh

This is a consideration of Christ's fleshly lineage. It is true that "God sent His only begotten Son" into the world (1 John 4:9). Our text tells us HOW He came into the world.

Considerable is said of Christ's lineage. Theologically referred to as "the incarnation," this is a doctrine of great weight. There are fleshly relationships that are used to identify "the Christ." All of them involve a flesh and blood lineage.

- ❑ The "Seed" of woman (Gen 3:15).
- ❑ The "Seed" of Abraham (Gal 3:16,19).
- ❑ The "Son of David" (Matt 1:1; 12:23).
- ❑ The "Seed of David according to the flesh" (Rom 1:3).
- ❑ The "Son of Abraham" (Matt 1:1).
- ❑ The "Son of man" (Matt 8:28; 13:41).
- ❑ The "Last Adam" (1 Cor 15:45).
- ❑ The "Second man" (1 Cor 15:47).
- ❑ He was "made of a woman, made under the law" (Gal 4:4).
- ❑ "The Word was made flesh" (John 1:14).
- ❑ He was a Prophet raised up "from the midst" of Israel (Deut 18:15).
- ❑ He was the "Man," established for protection (Isa 32:2).
- ❑ Matthew traces the genealogy of Jesus forward, from Abraham well as "the Son of man," this did not diminish His manhood. This did not reduce His Deity, but it did involve the forfeiture of the prerogatives of Deity. He had to, so to speak, put the sword of Deity in its sheath, submitted to the restrictions associated with being human.

The Involvements of the Incarnation

This is the precise point that is made in the book of Philipians. There, a most remarkable view of Christ's entrance into the zone of defilement is given. "Who, although He existed in the form of God, did not regard equality with God a thing to be grasped, but emptied Himself, taking the form of a bond-servant, and being made in the likeness of men" ^{NASB} (Phil 2:6-7).

Prior to coming into the world, the Savior was "in the form of God," or "was God" - an eternally existent one (John 1:1). The text says He did not "regard equality with God a thing to be grasped," or "did not consider it robbery to be equal with God." ^{NKJV} A most profound truth is here declared. The picture is one of clinging to Deity ("a thing to be grasped"), or being deprived of the privileges of Deity ("did not consider it robbery"). The meaning is that Jesus had to lay something aside in order to come into the world. He had to become dependent upon God, taking the role of a servant. He had to enter the world without the qualities of Omniscience (all knowing), Omnipotence (all powerful), and Omnipresence (everywhere simultaneously). None of these were active in that Babe, wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger!

Yet, the salvation of fallen man was of such preference, that Jesus did not consider Himself to have been robbed, or deprived, by taking the “form of a servant.” He did not prefer to cling to His Deity, remaining in heaven, and refusing to “come in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin” (Rom 8:3). What marvelous grace!

Tempted

Christ coming in the flesh involved Him being subject to temptation—real temptation. The Scriptures make a point of the fact that “He was tempted in ALL POINTS like as we are, yet without sin” (Heb 4:15). Some have erroneously concluded that Jesus did NOT sin because He was Divine. But that is not the point of the Scripture. Rather, the point is that He WAS tempted because He was a man.

The temptation was actual and extensive. The Spirit says, “For in that He Himself has suffered, being tempted, He is able to aid those who are tempted” (Heb 2:18). His first temptation lasted for forty consecutive days and nights, without interruption: “Being forty days tempted of the devil” (Lk 4:2). At the conclusion of that period, the devil assaulted him with three epochal temptations – all in the areas of human vulnerability: the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life (1 John 2:16; Lk 2:2-13). During that wilderness temptation, because of the strength of it, “the angels ministered unto Him” (Mark 1:13).

On the night of His betrayal, the temptation was so strong, Jesus was “in agony.” In His prayers, “His sweat became like great drops of blood falling down to the ground” (Lk 22:44). Again, because of the strength of the temptation, “an angel appeared to Him from heaven, strengthening Him” ^{NKJV} (Luke 22:43). The humanity of Christ was no small matter, and is never to be so regarded.

Satan’s Attempt to Thwart the Birth

From the very beginning, Satan knew God was going to send a Deliverer through human birth. In fact, he was the very first person to whom the promise was addressed. “And the LORD God said unto the serpent . . . And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel” (Gen 3:14-15). The Scriptures indicate Satan did not take this announcement casually, but engaged in every possible effort to thwart that birth.

The entrance of Christ into the world is not a casual subject in Scripture. It is one of great weight, designed to humble the hearts of men, and confirm the greatness of their salvation.

While some degree of conjecture is involved here, there is too much of a pattern for the facts to be mere coincidence.

- ❑ The first offspring of the women killed his brother, thereby incurring the curse of God (Gen 4:8-9).
- ❑ Before and after the promise of a “seed” was given to Abraham, his wife was “barren,” not able to have children (Gen 11:30; 18:11).
- ❑ Isaac, one of “the fathers,” also had a “barren” wife, Rebekah, through whom the Messiah would come (Gen 25:21).
- ❑ Jacob, one of “the fathers,” also had a “barren” wife, Rachel, through whom the Savior would come (Gen 29:31).
- ❑ Prior to the Exodus, Pharaoh decreed the death of male babies (Ex 1:22).
- ❑ When the Lord was born, Herod decreed that all infants two and under should be killed in Bethlehem (Matt 2:16).

Only eternity will tell how many other initiatives were instigated by Satan to destroy the birth of Jesus! The coming of Jesus, “according to the flesh,” therefore, involved both the wisdom and power of God. God is greatly to be praised for such a magnificent display of Divine power.

Christ Came

In our text, the Spirit makes a specific point of the role of Israel in bringing forth the Messiah. This was a nation cultured to bring forth the Messiah. As a whole, the nation was a sort of spiritual womb, from which the Savior would make His entrance into the world. The Prophet Isaiah spoke of the birth of Christ in this manner—as coming from a nation. “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given . . .” (Isa 9:6). On the night of His birth, the angels announced to Jewish shepherds, “For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord” (Luke 2:11).

The apocalyptic Gospel in Revelation speaks of Satan’s efforts in these words: “and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born. And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne” (Rev 12:4-5). That “woman” was “Israel,” which includes all who are “Israelites” in their hearts (John 1:47; Rom 9:6).

Jesus did not come from a Gentile lineage! He was not born of Egyptian, Assyrian, Roman, or Grecian nation. He came from a chosen nation, a selected and cultured people. He was born under the influence of the holy Law of God, and where the service of God was prominent. He was not born amidst idolatry, or among a people ignorant of God. As concerning the flesh, He came from Israel!

The seed of Abraham

Another point of this circumstance is made in the book of Hebrews. There, the humanity of Jesus is developed with characteristic exactness. “For verily He took not on Him the nature of angels; but He took on Him the seed of Abraham" (Heb 2:16). The truth revealed in this text is very precise. More modern versions emphasize that Jesus became a man in order to "help" certain individuals. That is quite true. However, the emphasis of this passage is not what Jesus came to do, but what He DID. Because of the indispensable ministry He was going to fulfill, He "shared," or partook, in the "flesh and blood" they had (verse 14). He is also said to have been "made LIKE His brethren" (verse 17). The point is that He became LIKE the ones He was going to save, which is the ultimate criterion for His ministry of "help."

Note how the Spirit refers to the "flesh and blood" Jesus took upon Himself. He does not say "all men," or "the world," or "the likeness of sinful flesh," as in Romans 8:3. Instead, He says, "the seed of Abraham," or "the descendants of Abraham." ^{NRSV} And who are "the descendants of Abraham?" They are "the Israelites," to whom the coming of Christ "belonged," as stated in our text.

According to the flesh, Jesus was recognized as a Jew. The wise men from the East knew He was born "king of the Jews" (Matt 2:2). The woman at the well of Samaria said to Him, "How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me" (John 4:9). When Pilate asked Jesus if He was "the King of the Jews," He replied, "Yes, it is as you say" NIV (Matt 27:11). The sign placed over Jesus as He hung upon the cross was "THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS" (Matt 27:37). When the Jews themselves remonstrated at this, being convicted, they asked Pilate to revise the sign to read, "He said, I am King of the Jews" (John 19:21).

The point in all of this is to confirm that the Spirit extended Himself, so to speak, to identify the Lord Jesus with the Jewish nation. Our text says He came from them "according to the flesh." Who is the person who would dare to despise the nation from whom the Savior came? It is no wonder that Paul had great heaviness and continual sorrow of heart over them. Further, it should not surprise us when the Spirit affirms God is still working with them.

Who Is Over All

Because men have a tendency to think too lowly of Christ, the Spirit highly exalts Him. He will not allow us to consider Jesus only as a servant to fulfill our own desires, or a wise man to answer all of our problems. The role of Jesus chiefly relates to the fulfillment of the will of God, which included our salvation, praise the Lord!

Because men have a tendency to think too lowly of Christ, the Spirit highly exalts Him. He will not allow us to consider Jesus only as a servant to fulfill our own desires, or a wise man to answer all of our problems. The role of Jesus chiefly relates to the fulfillment of the will of God, which included our salvation, praise the Lord!

The phrase "over all" is a large one, indeed! It includes "angels and authorities and powers" (1 Pet 3:22). It includes all things "visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers" (Col 1:16). There is not a created personality in heaven, earth, or hell who, knowingly confronted with Christ's presence, does not bow to Him. If they are not confronted with Him in this world, they will when He is revealed. At that time, in confirmation that He is truly "over all," "at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and . . . every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father" (Phil 2:10-11).

Until that ultimate day, Jesus IS over everything! He is "over all" that is for us, including holy angels and Divine resources. He can marshal the powers of heaven to protect and direct us. He can bring the blessings of God from heaven to us. He is "over all."

Jesus is "over all" that is against us. The "devil and his angels" are subject to Him! Principalities and powers, the rulers of the darkness of this world, and spiritual wickedness in high places are against us, yet are subject to Him (Eph 6:12)! He can stop temptation, make a way of escape out of it, and rebuke the powers of darkness. He is "over all." He is the kind of Savior we sorely need!

God Blessed Forever

The blessing of God is upon the Lord Jesus Christ. It is upon Him because He "always" did what pleased the Father (John 8:29). The Father saw the travail of Christ's soul, as He poured it out unto death, and was "satisfied" (Isa 53:11). Jesus, the One who came from Israel, so pleased the Father that He "has highly exalted Him and given Him the name which is above every name" ^{NKJV} (Phil 2:9). He was "well pleased" with Jesus when He started His ministry (Matt 3:17). He was "well pleased" with the Son at the peak of His earthly ministry (Matt 17:5). It has "pleased the Father that in Him should all fulness dwell" (Col 1:19).

There is nothing about Jesus that displeases God. He is "God blessed," and thus everyone who is "in Him" is blessed. The sure way to blessing is to have your life "hid with Christ in God" (Col 3:3). Jesus is blessed by God "forever." His sacrifice will never lose its effectiveness. His intercession will never be ignored by the Father. His exaltation will never be rescinded! Blessed be the name of Jesus!

Amen

What a blessed word: "Amen!" It is a fitting conclusion to our text. "Amen" is a word of acquiesce, or hearty agreement, with what has been said. It is a word of finality that says "nothing more can be added to what has been said. Let it stand just as it has been declared."

This is a word of strong affirmation and agreement. Literally, it means "let it be so, truly." Used at the beginning of an affirmation (usually translated “verily”), it is declaring, “What I am about to say is the absolute truth” (1 Kgs 1:36; Matt 5:18; 6:2; 8:10). Used at the conclusion of a statement, it means “this is indeed the truth.” When used as a response from those hearing the word, it means “I agree, that is the way it should be.”

When the twelve curses of the Law were read to the people, they were required to say “Amen” after each one (Deut 27:15-26). When the ark of the covenant was returned to its place of prominence in Israel, insightful rejoicing and praise burst forth. At that time, it is written, “And all the people said, Amen, and praised the LORD” (1 Chron 16:36). Some Divine affirmations were do strong, holy men would respond, “Amen, and Amen” (Psa 41:13; 72:19; 89:52). While this was a forced response rather than one of insight. It reflects Divine desire.

The word “Amen” is transliteration. Rather than the word being translated, each letter is converted to its equivalent in another language. It is a word like “Hallelujah,” that has the same sound in all languages. Its use in our text is like saying, “Let every thing that hath breath, praise the Lord” (Psa 150:6). It is something that can be spoken by all who have been redeemed “out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation” (Rev 5:9). A global salvation merits a global response! A universal Savior deserves universal praise! Whether we are Jew, Gentile, male, female, bond, or free – when we hear about Jesus being God blessed forever, we can shout “AMEN!” Here is an area where believers can unite with all their hearts, in saying “Amen” to the blessedness of Jesus, who came out of the nation of Israel!

CONCLUSION

Thus, our consideration of the “Israelites” ends on a high and most lofty note—the consideration of the Savior, who came from them. When we think of the fleshly descendants of Abraham, we are thinking properly when we are brought to the consideration of Jesus. Any thoughts of Israel that detract from the enthroned Savior are out of order! That does NOT mean we condone all that they have done, for God Himself was provoked by their unbelief and wickedness (Deut 32:16; Psa 78:58-59). It DOES mean we will honor the choice of God, and the way in which He brought the Savior to us through the Israelites.

In confirmation that “salvation is of the Jews,” and that they were singularly blessed, several considerations are in order.

- The Law was given to the Jews.
- The lawgiver was a Jew (John 1:17).
- They are the only fleshly nation acknowledged by God.
- Their homeland, “the land of Israel,” is the only land in the world’s history that God acknowledged as “His land” (Joel 2:18).
- Their central city, Jerusalem, is the only city in the history of the world where God has placed His name (1 Kings 11:36).
- All of the Prophets were Jews.
- All of the high priests (with the possible exception of Melchizedec) and priests were Jews.

- The lineage of Jesus is Jewish.
- The mother of Jesus was a Jew.
- The man God chose to raise Jesus was a Jew.
- The man chosen to be the forerunner of Jesus was a Jew.
- The first people to whom the birth of Jesus was announced were Jews.
- The man who dedicated the infant Jesus was a Jew.
- The twelve Apostles were Jews.
- The Apostle to the Gentiles was a Jew.

willing to go to any extent possible so they could be saved? It was not merely because he was related to them, but because they are a monument to the working of God. He chose them and blessed them. There remains a remnant among them because of these realities.

None of their sin is condoned by God, and it cannot be excused by us. We can surely learn from them the things to avoid, seeking zealously to evade the transgressions into which they fell (1 Cor 10:8-10). But we can also learn from their record about the faithfulness of God, the sureness of His blessing, and the relentlessness of His love.

When we think of the fleshly descendants of Abraham, we are thinking properly when we are brought to the consideration of Jesus. Any thoughts of Israel that detract from the enthroned Savior are out of order!

God be thanked for the Israelites, for their record, the great believers that were among them, and the glorious Savior who came from them! May our hearts yearn, and our prayers go up, for them. To a measurable degree, we have been blessed because of them. We are in their tree, and are partaking of the rich and nourishing resources of their “root.”

- The names of the twelve tribes of Israel are on the gates of the glorified church (Rev 21:12).

Is it not clear to your heart why Paul had “great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart” over them? Should it not be apparent to us why Paul was

Some years ago, a dear brother in Indiana made a comment about the role of Israel in our salvation. It was in the mid-sixties, and I shall never forget it. Several of the men were in a wilderness in a time of fasting and prayer. During that time, when we were sensitive, and our hearts and minds were enlarged, this brother said, "I thank God that the Israelites endured the great difficulties related to their tree taking root. They endured the blast of the desert heat, and the rush of torrential floods in order that the tree might be solidly rooted. Now it holds us, who were wild olive branches by nature." That brother's name is Carl Waldrop, now residing in the state of Alabama. Here I pray tribute to his eagle eye of insight, given to him during that memorable week-end.

The church does well to develop a wholesome and godly attitude toward the "Israelites." The due and proper consideration of them will help us to avoid sin, expand our view of the Kingdom, and enhance our understanding of the rich promises of God. It behooves us to zealously avoid any hatred of this people, and to refuse to rail upon them. Jesus asked the Father to forgive them WHILE they were at the height of their rejection of them. Can we not seek their salvation, seek the peace of Jerusalem, and pray for the lifting of the veil from their eyes? Indeed we can! May we faithfully do so.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 30

PROMISE WILL PREVAIL

^{9:6} But it is not that the word of God has taken no effect. For they are not all Israel who are of Israel, ⁷ nor are they all children because they are the seed of Abraham; but, “In Isaac your seed shall be called.” ⁸ That is, those who are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God; but the children of the promise are counted as the seed. ⁹ For this is the word of promise: “At this time I will come and Sarah shall have a son.” ¹⁰ And not only this, but when Rebecca also had conceived by one man, even by our father Isaac ¹¹ (for the children not yet being born, nor having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works but of Him who calls), ¹² it was said to her, “The older shall serve the younger.” ¹³ As it is written, “Jacob I have loved, but Esau I have hated.”

– Romans 9:6-13 ^{NKJV} –

INTRODUCTION

Paul has just finished bearing his heart concerning the Israelites, his “kinsmen according to the flesh.” He has shown he is in accord with the Living God, who chose this nation, granting them most remarkable benefits and advantages. His “great heaviness and continual sorrow of heart” was not mere fleshly sympathy or concern. Nor, indeed, was it a fleeting fancy, which came and went like a bout of melancholy. As we will see, it blended perfectly with the revealed purpose of God. One of the marks of legitimate feelings is that they can be expounded by, and integrated with, the purpose of God.

As with the believer’s sorrow related to death (1 Thess 4:13), Paul’s sorrow for Israel is not one with “no hope.” He is not overcome by his sorrow, so as to lose all spiritual rationality, or cease to live by faith. He is able to turn from his deep sorrow to the will of the Lord, gathering the harvest of hope and peace.

He will not leave his readers pondering his own view, but will quickly turn them to “the God of hope” (Rom 15:13). In order to nourish hope for Israel within the hearts of believers, Paul does not linger upon their present condition.

He rather goes back to their origin, which was solely traceable to the Lord. Divine origins are where we gather our bearings and adjust our focus. If we want to develop a proper view of mankind, we must go back to his creation and the revealed reason for it. When we seek a proper view of Israel, we must also go back to its origin, and to the Divine utterances related to that beginning. Our text begins such a process.

Because God does not change, and He cannot lie, His promises are irrevocable. Our theology must not

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. THE WORD IS NOT INEFFECTIVE (9:6a)
- II. ISRAELITES INDEED (9:6b)
- III. SPECIAL CHILDREN (9:7)
- IV. CHILDREN OF THE FLESH VERSUS CHILDREN OF THE SPIRIT (9:8)
- V. THE WORD OF PROMISE (9:9)
- VI. NOT JUST ONCE (9:10)
- VII. JACOB AND ESAU (9:11-13)

leave us embracing a God that changes or vacillates. While it may be done unwittingly by preachers and teachers, much of what is said of God concerning Israel leaves men with a completely erroneous view of Him. He is seen as altering His purpose, and abandoning His promises. Whatever explanations may be given for this approach, it cannot spark hope in the believer. It will not contribute to a strong and aggressive faith.

This is precisely why the Spirit moves Paul to begin this most remarkable line of reasoning. What appears to the flesh to be utterly hopeless is seen quite differently by faith. Taking us back to the foundations, the Spirit will lift up our heads, confirming there is good reason to be “strong in faith, giving glory to God” (Rom 4:20).

It is essential that we note the manner of the Spirit’s reasoning. He does not point us to the disobedience of Israel, or to their sure unworthiness of the least of God’s mercies. At this point, He will not expound their unbelief at Kadesh-Barnea, their murmuring in the wilderness, or their discontent with a Divinely provided diet. Instead, He will take us back to Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Rebekah, Jacob, and Rachel. He will not tell us what they said or did, but what the Lord said to them. This will focus around four statements made by God.

- “In Isaac shall thy seed be called.”*
- “At this time will I come, and Sarah shall have a son.”*
- “The elder shall serve the younger.”*
- “Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated.”*

These are Divine commitments are based upon an eternal purpose. They are nowhere represented as being temporary. None of them are based upon human works. Not one of them were sought by the individuals to whom they were spoken.

The covenant made with Abraham has not failed! The commitment of God to Rachel has not fallen to the ground! God’s statement concerning Jacob and Esau has not been rendered obsolete! These words from God fueled Paul’s hope for Israel. They are why he was willing to wish himself accursed from Christ for their sake. He knew God cannot lie, and that his purpose, like Himself, changes not.

The line of reasoning that follows is unusually strong, but it reflects both the nature and purpose of God. It is food for faith, not fodder for the intellect. While the mind can spend profitable time pondering these statements, it is essential that the heart first grasp them, by faith. There can be no question about their truth, or the intellect will not be able to handle them, thereby causing unbelief to enter. This is a principle of spiritual understanding that is both liberating and edifying. The truth must be believed before it can be profitably pondered. Thinking must start with “God cannot lie.”

Our text begins an extensive passage of spiritual reasoning. It will confirm that Paul is justified in having “great heaviness and sorrow of heart” over Israel. Through the conclusion of the eleventh chapter, the following reasons to have hope for Israel will be added.

- It is not as though God’s word has failed (9:6a). There is an accepted people within natural Israel (9:6b-13).
- God will have mercy on whom He wills to have mercy (9:15a).
- God will have compassion on whom He wills to have compassion (9:15b).
- Acceptance does not depend upon man’s effort, but on God’s mercy (9:16-18).
- God is the Divine Potter who can make vessels of mercy from the “lump” of Israel (9:20-24).
- The remnant of Israel will be saved, according to prophecy (9:27).

- The Lord has left survivors in Israel, else they would have disappeared like Sodom and Gomorrah (9:28-29).
- Paul’s heart’s desire and prayer to God is that Israel may be saved (10:1).
- Moses prophesied God would make Israel envious by those who were not a nation (10:19).
- Emphatically, God did not reject His people Israel (11:1a).
- Paul himself was an Israelite, confirming God did not reject them as a whole (11:1b).
- Again, confirming God has not repudiated the nation as a whole, He did not reject His people whom He foreknew (11:2).
- At this present time, there remains a remnant according to the election of grace (11:6).
- God has given them a spirit of stupor, accounting for their obstinance (11:8-9).
- They have not stumbled so as to fall beyond recovery (11:11).
- If their transgression brought riches for the world, how much more will their fulness bring? (11:12).
- Paul magnified his ministry by preaching to the Gentiles, in order to provoke his countrymen to jealousy (11:13-14).
- If their rejection meant reconciliation for the world, what will their acceptance be but life from the dead? (11:15).
- If the part of the dough offered to God was holy, then the whole batch is holy (11:16a).
- If the root is holy, so are the branches (11:16b).
- Gentiles should not boast against the natural Jewish branches that were broken off, for their root supports us, we do not support the root (11:17-18).
- The Jewish branches were not broken off to be replaced by the Gentiles (11:19-21).
- If they do not persist in unbelief, they will be grafted in again (11:23a).
- God is able to graft them in again (11:23b).
- The Jews can more readily be grafted into their own tree than we Gentiles, who were wild by nature (11:24).
- Israel has experienced hardening in part until the full number of the Gentiles has come in (11:25).

- ❑ All Israel will be saved (11:26a).
- ❑ The Deliverer will come out of Zion and turn ungodliness away from Jacob, by which name the church is never called (11:26b).
- ❑ God's covenant with Israel is to take away their sins (11:27).
- ❑ Although presently enemies on the account of the Gentiles, they are loved on account of the patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (11:28).
- ❑ God's gifts and callings are irrevocable (11:29).
- ❑ Just as we Gentiles were once disobedient, yet have now received mercy as a result of their disobedience, so they have now become disobedient that they too might receive mercy as a result of God's mercy upon us Gentiles (11:30-31).

- ❑ God has bound all men over to disobedience that He may have mercy on them all (11:32).

There are thirty-four arresting reasons for refusing to believe Israel is in a hopeless situation, or that they have been written off and replaced by the Gentile church. Such a thought is ludicrous to faith, offensive to a renewed heart, and evidence of remarkable ignorance. It is most unreasonable for Gentiles, whose acceptance by God is a great token of His mercy, to boast themselves against the Israelites by affirming they have been repudiated and forgotten. The Spirit will not allow us to think in this way without challenging us with overwhelming proofs of God's love and intentions for Israel, Paul's "kinsmen according to the flesh."

In this section of Scripture (chapters 9-11), the Holy Spirit will pile proof upon proof, appealing to our hearts, and justifying the attitude of Paul toward the Jews. When He is finished, a great chorus of praise will erupt, giving unquestionable glory to God. The purpose of the passage is to provoke both faith and hope in our hearts.

THE WORD OF GOD IS NOT INEFFECTIVE

^{9:6a} But it is not that the word of God has taken no effect. "Because it is the tendency of men to take the exceeding great and precious promises of God and reason incorrectly with them, the Spirit will now give us examples of right reasoning. After telling us that "the promises" belonged to Israel, He will now show us how firm those promises really are. Religious flesh, which is the worst of all flesh, will not be able to receive this, but the Spirit affirms it anyway.

The sophist will reason that if such firmness is attached to the promises of God, it will promote laxity in the household of faith, moving them to withdraw from the work of faith and the labor of love.

I myself once thought in this manner. It is quite true that flesh seeks to exploit the promises, using them as an occasion for slothfulness and a lack of involvement in the will of the Lord. However, this tendency is not produced by the promises, but by the failure to believe them. It is "through faith and patience" that we "inherit the promises" (Heb 6:12).

The promises are dulled by vigorous attempts to blend them with Law, or argue why they are not to be trusted. The fact that some of those to whom the promises "belonged" did not believe them has taken nothing from the promises themselves. Nor, indeed, will they be withdraw because "some did not believe."

THE WORD OF GOD

Here, "the word of God" refers to His promise to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. He is not referring to the promises that attended the Covenant made at Sinai (Deut 28:3-9), for that covenant was "added" to the Abrahamic promise "because of transgression" (Gal 3:19). The great redemptive work of God never revolved around that "first covenant," and that redemptive work is the context within which Israel is being considered.

The "word of God," in this case, is nothing less than the Gospel which was first preached to Abraham. As it is written, "And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, preached the gospel to Abraham beforehand, saying, 'In you all the nations shall be blessed'" (Gal 3:8). That word belongs "to the Jew first" (Rom 1:16), although it is not exclusively to them.

The Abrahamic promise took a variety of forms through the prophets. It was iterated and reiterated. The firmness of these promises is quite evident. Our text encompasses these commitments; i.e., to whom (Israel) "belong . . . the promises."

- ❑ "I will restore your judges as at the first, And your counselors as at the beginning. Afterward you shall be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city." (Isa 1:26)
- ❑ "Fear not, for I am with you; Be not dismayed, for I am your God. I will strengthen you, Yes, I will help you, I will uphold you with My righteous right hand." (Isa 41:10)
- ❑ "For I, the LORD your God, will hold your right hand, Saying to you, 'Fear not, I will help you. Fear not, you worm Jacob, You men of Israel! I will help you,' says the LORD And your Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel." (Isa 41:13-14)
- ❑ "I will bring the blind by a way they did not know; I will lead them in paths they have not known. I will make darkness light before them, And crooked places straight. These things I will do for them, And not forsake them.” (Isa 42:16)

- “When you pass through the waters, I will be with you; And through the rivers, they shall not overflow you. When you walk through the fire, you shall not be burned, Nor shall the flame scorch you. For I am the LORD your God, The Holy One of Israel, your Savior; I gave Egypt for your ransom, Ethiopia and Seba in your place. Since you were precious in My sight, You have been honored, And I have loved you; Therefore I will give men for you, And people for your life.” (Isa 43:3-4)
- “For I will pour water on him who is thirsty, And floods on the dry ground; I will pour My Spirit on your descendants, And My blessing on your offspring.” (Isa 44:3)
- “I will rejoice in Jerusalem, And joy in My people; The voice of weeping shall no longer be heard in her, Nor the voice of crying.” (Isa 65:19)
- “Behold, the days are coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah.” (Jer 31:31)
- “Then I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within them, and take the stony heart out of their flesh, and give them a heart of flesh, that they may walk in My statutes and keep My judgments and do them; and they shall be My people, and I will be their God.” (Ezek 11:19-20)
- “I will accept you as a sweet aroma when I bring you out from the peoples and gather you out of the countries where you have been scattered; and I will be hallowed in you before the Gentiles.” (Ezek 20:41)
- “I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit within you; I will take the heart of stone out of your flesh and give you a heart of flesh. I will put My Spirit within you and cause you to walk in My statutes, and you will keep My judgments and do them.” (Ezek 36:26-27)

These are only a sampling of the hundreds of commitments God made to Israel. The number of such promises are staggering, and cannot be brushed aside with a casual sweep of the theological hand. They are “the word of God,” and thus cannot be regarded as some temporary word, or one that was strictly contingent upon the people themselves.

Who is the person who will step forth and say these words have been ineffective? However men may choose to assess God and Israel, a word from heaven comes back to us: “But it is not that the word of God has taken no effect,” or, as the NIV reads, “It is not as though God’s word had failed.” Like God Himself, the word of the Lord “lives and abides forever” (1 Pet 1:23). God’s word is an accomplishing word. If none of Samuel’s words “fell to the ground,” what shall we say of the words of the God of Samuel, whom he served (1 Sam 3:19)?

God “cannot lie,” and an unkept commitment is a lie. A stipulation of the Law was, “When thou shalt vow a vow unto the LORD thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the LORD thy God will surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee” (Deut 23:21). One of the comely reactions of those who respond to the great salvation of God is this: “I will pay my vows unto the LORD now in the presence of all his people” (Psa 116:14). Is God less righteous than those whom He saves? Will He declare a promise, swear by Himself, then fail to do what He has promised?

For those who are tempted to brush these words aside with a finely tuned theology that writes Israel off, it is well to remember this. This is the Holy Spirit’s reasoning on the matter. He speaks of the effectiveness of God’s word when dealing with the continued identity of God with Israel. Whether or not this blends with the preconceived notions of men is entirely without significance. The sure consequence to be realized by seeking to minimize this text of Scripture is that God will be justified in all of His sayings at the expense of those who contradicted them.

ITS EFFECTIVENESS

God makes a point of speaking of the effectiveness of His Word. “For as the rain comes down, and the snow from heaven,

For those who are tempted to brush these words aside with a finely tuned theology that writes Israel off, it is well to remember this. This is the Holy Spirit’s reasoning on the matter. He speaks of the effectiveness of God’s word when dealing with the continued identity of God with Israel.

And do not return there, But water the earth, And make it bring forth and bud, That it may give seed to the sower And bread to the eater, so shall My word be that goes forth from My mouth; It shall not return to Me void, But it shall accomplish what I please, And it shall prosper in the thing for which I sent it”^{NKJV} (Isa 55:10-11).

With great power, the Sovereign God proclaims, “Thus says the LORD, your Redeemer, And He who formed you from the womb: ‘I am the LORD, who makes all things, Who stretches out the heavens all alone,’ Who spreads abroad the earth by Myself; Who frustrates the signs of the babblers, And drives diviners mad; Who turns wise men backward, And makes their knowledge foolishness; Who confirms the word of His servant, And performs the counsel of His messengers; Who says to Jerusalem, ‘You shall be inhabited,’ To the cities of Judah, ‘You shall be built,' And I will raise up her waste places; Who says to the deep, 'Be dry! And I will dry up your rivers'; Who says of Cyrus, 'He is My shepherd, And he shall perform all My pleasure,' Saying to Jerusalem, 'You shall be built,' And to the temple, 'Your foundation shall be laid'" (Isa 44: 24-28).

And who will dare to place the accomplishment of the salvation of God beneath the frustration of babblers or making diviners mad? Is the promise of God to Israel to be held with less regard than turning wise men backward or confirming the word of His servants? If God says to Jerusalem, "You shall be inhabited," and to the cities of Judah, "You shall be built!" what form of reasoning constrains men to imagine it will not be done? Furthermore, our text is dealing with something of infinitely greater value than those things. That means His word is even more sure, for the greater the promise, the more sure is its fulfillment.

Illustrated In Israel Possessing Canaan

The particular issue before us is aptly illustrated in the account of Israel coming into Canaan. From the outset, their deliverance from Egypt was in order to their possession of the land of Canaan. God affirmed, "I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey" (Ex 3:17). His word declared He brought the people "up out of the land of Egypt, unto the land which I sware unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, Unto thy seed will I give it" (Ex 33:1).

When the people drew back in unbelief, they provoked Him to anger. Yet, He did not withdraw His promise, but rather excluded those who refused to believe. The nation was not written off, even though the majority of them refused to believe God. Of the footmen, over 600,000 in number, only two would come into the land: Joshua and Caleb (Num 14:30). Their little ones would outlast the forty year journey in the wilderness, while the entire generation of unbelievers died out. Then they would inherit the land, according to the Lord's promise (Num 14:31-33).

Thus, the promise of God was not voided, nor were the children of Israel written off. Only those who were unbelieving were "broken off." It is not God's manner to destroy the righteous with the wicked (Gen 18:23-32). The word of promise to Abraham, which was confirmed to Isaac and Jacob, was not ineffective.

In precisely the same way, the promises of a new heart and spirit have not become ineffective to Israel. Only those who have not believed have been removed. Both the root and the tree remain, a source of both hope and nourishment.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED

Cutting Down the Tree

Some may object to this reasoning, declaring that the tree has been cut down, not merely some of the branches removed. After all, did not John the Baptist announce, "And now also the ax is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire" (Matt 3:10; Lk 3:9).

Note, John did not say the ax was laid to the tree, but to the TREES! He traces this activity to individuals, not to the nation of Israel. In this case, the "trees" parallel the "branches" of Romans eleven. John spoke these words to "many of the Pharisees and Sadducees who came to his baptism" (Matt 3:7). He did not speak of the removal of the nation, but of the rejection of its pretenders.

Others might well site Christ's sharp denunciation of unbelieving Jerusalem. "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Lk 13:35).

This spoke of Divine judgment upon Jerusalem, not the removal of Jerusalem, to say nothing of the removal of the nation of Israel. The door of hope was left ajar in His words, "I tell you, you will not see me again until you say, 'Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord.'"^{NIV} Later, Jesus affirmed "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Lk 21:24). He clearly referred to the punishment of the nation, not its total rejection. Had the Lord completely renounced the children of Israel, His word would have been of "none effect." However, such a condition is impossible. The nation remains before God because of the remnant within it—all Jews. More precisely, that remnant remains for the sake of "the fathers."

In precisely the same way, the promises of a new heart and spirit have not become ineffective to Israel. Only those who have not believed have been removed. Both the root and the tree remain, a source of both hope and nourishment.

The rejection of Israel as a people would not only result in the promise of God becoming of none effect. It would require the abandonment of the Lord's commitment to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. It would decimate both covenants, for "the Law was ADDED" to the original commitment (Gal 3:19).

The whole Gospel enterprise postulates the existence of the Jews, Paul's "kinsmen according to the flesh." Remove them from the Gosapel context, and the thread of reason unravels. The Gospel is God's power unto salvation "to the Jew first" – not in sequence, but in both promise and principle. The reasoning that follows is built upon these unwavering realities. They provide an excellent example of God fulfilling His promises with precision.

ISRAELITES INDEED

^{9:6b} For they are not all Israel who are of Israel . . . Other versions read, “For they are not all Israel who are descended from Israel,” NASB “For not all Israelites truly belong to Israel,” NRSV “For all are not Israelites that are of Israel,” Douay-Rheims “No, for not everyone born into a Jewish family is truly a Jew!” NJB

Here is an elaboration of Divine foreknowledge, “for whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son” (Rom 8:29). God made promise to Abraham in full recognition of the future. That promise was a declaration of “the end from the beginning,” not of a mere possibility (Isa 46:10).

AN EXPLANATION

This is the Spirit’s explanation for the effectiveness of the promise of God: i.e., “for . . .” The reasoning supporting this affirmation is lofty, and will not satisfy the flesh. It will, however, fully satisfy the believing heart.

NOT ALL

There is an Israel within Israel, a special nation within the general nation. Wicked men like Korah (Num 16:1-32), and Balaam (Num 22), together with those who rejected and provoked God at Kadesh Barnea (Num 14:11-23) were within Israel, yet did not truly belong to Israel. In the case of the latter, only two of those who were twenty years old and upward (603,550, Ex 38:26) believed God. Even so, God did not repudiate the army of Israel nor the nation of Israel. The remnant, who truly belonged to Israel, were the means of preserving the nation.

A TRUE ISRAELITE

Early in Christ’s ministry, while He was in the process of calling His disciples, he found and called Philip, who was from the city of Bethsaida, a citadel of unbelief (John 1:44; Mk 8:22-23; Lk 10:13). Philip, elated with his call, found Nathaniel and said to him, “We have found Him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.” Being familiar with Nazareth, Nathaniel replied, “Can anything good come out of Nazareth?” Philip did not engage him in a lengthy conversation, but simply said, “Come and see.” As Nathaniel approached Jesus, the Lord “saw him coming toward Him, and said of him, ‘Behold, an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile’” (John 1:46-47). Other versions read “a true Israelite,” NIV and “a true son of Israel.” BBE This is the relationship declared in our text.

Being able to trace ones fleshly lineage house of Judah” (Jer 31:31; Heb 8:8), only those with faith realized the fulfillment of the promise. The believers have always been the true Israel. Those who “believed not,” though in the fleshly lineage of Abraham, were not reckoned as “of Israel.”

What If Some Did Not Believe?

The line of reasoning being developed in our text was introduced in the third chapter. “What if some did not have faith? Will their lack of faith nullify God’s faithfulness?” NIV (3:3). The New Living Translation paraphrase expresses the sense of this expression well: “True, some of them were unfaithful; but just because they broke their promises, does that mean God will break His promises?”

This is the Spirit’s explanation for the effectiveness of the promise of God: i.e., “for . . .” The reasoning supporting this affirmation is lofty, and will not satisfy the flesh. It will, however, fully satisfy the believing heart.

It is true that the “some” were mathematically the greater number. Yet, those who believed carried a greater weight, thereby sanctifying the nation. Their presence kept the nation from being destroyed. Because of them—particularly Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the promises to them remained in tact. Because of this, at any time, should any member of this chosen race choose to believe the promises given to their nation, they would realize the benefit of them.

This is the lowest view of this truth, yet it is a vital one. If God would spare Sodom and Gomorrah for the sake of ten righteous souls, much more He will preserve the people He Himself chose for the sake of the faithful among them.

From Another Point of View

Our text expresses this truth from another point of view. Rather than justifying the existence of the nation because of those who believe, it shows why God was righteous in cutting off those who did not believe. They were not “Israelites indeed,” and thus provided no reason for God to withdraw His commitments to “the house of Israel and back to Abraham does not make one a “true Israelite.” Neither, indeed, does it invalidate being an Israelite according to the flesh. Paul did not refer to himself as a former Israelite. Rather, he said, “I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin” (Rom 11:1). He was speaking of his fleshly pedigree, for the spiritual one cannot be traced to “the tribe of Benjamin.” With Paul, as well as with Nathaniel, being a “true Israelite” did not invalidate being a member of one of the twelve tribes.

The promise, or “word of God,” was never fulfilled independently of faith. Although it was addressed to the nation of Israel, or “the house of Israel and with the the house of Judah.” Judgment may come upon a nation because the majority of its constituents do not believe. However, wherever a remnant is found, the promise of blessing remains close enough to be realized.

Those who insist on contending Israel has been cut off must do so with our text ringing in their ears. Their position cannot be successfully defended. It contradicts both the word and spirit of the promises of God.

A CONSIDERATION

If fleshly identity with Israel did not make a person a “true Israelite,” it is elementary to observe the bodily affiliation with a good and godly assembly does not make one a Christian. Without laboring the point, much can be learned from this informative text. An astounding amount of contemporary religion is nothing less than polished Pharisaism.

SPECIAL CHILDREN

“⁷ . . . nor are they all children because they are the seed of Abraham; but, ‘In Isaac your seed shall be called.’” This may appear to be a redundancy, but care must be taken not to jump to that conclusion. Verse six declares that fleshly identity with the house of Israel was not sufficient to be accepted by God—i.e., group identity. This verse deals with personal pedigree, or lineage.

LINEAGE CAN BE ESSENTIAL

Fleshly lineage can be important. Take, for example, the matter of the Messiah. His blood line had to be traced back to Abraham, for He was the true “Son of Abraham” (Matt 1:1; Lk 19:9). This is why the genealogy of Jesus is precisely traced back to Abraham (Matt 1:1-16).

Direct relation by blood was also necessary for Isaac and Jacob, who stand among “the fathers.” To the Jews returning from the Babylonian captivity, precise fleshly genealogy was also important (Ezra 8:1-15).

WHEN FLESH AND BLOOD DO NOT COUNT

However, when it comes to the matter of salvation, the final word is not found in fleshly genealogy. In fact, believers are told to disregard genealogical thrusts. “Neither give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: so do” (1 Tim 1:4). “But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain” (Tit 3:9). That would include such matters as

Our text will now show us that flesh is not an arena where critical spiritual distinctions can be made. This is one reason why Jesus said “Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment” (John 7:24). Because “flesh and blood” are an area of contamination, qualifications for entrance into the kingdom of God cannot be found there. As it is written, “flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God” (1 Cor 15:50). Neither appearance (circumcision) nor earthly lineage (sons of Abraham) can qualify one to be the child of God. Nor, indeed, is flesh and blood something that can be “conformed to the image” of the Son of God.

DIVINE CHOICE THE DETERMINING FACTOR

generational curses, concerning which a renewed emphasis has arisen in some circles.

The Jews gloried in their blood-line, and John the Baptist rebuked some of them for it. Although they could boast of being Abraham’s generation according to the flesh, John called them a “generation of vipers” (Matt 3:7). He challenged them with these words, “and do not think to say to yourselves, ‘We have Abraham as our father.’ For I say to you that God is able to raise up children to Abraham from these stones”^{NKJV} (Matt 3:9).

When some Jews boasted that they were “Abraham’s seed, and were never in bondage to any man,” Jesus replied “Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do” (John 8:37-44).

The Spirit will confirm this to be the case by showing that God made a choice between those with an identical earthly father – and, in one case, an identical mother as well. If the truth of this statement can be substantiated, our confidence cannot be “in the flesh” (Phil 3:3), for it is a realm where Divine rejection can be experienced, even though a proper fleshly genealogy is found. No one, upon the basis of fleshly distinction, can claim a right to Divine acceptance.

OTHER CHILDREN

Abraham did have other children, yet all of them did not inherit the blessing promised to him. Through Hagar, he begat Ishmael (Gen 16:15). Twelve princes and nations came from Ishmael (Gen 17:20; 25:16). Although the precise nations are not all named in Scripture, Ishmael's progeny included Arabians, Hagarenes, Saracens, Turks, Iturians, Midianites, and even Canaanites. They were all, furthermore, consistent enemies of the people of God, and remain so to this very day—even though they are technically the offspring of Abraham.

Through Keturah, Abraham begat six other sons: Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak, and Shuah (Gen 25:2). Many of these also beget Arabian nations, one of whom were the Sabeans, who stole Job's belongings (Job 1:15).

A "father of many nations," in deed! And that does not include the greatest nation of all, those who believe (Rom 4:16). Now we will see that tracing the bloodline back to Abraham was not sufficient. If it was, the Arabians and Turks, exceedingly large nations, as well as multitudes of others, could claim right to Abraham's spiritual birthright. Every one coming from him was not "a son of Abraham" (Lk 19:9). In the words of our text, "neither are they all children because they are Abraham's descendants."

ISAAC

"... but, In Isaac shall thy seed be called." This quotation is taken from Genesis 21:12, and is again quoted in Hebrews 11:18. The occasion was the expulsion of Hagar and Ishmael from Abraham's home; "for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman" (Gen 21:10; Gal 4:30). Even so, the Lord said concerning Ishmael, "Yet I will also make a nation of the son of the bondwoman, because he is your seed" (Gen 21:13).

Prior to the births of both Ishmael and Isaac, when he was yet Abram, the patriarch reasoned with the Lord, "Lord GOD, what will You give me, seeing I go childless, and the heir of my house is Eliezer of Damascus? Then Abram said, 'Look, You have given me no offspring; indeed one born in my house is my heir!'" (Gen 15:2-3). Twenty years had passed since the initial promise of Genesis twelve. However, this was not satisfactory, for the promise was bigger than Abraham's at the "set time," the Lord visited Sarah, and she "received strength to conceive seed" (Gen 18:14; Heb 11:11). Divine appointments cannot fail.

The phrase "It is through Isaac that your offspring will be reckoned,"^{NIV} narrows the promise. It does not make the other offspring of Abraham any less his ability. Even though Eliezer was born in his house, along with many other servants (Gen 14:14), he was not the suitable heir, and could not be called Abraham's "seed." The answer of the Lord therefore came to him, "This one shall not be your heir, but one who will come from your own body shall be your heir" (Gen 15:4).

Now we will see that tracing the bloodline back to Abraham was not sufficient. If it was, the Arabians and Turks, exceedingly large nations, as well as multitudes of others, could claim right to Abraham's spiritual birthright.

When Ishmael was born, Sarah still remaining barren, Abraham reasoned that Ishmael would be heir of the promise. Nearly eleven more years had passed, and thus Abraham besought the Lord, "O that Ishmael might live before thee!" (Gen 17:18). The answer of the Lord returned, "Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him . . . But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year" (Gen 17:19,21). Shortly after that, and just before Sodom and Gomorrah suffered the destruction of "eternal fire," natural children, but it does exclude others from the promise given to Abraham. Isaac was the result of Divine working. The reason for Isaac was the promise of God! The promise of God was not because of Isaac.

A Child Among Children

Isaac was THE son of Abraham among other sons of Abraham. He was the appointed heir of the promise—the one through whom the Messiah and the promised blessing would come. In this, the Lord is showing that a particular household can exist within a greater one.

Others may make a claim to the promise, but only Isaac will receive it. Others may reason that the promise belongs to all of the offspring, but only Isaac will obtain it. Only those coming through Isaac will be reckoned as "children." The edict is clear: "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." The Lord announced it ahead of time, then meticulously brought it to pass.

CHILDREN OF THE FLESH VERSUS CHILDREN OF THE SPIRIT

"⁸ That is, those who are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God; but the children of the promise are counted as the seed." It is important to remember that the Israelites, Paul's "kinsman according to the flesh," are the consideration. The reasoning set before us does not exclude them from the promise, but explains why they have NOT been excluded from it. Within them are a people who are true Israelites.

Because the pillars of reason being put into place by the Spirit are of such strength, it is especially important that we give due heed to them. This is no series of statements developed by the paltry wisdom of men. The Lord is establishing why the promises of God are sure. He is showing why having great heaviness and sorrow of heart are not to be equated with hopelessness. He is confirming why Israel has not been rejected as a nation. “Some did not believe,” and “some of the branches have been broken off.” Notwithstanding, the tree remains!

THE CHILDREN OF THE FLESH

The “children of the flesh” are those born in the energy and wisdom of the flesh. They are like Eliezer, in whose birth Abraham had no immediate part. They are also like Ishmael, who was fathered by Abraham, yet was a purely natural child.

More particularly, “the children of the flesh” are those Israelites who did not “walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham” (Rom 4:12). The promises were given to them, but they did not take hold of them. They were isolated from other peoples, yet chose to remain identified with and the tied to the world. In their essential persons, they are not the product of Divine working. They are part of a miraculous nation only outwardly, or “in the flesh.”

Is This Relevant to Us

Some people are driven by a “relevant- to-me-now” mentality. They discard this whole line of reasoning because they imagine it has nothing to do with them. How wrong they are!

This very truth is briefly expounded by the Spirit in the first chapter of John. There, it is not limited to the Jews, corroborating that we are speaking of a principle that is operative in our salvation. Here is what the Spirit says. “But as many as received Him, to them He gave the right to become children of God, to those who believe in His name: who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God” (John 1:12-13). Note that “receiving” Christ did not of itself make the people “sons.” Rather, because of their reception of the Son, they were given “the right to become children of God.”

NIV

Their spiritual birth was as miraculous as that of Isaac. It could never have happened without the Lord. They were “begotten of God” through “incorruptible seed” (1 John 5:18; 1 Pet 1:23). Lest men take too much upon themselves, James confirms, “In the exercise of His will He brought us forth by the word of truth, so that we might be, as it were, the first fruits among His creatures” ^{NASB} (James 1:18). The New Jerusalem Bible reads, “By His own choice He gave birth to us by the message of the truth so that we should be a sort of first-fruits of all His creation.”

The “children of the flesh” are those not born “by the will of God.” These are not the ones foreknown by God (8:29).

It should be apparent that no mature individual is accepted by God because of their godly parents. Much less can people be approved of God because of the religious institution to which they belong, or the creed they have adopted. All of that is on the “flesh” side.

They are not the result of His working. They are only natural children.

The nation of Israel was related to God in a sense enjoyed by no other nation. Yet, only a part of them were recognized as the “true Israel.” That elite group sanctified the nation as a whole, thereby justifying God in not completely renouncing them.

Let it be clear that “the children of the flesh” possess no qualification outside of nature. Their sole assets belong to the realm of nature, not that of the Spirit. Even when the “flesh” begetting these children is “our father Abraham” (Rom 4:12), that cannot of itself qualify a person to be the child of God. Such a condition does not mean the promises of God will come to the individual because of superior family lineage. They surely will not come because of organizational affiliation.

It should be apparent that no mature individual is accepted by God because of their godly parents. Much less can people be approved of God because of the religious institution to which they belong, or the creed they have adopted. All of that is on the “flesh” side.

THE CHILDREN OF GOD

Relation to God--i.e., “the children of God”--is not reckoned upon the basis of nature--even the best nature. The “children of God” not only trace their origin back to Him, they have been especially blessed by Him, and are uniquely the work of His hands. It is said of them, “we are His workmanship” (Eph 2:10). While there is a general sense in which all of Adam’s progeny are “the offspring of God” (Acts 17:29), that condition does not make people “the children of God.”

“The children of God” have a supernatural origin as well as a natural one. They are born “of the will of God,” not merely of the will of man.

THE CHILDREN OF PROMISE

“The children of the promise” are the children that God promised. The example under consideration is Isaac. Were it not for the promise of God, he never would have been born. It was not possible for Isaac to be produced by natural powers alone. Sarah “received strength to conceive,” else she never could have had any children, much less Isaac.

The children of promise, as Isaac, are the result of faith in the ability of God. Concerning the birth of Isaac, it is written, “And being not weak in faith, he [Abraham] considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah’s womb: He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God; and being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform” (Rom 4:19-21). That condition made Isaac a “child of promise.”

While there is a breakdown of precision in the application of this to all of the “children of God,” the principle remains the same. In our case, for example, we are not God’s children because of Abraham’s faith, but because of our own. As it is written, “For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus” (Gal 3:26). Whether it is Israelites living prior to Jesus, or our own generation, it is our faith that truly speaks of Divine recognition of the people. The Psalmist spoke of such a counting, relating it to where a person was born. “And of Zion it will be said, ‘This one and that one were born in her; And the Most High Himself shall establish her.’ The LORD will record, When He registers the peoples: ‘This one was born there.’ Selah” (Psa 87:5-6). Among the people God will relates us to Abraham, thereby making us “the children of promise.” As it is written, “Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all” (Rom 4:16).

Counting, or tallying up, “the seed,” speaks of Divine recognition of the people. The Psalmist spoke of such a counting, relating it to where a person was born.

“The children of the promise,” therefore, are those with the faith of Abraham.

COUNTED AS THE SEED

God is very particular on this point. “The seed,” in this case, are those who become the recipients of the promised blessing of God. They are numbered much as Israel was in the early times. They were counted according to their tribes, all of which could be precisely traced back to Abraham through Isaac.

Counting, or tallying up, “the seed,” register, or count, will be those believing Jews within Israel “according to the flesh.” It will also include those who have been truly born again within the professing church. Those who did not live by faith will not be counted, even though they may have lived amidst an approved people, and among those in Christ.

Whether it be Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, or you, the “children of God” are individuals. They are not acknowledged because of national distinction, but because of their faith.

CONTRADICTION???

All Of this may appear to be contradictory. After speaking at length about the Israelites and their advantages, why does the Lord now reason that only “the children of promise” are considered as true offspring? Does that not confirm that God has repudiated the nation of Israel, no longer acknowledging it?

Not at all! He is showing that there could be no such thing as genuine “children of God” within this nation if it had been written off. This is precisely the point made by the Spirit in Isaiah 1:9. “Unless the LORD of hosts had left to us a very small remnant, We would have become like Sodom, We would have been made like Gomorrah.”
NKJV No remnant was left in Sodom or Gomorrah! God removed Lot and his family, then destroyed those ancient cities with “everlasting fire” (Jude 7). The reasoning here is powerful! The remnant that remained was not the result of mere human activity. The remnant was “LEFT” BY God Almighty! These were the faithful who were left like Noah. They remained after judgment, like Lot. The scathing wrath of God did not touch them, any more than the fiery furnace touched the three Hebrew children.

The fact that God left “a very small remnant” substantiates that He did not remove the nation from the tablet of eternal purpose. He is not finished with it, as will be powerfully declared in the eleventh chapter.

Confirming that Israel’s situation is the same since Christ’s exaltation as it was in the days of Isaiah, the Spirit declares, “Even so then, at this present time there is a remnant according to the election of grace” (Rom 11:6). The word of God, then, has not been ineffective, even though the larger part of Israel has not yet believed. The existence of the remnant justifies God in refusing to remove the nation from the face of the earth. It also confirms the surety and effectiveness of the promise.

THE WORD OF PROMISE

“⁹ For this is the word of promise: ‘At this time I will come and Sarah shall have a son.’” God plants and tills his garden in the field of impossibility! The Lord has declared that “the children of promise” are “counted,” or reckoned, “for the seed.” Now He will effectively show us what that means. These are the children GOD promised, not children who measured up to a series of demands.

THE WORD OF PROMISE

Here is a unique thing. The world was created by a Divine fiat, or spoken command: i.e., “Let there be . . .” (Gen 1:3,6,14). But when it comes to His children, they are begotten by a promise, not a commandment! This is the kind of “word” that already has been declared to be effective: i.e., “it is not that the word of God has taken no effect” (v 6).

Let me be clear about what is being said. Israel remains to this day, not because it has arduously fulfilled all of the commandments delivered to it, but because God made a promise to Abraham! He confirmed it to Isaac and Jacob, and later to David. It is “the word of promise” that beget this nation and will fulfill the good pleasure of God concerning it. This will be done without ignoring the rampant unbelief that swept over the nation. Those who refused to believe were, and will continue to be, broken off. But those unbelievers will NOT nullify the promise of God. As it is written, “For what if some did not believe? Will their unbelief make the faithfulness of God without effect? Certainly not! Indeed, let God be true but every man a liar”^{NKJV} (Rom 3:3-4). And again, “If we are faithless, He remains faithful; He cannot deny Himself” (2 Tim 2:13). Let it be clear, God will not overlook unfaithfulness, and that is not the meaning of these sayings.

What the Lord IS saying is that God’s purpose is bigger than individuals. Those who are unfaithful, or faithless, forfeit the blessing for themselves, but they do not cause the promise of God to be retracted. Now the Spirit will show us the outworking of Divine commitment in the birth of Isaac, the “child of promise.”

AT THIS TIME

The promise to Abraham was specific, not general. It was not that some time somewhere Abraham would beget a son through Sarah. It was “At this time.” The record in Genesis is even more specific. “But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year” (Gen 17:21). Again it is written, “At the time appointed I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son” (Gen 18:14). When Isaac was born, his birth was referenced in this manner: “For Sarah conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken to him” (Gen 21:2).

Times and seasons are strictly in God’s control, not that of man. They are things God has “put in His own power” (Acts 1:7). He can cause things to happen when He determines, as when Noah entered into the ark by which he would be saved on “the selfsame day” (Gen 7:13), and the deliverance of Israel from Egypt on “the selfsame day” (Ex 12:41).

Actually, God’s promises assume His control, else they could not be made. First, faith is convinced of this, that what God has promised He is also “able to perform” (Rom 4:21). Second, God has gone on record concerning His commitments: “Indeed I have spoken it; I will also bring it to pass. I have purposed it; I will also do it” (Isa 46:11). This is precisely why He can, by promise, make appointments.

I WILL COME

The “children of promise” are the direct result of Divine involvement! In the promise.” It was spoken with both omniscience and omnipotence.

In regards to our text, Israel has not been written off because God has spoken words of promise concerning her. “And ye shall be my people, and I will be your God” (Jer 24:7). Again, “Therefore fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, saith the LORD; neither be dismayed, O Israel: for, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob case of Isaac’s birth, God did not merely set natural laws in motion, but came in a power transcendent to the law of nature. Nature had passed the verdict of “barren” upon Sarah. However, when God came, that verdict was struck down to the ground. As soon as God shows up, the enemy is vanquished. There is no resistance or battle on the part of the foe, only retreat. The glory of the Lord blasts away all inhibition, and will be confirmed at the coming of the Lord.

Just as surely as God promised Sarah would bear Isaac, God has also promised Israel will turn to Him with their whole heart. “And I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their whole heart” (Jer 24:7). Just as surely as Rebekah conceived though barren, the Deliverer will yet come roaring out of Zion to turn away ungodliness from Jacob!

SARAH WILL HAVE A SON

The power of nature and the wisdom of the world agreed that Sarah could NOT have a child, much less one through whom the whole world would be blessed. But the word of God negated both of them. “SARAH WILL HAVE A SON!” That word is what made Isaac a “child of shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid. For I am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee: but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished” (Jer 30:10-11).

Even though, from the human point of view, their “bruise is incurable,” and their wound “grievous;” even though there is “none to plead” their cause, and God has Himself wounded her with “the wound of an enemy,” and the “chastisement of a cruel one,” yet the Lord has promised: “For I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the LORD” (Jer 30:12-17).

That word is as sure as the one spoken to Abraham concerning Sarah giving birth to Isaac. When God fulfilled His word to Sarah, the “child of promise” was born. When God fulfills His word concerning restoring health to Israel, it will be clear that within her circumference are a people who are “Israelites indeed!”

Unbelief can write Sarah off because she is barren. Unbelief can also write off Israel because they are presently unbelieving. But unbelief is wrong on both counts. It has judged prematurely and according to appearance. Furthermore, Divine commitments have been specifically addressed to Israel as well as Sarah. Such words are sure.

NOT JUST ONCE

¹⁰ And not only this, but when Rebekah also had conceived by one man, even by our father Isaac.”The Scriptural record is written in such a way as to build hope. There are, therefore, constant reaffirmations of the power of promise and the surety of God’s word. In the first case, children were born with the same father, Abraham. However, they had differing mothers: Sarah, Hagar, and Keturah. The “child of promise” came promises are brought to fruition. He is showing us why Israel has not been written off, and why it is in order to seek her salvation (Rom 10:1). If we will not quench Him, He will ignite the flame of faith and hope.

The Significance

There is significance in bringing up Rebekah. In the case of Ishmael, one might argue that he was the son of a 21:16). “The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia” to rebuild Jerusalem, which Nebuchadnezzar destroyed by His command (2 Chron 36:22). He also “stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people” to come and work in His house (Hag 1:14). God does have access to the spirits of men!

In the same manner, the heart of Isaac was stirred to pray for Rebekah, rather than give up on God’s promise because she was barren.

Here is the lawful wife. She bears two sons from the same father, the “child of promise.” Yet, one of the sons is chosen, and one is not. That choice will be traced back to Divine preference, not to the works of either son.

Why should it be thought incredible that God could again stir the hearts of the Israelites? Who is the person that will dare to affirm He has no remnant among them, or that He cannot “allure” them into a place where He can speak comfortably to them (Hos 2:14)?

through a specific mother by the will of God. Now the Lord will show another “the child of promise” was distinguished from a child born of the same mother, and at the same time—a twin brother.

THE CASE OF REBEKAH

As with Sarah, Rebekah was also barren. In the case of Abraham, Isaac was selected from the children of three mothers: Hagar, Sarah, and Keturah. In the case of Rebekah, multiple children were conceived “by one man.” In these precise situations, God worked all things together for good, fulfilling His promise under impossible circumstances.

Isaac knew of the promise received by his father. When confronted with the barrenness of Rebekah, he did not lose heart. The Scriptures tell us, “Now Isaac pleaded with the LORD for his wife, because she was barren; and the LORD granted his plea, and Rebekah his wife conceived” (Gen 25:21). Because God had promised the blessing of the world through Abraham’s offspring, we are not to conclude Isaac’s petition was a mere human work. Remember, in these examples God is showing how His bondwoman, not the legal wife of Abraham. Therefore, flesh reasons, he was rejected upon the basis of law, not Divine choice. That reasoning, of course, is not true. Ishmael was rejected because he was not the son that was promised. Notwithstanding, in order to show that promise is hinged to Divine choice, not human works, the Spirit cites the case of Rebekah. Here is the lawful wife. She bears two sons from the same father, the “child of promise.” Yet, one of the sons is chosen, and one is not. That choice will be traced back to Divine preference, not to the works of either son. God is showing HOW the children of promise are brought into the world.

Satan Could Not Stop It

I have no doubt that Satan was working to thwart the fulfillment of God’s promise. He knew full well that “the seed of the woman” was destined to bruise his head, and thus energetically sought to stop that seed from being born, as pictured in Revelation 12:4. However, the Lord can stir up people to fulfill His will. He “stirred up an adversary against Solomon” (1 Kgs 11:14). He “stirred up against Jehoram the spirit of the Philistines, and of the Arabians” (2 Chron

God’s promises bear children! They produce results! Furthermore, “the promises” pertain, or belong, to Israel. It stands to reason, therefore, that even though she presently appears as barren as Rebekah, yet we can beseech the Lord for her in expectation of our prayers being answered – not because we prayed them, but because they are based upon His promises to the ancient people.

OUR FATHER ISAAC

Isaac is “our father” upon the same basis as Abraham – because of our faith. In the case of we Gentiles, we have been grafted into the Jewish tree “contrary to nature” (Rom 11:24). Notwithstanding that condition, and because of the great power of God, Isaac is still “our father.”

We have become part of an “eternal purpose” which was announced in Eden (Gen 3:15), declared to Abraham (Gen 12:1-3), and confirmed to Isaac (Gen 27:29). The promise of God could not be thwarted! God has not forgotten Isaac, and neither can we.

The Spirit will again show us that the promise of God does not extend to all of the children in the flesh. Even though they all have the same father AND the same mother, yet a distinction is made among them. That distinction is not made because of works, but in order that the purpose of God might stand according to His election.

JACOB AND ESAU

“¹¹ . . . (for the children not yet being born, nor having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works but of Him who calls),¹² it was said to her, ‘The older shall serve the younger.’¹³ As it is written, ‘Jacob I have loved, but Esau I have hated.’”

This is one of most provocative expressions of Scripture. It is not to be mitigated by preconceived notions or stereotyped theologies. This is a Divine statement. It is also the reasoning of the Holy Spirit. It is given as an explanation for why Israel has not been repudiated by God. It is also a confirmation that the promises of God will not fall to the ground, even though contradicted by both circumstance human reasoning.

Eventually, every knee will bow to the One declaring these things. It is on the part of wisdom to bow the knee now, humbly acknowledging that the wisdom and power of God can carry out His purpose when everything seems against it.

THE CHILDREN

In this case, “the children” are Jacob and Esau. They had the same father and the same mother. They were born at the same time, after been together in the same womb. If Divine privileges are based upon what is generated within the womb, both of “the children” will be accepted by God. If having the same parents is the criteria, both will be received by God.

In the case of Ishmael and Isaac, there was a difference in between them as natural children. They had different mothers. One was free and one was a slave. One was born of the will of the flesh, the other by the will of God. One might suppose, therefore, that God’s choice of Isaac was based upon these conditions. That is not the case, however, for Isaac was chosen because he was promised.

This will now be confirmed to us, for no such distinctions existed in Jacob and Eventually, every knee will bow to the One declaring these things. It is on the part of wisdom to bow the knee now, humbly acknowledging that the wisdom and power of God can carry out His purpose when everything seems against it.

Esau. They had the same mother, and were both conceived and born as a result of Divine working. Yet one was chosen as a child of promise, and other was rejected. Both were the seed of Isaac, yet one is loved and one is hated.

We must be careful not to allow these affirmations to confuse us, or lead us to question our own salvation. God is showing us why Israel remains as a nation before Him. He is confirming why there is hope for them.

The Lord is opening His “purpose” to us, showing that when we are called in accordance with that purpose (Rom 8:28), He WILL work all things together for our good. If we see that we have no merit of our own, He will show us His workings in us are not based upon our merit. His purpose and His calling are the preeminent matters in this discussion. Elsewhere, the matter of the response of faith is the critical matter, but that is not the subject here.

BEFORE THEY DID ANYTHING

“ . . . for the children not yet being born, nor having done any good or evil.” The purpose is not merely to establish WHEN the Divine choice was made, but WHY it was made. It is to be acknowledged we are now in waters that are deep. Yet, faith can walk on these waters, and safely navigate through them without harm. Because it is the Spirit that is speaking, we are to “hear” what He is saying.

The words that are here referenced were spoken to Rebekah. They confirmed Divine intent to her. After she had conceived by Isaac, Rebekah had an unusual experience. The Scriptures inform us that “the children struggled within her.” Apparently, the sensations she experienced were most unusual. We have no indication that she realized twins were in her womb. Thus, when they struggled with each other, it may have appeared as though an untimely birth was about to occur. Perhaps thinking the miraculous conception was about to be thwarted, she reasoned within herself. Then she took the matter to the Lord. It is written, “But the children struggled together within her; and she said, ‘If all is well, why am I like this?’ So she went to inquire of the LORD” ^{NKJV} (Gen 25:22). Our text expounds the answer given to her by God Himself.

The answer was not based upon the foreseen conduct or works of the children. The fact that they had not yet been born confirms the determination of WHO would continue the lineage of Abraham was independent of human merit. Esau was not yet profane, and Jacob was not yet believing. Esau had not yet despised his birthright, and Jacob had not yet prevailed with God.

The Manner of Reasoning

I must continually come back to the reason for this passage. It is the Spirit's extended commentary on Israel "according to the flesh." He is showing this nation was strictly chosen and developed by God. It was done in strict accordance with His own choice, and without regard to human merit. Israel's distinction was not the result of its conduct, but of God's choice. They were favored above other nations because God chose to do so. They did not deserve it.

In this passage, the Lord is expanding on the manner in which He chose and developed Israel. He made critical distinctions between the fleshly offspring of Abraham, "to whom the promises were made" (Gal 3:16).

The point is that He has not done anything to lead us to believe nothing further can happen in this nation. The Prophets delivered words concerning them as a nation that have not yet been fulfilled. There is not a word in Scripture that suggests these promises have been withdrawn from that nation, or that God is even capable of making a promise only to withdraw it.

Although appearance seems to belie the possibility, there is still a preserving remnant in this nation, just as surely as there was a Joshua and Caleb during Israel's rejection of the promised land. That sanctifying remnant remains just as surely as it did on the day of Pentecost, or as surely as it was found within the womb of Rebekah.

PURPOSE ACCORDING TO ELECTION

God did not announce His intentions AFTER Jacob and Esau were born, but while they were yet unborn. The reason for this is, "... that the purpose of God according to election might stand." Other versions read, "in order that God's purpose according to His choice might stand,"^{NASB} "in order that God's purpose in election might stand,"^{NIV} "so that God's purpose of election might continue,"^{NRSV} "in order that God's purpose and his selection might be effected,"^{BBE} and "but in order that it should be God's choice which prevailed."^{NJB}

Purpose might not Fail

The "purpose" of God is to be a cornerstone in our thinking. That purpose was conceived independently of the achievements of men, and before the world was created. It is in this sense that "the works were finished from the foundation of the world" (Heb 4:3). Thus it is referred to as "His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself" (Eph 1:9). For this reason, it is called "His OWN purpose" (2 Tim 1:9), and the "counsel of His own will" (Eph 1:11). That purpose determined the formation of Israel (Deut 7:7-8). It is the basis for our calling (Rom 8:28; 2 Tim 1:9).

Isaiah referred to the firmness of God's purpose in this manner. "The LORD of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely

The "purpose" of God is to be a cornerstone in our thinking. That purpose was conceived independently of the achievements of men, and before the world was created. It is in this sense that "the works were finished from the foundation of the world" as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand" (Isa 14:24).

The words that follow were not merely foretelling what was going to happen. They are not an analysis of human conduct. Rather, they are the cause for the continuation of Abraham's seed. They are the reason why the nation did not disappear, or was expunged by the devil.

Implemented By Choice

While "choice" is normally ascribed to men (and, indeed, they are to choose), the Scriptures place the greater emphasis upon Divine choice. It is really God's choice that makes the difference.

- God chose the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Deut 4:37; 10:15).
- He chose David, taking him from the sheepfolds (Psa 78:70).
- He chose Israel to be a special people (Deut 7:6).
- God chose the priests of Israel (Deut 18:5; 21:5).
- The Lord chose Solomon (1 Chron 29:1).
- He chose Saul to be king (1 Sam 10:24).
- He chose Solomon to build the temple (1 Chron 28:10).
- God chose who should bring the Gospel to the Gentiles (Acts 15:7).
- God has chosen us in Christ Jesus before the world began (Eph 1:4).
- The Thessalonians were from the beginning "chosen unto salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and the belief of the truth" (2 Thess 2:13).
- Those in Christ are a "chosen generation" (1 Pet 2:9).
- Jesus chose the Apostles (Luke 6:13).
- Paul the Apostle was a "chosen vessel," separated from the womb (Acts 9:15; Gal 1:15).

The fact of Divine choice cannot be questioned. There are simply too many declarations of it to allow such doubts.

Our text tells us WHY God chooses. It is in order that His purpose according to election might stand. In other words, God causes His purpose to come to fruition. If an enemy arises to thwart that purpose, God will cause the enemy to fail. If, through faith, a person embraces that purpose, God will "make him stand" (Rom 14:4). If his purpose is unknown to Rebekah, He will announce to her what is going to happen with the children in her womb. The purpose of God is why she was enabled to conceive, and the purpose of God would be served by the fruit of her womb.

A Practical Application

If you wonder what the outcome of believing God will be, find what God has declared concerning faith. Search out what word He has given concerning those who believe. Become knowledgeable of His revealed purpose for believers. See what He has determined for those who believe the record He has given of His Son! When you have acquainted yourself with those “exceeding great and precious promises,” then believe that “God cannot lie!”

NOT OF WORKS

“... not of works but of Him who calls.” When it comes to the “purpose” of God, the works of men play no foundational role. God’s “election” is not determined by what men do, but by what God wants! I understand that men have taken the word “election” and developed cold and calculating doctrines. Some of them have created doubts and fears in tender hearts. But these abuses do not remove the fact that God is an electing God!

There are choices He makes that have nothing whatsoever to do with what you have done, just as surely as God’s choice of Jacob was not based upon what he had done! In fact, the promise was given before he was even born, or had done anything. The meaning of the text is that God made his choice without regard to what either Jacob or Esau would do. He was motivated by something higher.

I am quick to again add that this is not speaking of the means through which salvation is wrought. Rather, this is the explanation for the presence and continuance of the nation of Israel, Paul’s “kinsmen according to the flesh.” This is a critical distinction to make, lest we make the election of God a stumbling stone instead of a rock of hope.

In Salvation

There is a sense in which this principle applies to salvation, but it must be declared with wisdom. In “eternal salvation,” believing is the principle thing. Strictly speaking, believing is not a work of man. In fact, Jesus categorically referred to believing on Him as “the work of God” (John 6:29).

Elsewhere we are told that salvation, or justification, is “not of works” (Eph 2:9; Tit 3:5). In fact, righteousness is imputed to us “without works” (Rom 4:6).

This does not mean the individual does not work, but that human activity is not the basis, or foundation, of Divine acceptance. God’s purpose is the determining factor, not our works. When, by faith, we embrace the salvation He presents to us, He begins to work in us in strict accord with His purpose. As it is written, “Now may the God of peace who brought up our Lord Jesus from the dead, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you complete in every good work to do His will, working in you what is well pleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever.”

She was carrying twins, and did not know it. But they were no ordinary twins. Two different bodies of people were represented by them. They would be two different kinds of people. One nation would be a stronger and more aggressive than the other.

Amen ^{NKJV} (Heb 13:20-21).

A Brief Explanation

The cursory reader may imagine that I am merely rambling about on this point. These rather lengthy explanations are necessary because of two extreme conditions that exist in the church. First, vast segments of God’s people never hear a single word about Divine choice, election, or the purpose of God. Second, large bodies of believers have adopted a view of Divine choice, election, and the purpose of God, that stifles faith and awakens fear. In some, it even produces lethargy and slothfulness.

When the Spirit justifies the work of God upon the basis of His election, we had best give heed to His words. When the nation of Israel is associated with God’s election and purpose, we had better take care how we speak of them. It is in order to bring our thoughts into conformity with what God chooses and designs.

THE OLDER WILL SERVE THE YOUNGER

“... it was said to her, ‘The older shall serve the younger.’” When Rebekah “inquired of the Lord” concerning the activity in her womb, she received an answer. “Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and the elder shall serve the younger” (Gen 25:23). She was carrying twins, and did not know it. But they were no ordinary twins. Two different bodies of people were represented by them. They would be two different kinds of people. One nation would be a stronger and more aggressive than the other. It would have more of a military bent. The same father, the same mother, yet two manner of people! With Abraham, contradicting children were in the same house. With Rebekah, they were in the same womb at the same time.

Esau became the father of the Edomites (Gen 36:9). Over thirty dukes, or chiefs, came from Esau, and they were all noted for their aggression (Genesis 36). They were the enemies of Israel, even though they descended from Isaac. They were “stronger than other people.” Notwithstanding their strength, in the days of David, “all the Edomites became David’s servants” (2 Sam 8:14). Their strength gave way to Israel whom God made the “stronger people.”

The Elder Will Serve the Younger

The Lord added one other distinctive word. “And the older shall serve the younger.” This is a most unique promise. It doubtless refers to the passing of the birthright from Esau to Jacob. Under ordinary circumstances, the family inheritance went to the firstborn. The Scriptures provide the details of the birth of Jacob and Esau, confirming Esau to be the firstborn son. “And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb. And the first came out red, all over like an hairy garment; and they called his name Esau. And after that came his brother out, and his hand took hold on Esau's heel; and his name was called Jacob: and Isaac was threescore years old when she bare them" (Gen 25:24-26).

Throughout their lifetime, Esau certainly did not serve Jacob. In fact, as soon as the birthright, in accord with the Divine promise, had been gained by Jacob, he left the home, fleeing from Esau. We have a record of Joseph's brothers bowing to him, fulfilling the dreams God gave him. But there is no record of Esau bowing to Jacob. Instead, Jacob bowed "seven times" to him (Gen 33:3).

The service of Esau to Jacob was not revealed during their lives—at least not outwardly. In the purpose of God, the desires of Esau had to give way to the desires of Jacob when he sought to gain back the inheritance. Isaac told him that was not possible. "And by thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother" (Gen 27:40). 996 years later, king Nebuchadnezzar put the mountains occupied by the inhabitants of Esau to ruin (Jer 49:16-18; Ezek 25:13-14; Joel 3:19; Mal 1:2-3). All of this was done in the interest of the children of Jacob. Truly, the elder did serve the younger! The benefits of the covenant made with Abraham passed through Jacob and evaded Esau!

All of this was in direct contradiction of the flesh, and even of rules of inheritance established by God. Under the Law, the firstborn could not be disinherited (Deut 21:15-17). Yet, Esau the firstborn lost his inheritance and could not gain it back. It is quite true that he "despised his inheritance" (Gen 25:34). Yet the answer of God to Rebekah was given before Esau was born, or had committed any evil.

JACOB HAVE I LOVED

" . . . As it is written, 'Jacob I have loved.'" This quotation is taken from Malachi 1:2, and is a most powerful consideration. "I have loved you," says the LORD. Yet you say, 'In what way have You loved us?' Was not Esau Jacob's brother? Says the LORD. 'Yet Jacob I have loved.'"

This is another form of Divine reasoning that makes no sense at all to the flesh. First, it is important to note that Jacob and Esau, while individuals, are not here considered as individuals, but as progenitors and representatives of races: "two nations, and two manner of people." The Spirit is showing us how God made a distinction within the offspring of Abraham, confirming "they are not all Israel who are of Israel."

Malachi's prophecy shows God's preference of Israel, descendants of Jacob, over the Edomites, descendants of Esau. God affirms His love to Israel, and they questioned the affirmation. "I have loved said, 'We have been impoverished, But we will return and build the desolate places,' Thus says the LORD of hosts: 'They may build, but I will throw down; They shall be called the Territory of Wickedness, and the people against whom the LORD will have indignation forever. Your eyes shall see, And you shall say, 'The LORD is magnified beyond the border of Israel'" (Mal 1:3-5).

Briefly stated, God's hatred for Esau is seen in the Edomites inability to recover themselves from the devastation Nebuchadnezzar brought upon them. They might built, but God would throw down what they raised up. His indignation against them was "forever," and Israel would see it. The phrase "beyond the border of Israel" signifies that God protected Israel's border, while decimating that of Edom.

God's hatred for Esau is seen in the Edomites inability to recover themselves from the devastation Nebuchadnezzar brought upon them. They might built, but God would throw down what they raised up.

Thus God's love for Israel is confirmed by their recovery!

There was a remnant among them, and they rebuilt the waste places. As Isaiah declared, "In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer" (Isa 54:8). But Esau He hated! Although impoverished by the enemy and grievously chastened by the Lord, yet He cried out to them, "Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee. Again I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrets, and shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry" (Jer 31:3-4). But Esau He hated!

GET THE MESSAGE!

God has not cast away His people whom He foreknew! Israel's present condition is anything but good, but it is not hopeless! Some of the cities against which Israel came were so cursed it was said of them, "and it shall be a heap for ever; it shall not be built again" (Deut 13:16). Of the ancient city of Tyrus God said, "And I will make thee like the top of a rock: thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon; thou shalt be built no more: for I the LORD have spoken it, saith the Lord you, saith the LORD. Yet ye say, Wherein hast Thou loved us?" (Mal 1:2a). The people had been judged by God, and therefore concluded He had abandoned them. They had concluded "Our bones are dry, our hope is lost, and we ourselves are cut off" (Ezek 37:11). They were living in the aftermath of Nebuchadnezzar's devastation of Jerusalem and the consequent seventy-year Babylonian captivity. How could God love them? The Lord confirms His love for them by comparing them with the Edomites.

ESAU HAVE I HATED

" . . . As it is written . . . but Esau I have hated.'" The additional words of Malachi cause the text to come alive. "But Esau I have hated, and laid waste his mountains and his heritage for the jackals of the wilderness. Even though Edom has GOD” (Ezek 26:14).

Such things were never said of Jerusalem! Though judged, sacked, and decimated, it was rebuilt! Israel was taken out of their land, then bought back to it.

God said of the Amalekites, “thou shalt blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven” (Deut 25:19). Concerning the nations that occupied the promised land, the Lord said through Moses, “And He shall deliver their kings into thine hand, and thou shalt destroy their name from under heaven” (Deut 7:24). Again, it is said of the heathen, “Thou hast rebuked the heathen, thou hast destroyed the wicked, thou hast put out their name for ever and ever” (Psa 9:5). But no such word has ever been declared against Israel!

The Lord once threatened to do this—blot out the nation. After Israel behaved themselves wickedly at Mount Sinai, the Lord said to Moses, “Now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation” (Ex 32:10). In recounting this event to Israel, Moses declared God said He would “blot out their name from under heaven” (Deut 9:14). Moses stood in the gap at that time, pleading that He would consider the effect of such a destruction upon the Egyptians, and calling upon Him to remember “the fathers,” and the promises He had made to them. In one of those rare occasions, it is written, “And the LORD repented of the evil which He thought to do unto his people” (Ex 32:14). God never again made that threat!

Throughout history, there have been generations of Israelites who were not known for their faith. There have been multitudes of them who have rejected Christ. The word of God has come to pass: “And thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a byword, among all nations whither the LORD shall lead

Why was not Jerusalem judged like Tyrus? Why did He not rain “eternal fire” upon them as He did upon Sodom and Gomorrah? Why did God not pledge Himself to blot out their name like that of the Amalekites? The tender heart wants to know the answer to these questions.

There are at least two reasons Israel remains until this day. First, it is for the farther’s sake—Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Second, it is for the sake of the remnant thee” (Deut 28:37). Yet the Lord says of this judged nation, “I will gather the remnant of My flock” (Jer 23:3). “I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you” (Jer 29:14). “Behold, I will gather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath” (Jer 32:37). “I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted” (Mic 4:6).

How is it that God speaks so differently of Israel? Why does He not speak to them as He did to the Edomites?

that lingers among the people.

It is no wonder Paul had such a concern for this people—why he refused to let them go. Like Moses, he knew the promises of the Lord, and His unfailing recognition of the sanctifying remnant. He knew God and the purpose of God. Thus, he remained in the gap, refusing to be moved away from the hope generated by God’s promises. There is no reason why we cannot join in that concern mingled with optimistic hope. It makes more sense for God to receive Israel than that He received the Gentiles.

CONCLUSION

Academically speaking, this passage is difficult to teach. It does not lend itself to the cold approach of human logic, and contains assertions that do not blend with a stereotyped theology. Yet, that condition makes this a most profitable text, for by its very nature, it draws us upward. It gives a lot of glory to God, accentuating His faithfulness, and confirming His power to implement His eternal purpose.

If you have ever fell beneath the crushing hand of the chastening God, this passage will bring hope to you. Israel stands before you as an example of enduring the chastening of the Lord without being destroyed. It has been unparalleled chastening, extending over a period of two thousand years thus far. Yet, the embers of promise still send forth the spark of hope. Nestled in their multitudes there is a remnant who have seen and embraced the promise. Their very existence is owing to the grace of God. His faithfulness has kept the floods of Divine indignation from drowning them.

When things loomed very dark at Sinai, and the people turned to idolatry, drunkenness and revelry, Moses stood for the people. When the people fell away from the Lord and asked Samuel to pray for them, he replied, “Moreover as for me, God forbid that I should sin against the LORD in ceasing to pray for you: but I will teach you the good and the right way” (1 Sam 12:23). When Elijah thought no one remained but himself, the Lord replied, "I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal" (1 Kings 19:18; Rom 11:4).

I do not know how many powerful intercessors are pleading for Israel in our time, but we do well to aspire to be such. They were the means through which we obtained the Law. Through the prophets, they were custodians of sustaining promises. Through them we have learned of the blessedness of being directed and fed by the Lord. And, above all, our blessed Lord came from them. Who among us does not have a heart for them? They have given us such notables as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Moses. The holy Prophets have come from their ranks, with such spiritual dignitaries as David, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. John the Baptist came from their number, as well as the twelve Apostles, and Paul who labored more abundantly than they all. Who can forget the remarkable women that this nation has yielded: Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, Miriam, Debra, Elizabeth, Mary, and Anna.

We have no cause for shame in having a heart for them, and no need to imagine we have replaced them. Let no person look upon them with disdain, or consider them irrevocable!

There remains a people who are loved of the Lord. They are the ones He has chosen, and to whom He holds out the scepter of righteousness and promise. While we do not condone sin, and even hate "the garment spotted by the flesh," we refuse to abandon hope. It extends to the Israelites, as well as to the whole world, which God has pledged will be covered with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea (Isa 11:9; Hab 2:14). If God can stretch forth His hands to them "all the day," why cannot we?

Wherever there is a promise of God, apply your heart to believe and embrace it. God cannot lie, and you cannot be ashamed if you will believe Him! The star of hope can shine at the peak of the day, as well as in the depth of the darkness of night. As our blessed Lord said, "Have faith in God!"

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 31

GOD'S RIGHTEOUS WORKING

^{9:14} What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? Certainly not! ¹⁵ For He says to Moses, "I will have mercy on whomever I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whomever I will have compassion." ¹⁶ So then it is not of him who wills, nor of him who runs, but of God who shows mercy. ¹⁷ For the Scripture says to Pharaoh, "For this very purpose I have raised you up, that I may show My power in you, and that My name may be declared in all the earth." ¹⁸ Therefore He has mercy on whom He wills, and whom He wills He hardens. ¹⁹ You will say to me then, "Why does He still find fault? For who has resisted His will?" ²⁰ But indeed, O man, who are you to reply against God? Will the thing formed say to him who formed it, "Why have you made me like this?" ²¹ Does not the potter have power over the clay, from the same lump to make one vessel for honor and another for dishonor? ²² What if God, wanting to show His wrath and to make His power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath prepared for destruction, ²³ and that He might make known the riches of His glory on the vessels of mercy, which He had prepared beforehand for glory, ²⁴ even us whom He called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles? ²⁵ As He says also in Hosea: "I will call them My people, who were not My people, And her beloved, who was not beloved." ²⁶ "And it shall come to pass in the place where it was said to them, 'You are not My people,' There they shall be called sons of the living God." ²⁷ Isaiah also cries out concerning Israel: "Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, The remnant will be saved. ²⁸ For He will finish the work and cut it short in righteousness, Because the LORD will make a short work upon the earth." ²⁹ And as Isaiah said before: "Unless the LORD of Sabaoth had left us a seed, We would have become like Sodom, And we would have been made like Gomorrah." – Romans 9:14-29 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

Speaking out of His profound fellowship with Christ, Paul confessed he had "great heaviness and continual sorrow of heart" for the Israelites, his "kinsmen according to the flesh." His desire for their salvation was so great he "could wish" himself accursed and cut off from Christ in order that they might be saved. All of the remarkable advantages had been given to them, including “the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises.” The “fathers,” Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, belonged to them, and the Lord Jesus Himself came from them (9:1-5). Over 1,500 years of Divine investment were focused on this nation. A God who cannot lie made promises to them, yet it appeared it had all been for nought. Throughout the centuries, the Lord held forth His hands to a “disobedient and gainsaying (contrary) people” (Rom 10:21). They “killed the prophets” (Matt 23:31), and “killed the Lord Jesus” (1 Thess 2:15). Because they “did not know” the time of their “visitation,” their house was left desolate, the holy city ravaged, and the temple decimated (Lk 19:43-44; 21:20-24; Matt 24:1-2).

In all of this, God was impeccably righteous, confirming He “will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children’s children, unto the third and to the fourth generation” (Ex 34:7). Equally true, God was righteous in preserving a remnant among a rebellious people (1 Kgs 19:18; Rom 11:6). He was right in judging the nation, yet not utterly destroying it. He was right in preserving the nation for the father’s sake. He was also righteous in opening the “door of faith unto the Gentiles” (Acts 15:18).

In his idle curiosity, man questions God, doubting His righteousness in all that He does. Thus some become “angry with God” when things do not go their way, or they are caused to pass through the sea of trouble and vexation like Job. Others simply ask “Why me?”, as though God had not been fair with them, or they deserved a better portion in this life.

We are living in a period of time when the wisdom of man has been unduly exalted—even to the point of questioning the authenticity of Scripture, as well as the righteousness of God. These are truly “perilous times” (2 Tim 3:1), for as soon as man begins to question God, he is immediately on shifting sand. One of the purposes of these lessons is to encourage wholesome and profitable thoughts concerning God and Christ. God is “King over all the earth,” “For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever” (Psa 47:2; Rom 11:36). Christ “is over all, God blessed for ever” (Rom 9:5).

SALVATION IS THE WORK OF GOD

Throughout this section of Scripture, the Spirit is confirming that, from beginning to end, salvation is the work of God. In the end, when everything has been made clear, ALL of the glory will go to the Lord. The vast body of the redeemed will shout insightfully, “Salvation and glory and honor and power belong to the Lord our God!” ^{NKJV} (Rev 19:1). And again, “Salvation belongs to our God who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb!” ^{NKJV} (Rev 7:10). Without a single dissenting voice, the saved of the earth will join in the Psalmic expression, “Not unto us, O LORD, not unto us, But to Your name give glory, Because of Your mercy, Because of Your truth” (Psa 115:1). That is something of what is being confirmed in the book of Romans.

Consider What God Has Made In Regards to Redemption

- God MADE us the righteousness of God in Christ (2 Cor 5:21).
- He MADE many to be righteous by the obedience of Christ (Rom 5:19).
- Christ has MADE us free (Gal 5:1).
- God has MADE us accepted in the Beloved (Eph 1:6).
- He MADE us sit together with Him in heavenly places (Eph 2:6).
- He MADE both Jew and Gentile one body (Eph 2:14).

- Peace was MADE through the blood of Christ’s cross (Col 1:20).
- God MADE Jesus to be wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption to us (1 Cor 1:30).
- We have been MADE right by the blood of Christ (Eph 2:13).
- We have been MADE heirs (Tit 3:7).
- God can MAKE all grace abound to us (2 Cor 9:8).
- God can MAKE us increase and abound in love toward one another (1 Thess 3:12).
- We have all been MADE to drink into one Spirit (1 Cor 12:13).
- Believers are a “new creation”—MADE by God (2 Cor 5:17; Gal 6:15; Eph 2:10; James 1:18).

Because this is an aspect of God that is little proclaimed, I feel compelled to further declare what God MAKES. There is a remarkable depth to this facet of Divine activity. I am not stating these things to merely affirm their possibility. Rather, I intend for this to confirm that God is able to fulfill His promises to Israel.

- God makes dumb, deaf, seeing, and blind (Ex 4:11).
- He makes alive (1 Sam 2:6).
- He makes poor and rich (1 Sam 2:7).
- He makes a person’s way perfect (2 Sam 22:33; Psa 18:32).
- He makes sore and binds up (Job 5:18).
- He makes the heart soft (Job 23:16).
- He makes the trusting soul to lie down in green pastures (Psa 23:2).

Things God Made or Caused

It is necessary to confirm that God can, and does, intrude into human affairs, causing things to happen. Man is not the governor of his own affairs, and his will is not invincible.

- God MADE everything Joseph did to prosper (Gen 39:3,23; 45:8,9).
- He MADE Israel dwell in booths when they came out of Egypt (Lev 23:43).
- He MADE Israel wander (Num 32:13).
- He MADE the heart of the king of Heshbon obstinate (Deut 2:30).
- He MADE Israel joyful (Ezra 6:22; Neh 12:43).
- He MADE man’s strength to fail (Lam 1:14).

- He MADE Israel's joyful shouting to cease (Isa 16:10).
- He MADE sighing to cease (Isa 21:2).
- He MADE Ezekiel's face strong, or determined (Ezek 3:8-9).
- He MADE David glad (Psa 92:4).
- He MADE David wiser than his counselors (Psa 119:98).
- He MADE Israel to err, and wander from His ways (Isa 63:17).

The purpose for this brief diversion is to anchor our faith in the God who promises, and cannot lie. The fulfillment of His commitments is something that brings great glory to Him. It is also within both His prerogatives and power to bring about that fulfillment in spite of seemingly impossible circumstances. The creation of the nation of Israel, and the birth of her ultimate offspring, Jesus, were impossible from the human point of view. Why should anyone think the fulfillment of His promises to them is any less possible? Is not the One who gave the promise capable of fulfilling it? Faith replies in the reasoning of our father Abraham: "And being fully persuaded that, what He had promised, He was able also to perform" (Rom 4:20).

Men are often prone to think of God's promises as though they were mere possibilities. There must be a deliverance from this mind-set if faith is ever to flourish. If we are made "partakers of the Divine nature" through the "exceeding great and precious promises of God" (2 Pet 1:4), the heart must be persuaded of the commitment of God to fulfill them. It is the prerogative of faith to do this.

Now, the Spirit will show us that God is absolutely righteous in all of His workings. Whatever He causes is RIGHT, whether it is cutting off branches, grafting in wild olive branches, or grafting in again the branches that were cut off. It is vital that we see this truth, in order that our faith might rest confidently in the One who has saved and keeps us.

IS GOD UNRIGHTEOUS?

" 9:14 What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? Certainly not! (God forbid! ^{KJV})." It is the manner of the Spirit to foresee fleshly doubts and answer them. These are always questions of doubt, erupting from hearts that are not pure or dominated by faith. They are not asked in a quest to find the truth, but are objections to the truth that has been declared. The Lord always answers such questions in a straightforward manner, and with minimal explanation. It is not God's manner to reason extensively with the flesh. The objections raised by the flesh are not valid. Therefore, they are always answered with affirmations, not reasoning.

IS THERE UNRIGHTEOUSNESS WITH GOD?

Flesh erroneously reasons, "There IS unrighteousness with God." While those precise words may not comprise the reasoning, yet they encapsulate how flesh thinks. The Spirit comes to grips with real issues, not the smokescreen reasoning of the carnal man. This is precisely why the flesh refuses to believe and obey God. It is why it is hostile toward the Creator. It does not believe God is right.

Jewish flesh reasons that God is not right in cutting off those who did not believe. Gentile flesh reasons that God is not right in keeping Israel beloved for the father's sake, or in grafting them in again. Both lines of thought are completely wrong. Contemporaries would chide God by saying He was not being "fair," or that the difficulties that came upon them did not make sense, or were even unjust.

To be even more specific, this rhetorical question is asked because of the strong statements the Spirit has made. Ponder some of them.

- Was God unrighteous for restricting

Critical aspects of God's character were introduced in chapter eight. They were associated with His great salvation, and were addressed to our faith. Divine foreknowledge and predestination were declared to be pillars that are prominent in extricating men from sin and conforming them to the image of God's Son

Divine discretion is a fact. Yet it cannot be received by the flesh, which insists on such things as the "unconditional love" of everyone, even though no such affirmation is found in Scripture. It balks at God choosing a people independently of their own worthiness or achievement. Flesh cannot abide a God who actually rejects others who, like many, have an appearance of being good and industrious--like Ishmael and Esau. But God makes such choices, and does so righteously.

the recognized seed of Abraham as those coming through Isaac? (9:7-8)

- Was God unrighteous in loving Jacob and hating Esau before they were born? (9:11a)
- Was God unrighteous in loving Jacob and hating Esau independently of any good or evil they had done? (9:11b)
- Was God unrighteous in determining that the elder Esau should serve the younger Jacob, overriding the rights of the firstborn? (9:12)

Critical aspects of God's character were introduced in chapter eight. They were associated with His great salvation, and were addressed to our faith. Divine foreknowledge and predestination were declared to be pillars that are prominent in extricating men from sin and conforming them to the image of God's Son (8:29-30). These qualities have also been declared as evident in the choice of the nation of Israel, and the persons of Isaac and Jacob. It is imperative that we acknowledge God was righteous in all of these things, making no attempt to explain them with the mind of the flesh.

I want to draw particular attention to the manner in which the Spirit answers the hypothetical question, "Is there unrighteousness with God?" This will not be the kind of answer a worldly philosopher would want. Nor, indeed, will it satisfy the idle curiosity of the religious "scholar." Nevertheless, this is Divine reasoning, and we do well to adapt our thinking to it.

GOD FORBID!

The KJV and ASV versions reads "God forbid," which is the expression of the sense of the text rather than a literal translation. Sophists object to the use of this expression, saying it is not a proper translation. They allow for the sense of words elsewhere, but not here.

The words from which this expression is translated are μη γένοιτο. This phrase is used fifteen times in the New Testament Scriptures, and is always an extremely strong expression (Lk 20:16; Rom 3:4,6, 31; 6:2,15; 7:7,13; 9:14; 11:1,11; 1 Cor 6:15; Gal 2:17; 3:21; 6:14). It is translated in a variety of ways.

"Certainly not,"^{NKJV} "May it never be,"^{NASB} "Not at all,"^{NIV} "By no means,"^{NRSV} "Out of the question,"^{NJB} and "Of course not."^{NAB}

It is an expression of strong aversion to the very thought that is suggested. The manner is an imagination to be cast down (2 Cor 10:5-6). This is precisely what the following verses will do. They will throw the notion that God is unrighteous down to the ground, trampling it under the feet of Divine reasoning.

This will not be the kind of answer a worldly philosopher would want. Nor, indeed, will it satisfy the idle curiosity of the religious "scholar." Nevertheless, this is Divine reasoning, and we do well to adapt our thinking to it.

words "God forbid" would be equivalent to saying, "May the Lord stop such a thought from entering my mind!" It expresses the spirit of the text, which is being uttered before the Almighty God, as well as unto finite man. It is best not to attempt to explain the text academically, or from a mere linguistic point of view. It is too strong of an expression to take that approach. The idea is that God has made no provision whatsoever to entertain such a thought. It is also that the man of God is repulsed by the very idea, and calls upon the Lord to protect him from such an imagination.

Men are simply not allowed to entertain questions about whether or not God is right. He IS righteous in all of His doings, and there is to be no question about it – particularly from those who "have sinned and come short of His glory" (3:23). The idea that it is possible for God to choose or work in an unrighteous

Whether it is Naaman questioning the propriety of dipping seven times in the River Jordan (2 Kgs 5:10-12), or king Saul questioning the wisdom of totally destroying the Amalekites (1 Sam 15:14-19), questioning the decrees and purposes of God is never right. It will not be tolerated by the all-wise God!

The people of God must exercise themselves to adopt a view of God and Scripture that yields to faith, not to reason. Although men are fond of theological views that promote questions, no such encouragement is found in the Word of God. Scripture promotes faith, for "faith cometh by hearing," not reasoning (Rom 10:17). If this seems strong, it will shortly appear to be extremely mild in the blazing glory of God's answer. He will not reason with flesh, but will strongly affirm the way things really are. We will be called to believe God and not question Him or doubt His righteousness.

MERCY IS GIVEN BY DIVINE DISCRETION

¹⁵ For He says to Moses, "I will have mercy on whomever I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whomever I will have compassion."

Here is a stirring challenge to those who insist on passing the Word of God through humanly devised filters, or hermeneutics. I realize it is not popular to speak in this manner, and yet it is necessary to do so. In the past few decades, there has been a remarkable trend toward human philosophizing in religion. The inclination has always been there, but never in such proportions as it has been since knowledge has been deified in the professed church.

The Spirit will simply affirm the truth—truth that has been asserted by God Himself. He will offer no extended rationale for the statement as men desire, but will declare this is what God does. It is the business of men to bring their thinking into accord with this affirmation. What is more, until they do, they are wrong, and nothing will change that except to acknowledge that God is right in what He does. It is neither right nor safe to think in contradiction of God.

The statement is taken from Exodus 33:19, where God Almighty is showing His glory—His real Person—to Moses, the servant of God. In those days, this was not something everyone heard. But in our day, it is being published throughout the world in Paul’s exposition of the Gospel of Christ. Moses had asked the Lord, “Show me Thy glory.” Here was God’s response. “I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will show mercy on whom I will show mercy.”

Notice, God is exposing Moses to His “goodness,” and is proclaiming His own Divine character—His “name.” This is not a novel or irrelevant view, but an essential one. In the very revelation given to Moses, Divine discretion was used. The goodness of the Lord, together with a declaration of His nature, was vouchsafed to Moses alone. God was not doing this merely because Moses asked, but because He willed to do so—God WANTED to do this.

The reading of the text appears clumsy, yet the meaning will come home to your heart. The idea expressed is “I will have mercy on whomever I will [to have] mercy.” A few versions pick up on this thought. “I will show mercy to whom I will, I will take pity on whom I will.”^{NAB} “I will show mercy to anyone I choose, and I will show compassion to anyone I choose.”^{NLT} Whoever receives mercy from God receives it because He wills to show them mercy. Whoever receives compassion from God receives it because He wills to show it to them. He has not been motivated by their need of mercy and compassion, nor because they have sought it from Him. He has been moved by His own beneficent heart.

God chose Israel because He wanted to! He loves them for the fathers’ sakes because He wants to. He chose Isaac because He wanted to! He loved Jacob because He wanted to! If that is not enough for a person, then that person requires too much. It is unwise, indeed, to refuse God the right to do what He wants.

This answer is much like the one given in one of our Lord’s matchless parables. Declaring the Kingdom of God to be like a householder, or landowner, He spoke of that householder hiring groups of laborers throughout the day. He hired some “early in the morning,” some at “the third hour,” some at the “sixth and ninth hour,” and some at the “eleventh hour” (6:00 AM, 9:00 AM, 12:00 PM, 3:00 PM, and 5:00 PM). At the conclusion of the day, “the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the laborers, and give them their hire, agree with me for a penny? Take that thine is, and go thy way: I will give unto this last, even as unto thee. Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evil, because I am good?” (Matt 20:1-16). The response reads this way in the NIV. “I want to give the man who was hired last the same as I gave you. Don’t I have the right to do what I want with my own money? Or are you envious because I am generous?” Remember, Jesus is showing us the manner of the Kingdom! He is showing us the Father and His will.

Care must be taken when dealing with this facet of the Divine nature. There must be no provision for the entrance of doubt or unbelief. Nor, indeed, can we allow the tenderhearted to be crushed or bruised. God is not only righteous, He is also good.

The householder declared that his will and nature fully justified what he did. Thus, no fault could be found with it. Besides this, the laborers agreed to work for the wage, and it was none of their affair what other laborers received. That was given purely at the discretion of himself. It was not open for discussion. Further, his wages were an expression of goodness, not injustice.

Thus, no Gentile can raise an objection because mercy is still held out to the Jews. God does what He desires, and that should be good enough for us. We have agreed to receive His salvation, and have absolutely no input on what He desires for others – particularly “the Israelites,” Paul’s kinsmen according to the flesh. Recognizing this circumstance, Paul simply embraced the mind of the Lord concerning the Jews, refusing to question Divine preferences.

NOT A COLD DOCTRINE

Care must be taken when dealing with this facet of the Divine nature. There must be no provision for the entrance of doubt or unbelief. Nor, indeed, can we allow the tenderhearted to be crushed or bruised. God is not only righteous, He is also good. The very fact that He chooses to whom He will show mercy and compassion is an expression of His goodness. To confirm this, the Lord has condescended to reveal to the sons of men those to whom He wills to show mercy and compassion. Ponder what He says.

beginning from the last unto the first.” Beginning at the last and ending with the first, he gave every laborer an identical wage: “a penny,” or “a denarius.”^{NKJV}

The workers had not worked identical hours. Some worked twelve hours, others, nine, others, six, others three, and some only one hour. Therefore, the ones working longer remonstrated at the wages they received. It is written, “they murmured against the goodman of the house, Saying, These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day.” I should suppose their objection would be acknowledged as proper by most any labor consultant. But that is not a proper view.

Remembering that this is our Lord’s depiction of the Kingdom of God, consider the answer given to the complainers. “But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong: didst not thou

☐ “ . . . to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word" (Isa 66:2).

- "The LORD is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart; and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit" (Psa 34:18).
- "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise" (Psa 51:17).
- "Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy" (Matt 5:7).

It simply is not possible to be in any of the above categories and God NOT desire to show you mercy and compassion. He is faithful to His Person and Word.

Thus, we will not stumble at what God has said about Himself showing mercy to those He wills. That is His prerogative, and we have no right to question it. That circumstance, however, brings no disadvantage to anyone who desires mercy and seeks to find grace to help in the time of need (Heb 4:15-16).

The Manner of God's Answer

I cannot leave this point without again drawing your attention to the way in which God answers the objections of the flesh. He appeals to His nature and will, not to human reason. He does not dialog with us in the flesh, thereby leaving us depending on natural resources. In so doing, faith is being promoted. He is leading us to trust Him, knowing He cannot do what is wrong, or conduct Himself unrighteously.

He is also impressing upon us the inferiority and unacceptability of human reasoning. If we do not believe His words, they will confuse us. As much as lies within us, we must labor to promote these vital perceptions in our preaching and teaching, never gravitating to the flesh. Whenever possible, we must extend ourselves to not leave men in the flesh, but in the Spirit.

WILL AND EFFORT ARE NOT THE FOUNDATION

¹⁶ So then it is not of him who wills, nor of him who runs, but of God who shows mercy.

As we proceed through this passage, it will become very apparent to you that the Spirit is eager to justify God. The one who shows mercy." ^{NRSV} "It does not, therefore, depend on man's desire or effort, but on God's mercy." ^{NIB} "So then it does not depend on the man who wills or the man who runs, but on God who has mercy." ^{NAU} "So then, it is not by the desire or by the attempt of man, but by the mercy of God."

academic level, which is inferior. Even though the Spirit knows the response of flesh to such a teaching, He fairly shouts it out to us, showing that no man can stand before the God of heaven upon the basis of merit.

A POINT OF CLARITY

Before I go further with this matter, allow me to deal with a critical point. It is possible that a person might consider this statement either irrelevant, or beyond any possible comprehension. Such a person might reason, "If this is the case, then what point is there to seeking the Lord, or extending myself to please Him? If receiving mercy all depends upon what God desires, and has nothing to do with my desire or effort, I see no point to being fervent in my quest to lay hold on eternal life."

This is a completely erroneous way of reasoning, and has been provoked by considering the wrong things. Ponder the text while recognizing that in ourselves, that is in our flesh, nothing good resides (7:18). Consider how frail you really are, so that you cannot do the things you desire, but find another law within you, warring against the law of your mind (7:18,23). If these things be true, and they surely are, is it not good to know that receiving the mercy of God is based upon God's desire and not your performance? The very concept of salvation is based upon our helplessness and hopelessness. That is why we need a Savior.

This verse is saying the REASON for our salvation is found in God who has shown us mercy. It cannot be traced to our worthiness. It cannot even be traced to our willingness, or to our effort. Those things are not foundations of salvation, for they are neither consistent nor flawless.

hears what the Spirit is saying to the churches will conclude that "all things are of God" (2 Cor 5:18; Rom 11:36), and that God is righteous in all that He does. This verse particularly confirms this to be the case.

Other versions read, "So then it does not depend on the man who wills or the man who runs, but on God who has mercy." ^{NASB} "It does not, therefore, depend on man's desire or effort, but on God's mercy." ^{NIV} "So it depends not on human will or exertion, but on God who ^{BBE} "So it depends not upon a person's will or exertion, but upon God, who shows mercy." ^{NAB} "So receiving God's promise is not up to us. We can't get it by choosing it or working hard for it. God will show mercy to anyone he chooses." ^{NLT} "So it is not a matter of what any person wants or what any person does, but only of God having mercy." ^{NJB}

I have taken the time to list the various translations of this verse to confirm there is no question concerning the wording of the text, even on an

This verse is saying the REASON for our salvation is found in God who has shown us mercy. It cannot be traced to our worthiness. It cannot even be traced to our willingness, or to our effort. Those things are not foundations of salvation, for they are neither consistent nor flawless. To be sure, your will is involved, as well as your effort, but not on the foundational level. They are not what drives the Kingdom of God.

MANY HAVE DESIRED

Jesus once spoke of some noble souls who fervently desired to see the things made known in Himself. “For verily I say unto you, That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them” (Matt 13:17). These were not the dregs of the human race. They were “prophets and righteous men.” If human will was sufficient to bring the blessing, they would surely have seen Christ’s day. If the effort of men could bring the blessing, these righteous men would have obtained it. However, they lived in spiritually primitive times that had not yet been fully cultivated for the blessing. Thus, they did not see what they desired while they remained in this world.

God’s mercy did not exclude them, of that you may be sure. We will see them in the glorified state (Lk 13:28-30). Christ’s atoning death reached backward, making them fully acceptable before God.

When God willed to bestow the mercy and compassion experienced in salvation, it came to a “sinful woman” (Lk 7:37-48), a lowly publican (Lk 19:5-9), and even “publicans and harlots” (Matt 21:31). I understand, it also came to godly Simeon, Anna, and Nathaniel. But the point of our text is that it was driven by God’s desire. That is what compelled Him to do what He did. Further, it was righteous, and will be openly shown to be so in the day of judgment. At that time, there will be no argument about the reason for our salvation.

THE ACCEPTABLE YEAR

The glory of our time is that this is “the acceptable year of the Lord.” This is the time when the door of salvation has been thrown open, and the mighty God, in strict accord with His own will, has declared “Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely” (Rev 22:17). Let no one stand in fear and doubt, wondering whether God desires to show mercy and compassion to them! The Gospel announces this is the time He is receiving all who come to Him.

When Jesus began preaching, He returned to His home town, choosing to throw open the door of salvation in a local synagogue. On that day, He read from the book of Isaiah. “The Spirit of the LORD is upon Me, Because He has anointed Me To preach the gospel to the poor; He has sent Me to heal the brokenhearted, To proclaim liberty to the captives And recovery of sight to the blind, To set at liberty those who are oppressed; to proclaim the acceptable year of the LORD.” Having closed the book, he returned it to the synagogue attendant, and sat down. With the eyes of everyone in the synagogue riveted upon Him, He boldly announced, “Today this Scripture is fulfilled in your hearing” (Lk 4:18-21). He had unveiled the heart of God! He revealed what God wanted to do.

Since the death, resurrection, and enthronement of Jesus, the desire of God to show mercy and compassion has been preached throughout the world. It is an honest and truthful message that only requires faith to be experienced.

THE DOOR WILL CLOSE

There will come a time when this wonderful door will close. Then, if men have not availed themselves of the very real invitation, it will be confirmed to them that man’s will and man’s effort cannot open it. In his parable of the ten virgins, Jesus referred to His own return. It will be a time when some who were invited, and who even made some cursory preparations, will be excluded. Following His return, Jesus said “the door was shut.” When those who spurned His revealed will came, “saying, Lord, Lord, open to us,” they were told, “I know you not” (Matt 25:1-12).

They wanted to come in, but could not. It is “not of him that willeth.” They extended effort to go to the door, but it was too late. “It is not of him that runneth.” They learned too late, that salvation is “of the Lord.” When He opens the door of salvation, no one can shut it. And, when it is finally shut, no one will be able to open it.

It is no wonder the Spirit admonishes us, “See that you do not refuse Him who speaks. For if they did not escape who refused Him who spoke on earth, much more shall we not escape if we turn away from Him who speaks from heaven, whose voice then shook the earth; but now He has promised, saying, ‘Yet once more I shake not only the earth, but also heaven.’ Now this, ‘Yet once more,’ indicates the removal of those things that are being shaken, as of things that are made, that the things which cannot be shaken may remain. Therefore, since we are receiving a kingdom which cannot be shaken, let us have grace, by which we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear. For our God is a consuming fire” (Heb 12:25-29). Our solemn responsibility is to NOT spurn the words of the Savior who speaks from heaven. To do so will eventuate in sure condemnation.

Our text, then, is designed to provoke us to a firm and unwavering reliance upon, and attentiveness to, the Lord Jesus. Our sensitivity to Him must be raised. We might summarize it this way.

- Rely completely upon the Lord to save you. Do not place confidence in - yourself.

- Give the glory to the Lord for every aspect of your salvation.
 - Avail yourself fully of the “acceptable year”—the time of Divine acceptance, that was announced by Jesus, and which He is now fulfilling.

Because this passage of Scripture is generally neglected, it has a strange sound to many. It also deals with profound Kingdom realities that are not being declared with power and consistency. For this reason many good and sincere believers are intimidated by these things, thus not regarding them as necessary or important. I encourage you to fight against such tendencies. Like all Scripture, these things have been written for our “learning,” and are “profitable” for things that equip you for serving God in your life (Rom 15:4; 2 Tim 3:16-17).

PHARAOH WAS RAISED UP BY GOD

“¹⁷ For the Scripture says to Pharaoh, “For this very purpose I have raised you up, that I may show My power in you, and that My name may be declared in all the earth.”¹⁸ Therefore He has mercy on whom He wills, and whom He wills He hardens.”

Here we come to a text that is most difficult for the flesh. It will not fit into a convenient theology that emphasizes man’s will. Of course, one of the aspects of salvation that must not be overlooked, particularly when considering the Jews, is that the natural desires of men actually excluded them from Divine acceptance. The very presence of a desire for what God offers confirms the presence of His power. As the 110th Psalm prophesied, which is clearly a Messianic Psalm, “Thy people will volunteer freely in the day of Thy power”^{NASB} (v 3).

Keep in your mind that the Spirit is affirming realities that show God is righteous, and that there is no unrighteousness with Him. If the reasoning appears too difficult, then you must get into the realm from which it is spoken—the “heavenly places.” Faith will be able to receive this, even though your understanding lags behind, unable for the moment to see the sense of it all. However, faith will not hold this proclamation long until your understanding will no longer be “unfruitful” (1 Cor 14:14).

I want to again emphasis that the Spirit is showing us God is not unrighteous in any of His doings. He will now turn our attention to a key despot in Scripture. He will account for the presence of this despot, and the purpose that he served. You may or may not agree with what is said, but it is the truth, and is to be acknowledged by you.

FOUNDED UPON SCRIPTURE

The Holy Spirit sends us straight to Scripture to confirm there is no unrighteousness with God: “For the Scripture says . . .”.

- Jesus spoke in the same manner. “He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water” (John 7:39).
- When speaking of Judas, He said, “I speak not of you all: I know whom I have chosen: but that the Scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me . . . and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the Scripture might be fulfilled” (John 13:18).
- Earlier in Romans, Paul reasoned, “For what saith the Scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness” (Rom 4:3).
- Confirming the value of faith, it is written, “For the Scripture saith, Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed” (Rom 10:11).
- The Gospel itself is confirmed by Scripture. “And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed” (Gal 3:8).
- The guilt of humanity and the appointed means to salvation are declared by Scripture. “But the Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe” (Gal 3:22).

- The distinction of the children of promise from the children of Law is confirmed by Scripture. “Nevertheless what saith the Scripture ? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman. So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free” (Gal 4:30).

Of course, one of the aspects of salvation that must not be overlooked, particularly when considering the Jews, is that the natural desires of men actually excluded them from Divine acceptance.

Notice that in these texts “Scripture” is used in the singular. This is more than a reference to a specific text of Scripture. It speaks of a unified body of articulated truth that is intended to instruct the people of God. Scripture, in this case, is a Divinely orchestrated history of the purpose of God and its outworking among men. It stands for the expression of the mind of God, and is a solid foundation for both faith and hope. There is no chance that it is not true and righteous.

THE PERSON OF PHARAOH

“For the Scripture saith unto Pharaoh.”

Pharaoh is one of the principle characters of Scripture. Technically, the term “Pharaoh” is a general word denoting an Egyptian king. Abram confronted a “Pharaoh” in his trip from Ur to Canaan (Gen 12:15-18). Joseph served Potiphar, who was an officer of another Pharaoh (Gen 39:1). Joseph later became ruler of Egypt, second only to that Pharaoh (Gen 41:39-41). Moses was born during the reign of a Pharaoh (Ex 1:22-2:5).

Pharaoh remonstrated, saying he did not know the Lord, and would not let the people go (Ex 5:1-2). The following events encapsulate the activity of this Pharaoh.

- ❑ Following Moses’ order to let the people go, he increased their burden, making them gather their own straw for brick making (Ex 5:6-8).
- ❑ The people were scattered throughout the land of Egypt to gather straw (5:12).

The hard bondage brought on by this Pharaoh caused Israel to cry out in sorrow, and God heard them. The longevity of their tenure in Egypt allowed for a supernatural expansion of their numbers, until they even posed a threat to the Egyptians

The Pharaoh referenced by our text is the one confronted by Moses when the time came for God to deliver Israel from Egypt. Originally, the Israelites went into Egypt seventy strong. They were treated with respect, given a portion of the land to dwell in, and fared very well. However, “when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt, till another king arose, which knew not Joseph” (Acts 7:17-18). That Pharaoh turned against Israel, forcing them to work with hard rigor, and enslaving them to build his treasure cities, “Pithom and Raamses” (Ex 1:11).

The hard bondage brought on by this Pharaoh caused Israel to cry out in sorrow, and God heard them. The longevity of their tenure in Egypt allowed for a supernatural expansion of their numbers, until they even posed a threat to the Egyptians (Ex 1:7,12,20).

At the right time, God called Moses, who had been raised in Egypt, yet had been keeping his father-in-law’s sheep on the back side of the desert (Ex 3:1-15). He was to appear before Pharaoh and command him in the name of the Lord, “Let my people go, that they may hold a feast unto me in the wilderness.”

- ❑ The Lord sent Moses back to Pharaoh, telling Moses he would now see what He would do Pharaoh (6:1). God declared He would harden Pharaoh’s heart and multiply His signs and wonders in Egypt (7:1-3).
- ❑ When Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh and it became a snake, Pharaoh called for his magicians, who did the same with their rods. When Aaron’s rod swallowed their rods, God “hardened Pharaoh’s heart” and he refused to listen to Moses and Aaron (7:10-14).
- ❑ In the first plague, Aaron stretched his rod over the waters of Egypt and they became blood. After the magicians of Egypt did the same with their enchantments “Pharaoh’s heart was hardened,” and he did not listen to Moses and Aaron (7:15-22). Pharaoh returned to his house, unmoved by what he saw (7:23).
- ❑ In the second plague, Aaron stretched his rod over the waters of Egypt and frogs came out of them, covering the land of Egypt. When the Egyptian magicians did the same, Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, asking them to entreat the Lord for him, to take away the frogs. Moses did this, the Lord hearkened, and the frogs died out in the houses, villages, and fields. When Pharaoh saw there was relief “he hardened his heart,” refusing to listen to Moses and Aaron (8:1-15).

- ❑ In the third plague Aaron stretched out his rod, striking the dust of the earth. The dust became lice throughout the land of Egypt, covering both man and beast. The Egyptian magicians were unable to duplicate this feat, and were never again able to perform their arts as in the first two plagues. They told Pharaoh, “This is the finger of God!” Nevertheless, “Pharaoh’s heart grew hard, and he did not heed them, just as the LORD had said” (8:16-19).
- ❑ Early the next morning, God told Moses to stand before Pharaoh and demand, “Let my people go, that they may serve me.” If he refused, the plague of flies would come. He refused. (8:20).
- ❑ In the fourth plague, swarms of flies came upon the people, filled their houses, and were upon the ground. In the plague, the land of Goshen, where Israel dwelt, was exempted. No flies were there, as God made a distinction between His people and the Egyptians. Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron saying, “Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land [of Egypt].” Moses refused, saying they had to go three days journey from the wicked land of Egypt before they could make sacrifice to God. Pharaoh said he would let them go, but they could “not go very far away.” He begged that they entreat God for him, and Moses said they would. God heard Moses, removing the flies, so that “there remained not one.” Nevertheless, “Pharaoh hardened his heart at this time also, neither would he let the people go” (8:21-32).
- ❑ Again, the Lord sent Moses and Aaron to Pharaoh, telling him to let the people go. If he refused, God would send a terrible plague upon all the livestock of Egypt. Pharaoh refused (9:1-5).
- ❑ In the fifth plague a grievous pestilence was sent upon all the cattle of Egypt—horses, asses, camels, oxen, and sheep. Israel’s area (Goshen) was again exempted. “All the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.”

Pharaoh sent to see the condition of Israel's cattle, and "there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead." At that time, "the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, and he did not let the people go" (9:6-7).

- In the sixth plague, Moses took ashes from a furnace (soot), and threw it into the sky before the face of Pharaoh. It became a fine dust that fell upon both man and beast throughout the land. As it fell upon man and beast, festering boils broke out upon them. The magicians could not stand before Moses because of the boils, for they were upon them as well as the other Egyptians. At that time *"the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken unto Moses" (9:8-12).
- At this time, the Lord sent a special rebuke to Pharaoh for His obstinance. Our text is found in this rebuke. "Then the LORD said to Moses, 'Rise early in the morning and stand before Pharaoh, and say to him, Thus says the LORD God of the Hebrews: Let My people go, that they may serve Me, for at this time I will send all My plagues to your very heart, and on your servants and on your people, that you may know that there is none like Me in all the earth. Now if I had stretched out My hand and struck you and your people with pestilence, then you would have been cut off from the earth. But indeed for this purpose I have raised you up, that I may show My power in you, and that My name may be declared in all the earth. As yet you exalt yourself against My people in that you will not let them go"^{NKJB} (9:13-17).
- In the seventh plague the Lord brought a grievous hail upon Egypt, such as had never before been experienced. Having mercy upon them, God told the Egyptians to gather everything they had in the field, for it would die from the hail if it remained there. Those who feared God in Pharaoh's house got their servants and cattle out of the fields as told. When the hail came, it was mingled with fire. It struck every man, beast, and herb of the field, and "broke every tree." This time Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, making a startling confession. "I have sinned this time: the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked." He begged Moses and Aaron to entreat the Lord for him, "that there be no more mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer." Moses said he would do this, causing the thunder and hail to cease, that Pharaoh would know the earth was the Lord's. Yet, Moses added, "But as for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God." It is then noted that only the flax and barley had been destroyed in the plague of hail. The wheat and rye remained, for they were not yet fully grown. When Pharaoh saw that the thunder and hail had ceased, "he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants. And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go; as the LORD had spoken by Moses" (9:18-34).

- God then told Moses to go in before Pharaoh, "for I have hardened his heart and the hearts of his servants, that I may show these signs of Mine before him, and that you may tell in the hearing of your son and your son's son the mighty things I have done in Egypt, and My signs which I have done among them, that you may know that I am the LORD." He was to rebuke Pharaoh saying, "Thus says the LORD God of the Hebrews: 'How long will you refuse to humble yourself before Me? Let My people go, that they may serve Me. Or else, if you refuse to let My people go, behold, tomorrow I will bring locusts into your territory." The locusts would cover the earth so that it could not even be seen. They would eat every plant that remained, and every tree of the field. They would fill the houses of every one in Egypt, including Pharaoh. When Moses left, Pharaoh's servants said to him, "How long shall this man be a snare to us? Let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God. Do you not yet know that Egypt is destroyed?" Pharaoh then called for Moses and Aaron saying, "Go, serve the LORD your God. Who are the ones that are going?" Moses informed him all would be going, old and young, sons and daughters, flocks and herds. Pharaoh refused to meet the terms, saying only the men could go. Moses and Aaron were then driven from his presence (10:1-8).

- In the eighth plague the Lord brought an east wind upon the land. It brought locusts who went all over the land of Egypt, resting on all the territory of Egypt. They were severe, and were a unique kind of locust that had never before, nor since, existed. They covered the land and consumed all remaining vegetation. Pharaoh was so affected he called for Moses and Aaron in haste, saying, "I have sinned against the LORD your God and against you. Now therefore, please forgive my sin only this once, and entreat the LORD your God, that He may take away from me this death only." Moses did entreat the Lord, the Lord brought in a west wind, and it carried all of the locusts out of Egypt, depositing them in the sea. Not one locust remained in Egypt. The Scripture then says, "But the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he did not let the children of Israel go" (10:9-20).
- In the ninth plague, Moses stretched his hand toward heaven "that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, darkness which may even be felt." It was a "thick darkness," lasting for three days. The Egyptians could not see each other, and no one rose from their place for three days. During this plague "all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings." Pharaoh finally called for Moses and Aaron pleading, "Go, serve the LORD; only let your flocks and your herds be kept back. Let your little ones also go with you." Moses refused, saying the livestock had to go with them, and "not a hoof shall be left behind." Even though Pharaoh appeared to be a little sensitive, it is written, "But the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go." The extent of that hardening is seen in Pharaoh's response. "Then Pharaoh said to him, 'Get away from me! Take heed to yourself and see my face no more! For in the day you see my face you shall die!'" Moses confirmed Pharaoh's doom when he said, "You have spoken well. I will never see your face again" (10:21-29).
- In the tenth plague, the Lord made preparation by having all of the people to ask their Egyptian neighbors for articles of gold and silver. He then gave the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians. The Scriptures tell us the Egyptians gave the Israelites what they asked, and they “spoiled the Egyptians” (Ex 12:36). The Passover was instituted that night, and was the means of preserving the firstborn of every Israelite family. At midnight, the Lord moved through the land killing the firstborn in every Egyptian house, and of the animals as well. A great cry of despair rose from Egypt, yet not even a dog moved his tongue against an Israelite. When the death of the firstborn occurred, Pharaoh called Moses and Aaron at night saying, “Rise, go out from among my people, both you and the children of Israel. And go, serve the LORD as you have said. Also take your flocks and your herds, as you have said, and be gone; and bless me also.”

□ Following the exodus of the Israelites, the hearts of Pharaoh and the people were turned against Israel. Believing they had done the wrong thing, Pharaoh “made ready his chariot and took his people with him. Also, he took six hundred choice chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt with captains over every one of them. And the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued the children of Israel; and the children of Israel went out with boldness” (14:6-8).

□ As Israel stood before the Red Sea, fearful of the pursuing Egyptians, God told them He would fight for them. They were not to fear. He would cause them to walk through the Red sea. The Lord then said, “And I indeed will harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them. So I will gain honor over Pharaoh and over all his army, his chariots, and his horsemen” (14:9-17).

□ Stubbornly, the Egyptians pursued the Israelites, attempting to also pass through the sea on dry ground. The Lord looked down upon them through the pillar of fire and cloud, and “He troubled the army of the Egyptians.” Still, they moved forward. He even took the wheels off of their chariots, yet they drove on, even though they did so with great “difficulty.” Then, when they were all in the midst of the Red Sea, the Lord commanded Moses to stretch his hand over the sea, causing the waters to return to their full depth. “Then the waters returned and covered the chariots, the horsemen, and all the army of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them. Not so much as one of them remained” (14:18-28).

God Hardened His Heart

detail. It is as though the Lord has extended Himself to make this point, and it is important that we get it.

In the sections just listed, there are fourteen references to Pharaoh’s heart being hardened. Eleven of them declare it was something done TO Pharaoh. These include “God hardened,” “was hardened,” “grew hard,” “the Lord hardened,” “I have hardened,” and “I indeed will harden.” The first two references to the hardening of Pharaoh’s heart refer to the Lord. Three references declare Pharaoh did it himself.

When God called Moses, He told him of the coming obstinance of Pharaoh. He did NOT say Pharaoh would harden his heart. Rather, He declared, “I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go” (Ex 4:21; 7:3). These statements were both made in advance of the actual hardening – yet they make no reference to Pharaoh hardening his heart himself. In fact, the words “he will harden his heart” and “Pharaoh will harden his heart” are not even found in the Bible. The words “will harden” occur only four times in any version of standard Scripture (Ex 4:21; 7:3; 14:4,17, KJV, NKJV, ASV, NASB, NIV, RSV, NRSV). In every case they refer to Pharaoh and his relation to Israel’s deliverance from Egypt. In every case, it is God who did it.

I say this because some take the position that God hardened Pharaoh’s heart because he had first done so. That is, God ratified what Pharaoh himself had done, casting it, as it were, in stone. I myself once embraced this view, thinking it would present God in a more just and righteous stance. However, there is absolutely nothing in Scripture to support this view. In fact, it completely neutralizes the truth being taught in this text. God said He was going to harden Pharaoh’s heart. The first two references to his hardened heart credit it to God. The final observation of the chain of events credit it to God.

It is clear that Pharaoh’s action was the result of God’s work, not Pharaoh’s. Further, there is no reasonable explanation for Pharaoh’s reaction to God’s word and judgments apart from God hardening his heart. There is no form of reason that can explain his obstinance. Of course, this is the very point of the text, and the Spirit will affirm the whole history of Pharaoh was intentional, orchestrated by God Himself. God DID harden Pharaoh’s heart. He not only affirms it, but now erects teaching upon that fact. I understand this raises questions in the minds of some. However, the doctrine is not intended to raise questions, but trust. We do well to allow it to do so.

GOD RAISED PHARAOH UP

“Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up.” The Scriptures, when believed, will leave us trusting in a God whose judgments are “unsearchable,” and ways are “past finding out” (Rom 11:33). The god who fits neatly into human logic and theological systems is not the true God.

The only explanation for the appearance of Pharaoh is God! God declares "I RAISED YOU UP!" He did not say "I used you," but "I raised you up." Pharaoh's presence in history is owing to a Divine purpose.

For whatever it is worth, the Greek word from which "raised" is translated is ἐξήγειρά. Its meaning is "cause to appear in history, call, into being, or raise up." In his Word Studies, Vincent says of the use of this word in our text, "Hebrew, caused thee to stand. Sept., διετηρήθης thou wast preserved alive. Only once elsewhere in the New Testament, 1 Corinthians 6:14, of raising from the dead. The meaning here is general, allowed thee to appear; brought, thee forward on the stage of events, as Zechariah 11:16. So the simple verb in Matthew 11:11; John 7:52. Other explanations are, preserved thee alive, as Sept., excited thee to opposition, as Habakkuk 1:6; created thee." Thayer, a renown Greek lexographer, says of the use of this word in Romans 9:17, "to rouse up, stir up, incite to resistance." He also says of some of its historical usage, "I have raised thee up into life, caused thee to exist, or I have raised thee to a public position, set thee up as a king."^{Thayers Greek-English Lexicon}

These language references are not intended to carry the weight of Scripture. Nor, indeed, are they to be viewed as proofs of the truth of Scripture. I give them only to show that the statement made in our text is clear from any point of view. There may be a wide divergence of opinion on the implications of this text, but there cannot be on the statement of the text itself. Further, our faith must rest upon statement, not implication; upon affirmation, not explanation.

The appearance of Pharaoh is for evil, is as the appearance of Melchizedec was for good (Gen 14:18; Psa 110:4; Heb 5:6,10; 6:20; 7:110-21). Both individuals can only be accounted for in the purpose of God. Neither of them have any significance whatsoever outside of that Divine purpose.

God Has Raised Up People

The notion of God raising up people is not a strange one for those familiar with Scripture. God is said to have "raised up judges" (Judges 2:16), "a deliverer to the children of Israel" (Othniel, Judges 3:9), "David" (2 Sam 23:1), and "one from the North" (Isa 41:25), etc. God raised up Cyrus, stirred up his spirit, gave him all the kingdoms of the earth, and charged him with building the temple (2 Chron 36:22-23). John the Baptist is described as "a man sent from God, whose name was John" (John 1:6). God stirred up Hadad the Edomite to be an adversary to Solomon (1 Kgs 11:14). It should not surprise us that God is said to have raised someone up—causing them to appear on the trestle board of eternal purpose.

If we have difficulties correlating this with other affirmations of Scripture, that

If we have difficulties correlating this with other affirmations of Scripture, that difficulty does not justify neutralizing the text. No person is right in forcing the text to mean something other than what God said. Nor, indeed, can we simply ignore the text, hoping that sometime in the future we may be able to see it more clearly.

difficulty does not justify neutralizing the text. No person is right in forcing the text to mean something other than what God said. Nor, indeed, can we simply ignore the text, hoping that sometime in the future we may be able to see it more clearly. Because Divine instruction and argument is based upon this text, we must believe it, even though we cannot understand it to our own satisfaction. If we fail to do this, the teaching that follows at once becomes insignificant.

The Spirit is not presenting us with some novel and inconsequential doctrine. If you are tempted to imagine this has nothing to do with salvation, and is therefore unimportant, ponder that the Spirit is confirming there is no unrighteousness with God. It is not possible for anything to be more closely associated with our salvation than God's righteousness.

THE DIVINE INTENTION

"Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might show my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth." You may not think that is upright, but the Spirit is, by this very statement, confirming that God IS righteous. The extent to which God's purpose is being served by people may not be known, but that HIS purpose IS being served, even by despots, MUST be known!

In this matter, it is confirmed that God alone "is in the heavens: He hath done whatsoever He hath pleased" (Psa 115:3). Again it is written, "Whatsoever the LORD pleased, that did He in heaven, and in earth, in the seas, and all deep places" (Psa 135:6).

How appropriate that God has thus revealed Himself. "The LORD maketh poor, and maketh rich: He bringeth low, and lifteth up. He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory: for the pillars of the earth are the Lord's, and He hath set the world upon them" (1 Sam 2:7-8). When God brought the Assyrians to judge Judah, it appeared as though they were operating in their own strength, and according to their own purpose. Yet God said of them, "O Assyrian, the rod of Mine anger, and the staff in their hand is Mine indignation" (Isa 10:5). They were raised up!

In the case of Pharaoh, the objective was not the same as with the Assyrians, but it was still God's objective. Our text shows that purpose to be twofold.

That I Might Show My Power In Thee

Other translations read, "to demonstrate My power in you,"^{NASB} "that I might display my power in you,"^{NIV} "so that I might make my power seen in you."^{BBE}

Power in Deliverance. In Pharaoh, God made known that the opposition of the greatest ruler upon earth could not stop Him from delivering His people. They came out of Egypt with a high hand, and at the appointed time, even though the ruler of the land in which they resided said they could not.

Power in Judgment. God revealed His power by judging the gods of Egypt, overthrowing them in the plagues. In the last plague God said, “For I will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and will smite all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment: I am the LORD” (Ex 12:12). The gods of Egypt could not turn the waters from blood to water. They could not get rid of frogs, flies, or lice. They could not heal the plagues that broke out upon man and beast. They could not stop the hail, purge the land of locusts, or cure the cattle. They were powerless to produce light when God brought darkness, and they could not keep the firstborn of their worshippers alive.

Power in overturning the counsel of the ungodly. Pharaoh, the singularly most powerful ruler in the world, determined NOT to release the Israelites as God commanded. Twelve times he asserted his will against the Lord (5:2; 7:14,22; 8:15,19,32; 9:7,12,35; 10:20,27; 11:10). In an act of Divine judgment, God brought Pharaoh to beg for the Israelites to leave. He moved the Egyptians to give them their gold and silver, pleading with them to leave the land. Pharaoh’s counsel was overturned, and the whole world heard about it!

Power in Eliminating the Enemy. The enemy, Pharaoh and his armies, were superior from every fleshly point of view. They had superior weaponry, chariots, and warriors. But at the very instant God asserted His will, they were drowned in the sea they sought to cross. At one moment, Israel was threatened by an aggressive and pursuing enemy. At the next moment, their own eyes saw all of their enemies dead. Israel did not raise a weapon against them. They plotted no strategy to divert the attack. God did it all, and there was not a thing Pharaoh and his hosts could do about it.

That My Name Might Be Declared

God is zealous about being known among men. Not only does He desire for His greatness to be acknowledged, He also desires for men to have a personal and profitable relation with Him. This will come when His name is declared, or proclaimed—when what He has done is announced.

After their deliverance from Egypt, and before they arrived at Sinai, “Moses told his father in law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel’s sake, and all the travail that had come upon them by the way, and how the LORD delivered them” (Ex 18: 8). Forty years later when they came to possess the land of Canaan, Rahab, an inhabitant of Jericho, told two Israelite spies, “For we have heard how the LORD dried up the water of the Red sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt. . . And as soon as we had heard these things, our hearts did melt, neither did there remain any more courage in any man, because of you: for the LORD your God, he is God in wilderness unto the Red sea, and came to Kadesh” (Judges 11:16). Nearly 1,000 years later, Nehemiah testified how God “didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and heardest their cry by the Red sea; and showedst signs and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land: for thou knewest that they dealt proudly against them. So didst thou get thee a name, as it is this day. And thou didst divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land; and their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, as a stone into the mighty waters” (Neh 9:9-10). The name of the Lord was being proclaimed!

After Jesus had been enthroned in glory, Stephen stood before the Jewish counsel and proclaimed, God “brought them out, after that he had showed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, and in the wilderness forty years” (Acts 7:36). To this very day, the overthrow of Pharaoh in the deliverance of Israel has been the subject of sermons and books. It has been the theme of songs, and even movies. The name of the Lord is still being proclaimed!

That is why God raised up Pharaoh. Were it not for the desire of God to have His name proclaimed throughout the earth, Pharaoh would never have been heard of – in fact, he might never have been!

THEREFORE . . .

Now, what is the conclusion that must be drawn from these remarkable declarations? It would be interesting to hear the varied opinions of men – at least, if we had not received a word from God on the matter. Here is the word of the Holy Spirit on this subject.

“Therefore He has mercy on whom He wills, and whom He wills He hardens.” Other versions read, “So then He has mercy on whom He desires, and He hardens whom He desires,”^{NASB} “Therefore God has mercy on whom He wants to have mercy, and He hardens whom He wants to harden.”^{NIV} “So then He has mercy on whomever He chooses,

That is why God raised up Pharaoh. Were it not for the desire of God to have His name proclaimed throughout the earth, Pharaoh would never have been heard of – in fact, he might never have been!

heaven above, and in earth beneath” (Josh 2:10-11). The name of the Lord was being proclaimed!

Almost 300 years later, Jephthah reminded the king of the children of Ammon of the time “when Israel came up from Egypt, and walked through the

and He hardens the heart of whomever He chooses,"^{NRSV} "So then, at His pleasure He has mercy on a man, and at His pleasure He makes the heart hard,"^{BBE} "So you see, God shows mercy to some just because He wants to, and He chooses to make some people refuse to listen,"^{NLT} "In other words, if God wants to show mercy on someone, He does so, and if He wants to harden someone's heart, He does so."^{NJB}

Whatever you think of God, you must make room for this verse. If this is something you do not believe God can do, then you simply have a distorted view of God. Exercise yourself to believe what He has said.

Not of Works

The Lord has now confirmed that His choices are not made upon the basis of human works or achievements. He chose Isaac because He wanted to! He loved Jacob because He wanted to! He does have mercy on whom He wills to have mercy.

The Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart because He wanted to. That is what He affirms: "whom He wills, He hardens!"

Remember, the point is that there is no unrighteousness with God. He is righteous in all of His doings. He was righteous in choosing Isaac above Ishmael. He was righteous in loving Jacob and hating Esau. He was righteous in hardening Pharaoh's heart, in order that might display His power upon him, and have His name proclaimed throughout the earth.

In a feeble attempt to show that God was not wrong in doing these things, some

He wills, and whom He wills He hardens. Furthermore, His will is always "good, and acceptable, and perfect" (Rom 12:2).

The difficulty encountered in this passage is not owing to any vagueness

The Lord has now confirmed that His choices are not made upon the basis of human works or achievements. He chose Isaac because He wanted to! He loved Jacob because He wanted to! He does have mercy on whom He wills to have mercy.

say there was just cause in all of the cases for His choice. They say Isaac was better, that is why he was chosen, also citing the mocking Ishmael did against Isaac. Again, such men say that God loved Jacob because he sought the blessing, and he hated Esau because he despised the blessing. Pharaoh, say they, was obstinate and wicked, so God simply confirmed his heart was hard.

But all of these are theological puffs of smoke. We do not need anyone to tell us why God made His choice. He has already told us, and with remarkable force. "Therefore He has mercy on whom found in it. It is not because the Lord has not provided a specific reason for what He has done. Rather, it is because His reason conflicts with the wisdom of men. However, it is perfectly acceptable to faith. The person who truly believes will have no compunctions in saying, "Thy will be done!"

There is a great liberty in being able to simply believe the Word of God. What is more, that liberty will bring great satisfaction and peace to the heart, and, in due time, a rich understanding. As Paul once said, "I believe God!" (Acts 27:25). We do well to do so also.

FLESH IS CONFUSED

We are embarking on some of the strongest statements in all of Scripture. It is certainly not comfortable ground for the timorous and unsure. As the reasoning progresses, it actually gets stronger, and more devastating to the flesh. If a person is unbelieving, this passage will have the same effect as described by the prophet Isaiah: "But the word of the LORD was to them, Precept upon precept, precept upon precept, Line upon line, line upon line, Here a little, there a little, that they might go and fall backward, and be broken and snared and caught" NKJV (Isa 28:13). This sort of reasoning utterly devastates the flesh, pummeling it to the ground. Further, that is precisely what it is intended to do. God will have no flesh glory in His presence.

But, for the soul that will humbly believe the Word of the Lord, casting down contradicting thoughts, the working of the Lord will begin to make perfect sense. It will not become the occasion for stumbling, but one of great hope. It will also assist the believer in seeing that salvation is truly "of the Lord," from first to last.

¹⁹ You will say to me then, "Why does He still find fault? For who has resisted His will?" ²⁰ But indeed, O man, who are you to reply against God? Will the thing formed say to Him who formed it, "Why have You made me like this?" ²¹ Does not the potter have power over the clay, from the same lump to make one vessel for honor and another for dishonor?"

The Spirit now raises another objection of the flesh. This is how those without the mind of Christ think. I will venture to say you have probably heard people make this very statement. Now, the Spirit will declare how it is to be answered.

WHY DOES HE FIND FAULT?

"You will say to me then, "Why does He still find fault? For who has resisted His will?" As you might expect, this is exactly how the flesh reasons. If God shows mercy on whomever He wants to show mercy, and hardens whomever He wills, how can God blame men? How can there be such a thing as guilt or transgression if God's will is being done? Of course, this kind of reasoning is not put forward regarding the showing of mercy, for flesh does not account mercy as something of great value.

This is a great moral question that has perplexed many. If it is true that Divine determination drives the purpose of God, what just reason can be cited for the damnation of the wicked or the reward of the righteous. Are not men, in such a case, mere robots, not responsible for their actions? That is how flesh reasons, and it will be interesting to see how the Spirit addresses that matter. We are already painfully aware of how men seek to answer the question.

Who Has Resisted His Will?

The words "His will" refers to the statement, "Therefore He has mercy on whom He wills, and whom He wills He hardens." If God wills to show mercy to Isaac, is there anyone who can thwart that will? If God wills to reject Ishmael, is there anyone who move Him to accept him in the place of Isaac? And, if God wills to love Jacob, who is it that can move Him to hate Jacob? If He wills to hate Esau, who can constrain Him to love Esau? If He hardens Pharaoh, who can make him tender and pliable?

In the question, there is an underlying awareness that God is all powerful. If He determines to make all things work together for good to them that love Him and are called according to His purpose, who is the personality capable of voiding that determination? If God wills to justify, who can lay anything to the charge of God's elect? If God says no man will see Him without holiness, what person can cause Him to retract that word?

The issue here is not if God's will is or is not being carried out, but if it exempts men from responsibility. How will the Lord answer this? What will His approach be to human responsibility?

WHO ARE YOU?

The Lord never descends into the arena of flesh to caucus with the carnally minded! The question is provoked by unbelief, and thus will be answered in strict accord with the Divine nature.

Notice, it has already been affirmed that there is no unrighteousness with God. It is further declared that He is good (Rom 11:22). Yet, the flesh shouts back at God as though He had no right to "find fault" in men like Ishmael, Esau, and Pharaoh, or those who reject His Son.

This is a great moral question that has perplexed many. If it is true that Divine determination drives the purpose of God, what just reason can be cited for the damnation of the wicked or the reward of the righteous. Are not men, in such a case, mere robots, not responsible for their actions?

"On the contrary, who are you, O man, who answers back to God?"^{NASB}

The question is out of order. God is the one who interrogates man, and not vice versa. You may remember when all manner of questions arose over the experience of Job, God finally interrupted the dialog saying, "Now prepare yourself like a man; I will question you, and you shall answer Me" (Job 38:3).

When God attributes His actions to His will, we are to understand there is no higher authority than that. Those who object to that will are "talking back" to God.^{NIV} Such an action is most unwise!

THE ONE WHO IS FORMED

"Will the thing formed say to Him who formed it, 'Why have you made me like this?'" The NASB reads, "The thing molded will not say to the molder, 'Why did you make me like this,' will it?" It is difficult for me to conceive of a more strong response to the flesh. Immediately God reminds men of who they are. They are the created, not the Creator. They have been formed, they are not the One who forms. They have been made, they are not the Maker.

An Explanation

We are not to understand from this that the response of men has nothing to do with how they are formed. The tenderness of David's heart had a great deal to do with how he was shaped. The fervency of Paul had much to do with how he was shaped. This is one reason we are admonished to not "quench" or "grieve" the Spirit of God (Eph 4:30; 1 Thess 5:19). Our submissiveness, humility, and tenderness, has a great deal to do with how we are shaped – how our character and nature are formed. But if men choose not to be submissive to the Lord, He will form them anyway, shaping and molding them into vessels that will serve His purpose—vessels of wrath.

Power Over the Clay

"Does not the potter have power over the clay . . . ?"

Here the Spirit begins a dialog that represents God as the Potter and the people as the clay. It may be a humbling view, but it is a true one. It is intended to teach us that everything and everyone will ultimately serve God's purpose. Furthermore, His purpose will not be served incidentally, but deliberately. He will MAKE His purpose to be served, whether through Pharaoh or through Moses. He is the Architect of human history, not men. This truth confirms to our hearts the ability of God to work "all things together for good to those who love God and are called according to His purpose" (Rom 8:28).

The word "power" certainly includes the idea of strength and ability, so that God is fully able to override the intentions of men, causing their actions to serve His purpose. Joseph's brother, Potiphar's wife, and Pharaoh are cases in point (Gen 50:20). In our text, however, the word "power" also includes the concept of right or authority, so that what God does is to be considered just and righteous. Remember, the Spirit is showing us there is no unrighteousness with God, not in any of His workings.

Isaiah and Jeremiah. In answering the objection of the flesh [that God cannot find fault if men are shaped by Him in the first place], the Spirit appeals to Scripture. At least three times Isaiah uses the figure of a potter and the clay. Jeremiah also uses this parallel.

Isaiah 29:16. Isaiah pronounced woes upon Israel who went about to fulfill their own will, imagining that God was not aware of what they were doing. Like all men who live in ignorance of the Living God, they could not imagine their secret counsels were known by the Lord, or that He could do anything about it. The Spirit therefore moved Isaiah to say, “Woe to those who seek deep to hide their counsel far from the LORD, And their works are in the dark; They say, ‘Who sees us?’ and, ‘Who knows us?’ Surely you have things turned around! Shall the potter be esteemed as the clay; For shall the thing made say of him who made it, ‘He did not make me?’ Or shall the thing formed say of him who formed it, ‘He has no understanding?’” NKJV

In their thinking, wayward Israel had turned things around, or “upside down”.^{NIV} They thought they were carrying out their own will, and determining their own future. But they were not. God was shaping them to fulfill His good pleasure, not their own. He would use their waywardness to serve His purpose and actually throw their own to the ground. They gave no credit to God for what they were doing. Nevertheless, God remained the Potter, and they remained the clay—in His hands! They could not impose their will upon God. Rather, God caused all of their works, including their wickedness, to serve His purpose. He was the Potter, they were the clay.

Isaiah 45:9. This is the specific passage to which our text refers. In it God declares He will pour down righteousness from the heavens, and salvation and righteousness would spring up from the earth. “Rain down, you heavens, from above, And let the skies pour down righteousness; Let the earth open, let them bring forth salvation, And let righteousness spring up together. I, the LORD, have created it. Woe to him who strives with his Maker! Let the potsherd strive with the potsherd of the earth! Shall the clay say to him who forms it, ‘What are you making?’ Or shall your handiwork say, ‘He has no hands?’” NKJV

In this passage God is reasoning with wayward Israel, and with those who object to the way in which He works. Those who argue against God are quickly told they are nothing more than clay in His hands, and He will shape them as He

Those who argue against God are quickly told they are nothing more than clay in His hands, and He will shape them as He pleases. In fact, the wicked are even like “potsherds,” or broken pieces of pottery, having no significance at all in themselves.

pleases. In fact, the wicked are even like “potsherds,” or broken pieces of pottery, having no significance at all in themselves. Like Pharaoh, their ONLY significance is how God uses them to bring glory to Himself.

Although the psychiatrists have attempted to sanctify the act of being angry with God and questioning His intentions, our text shows the wickedness of such a response. A professing Christian who is so irritated by trouble and inconvenience that he grows angry with God, has, in fact, said “Why hast Thou made me thus?” Far better to respond like righteous Job: “Shall we indeed accept good from God, and shall we not accept adversity?”^{NKJV} (Job 2:10).

Mark it well, that this is applied to those who reply against God, question His intentions, and object to His will. This is not the way in which He speaks to the humble. Although they also are being shaped by Him, that shaping is for their good as well as His glory. In the case of His enemies, it is not for their good at all.

Isaiah 64:8. When spiritual vision is clear, the people know that God has shaped them—that He is the Potter, and they are the clay. Through Isaiah, such a confession is made. “But now, O LORD, You are our Father; We are the clay, and You our potter; And all we are the work of Your hand.” Such a response brings glory to God because it is the truth.

Jeremiah 18:4-6. God gave a special lesson to Jeremiah, showing that He was not only the shaper of men, but that He would be mindful of men’s response to that shaping. He can REMAKE people. “And the vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter; so he made it again into another vessel, as it seemed good to the potter to make. Then the word of the LORD came to me, saying: ‘O house of Israel, can I not do with you as this potter?’ says the LORD. ‘Look, as the clay is in the potter’s hand, so are you in My hand, O house of Israel!’”

The Lord raises a weighty question, indeed! Does He not have the right to do with people as He pleases? Is He not the One who has made them? Is it ever proper for man to question God, or challenge His decision, even finding fault with Him?

A modifying thought. Now, lest men imagine their response has nothing at all to do with how God shapes them, the Lord continues with an illuminating thought. “The instant I speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, to pull down, and to destroy it, if that nation against whom I have spoken turns from its evil, I will relent of the disaster that I thought to bring upon it. And the instant I speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it, if it does evil in My sight so that it does not obey My voice, then I will relent concerning the good with which I said I would benefit it” (vs 8-10).

How marvelously this was demonstrated in both Egypt and Israel. At the first, God used Egypt to bless Israel, caring for them and favoring them in the time of famine. Afterward, when they rebelled, He used them to get great honor for His name. Israel, on the other hand, has been judged harshly by God for its rejection of Christ, yet when they call out “Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord,” they will be reestablished. God has the power to shape AND reshape, and He is always righteous in what He does.

Samson. Samson provides us another example of God’s work as Potter. On one occasion, Samson saw a woman in Timnath, one of the daughters of the Philistines. Being attracted to her, he told his parents, “I have seen a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines: now therefore get her for me to wife.” Knowing God had strictly charged His people not to take wives from among the heathen (Ex 34:15-16; Deut 7:3-4), his parents answered: “Is there never a woman among the daughters of thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goest to take a wife of the uncircumcised Philistines?” Samson insisted they get the Philistine woman for him, for she pleased him. The Spirit then adds this explanation: “But his father and mother did not know that it was of the LORD; that He was seeking an occasion to move against the Philistines. For at that time the Philistines had dominion over Israel” (Judges 14:1-4). God is the Potter, men are the clay!

David numbering Israel. On one occasion, David was moved to have Israel numbered. His aim had to do with military strategy, and thus he said, “Go, number Israel from Beersheba even to Dan; and bring the number of them to me, that I may know it.” Joab, sensing that this was not the right thing to do, challenged the command. “Now may the LORD your God add to the people a hundred times more than there are, and may the eyes of my lord the king see it. But why does my lord the king desire this thing?”^{NKJV} He knew God’s people were not to put their trust in the number of soldiers they had, but in the Lord, who could increase their numbers and their power. Nevertheless, David’s word prevailed, and the army was counted. The armies of Israel and Judah numbered over one million: an astounding 1,300,000 (2 Sam 24:9).

The outcome of the whole event was a judgement from God in which seventy thousand men died.

The Word of God provides three perspectives of this event – all of them are true. The first is that the idea originated with David himself, and thus he commanded that the count be made (1 Chron 21:2). The second is that “Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel” (2 Chron 21:1). The third accredits the whole matter to Keep in mind that the point being established is not the mere ability of God to do these things. Only a fool would question such ability. The point is that God is RIGHTEOUS in shaping men according to His good pleasure.

God Himself. “Again the anger of the LORD was aroused against Israel, and He moved David against them to say, ‘Go, number Israel and Judah’” (2 Sam 24:1). God is the Potter, men are the clay!

One Source, Two Different Vessels
“... from the same lump to make one vessel for honor and another for dishonor?” Keep in mind that the point being established is not the mere ability of God to do these things. Only a fool would question such ability. The point is that God is RIGHTEOUS in shaping men according to His good pleasure. Because flesh has questioned the rightness of such working, the Spirit is establishing there is absolutely no unrighteousness to be found in God. He is not doing so by elaborate arguments, but by affirming God does what He wills, and He is incapable of desiring something wrong.

Here all men are said to come from the same “lump” of clay. This is reference to our common origin, Adam. As it is written, “And He has made from one blood every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, and has determined their preappointed times and the boundaries of their dwellings”^{NKJV} (Acts 17:31). As history has proceeded, however, a vast difference can be seen in the offspring of Adam. Some are righteous, and some are unrighteous. Some are noble, and some are ignoble. How do we account for this difference? As asked in First Corinthians, “For who makes you differ from another?” (1 Cor 14:7). Our text provides the answer.

As the indisputable Potter, God has the right to make one vessel for honor, and another for dishonor. Observe the manner in which the Holy Spirit is speaking. The truth with which He is dealing is highly controversial to the flesh, yet He does not tone it down or soften it, as men are prone to do. Instead, He brings the truth to an even higher and stronger level. Men have been deliberately shaped, whether they are Pharaoh or Moses, Ishmael or Isaac, Jacob or Esau! Some men are made to fulfill dishonorable purposes that God may receive the glory. He has given us the specific example of Pharaoh, and has done so with unquestionable certitude.

A vessel of honor is one created for honorable uses—a person who, through holy and righteous involvements, will bring glory to the Lord. A vessel of dishonor is one that has been created for dishonorable purposes—a person who, through wickedness and opposition to God bring honor to God by showing He cannot be overthrown. Both are used by God, but the way in which they are used differs.

We must be willing to leave this matter where God has left it. If we do not understand it, that has nothing whatsoever to do with whether it is true or not. As will be developed later, this circumstance is intended to bolster our faith, not demolish it. God is nowhere depicted as forming a vessel of dishonor out of someone who is tender toward Him and seeks His will. Such people must be willing to trust that God will do them good and bring them to glory.

Application to Israel

The application of this teaching to Israel is twofold. First, within the same nation God has formed both righteous and unrighteous people. Some have been for honor, and some for dishonor. Second, there have been generations of this people that were shaped for blessing, and generations shaped for cursing. One generation, for example, fell in the wilderness, while another inherited the promised land.

This section of Scripture is showing us that Israel may presently be “enemies for our sake” (11:28). God is able, however, to reshape them on the potters wheel, making a new vessel of them. He has the right to do so, and has pledged Himself to do it. None can charge Him with being unrighteous in the promise made, His tolerance with Israel in their unbelief, the leaving of a remnant, or turning them from their iniquity. From the same mass, vastly different vessels have been formed, with different purposes.

VESSELS OF WRATH AND VESSELS OF MERCY

“²² What if God, wanting to show His wrath and to make His power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath prepared for destruction,²³ and that He might make known the riches of His glory on the vessels of mercy, which He had prepared beforehand for glory,²⁴ even us whom He called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles?”

The unrelenting strength of this argument is staggering. It is as though the Spirit refuses to leave this point, hammering it into our conscience with great power. Here He reasons even further with us concerning the nature of God’s will, and the extent to which He has gone to make it known. He has objectives that are being served in history. There are things He wants men to see, and He has extended Himself to make them known. Now the Spirit unfolds something of that extent to us, in order that we might stand in awe of the wisdom of our God.

We are entering into an area of consideration that will challenge your mind. It may appear on the surface to be too weighty for you to consider, but you must not yield to such a thought. God’s people must come away from overly simplistic views of God, for they do not allow them to consider such passages. Rather than staggering at such lofty Divine utterances, press close to them, taking them into your mind, and pondering them under the administration of your faith. Trust God that they are true, it only remains for you to see that truth. Make no effort to pit one statement of God against another. Get high enough in your spirit to see that the same God cannot say contradictory things. If

He has objectives that are being served in history. There are things He wants men to see, and He has extended Himself to make them known. Now the Spirit unfolds something of that extent to us, in order that we might stand in awe of the wisdom of our God.

fountains on earth cannot give both bitter and sweet water (James 3:11), much less can the fountain of Divine utterance do it.

WRATH MADE KNOWN

“What if God, wanting to show His wrath and to make His power known.” While it is true that God “is not willing that any should perish” (2 Pet 3:9), He is willing to make His wrath and power known. The reason for this is not simply that He wants men to know He DOES have both wrath and power. Rather, He desires for men to avoid His wrath, and experience His power for their good. Better to learn of God’s wrath in this world than in the world to come.

The intent of this verse may be expressed this way: “What if God WHILE willing to show His wrath and make His power known.” The idea that will be developed is this: God’s intention was not just to make His wrath and power known. It was ultimately to make His glory known by showing mercy. It was to this end, for this purpose, that He displayed His wrath and great power. The example of this display has been given in Pharaoh and His overthrow.

ENDURING VESSELS OF WRATH

“ . . . endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction.” “Vessels of wrath” are those that were fashioned “unto dishonor,” of which Pharaoh is an example. This explains why God does not immediately remove the wicked when they rise up against Him and His people. It explains why He endured the whole of mankind in the days of Noah, while He patiently waited for Noah to finish the ark. It explains why He endured the repeated insolence of Pharaoh, while His people were being readied for deliverance. And, it explains why Israel’s continued rejection of Christ is being tolerated with much longsuffering. It is in anticipation of their coming blessing.

There are people who are made to be destroyed. Men may balk at this, siting all manner of reasons why it cannot be true. The Spirit faces them squarely and speaks of “the objects of His wrath--prepared for destruction?”^{NIV} Peter also says of false prophets, using words that jar the soul. “But these, like natural brute beasts made to be caught and destroyed, speak evil of the things they do not understand, and will utterly perish in their own corruption, and will receive the wages of unrighteousness, as those who count it pleasure to carouse in the daytime”^{NKJV} (2 Pet 2:12-13). Jude also says of such evil men, “For certain men have crept in unnoticed, who long ago make something out of a person, but to remove them, like God removed Pharaoh. The Lord’s glory, however, is intended to lift, bless, and transform. Thus Scripture speaks of “the riches of the glory of His inheritance”(Eph 1:18), being strengthened within by “the riches of His glory”(Eph 3:16), and all of our need being supplied by “His riches in glory”(Phil 4:19).

When It is realized. The riches of His glory are realized when God lifts up “His countenance” upon us (Num 6:26). It is known when He causes “His face to shine upon us,” looking upon us with favor (Psa 67:1; 31:16). It happens when He lifts up “the light of His countenance upon us” (Psa 4:6). The ultimate experience of this results in regeneration, as described in Second Corinthians 4:6. “For it is the God who commanded light to shine out of darkness, who has shone in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.”

God desired that men know what His wrath and power could do, so He raised up Pharaoh. Even more, He wants to show what the riches of His glory can do, so He abides the insolence of the wicked until such time as those riches will be seen.

VESSELS OF MERCY

“ . . . the vessels of mercy . . . ” These are people fashioned to receive His mercy, not His wrath. They are the ones who will be transformed by that glory. In Christ, the Holy Spirit moves them from one stage of glory to another, conforming them to the image of God’s Son (2 Cor 3:18).

PREPARED BEFOREHAND

“ . . . which He had prepared beforehand for glory.” The NIV reads, “whom he prepared in advance for glory.” The NAB reads, “which he has prepared previously for glory.” Whether this text is viewed linguistically or doctrinally, it still reads the same. There is no way to escape what it says, and it is the Holy Spirit who said it. There are vessels God prepared for mercy BEFORE they actually received it. He has governed the affairs of this world with these vessels in mind, shaping both men and seasons for what He was going to do with them.

One might prefer that God did not say things this way. However, when it comes to His purpose, God has no regard for human preferences. It is true that the educational trends of our day, especially theological ones, has allowed men to be comfortable in bending the Word of God to suite their preconceptions. But that does not make it right. Higher criticism may stand on the doorstep of revelation and dare to question what God has said. But in the last analysis, it is man that will account for his words, not God.

This same truth is expressed elsewhere in Scripture. A few samples will suffice to show men are not to regard it as strange.

were marked out for this condemnation”^{NKJV} (Jude 4).

There is no question about the existence of such people. Their presence is only for a time, and will contribute to the magnitude of God showing mercy upon His people. Rest assured, no one is a “vessel of wrath” who has a heart for God, has believed the Gospel, or is pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God. We must be willing to let the matter rest there.

MAKING HIS GLORY KNOWN

“ . . . and that He might make known the riches of His glory.” The ultimate reason for God making His wrath and power known, is in order that He might make the riches of His glory known!

The riches of His glory. Because God’s glory is a rich repository of saving resources, the Spirit refers to “the riches of His glory.” The Lord does not refer to “the riches of His wrath,” because His wrath is destructive. It is not intended to Thess 2:13).

- “Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 1:2-3).
- “According as he hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love: Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will.” (Eph 1:4-5).

The point of the Spirit is that God has been righteous in all of this. In accomplishing this preparation of the vessels of mercy, none of His goodness has been suppressed. He has used means, such as the Gospel, the convincing work of the Holy Spirit, and the manipulation of circumstances. But the preparatory work was His, not man’s. HE prepared the vessels for mercy.

Samson, Jeremiah, John the Baptist, and Paul are expressly said to have been brought into the world to do God’s work (Judges 13:5; Jer 1:5; Lk 1:13-15; Gal 1:15). Their presence, together with that of Isaac and Jacob, should enable us to receive this truth without hesitation. Esther’s uncle, Mordecai, knowing of the manner of God’s working, said to her, “who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?” (Esth 4:14). These are examples of vessels prepared beforehand for mercy. How God accomplished all of this may be difficult to comprehend, but that He DID it must be acknowledged.

EVEN US

“ . . . even us whom He called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles.” This is the conclusion of a lengthy question that began in verse twenty-two. The entirety of the thought reads this way in the New International Bible (NAB). “What if God, choosing to show His wrath and make His power known, bore with great patience the objects of His wrath--prepared for destruction? What if He did this to make the riches of His glory known to the objects of his mercy, whom He prepared in advance for glory--even us, whom He also called, not only from the Jews but also from the Gentiles?”

Is it possible that history has been orchestrated for this “day of salvation” in which we live? Could it be that God has raised up holy men like Abraham, Moses, David, and John the Baptist in the prospect of the “acceptable year of the Lord?” Is it too difficult to believe that God has also raised up men like Pharaoh, Nebuchadnezzar, and Herod, bearing long with them, in the prospect of the day when men would become a new creation in Christ Jesus?

Indeed, this is exactly the point that is being made! Whether the men and their deeds have been good or evil, God has worked them all together for the good of those who love Him, and are the called according to His purpose. The godly prior to Jesus “were not made perfect without us” (Heb 11:40), and the wicked were endured with much longsuffering in prospect of those in Christ. God’s intent was to show mercy on chosen vessels, and He managed history so that would happen.

A CHANGE IN STATUS

²⁵ As He says also in Hosea: ‘I will call them My people, who were can refashion the clay, as well as originate it. Those who appeared to be them which were not my people, Thou art my people; and they shall say, Thou art my God.” Peter also alludes to this text in his exposition of those who are in Christ Jesus. “But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light: Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy” (1 Pet 2:9-10).

The Potter can refashion the clay, as well as originate it. Those who appeared to be unacceptable can be made acceptable. God is not only able to do this, He is righteous in the doing of it.

not My people, and her beloved, who was not beloved.” ²⁶ ‘And it shall come to pass in the place where it was said to them, You are not My people, There they shall be called sons of the living God.’”

Now the Spirit will show us how marvelously God has worked. The Potter unacceptable can be made acceptable. God is not only able to do this, He is righteous in the doing of it.

WHO WERE NOT MY PEOPLE

Verse 25 is taken from Hosea 2:23. “And I will sow her unto me in the earth; and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to

Verse 26 is taken from Hosea 1:10. “Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God.”

Hosea Was Speaking of Israel

In both of these texts (Hosea 1:10; 2:23), God is speaking about the Israelites. The first chapter of Hosea makes it quite clear that “the children of Israel” are the ones to whom it will be said, “Ye are the sons of the living God.” The second chapter deals extensively with wayward Israel. In it God declares He will remove them far from idols (2:15-17), make a covenant with them, and betroth them to Him forever (2:18-20). He will sow Israel for Himself in the land, and there (in the land) where He disavowed them, they will again be His people (v 23).

Yet, the Gentiles Are the Subject

Yet, in our text, the reference seems to apply to the Gentiles rather than the Jews: i.e., “Even us, whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles.” In my judgment, this text is not limited to the Gentiles, or to the Jews. Rather, the Spirit seems to have the real Jew and the true Israel in mind, as related earlier in Romans: “But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly,” and “For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel” (2:29; 9:6).

The acceptance of the Gentiles should not take men by surprise, even though they were alienated from the life of God. God had promised He would lift up His hand to the Gentiles (Isa 49:22), and that His glory would be declared among them (Isa 66:19).

The same God who promised to bring in the Gentiles has also promised to restore the Jews. In both cases, He gains great glory, and is shown to be the true Potter. If we do not stumble at God causing us to be His people, why should we stumble at God turning His hand once more to the children of Israel?

The idea here is not that God changes His mind, but that He changes people! He is the Potter who can reshape the clay, making a new vessel out of it. “But the pot he was shaping from the clay was marred in his hands; so the potter formed it into another pot, shaping it as seemed best to him. Then the word of the LORD came to me: ‘O house of Israel, can I not do with you as this potter does?’ declares the LORD. ‘Like clay in the hand of the potter, so are you in My hand, O house of Israel.’”^{NIV} (Jer 18:4-6). The very language should cause our hearts to bend low.

THE REMNANT WILL BE SAVED

“²⁷ Isaiah also cries out concerning Israel: ‘Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, The remnant will be saved.’”

The line of reasoning in this passage is remarkable. It is as though the Lord refuses to let us go until we see the marvels of His great salvation. Now the Spirit calls Isaiah to witness again. He is confirming to our hearts that Israel has not been repudiated by God, and that the light of hope still glows among them.

The passage quoted is found in Isaiah 10:22-23. “Though your people, O Israel, be like the sand by the sea, only a remnant will return. Destruction has been decreed, overwhelming and righteous. The Lord, the LORD Almighty, will carry out the destruction decreed upon the whole land.”^{NIV} Isaiah’s intention was to bring down the pride of Israel, for they tended to boast in their flesh. Thus he told them only a very small number would be saved, with the vast majority of them being cut off. That “remnant” is the means God uses to preserve the nation. From a practical point of view, they are why the nation has not been completely written off.

This “remnant” consists of vessels of mercy, which have been prepared to receive mercy. They are foreknown by God, and He has fashioned them for His glory.

God specializes in remnants. They are a means of showing the greatness of His power and His mercy. Ezra spoke of the remnant in this manner, “And now for a little space grace hath been showed from the LORD our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us a nail in his holy place, that our God may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage” (Ezra 9:8). Their presence keeps the candle of hope glowing. It enables the humble of heart to revive. It moved Paul to have great heaviness and sorrow of heart for his brethren. This was not an expression of hopelessness, but one hope.

Because “the remnant” will be discussed later, I will move from the subject now. It is rich with God’s glory.

THE WORK WILL BE FINISHED

“²⁸ For He will finish the work and cut it short in righteousness, Because the LORD will make a short work upon the earth.” Other versions read, “FOR THE LORD WILL EXECUTE HIS WORD UPON THE EARTH, THOROUGHLY AND QUICKLY,”^{NASB} “For the Lord will carry out his sentence on earth with speed and finality,”^{NIV} “for the Lord will execute his sentence on the earth quickly and decisively,”^{NRSV} “for the Lord will execute His sentence upon the earth with rigor and dispatch.”^{RSV} The point is, what God has determined will be completed righteously.

This verse is alluding to the latter part of Isaiah 10:22, and gives the sense of that text. *“A remnant of them will return; The destruction decreed shall overflow with righteousness.” Isaiah’s meaning is that the judgment of God will appear to have devastated the nation, almost, as it were, eliminating them. Yet, a remnant will be saved, and that because God is righteous.

The meaning is that God’s work upon the earth is not a long and drawn out affair that finds Him reacting to the intentions and works of men. He is not constantly adjusting His purpose, revising His plan, and doing the best He can to salvage some from among the sons of men. The work, by reason of time, may appear to have been very long. Yet, from the Divine point of view, it has been a “short work,” for only what was necessary has been done. There are no meaningless activities with God. Nor, indeed, does He engage in lengthy experiments.

The work is “short,” lasting only as long as required, and terminating in absolute righteousness. Whether it is the flood, the overthrow Egypt, or the chastening of Israel, the work has been brief and righteous. Whether it has been the development of multitudinous seed from Abraham, the protection of the remnant during fierce judgments, or the regeneration of men in Christ Jesus, the work has been short and it has been righteous.

We must settle it in our minds that when God begins to work, matters move swiftly, with dispatch and with righteousness. A nation like Babylon can be deposed in a night (Jer 51:31), or a spiritual nation can be born in a day (Isa 66:8). Whether it is a great awakening and rebirth as occurred on Pentecost (Acts 2:1-38), or a climactic judgment as the devastation occurring at the destruction of Jerusalem (Lk 21:20-22), “He will finish the work and cut it short in righteousness, Because the LORD will make a short work upon the earth.”

Here again, the Potter had power over the clay, leaving a remnant. The “remnant” did not exist because of human effort, but because the Lord “left” it, excluding it from the curse. The New Jerusalem Bible reads, “Had the Lord Sabaoth not left us a few survivors, we should be like Sodom, we should be the same as Gomorrah.”

THE LORD OF SABAOTH

The term “Sabaoth” means hosts, or armies. “The Lord of Sabaoth” is an expression denoting military power: i.e., “the Lord of hosts,” ^{NRSV} “the Lord of armies,” or “the Lord Almighty .” ^{NIV} James also refers to the Lord in the manner (James 5:4). The hosts of God are exceedingly large. On one occasion “They fought from heaven; the stars in their courses fought against Sisera” (Judges 5:20). In another instance, God referred to the locust, the cankerworm, the caterpillar, and the palmerworm, as “my great army which I sent among you” (Joel 2:25). He called for lice, flies, frogs, and locusts in the plagues of Egypt (Ex 8:2,16,21). Angels have been summoned to fight against men, executing the judgments of the Lord (2 Sam 24:16; 2 Kgs 19:35). He has summoned the Assyrians or Chaldeans to fight for Him (Hab 1:6). Plagues and pestilence are in His arsenal (Gen 12:17; 1 Chron 21:14).

He can cause the sun to stand still so the battle may be won (Josh 10:12-13), or cause darkness to cover the earth (Ex 10:22). Fire and brimstone can fall from heaven (Lk 17:29), as well as hail (Ex 9:18) and torrential rain, as in the flood (Gen 7:11). “Fire, and hail; snow, and vapors; stormy wind” are said to fulfill His word (Psa 148:8). He can cause people’s defenses to depart from them (Num 14:9). Truly, He is “the Lord of Sabaoth” – “the Lord of hosts!”

Isaiah’s Word

The quotation is taken from Isaiah 1:9 where the “remnant” is described as “very small.” “Except the LORD of hosts”

There is no hope of surviving the opposition of the Lord – that is, unless HE leaves a remnant! It is not possible for a person or a nation to in any sense survive unless the Lord allows them to do so. Further, as long as a remnant remains, there is hope, for there is no other reason for allowing a remnant to remain.

There is no hope of surviving the opposition of the Lord – that is, unless HE leaves a remnant! It is not possible for a person or a nation to in any sense survive unless the Lord allows them to do so. Further, as long as a remnant remains, there is hope, for there is no other reason for allowing a remnant to remain. Remember, the Lord makes a short work upon the earth, terminating it in righteousness. There is no such thing as a remnant that is not meeting a Divine objective. The same Lord of hosts who brings devastation, also leaves a remnant!

had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah.” The leaving of this “remnant” is what prompted Jeremiah to say, “It is of the LORD’S mercies that we are not consumed” (Lam 3:22).

Brief Summation

Because I have already dealt with this verse in our previous lesson (Rom 9:8), I will only restate some of those observations here, and make a few additional comments.

No remnant was left in Sodom or Gomorrah! God removed Lot and his family, then destroyed those ancient cities with “everlasting fire” (Jude 7). The reasoning here is powerful! The remnant that remained was not the result of mere human activity. The remnant was “LEFT” BY God Almighty! These were the faithful who were left like Noah. They remained after judgment, like Lot.

The scathing wrath of God did not touch them, any more than the fiery furnace touched the three Hebrew children.

Confirming that Israel's situation is the same since Christ's exaltation as it was in the days of Isaiah, the Spirit declares, "Even so then, at this to remove the nation from the face of the earth. It also confirms the surety and effectiveness of the promise.

He never leaves a remnant unless there is a future work to be done with that remnant. Only when God has no further purpose for a people does He fail to leave a remnant, as with Sodom and Gomorrah.

The only reason for a leaving a seed is that future growth and fruitage are expected—and they are expected by God Himself. He never leaves a remnant unless there is a future work to be done with that remnant. Only when God has no further purpose for a people does He fail to leave a remnant, as with Sodom and Gomorrah.

The fact that God left "a very small remnant" substantiates that He did not remove the nation from the tablet of eternal purpose. He is not finished with it, as will be powerfully declared in the eleventh chapter.

present time there is a remnant according to the election of grace" (Rom 11:6). The word of God, then, has not been ineffective, even though the larger part of Israel has not yet believed. The existence of the remnant justifies God in refusing

That "seed," or remnant, is "the planting of the Lord, that He may be glorified" (Isa 61:3). And, indeed, He will be glorified through that remnant! Through faith, its existence causes hope to flourish!

CONCLUSION

The matters with which we have dealt have been very weighty. They are not commonly known among believers because they do not conform to the religious mind-set of our day. However, this is the manner in which the Holy Spirit reasons with us. When He speaks of righteousness, and of our need of it, He eventually speaks to us of the Jews. When flesh reasons that God has finished His work with the Jews, the Spirit speaks to us of the remnant. He tells us they have been "left" by God Himself, and that He will finish the work that He has started.

In all of His workings, God is impeccably righteous. Nothing that He does is wrong, whether it is hardening Pharaoh's heart, or allowing Israel to continue. If He chooses to love Jacob and hate Esau, we need no further word on the matter than that it was His will to do so. His will is what makes it right, not its conformity to the judgments of men.

The point behind all of this is that we must be brought to trust in the Lord, not relying upon our own wisdom. If God knows how to preserve Israel, you can trust Him to preserve you. If He can thwart Pharaoh, bringing him down in utter frustration, He is surely able to deal with your enemies.

It is never right to question God's demands or His works. It is never wrong to confess He is right in what He does. If His ways are difficult to comprehend now, you must believe the time will come when they will be made more clear to you. Many of us have heard Him say what Jesus said to Peter, "You do not realize now what I am doing, but later you will understand" (John 13:7).

Now, go on your way rejoicing. Be glad that God has turned the reins of His kingdom over to Jesus, and not to you!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 32

ISRAEL'S PRESENT CONDITION AND ITS CAUSE

9:30 What shall we say then? That Gentiles, who did not pursue righteousness, have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness of faith; ³¹ but Israel, pursuing the law of righteousness, has not attained to the law of righteousness. ³² Why? Because they did not seek it by faith, but as it were, by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumbling stone. ³³ As it is written: "Behold, I lay in Zion a stumbling stone and rock of offense, And whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame."

– Romans 9:30-33 ^{NKJV} –

INTRODUCTION

The appointed means of becoming righteous is announced in the Gospel of Christ. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith" (1:16-17). Having introduced the subject of righteousness, the Spirit has firmly established our need for it. Righteousness is not a spiritual luxury, nor is it a mere option. God cannot and will not accept an unrighteous person in His presence.

THE GENTILES

In order to firmly plant this in our thinking, the Spirit showed how the Gentiles plummeted far from God, even though they were in the very midst of a creation that testified to His "eternal power and Godhead." They did not grasp enough of the truth to become thankful (1:21). They also stopped short of their appointed vocation, which was to seek the Lord and find Him (Acts 17:26-27). They actually became idolaters, ascribing the glory of God to all manner of creatures (1:23). To confirm the corruption of their hearts, God gave some of them over to their own desires. Immediately they descended into the depths of immorality, thereby confirming they were NOT righteous (1:24-27). As a whole, God gave them over to their reprobate and depraved minds. Rather than this producing a wave of righteousness, it broke out in all manner of moral and spiritual depravity

- VII. THE ONE WHO BELIEVES (9:33b)

(1:28-32). The Gentiles were not righteous. After 2,500 years, not a single righteous person surfaced among their number. The ONLY people who obtained favor with God were those to whom He revealed Himself.

THE JEWS

The Jews fared no better, even though they were given remarkable advantages. Their knowledge was increased, as both right and wrong were revealed to them. This was given to them in the form of commandments and ordinances. They also received strong incentives to obey these commandments. Remarkable blessings were promised if they would obey, and staggering curses were pronounced upon them if they disobeyed. If there was any latent goodness in them, these would surely awaken them to righteousness. However, they became guilty of the same sins as the Gentiles, even though they had been tutored by God himself (2:1-27). They also needed righteousness.

"GUILTY!"

The Divine verdict of "GUILTY" is pronounced upon the entirety of the human race, both Jew and Gentile. No one is righteous, not one is good, and none can be found that seeks after God (3:9-19). It makes no difference what time period you examine, all need a righteousness from God. Regardless of the people group you peruse, all need the righteousness of God. Whether the people are informed or uninformed, they stand before God totally bereft of righteousness. What is even more, they are incapable of changing their condition.

THE ROLE OF FAITH

Having confirmed the absolute weakness of human nature, the Spirit revealed the essentiality and effectiveness of faith. That is the appointed means through which the righteousness of God will be received (3:21-22). This is demonstrated in the person of Abraham, who believed God and was counted righteous because of it (4:1-25).

The effectiveness of faith is expounded in the chapters five and six. Through it we obtain peace with God, who then begins to work within us. Through baptism into Christ, we are brought into the Lord Himself, becoming dead indeed unto sin and alive to God. In our new state, we are charged with the responsibility of yielding to God and subduing our members that are upon the earth. Every resource needed for this noble work is supplied in Christ Jesus.

REMNANTS OF THE OLD NATURE

To confirm that righteousness has been imputed to us, and not achieved by us, the Spirit points out that the remnants of the condemned nature remain in us. This is "the flesh," and is consistently aligned against God, in disagreement with Him, and fighting against Him. The seventh chapter details the fierce conflict that exists between the flesh and the Spirit – a battle that produces great discontent within the believer.

NO CONDEMNATION

Substantiating the effectiveness of the righteousness of God, which is received by faith, it is affirmed that we are not condemned in Christ Jesus. This is true even though the law of sin remains in our members, fighting against the desires of our renewed hearts and minds. Chapter eight proclaims this with great power.

The Holy Spirit Himself assists us in the battle, leading us to subjugate the flesh (8:13-14). He even makes effective intercession for us because we do not know what to pray for (8:26-27).

Now that we have the righteousness of God, He is working everything together for our good (8:28). No adversarial power is capable of separating us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord (8:35-39).

THE ISRAELITES

Because there is a remarkable tendency in men—even redeemed men—to place confidence in the flesh, the Spirit causes us to consider Israel according to the flesh. Although they had every advantage given to men prior to Christ, it did not produce righteousness in them. What is even more, all of those advantages were given at the discretion of God. They did not ask for any of them (9:1-5).

The successfulness of the Word of God did not depend upon the Israelites themselves. Although it appeared as though His determination had fallen to the ground, a remnant remained among the people. This is traced to Divine choice—a choice that was not motivated by fleshly lineage or the works of men (9:6-13).

In all of this, God remained righteous in all that He did, preserving a remnant among the people, even under the most trying of circumstances. He even raised up Pharaoh to show His great power, and to make His name great (9:17). His choices were motivated by His will, not the people who were favored (9:18-21).

If there was any latent goodness in them, these would surely awaken them to righteousness. However, they became guilty of the same sins as the Gentiles, even though they had been tutored by God himself

God's intention is to reveal "the riches of His glory" on vessels of mercy, prepared beforehand for this purpose. These include both Jews and Gentiles, with the Jews being prominent, and the Gentiles being additions: "not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles" (9:23-29). The great work God has purposed, and is carrying out with precision, is nothing less than the conferment of His righteousness upon the sons of men. That is the marvelous work being accomplished in Christ Jesus.

CONCLUSION

Having laid the foundation for our thought, the Spirit now assesses both the Jews and Gentiles. He does it with God's purpose in mind—the conferment of His righteousness upon the sons of men. This righteousness is absolutely essential, yet cannot be conjured up or produced by men. He will show who obtained it and who did not. He will also tell us Why some succeeded and some did not.

He will now explain why the unbelieving Jews have NOT obtained this righteousness, and why the believing Gentiles have. He will show this has not happened because of man's will or effort, "it is not of him who wills, nor of him who runs, but of God who shows mercy" (9:16).

Knowing that "flesh" will erupt in murmuring against God, the Spirit will show us in a very practical way why Israel has been rejected and the Gentiles accepted. It is NOT because God's word has failed. It is not because God has cancelled His promises, for He cannot lie. What, then, can be said on this subject?

WHAT SHALL WE SAY?

^{9:30a} What shall we say then?

When the truth is affirmed, it is imperative that men respond to it. In fact, they WILL respond to it, it only remains to identity HOW they do. In order to assist us in our response, the Spirit asks this question. "What shall WE say then?"

This is now the sixth time this very question has been asked.

abound?" (6:1)

❑ CONCERNING GOD'S HOLY LAW. "WHAT SHALL WE SAY then? is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." (7:7)

❑ CONCERNING GOD'S ACTIONS. "WHAT SHALL WE SAY then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid." (9:14)

what the Lord has said and done, we cannot profit from His words or His deeds.

In the teaching of little children, truth is put into their minds in anticipation of the day when they will ponder and think upon it. While young, their thoughts are few and immature. Thus we structure their minds by teaching them what the Lord has said and done. However, there must come a time when we "put away childish things" (1 Cor 13:11). When that time comes, our minds must wrap themselves around the Word of the Lord. Our rationality must embrace truth, ponder it, and meditate upon it. Then, and only then, is conversion and growth in grace possible.

Much of the religion of our day fails to promote thought. It deals with things too close to the surface of the mind, and too far from the depths of the heart. This is the bane of religious entertainment, much of the popular "Christian music" of our time, and the penchant for brevity in the churches. What is heard is too easily forgotten, for it offers no challenge for the remarkable capabilities of the heart and mind.

However, if we will "hear what the Spirit is saying to the churches," He will engage our minds. We will be challenged to reason upon the truth. God will call upon us to "reason together" with Him (Isa 1:18). In that process, and as our hearts are tender and submissive, He will

By asking these questions, the Spirit is directing our thoughts – leading us, as it were, to consider the things of God. Until our minds are provoked to consider what the Lord has said and done, we cannot profit from His words or His deeds.

❑ CONCERNING GOD TAKING VENGEANCE. "But if our unrighteousness commend the righteousness of God, WHAT SHALL WE SAY? Is God unrighteous who taketh vengeance? (I speak as a man)." (3:5)

❑ CONCERNING OUR FATHER ABRAHAM. "WHAT SHALL WE SAY then that Abraham our father, as pertaining to the flesh, hath found?" (4:1)

❑ CONCERNING OUR RELATIONSHIP TO SIN. "WHAT SHALL WE SAY then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may

❑ CONCERNING THE REJECTION OF THE JEWS AND THE ACCEPTANCE OF THE GENTILES. "WHAT SHALL WE SAY then? That the Gentiles, which followed not after righteousness, have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness which is of faith." (9:30)

THE ROLE OF THOUGHT

By asking these questions, the Spirit is directing our thoughts – leading us, as it were, to consider the things of God. Until our minds are provoked to consider open the truth up to us, thereby producing growth and conformity to the image of His Son.

How often we are reminded of the role of thought. Our love for God is to be with the "heart" and "mind," as well as our "soul" and "strength" (Mk 12:30). We are exhorted, "think on these things" (Phil 4:8), "meditate upon these things" (1 Tim 4:15), and "consider what I say" (2 Tim 2:7). "Every thought" is to be "brought into captivity to the obedience of Christ" (2 Cor 10:5). There is no better way for this to be accomplished than in the extended consideration of what the Lord has declared – particularly of Himself and His wonderful works.

Thus our minds are called to enter the sacred vestibule of thought. What will we say? What will be our response to what the Lord has declared? What kind of conclusions will we reach?

DIRECTED THOUGHT

As will be confirmed by the answer, the Spirit is not asking for our opinion, but guiding us to a sanctified conclusion. The objective is to point our hearts and minds in the right direction – the area where thought will be profitable and Divine tutelage is experienced.

The conclusion that is delivered to us cannot be appropriated through the wisdom of this world. If the Lord did not reveal it to us, it would never have been known. However, when the truth is loved and received, the answer will at once become apparent to us when it is revealed.

THE REALITIES BEFORE US

The Lord has set before us certain realities. These are the matters concerning which a revealed conclusion will be given.

- God shows mercy on those to whom He wills to show mercy (v 15a).
- He has compassion upon those to whom He wills to show compassion (v 15b).

- He calls those who were not His people, "My people," and those who were not beloved, "beloved" (v 25).
- The Lord will finish the work He has begun on earth, terminating it abruptly in righteousness (v 28).

It is as though the Spirit knows flesh will use such knowledge to excuse itself from all responsibility. It will reason that God acts without regard for human will or effort, and therefore they are both useless. However, this is erroneous reasoning. It brings no glory to God, and no salvation to men. Thus, the Spirit will throw it down,

Thus our minds are called to enter the sacred vestibule of thought. What will we say? What will be our response to what the Lord has declared? What kind of conclusions will we reach?

- It is not of him that wills, or of him that runs, but of God that shows mercy (v 16).
- He hardens whomever He wills to harden (v 18).
- God can make people vessels of honor or vessels of dishonor (v 21).
- He endured vessels prepared for destruction in the prospect of making known the riches of His glory upon the vessels prepared for mercy (v 22-23).

for such thinking is inhibitive, stunting the soul and blinding the eyes.

The conclusion that follows confirms that human responsibility is not excluded by Divine Sovereignty. While man will not be able to glory in the presence of the Lord, neither will he be permitted to be idle and unreceptive. A lack of response to God is never justified. It will further be shown that certain effort is futile.

THE GENTILES DID NOT PURSUE IT, BUT ATTAINED IT

" 9:30b That Gentiles, who did not pursue righteousness, have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness of faith." This confirms that all along the subject has been obtaining the righteousness of God. There is no hope of being received by God if we do not receive His righteousness. Following this line of reasoning with consistency, the book of Romans mentions "righteousness" thirty-nine times.

- It is revealed in the Gospel of Christ, and is obtained by faith in order to faith (1:17).
- There is a righteousness that comes - from the Law (2:26).

- Our unrighteousness demonstrates that God is righteous (3:5).
- The righteousness of God for men is now revealed without the Law, being witnessed by the Law and the Prophets (3:21).
- The righteousness of God is obtained by faith in Jesus Christ (3:22).
- God's righteousness is declared for the remission of sins (3:25).
- Because of Christ's vicarious death, God righteousness is declared, that He might be just and justifier of the one who believes on Jesus (3:26).
- Abraham believed God, and it was

- imputed to him for righteousness (4:1).
- The one who works not, but believes on Jesus, his faith is counted to him for righteousness (4:5).
- David described the blessedness of the man to whom God imputed righteousness without works (4:6).
- Faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness (4:9).
- Abraham's circumcision was a sign of the righteousness he had while yet uncircumcised (4:11).
- Abraham became an heir of the world through the righteousness of faith (4:13).

- Because Abraham did not stagger at the promises of God, but was fully persuaded that what God had promised He was able also to perform, his faith was imputed to him for righteousness (4:22).
- Righteousness is a gift, given to us because of Christ (5:17).
- Because of Christ's one act of righteousness, His death, men received justification (5:18).
- Grace reigns through righteousness unto eternal life (5:21).
- Those who are dead with Christ are to yield their members unto God as instruments of righteousness (6:13).
- The obedience of faith leads to righteousness (6:16).
- Being made free from sin, we have become the servants of righteousness (6:18).
- Being servants of righteousness leads to holiness (6:19).
- When we were the servants of sin, we were free from righteousness (6:20).
- The righteousness of the Law is fulfilled in those who walk after the Spirit (8:4).
- If Christ is in us, the Spirit is life because of righteousness (8:10).
- What God performs is cut short in righteousness (9:28).
- The Gentiles, though they did not pursue righteousness have attained to it by faith (9:30).
- Israel who followed after the law of righteousness has not attained to it (9:31).
- Because Israel was ignorant of God's righteousness, they did not attain to it (10:1).
- Christ is the end of the Law for righteousness to everyone who believes (10:3).
- Moses described the righteousness of the law by saying if you kept it you would live (10:5).
- The righteousness of faith does not speak of man doing, but of man believing (10:6).
- With the heart man believes unto righteousness (10:10).
- Righteousness is an essential element of the Kingdom of God (14:17).

I have taken the time to list these references to show the centrality of righteousness in the Spirit's reasoning. The seeming diversion to the subject of Israel was to show us that righteousness was the issue with them. God did not choose them because of their goodness. Not only were they the appointed means through whom the Savior entered the world, they were also provided confirmation that righteousness cannot come through human effort.

The Spirit will now contrast the acceptance of the Gentiles with the rejection of all but the remnant of the Israelites. Again, it is important to see that the attainment of righteousness is the critical matter.

Rather than pursuing righteousness, their rapid degradation is outlined.

- When they knew God, they did not glorify Him as God (1:21a).
- They were not thankful (1:21b).
- They became vain in their imaginations (1:21c).
- Their foolish heart was darkened (1:21d).
- Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools (1:22).
- They changed the glory of the incorruptible God into the image of man, birds, four-footed beasts, and creeping things (1:23).
- When delivered over to the lusts of

The Spirit will now contrast the acceptance of the Gentiles with the rejection of all but the remnant of the Israelites. Again, it is important to see that the attainment of righteousness is the critical matter.

THEY DID NOT PURSUE IT

"That the Gentiles, which followed not after righteousness, have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness which is of faith." This is the first response to the question, "What shall we say then?" The first chapter of Romans dealt with the Gentiles before Christ. This text speaks of them from the viewpoint of after Christ. Here we will find they never did pursue righteousness. It was never an issue with them, which confirmed their deplorable ignorance of the Living God.

THEY FOLLOWED NOT AFTER RIGHTEOUSNESS

The Gentiles provide us with an example of people without Divine direction. The Spirit has already revealed the focus of the Gentile's life. Although they occupied the Lord's own creation, and although that creation clearly testified of His "eternal power and Godhead," or Divinity, the Gentiles did not respond to its testimony appropriately. In fact, they sinned grievously. In the words of our text, "they followed not after righteousness," or "did not pursue righteousness."^{NIV} their heart they dishonored their bodies among themselves (1:24).

- They changed the truth of God into a lie, worshiping and serving the created more than the Creator (1:25).
- When given over to their vile affections, they descended into the morass of sodomy (1:26-27).
- They did not like to retain God in their knowledge (1:28a).
- Being given over to a reprobate mind, they were filled with all manner of reprehensible sin (1:29-31).
- Although they knew the judgment of God and that death was the suitable penalty for their conduct, they not only continued in their sin, but approved others who did so (1:32).

They Did Not Know

That remarkable descent of the Gentile world is summarized in our text: "they followed not after righteousness." Although they were given the advantage of living in the creation of a righteous God, they did not pursue righteousness. They made no real effort to please the Lord or be found in His favor. Rather, they sought the gratification of their own sinful desires. Nature could not teach them of the reality or need of righteousness. Neither, indeed, did they have the capacity to discover these things through their own ingenuity.

They did not pursue righteousness because they knew neither the righteousness of God nor their own despicable unrighteousness. As marvelous as the testimony of nature is, it says absolutely nothing about God being righteous or man needing righteousness. Still, the fact that they did not seek the righteousness that comes from God only accentuated their sinful condition. It was no sign of innocence, nor could it be overlooked by the Almighty God.

The Gentiles are certainly a people requiring mercy. God has declared "I will show mercy to whom I will, I will take pity on whom I will"^{NAB} (9:15). Will He choose to have mercy on such unworthy wretches? Will they be able to take hold of the righteousness He announces in the Gospel of His Son? Will they be required to go through some sort of orientation class before they can receive mercy and compassion? Will they be required to measure up to some code of morals before they can receive mercy?

THEY HAVE ATTAINED UNTO RIGHTEOUSNESS

"Gentiles . . . have attained to righteousness." Here is the wonderful announcement! "They have attained unto righteousness," even though they did not seek it! To "attain" righteousness is to obtain or gain it. To "attain" righteousness is to actually become righteous. It is to be received by God, made acceptable to Him. It is to be right in His eyes, with no charge of guilt against them.

The Gentiles did not obtain it by their will, nor by their effort, for "it is not of him who wills, nor of him who runs, but of God who shows mercy" (v 16). Further, God was righteous and good in showing mercy unto them. It was His will to do so, and that made it right.

This text does not speak of the whole of the Gentiles, but of a remnant of them. Paul, the writer of this Epistle, was raised up by God to "bear His name before the Gentiles, kings, and the people of Israel" (Acts 9:15). He was chosen to be a "light unto the Gentiles" (Acts 13:47). This gracious provision was not granted in response to a plea from the Gentiles. They were not driven by a deep sense of their need for righteousness to seek the Lord or His righteousness. The words of Jesus were certainly not being fulfilled in them: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matt 6:33). Yet,

As marvelous as the testimony of nature is, it says absolutely nothing about God being righteous or man needing righteousness. Still, the fact that they did not seek the righteousness that comes from God only accentuated their sinful condition.

even though they were not seeking righteousness from God, they obtained it. What a marvelous display of Divine mercy!

Some of the First Gentiles

The Gentiles were not the first to obtain righteousness. Although Peter announced on the day of Pentecost that the promise was to those who were "afar off," some years past before any of their number was actually made righteous. Among the Gentiles who attained this righteousness were the city of Samaria (Acts 8:5-8), the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:27-39), Cornelius (Acts 10:1-48), and Lydia (Acts 16:13-14).

An Objection

It might be countered that each of the above had been exposed to the truth, and thus were, in some sense, seeking. The Samaritans were a sort of half-breed. They were the result of the Israelites intermarrying with the Babylonians following the Babylonian captivity. Thus, they might be considered Jewish to some extent. The Ethiopian eunuch had been to Jerusalem to worship, and thus might be considered to be seeking favor with God. Cornelius was a devout man who prayed to God always, and gave alms of all he had, and thus might be said to be seeking the Lord. Lydia was praying at a riverside when she first heard the Gospel, obviously engaged in some form of quest for Divine favor.

There is no indication that any of these people were aware of an available righteousness from God until they heard the Gospel. Further, nothing in Scripture indicates they were seeking to be made righteous. That very concept was little known prior to Christ Jesus.

Even if a person chooses to discount the Gentiles just mentioned, there are others who attained unto righteousness who were in no way seeking it. The Philippian jailor is a case in point (Acts 16:27-31). The barbarous people on the island of Melita are another example (Acts 28:1-9). It is possible to name others like some devout Greeks and chief women from Thessalonica (Acts 17:1-4), and certain men, Dionysius, and Damaris, from Athens (Acts 17:34). So far as we know, none of these were engaged in any quest for the righteousness of God, yet they attained unto it.

In their cases, the Lord sought them out, and not vice versa. Jesus did say, "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10). Again He said, "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd" (John 10:16). Later, in the tenth chapter of Romans, the Lord will affirm, "I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me" (Rom 10:20).

This is a most blessed circumstance which accounts for the salvation of multitudes.

RIGHTEOUSNESS BY FAITH

“... even the righteousness which is by faith.”^{NASB} The Spirit will now be more specific about His meaning. Righteousness was not simply thrown upon the Gentiles, covering their wretchedness like a blanket. While some may be disposed to imagine this would bring glory to God, it would not.

There is a Divinely appointed means by which righteousness is “attained.” That means cannot be ignored. God will always honor it. As we will see, that means involves both God and the recipient of righteousness. God gives righteousness, but faith appropriates it.

The Gentiles did not climb into righteousness, they obtained it. They did not obtain it because they measured up, but because they had faith. They did not become righteous through their own efforts, but were “made righteous” by the “obedience” of Christ (5:19). This is the very righteousness announced in the Gospel, in which “a righteousness from God is revealed, a righteousness that is by faith from first to last”^{NIV} (1:17).

Salvation, in all of its aspects, whether of the Jews or the Gentiles, is “of the Lord” (Jonah 2:9). It is ever true, “Salvation belongs to the LORD” (Psa 3:8). And again it is written, “But the salvation of the righteous is from the LORD” (Psa 37:39). Particularly regarding becoming righteous, the Lord declares, “And their righteousness is from Me, says the LORD”^{NKJV} (Isa 54:17). This righteousness was attained by the Gentiles, who were not seeking after it, and it was attained through their faith.

In the case of the Gentiles, the working of God was as effective as His choice of Isaac (9:7), and His love of Jacob (9:13). The Lord had mercy upon them because He wanted to, even though they fell short of His glory. He had compassion upon them because He wanted to, even though they were “not a people.”

Further Declaration of the Circumstance

- God would justify the heathen through faith (Gal 3:8).
- God justified the uncircumcision through faith (Rom 3:30).
- The door of faith was opened to the Gentiles, even though they were not seeking it (Acts 14:27).
- God granted the Gentiles “repentance to life” (Acts 11:18).

ISRAEL PURSUED IT, BUT DID NOT ATTAIN IT

“³¹ But Israel, pursuing the law of righteousness, has not attained to the law of righteousness.”

Although they were the only elected nation in the world, and although they were given every possible advantage, yet they did not attain to the one thing they needed – righteousness. If all the flesh requires is tutelage and direction to attain unto righteousness, the Jews should be able to do it. They were chosen by God, becoming favored of Him “above all people that are upon the face of the earth” (Deut 7:6; Ex 19:5). He “loved” them, showing them favor, delivering them from bondage, and giving them power over their enemies. He gave them a good and righteousness Law, such as was given to no other nation. Moses told Israel, “What other nation is so great as to have their gods near them the way the LORD our God is near us whenever we pray to him? And what other nation is so great as to have such righteous decrees and laws as this body of laws I am setting before you today?”^{NIV} (Deut 4:7-8).

Let it be clear, it simply is not possible for flesh to have more of an advantage than was given to Israel. If it is possible done to My vineyard That I have not done in it? Why then, when I expected it to bring forth good grapes, Did it bring forth wild grapes?”^{NKJV} (Isa 5:4).

Although they were the only elected nation in the world, and although they were given every possible advantage, yet they did not attain to the one thing they needed – righteousness. If all the flesh requires is tutelage and direction to attain unto righteousness, the Jews should be able to do it.

for flesh to be trained, or schooled into righteousness, Israel will become righteous by this means.

How could God have possibly been more gracious to them? What more could He have done for them? Hear His lament over them. “What more could have been

Could He have chastened them more, making them righteous by the administration of His rod? Hear Him reply. “Why should you be stricken again? You will revolt more and more. The whole head is sick, And the whole heart faints. From the sole of the foot even to the head, There is no soundness in it, But wounds and bruises and putrefying sores; They have not been closed or bound up, Or soothed with ointment”^{NKJV} (Isa 1:5-6). Again the Lord says to them, “In vain have I smitten your children; they received no correction: your own sword hath devoured your prophets, like a destroying lion” (Jer 2:30). Of them He said, “Because I have cleansed you, and you were not cleansed” (Ezek 24:13).

Do men dare to speak of advantages, as though they made men better? Is it possible for the Lord to put flesh in a situation where it will reform itself and suddenly become good? Hear the word of the Lord to Israel. “Now will I sing to my well beloved a song of my beloved touching his vineyard. My well beloved hath a vineyard in a very fruitful hill: and he fenced it, and gathered out the stones thereof, and planted it with the choicest vine, and built a tower in the midst of it, and also made a winepress therein: and he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes” (Isa 5:1-2).

Those with a penchant for procedures and disciplines must consider their ways. There are countless Christian men who are teaching people to pursue uprightness by law. They suppose if people are given enough rules, and if they follow them faithfully, they will be transformed into righteous people. All of this is particularly reprehensible since God has set the nation of Israel before us as an example of the total vanity of this approach. He gave them righteous laws. He provided wonderful promises as an incentive to keep those laws. He issues fearful threats and curses to provoke them to faithfulness. He took up their cause, fighting their battles, delivering them from their enemies. He gave them godly judges and kings, and raised up holy prophets to apprise them of His will, and discover their condition to them. He provided them a land in which they could devote themselves to Him, and caused peace for them by changing the heart of their enemies. How is it possible for any more advantage to be given to the flesh?

The Spirit will now reveal why the Israelites did not attain to righteousness. It will not be because they did not try, for they “pursued” the law of righteousness.

PURSUING

“... but Israel, pursuing . . .” Other versions read, “But Israel, which followed after,”^{KJV} “but Israel, who did strive for,”^{RSV} and “But the Jews, who tried so hard.”^{NLT} The word “pursued,” or “followed after,” is a very strong one. It indicates aggressiveness, and is by no means casual. From the standpoint of language, it means to “pursue, follow after, and seek after.” It is the same word used to describe aggressive persecution (Gal 1:23; Phil 3:6).

These are the words of the Spirit, and they are precise. Men may conclude from the history of Israel that they did NOT pursue after righteousness, but rather neglected the whole matter. The Holy Spirit concludes that they DID pursue it, but did not obtain it. We do well to give heed to these words, for a significant point is about to be made.

There are countless Christian men who are teaching people to pursue uprightness by law. They suppose if people are given enough rules, and if they follow them faithfully, they will be transformed into righteous people.

THE LAW OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

The righteousness Israel zealously followed after is called “the law of righteousness.” The RSV reads, “the righteousness which is based on law.” The point is that they tried to measure up to the requirements of the Law. They attempted to do what the Lord told them to do, endeavoring to become righteous by fulfilling the “law of commandments contained in ordinances” (Eph 2:15).

Not the Same as the Righteousness of God

“The law of righteousness,” or “the righteousness that is based on the law, did not succeed in fulfilling that law,”^{NRSV} is not to be equated with “the righteousness of God.” This is a righteousness described in the Law, and that was wed to the Law. This righteousness did not depend upon God, but upon men. The Law was precise in its requirements, but its statutes and ordinances were not designed to lead men into a righteous state.

The “righteousness of God” is pointedly declared to have been revealed “without,” or “apart from the Law” (3:21). The Law did testify of the righteousness, but had no ability to produce it. It could not make an unrighteous person righteous, or a sinner a saint. It could not change a person’s character or status, but only define it.

An Objection

The sophist will remonstrate, declaring that Israel did not pursue righteousness. Their hearts were far from God, as both the prophets and Jesus affirmed (Isa 29:13; Matt 15:8). How can such a people be said to have followed after the law of righteousness? Did not the prophets affirm Israel did NOT hearken to His words and had rejected His Law (Jer 6:19)? Did not God set His law before them, and did they not forsake it, refuse to obey His voice, and walk not in it (Jer 9:13). How can such a people be said to have pursued after the law of righteousness?

The point being made is that flesh is incapable of a consistent and effective effort to obtain righteousness.

The Israelites did the best anyone can do in the flesh, our blessed Lord Himself being the single exception. The flesh cannot be cultured spiritually – even by a good, holy, and spiritual law. Men needed to be taught this, and God used Israel to bring this truth home to our hearts. The nature of the flesh cannot be changed, and hence it cannot be made righteous. Whatever is born of the flesh “is flesh,” and can be nothing more. That is precisely why Jesus said, “You must be born again” (John 3:6-7)

What About David?

Someone might cite David, declaring that he was under the Law, yet seemed more successful in his efforts to be right with God. Was he not a man after God’s own heart (Acts 13:22)? This was, indeed, the case. Yet, David was motivated by faith, not by a mere quest for the law of righteousness. His petitions for grace confirmed he had seen more than the rest of the Israelites. “Hide Thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities.

Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from Thy presence; and take not Thy Holy Spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation; and uphold me with Thy free Spirit” (Psa 51:10-12).

Those are the words of faith, showing David to be different from those who pursued righteousness through the Law. He sought for a new heart – one created by God Almighty (Psa 51:10). The Law chided Israel saying, “Therefore circumcise the foreskin of your heart, and be stiff-necked no longer” (Deut 10:16).

The Prophets challenged the people, “make you a new heart and a new spirit,” but the law provided neither the direction nor the power to do so.

THEY DID NOT ATTAIN

Having established the essentiality of righteousness, the Spirit is careful to tell us Israel did not attain the righteousness they sought. Israel “has not attained to the law of righteousness.” Clarifying that this refers to the righteousness outlined in the Law, other versions read, they “did not arrive at that law,”^{NASB} they “did not succeed in fulfilling that law,”^{NASB} and “who tried so hard to get right with God by keeping the law, never succeeded.”^{NLT} All of their efforts were futile – utterly useless.

This circumstance is precisely why it is written, “For if that first covenant had been faultless, then no place would have been sought for a second” (Heb 8:7). The Law was not flawed in character. Nor, indeed, did it come short in its requirements. It was a holy, just, and good Law (Rom 7:12). However, it had no power to change men, and men needed to be changed!

WHY DID NOT ISRAEL ATTAIN RIGHTEOUSNESS?

“^{32a} Why? Because they did not seek it by faith, but as it were, by the works of the law.” The Spirit will not leave us to conjecture about why Israel did not attain to the law of righteousness– why it did not become righteous before God by keeping the Law. He will confirm to us that men cannot be made righteous by procedure.

REFRESHING OUR MIND

Remember, the Spirit is confirming to our hearts that man has fallen too far to recover himself. To confirm this, he will direct our attention to Israel. With the single exception of the Lord Jesus, they were the best of all flesh.

Miraculously Birthed

They were a Divinely created nation, springing forth from a man, whose body was as good as dead, and a woman who had no capacity for giving birth. As it is written, “Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised” (Heb 11:11). And again, “Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable” (Heb 11:12).

Divinely Cultured

Israel was a Divinely cultured nation. There were benefits applying exclusively to them that would enable them to lift themselves out of the quagmire of sin – if such a thing was possible. The extent of these advantages is staggering to consider. They included “the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever” (9:4-5). It simply is not possible to water from the flinty rock (Neh 9:15). He subdued their enemies, granting them victories that could never have been achieved naturally (Psa 78:53). He gave them judges and kings, and holy prophets as well (Judges 2:16; Acts 13:22). He gave them a land, then blessed the land (Num 20:12; Jer 2:7).

How will a people with such marvelous advantages fair in seeking to attain the law of righteousness? Our text affirms they “followed after the law of righteousness,” yet “hath not attained to the law of righteousness.” Carefully note, the Spirit does not say they did not seek this righteousness! Rather, they DID pursue the righteousness that comes from keeping the Law.

Now the Spirit will tell us why they did not attain what they pursued.

SEEKING BY FAITH

“Why not? Because they did not strive for it on the basis of faith . . .”^{NASB} Israel’s quest for righteousness was not driven by faith! They did not seek after righteousness because they believed God, nor did they trust in Him in order that they might become righteous.

The Lesson to be Learned

Here we come to grips with the give the flesh any greater advantage.

Protection and Provision

If the flesh can be trained to be righteous, it will occur in Israel. The Lord fed them miraculously with bread from heaven, and satisfied their thirst with manner in which God instructed the world of their spiritual impotence. He gave Israel 1,500 years to keep the demands of the Law in their own strength. He gave them all of the information they needed. He fortified those demands with promises to lead them, and curses to push them. He devoted Himself exclusively to them, sending them His “servants the prophets, daily rising up early and sending them” (Jer 7:25). Israel did not want for information. They had all of the incentives possible. They were protected and nurtured to the fullest extent possible. Yet, they did not seek the righteousness of God by faith, and translations. “However, the Law is not of faith; on the contrary, HE WHO PRACTICES THEM SHALL LIVE BY THEM.”^{NASB} “The law is not based on faith; on the contrary, ‘The man who does these things will live by them.’”^{NIV} “But the law does not rest on faith; on the contrary, ‘Whoever does the works of the law will live by them.’”^{NRSV} “But the law does not depend on faith; rather, ‘the one who does these things will live by them.’”^{NAB} “And the Law is based not on faith but on the principle, whoever complies with it will find life in it.”^{NJB}

The Law was a system of doing, and depended solely upon the doer. This was clearly stated in the Law. “Ye shall therefore keep My statutes, and My judgments: which if a man do, he shall live in them: I am the LORD” (Lev 18:5). This same affirmation is found in Nehemiah 9:29 and Ezekiel 20:11,13. Jesus alluded to this when He told the rich young ruler, “but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments” (Matt 19:17). Our Lord also affirmed this to a young lawyer whom He questioned concerning the principle commandments: “Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live” (Lk 10:25-28). Earlier in Romans Paul wrote, “For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them” (Rom 10:5).

In these texts life (“shall live by them,” or “in them”) is equated with becoming righteous. To be alive unto God is to be righteous before Him. Thus our text refers to “the law of righteousness,” or the Law by which righteousness could be realized.

The Law Spoke as Though It Could be Done

Flesh is confused by the promises of the Law. It imagines it can keep the Law, and thus engages in efforts to do so. To the novice, it may appear as though the Law encouraged the thought that men could be righteous through their obedience to the Law. A sampling of its promises will serve to confirm this.

- ❑ “Now it shall come to pass, if you diligently obey the voice of the LORD your God, to observe carefully ALL His commandments which I command you today, that the LORD your God will set you high above all nations of the earth. And all these blessings shall come upon you and overtake you, because you obey the voice of the LORD your God: Blessed shall you be . . .” (Deut 28:1-3a).
- ❑ “And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken diligently unto My commandments which I command you this day, to love the LORD your God, and to serve Him with ALL your heart and with ALL your soul, that I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil. And I will send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat and be full” (Deut 11:13-14).
- ❑ “Only if thou CAREFULLY HEARKEN unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all these commandments which I command thee this day. For the LORD thy God blesseth thee, as He promised thee: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee” (Deut 15:5-6).
- ❑ “And said, If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, and wilt do that which is right in His sight, and wilt give ear to His commandments, and keep ALL His statutes, I will put none of these diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians: for I am the LORD that healeth thee” (Ex 15:26).

Not one word is said about believing, only doing! The reward for this doing was sufficient incentive to compel the Israelites to engage in the effort. Their attempts would confirm that the kind of response demanded by the Law simply was not possible. Thus the Law was given

The Law neither demanded or encouraged faith! It was a system of doing, not of believing! You will search in vain for any word under the Law that commanded people to believe God. The Law does not relate to faith nor require it.

therefore did not become righteous.

The Law Is Not of Faith

Here is an arresting consideration that we do well to ponder. “And the law is not of faith: but, The man that doeth them shall live in them” (Gal 3:12). The Law neither demanded or encouraged faith! It was a system of doing, not of believing! You will search in vain for any word under the Law that commanded people to believe God. The Law does not relate to faith nor require it. The meaning of the Galatian verse is that righteousness cannot be attained by keeping the Law. It simply is not possible, and that is why Israel did not attain to righteousness. They sought it by an impossible means.

The remarkable strength of this consideration is reflected in the various

“that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God” (Rom 3:19).

THE WORKS OF THE LAW

“ . . . but as if it were based on works.” ^{NRSV} These are not the “wonderful works of God” (Acts 2:11), but the achievements of men. These works must be perfect, flawless, and consistent. They cannot be seasonal, sporadic, or inconsistent. ALL of the commandments must be kept ALL OF THE TIME, or “always.” The Law did not demand that men TRY to keep it, but that they do so, and that without flaw.

The Lord knew Israel would utterly fail in their attempt to keep the Law, and thus an elaborate system was instituted to address their imperfections. The tabernacle service, the high priests, priests, and sacrifices were all instituted to address Israel’s imperfect obedience. That is why there was an altar, a laver, an altar of incense, and a mercy seat over the ark of the covenant. None of these would have been required if righteousness could be realized by keeping the Law.

When Israel declared “we will hear it, and do it,” they meant well, fully intending to do what they said (Deut 5:27). Tragically, they did not realize the weakness of the flesh. However, God did, and when He heard their words He said, “O that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!” (Deut 5:29).

The Curse of the Law

In His death, Jesus delivered us from “the curse of the Law,” liberating us from its condemnation. Thus it is written, “Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us (for it is written, ‘Cursed is everyone who hangs on a tree’” (Gal 3:13). False prophets of our day have cited this passage, declaring that poverty and disease are the curse of the Law. In so doing, they have thrust their listeners into a deep sleep, hiding the truth from them.

We do not need men to interpret the curse of the Law for us. The Lord has spoken quite clearly on this matter. An unequivocal curse is pronounced upon all who rely upon law-keeping. “All who rely on observing the law are under a curse, for it is written: ‘Cursed is everyone who does not continue to do everything”

The Lord knew Israel would utterly fail in their attempt to keep the Law, and thus an elaborate system was instituted to address their imperfections.

“written in the Book of the Law” ^{NIV} (Gal 3:10). Other versions read, “CURSED IS EVERYONE WHO DOES NOT ABIDE BY ALL THINGS WRITTEN IN THE BOOK OF THE LAW, TO PERFORM THEM.” ^{NASB} “Cursed is everyone who does not observe and obey all the things written in the book of the law.” ^{NRSV} “Cursed is everyone who does not continue to do everything written in the Book of the Law.” ^{NIB} “A curse is on everyone who does not keep on doing all the things which are ordered in the book of the law.” ^{BBE}

The Law demanded that ALL of the commandments be observed ALL of the time. Confirming the seriousness of the demand, the curse of God is pronounced upon all who fail to do so. There are no exceptions to the rule. That is why no person, regardless of acumen or discipline, can be justified by the Law. Thus it is written, “Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law but by faith in Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Christ Jesus, that we might be justified by faith in Christ and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law no flesh shall be justified [or made righteous]” (Gal 2:16).

THE RELEVANCE OF THIS

This message is certainly up-to-date. In our time, there is a renewal of law-preaching. We do well to beware of it, for it is bringing a snare upon the people.

The Prosperity Movement

The prosperity promises given under the Law are being held out to people as a reality they can possess under Christ. These purveyors of delusion have no regard whatsoever to the curse pronounced against all who attempt to be right before God by “the works of the Law.” Fifteen hundred years of Israel’s history are swept under the theological rug as though they did not even exist.

Under the Law, not a single promise of prosperity was offered to those who believed. They were only offered to those who perfectly kept the law (Deut 28:1-13). If they turned aside from any of God’s words, they would be cursed (Deut 28:14-68). The curses were numerous and staggering in content. If Israel did not keep all of God’s laws all of the time, those curses are all they could expect to receive from God.

Justification by Works

On the other hand, others are teaching the works of the Law as a means to becoming righteous before God. They go to the book of James, distorting its message, and preaching it as though it was the Gospel of Christ instead of a rebuke to spiritually indolent people. Taking the words “justified by works” (James 2:21,24,25), these teachers approach being righteous precisely as the Law, overlooking that James also added, “For whoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is guilty of all” (James 2:10).

James is speaking of the evidence of justification, not its cause. We know this because James adduces Abraham’s faith as the cause of his righteousness and his works as the evidence of it. “But do you want to know, O foolish man, that faith without works is dead? Was not Abraham our father justified by works when he offered Isaac his son on the altar? Do you see that faith was working together with his works, and by works faith was made perfect? And the Scripture was fulfilled which says, ‘Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness.’ And he was called the friend of God. You see then that a man is justified by works, and not by faith only” (James 2:20-24).

Between the time Abraham “believed God” (Gen 15:6), and the offering up of Isaac (Gen 22), forty-eight years passed. It is the height of absurdity to say Abraham’s justification did not occur until he took Isaac to the mount chosen by God in Moriah. We are categorically told that Abraham was justified BEFORE he was circumcised, which was a considerable time before God told him to sacrifice Isaac (Rom 4:10). James, therefore, refers to the confirmation of Abraham’s justification. That is, his obedience verified that he had been made righteous.

James reasons in this manner because the people to whom he was writing were not living by faith. They had become friends of the world (4:4), and were living in alienation from God. Thus he showed them that obedience and works DO flow from faith. The “works” of which he spoke were not the “works of the law,” but the works of faith. These are works that are not possible under the Law, for “the Law is not of faith” (Gal 3:12).

Our father Abraham did not depend upon the offering of Isaac to make him righteous. That deed was not the root of his righteousness, but its branch. Abraham responded obediently to God’s command because he was righteous. His obedience confirmed that was the case.

It is important that we learn from the Israelites. Righteousness does not come by the works of the Law, otherwise Israel, cultured by God, would have obtained it. This is the very point that is being made in our text. The Gentiles who did not seek righteousness found it, and the Jews who pursued the law of righteousness did not attain to it. The reason for their failure explains similar failures in our day. They did not seek righteousness by faith, and thus they did not attain to it. Those who do not believe on Christ, seeking righteousness by faith, still fail to attain to it.

might have obtained righteousness.

However, this is not the case at all. The point is that they were seeking for righteousness by an unlawful and ineffective means. The righteousness of God can only be appropriated by faith. Israel did not attain to that righteousness because they did not seek it by faith. They rather sought to fulfill a Law that demanded more than they had to give. Those demands were designed to stop their mouths and render them consciously guilty before the Almighty. In the wake of that persuasion they could have received

Between the time Abraham “believed God” (Gen 15:6), and the offering up of Isaac (Gen 22), forty-eight years passed. It is the height of absurdity to say Abraham’s justification did not occur until he took Isaac to the mount chosen by God in Moriah.

Making An End of the Means

The Law was a Divinely appointed means to an end. The end, or objective, was to define sin and convince men of their guilt, thereby stopping their mouths. Israel made the Law an end of itself, seeking to it for righteousness. In such an arrangement, faith was excluded.

It is possible for men to do the same thing today – to make an end out of something intended to be a means. A classic example is our baptism into Christ. That is the appointed means of inducting us into Christ, securing the remission of sins, and becoming alive unto God. When, however, baptism is viewed as an end of itself, men trust in it rather than in God, thereby nullifying its purpose.

CONCLUDING THOUGHTS

Our text is NOT saying that Israel did not pursue the law of righteousness with enough vigor. It is NOT that they were inconsistent in their pursuit of that righteousness. If only, some might reason, they had been more aggressive, they righteousness just as surely as Cornelius, Lydia, and the Philippian jailor.

I am chagrined by the popularity of this approach to righteousness in the nominal church. Moral disciplines and routines are being hawked by the false prophets that offer the guarantee of living acceptably before God. However, such a life is only possible by faith, without which it is impossible to please God. If “works” centering in the holy, spiritual, and good Law of God could not attain to righteousness, you may be sure adherence to the demands of lesser laws cannot do so. If men insist on pursuing righteousness through law, it will be said of them as it is said of Israel, they have “not attained to the law of righteousness. Why? Because they did not seek it by faith.” Righteousness cannot be realized apart from faith. It is simply not possible. Faith takes hold of righteousness. The Spirit will now elaborate on the futile effort of the Israelites, detailing what frustrated their efforts. He is showing us the necessity of faith.

THEY STUMBLER AT THE STUMBLING STONE

“^{32a} For they stumbled at that || stumbling stone.” This is the || explanation for Israel’s pursuit of

The Means by Which We Become Righteous Is Again Brought to Our Attention--by Given O. Blakely righteousness by means of the Law. As will be developed in the next verse, the “stumbling stone” was the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the appointed means of men becoming righteous before God.

Jesus is only relevant to men if there is no other way to become righteous. If He is viewed as just another teacher, or one who presents some other alternative, He at once becomes a source of offense. This is why Jesus is not preached more zealously. It is precisely why men can be diverted to matters of Law rather than the necessity of a righteousness that is without spot or wrinkle. This is why religious people are easily diverted to domestic, social, and political issues. It is why economic matters are fundamental to some, while organizational issues seem primary to others. Like Israel, such people are stumbling at the stumbling stone.

WHAT IT MEANS TO STUMBLE

Simply put, the Israelites stumbled over Jesus because He was not what they expected Him to be. Isaiah foretold Jesus would not be perceived as critical to men. “He had no beauty or majesty to attract us to Him, nothing in His appearance that we should desire Him. He was despised and rejected by men”^{NIV} (Isa 53:2-3). He did not appear to be what men really needed.

When presented as their King, they replied, “We have no king but Caesar” (John 19:15). Jesus depicted Israel’s response to Him in the parable of “a certain nobleman” who “went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.” When calling his ten servants to himself, he delivered to them his goods, saying, “Occupy till I come.”

are made blind, they have stumbled at the stumbling stone. Although such people appeared to be discerning, when they confronted Jesus, they were blinded by the Light of this world rather than illuminated by Him.

The ultimate stumbling occurred

Jesus is only relevant to men if there is no other way to become righteous. If He is viewed as just another teacher, or one who presents some other alternative, He at once becomes a source of offense. This is why Jesus is not preached more zealously.

However, “his citizens” hated him, and sent a message after him saying, “We will not have this man to reign over us” (Lk 19:12-14). They were stumbling over the nobleman just like the Israelites stumbled over Christ.

In this case, “stumbling” is not simply tripping. Rather, it is being so intent upon self-will that Divine provision actually causes the person to fall. Jesus put it this way, “For judgment I am come into this world, that they which see not might see; and that they which see might be made blind” (John 9:39). When those who see when the Israelites cried out to Pilate, “Let Him be crucified!” When Pilate asked what evil He had done, they only cried out the more, “Let Him be crucified.” When Pilate sought to wash his hands of all involvement in the matter, the Israelites cried out, “His blood be on us, and on our children” (Matt 27:22-25). How could they speak in such a manner? They had stumbled over the stumbling stone! Who Jesus was had brought out who they really were. The One who was intended to bring them advantage, caused them to be cursed. This was because “they received Him not.”

A STUMBLING STONE AND ROCK OF OFFENSE

^{33a} As it is written: ‘Behold, I lay in Zion a stumbling stone and rock of offense . . .’ When men have wicked hearts, it is God’s manner to expose that wickedness by setting goodness before them. In this way, the wretchedness of self is more clearly seen, as well as the justice of God. The very thing that brings salvation to the believer brings condemnation to the unbeliever. There are several examples of this in Scripture.

□ THE PREACHING OF THE GOSPEL. “And He said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned” (Mk 16:15-26). The same Gospel that brings salvation to the one believing it, is the occasion of damnation to those who do not believe it. To the unbeliever, it is a stumbling stone.

□ THE INFLUENCE OF THE RIGHTEOUS. “For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish: to the one we are the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?” (2 Cor 2:15-16). The same godly influence that promotes life among the believers, promotes death among unbelievers. To them, it is a stumbling stone.

□ THE RETURN OF JESUS. “And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, In flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when He shall come to be glorified in His saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day” (2 Thess 1:7-10). The same coming that brings glory to the saints, and admiration from them, brings vengeance, punishment, and destruction to the wicked. To them, it will be a stumbling stone.

These texts confirm the effect of a stumbling stone. We will now see that the Almighty God places the stumbling stone so that it will accomplish His purpose and reveal the hearts of men.

PLACED BY GOD

“Behold, I lay in Zion . . . ”

The text is taken from Isaiah 28:16. “Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation.” Peter also refers to this Divine work. “Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, Behold, I lay in Zion a chief corner stone, elect, precious” (1 Pet 2:6). The Lord Jesus also referred to this event, citing it as an explanation for the chief priest’s and elder’s rejection of Himself. “Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord’s doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes?” (Matt 21:42).

God placed Jesus, the foundation stone, where He was accessible to those who were seeking salvation. He also placed Him where He was observable to those who labored to establish their own righteousness.

The Lord Jesus was placed among men by God Himself. That Divine placement proved to be the undoing of all who pursued the law of righteousness – all who sought to become righteous through their own efforts. To aspire to such a thing is like a blind man trying to give himself sight, or a man with a withered hand attempting to make it whole. Lazarus might as well attempt to return from the dead under his own power as for a man to seek to be righteous by keeping the Law. Such efforts are totally futile, and were revealed to be so when God placed the Foundation Stone among men.

The Stone was laid following His exaltation in heaven. While men were introduced to Him when He walked among them, His role as a Foundation became a reality only after He had been “tried” – proven to be adequate for the salvation of His people.

This was the Stone upon which all valid efforts had to be founded. God will accept no building, or human effort, that is not upon the Foundation of His Son. Those who stumble over Him have refused to accept Him in that ordained capacity. They choose Law over Christ, and works over faith.

This was the Stone upon which all valid efforts had to be founded. God will accept no building, or human effort, that is not upon the Foundation of His Son. Those who stumble over Him have refused to accept Him in that ordained capacity. They choose Law over Christ, and works over faith.

THE STUMBLING STONE

Isaiah spoke powerfully of this Stone becoming the occasion of stumbling. “Sanctify the LORD of hosts Himself; and let Him be your fear, and let Him be your dread. And He shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offense to both the houses of Israel, for a gin and for a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And many among them shall stumble, and fall, and be broken, and be snared, and be taken” (Isa 8:13-15).

Notice how the very One established as a sanctuary became the occasion for stumbling. This fulfilled the prophecy given by Simeon when Jesus was only eight days old. “Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against” (Luke 2:34).

Those who stumble over Jesus do so because they have preferred darkness to light. As Jesus said, “And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil” (John 3:19).

THE ROCK OF OFFENSE

“ . . . and rock of offense.”

This expression is used three times in Scripture: Isaiah 8:14; Romans 9:33; 1 Peter 2:8. Other versions bring out the strength of this statement. “a rock that makes them fall,”^{NIV} “a rock that will make them fall,”^{NRSV} “a rock in the way,”^{BBE} and “a rock to trip people up.”^{NJB}

The Lord will not allow flesh to glory in His presence. The affirmations of the Spirit are unusually strong in this matter. “Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight” (Rom 3:20). “But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence” (1 Cor 1:27-29).

The preaching of Christ throws the Stone of offense in the path of all who are seeking to be righteous through the Law. They will not be able to get around the Stone, and it will bring out their enmity against God. Anyone who refuses to “fall on this Stone” (Matt 21:44) is, by that very circumstance, revealed to be wicked and alienated from God.

The enmity uncovered by the Lord Jesus is so strong it will move Scribes, Pharisees, Saducees, lawyers, and even the high priest, to seek the death of Jesus (John 7:1; Matt 27:1; Mk 15:1). It will compel religious men to seek the death of Paul, even taking a vow not to eat until they have killed him (Acts 9:23-24; 23:12). It will move the Jewish council to stone Stephen, full of the Holy Spirit and faith (Acts 7:58-59).

Let it be clear that the declaration of Christ causes this enmity to rise, and designedly so. It is in this sense that Jesus is a “rock of offense.” He is offensive to all flesh, but never to such an extensive degree as in those who are seeking to be justified by the Law.

AN APPLICATION

Simeon once said of Jesus, “Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against . . . that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed” (Luke 2:34-35).

One of the invaluable ministries of preaching Jesus is the discovery of the hearts of men. The Word of God is said to be “living and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the division of soul and spirit, and of joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart” (Heb 4:12). That is never more true than when the Gospel of Christ is preached! An excellent example of this is found in the preaching of Christ Jesus in a synagogue in Antioch of Pisida. At that time, the Jews were incensed because of the preaching. They were “filled with envy, stumbling and a rock of offense. To the Gentiles, it was a Foundation Stone upon which their lives could be built.

Thus, the pursuit of righteousness

Let it be clear that the declaration of Christ causes this enmity to rise, and designedly so. It is in this sense that Jesus is a “rock of offense.” He is offensive to all flesh, but never to such an extensive degree as in those who are seeking to be justified by the Law.

and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming” (Acts 13:45). On the other hand, the Gentiles, upon hearing the same message, “were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed” (Acts 13:48).

The condition of the hearts of these people was known to God all along. However, the proclamation of Christ revealed that condition. To put it another way, the Foundation Stone was laid in Zion. To the Jews, it became a stone of through the Law equates to a rejection of Christ Jesus as the Foundation Stone. In other words, the Jews did not attain unto righteousness because they rejected Christ Jesus. Contrary to the preaching of Law, the Gospel requires faith. It declares a Christ that cannot be seen. It proclaims His accomplishments that cannot be demonstrated in the flesh. It also presumes the deadness and alienation of all people. In such a Gospel, a righteousness from God is revealed, and it is refreshing to all who believe it. To them, it chronicles righteousness for all those who believe. What a blessed message!

THE ONE WHO BELIEVES

^{33b} “And whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame.” Other versions read, “He who believes in Him will not be disappointed”^{NASB} “the one who trusts in him will never be put to shame,”^{NIV} “And whosoever believeth in him shall not be confounded,” Duoy-Rheims “he who relies on this will not be brought to disgrace.”^{NJB}

The text is a loose quotation, but gives the precise sense, of Isaiah 45:17. “But Israel shall be saved in the LORD with an everlasting salvation: ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end.” Isaiah 54:4 also reads, “Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed: neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame.” Speaking of those who put their trust in the Lord, Joel said, “Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed: neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame” (Joel 2:27).

BELIEVING ON HIM

Believing on Christ is not mere intellectual assent, or casual agreement. Believing on Christ is trusting Him to save, depending on Him for righteousness. Believing involves the abandonment of self-confidence and total dependency on Christ to do in us what He has been ordained to do.

This is the work of God – to believe on His Son. “This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent” (John 6:29). No accomplishments have been achieved until we are brought to believe on Christ! What is more, it is “given unto” us to believe (Phil 1:29). When those with tender hearts hear the Gospel of Christ they believe “through grace” (Acts 18:27). Those who “believe on Him” receive the Holy Spirit (John 7:39). Such will be saved (Acts 16:31). In accordance with our text, righteousness will be imputed to those who “believe on Him who raised Jesus from the dead” (Rom 4:24). The end, or objective, of believing on Christ is nothing less than “eternal life” (1 Tim 1:16).

To “believe on Him” is to take hold of what He says, refusing to let it go. It is to seek refuge in Him for protection, and expect to be “made the righteousness of God in Him” (2 Cor 5:21). Believing on Him is cleaving to Him with “purpose of heart” (Acts 11:23). It is depending upon His guidance and craving His Person.

Believing brings God’s righteousness to us – the righteousness the Israelites missed because they did not seek it by faith. How gloriously and refreshingly this is stated in the next chapter of Romans. “For with the heart one believes unto righteousness” (10:10). Others versions read, “For it is with your heart that you believe and are justified.”^{NIV} “For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness.”^{NAU} “For with the heart man has faith to get righteousness.”^{BBE} “For it is by believing in your heart that you are made right with God.”^{NLT}

Faith, or believing on Jesus, enables the individual to appropriate the righteousness of God now. It also empowers us to “wait for the hope of righteousness” (Gal 5:5). This is “the righteousness for which we hope.”^{NIV} We have it now by imputation, we will have it in the world to come by nature, with no competing influences.

NOT PUT TO SHAME

“And whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame.” The word “shame” means dishonored, caused to blush, or confounded. The promise is that no person will be disadvantaged by believing on Christ. Those who choose to trust in Him as He is revealed through the Gospel will never be confounded or abashed because of it.

Trusting the Lord is never a disappointing experience! God will not allow those who believe on His Son to be put to shame, embarrassed, or confounded will respond there is no way to know for sure what God is going to do, and therefore we cannot trust Him. But flesh is wrong! We can trust Him! When we trust the Lord to do what He desires, whether in us or in others, we will not be put to shame because of it. The Lord by life’s circumstances. The idea is that when we trust the Lord, He does in and for us what He has said He will do. We will “receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting” (Luke 18:30).

Allow me to be even more specific in this matter. This, I believe, is the sense of the text. The living God has been represented as having mercy on whomever He wills to have mercy. Freely, it is declared that He has compassion on anyone He desires. He hardens whom He wills, even raising up men like Pharaoh in order to make His power known, and have His name proclaimed throughout the entire world.

Can we trust a God like that? Flesh never works against those who trust in Him! That is something every soul must grasp.

The revelation of God is brought to its peak in Christ Jesus. There God is seen most clearly, and what He declares is understood most precisely. Because the “fulness of the Godhead” dwells in Him bodily (Col 2:9), He most accurately projects the Person and purpose of God.

Therefore, when we believe on Him, God will see to it we are not disappointed, ashamed, or confounded. No one will come short of the righteousness of God who believes on His Son. Of that, you may be sure! God has promised, and He cannot lie.

CONCLUSION

Again, we have plowed in a field that has been left fallow by the professed church. Because of this, many souls have been left impoverished, weak in the faith, and confused by the working of the Lord. The pursuit of righteousness by means of a law is not at all uncommon. Countless believers are relying upon procedures, rule-keeping, and institutional membership for righteousness. But no person can be made righteous, or acceptable to God, by such means.

The Law given to Israel was the best of all moral codes. When it comes to being regulated by law, there is no better law than the one given to Israel. As it is written, “And what other nation is so great as to have such righteous decrees and laws as this body of laws I am setting before you today?”^{NIV} (Deut 4:8). If this is the means by which righteousness is attained, it would have come through the Law of Moses. As it is written, “For if there had been a law given which could have given life, truly righteousness would have been by the law” (Gal 3:21).

What men needed was a “better covenant,” not a better law! They needed “better sacrifices,” not a better law. We needed blood that spoke better things “than that of Abel” – blood that did not cry out for judgment and condemnation but for life and righteousness (Heb 12:24). Praise God, that is precisely what we receive in Christ Jesus. It is what is announced in “the glorious Gospel of the blessed God” (1 Tim 1:11).

PUTTING IT ALL TOGETHER

What is the relationship of all of this to the condition of the Israelites, Paul’s “kinsmen according to the flesh”? Much every way! First, we must not be so foolish as to imagine God has repudiated them. He can have mercy on whomever He wills, and who is willing to say God will never again have mercy upon Israel? Divine acceptance is based upon faith, not achievements. If, therefore, the Gentiles could appropriate righteousness by faith, and without seeking after it, what law of reason would lead men to believe such a blessing is not possible for the Israelites?

This subject will be developed extensively in the next two chapters. A foundation has been put in place in preparation for that development. The Spirit will build upon the marvelous realities declared in this ninth chapter.

The Lord has revealed things difficult for the flesh to receive, and He will show us greater things. He is calling upon us to trust the Lord – to believe on Him. Throughout this book, faith has been set forth as effectual. It obtains what no law can bring to you. It is always honored and blessed by God. We see it in Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. It can be seen in the Gentiles, who attained to righteousness by faith. It can also be seen in Paul, who was transformed by the grace of God.

The Gospel of Christ is God's power in order to salvation. It remains that power "to the Jew first." It is laden with good things to be believed, and marvelous promises to be obtained – "to the Jew first." There is no reason why we cannot join Paul in the consideration of Israel. We can also participate in His promises.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 33

A HOPE-DRIVEN PRAYER FOR ISRAEL

^{10:1} Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they may be saved. ² For I bear them witness that they have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge. ³ For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and seeking to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted to the righteousness of God. ⁴ For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes. ⁵ For Moses writes about the righteousness which is of the law, "The man who does those things shall live by them." ⁶ But the righteousness of faith speaks in this way, "Do not say in your heart, 'Who will ascend into heaven?' " (that is, to bring Christ down from above) ⁷ or, " 'Who will descend into the abyss?' " (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead). ⁸ But what does it say? "The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart" (that is, the word of faith which we preach): ⁹ that if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved. ¹⁰ For with the heart one believes unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. ¹¹ For the Scripture says, "Whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame." ¹² For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek, for the same Lord over all is rich to all who call upon Him. ¹³ For "whoever calls on the name of the LORD shall be saved."

– Romans 10:1-13 ^{NKJV} –

INTRODUCTION

The mind that is "controlled by the Spirit" (Rom 8:6 ^{NIV}) faces the hard realities related to people being alienated from God. It acknowledges that those who have not attained to the righteousness of God have not sought it by faith. Yet, this perception does not cause the heart to grow cold and indifferent toward such people. Particularly in the case of Israel, Paul demonstrates what it means to love our enemies and do good to those who despitely use us (Matt 5:44).

OPPOSED BY THE JEWS

The Jews had been aggressive in their opposition to Paul. Early In his ministry, the Jews in Damascus "took counsel to kill him," watching the gates of the city "day and night to kill him" (Acts 9:23-24). In Antioch of Pisidia "the Jews stirred up the devout and honorable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul," causing him to be expelled from the city (Acts 13:50-51). In Thessalonica, certain Jews stirred up such an uproar in the city, that Paul was forced to leave (Acts 17:4-10). When he came into Berea, "the Jews of Thessalonica came," stirring up the people and forcing him to leave that area also (Acts 17:13-14). When he preached in Corinth, "the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat" (Acts 18:12). When he returned to Jerusalem, "certain of the Jews banded together, and bound themselves under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul" (Acts 23:12).

"Five times" they beat him with "forty stripes minus one" (2 Cor 11:24). Jews from Antioch caused him to stoned and left for dead (Acts 14:19). He declared he was frequently "in perils by mine own countrymen" (2 Cor 11:26). With a tone of grief Paul said of the Jews, "Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men" (1 Thess 2:14).

It would be exceedingly difficult to endure more opposition from your former associates than Paul did from his! When we experience contrariety from those with whom we have traveled, we should run to this passage of Scripture to gain encouragement. There is no need for us to retaliate, or to conduct ourselves against people with harshness and inconsideration. While rebuke and correction are often necessary, and even strong denunciation, our hearts must remain tender and supple.

A CHANGE IN THE MAN

Prior to being in Christ, Saul of Tarsus was aggressive against those who were in conflict with his perception of devotion to God. Confessing to his shameful conduct he said, "I persecuted the church of God" (1 Cor 15:9). He is presented as "breathing threats and murder against the disciples of the Lord,"^{NKJV} even seeking permission to hunt them down like wild animals, bringing them bound to Jerusalem (Acts 9:1). He wrote to the Galatians, "I persecuted the church of God beyond measure and tried to destroy it"^{NKJV} (Gal 1:13).

In regard to that segment of his life, Paul said he was "a persecutor, and injurious" (1 Tim 1:13). And again, "I persecuted this way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women" (Acts 22:4). He was convinced he "must do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth" (Acts 26:9).

But when Saul of Tarsus knowingly confronted the glorified Christ, he was changed! He did not seek out the Jews to persecute them, but to deliver the Gospel to them. He did not return hatred to his enemies, as he did when a Pharisee. He had received a "heart of flesh" (Ezek 11:19; 36:26), and it was supplanted in the hands of the Lord. Now he viewed the Jews as Jesus did, whom the Jews had opposed even more than they did him.

Rather than the oppressive hatred of the Jews driving him to despise them, Paul rises into the heavenly realms by the Holy Spirit. He views them with "the mind of Christ," and thus brings himself into harmony with God's eternal purpose. He refuses to write them off, but rather enters into a certain fervency for their salvation. What is more, he is not ashamed to confess to this desire, showing that it is in perfect accord with both the nature and the purpose of the Living God.

THE COMPULSION OF LEGALISM

There is a certain compulsive nature in legalism – a propensity to be justified by Law. When dominated by this mentality, the individual becomes aggressive against those who oppose him, descending into the realm of flesh and blood to do battle. False religion will drive people to do things against other believers that are astonishing.

It moved the Roman Catholic hierarchy to mandate the death of hundreds of thousands of believers because they did not subscribe to the "laws of the church." It has constrained others to, in the name of Christ, cast faithful believers from their midst because they could not accept the traditions of men. Others have been maligned and their names smeared because they would not embrace the institution as though it was the solitary representative of the living God.

A legalistic mind-set frequently yields a heartless religion. Its constituents become more zealous of conforming people to the manners of the organization than to the image of God's Son. Many of us have drunk from the bitter cup of legalism, and can testify to the truth of these observations.

SOVEREIGNTY AND COLDNESS

It is also necessary to briefly comment on another misconception. Many have opposed the teaching of God's Sovereignty, as declared in this section of Romans, because it seems cold and lifeless. Indeed, some who proclaim the Sovereignty of God, and "the election of grace," appear to justify this conclusion. They think nothing of writing off the souls of men as though the Lord delighted in "the death of the wicked" – which He does not (Ezek 33:11). Such individuals often leave people thinking God is actually willing for some to perish, or is not willing that all men be saved. Both of these are complete misconceptions (2 Pet 3:9; 1 Tim 2:4). God is not heartless, and it is out of order for any of us to be.

Our text will confirm these conclusions. Moved along by the Holy Spirit of God, the same man who spoke of God choosing Isaac, loving Jacob, hating Esau, and raising up Pharaoh, will declare the desire of his heart – that Israel be saved. Lofty truths, when perceived, do not make hearts hard! Knowing and believing that God has mercy on whomever He wills, and hardens whomever He desires, does not dash hope to the ground! We will find in this text that the true apprehension of these realities kindles in the heart hopes and desires for others – especially in regard to the Israelites.

It is necessary to thrust from our minds any notion that knowing God does what He desires, creates coldness and a sense of futility in the hearts of men. Doctrines that, when embraced, leave men and women cold and indifferent cannot be true! When known, “the truth shall make you free” (John 8:32). That freedom involves tenderheartedness, and makes no provision for insensitivity. How gloriously this is seen in the text before us. Here is a human response that brings great glory to God!

TWO KINDS OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

This chapter will develop for us the difference between the righteousness that comes from faith, and that which comes from keeping the Law. It is a critical distinction, for one is possible and the other impossible. One brings Divine acceptance and the other does not. One is the ordained means of becoming righteous, the other is the ordained means of showing righteousness cannot be achieved through human discipline.

It is imperative that the people of God see this distinction. They must not view this as some form of profound theology, intended only for the intellectually elite, or positionally superior. Such distinctions belong to the order of flesh, and have no place among God’s people. Faith is the distinguishing trait in God’s kingdom. That is what gives prominence to the individual, as attested by the eleventh chapter of Hebrews.

The uniqueness of the righteousness that comes from faith puts the salvation of Israel within reach, just as it put it within the reach of the Gentiles. That, of course, is the point of this passage. It reveals with wisdom of God.

A HEART’S DESIRE AND PRAYER

“¹⁰¹ Brethren, my heart’s desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they may be saved.” These are the not words of the mind, but of the heart. They are not the expression of mere sentiment, but of faith and love. This is the way the Apostle speaks to “the household of faith” (Gal 6:10) concerning the Israelites, His “kinsmen according to the flesh.” Because he is being moved by the Holy Spirit, we can conclude this is how the Spirit speaks to the churches about the Jews.

The Promise to Abraham

God, who cannot lie, made certain promises to our father Abraham. The following words are included in those Divine commitments. “And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee” (Gen 12:3). Through Isaac, the child of promise, the promise was repeated to Jacob, “cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee” (Gen 27:29). Even Balaam could not refrain from repeating the words to wicked Balak, who sought to have Israel cursed: “Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee” (Num 24:9).

Words Through David

Knowing the covenant of the Lord to the houses of Judah and Israel (Jer 31:31-44), David was moved by the Spirit to speak of their chief city. “Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee” (Psa 122:6). In his penitential pray, recorded in Psalm 51, he prayed, “Do good in thy good pleasure unto Zion: build thou the walls of

There is no record of Him weeping over any other city, people, or country. When Jerusalem rejected Jesus, He wept. When the Gadarene’s begged Him to leave their country, “He got into the boat and returned”

Jerusalem” (Psa 51:18). The 137th Psalm records these touching words. “If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy” (verses 5-6).

Jeremiah’s Admonition

Jeremiah admonished those who escaped the sword during the ravages of Jerusalem, “Ye that have escaped the sword, go away, stand not still: remember the LORD afar off, and let Jerusalem come into your mind” (Jer 51:50).

Jesus Wept Over Jerusalem

Before His death, Jesus came near to the city of Jerusalem, beheld it, and “wept over it” (Luke 19:41). There is no record of Him weeping over any other city, people, or country. When Jerusalem rejected Jesus, He wept. When the Gadarene’s begged Him to leave their country, “He got into the boat and returned” (Lk 8:37). Jesus went about “all the cities and villages” (Matt 9:35), but He only wept over Jerusalem.

Jesus Prayed for the Jews

The Lord Jesus Himself displayed this attitude from the lowest realm ever occupied by a man in the flesh – the cross. From the depths of His spirit He cried out, “Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do” (Lk 23:34).

Stephen Prayed for the Jews

Stephen prayed in the same manner when his life was being pounded out of him with stones: “he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge” (Acts 7:60). Like that of Paul, his prayer was driven by his acquaintance with Scripture and fellowship with Jesus. At the time he prayed these words, he had witnessed Jesus standing on the right hand of God (7:56), was calling upon God, and asking Jesus to receive his spirit (7:59). It is inconceivable that a human spirit bathed in such glory could pray something foolish or out of harmony with the will of God.

All of this confirms there is an unquestionable foundation for seeking the good of the Israelites, Paul’s “kinsmen according to the flesh.”

A DESIRE OF THE HEART

“... my heart’s desire...”

Unless it can be established to be otherwise, this is a desire of Paul’s “new heart.” It surely is not the desire of a stony heart, which was removed in that he might obtain a new heart, tender and supple in the hands of the Lord.

I know of no Word from God that speaks of illegitimate concerns erupting from the renewed heart. Further, if this was a wrong and futile desire, the Word of the Lord would have searched it out, exposing it (Heb 4:12). In such a case, the Holy Spirit would not have allowed Paul’s desire to be stated without an explanation of some sort.

This is doubtless one of the results of Paul loving the Lord with all of his heart (Deut 6:5; Matt 22:37). I have no doubts that those who deny this is the case will find it utterly impossible to prove otherwise. The textual context of these words allow for no other conclusion. The doctrinal content of the passage demands that we take this view, else the passage is nothing more than the outburst of carnality. I would consider such a conclusion to be blasphemous.

A PRAYER TO GOD

This is more than a mere human desire. It is a “prayer to God.” In this case, the desire of the heart has been wed to the purpose of God. Paul is doing more than letting his request be made known to God (Phil 4:6). Knowing the promises of God, he brings his heart into accord with them. He realizes it is God’s manner to divulge His intentions in order that His people might implore Him to do what He has promised. As it is written, “Then the heathen that are left round about you shall know that I the LORD build the ruined places, and plant that was desolate: I the LORD have spoken it, and I will do it. Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will increase them with men like a flock” (Ezek 36:36-37).

Jeremiah spoke of the same spiritual reality. “For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, says the LORD, thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you a future and a hope. Then you will call upon Me and go and pray to Me, and I will listen to you”^{NKJV} (Jeremiah 29:11-12).

This is an aspect of the Kingdom of God that could do with a great deal more exploration. It reveals an aspect of the Divine nature that allows for the redeemed to become integrally involved in the outworking of God’s purpose. While much of contemporary prayer is self-centered, here is a prayer that is totally selfless, swathed with the light of Divine glory and bathed in God’s eternal purpose. Paul’s desire reflected the mind of Christ and the will of the Father.

THAT THEY MIGHT BE SAVED

The expression “be saved” equates to “attained to righteousness” (9:30). Salvation, from this view, is becoming acceptable to God by having His righteousness imputed to us. That is the very theme that is being developed in Romans – the reception of God’s own righteousness. While that righteousness does impact upon our conduct [thoughts, words, and deeds] it is not our conduct that constitutes us righteous before God. Our faith is counted to us for righteousness, not our conduct (Gen 15:6; Rom 4:3,5). Paul prays that Israel might attain to “the righteousness of faith” (4:13). That is salvation!

When Saul of Tarsus was called to the Apostleship, the scope of his ministry was revealed to Ananias. “But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel” (Acts 9:15). Paul entered into his labors with zeal.

Later in this book, the Apostle to the Gentiles will confess his ardent intention to reach his kinsmen with the Gospel of Christ. He preached to the Gentiles “inasmuch as I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify mine office: if by any means I may provoke to emulation them which are my flesh, and might save some of them” (Rom 11:13-14).

The labors of Paul, therefore, were wedded to his prayers. His prayers were also substantiated and assisted by his labors. Blessed is the person who brings action and prayer together, and does so in strict harmony with the will of God!

ZEAL WITHOUT KNOWLEDGE

“² For I bear them witness that they have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge.” The tenderness and sensitivity of Paul is revealed in this text. Although his kinsmen according to the flesh vigorously opposed him, yet he was able to acknowledge something commendable in them. It was not something that would obtain the righteousness of God. Neither, indeed, was it something that would rescue them from darkness and deception. Nevertheless, it was like a small crack in the door that permitted the light of hope judge and even remove them, He was careful to cite their comely qualities.

□ EPHESUS, who had left their first love. “I know thy works, and thy labor, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars: and hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name’s sake hast labored, and hast not fainted . . . But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the commendation of any sort to the church in Laodicea (Rev 3:14-18). But where there was any evidence of hope, the Lord acknowledged it, commended the people, and urged their full recovery.

This is the sort of spirit Paul has when he speaks of the zeal of the Israelites. It is a comely quality, though it was being misdirected.

WHAT IS ZEAL?

“They have a zeal for God . . .” Zeal is more than hype or carnal excitement. It involves a fervent mind, and a certain jealousy for the object of the zeal. It includes pursuing a perceived advantage, and opposing all that is considered against that advantage. Thus, zeal is seen to have two sides. Ardent affection for and a keen interest in what is sought, and indignation and fierceness toward those opposed to what is sought.

It is a good thing to be able to see tokens of hope in the individuals for whom we pray. They will help to drive our desires and prayers to be more fervent and consistent.

to shed an encouraging ray upon the heart of the Apostle.

The presence of the quality mentioned causes Paul to be even more ardent in his desire for their salvation. It is a good thing to be able to see tokens of hope in the individuals for whom we pray. They will help to drive our desires and prayers to be more fervent and consistent.

BEARING WITNESS

“I bear them witness . . .” A sectarian spirit cannot acknowledge comely qualities in those of other persuasions. Such an one imagines that to see anything appropriate in those perceived as being in error is to approve everything about them.

When the Paul had to rebuke the Galatians for their reversion to the Law, he was careful to bear witness to comely things they had done. “For I bear you record, that, if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me” (Gal 4:15). When the glorified Christ rebuked the wayward churches in Asia, threatening to Nicolaitanes, which I also hate” (Rev 2:2-7).

□ PERGAMOS, who had some among them who held to the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes, which Jesus hated. “I know thy works and where thou dwellest, even where Satan’s seat is: and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, even in those days wherein Antipas was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth” (Rev 2:13-15).

□ THYATIRA, who allowed a false prophetess to teach Christ’s servants to commit fornication and eat things sacrificed to idols. “I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works; and the last to be more than the first” (Rev 2:19-20).

□ SARDIS, who had a name they were alive, but actually were dead. “Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white: for they are worthy” (Rev 3:4).

Confirming that there are some in which no good can be found, Jesus gave no

In our text, Israel did not simply have zeal, but a “zeal for God.”^{NKJV} They were aggressive in their devotion to their perception of Him. They also vigorously opposed those whom they considered to be against Him. Paul knew well of this kind of behavior, for he himself was once zealous in this way. He aggressively sought to serve God. He also energetically opposed and persecuted those he considered to be against God.

One of the dampening effects of a pedantic, or merely academic, approach to the things of God is the diminishing of zeal. In our time, zeal in Christian circles is exceedingly rare. People have grown accustomed to giving only a fragment of their persons to anything pertaining to God. This includes their time, resources, and influence, together with their hearts and minds. Too often, a person who is zealous for the Lord stands out like the proverbial sore thumb.

ZEAL WITHOUT KNOWLEDGE

“ . . . but not according to knowledge.” The zeal of the Israelites was not driven by a proper knowledge of God. Nor, indeed, did it flow from an understanding of the reality and nature of true righteousness. That circumstance removed the effectiveness of their zeal.

Scripture affirms that “it is good to be zealous in a good thing always” (Gal 4:18), but only so! It will never bring advantages to the individual to be zealous for the wrong thing! Misdirected efforts are never the means of appropriating Divine benefits!

Knowledge = Enlightenment

The “knowledge” of reference is not scholastic or theoretical. Rather, this is the knowledge that comes with enlightenment. The NRSV emphasizes this: “I can testify that they have a zeal for God, but it is not enlightened.”

Here, the word “knowledge” comes from the Greek word ἐπίγνωσις, which means precise and correct, or true knowledge. This word is used ten other times in Scripture, and always refers to a supernatural knowledge – one that is given by God.

- ❑ “For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9).
- ❑ “That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God” (Col 1:10).
- ❑ “That their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to the acknowledgment of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ” (Col 2:2).
- ❑ “And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him” (Col 3:10).
- ❑ “Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth” (1 Tim 2:4).

- ❑ “In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth” (2 Tim 2:25).
- ❑ “Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth” (2 progress, producing a zeal that is right.

Our new birth is referred to as the time when we “were illuminated” (Heb 10:32), or “were once enlightened” (Heb 6:4). When “the eyes of your understanding” are “enlightened” (Eph 1:18), zeal for the things of God is the

- ❑ “Paul, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God’s elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness” (Tit 1:1).
- ❑ “For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins” (Heb 10:26).
- ❑ “For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ” (2 Pet 1:8).

The meaning of the expression, therefore, is this: The Israelites have a zeal for God, but it is not the result of being enlightened by God. It is not the outcome of comprehending Him, or being convinced of the availability of His righteousness in Christ Jesus.

The Effects of True Knowledge

Among other things, this confirms the impact that new creatureship has upon the person who is born again. The “new man” is created in order to the attainment of, and progress in true knowledge (Col 3:10). That knowledge moves the individual along the road of spiritual result. As never before, that is when men and women will seek “first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness” (Matt 6:33). Examine your own heart and see if this is not precisely what happened to you!

Profitable Zeal

To be profitable, zeal must proceed from spiritual enlightenment. When it is “not according to knowledge,” it always comes short of the purpose of God. As you can see, enthusiasm and fervency are not ends of themselves.

INSTITUTIONAL ZEAL

It is not uncommon in our day to find people dominated by institutional zeal, or fervor. They are aggressive to maintain and propagate the party line. Many of us have fallen victims to this approach in the past, and are exceedingly thankful we have been delivered from it. Mark it well, those within an institution created, ordered, and condoned by God Almighty fell short of Divine objectives in their zeal. Therefore, you can rest assured that those giving themselves to mere human institutions have absolutely no hope of attaining to righteousness, particularly the righteousness of God. The level of their zeal is of no consequence whatsoever.

THE CAUSE AND EFFECT OF IGNORANCE

“³ For they being ignorant of || God’s righteousness, and seeking to || establish their own righteousness, have not submitted to the righteousness of God.” The Spirit speaks candidly about the failure of the Israelites to appropriate the righteousness contained in the Law. Remember, they were NOT seeking God’s righteousness, but the righteousness set forth in the Law of Moses. It looked to them as though it was attainable, and thus they pursued it with zeal. The Spirit now makes three pungent observations, confirming why the Israelites did not attain to the righteousness of the Law.

IGNORANCE OF GOD’S RIGHTEOUSNESS

“For not knowing about God’s righteousness . . .”^{NASB}
 Other versions read, “Since they did not know the righteousness that comes from God.”^{NIV} “Not having knowledge of God’s righteousness.”^{BBE} “For, in their unawareness of the righteousness that comes from God.”^{NLT} “For they don’t understand God’s way of making people right with Himself.”^{NJB}

Here, what the Israelites did NOT know moved them into inappropriate action. The world says, What you do not know cannot hurt you. How wrong is that foolish aphorism!

Keep in mind “God’s righteousness” refers to the righteousness He GIVES. It is not only His in the sense of belonging to Him. It is also His in the sense of coming from Him to men. The righteousness of which Israel was ignorant was the righteousness God gives to men because of their faith. Had they known about that righteousness, they would have sought it. However, they did not know about it. They were ignorant of it, having no understanding of it.

Why Did They NOT Know?

How is it that the Israelites, chosen and tutored by God, did not know about His righteousness – the righteousness that He gives? It is because the Law gave no hint about this righteousness! In regards to righteousness, it spoke only of man’s doing, never of God’s giving.

Within the code of Law, the Lord spoke of giving commandments (Ex 24:12,22), rest from enemies (Ex 33:14), and the land of Canaan (Lev 20:24). He spoke of giving rain (Lev 26:4), peace in the land (Lev 26:6), and flesh to eat (Num 11:21). However, He NEVER spoke of giving them righteousness!

The Lord gave workman for the tabernacle (Ex 31:6), portions to the Levites from the offerings (Lev 6:17), and the gift of the priesthood (Num 18:7). He said He gave them cities (Deut 3:19), and a possession to every man (Deut 3:20). But He never said He had, or would, give them righteousness.

In the Law, righteousness ALWAYS had to do with what men did. In all of the Law (Exodus 20 - Deut) God never referred to “My righteousness.” The phrase “righteousness of God” is never mentioned. One time it is said of the Lord, “Righteous and upright is He” (Deut 32:4), but there is no hint that it would be given to men.

The Law, therefore, did NOT enlighten men concerning God’s righteousness. It only held forth a righteousness that resulted from men’s doing. Thus it was written, “And the LORD commanded us to observe all these statutes, to fear the LORD our God, for our good always, that He might preserve us alive, as it is this day. Then it will be righteousness for us, if we are careful to observe all these commandments before the LORD our God, as He has commanded us” (Deut 6:24-25).

With all of the words in the Law, there was not sufficient information to conclude there was a righteousness to be received from God! That is precisely why the Israelites were ignorant of “God’s righteousness.”

Academically, It Was Plain Enough

Although the Law held out remarkable promises for keeping it (Deut 28:1-14) and frightening curses for failing to keep it (Deut 28:15-68), it gave no hint that its demands exceeded natural abilities. That reality would only be realized by a fervent effort to fulfill the Law, coupled with an honest heart. The blessings were strictly contingent upon perfect conformity to the Law: observing to “DO ALL His commandments” (Deut 28:1). The curses would be incurred if they failed “to observe to DO ALL His commandments and His statutes” (Deut 28:15).

Notwithstanding this clarity, fallen man overlooks the word “ALL.” He insists on viewing the demands as goals to be attempted. Correspondingly, he imagines that a lot of effort fulfills the demands of the Law. But it does not. That is only a delusion of the flesh. The Law demanded perfection, and would take nothing less!

The Bane of Legalism

“Legalism,” as I am using the word, is a propensity for Law. It is the result of the misconception that men can become right by doing. While this may appear harmless to the sophist, it is actually a most lethal view. When men look to the Law—any law—for righteousness, they are not able to see the “gift of righteousness” (Rom 5:17). Ignorance of God’s righteousness flourishes in the soil of Law. Those who seek Divine approbation by a system of doing are, by that very approach, blinded to the righteousness that comes by faith. You will observe a perfect consistency in this wherever Law is preferred over grace.

SEEKING TO ESTABLISH THEIR OWN RIGHTEOUSNESS

righteousness.” By this expression, the Spirit means that the Israelites engaged in a hearty effort to fulfill the Law, which promised life to the doer (Lev 18:5). It is another way of saying, “For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge” (v 2). This seeking was not a casual inquiry into the subject of righteousness, but an aggressive effort to do what the Law demanded.

Because of the Law, coupled with their fallen nature, the Israelites were persuaded they could make themselves suitable to God. Armed with information and willpower, they would establish, or originate, their own righteousness. In so doing, they revealed they had overestimated their own strength and underestimated the requirements of the Law. They did not know how wicked they were, or how righteous God is.

At the very moment people set out to establish their own righteousness, the righteousness of God becomes inaccessible. It is at once obscured, and the veil of spiritual ignorance is spread over the mind and the heart.

The truth of the matter is, “There is none righteous, no, not one” (3:10). That being the case, it is not possible for an unrighteous man to make himself righteous. A sinner cannot “establish” his own righteousness, because you cannot establish what does not exist! The only way to become righteous is to have ones sins remitted that the gift of righteousness may be received by faith.

This submission is nothing less than our consent to receive what God gives. That consent is found in the form of our faith, which, as a hand, reaches out to take hold of “the gift of righteousness.”

I cannot leave this point without observing that those with a penchant for Law have learned nothing from the Israelites. There remains within the religious community the imagination that men can establish their own righteousness by keeping a code. Like Israel, such individuals are ignorant of God’s righteousness. That is the sole reason why they continue to seek to establish their own.

SUBMITTING TO GOD’S RIGHTEOUSNESS

“ . . . have not submitted to the righteousness of God.” To “submit” to the righteousness of God is to subject oneself to it, or take a subordinate place to it. More precisely, it is to renounce any claim to self-righteousness, and acknowledge an absolute need for the righteousness of God.

Paul expressed the truth of this verse in regard to his own enlightened desire. He acknowledged that he discarded anything and everything that was of personal gain to him. He did this, he confessed, “that I may gain Christ and be found in Him, not having my own righteousness, which is from the law, but that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is from God by faith” ^{NKJV} (Phil 3:8-9). That is submitting to “the righteousness of God,” or the righteousness that comes from God.

This submission is nothing less than our consent to receive what God gives. That consent is found in the form of our faith, which, as a hand, reaches out to take hold of “the gift of righteousness.”

It goes without saying that we can only submit ourselves to something that already exists. The Jews were going about to “establish their own righteousness,” convinced that was the only way to become righteous. They did not see that righteousness does not come from keeping the Law. Nor, indeed were they aware that God has a righteousness to be given to men upon the basis of their faith. The testimony of such a righteousness was provided in father Abraham, who received it upon the basis of his faith (Gen 15:6). But they did not see it.

THE END OF THE LAW

“ ⁴ For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes.” Here there is a divergence in the reading of the various translations. The principle statement involved is “end of the law for righteousness,” as represented in the KJV, NKJV, and NASB. Other versions choosing this reading include the 1995 New American Standard, Websters, Darby, BBE, and Young’s Literal. The older ASV reads, “end of the law unto righteousness.” The New American Bible reads, “end of the law for the justification.”

Other versions read as follows. “Christ is the end of the law so that there may be righteousness for everyone who believes.” ^{NIV/NIB} “For Christ is the end of the law so that there may be righteousness for everyone who believes.” ^{NRSV} “For Christ is the end of the law, that every one who has faith may be justified.” ^{RSV} The New Jerusalem Bible provides yet another twist. “But the Law has found its fulfilment in Christ so that all who have faith will be justified.”

Why Mention This?

There is, in my judgment, good reason to point out these readings. Although the true meaning of the verse can be derived from any of the translations, it can be more easily seen in the majority of them. If we read “end of the Law for righteousness,” the meaning is that the Law has been concluded as a means to righteousness. If we choose the other readings, the meaning is that the Law itself has been concluded, and no longer exists. Let us reason on the matter.

CHRIST IS THE END OF THE LAW

There are two possible meanings of “end of the Law.” Men have argued about these views, and even formed whole bodies of theology around them.

Once Paul recognized his own spiritual impotence, and knew the truth of the Gospel, he ceased from trying to establish his own righteousness, which was of the Law. For him, Christ was “the end of the Law for righteousness.”

- The first emphasizes the fulfillment, or objective, of the Law. In this sense, Christ is the “substance” of which the Law was a shadow (Col 2:17). In this case, once the substance came, the shadow was done away. This is NOT the meaning of the passage. The Law, unlike the shadowy sacrifices, was not done away when Jesus died, rose again, and returned to heaven. It still remains “for the lawless” (1 Tim 1:9). The “knowledge of sin” still comes from the Law (Rom 3:20). It has not been terminated or rendered totally obsolete or useless. Christ Jesus has not erased the Law of God.
- The second underscores the termination of the Law in a certain capacity. It is no longer the appointed means to a certain end, or objective. While it still remains, it cannot be used to arrive at the following goal: i.e., “for [or in order to] righteousness.” This is the meaning of the verse. Christ has concluded the Law as a means to righteousness.

FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS

Men cannot become righteous by keeping the Law of God! Although the Law held out that promise, more light has now been shed on the matter of righteousness. In the blazing glory of the Gospel it is now affirmed, “Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight” (Rom 3:20). And again, “Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified” (Gal 2:16).

Until Jesus, it appeared as though the Law was “ordained unto life”—i.e., that men could become righteous and acceptable to God by simply doing what He said to do, and abstaining from what He forbade them to do (Rom 7:10). Those who take the promise of the Law seriously (“which if a man do, he shall live in them”) will soon find what Paul found. “And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death. For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it killed me” (Rom 7:10).

Once Paul recognized his own spiritual impotence, and knew the truth of the Gospel, he ceased from trying to establish his own righteousness, which was of the Law. For him, Christ was “the end of the Law for righteousness.” That is, he no longer sought to become righteous by keeping the Law. That is the meaning of this text.

EVERYONE WHO BELIEVES

Our text is not speaking of something realized by certain superior people. It does not represent an alternative to becoming righteous, or a way to realize righteousness in a more easy way. This “gift of righteousness” is for “everyone who believes.”

This very truth has been iterated before. Reasoning upon the marvelous reality of Abraham being made righteous, the Spirit declared, “For what saith the scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness” (Rom 4:3-5). Again it is written, “And therefore it [his faith] was imputed to him for righteousness. [Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification” (4:22-25).

Our concept of believing must allow for this expression: “everyone who believes.” With great zeal, we must avoid stuffing this statement into a theological mold that makes it say something more suitable to stilted and lifeless views. Some would prefer that the Spirit had said, “to everyone who believes and obeys.” They could say that more easily. Others would favor the Spirit saying, “everyone who believes and keeps the commandments.” They conceive of that as being more precise. Still others would like it to read, “everyone who believes and remains faithful.” That, they imagine, would be more exact, and would better address the subject.

To be sure, the Holy Spirit knows how to use the words “obey,” “keep the commandments,” and “be faithful.” after all, He is the One who develops those very concepts in Scripture. But he does not use those words here, for they would not be proper. True obedience, the keeping of the commandments, and faithfulness flow out from believing. But none of them are the foundation of our righteousness. Rather, they are all the result of it.

The matter to be believed is the Gospel, or good news, of Christ, as stated earlier. “For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God to salvation for everyone who believes.” (1:16). What is there about those words that would cause any soul to be discontent with them? Ponder the frequency of their mentioning.

They also come close to blaspheming God Himself, who inspired them to be both spoken and written.

To allay the fears of the sophist and the qualms of the legalist, there is no such thing as a faith that does not obey, or a faith that is not faithful. Disobedience and unfaithfulness both proceed from unbelief, not from believing. When men believe in the sense of Scripture, they will obey. They will pursue righteousness. They will remain faithful. There are no exceptions to these things. Those who doubt this must rethink the matter.

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF THE LAW

“⁵ For Moses writes about the righteousness which is of the law, ‘The man who does those things shall live by them.’” Although this has been stated before, it is reaffirmed. This is done because of the great difficulty men have in cutting loose from the notion that righteousness comes by doing. Remember, our text has reminded us that Israel did not attain to the righteousness of the Law—even though they pressed hard after it. Their efforts extended officially over a period of 1,500 years, or until Christ. That was adequate time to accomplish righteousness by means of Law.

Even now, 2,000 additional years later, they are still engaged in this futile effort. Still, when they read the Law of Moses, their minds are “blinded. For until this day the same veil remains unlifted in the reading of the Old Testament, because the veil is taken away in Christ. But even to this day, when Moses is read, a veil lies on their heart” (2 Cor 3:14-15). As if this were not bad enough, vast segments of Christendom have joined in the futile effort to obtain righteousness by fulfilling Divine demands rather than believing the record God has given of His Son. Having once been deceived myself on this matter, I know of the futility of trying to be righteous apart from believing. I also know that such a mentality totally ignores the words of this verse.

RIGHTEOUSNESS WHICH IS OF THE LAW

This is the righteousness that results from the perfect keeping of the Law. It is promised only to those who keep and obey ALL of the commandments ALL of the time (Deut 5:29). Not a single infraction of the Law is allowed. There can be no deviate or wayward thought – not one! The Law makes absolutely no promise of blessing to anyone who fails in but “one point” of its demands or prohibitions (James 2:10). The result of perfect and flawless compliance with every jot and tittle of the Law is “the righteousness which is of the Law.”

THE MAN WHO DOES THOSE THINGS

Doing the Law is carrying out all of its demands with both perfection and consistency. It is never failing to do what is right, and always abstaining from what is wrong. This must be done with every aspect of ones being: heart, soul, mind, and strength (Mark 12:30). This includes a preference for God’s Law, as well as a hearty love for it. It includes the marshaling of all thoughts and affections. Zeal is involved, together with strong desire and alertness.

When the Law says “does,” it is not referring to mere external conduct, as the legalist imagines. The Law did not consider behavior to be mere bodily actions. The Lord was to be sought “with all of your heart and with all of your soul” (Deut 4:29). He was to be loved in the same way (Deut 6:5; 10:12). God was to be served “with all your heart and with all your soul” (11:13). His judgments were to be kept and executed “with all your heart and with all your soul” (Deut 26:16).

Any doing that was not so characterized was not “doing” at all! The person who did not “do” everything with heart and soul did nothing at all. He was excluded from the promise.

SHALL LIVE BY THEM

In 1816, Robert Haldane wrote this of living by the righteousness of the Law. It is most precise, and expresses the sentiment of our text. “To live by the Law requires, as Moses had declared, that the Law be

The Law makes absolutely no promise of blessing to anyone who fails in but “one point” of its demands or prohibitions (James 2:10). The result of perfect and flawless compliance with every jot and tittle of the Law is “the righteousness which is of the Law.”

perfectly obeyed. But this to fallen man is impossible. The law knows no mercy; it knows no mitigation, it overlooks not even the smallest breach, or the smallest deficiency. One guilty thought or desire would condemn forever. Whoever, then, looks for life by the law, must keep the whole law in thought, word, and deed, and not be chargeable with the smallest transgression.” Haldane’s Commentary on Romans

To “live” is to be recognized by God Almighty as righteous. It is to live without the curse of God hanging over your head. To “live” is to have your name “written in heaven” (Lk 10:20; Heb 12:23), in “the book of life” (Phil 4:3; Rev 13:8), which registers everyone who is “alive unto God” (Rom 6:11).

And do you hope to be received and recognized by God because of what you have done? Will you stand before God and boast as the Pharisee who “prayed with himself,” “God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess” (Lk 18:11-12). Do you imagine you will be able to stand before the throne and shout, “Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?” (Matt 7:22).

What you have done will only be a basis for acceptance if you have done all the right things all of the time. It will only count if you have refrained from doing all the wrong things all of the time. You must not have stepped aside from perfect obedience a single time, or for a single moment. Is that not quite a challenge.

Allow me to take the matter one step further. Imagine that it actually was possible for you to be justified by what you have done – by your works. You still could not boast before God. As it is written, “For if Abraham was justified by works, he has something to boast about, but not before God” (Rom 4:2).

Further, imagine that in the day of the Lord you shall have managed to do every single thing you were commanded to do. Would that not bring the conferment of life and blessing upon you? Hear the words of Jesus. “And which of you, having a servant plowing or tending sheep, will say to him when he has come in from the field, ‘Come at once and sit down to eat?’ But will he not rather say to him, ‘Prepare something for my supper, and gird yourself and serve me till I have eaten and drunk, and afterward you will eat and drink?’ Does he thank that servant because he did the things that were commanded him? I think not. So likewise you, when you have done all those things which you are commanded, say, ‘We are unprofitable servants. We have done what was our duty to do’” (Lk 17:7-10). That is surely enough to stop the mouths of all boasters.

The very need for Law confirms the need for righteousness. The fact that men had to be told what to do confirmed they were ignorant and unrighteous. Thus, the Law said “life” would be substantiated in the keeping of the commandments, not to show that it was possible, but to confirm we were already dead in trespasses and sins. The “life” it promised was not resurrection life, like bringing a spiritually dead man back to life. It was not speaking of recovery, but of the recognition of someone who was NOT dead. It should be very apparent to us that, apart from Jesus, no such person existed. The Law persuaded us we were dead and in need of righteousness.

WHAT THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF FAITH DOES NOT SAY

“⁶ But the righteousness of faith speaks in this way, ‘Do not say in your heart, Who will ascend into heaven?’ (that is, to bring Christ down from above) ⁷ or, ‘Who will descend into the abyss?’ (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead).”

Here is a classic example of the proper use of Scripture. Yet, it sharply conflicts with the notion that “the context” of Scripture is the secret to its understanding. Some very principle thoughts will be established by this remarkable utterance.

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF FAITH

Again, this is the righteousness that is appropriated by faith. Faith is its basis, or foundation, like being “born of God” declares God to be the One accomplishing the new birth. Other versions read, “the righteousness based on faith,”^{NASB} “the righteousness that is by faith,”^{NIV} and “the righteousness that comes from faith.”^{NRSV} How does this righteousness speak? How does it compare with the saying of the Law: “The man who does those things shall live by them”?

What does “the righteousness that comes from faith” have to say about doing? Or, does it have anything to say on that subject? Indeed, it does speak to the subject, and that with great power and conviction.

DO NOT SAY IN YOUR HEART!

The Spirit first declares what the righteousness based on faith does NOT say. Here an appeal is made to the words of Moses, even though he did not at all mean what our text will affirm. Here is what the Lord said through Moses. “For this commandment which I command you today is not too mysterious for you, nor is it far off. It is not in heaven, that you should say, ‘Who will ascend into heaven for us and bring it to us, that we may hear it and do it?’ or is it beyond the sea, that you should say, ‘Who will go over the sea for us and bring it to us, that we may hear it and do it?’ But the word is very near you, in your mouth and in your heart, that you may do it. See, I have set before you today life and good, death and evil, in that I command you today to love the LORD your God, to walk in His ways, and to keep His commandments, His statutes, and His judgments, that you may live and

If our doing is to be the basis of our righteousness, then here is what WE must do. We must bring the Savior down from heaven in order that He might take away our sins and reconcile us to God. Then, we must bring Him back from the dead, in order that we might be saved by His life.

multiply; and the LORD your God will bless you in the land which you go to possess” (Deut 30:11-16).

What Was Moses Saying?

Moses was telling the people there was no question about what the Lord demanded of them. They did not need to send an ambassador into the heavens to bring down the Lord’s requirements. Nor, indeed, was the word of the Lord to be found cross the sea, in some foreign land. God brought the word to them, they did not go to Him to receive it. Additionally, both of these places were too difficult for the people to access. If God did put the word in those realms, challenging the people to go and get it, they would not be able to do so.

Further, what He said was plain – plain enough that they declared they would do it all (Ex 19:8; 24:3,7). The people admonished Moses, “You go near and hear all that the LORD our God may say, and tell us all that the LORD our God says to you, and we will hear and do it” (Deut 5:27). That is not, however, how the righteousness of faith speaks! It does NOT say, “Get the word for us!”

Now the Spirit gets to the heart the matter, showing the deeper and more foundational meaning of Moses’ words. Rather than ascending into heaven to get a word from God, it must be to “bring Christ down from above.” Rather descending into the abyss to obtain a word, it must be to “bring Christ up from the dead.” The righteousness that comes from faith does not demand that you do these things.

WHAT IS REQUIRED

We must not miss the point of this verse! Jesus coming down from heaven was essential to our salvation! He had to willingly come in the form of a man, offering Himself for the sins of the world (Heb 10:5-10). He also had to come back from the dead, leading captivity captive, and ascending back to the Father. If both of these did not occur, it would have been impossible for us to be saved!

The Point

The point is this. If our doing is to be the basis of our righteousness, then here is what WE must do. We must bring the Savior down from heaven in order that He might take away our sins and reconcile us to God. Then, we must bring Him back from the dead, in order that we might be saved by His life. If we cannot do those things, our works cannot save us, for we are incapable of doing the most critical things, both of which are required if men are to be “made the righteousness of God” (2 Cor 5:21)!

Only God could send Jesus into the world! Men could not climb into heaven and bring Him down. Nor, indeed, could seraph, cherubim, and holy angels compel Him to come into the world. That work belonged to God alone, with no man participating in any way in it. That should not be difficult to see.

Only God could bring up Christ again from the dead. No man could shout Him out of the tomb! No heavenly principality or power could enable Him to come back from the regions of the dead! That work also belonged to God alone, with no man having any part whatsoever in its accomplishment. That also is very evident.

Only God could send Jesus into the world! Men could not climb into heaven and bring Him down. Nor, indeed, could seraph, cherubim, and holy angels compel Him to come into the world. That work belonged to God alone, with no man participating in any way in it. That should not be difficult to see.

Those who insist that man’s works make him righteous must be faced with the responsibility of bringing Christ from heaven, and bringing Him back from the dead. If they cannot do that, then let them cease to speak of their abilities, for they have none that can effectively change them.

The foundation of becoming righteous cannot and does not rest with men. It is a work accomplished by God Himself! The “wonderful works” belong to Him, and to Him alone. That is the consistent proclamation of the Gospel.

WHAT THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF FAITH DOES SAY

“⁸ But what does it say? ‘The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart’ (that is, the word of faith which we preach):⁹ that if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved.” How does “the righteousness based on faith” speak? What kind of appeal is made to the hearts of men? What will it challenge the people to do? The righteousness that comes from the Law demanded that every commandment, precept, and statute be kept flawlessly and consistently. What kind of demands will the righteousness of faith make upon us?

THE WORD IS NEAR

“The word is in you, in your mouth and in your heart.” Again, an appeal is made to the words of Moses, with a unique application being made of them. Moses said, “But the word is very near you, in your mouth and in your heart, that you may do it” (Deut 30:14). The words “in your mouth” refers to the people’s confession of the Law. The words “in your heart” means the communication of the Law was so impressive they could not forget it when they heard it. Through revelation, they had become acutely aware of the commandments of the Lord. It was in their mouth and in their heart when they said, “All that the LORD hath spoken we will do” (Ex 19:8). Now the Spirit will show us what words has been brought near to us, and how those words effect us.

Of particular relevance here is Isaiah’s prophecy about the appropriation of righteousness. “I bring My righteousness near, it shall not be far off; My salvation shall not linger. And I will place salvation in Zion, For Israel My glory” (Isa 46:13). Our text will elaborate upon this blessed commitment.

THE WORD OF FAITH

“... that is, the word of faith which we preach.” The word delivered through Moses was NOT a word of faith, for “the law is not of faith” (Gal 3:12). That is a matter of revelation. How is it that what we have received is designated as “the word of faith.”

This is not a word only delivered BY faith, but one which produces faith. It is a message to be believed, not a message of commandments, as was the Law. “The word of faith” is the appointed means of putting righteousness within reach of the people. It is nothing less than the Gospel of Christ, in which is revealed the righteousness that comes from God through faith (1:17). It is not possible to have true faith without this word of the Gospel, and it is not possible to be righteous without believing it.

Which we Preach

NOT only does the Gospel induce faith in those who receive it, it is spoken in faith by those who effectively preach it. What men preach reveals what they think saves a person. It is the overflow of their inner persuasion. “We having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak” (4:13). As will be confirmed later, God has ordained the preaching of the Gospel as the appointed means of saving people. To say it another way, this is the means chosen to produce faith, which brings the righteousness of God to us.

The Law of Moses is NOT “the word of faith.” It is to be believed, to be sure, but it is not intended to produce the faith that saves the soul (1 Pet 1:9). As valuable as they are, the books of Proverbs and Ecclesiastes are not “the word of faith.” While both of them are highly instructive concerning wise living, neither of them produce faith. That is a ministry belonging exclusively to the Gospel of Christ! No one should be intimidated or offended by these words. Nor, indeed, should they conclude the books of reference can be neglected. They have come from God, and are profitable. However, they are not the means of producing faith in Christ, and appropriating the righteousness of God.

Essentially, “the word of faith” is a word of promise – a word of salvation and deliverance to those who will receive it!

CONFESSING WITH YOUR MOUTH

Two critical matters relating to the appropriation of righteousness are mentioned. They contrast sharply with the requirements of the Law. The word under the law is “DO!” – do ALL of the commandments. The word given by Moses was in the mouth of the people when they replied, “All that the LORD hath spoken we will do” (Ex 19:8). Notice how differently “the righteousness of faith” speaks. It brings a unique and superior message to us.

“That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus . . .” This is the acknowledgment that we have believed “the word of faith.” We receive the fact that the Lord has done what was necessary for God to make us righteous! And what is it that is “confessed”? It is not that we have done all that was commanded us to do! It is not that we are sinful people. Rather, it is that “Jesus is Lord” – not that He will be, but that He is! It is admitting that we see and delight in the fact that God has made Him “both Lord and Christ” (Acts 2:36). Furthermore, we are depending on Him, in the capacity of Lord, to save us.

This is a confession “with the mouth,” where what has been received is joyfully acknowledged. This confession is made initially when we come to the Lord. As with Simon Peter, it is the result of God revealing the Son to us (Matt 16:16-18). This confession is not confined to the time when we were delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of God’s dear Son (Col 1:13). This is an ongoing confession, declared when persecution arises, and when conflict with the world erupts. It is made when coming in contact with other believers, and when we approach the throne of all grace.

This is not a casual or lifeless admission. It is a confession that can only be made under the influence of the Holy Spirit. As it is written, “no one can say that Jesus is Lord except by the Holy Spirit” (1 Cor 12:3). This is the

This is an ongoing confession, declared when persecution arises, and when conflict with the world erupts. It is made when coming in contact with other believers, and when we approach the throne of all grace.

acknowledgment that Jesus is the manager of one’s life. He is not only “Lord of all” by the commission of God, but perceived to be the exclusive reason for the life of the one making this confession.

BELIEVING IN YOUR HEART

“. . . and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead.” Believing in the heart goes far deeper than admitting with the mind. When the Ethiopian eunuch asked what was hindering him from being baptized, Philip responded, “If you believe with all your heart, you may” (Acts 8:37).

To believe “in your heart” is to embrace the Gospel at the point where you are motivated. Your heart is where the issues of life are formed, and from which they are expressed (Prov 4:23). When one believes in the heart, a certain aggressive to obtain the promises of God is realized. That is why those who believed cried out, “Men and brethren, what shall we do?” (Acts 2:37), and “Sirs, what must I do to be saved?”

And what is it that is to be believed? Other texts indicate that believing Jesus is the Son of God is the principle thing (Matt 16:16; John 20:31; Acts 8:37; 1 John 5:10). Why is the resurrection of Christ the focus in this text. Simply because His resurrection confirmed He is the Son of God. As it is written, “. . . His Son Jesus Christ our Lord, who was born of the seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead” (Rom 1:3-4).

Believing that God raised Jesus from the dead is essential to our salvation because the power to save and keep us is resurrection power. It is “the power of His resurrection” that faith constrains us to appropriate (Phil 3:10). That is the power that is presently devoted to believers (Eph 1:19-20), and that is at work in them (Eph 3:20). This truth – that God has raised Jesus from the dead – must not drift from us. Nothing must be allowed to supercede it in our thinking, or rob us of believing it in our heart. Should those things happen, we will not be saved.

YOU WILL BE SAVED

“. . . you will be saved.” It is not that you may be saved, but that you WILL be saved! There is not the slightest chance the confession that Jesus is Lord, and believing in the heart that God has raised Him from the dead, will not issue in salvation!

There is a threefold sense in which we are saved. From the standpoint of our personal makeup, our spirit, soul, and body will be saved (1 Thess 5:23). That takes us from our initial entrance into Christ through the resurrection of the dead. A salvation that is not this broad is no salvation at all.

Another threefold view of salvation relates to time. It is expressed in the words, “who delivered us from so great a death, and does deliver us; in whom we trust that He will still deliver us” (2 Cor 1:10). This includes our deliverance from the guilt of sin, the power of sin, and the presence of sin. It covers our initial deliverance from the clutches of the devil, our daily deliverances by the grace of God, and our final triumph over death. A salvation that does not include all of these is not a salvation at all. And it is all effected by confessing Jesus is Lord and believing God has raised Him from the dead. As you can see, this word is marked by both simplicity and profundity. The Spirit will now briefly expand on the glory of what has been affirmed. A strong appeal will be made to your faith.

RIGHTEOUSNESS AND SALVATION

“¹⁰ For with the heart one believes unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.” Remember, becoming righteous and being saved pertain to the same glorious reality. One speaks of what we attain (“righteousness”), and the other of deliverance from all sin has caused (“salvation”).

BELIEVING UNTO RIGHTEOUSNESS

“For with the heart one believes unto righteousness . . . ” In a sense, righteousness gets into us. In another sense, we get into it. In the first, righteousness is “imputed” unto us. In the second we come into a state of righteousness, or are “made the righteousness of God in Him [Christ]” (2 Cor 5:21).

There are some edifying renderings of this verse in other versions. “For with the heart man believes, resulting in righteousness,”^{NASB} “For it is with your heart that you believe and are justified,”^{NIV} “For one believes with the heart and so is justified,”^{NRSV} and “For it is by believing in your heart that you are made right with God.”^{NLT} Keep in mind that being made righteous is the same thing as being justified. One speaks of what is done (righteous), the other of how it is done (justified). From the standpoint of being justified, everything against us is removed. From the standpoint of being made righteous, what we need is given to us. These are the two sides of the coin of salvation.

Those who insist that we are justified by works must contend with this expression: “For with the heart one believes unto righteousness.” Faith conducts us, as it were into a state of Divine approval. We believe into the mind is powerless to change the heart. This is why a fundamentally cerebral religion is not a blessing. It cannot righteousness. We do not work ourselves into it.

Believing with the Heart

Note that the belief is “with the heart,” not with the mind! When men are hesitant to believe, it is because they are “slow of heart,” not slow of mind (Lk 24:25). Jesus said a troubled heart would be offset by a believing in Him. “Let not your heart be troubled; you believe in God, believe also in Me” (John 14:1).

Some of the things that distinguish believing with the heart from the assent of the mind include, “the joy of faith” (Phil 1:25), “the hearing of faith” (Gal 3:2,5), the “shield of faith” (Eph 6:16), and the “assurance of faith” (Heb 10:22). The consent of the mind cannot produce inner joy (“joy of faith”), the cognizance of God (“hearing of faith”), protection for the soul (“shield of faith”), or strong confidence (“assurance of faith”).

The heart can sanctify the mind, but eliminate doubt, questions, or fear. However, when men “believe with the heart unto righteousness,” all of these marvelous changes come to pass.

CONFESSING UNTO SALVATION

This is too difficult for the person enslaved to law. Confession is not perceived as capable of inducting one into salvation. However, our text declares this to be a precise statement of the case. “. . . and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.” Other versions read, “and with the mouth he confesses, resulting in salvation,”^{NASB} “it is with your mouth that you confess and are saved,”^{NIV} “and one confesses with the mouth and so is saved.”^{NRSV}

The purpose of this text is not to ascribe to the confession of Christ as Lord the total cause for our salvation. Rather, it is to show us that the faith that saves always manifests itself in shameless confession. The confession that saves is prompted by the faith that brings righteousness. Confession is to salvation what the resurrection of Christ was to His Sonship. The resurrection confirmed Jesus to be the Son of God with power.

The “confession” of our text verifies that we have believed unto righteousness. Faith without confession is not possible.

Confession without faith is spurious. Faith always confesses, and confession always follows genuine faith.

WHAT DOES THE SCRIPTURE SAY?

“¹¹ For the Scripture says, ‘Whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame.’ ¹² For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek, for the same Lord over all is rich to all who call upon Him. ¹³ For ‘whoever calls on the name of the LORD shall be saved.’” Because the Spirit intends to put the knowledge of salvation well within our reach, He again appeals to the Scriptures. It is by them that the man of God becomes “perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works” (2 Tim 3:17). The effect of faith upon both man and the Lord will now be briefly expounded.

WHOEVER BELIEVES ON HIM

“As the Scripture says, ‘Anyone who trusts in Him will never be put to shame.’”^{NIV}

Not ashamed to Confess Christ

The person believing on Christ will never be ashamed to confess Him. Whether one is being stoned like Stephen, standing before Ananias the high priest like Paul, or standing before the council like Peter and John, faith constrains shamelessness. It moves the person to confess Christ is Lord – the ONLY Lord.

The multitudes of professing Christians who are ashamed to acknowledge Christ are confessing to their lack of faith. They must have the promise of God shouted in their ears, for it is true: “WHOEVER BELIEVES IN HIM WILL NOT BE DISAPPOINTED.”^{NASB}

Trusting Brings No Shame

But there is another sense in which the believer will never be put to shame. God will never allow faith to prove to be an embarrassment to the believer. It is never vain to trust the Lord! The one who trusts that God will save, will himself be saved! The one who depends on the Lord to keep him will be kept! Those who depend upon the Lord for their daily bread will not be put to shame. Let no one imagine that faith induces idleness or indifference. Neither, indeed, does it bring shame.

No person who is living by faith will be frightened by the return of Jesus. Those who have counted all but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ will not be disappointed when they stand before the judgment seat of Christ, to give an account for the deeds done in the body

Shame At Christ’s Coming

In yet another sense, the person who believes on the Son will not be put to shame in the day of judgment. Such will not “shrink away from Him in shame at His coming”^{NASB} (1 John 2:28).

No person who is living by faith will be frightened by the return of Jesus. Those who have counted all but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ will not be disappointed when they stand before the judgment seat of Christ, to give an account for the deeds done in the body (2 Cor 5:10).

NO DISTINCTION

“For there is no difference between Jew and Gentile.”^{NIV} Although the Jews were a favored people and the Gentiles a rejected people, yet faith eliminates any lasting differences between them. By the grace of God, and through their faith, believing Jews and Gentiles are made “one body.” Faith has removed the distinction between them.

How thoroughly this is stated by the Holy Spirit. “For he is our [Jew and Gentile] peace, who hath made both [Jew and Gentile] one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us [Jew and Gentile]; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain [Jew and Gentile] one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both [Jew and Gentile] unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby: and came and preached peace to you which were afar off [Gentiles], and to them that were nigh [Jews]” (Eph 2:14-17).

The fact that the salvation of God is appropriated by faith removes the distinction between Jew and Gentile. As it is written, “For you are all sons of God through faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus” (Gal 3:26-28). The fact that believers have “the same Lord” makes them “one body.” Therefore, in Christ, “there is no difference between Jew and Gentile.”

The fact that in Christ “there is no difference,” makes division within the body of Christ a grievous sin. Wherever there is faith in Christ, division must not be allowed. If faith makes us acceptable to God, it can do no less for us. That is one reason we are admonished, “Now I urge you, brethren, keep your eye on those who cause dissensions and hindrances contrary to the teaching which you learned, and turn away from them” ^{NASB} (Rom 16:17).

THE SAME LORD

“ . . . for the same Lord over all . . . ” The truth of the matter is that every person has the same Lord. It is that some know it and some do not. Men speak of having a different faith. The Spirit speaks of having a different master or Lord (Matt 6:24), and serving diverse masters (Rom 16:18).

The particular emphasis here is redemption, or the salvation that is in Christ Jesus. The point is not merely that the Lord is “over all,” which He surely is, but that the salvation of God is common to both Jew and Gentile.

CALLING ON THE NAME OF THE LORD

“ . . . is rich to all who call upon Him.” Salvation is truly life “more abundantly” (John 10:10). In it, the Holy Spirit is “poured out on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior” (Tit 3:6). The power of God is devoted to those in Christ Jesus (Eph 1:19), and God “is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that works in us” (Eph 3:20). The Gospel announces “so great a salvation” (Heb 2:3). It brings “all sufficiency in all things” (2 Cor 9:8). All of this, and more, is involved in the Lord being “rich to all who call upon Him.”

The word “rich” does not refer to earthly resources, although the Lord is fully capable of supplying such things. Rather, this refers to the abundant adequacy of salvation. The righteousness that we need is supplied, and the acceptance we require is realized. Our liabilities are removed, and we are granted access to “all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” that are hidden in Christ Jesus (Col 2:2-3).

From the standpoint of what we need to meet the test of time and stand before the Lord without fault, the Lord is rich toward us. He “shall supply all your need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus” (Phil 4:19).

All that Call Upon Him

Calling upon the name of the Lord is a most holy activity. Men began to “call upon the name of the Lord” in the days of Enos, the son of Seth, whom Adam begat Men speak of having a different faith. The Spirit speaks of having a different master or Lord, and serving diverse masters.

in his own image (Gen 4:26). David, a man after God’s own heart, said, “I will call on the LORD” (2 Sam 22:4). When Elijah engaged in a contest with the prophets of Baal he said, “you call on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the LORD” (1 Kgs 18:24). Joel prophesied of a day when “it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered” (Joel 2:32). When the day of Pentecost “had fully come,” Peter announced the day Joel promised had begun (Acts 2:21). Those who are in Christ Jesus are described as “those who call on the Lord out of a pure heart” (2 Tim 2:22). Those who “call on the Father” are admonished to “pass the time of your sojourning here in fear” (1 Pet 1:17).

Our text boldly announces that God is “rich” to everyone who calls upon Him. What does it mean to “call upon Him?” Those who call upon the name of the Lord are casting themselves upon His mercy, seeking to experience by faith what He has promised. Faith sees the Lord as He really is, and moves the believer to seek His promised blessing, particularly His great salvation.

Those who “call upon the name of the Lord” search for Him with the “whole heart,” and in expectation of finding Him (Jer 29:13). Some of the words used when men called upon the name of the Lord include the following.

- ❑ “Men and brethren, what shall we do?” (Acts 2:37).
- ❑ “Sirs, what must I do to be saved?” (Acts 16:30).
- ❑ “Lord, save me!” (Matt 14:30).
- ❑ “Heal me, O LORD, and I shall be healed; Save me, and I shall be saved, For You are my praise” (Jer 17:14).
- ❑ “Oh, send out Your light and Your truth! Let them lead me; Let them bring me to Your holy hill And to Your tabernacle” (Psa 43:3).
- ❑ “Save now, I pray, O LORD; O LORD, I pray, send now prosperity” (Psa 118:25).
- ❑ “But You, O LORD, do not be far from Me; O My Strength, hasten to help Me!” (Psa 22:19).

These are pleas for the Lord to act in our behalf, and in strict accord with His nature. Calling upon the Lord presumes some knowledge of Him, as will be confirmed in the next section of this chapter (vs 14-17). It also reveals a perceived dependency upon the Lord. The one who calls upon Him knows “My help comes from the LORD, Who made heaven and earth” (Psa 121:2).

Whoever Calls

“For whoever calls on the name of the LORD shall be saved.” This is a marvelous promise. As all Divine commitments, it is to be believed. As will be developed in the next few verses, this has particular reference to deliverance from the guilt and power of sin. To put it another way, it is a promise relating to the imputation of righteousness.

Calling upon the Lord involves a profound desire for what He has promised in Christ Jesus. It reveals a discontent with what the world offers, and a driving compulsion to rise above the flesh.

Because of these realities, this promise guarantees salvation and the righteousness of God to all who desire it. That, of course, is the purpose for the promise. It brings strong confidence to those who are hungering and thirsting for righteousness. If you fervently desire the righteousness of God, you can have it. It is well within your reach! The Gospel announces that to be the case.

CONCLUSION

This marvelous section of Scripture justifies Paul's fervent desire for the salvation of Israel. He knows they have received the promises of salvation, and a commitment from God that He will make a new covenant with them. He also knows why they have not attained to the righteousness of God -- because they are ignorant of it. Therefore, Paul has devoted himself to declaring the righteousness of God, the Gospel that reveals it, and the faith that obtains it. None of these are popular in the contemporary Christian world, yet all are foundational in the Apostles' doctrine.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 34

THE INDISPENSABLE GOSPEL

^{10:14} How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? ¹⁵ And how shall they preach unless they are sent? As it is written: "How beautiful are the feet of those who preach the gospel of peace, Who bring glad tidings of good things!" ¹⁶ But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Isaiah says, "Lord, who has believed our report?" ¹⁷ So then faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. ¹⁸ But I say, have they not heard? Yes indeed: "Their sound has gone out to all the earth, And their words to the ends of the world." ¹⁹ But I say, did Israel not know? First Moses says: "I will provoke you to jealousy by those who are not a nation, I will move you to anger by a foolish nation." ²⁰ But Isaiah is very bold and says: "I was found by those who did not seek Me; I was made manifest to those who did not ask for Me." ²¹ But to Israel he says: "All day long I have stretched out My hands To a disobedient and contrary people."

– Romans 10:14-21 ^{NKJV} –

INTRODUCTION

Moved by the Holy Spirit, the Apostle has confessed his "heart's desire and prayer to God" for Israel, his "kinsmen according to the flesh." This desire has been sparked by the consideration of the "gift of righteousness" as revealed in the Gospel of Christ (1:17-18). That Gospel, the Spirit revealed, was God's power in order to effect salvation, "to the Jew FIRST"

(1:16). How fitting, therefore, that this knowledge should awaken a fervent desire for the Israelites to be saved! This was not a fleshly desire, prompted by national pride or a mere general interest in their spiritual welfare. This fervent desire was prompted by the new man, fellowship with Christ, and the mind of the Spirit. This is how an Israelite reasons when they have been "joined to the Lord." It is the result of spiritual life, and is not to be viewed as an expression of the flesh.

A MERE TECHNICALITY?

Some might imagine that the phrase, "to the Jew first," is a mere technicality, with no practical implications at all. In such a view, God is seen as obligated to offer this salvation, which includes the imputation of His own righteousness,

LESSON OUTLINE

- II. THE NECESSITY OF HEARING (10:14b)
- III. THE NECESSITY OF PREACHING (10:14c)
- IV. THE NECESSITY OF BEING SENT (10:15a)

- VII. FAITH COMES (10:17)
- VIII. HAS NOT EVERYONE HEARD? (10:18)

because of the promises made to the fathers. Those same promises also “pertained” to Israel (9:4). In this view, “the promises” are considered an offer, or an opportunity. But that is not how they are presented in Scripture. They are a Divine commitment, based upon the “foreknowledge” of God, and are to be implemented by His unalterable determination.

FIRST IN SEQUENCE?

Others might consider “to the Jew first” to mean they were to be the first to hear the Gospel. While this is true, it is not all the truth. It is true that the proclamation began with them. However, the word “first” also means of first importance – first in place as well as in time. A similar use of the word is found in the description of the various gifts the Lord placed in the church. “And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues” (1 Cor 12:28). Here, as in Romans 1:16, the word “first” is more than a sequential term.

As long as the world remains, there will never be a time when the Gospel will cease to be “the power of God unto salvation, to the Jew first.”

Paul Preached to the Jew First

In order to confirm this is the meaning of “to the Jew first,” consider the nature of Paul’s ministry. As soon as he was delivered from the power of darkness and translated into Kingdom of God’s dear Son, “Immediately he preached the Christ in the synagogues”^{NKJV} (Acts 9:20). When Barnabas and Saul were separated by the Holy Spirit, they immediately sailed to the Gentile island of Cyprus. When coming to the city of Salamis, on the east coast of Cyprus, “they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews” (Acts 13:5). Following their expulsion because of the Jews, they came to Iconium, in the southern part of Galatia. There, “they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews” (Acts 14:1). When coming into Thessalonica, Paul and Silas went into “a synagogue of the Jews,” reasoning with them for three Sabbath days (Acts 17:1-2). When they were forced to leave that city because of the Jews, they went to Berea and “went into the synagogue of the Jews” (Acts 17:10).

When Paul was waiting for Silas and Timothy in Athens, he was stirred in his spirit when he saw the city given completely to idolatry. His first response to that stirring is recorded in these words: “Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews” (Acts 17:17). When he came into Corinth, Paul “reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks” (Acts 18:4). When he came into Ephesus, the Apostle, “entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews” (Acts 18:19).

The Gospel, therefore, was not simply preached to the Jews first in sequence. It was not declared first in Jerusalem, and to the neglect of the Jews after that. Paul’s not only fervently desired the salvation of the Jews, his preaching conformed to that desire.

NECESSARY CONSIDERATIONS

It is necessary to consider these things because of the religious climate that has been created by Christian sophists. There is a different kind of mentality extant in the professed church. It has placed “the nations,” or the Gentiles, ahead of the Jews in Gospel prominence. The result, whether intentional or not, has been the near-removal of the Israelites from the minds of the people.

There are even pretentious ministers who are aggressive against the ancient people, affirming they have been expunged from the tablets of heaven, and are no longer in the heart and purpose of God. Chapters nine through eleven of the book of Romans is a sword from heaven that cuts these spouting imaginations down, dashing them to pieces.

The Holy Spirit provokes the Apostle to write extensively on this matter. He is not only writing as moved by the Holy Spirit, he is unveiling his sensitive heart to us. He integrates it with the Gospel, the conferment of righteousness, and the salvation of God. It is related to the purpose of God, the power of God, and the promises of God. It is not possible for a subject to have more lofty associations. It requires an extraordinary measure of unbelief to deny these realities. Great joy is realized in acknowledging them.

THE NECESSITY OF BELIEVING

^{d10:14a} How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed?” Here we are exposed to the Divine economy – how the Lord works among men. While it is true that God was “found of them that sought Him not” (Isa 65:1; Rom 10:20), we are not to conclude there is no human involvement in men finding God. It is also true that the Gentiles “attained to righteousness,” even though they did not pursue it (Rom 9:30). Yet, none of this occurred independently of someone bringing the Gospel to the people. Nor, indeed, did it take place without the people calling upon the name of the Lord. These two things – bringing the Gospel, and calling upon the name of the Lord – necessitate human initiative and response. We will also see the role of faith, or believing the Gospel, in the obtaining of salvation.

CALLING ON THE LORD

The statement now expounded by the Spirit is this: “For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved” (v 13). This is one of the pivotal expressions of Scripture, standing between hopelessness and a living hope, between darkness and light, between ignorance and illumination.

Calling upon the name of the Lord is the proper response to the Gospel, which announces the salvation of God for man. Thus David, a man ahead of his time, said, “What shall I render unto the LORD for all His benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the LORD . . . I will offer to Thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the LORD” (Psa 116:12-13,17).

In our text, the activity of calling is not related to finding relief in outward difficulties. Rather, it is specifically related to the appropriation of salvation, or the attainment of righteousness. More specifically, it related to this marvelous phrase: “For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness” (10:10). Calling upon the name of the Lord is a fervent quest to obtain that righteousness. That call is provoked by the awareness of two realities.

Calling upon the Lord involves human initiative, and is absolutely essential for salvation. However, our text is going even further than this. It is not representing calling upon the name of the Lord as a requirement. Rather, the affirmation has been that whoever calls upon the name of the Lord “shall be saved” (10:13). No one has ever called upon the name of the Lord who has not been saved! That is the glorious point of this text.

The Awareness of Unrighteousness

First, that the one calling upon the name of the Lord has an acute awareness of personal unrighteousness. By nature, there is an utter lack within of the righteousness God requires, and the person calling upon the Lord knows it. Such an one correctly views himself as “a sinner” (Lk 18:13).

Righteousness Is Available

Second, the heart of the calling one is convinced that the righteousness of God is accessible. Although it is not presently possessed, the Gospel has convinced the individual that there is a righteousness to be had, and that it can be obtained.

“For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved” (v 13). This is one of the pivotal expressions of Scripture, standing between hopelessness and a living hope, between darkness and light, between ignorance and illumination.

THE GOSPEL CALCULATED TO INDUCE THIS CALLING

The Gospel of Christ brings the awareness of these things: i.e.,¹ personal unrighteousness, and ² the availability of a righteousness from God. Where honest and good hearts are not convinced of these things, the Gospel has not been declared.

The Aim of the Preacher

Those who speak in the name of the Lord must devote themselves to delivering a message that provokes these perceptions. It is the message itself that accomplishes this, and not the reasoning, or supposed logical conclusions, of the speaker. Technically, the aim of the true preacher is not to convince men they are unrighteous, and persuade them that they can be righteous. Rather, it is to preach the Gospel with insight and power. The Gospel of Christ will accomplish these things, for that is precisely what it is designed to do.

The objective for the preacher is to be a specialist in Gospel, not the supposed state and need of humanity. The psychologist, for example, specializes in the human condition. The sociologist particularizes in the status, trends, and needs of society. The man of God is a specialist in the Gospel of Christ. This is involved in Paul’s admonition to Timothy, and all others who labor in the vineyard of the Lord. “Be diligent to present yourself approved to God as a workman who does not need to be ashamed, handling accurately the word of truth” ^{NASB} (2 Tim 2:15). Nowhere are we admonished to specialize in people, categories of people, or classifications of life’s problems and challenges. All of that may sound noble to some, but it does not reflect the mind and purpose of God. There are higher and more consequential matters upon which we are to focus. The one who speaks for God must address these matters pointedly and effectively.

The Gospel, given by God Himself, is designed to uncover the real human dilemma, and provide an eternal solution to it. Every legitimate area of concern is addressed within the framework of the Gospel. Although all of these are not particularized, the effective remedy for all deficiencies can be arrived at within the perimeter of the righteousness revealed in the Gospel. The salvation of God has left no area unattended. The spirit, soul, and body, are all included in the salvation of God (1 Thess 5:23). A “preacher” who does not see this cannot be effective.

HOW???

How can a person call upon the name of the Lord if they have not believed in Him? If the individual is not persuaded that “God is, and that He is the Rewarder of those who diligently seek Him” (Heb 11:6), Divine benefits will not be pursued.

The question is pointed. It is not an interrogation to be answered. This is a rhetorical question, designed to show the indispensability of believing the Gospel. “How then are they to call on Him if they have not come to believe in Him?”^{NJB}

The truth of the matter is that men will not call upon God to save them if they do not believe in Him. A petition to the Lord that begins, “O God, if there really is a God,” is vain. It is not a valid call, even though some imagine it is acceptable. As it is written, “But without faith it is impossible to please Him: for he that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that He is a Rewarder of them that diligently seek Him” (Heb 11:6). In this case, coming to God is equivalent to calling upon Him.

No real quest for God, or what He provides in Christ, will be found where men and women do not “believe.” Where people are not engaged in a fervent quest to obtain the righteousness of God, they have not believed in Him.

Where an acute sense of a need of the Lord is absent, souls are not believing in Him! When there is no seeking, there is no believing! When there is not knocking, there is no believing! When there is no asking, there is no believing! That is precisely why Jesus spoke of these activities as He did. “Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened” (Matt 7:7-8). The certitude woven into those words is remarkable. There is not the slightest hint that asking, seeking, and knocking will be in vain. In fact, these words are but another way of saying, “For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.”

The Nominal Church

Anyone who has been in Christ for any length of time has been impressed with the lack of fervency in the professed church. One is hard pressed to find an assembly in which people are calling upon the name of the Lord – asking, seeking, and knocking. Actually, the nominal church is wedded to the world, and the world is its wedded name. The world is not calling upon the Lord, and the average churchmen is not either. That is confirmation that an unlawful wedding has taken place.

The reason for this situation is unfolded in our text. It is because men have not believed in the Lord. That failure to believe has aborted any quest for His righteousness. Thus men stumble on in darkness and despair, not convinced of the accessibility of the righteousness of God.

THE NECESSITY OF HEARING

^{10:14b} And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? The philosopher may think that believing “in Him” can come from introspection, or even by studying nature in all of its marvelous order and complexities. Such a view gives too much credit to man, and makes too little allowance (if any at all) for the Gospel of Christ. Believing in God is not the same as believing God exists, and that is not the intent of this statement. Rather, believing in Him is being assured that He has a righteousness to give – one that is sorely needed, and one that can be obtained. If a person is not persuaded that God provides a righteousness, and that it can be obtained, there has been no believing in Him. To put it another way, if one is not convinced God has graciously provided a means whereby man will be accepted by Him, one has not believed in Him. What, then, is the appointed means whereby men will “believe in Him?”

There is a message that must be heard. It cannot be obtained by seeing, or by visions. It cannot be appropriated by pondering the creation, or searching our own hearts. It must be heard! That is, someone who knows the message of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them” (Acts 8:5). When they heard, “they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women” (Acts 8:12). Cities cannot believe until they hear!

If a person is not persuaded that God provides a righteousness, and that it can be obtained, there has been no believing in Him.

THE ETHIOPIAN

EUNUCH. Here was a religious man from the African quadrant of the world. He had been to Jerusalem to worship, and was returning to his homeland. He was reading the book of Isaiah, but did not yet believe in the Lord, or know of His “gift of righteousness.” If believing can be induced by reading, surely this man will believe. He was, after all, reading a synopsis of the Gospel in the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. But he did not believe until the Lord sent Philip to declare Jesus unto him, for individuals cannot believe until they hear.

must bring it within the hearing range of those who do not know it! A few examples will suffice to confirm this.

THE CITY OF SAMARIA.

Although within the proximity of the earthly ministry of Christ, the city of Samaria had not believed in the Lord. Consequently, they had not called upon Him. Thus, “Philip went down to the city

CORNELIUS. If Cornelius is going to believe in the Lord, thereby appropriating His righteousness, someone must bring the message to him. God sent Peter to preach the message so Cornelius could “believe to the saving of the soul” (Acts 10:1-48; Heb 10:39), and directed Cornelius to send for him, for households cannot believe until they hear!

The hearing of reference is nothing less than “the hearing of faith” (Gal 3:2,5). That is, the hearing that results in believing. It is the Gospel of Christ that is heard. The fact that it is “the power of God unto salvation” is confirmed by the effects of believing it. It moves people to call upon the Lord, for “How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard?”

This is the reason why the Gospel must be preached. Jesus declared, “Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature” (Mark 16:15). This is the message that, when heard, brings men to believe in the Lord.

This hearing is not the mere exercise of natural abilities. There is such a thing as having “ears to hear” and they come from the Lord. As it is written, “The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the LORD hath made even both of them” (Prov 20:12). This is an ear that is “planted,” or “implanted,”^{NIV} by the Lord (Psa 94:9).

They represent a spiritual capacity to understand what the Lord declares, particularly the Gospel of His Son. They are the appointed means to believing.

There are ears, given by God, which are intended to respond to His Word. They represent a spiritual capacity to understand what the Lord declares, particularly the Gospel of His Son. They are the appointed means to believing.

When Israel failed to effectively hear the Word of the Lord, Moses explained the circumstance in these words. “Yet the LORD hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day” (Deut 29:4). This condition is why the Scriptures speak in the following manner: “He that hath ears to hear, let him hear” (Matt 11:15; 13:9,43; Lk 14:35). “He that hath an ear, let him hear” (Rev 2:7,11,17,29; 3:6,13,22; 13:9).

There are ears, given by God, which are intended to respond to His Word.

However, until the sound of the Gospel falls upon them, men will not believe, nor will they call upon the Lord. Further the “ears” are granted when the “sound” of saving words come to the person.

Our text will confirm that this is not a one-time hearing of the Gospel. Believing is sustained by hearing, as will be declared in verse seventeen. Therefore, the people of God must place an emphasis upon hearing – hearing the Gospel of Jesus Christ. It is to be the constant theme of exposition.

THE NECESSITY OF PREACHING

“^{10:14c} And how shall they hear without a preacher?” A “preacher” is a proclaimer – “someone to proclaim Him.”^{NIV} The word “preacher” means “a herald,” or someone who announces something that has occurred. A “preacher” openly proclaims something that has been done. He publishes things that have been already accomplished, or are readily accessible and profitable to men. The “preacher” is someone who makes things extensively known. That is, he is able to announce and expound things that are realities. In this case, it is what “the Lord hath done,” or “the wonderful works of God” (Psa 126:2; Acts 2:11).

The Word of God often declares what was “preached,” published, or publicly made known. John the Baptist “preached,” or announced, the coming of the Savior (Mark 1:7). Jesus “preached the Word” (Mark 2:2). Jesus sent out His disciples to “preach that men should repent” (Mark 6:12). The Kingdom of God was “preached” (Lk 16:16). Jesus sent His disciples, affirming that “that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem” (Lk 24:47). Christ was “preached,” as well as “the resurrection of the dead” (Acts 3:20; 4:2). The preaching of “the Gospel” is preeminent in Scripture (Mark 16:15; Acts 16:10; Rom 1:15; 1 Cor 1:17; 2 Cor 10:16).

The “preacher” in this text is someone with a revealed message. It is a message of accomplishment and access. This message brings the accomplishments of Christ within the range of the hearers, and assures them that eternal benefits have been provided for them.

The purpose of the preached message is not to get people to do something, but to bring them to “believe in Him” who gave the message. If people can be brought to believe in the Lord, they will even ask what they ought to do (Acts

2:37; 16:30). The lack of godly response to the preaching of the Gospel always indicates a lack of faith.

At Sinai, “the voice of God” was heard in the proclamation of the Law (Deut 4:33). But, the Gospel is not preached to men by God, like the Law was given on Mount Horeb! The Law is also referred to as “the word spoken by angels” (Heb 2:2), but no angel ever preached the Gospel to men. An angel directed Cornelius to call for a man who would tell him “words” whereby he and his house would be saved (Acts 11:14). Men will not call upon the Lord until they believe in Him. They will not believe in Him until they hear of Him. And, they will not hear of Him until someone declares Him—someone who knows Him.

Real preachers are “ministers by whom you believed, even as the Lord gave [or, as our text says it, ‘sent’] to every man” (1 Cor 3:5). The believing that saves the soul is consistently represented as directly related to hearing. Even when that hearing was attended by confirming signs and wonders, as in the case of Samaria, the preeminence was given to the hearing. “And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did” (Acts 8:6).

A PREACHER HAS A MESSAGE

The “preacher” of reference has a message. It is a message originated and given by God Himself. True preaching is not flowery oratory, although it may be masterfully spoken. It is not the sounding of an opinion, or the binding of heavy burdens upon men.

Scripture represents preaching as a noun as well as a verb – a message as well as an activity. For example, the Lord told Jonah, “Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee” (Jonah 3:2). Other translations read, “preach to it the message,”^{NKJV} “proclaim to it the proclamation,”^{NASB} “proclaim to it the message.”^{NIV} Jesus referred to the preaching of Jonah. Although a different word was used, our Lord also used it in the noun form. “The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here” (Matt 12:41). The Greek form confirms this is the noun, not the verb, form of the word (τὸ κήρυγμα).

The noun form of “preaching” is also applied to the Gospel of Christ. “For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God” (1 Cor 1:18). This does not refer to an activity, but a message, report, or announcement. The doctrinal thrust of the statement confirms this, as well as the Greek form of the text (ὁ λόγος). A second reference to the message that is preached, or declared, is found in Romans 16:25. The exact wording is used here that Jesus used in reference to the message declared by Jonah (τὸ κήρυγμα). “Now to Him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began.”

The same expression is used to declare the appointed means through which God is now making known what He has all along intended for humanity. “Paul, a servant of God, and an apostle of

The “preacher” of reference has a message. It is a message originated and given by God Himself. True preaching is not flowery oratory, although it may be masterfully spoken. It is not the sounding of an opinion, or the binding of heavy burdens upon men.

Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God’s elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness; in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began; but hath in due times manifested His word through preaching, which is committed unto me according to the commandment of God our Savior” (Tit 1:1-3). Note, there is an appointed means through which God reveals, or manifests, “the truth” pertaining to “eternal life.” It is “His word” that is made known, and it is made known “through preaching.” Again, the word used is a noun, not a verb (κήρυγμα). That is, it is a message, not an activity. To put it another way, it is WHAT is preached, and not the mere exercise of human speech.

The Relevance of This

All of this may appear to be completely irrelevant – a sort of smoke screen that has no bearing on our salvation. However, this is not at all the case. There is an appointed means through which men are brought to believe in the Lord and thereby receive His righteousness. Neither believing nor the experience of righteousness can occur independently of this designated means. Already that means has been defined as “the Gospel of Christ,” declared to be “the power of God unto salvation” (Rom 1:16). In the sense of our text, there is no valid “preacher” who does not declare this exclusive and powerful message.

Allow me to show further why this is such a vital point. There are all manner of messages being preached within the professed Christian community. By “message,” I mean the core message, or emphasis that is being declared. As you must know, sectarianism requires different messages. You cannot have different kinds of “churches” without different kinds of messages. It is the doctrinal emphasis, or message, of the denomination that makes it what it is. Remove that emphasis, and the pillars of the institution fall to the ground. An emphasis is to doctrine what flour is to bread. It is the bulk of what is taught. An emphasis is to a church what gasoline is to a car. It is what makes it run. An emphasis is not the only teaching, but it is the fundamental one. It is the touchstone by which both people and groups of people are judged to be acceptable.

For purposes of clarity, allow me to mention some of these emphases that have contributed to the hostile divisions within Christendom. In mentioning them, I do not intend to cast reproach upon anyone. Neither, indeed, can I disgrace the Lord Jesus by imagining that He condones such doctrinal thrusts. I will use the word “gospel” to denote these doctrinal thrusts. However, and make no mistake about this, these are not gospels at all. They are departures from the true Gospel, which is “the power of God.”

❑ The gospel of the church. This is a message that focuses on the church, viewing it much like an institution. In this message, being the true church is the fundamental thing. The organization and name of the church is emphasized. By virtue of this emphasis, Christ and His magnificent accomplishments are relegated to the background.

- ❑ The gospel of the Holy Spirit. In this case, the power of the Spirit, together with various experiences purported to be wrought by Him, are the emphasis. Being baptized in the Spirit, slain by the Spirit, and receiving gifts from the Spirit are represented as the fundamental and distinguishing things. This approach, of necessity, puts the Son of God and His great salvation into a secondary position.
- ❑ The gospel of the Sabbath day. Those who embrace this gospel make the distinguishing thing the Sabbath day. That is where the line of demarcation is drawn, determining whether what the individual does is fully acceptable to God. While Christ is acknowledged, the Gospel of Christ is not the main thing.
- ❑ The gospel of good works. This is the presentation of Divine acceptance from the standpoint of Law. The acceptance of the person by God is are accented. As a result, there is a decided minimization of the “eternal inheritance,” “eternal life,” and the “ages to come” – all of which are integral to the Gospel of Christ.

- ❑ The gospel of problem resolution. Those who embrace this gospel perceive the day-to-day problems of individuals as the most critical area. Jesus is declared as the answer to our problems. He is held forth as the solution to family difficulties, social disturbances, and political deficiencies. Jesus is offered as a solution to troubles that have only to do with this world. Sin is de-emphasized, and Christ’s Saviorhood is consequently greatly obscured.
- ❑ The gospel of the family. Here the family is set forth as the principle institution in humanity. Because it was first in institution, it is therefore considered to be preeminent for all time. The structure of the family is giving great emphasis, and the program of the local congregation is structured to give the fundamental advantage to the family unit. All of this ignores that Christ affirmed following Him required placing the family into a secondary position (Luke 14:26). It also reduces eternity and the world to come, thereby making Christ of less significance.

These observations by no means suggest the relationships mentioned are without significance, or that they are to be ignored. They are not, however, to be the fundamental thing, or the point of emphasis. At the precise point the stress is placed upon them, for whatever reason, the Son of God is toppled from the throne, salvation is pushed away from the individual, and acceptance with God becomes less critical.

based upon the works performed in the energy of the flesh. Social issues, political stances, and general disciplines of life are the focus of this gospel. Consequently, only passing references are actually made to the Gospel of Christ.

- ❑ The gospel of happiness. In this case, the well being of the individual is emphasized. Life in this world is presented as the ultimate domain of benefit. Health, security, and prosperity are given undue emphasis. Life in this world, together with feelings of elation, invalid, issues. I know it is not fashionable to say this, and that a certain penalty is exacted by the religious hierarchy for doing so. Yet the penalties for failing to sound this trumpet are infinitely worse.

FURTHER COMMENTS

People will not call upon the Lord unless they believe on Him. Further, they will not believe on Him unless they hear the message He has ordained. Additionally, that message will not be heard until it is declared by someone who possesses it.

Jesus’ Word to the Lawyers

The distraction to other messages, then, has actually stopped people from believing! The same thing is happening in our day that was occurring when Jesus walked among us. Jesus said to the law-experts of His time, “Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered” (Lk 11:52). In our time, that “key of knowledge” is the message of the Gospel.

A Word to the Scribes and Pharisees

The Gospel unlocks the mystery of obtaining the righteousness of God. Jesus also said to the scribes and Pharisees, “But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in” (Matt 23:13). The reference to shutting up the Kingdom of God “against men” is represented in this way in other versions of Scripture. “You shut off the kingdom of heaven from men,” ^{NASB} “You shut the kingdom of heaven in men’s faces.” ^{NIV} In our day, the entrance into the kingdom of God is shut in men’s faces by placing stress on something other than the Gospel of Christ. When our attention is moved away from Jesus, we are moved away from salvation.

No one who fails to declare the Gospel of Christ can bring men to believe with the heart unto righteousness. The ONLY preacher recognized by heaven is the one who correctly emphasizes the Person and work of the Lord Jesus Christ – the good news of the Gospel. You will find this to be the emphasis of all Apostolic doctrine.

At the precise point the stress is placed upon other things, for whatever reason, the Son of God is toppled from the throne, salvation is pushed away from the individual, and acceptance with God becomes less critical.

THE NECESSITY OF BEING SENT

^{15a} “And how shall they preach unless they are sent?” Preachers that bring a message that induces faith do not come on their own. They “are sent.” The fact is, there would be no faith-inducing preachers at all unless they were “sent” – sent by God!

These are ministers whom God has given to every person who believes. Wherever someone believes on the Lord, a “preacher” has been “sent” to proclaim the message of the Gospel – the message God uses to accomplish salvation. As it is written, “Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man?” (1 Cor 3:5). “Preacher” is a category in which both Apostles (Paul) and non-Apostles (Apollos) were included. Yet, both were divine placements.

Of old time, the Spirit established that a valid message had to be the result of a Divine commission. Here are some sober reminders of this reality.

- ❑ “But the LORD said unto me, Say not, I am a child: for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak” (Jer 1:7).
- ❑ “Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early and sending them” (Jer 7:25).
- ❑ “Then the LORD said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name: I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart. Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed”

(Jer 14:14).

- ❑ “I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran: I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied” (Jer 23:21).
- ❑ “For they prophesy falsely unto you in my name: I have not sent them, saith the LORD” (Jer 29:9).

The Lord said to Moses, “Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain” (Ex 3:12). It was said of John the Baptist, “There was a man sent from God, whose name was John” (John 1:6). The Lord said to Ezekiel, “And he said unto me, Son of man, I send thee to the appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee; delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee” (Acts 26:16-17). Following His resurrection, when Jesus appeared to His disciples, He said to them, “Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you” (John 20:21).

Sent with Understanding

No person who takes the message of God seriously will fail to see the necessity of being “sent” by God to declare it. That sending is accompanied with a measure of understanding, or comprehension. It is foolish to attempt to declare a message upon which salvation is hinged while being fundamentally ignorant of it. Yet, we are daily confronted with such “preachers” – men who babble before the people in the name of the Lord, yet have not been sent by Him. As the false prophets of old, “understanding neither what they say nor the things which they affirm” (1 Tim 1:7).

Sent with Power

Those sent by God are empowered by Him – endued with abilities and gifts necessary for the effective proclamation of His Gospel. Paul spoke of power, or authority, that had been given to him “for edification, and not for destruction” (2 Cor 13:10). This Divine enablement does not always take the form of signs and wonders. It is my understanding that this is not even the primary evidence of the power. The power, or enablement, of which I speak is a personal sufficiency that makes the “preacher” equal to his commission. Paul spoke of this empowerment in these words. “Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think any thing as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God; who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the children of Israel, to a rebellious nation that hath rebelled against me: they and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very day” (Ezek 2:3).

When Jesus first sent out “the twelve,” He said to them, “Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves; be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves” (Matt 10:16). When He sent out the seventy, He said to them, “Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves” (Luke 10:3). When Jesus appeared to Saul of Tarsus on the road to Damascus, He said to him, “I have spirit giveth life" (2 Cor 3:5-6). Other versions read "competent ministers,"^{NIV} or "adequate as servants."^{NASB}

Some imagine this only applies to the Apostles. However, the Scriptures are clear that any effective proclaimers are gifts from God. Those "gifts" not only include "apostles" and "prophets," but "evangelists" and "pastors and teachers" (Eph 4:8-11).

Sending Is Sometimes Discretionary

During the beginning of the spread of the Gospel, specific direction was given by the Lord. In a general sense, the commission was "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15), making disciples of "all nations" (Matt 28:19). However, everything was not left to the discretion of those who labored in the Lord's vineyard.

After Paul and Silas had "gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia," "they were forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in Asia" (Acts 16:6). The "Asia" of reference is where the seven churches to whom the book of Revelation was written were located (Rev 1:4). At the time the Spirit forbade them to into Asia, Paul and Silas were ministering in Asia Minor, or the modern peninsula of Turkey.

Still, even there, the Spirit did not allow them to set their own agenda. When Paul and Silas came to Mysia, in the northwestern part of Asia Minor, "they tried to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit did not permit them"^{NKJV} (Acts 16:7). Bithynia would have led them into the part of world currently occupied by Russia, Korea, China, and India. Instead of allowing the preachers to go into that area, they were led into the Grecian part of the world – Macedonia in particular. Later, the Gospel did get into the Asian section of the world. However, in strictly orchestrating the spread of the Gospel, Paul and Silas were not "sent" there at that time.

How Are Preachers Sent Today?

Some, betraying their sophistry, scoff at the idea of preachers being "sent" in our time. They imagine that the Lord directed the early activities of the church, but has now abdicated that function, leaving it wholly in the hands of men. In such a case, He would no longer be the "Head of the church" (Eph 5:23), at least not in the ministry of sending preachers. What kind of reasoning would lead a person to believe holy and gifted Apostles, placed "first" in the church (1 Cor 12:28), had to be directed, but men of the twentieth century do not require such direction?

Mind you, nothing in Scripture suggests that such a time would ever come with Divine approval. No word of God connection between every member of the body and "the Head" (Col 2:19). It is that connection, held by faith, that is the means through which heavenly direction is realized. Further, that direction is what is referenced by the word "sent."

THE COMPULSION TO PREACH

One of the evidences of being "sent" is a compulsion to preach the Gospel. That compelling inner drive is evidence of being "sent." Again, we summon Paul to the witness stand to confirm the truth of this observation. "And since we have the same spirit of faith, according to what is remotely suggests that Jesus is the "Beginning," but not the "Ending," or that He is only "the First," and not "the Last" (Rev 1:8; 21:6; 22:13). And, if the Lord begins things He does not finish, how are we know which ones they are? Precisely at what point do we cease to inquire of the Lord and trust that He will "direct" our "steps" (Jer 10:23)? Has the time now arrived when our "goings" are no longer upheld by the Lord (Psa 17:5) – particularly in the matter of preaching the Gospel? Are the "steps of a good man" no longer "ordered by the Lord" (Psa 37:23)? Are the preparations of the heart man's doing, but "the answer of the tongue" no longer of the Lord (Prov 16:1)?

What kind of reasoning would lead a person to believe holy and gifted Apostles, placed "first" in the church (1 Cor 12:28), had to be directed, but men of the twentieth century do not require such direction?

As with all Divine direction, sending is accomplished through faith and tenderness of heart. Such direction falls into the category of Jesus manifesting Himself to those who love Him and keep His words (John 14:21). It is involved in "learning Christ" and being "taught by Him" (Eph 4:02-21). There is a vital and perceptible written, "I believed and therefore I spoke," we also believe and therefore speak" (2 Cor 4:13). This very circumstance eventually separates the preacher who is "sent" from the one who is not. Solomon put it this way, "A false witness will perish, But the man who listens to the truth will speak forever" (Prov 21:28).

This compulsion is so strong that it overrides competing discouragement or pride. It is written, "Yet when I preach the gospel, I cannot boast, for I am compelled to preach. Woe to me if I do not preach the gospel! If I preach voluntarily, I have a reward; if not voluntarily, I am simply discharging the trust committed to me"^{NIV} (1 Cor 9:16-17).

This frame of mind enabled Paul to endure all manner of difficult and grievous opposition, yet continue to preach. His determination to preach the Gospel could not be stifled by adversity and circumstance. This confirmed that he was "sent." The absence of this compulsion suggests the person is NOT “sent,” and has been driven by something other than Divine constraint. There is far too much of this absence in the modern church. It greatly dishonors God. Preachers must be “sent!”

THE BLESSEDNESS OF THE MESSENGER

^{15b} As it is written: ‘How beautiful are the feet of those who preach the gospel of peace, Who bring glad tidings of good things!’” Being “sent” by God is one thing. The hearers recognizing this is the case is another thing. The Thessalonians, for example, knew that the ones through whom they heard the Gospel had been “sent.” Thus it is written of them, “For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe” (1 Thess 2:13).

THE QUOTATION

The reference is to Isaiah 52:7; “How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!” In keeping with the thrust of this passage, this text is given to confirm that preachers cannot preach unless they are “sent.” It is necessary to note the manner in which the Apostle reasons. Here is an example of being “spiritually minded,” or having a mind “controlled by the Spirit”^{NIV} (Rom 8:6). The way Paul substantiates his point is refreshing. It is challenging intellectually, yet is vastly superior to lifeless pedantics, or academic approaches.

The fifty-second chapter of Isaiah contains a message of Divine summons -- God speaking to people through an appointed messenger. It calls for the people of God to “Awake!” and put on their strength. The inhabitants of Jerusalem are told “henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean” (52:1). A discouraged people are told to shake the dust from themselves, acknowledging they had sold themselves for nothing. Yet, they would be “redeemed without money” – that is, the Lord would resolve their dilemma. Although their enemies had ruled over them ruthlessly, the Lord promises “My people shall know My name: therefore they shall know in that day that I am He that doth speak: behold, it is I” (52:6).

All of this would be made known through a message – a proclamation. It would not be beheld in a vision, but brought by a word from God. It would be delivered by God’s messenger, into whose mouth His words had been placed. The core of the message was this: “YOUR GOD REIGNS”^{NIV} (52:7b). Isaiah’s message announced an end to the Babylonian captivity – recovery from Divine judgment!

When the messengers, or “watchmen,” took hold of the message and announced it, the joyful optimism would take hold on the people. They would “see eye to eye,” waste places would break forth into joy, and the people would be comforted. Then, couched within this joyful sound, the Lord speaks of the whole world being impacted. “The LORD hath made bare His holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God” (52:10).

Those laboring under great restrictions would be changed by a message! Consequently, a high value would be placed upon the messenger. He would bring the message which, if believed, would bring salvation. He would come, as it were, over restricting mountains and hindrances, being sent by God. Like Philip came to the desert, Paul and Silas to the water and jail cell, and Paul to the barbaric isle of Melita, so the message comes through formerly insurmountable difficulties.

THE GOSPEL OF PEACE

The Spirit now elevates the matter of the proclamation of the Gospel of Christ, something foreshadowed by Isaiah’s words, but not fulfilled by them. The Gospel is declared to be a message of peace. It is the announcement of amnesty, the proclamation of peace, and the report of reconciliation! Something has been done in the behalf of mankind that is of such power that heaven itself has been moved by it. Here is a message of Divine conciliation. God will neither destroy nor turn away those who come to Him because of this message!

When Jesus was born the holy angels announced, “peace on earth!” (Luke 2:14). Peter declared to the household of Cornelius that there is a “word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (He is Lord of all)” (Acts 10:36). Following the reconciliation of both Jew and Gentile to God, Jesus is said to have come and “preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh” (Eph 2:17). The Gospel is, indeed, “the Gospel of peace” (Eph 6:15).

This is the “glorious Gospel of the blessed God” (1 Tim 1:11). He saw the travail of Christ’s soul and “was satisfied”

(Isa 53:11). Those who, believing this Gospel, come to God through Christ, will find a blessed and jubilant God! His arms will be extended to them in gracious welcome. They will not be met with lightning and thunderings as Israel was at Sinai. The earth will not tremble beneath them as they approach to the Lord, nor will the mountain before them blaze and smoke as Mount Horeb. This is the "Gospel of peace," and it brings calmness to the souls of all who receive it.

A message that does not leave an acute awareness of an accessible peace with God is not Gospel, and it will not save! No message that fails to announce the "Gospel of peace" is the power of God,

A message that does not leave an acute awareness of an accessible peace with God is not Gospel, and it will not save! No message that fails to announce the "Gospel of peace" is the power of God, nor will men be saved by it.

nor will men be saved by it.

GLAD TIDINGS OF GOOD THINGS
Glad Tidings

"Glad tidings" are words that produce gladness in believing hearers. They bring alleviation from the sorrows of life, particularly those related to being sinners in the hands of an angry God. It has been a long time since many precious souls have heard any "glad tidings." Their souls are thirst to hear something that will gladden their hearts. There is such a message, and it is the Gospel of Christ. It fulfills the saying of Solomon, "As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country" (Prov 25:25).

The inquirers at Pentecost received good news! They were told their sins would be remitted, and that they would receive the Holy Spirit of God (Acts 2:38-39). The promise of God was for them! From that day until this, preachers of the Gospel have brought "glad tidings" of peace – a peace with God that also overflows to bring peace among formerly hostile people, like Jews and Gentiles.

You do not want to miss the emphasis of this passage. The Living God effects His great salvation through a message that brings "glad tidings" of peace to the people. It is very true that we must save some "with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh" (Jude 22). The "fear" of reference, however, is not fear induced in the hearer, but in the one snatching them from the fire. Some people are so mired in iniquity that special care must be taken not to allow them to defile us. However, even in such cases, it is the Gospel of peace that enables them to begin moving toward the light. It is "glad tidings" that awakens a desire to be saved within them.

GOOD THINGS

How the people of God must master speaking of "good things." When Joseph sent to bring his father Jacob into Egypt, "he sent after this manner; ten asses laden with the good things of Egypt, and ten she asses laden with corn and bread and meat for his father by the way" (Gen 45:23). Will the great God of heaven do less when He sends ambassadors to bring the people home to Him? If the sins of the people have withheld "good things" from them (Jer 5:25), much more does the sacrifice and exaltation of Christ clear the way to send a message of the availability of those "good things" now—"good things" from heaven! If God gives "good things to those who ask Him" (Matt 7:11), then the Gospel is designed to provoke men to ask for them. Christ is now a "High Priest of good things to come," and the Gospel declares it (Heb 9:11). The Law had "a shadow of good things to come," and the Gospel announces they are here, and can be possessed (Heb 10:1).

SOME FLAWED THINKING

With the advent of self-professed religious experts, all manner of flawed thinking sprang up like tares in the field of thought. One of the most harmful of these wicked intrusions is the notion that the "Gospel," or "good news," is only for the person who is alienated from God. Some sophist once said, "No man should hear the Gospel twice until every one has heard it once." That was not only ignorance in seed form, it was a sizeable tree that can never bear good fruit. The truth of the matter is that grace never brings us where we do not need to hear the Gospel! Those who admit to being "strangers and pilgrims on the earth" (Heb 11:13) need to hear "glad tidings of good things." Nothing in all of Scripture suggests this good news is to be withheld from the household of faith. In fact, every word of God strongly affirms the opposite to be true. Take, for example, the writings of the Apostles, placed first "in the church" (1 Cor 12:28) for the "edifying of the body" (Eph 4:12). How did they speak? Did they bring "glad tidings of good things?" Ponder the remarkable consistency of their message.

- "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ . . ." (Rom 5:1-2).
- "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life" (Rom 5:10).

God has never declared another emphasis or message to be His power unto salvation. When, therefore, men come preaching a gospel of the church, the family, prosperity, or even the Spirit, they have, by that very emphasis, forfeited the power of God.

That is Gospel, “glad tidings of good things.” The Gospel of Christ is the hub upon which the salvation of God turns. There is no point in this salvation where the Gospel ceases to be central. There is no level or degree of spirituality where the Gospel of Christ is reduced to obsolescence, or takes a second position to some other emphasis.

God has never declared another emphasis or message to be His power unto salvation. When, therefore, men come preaching a gospel of the church, the family, prosperity, or even the Spirit, they have, by that very emphasis, forfeited the power of God. Their message may sound good, but it is not, for it is not underwritten by God! It does not contribute to the salvation of men, and God will not bless it. When His Son is pushed into the background, His empowerment abruptly ends.

OBEDIENCE AND BELIEVING

¹⁶ But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Isaiah says, 'Lord, who has believed our report?' Simplistic souls may conclude from Paul's argument that faith always follows the preaching of the Gospel of Christ. After all, it is "the power of God unto salvation." "Surely," the naive soul reasons, "nothing will be able to hinder God." Some creeds of Christendom have even spoken of "irresistible grace," as though that expression was contained in principalities and powers in the heavenly places. How any person could conclude that salvation was simplistic, or that it was accomplished independently of human involvement is a great mystery. That those who are being saved could be the only ones uninvolved in the process is an absurdity so great that only the devil himself could have concocted it.

All of this is to say that men do not automatically believe when they hear the Gospel – even though it was God Himself who sent the messengers to them. This is true even though the message declared by the preacher is unquestionably the "power of God unto salvation."

The word "obey" does mean submit to, hearken to, or yield to. The idea is that the individual adjusts his life to suit the message he has heard. Where this does not occur, the Gospel has not been obeyed.

OBEDIENCE TO THE GOSPEL

"But they have not all obeyed the Gospel." Other versions read, "However, they did not all heed the glad tidings,"^{NASB} "But not all the Israelites accepted the good news,"^{NIV} and

"But in fact they have not all responded to the good news."^{NJB}

The word "obey" does mean submit to, hearken to, or yield to. The idea is that the individual adjusts his life to suit the message he has heard. Where this does not occur, the Gospel has not been obeyed. Keep in mind, those who do not obey the Gospel will be condemned, forthrightly, and without remedy. As it is written, "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Thess 1:7-8).

BELIEVING THE REPORT

The Spirit is specific about what it means to "obey the Gospel." This involves more than fulfilling a list of demands – although faith never balks at Divine demands, or commandments.

Here an appeal is made to the prophet Isaiah. The text of reference is Isaiah 53:1. "Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed?" Notice the form of reasoning. First the Spirit declares, "They have not all obeyed the Gospel," even though it is the "glad tidings of good things." The confirming word from Isaiah, however, does not say "They have not all obeyed the Gospel." Rather than making a statement, the prophet asks a question: "Who has believed our report?" A contemporary way of saying this would be, "Has anyone believed our report?"

Isaiah speaks with astonishment at the fewness of those who truly believed. It was so few, indeed, that he wondered, as it were, if any one believed. It certainly was not because the people had not heard good news – good news from the Almighty God Himself. The fifty-second chapter of Isaiah boldly announced.

- "Therefore My people shall know my name" (52:5).*
- "They shall see eye to eye, when the LORD shall bring again Zion" (52:8).*
- "The LORD hath comforted His people, He hath redeemed Jerusalem." (52:9).*
- "The LORD hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God" (52:10).*
- "For ye shall not go out with haste, nor go by flight: for the LORD will go before you; and the God of Israel will be your reward" (52:12).*

Add to that the marvelous prophecies of the coming Savior in the fifty-third chapter. Yet, for all of those "good things," the prophet exclaimed, "Who hath believed our report?"

With great power, the Spirit will now show us that great proclamations must be attended by great power, else they will not be believed. The reason for making this point should be obvious to us. If men do not believe – such as Israel

Scripture.

Those who find it easy to speak in such lifeless ways betray their fundamental ignorance of the salvation of God. It is, after all, wrought out in the arena of conflict. All of heaven is involved in the enterprise, thereby confirming its remarkable complexity. God the Father Himself is involved, never withdrawing from any aspect of His salvation. Jesus Christ, His only begotten Son, is administering the entirety of salvation, even interceding daily in order to its accomplishment. The Holy Spirit works to woo men through the truth, set them apart for God, even empowering them and interceding for them. An innumerable company of strong and wise angels have been dispatched to minister to those who are the heirs of salvation. Inimical forces upon the earth are controlled, as well as after the flesh – it is because a veil is over their eyes. If that veil is mercifully lifted, the condition of the people will suddenly change (2 Cor 3:16). Thus, Paul continued to desire and pray that Israel would be saved, knowing the power of the Lord.

If this seems to difficult to receive, consider how Isaiah elaborated on his own statement. “Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed?” When Divine power does not attend preaching, it does not yield favorable results. Who is the person willing to affirm that a man can speak into the soul of another, penetrating into the inmost being of a person? Is this not specifically declared to be the peculiar prerogative of the Word of God? “For the word of God is living and active and sharper than any two-edged sword, and piercing as far as the division of soul and spirit, of both joints and marrow, and able to judge the thoughts and intentions of the heart”^{NASB} (Heb 4:12). This is the process in which the arm of the Lord is revealed.

The point of this passage is not to produce all manner of doubts in the hearts of the saints. Rather, it is to kindle the fire of hope within the human breast. When the “arm of the Lord” is “revealed,” men will respond to “the report.” The “arm of the Lord” has been “revealed” when men receive the Gospel as a true declaration of Divine intent. The message exposes the dire need of humanity, else so much would not have been done for them. It also makes known the deep and compassionate heart of God, else He would not have paid such an awful price.

However, this association does not come from word studies and researching parallel passages. Rather, it is when the Lord reveals His “arm” – when He shows the tender heart “what great things God hath wrought.”

What person is capable of one we are the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?” (2 Cor 2:15-16).

THE POINT

The point is that God has ordained the salvation of men through a message – a prognosticating when, or if, the Lord will “reveal His arm.” Or who would dare to say it will never again be revealed, or that Israel, or someone else, has passed beyond any hope of it being revealed? This is an area controlled by God alone.

The flesh takes this statement and uses it to justify NOT declaring the good news. After all, good results are the most important thing – at least that is what we are told. But is this really so? What of the preaching that reveals the unbelief and obstinance of people? What of a commission from God that was calculated to cause people to “fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken” (Isa 29:13)? Is it not written, “For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish: to the God-ordained message. Men are not to take it upon themselves to wrest the message in a feeble attempt to get results. Nor, indeed, are they to cease to declare it because the masses do not believe it. This is a word that is always in order, always timely, always powerful.

The Gospel of Christ is truly good news, and it is the exclusive message by which men are saved. Men cannot believe on the Lord until they hear this Gospel. They cannot hear this Gospel unless it is preached or declared to them. That preacher will not preach unless he is sent by God. What is more, those who hear such an one with the hearing of faith will highly regard the messenger, esteeming his feet as beautiful, for they have carried good news upon the mountains of grace.

FAITH COMES

“¹⁷ So then faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.” I love these Divine conclusions! They differ so radically from the sophistry of the flesh. This is a conclusion drawn from the affirmation of Isaiah: “Who has believed our message? And to whom has the arm of the LORD been revealed?”^{NASB}

Without a doubt, this is one of the most profound utterances of Scripture. Yet there is a glorious plainness about it that is within the reach of every humble and contrite spirit.

FAITH COMES

“So then, faith comes . . .” This is the spiritually logical conclusion to the foregoing argument: i.e., 1 – No one can call upon the Lord unless they believe on Him. 2 – No one can believe on Him unless they have heard about Him. 3 – No one can hear about Him unless His message has been declared to them. 4 – His message cannot be declared unless a messenger is sent. Therefore, the Spirit concludes, “faith comes,” or is experienced through an appointed means.

While it is the responsibility of men to believe the Gospel, and while they will be condemned if they do not believe it, they do not believe on their own. Faith “comes.” It comes TO them. But it comes from outside of them. Believing the report is not a natural response. A latent ability that lies dormant within the unregenerate is not awakened. Faith “comes,” it is not revived or awakened. It is not the vivification of a natural ability.

This is another way of saying we “have obtained” or received, “like precious faith” (2 Pet 1:1), or have “believed through grace” (Acts 18:27). It means it is “given unto” us “to believe” (Phil 1:29), and that faith is “from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ” (Eph 6:23). It is for this reason that those who believe “the report” are said to have had “the arm of the Lord revealed” to them. The total glory for the process of moving from darkness to light belongs to God. Those who would rob Him of this glory are in serious jeopardy, for He will not allow any flesh “to glory in His presence” (1 Cor 1:29). Salvation is precisely structured in all of its facets so that it “belongs to the Lord” (Psa 3:8; Rev 7:10; 19:1).

Faith Through Hearing

The appointed means through which faith “comes” is “hearing.” It comes “from hearing,”^{NASB} or “from hearing the message,”^{NIV} or “from what is heard.”^{NRSV}

Faith does not come by seeing, else there would have been a deluge of it on the banks of the Red Sea. If men and women are going to believe they will have to hear – hear the message God has appointed as the means to faith. As you must know, this accounts for the rarity of faith in our times. When the Gospel becomes sparse, faith becomes rare. When people are fed a diet of Law – even God’s Law – faith will not “come,” for “the Law is not of faith” (Gal 3:12).

HEARING BY . . .

The implication of the text is that “hearing” also “comes.” This is not merely hearing with the natural “ears,” like Israel did at Sinai (Deut 5:1). Although what is heard is articulated in human speech, the hearing through which men believe is not merely being subjected to the sound. This will be confirmed in the verses eighteen and nineteen.

Etymologically, the word “hearing” comes from ἀκοή, which primarily means

“the ability to hear.” Thayer’s Greek Lexicon gives the primary meaning as, “to be endowed with the faculty of hearing.” Frieberg’s lexicon gives the primary meaning as “the ability to hear.” The word used here is a noun, not a verb.

“Hearing,” therefore, as used in this text, is not an activity, but a capacity. It is used elsewhere in Scripture in this manner, i.e., “the hearing of faith” (Gal 3:2,5).

The Scriptures are clear on this matter, namely that hearing is a capacity granted to men by the living God. I briefly covered this under the second section of this lesson, THE NECESSITY OF HEARING.

The means by which the capacity to “hear” is received is “the word of God.” Some versions read, “the word of Christ.”^{NASB/NIV/NRSV} This can be viewed from different perspectives. All of them have some merit.

The Word of the Gospel

First, “the word of God” can be understood to be what God has said. In this case, that word would be the Gospel, for faith cannot come by hearing the Law, or the Proverbs. Those are not the life-giving message, nor are they “the power of God unto salvation.” That in no way diminishes the truth declared in the Law, nor does it reduce the responsibility for people to be obedient and moral. But when it comes to the matter of believing “unto the saving of the soul” (Heb 10:39), the “Gospel of Christ” is the exclusive means of inducing faith. It alone is “the power of God unto salvation.”

Christ’s Own Word

Second, and more likely the meaning, “the word of Christ” means the command of Christ. Vincent says “Belief comes through the message, and the message through the command of Christ.”^{VINCENT’S WORD STUDIES} That, in my judgment, comes close to the meaning. Yet, it can be stated more precisely. Some have felt that “the command of Christ” refers to His commission to “preach the Gospel to every creature” (Mark 16:15). However, this cannot be the meaning, for Isaiah testified that most who heard the word sent to them did not believe. The command of Jesus to the messenger, therefore, is not the root of faith, else those who heard good news from Isaiah would have believed.

The meaning is this: the capacity to hear comes by the authoritative word of Jesus. He speaks the ability to hear into those with tender hearts. This should not sound strange to us, for Jesus spoke of this very process when He walked among men. Our Lord referred to two different resurrections that would be effected by His voice. The first was a spiritual resurrection that began while He was yet among us. The second is the resurrection of the dead. Both will be facilitated by His voice.

Here is what He said. “Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in Himself; so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself; and hath given im authority to execute judgment also, because He is the Son of man. Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation” (John 5:25-29). What a marvelous statement of power!

The Spirit reminded the believers in Ephesus that they had experienced the very spiritual awakening to which Jesus referred. They had “heard” Jesus, being given the capacity to so hear as to believe on Him. “But ye have not so learned Christ; if so be that ye have heard Him, and have been taught by Him, as the truth is in Jesus” (Eph 4:20-21). In this text, not only had they been quickened from the dead (2:1,5), spiritual advancement was also brought about by the teaching of Jesus.

I am affirming this to be the meaning of this verse. Namely, that faith comes to the individual by means of the capacity to “hear,” or being given “ears to hear.” The capacity to hear comes through Christ’s own awakening voice.

Confirmed by Ezekiel Ezekiel spoke of this means of bringing life to people – namely speaking life into them. His words foreshadowed the truth of our text, as well as the words of Jesus in the fifth chapter of John (5:25-29). “And when I passed by you and saw you struggling in your own blood, I said to you in your blood, ‘Live!’ Yes, I said to you in your blood, ‘Live!’ I made you thrive like a plant in the field; and you grew, matured, and became very beautiful . . .” (Ezek 16:6-7).

In doing this, man’s volitional capacity is not obviated. However, his spiritual impotence is terminated by Christ’s word in order that an appropriate response can be given to the Gospel of Christ. This is precisely what happened when Lydia believed the report. While she was listening to the word of the Gospel, “the Lord opened her heart to respond to the things spoken by Paul” (Acts 16:14). That is also what happened to you, moving you to call upon the Lord. The Gospel was declared to you, and as it was declared the Lord gave you ears to hear. When you heard with those ears, you believed, called upon the name of the Lord, and were saved. Because you believed, you gladly received the Word and were baptized, just as those who believed on that memorable day of Pentecost (Acts 2:41).

A FINAL WORD

Faith will neither “come” nor “increase” where the Gospel is not preached and heard with “the hearing of faith.” When men embrace a religion that moves the Gospel into the background, unbelief comes into the foreground. God will not allow faith to be authored or finished, to begin or be brought to maturity, independently of hearing and believing the “record He has given of His Son” (1 John 5:10-11). Those who believe are glad it is this way.

HAS NOT EVERYONE HEARD?

“¹⁸ But I say, have they not heard? Yes indeed: ‘Their sound has gone out to all the earth, And their words to the ends of the world.’” The Spirit will now move Paul to make a rather technical point, yet one that must be made. He has already reminded us that the Lord was found of the Gentiles who attained unto righteousness, even though they did not seek after it (9:30). In their case, did God dispense with the hearing of

HAVE THEY NOT ALL HEARD?

Early in my new life, I was subjected to a continual flood of statements affirming that most of the world had never heard the Gospel. This was used to lay a great burden of responsibility upon the people for taking the Gospel to those have been in the first century, when the Gospel was beginning to be preached. The Spirit, however, reasons quite differently than man. “But I say, have they not heard? Yes indeed!” Other versions read, “But I say, surely they have never heard, have they? Indeed they have,” ^{NASB} and “But I ask: Did they not hear? Of course they did.” ^{NIV}

He will now show that the Gospel had, indeed, been preached extensively. To the Colossians, Paul made reference to “the hope of the gospel which you heard, which was preached to every creature under heaven” ^{NKJV} (Col 1:23). The NIV reads, “This is the gospel that you heard and that has been proclaimed to every creature under heaven.” Every version reads essentially the same, confirming there is no reason whatsoever for not taking the words precisely as they are stated. One may argue from an academic or mathematical point of view, stating that such a thing is not possible. Whatever arguments may be introduced to the contrary, the Spirit has spoken clearly and concisely. His point is not a mathematical one, but that the preached Gospel had, in fact, reached into all the world. We dare not begin with a

The point He will make here is this: hearing of itself will not produce faith in the hearers. Men can, indeed, be exposed to the glad tidings of good things, yet utterly fail to respond in faith to it. The difference, as Paul has declared, is the Divine factor, not the human factor!

THEIR SOUND

To begin with, there were “devout men from every nation under heaven” present on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:5). The extensiveness of their representation is detailed for us (2:9-11).

- Parthians, from of Persia.
- Medes, from Asia and close to Armenia.
- Elamites, also from the vast Persian empire.
- Those dwelling in Mesopotamia, a part of Syria.
- Those dwelling in Judea, the area around Jerusalem.
- Those dwelling in Cappadocia, a region in Asia Minor, who spoke a mixed dialect of Greek and Syriac.
- Those dwelling in Pontus, another province in Asia Minor, dominated by the Romans.
- Those dwelling in Asia, which covered the vast Eastern world of Russia, China, and India.
- Those dwelling in Phrygia, a province in Asia Minor.
- Those dwelling in Pamphylia, another province in Asia Minor.
- Those dwelling in Egypt, the vast area watered by the Nile.
- Those dwelling in parts of Libya adjoining Cyrene, known as Africa to us.
- Visitors from Rome, both Jews and proselytes, from Italy.
- Cretans, from an island in the Mediterranean.
- Arabs, from the great peninsula bounded by Syria on the north.
- By the fifth chapter of Acts, the Apostles were charged with having “filled Jerusalem” with their doctrine (Acts 5:28).
- Later, the treasurer of the Candace queen of the Ethiopians, returned home from worshiping in Jerusalem. He came back different than he had left, having been baptized into Christ and receiving the Spirit of God (Acts 8:27-39).
- Paul’s preaching took him from Greece to Arabia, and Italy to Asia and Syria. gone out to all the earth, And their words to the ends of the world.” We will find, however, that it takes more than the “sound” to turn men from darkness to light, and the power of Satan unto God – even though the “sound” is imperative.

THE QUESTION

If it is not possible to call upon Him of whom men have not heard, and if it is not possible to hear without a preacher, and if it is not possible for the preacher to preach if he has not been sent, does that not justify the unbelief of the world?

Indeed not! God “has not left Himself without witness” (Acts 14:17). At the very threshold of the “day of salvation,” He

THE SEARCH FOR THE TWELVE APOSTLES,

William Steuart McBirnie

And that is only a cursory review! Indeed, the sound of the Gospel “has assembled devout men from every nation under heaven to hear the glad proclamation of repentance and the remission of sins. The aggressive preaching of the Gospel fulfilled the word of the Psalmist, “The Lord gave the word: great was the company of those that published it” (Psa 68:11).

God Almighty has been aggressive to get the Word of His Son into the world. He did not depend upon men to send messengers, but sent them Himself, endued with power as well as the message. In the end, when we see all of the “preachers” God has sent into the world, it will be even more apparent how devoted He is to our salvation.

Those who have ears to hear “know the joyful sound.” They have the capacity to recognize it, rejoice in it, and are blessed because of it (Psa 89:15). When those with ears to hear, HEAR, they are always advantaged by the sound of the Gospel, and God is always glorified in them. It is never in order for those with ears to hear to refuse to do so.

Settle it in your mind, the Gentiles have heard the “sound” of the Gospel. They have heard it because God has sent preachers, or proclaimers, to them. Yet, they have not all believed or obeyed that Gospel. That is a most sobering circumstance to consider.

DID NOT ISRAEL KNOW?

¹⁹ But I say, did Israel not know?

First Moses says: ‘I will provoke you to jealousy by those who are not a nation, I will move you to anger by a foolish nation.’ Herein is a mysterious thing – at least mysterious to the flesh. How is it that the Gentiles found righteousness, receiving the Gospel, but the Jews, who were prepared for it, were unbelieving? There is a Divine strategy behind it all, and it is “past finding out” by human knowledge (11:33). Even after it is revealed, it will stagger the human intellect.

DID NOT ISRAEL KNOW?

The question being asked relates to the acceptance of the Gentiles: Did not Israel know the Lord would turn from them to the Gentiles, thereby provoking them to jealousy? Was all of this an unplanned reaction to Israel’s unbelief? Did they take the Lord by surprise by their rejection of the Gospel?

Early on, the Lord revealed what He was going to do. Before Moses completed his ministry, the Lord told him what He would do because of Israel’s provocation. Moses included the words in a song he sang to them before he left the terrain of battle. The Spirit now refers to that prophesy. “They have moved Me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked Me to anger with their vanities: and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation” (Deut 32:21).

The provocation of which Moses spoke occurred when they “provoked Him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations provoked they Him to anger” (Deut 32:16). The Psalmist referred to it as the time when they “provoked Him to anger with their high places, and moved Him to jealousy with their graven images” (Psa 78:58). But never was the Lord more jealous than when Israel beheld their own Savior, and “received Him not” (John 1:11).

I WILL PROVOKE THEM!

Now the Divine strategy begins to unfold. The Spirit will continue to expound it through the eleventh chapter, and it is marvelous! The “foolish nation” to which He refers is the Gentiles. They were “foolish” because they did not know the Lord, and were not seeking His righteousness.

The Lord had frequently spoken through the Prophets concerning the acceptance of the Gentiles. “And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek . . . I have put My spirit upon Him: He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles . . . I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles . . . I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles . . . I will lift up Mine hand to the Gentiles . . . thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles . . . the Gentiles shall come to thy light . . . their seed shall be known among the Gentiles . . . the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness . . . I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream . . . they shall declare My glory among the Gentiles . . . the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth . . . My name shall be great among the Gentiles” (Isa 11:10; 42:1,6; 49:6,22; 54:3; 60:3; 61:9; 62:2; 66:12,19; Jer 16:19; Mal 1:11). What a staggering array of Divine commitments!

And, indeed, that did happen. It happened at the house of Cornelius. It took place in Philippi with Lydia and the Philippian jailor. Gentiles in Europe, Asia, and Africa heard and embraced the Gospel. Yet that acceptance of the Gospel angered the Israelites, just as the prophet said it would. They saw no correlation between the acceptance of the Gentiles, the prophecy of Moses, and the testimony of the Prophets.

And why were the Jews so angry about all of this? Why did they do vigorously oppose, hound, and even persecute Paul for preaching to the Gentiles? It was because God made them angry through the acceptance of those they deemed foolish. That is what the Lord said He would do: “by a foolish nation I will anger you” (10:19b). Moses said it this way, “I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation” (Deut 32:21b).

These were the nations that were “as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance” (Isa 40:15), yet they found the righteousness of God before the Jews.

Herein is a perfect picture of how God saves people. The Gentiles were “not a people,” having no status whatsoever before God. They were a “foolish nation,” devoid of wisdom, and stumbling in moral and spiritual darkness. Yet, a message of good news was sent unto them – a message through which the capacity to hear was granted by the Lord. That faith propelled them out of a state of rejection into one of Divine acceptance.

O, that men could see it! That is how salvation comes to men. It does not come to them because they have been trained to receive it – else the Jews would have obtained it. It does not come because people are suitable, having the right name and bathed in the right culture – else the Jews would have possessed it.

No! Salvation is for the unworthy, the foolish, and those lost in the darkness! That is why it is called “salvation.” In it a Divine rescue is accomplished. The transfer to a new realm is realized. Very real sins are cast into the depths of the sea (Micah 7:19). Transgressions are blotted out like a thick cloud (Isa 44:22). A provocative circumstance, indeed!

THE BOLDNESS OF ISAIAH

²⁰ But Isaiah is very bold and says: 'I was found by those who did not seek Me; I was made manifest to those who did not ask for Me.'” On a much smaller level than our text, I have often seen the principle declared in it. I have witnessed the dregs of society, unimaginably filthy and depraved, perceive the truth of the Gospel before those who have long been surrounded with the sound of truth. I have witnessed the provocation caused within stilted churches by the new and irrepressible life of a “newborn babe.” How often those with no religious culture at all have taken hold of the truth, sprinting past seasoned churchmen, leaving them far behind. That is the very principle being declared in this text.

VERY BOLD

And why does it say Isaiah was “very bold”? His words are found in Isaiah 65:1. “I am sought of them that asked not for Me; I am found of them that sought Me not: I said, Behold Me, behold Me, unto a nation that was not called by My name.”

It took boldness to declare the message because of the effect it would have upon the pretentious Israelites. It would be like telling a Baptist that a Mormon had suddenly come into the knowledge of God – a knowledge far greater than any Baptist had ever experienced. Or, more to the point, it would be like telling a member of the Christian Church or Church of Christ that a Christian Scientist had far surpassed the entirety of the Restoration Movement in the appropriation of the blessing of God. Perhaps it would be like reporting to those thinking themselves to be “the one true church” that a greater degree of spiritual insight and fervor was being experienced in the local drunk tank than in the stately cathedrals of the city.

Those who imagine themselves to hold exclusive rights to the truth are incensed when they hear of those whom they despise having more than they do. It is hard for scribes and Pharisees to learn from Galileans, whom they deem to be “unlearned and ignorant.”

WHAT CAUSED THE DIFFERENCE?

Why was the Lord found by the Gentiles who did not seek Him? How is it that He was manifest, or made known, to those who did not ask for Him? This was the effect of the preached Gospel! On the wings of that glorious message came gifts and abilities that could never be generated at Sinai! The Jews worked hard to attain to the righteousness of the Law. The Gentiles acknowledged their deficiencies and worked on believing God!

The Jews devoted themselves to the commandments. The Gentiles gave heed to the promises of the Gospel. The outcome was that faith took the Gentiles further than works took the Jews.

This is the appointed manner in which men and women are saved. It is how the shackles of sin are broken and slavery to sin and Satan terminated. It comes through a message that is “the power of God unto salvation.” Believe that message, and regardless of your past, you will obtain the favor of God! You may not have sought the Lord in the past, but you will find Him! You may not have asked for Him, but He will make Himself known to you. This is the heritage of all who will believe the Gospel.

How marvelously the Spirit states it! “I said BEHOLD ME, BEHOLD ME, to a nation that was not called by my name!” Do not imagine for one moment that this is not still happening. The voice of the Lord that breaks the cedars of Lebanon, shakes the wilderness, and even makes the hinds to calve, can shout a person to spiritual alertness through the Gospel! It is His “power unto salvation.” Blessed are the feet of those who bring it to us!

GOD'S PATIENCE WITH ISRAEL

Hear the Lord Himself lament their condition. “I have spread out My hands all the day unto a rebellious people, which walketh in a way that was not good, after their own thoughts; a people that provoketh

Me to anger continually to My face; that sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon altars of brick; which remain among the graves, and lodge in the monuments, which eat swine's flesh, and broth of abominable things is in their vessels; which say, Stand by thyself, come not near to me; for I am holier than thou. These are a smoke in my nose, a fire that burneth all the day” (Isa 65:2-5).

How can such a favored people yield such abominable results? And why does God hold out His hands to them, beckoning them to come. Hear Him cry out: “Return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the LORD; and I will not cause Mine anger to fall upon you: for I am merciful, saith the LORD, and I will not keep anger for ever” (Jer 3:12). “Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings” (Jer 3:22).

You see, dear reader, that is what sin does to people – the sin that entered into the world with Adam's transgression (Rom 5:12). The effects of sin cannot be trained out of people. It cannot be extricated by commandments. Unrelenting patience at the hand of the Lord, and continual pleas from Him do not alter the human character or change the heart of sinners. Laws cannot change men, nor can specific directions and meticulous routines. As it is written, “Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil” (Jer 13:23).

The hands of God are not being held out to Israel in futility. There is a marvelous purpose and determination behind it all. He will yet reap a harvest from the seed He has sown. It will not come at the expense of His holiness, nor will it require that man be bludgeoned into submission. In due time, His glory will be revealed in the salvation of the Jews.

CONCLUSION

I cannot overemphasize the indispensability of the Gospel of Christ. It has been vastly underrated in the professed church, often being treated as though it no longer has a place of prominence. Sleeping souls have allowed other themes and issues to upstage the Gospel, thereby relegating Christ Jesus to a subordinate position. But Jesus will not take a back seat. He will cast down those who attempt to dislodge Him from the throne upon which He has been seated. He said it this way, “Have you never read in the Scriptures: “The stone the builders rejected has become the capstone ;

the Lord has done this, and it is marvelous in our eyes? Therefore I tell you that the kingdom of God will be taken away from you and given to a people who will produce its fruit. He who falls on this stone will be broken to pieces, but he on whom it falls will be crushed”^{NIV} (Matt 21:42-44).

I understand that some will affirm the place of Israel in the Divine economy has been finally removed. The Kingdom, so to speak, has been taken from them and given to another “who will produce its fruit.” However, let no soul imagine for a solitary moment this means all hope for Israel has been irremediably thrown to the ground! The next chapter will powerfully develop this aspect of things, warning us not to become complacent about our standing with God, or despising those of the house of Israel.

The absurdity of a dead Gentile church boasting of the cutting off of Israel is the epitome of ignorance! Do such boasters think God cannot take the Kingdom from them, giving it to “a people who will produce its fruit?” How solemnly the Spirit will begin to speak to us!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 35

ISRAEL IS NOT TOTALLY REJECTED

11:1 I say then, has God cast away His people? Certainly not! For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. ² God has not cast away His people whom He foreknew. Or do you not know what the Scripture says of Elijah, how he pleads with God against Israel, saying, ³ "LORD, they have killed Your prophets and torn down Your altars, and I alone am left, and they seek my life"? ⁴ But what does the divine response say to him? "I have reserved for Myself seven thousand men who have not bowed the knee to Baal." ⁵ Even so then, at this present time there is a remnant according to the election of grace. ⁶ And if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace. But if it is of works, it is no longer grace; otherwise work is no longer work. ⁷ What then? Israel has not obtained what it seeks; but the elect have obtained it, and the rest were blinded. ⁸ Just as it is written: "God has given them a spirit of stupor, Eyes that they should not see And ears that they should not hear, To this very day." ⁹ And David says: "Let their table become a snare and a trap, A stumbling block and a recompense to them." ¹⁰ Let their eyes be darkened, so that they do not see, and bow down their back always." (Romans 11:1-10 ^{NKJV})

INTRODUCTION

The nation of Israel is the subject of a remarkable amount of revelation. Beginning with the twelfth chapter of Genesis, the focus of Divine attention is centered on Abraham and his offspring. The Word of God never leaves that focus. Jesus Christ Himself, together with those who are in Him, are the grandest expression of that concentration.

From the creation of man until the calling of Abraham (then, Abram), approximately 2,100 years passed – about one third of all of time, through the current year of 2001. During that time, as confirmed by various archeological digs, a significant number of things occurred.

- 3600 Sumerian city-states were in existence.
- 3500 Cuneiform writing system was developed by the Sumerians.
- 3378 The SED Festivals had their origin in Egypt.

The Spirit substantiates to our hearts that Israel has not been totally rejected. Hope remains.--by Given O. Blakely

..... Taken from Ushers Chronology

None of these events are mentioned in Scripture because they had no direct bearing upon the eternal purpose of God. In a way, they were all incidental.

PRIOR TO THE FLOOD

Some passing references are made to certain cultures prior to the flood. Cain dwelt in the "land of Nod," and there "built a city" (Gen 4:16-17). Those with expertise in key areas lived in those early times. Tent dwellers and those who handled cattle were present (Gen 4:20). There were those who were adept with musical instruments (Gen 4:21). Craftsmen in bronze and iron existed (Gen 4:22). Men are said to have "multiplied on the face of the earth" (Gen 6:1). "Mighty men," and "men of renown" sprang up throughout the world (Gen 6:4).

AFTER THE FLOOD

By the time of Noah, in the earth's 1536th year, it "was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence" (Gen 6:11). In the flood, "all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man: all in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land, died" (Gen 7:21).

Nothing in Scripture remotely suggests that the earth's population at that time was small. The whole of humanity was so corrupt its only distinction before God was that "all flesh had corrupted their way on the earth" (Gen 6:12), and "the earth is filled with violence through them" (Gen 6:13). The remains of many of the civilizations destroyed in the flood have been discovered. They were remarkably advanced, as attested by many of their works, from tools to cities.

Noah's sons, Ham, Shem, and Japheth, were the progenitors of the "coastland," or "maritime," nations (Gen 10:5). "Languages, lands, and nations" came from them (Gen 10:20). Nimrod formed a "kingdom" (Gen 10:10). Egypt is mentioned as in existence for some time when Abraham headed for Canaan (Gen 12:10-14).

SCRIPTURAL THRUST

Even though socially and politically advanced nations existed prior to Israel, no extended commentary is given of them in Scripture. The rise and development of Egypt is not the focus of Scripture. The impressive empires of Babylon, the Medio-Persians, Greeks, and Romans, are all given very little space in revelation. Even then, they are only mentioned in their relationship to the purpose and people of God. Apart from that, they have no true relevance.

When it comes to nations, God's focus has always been upon the Jews. They are the only ones to whom He gave His righteous law. All of His prophets were primarily for them, testifying to other nations only occasionally, and never primarily. His promises were given to them, and the blessing of the world was to be through them. The vast bulk of Scripture was given to them and pertained to them. The details of their history are provided, together with the impact they had upon God. His dealings with them were extensive and prolonged.

It is difficult for me to comprehend how any honest person can read the Scriptures and conclude that God has forgotten the Jews. Indeed, the Holy Spirit is establishing to our hearts in this very passage that nothing can be further from the truth. Because of his closeness to the Lord, Paul is constrained to pray for their salvation (10:1). That, of course, would be the height of absurdity if they had been summarily written off. It is true, there were some generations of the Jews that were cut off. In fact, God told Jeremiah not to pray for the Jewish generation of his day (Jer 7:16; 11:14; 14:11). No such injunction, however, has ever been given concerning the entirety of this nation. God never directed any Apostle to admonish the church NOT to pray for the Jews – even though there have been times when such direction was given to others (Ezek 14:14)! If they had “sinned unto death,” so to speak, all prayer for them would be futile (1 John leads us to consider this people as a whole. Ponder what He directed Paul to say.

- With the confirming witness of the Holy Spirit, Paul had great heaviness and continual sorrow of heart over Israel (9:1-2).
- He was willing to wish himself accursed from Christ for them (9:3).
- The adoption, glory, covenants, giving of the law, service of God, promises, fathers, and ancestry of Christ belong to them (9:4-5).
- They were the national womb within which the elect were found (9:6-8).
- God will have mercy upon whoever He wills (9:15).
- Salvation is not of him who runs, or of him who wills, but of God who shows mercy (9:16).
- Concerning Israel, God promised, “in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there shall they be called the children of the living God” (9:26).
- Isaiah prophesied, “Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved: for He will finish the work, and

Although men should be able to conclude this from the undeniable emphasis given to them in Scripture, together with the Divine commitments concerning them, flesh is prone to flawed thinking.

The importance of Israel in the grand scheme of things demands that we have a fruitful understanding of them. If we imagine they are utterly hopeless, how will we be able to account for the salvation of the Gentiles, who plummeted even lower than nature allows (Rom 1:26)? If the Lord has completely rejected Israel because they did not believe, how will we be able to explain the Gentiles attaining righteousness, when they sought it not?

GOD’S SOVEREIGNTY

The matter of God’s sovereignty, or absolute independence from the government of others, has already been introduced.

- God causes everything to work together for the good of those who love Him and are called according to His purpose. “And we know that God causes all things to work together for good to those who love God, to those who are called according to His purpose”^{NASB} (Rom 8:28).
- The aim of salvation is traced back to His determination. “For whom He foreknew, He also predestined to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He predestined, these He also called; whom He called, these He also justified; and whom He justified, these He also glorified”^{NKJV} (Rom 8:29-30).
- God’s determination concerning Jacob and Esau was made before they were born. “*And not only this; but when Rebecca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac; (For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of Him that calleth;) It was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger. As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated” (Rom 9:10-13).*
- Those who experience the mercy and compassion of God do so because of His will. “For He saith to Moses, I will have

The reasoning of this chapter is to be seen through the background of chapters nine and ten. After substantiating that the Gospel announces a righteousness that comes from God through faith, the Spirit has confirmed that all men sorely need that righteousness.

5:16). But God has given no such directive, and woe be to that presumptuous person who leaves the people of God thinking He has!

THE BACKGROUND: ROMANS 9-10

The reasoning of this chapter is to be seen through the background of chapters nine and ten. After substantiating that the Gospel announces a righteousness that comes from God through faith, the Spirit has confirmed that all men sorely need that righteousness (chapters 1-3). This includes the Israelites, Paul’s “kinsmen according to the flesh” (9:32). Beginning with chapter nine, the Spirit cut it short in righteousness: because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth” (9:27-28).

- Isaiah declared Israel had not been destroyed like Sodom and Gomorrah, who could never again rise (9:29).
- Paul’s heart’s desire and prayer for Israel is that they would be saved (10:1).
- The Gospel of Christ is God’s power unto salvation “to the Jew FIRST” (Rom 1:16; 10:14-16).

The Spirit will now establish not only the reasonability of Israel being saved, but the surety of it.

mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion. So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy" (Rom 9:15-16).

- God raised Pharaoh up to display His power in him. "For the scripture saith unto Pharaoh, Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might show My power in thee, and that My name might be declared throughout all the earth" (Rom 9:17).
- God has the power to shape people as He desires. "Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honor, and another unto dishonor? What if God, willing to show His wrath, and to make His power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction: and that He might make known the riches of His glory on the vessels of mercy, which He had afore prepared unto glory, even us, whom He hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles?" (Rom 9:21-24)
- In strict accord with His purpose, God terminates His works in righteousness. "For He will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness: because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth" (Rom 9:28).

- God Himself placed Jesus in the world as the Stone – a Foundation Stone for some, and a Stumblingstone for others. "As it is written, Behold, I lay in Sion a stumblingstone and rock of offence: and whosoever believeth on Him shall not be ashamed." (Rom 9:33).
- The Lord has provoked Israel to anger

Now the Spirit will show how Divine determinations are being brought to bear upon the Israelites. The arguments set before us are powerful, and are designed to bring glory to our God. They are not intended to support man's theology.

HAS GOD CAST AWAY HIS PEOPLE?

^{41:1a} I say then, has God cast away His people? Certainly not!" Other versions read, "I say then, God has not rejected His people, has He? May it never be!"^{NASB} "I ask then: Did God reject His people? By no means!"^{NIV} "What I am saying is this: is it possible that God abandoned His people? Out of the question!"^{NJB} "So I say, Has God put His people on one side? Let there be no such thought"^{BBE}

CAST AWAY

To "cast away" is to discard, with no prospect of the status changing. It means to push aside, or reject. It means to get rid of something that is useless and unpleasant, to remove, or throw into the scrap heap. The renown lexicographer, Thayer, says of the word used here, "(1) to thrust away, push away, repel, 2) to thrust away from one's self, to drive away from one's self, 2a) repudiate, reject, refuse."

This is a status Paul the Apostle feared, and zealously sought to avoid. Therefore he made his body his slave instead of serving it, lest, after preaching to others, he himself should be rejected, or cast away (1 Cor 9:27).

The question is whether or not God has pushed the Israelites away from Himself, never to look toward them again. Has God's covenant with Abraham been abrogated? Are the Jews now utterly hopeless, like the Gentiles were before them? Are the promises made to them no longer applicable to them? Have the Gentiles taken their place? Is that what God has done?

It should not surprise you that no small number of self-acclaimed teachers say that God has, in fact, totally rejected the Jews. However, we have no regard for them or their flawed words. Rather we will hear what the Lord has said on the matter.

Their House Left Desolate

When Jesus lamented over Jerusalem, He declared He "often" would have gathered its children together under His protective wing. However, they refused, or "would not." Therefore, He said, "Behold, your house is left unto you desolate." What a saddening announcement! Yet, our Lord did not end there, but left the door of hope open. "For I say unto you, Ye

The Spirit substantiates to our hearts that Israel has not been totally rejected. Hope remains.--by Given O. Blakely shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Matt 37-39). Luke limited the time of desolation with these words, "until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Luke 13:35).

Nothing in our Lord's words suggest this judgment was permanent. In fact, everything about it suggests a future change in status.

Jerusalem Trodden by the Gentiles

Toward the close of His ministry, Jesus spoke very specifically concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, the end of the world, and His own coming. In those words He included the following concerning the holy city. "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Luke 21:24). The word "until" draws a line of demarcation that cannot be denied.

Rather than unlearned Gentile teachers declaring that God has "cast away" Israel, they should be considering the implications of "the times of the Gentiles" being fulfilled. Some, unwilling to allow the Word of the Lord to shape their thinking, affirm that the fulfillment of the times of the Gentiles is actually the end of the world. Such a postulate, of course, requires an extraordinary imagination. That would make "the day of salvation" a Gentile day, which it is nowhere declared to be. It would also negate the Gospel as the power of God unto salvation to "the Jew first." It would also make the heart's desire and prayer of Paul for his kinsmen nonsensical.

HIS PEOPLE

The phrase "His people" does not refer to the church, as will be clearly established in the following verses. And, if "His people" does not refer to the church, the only other possibility is Israel. No less than eighty-four times, the Holy Spirit refers to Israel as "His people." No less eliminating the Israelites, Jesus broke down the middle wall of partition between them and the Gentiles (Eph 2:11-15).

CERTAINLY NOT!

Has God "cast away His people?" Certainly not! God forbid! ^{KJV} May it never be! ^{NASB} By no means! ^{NIV} Far be the thought! ^{DARBY} Let there be no such thought! ^{BBE} Let it not be! ^{YLT} Of course not! ^{NAB} Out of the question! ^{NJB} The than nine times. They are called "His people Israel" (Judges 11:23; 1 Sam 27:12; 2 Sam 5:12; 1 Kgs 8:56,59; 1 Chron 14:2; 2 Chron 7:10). They are referred to as "a people of inheritance" (Deut 4:20; "the Lord's portion" and "the lot of His inheritance" (Deut 32:9).

God is referred to as "the God of Israel" no less than 203 times! Zacharias' great prophecy of the day of salvation also referred to God in this way (Lk 1:68).

Rather than believing Gentiles replacing the Jews, they are referred to as having been made "fellowheirs" with them (Eph 3:6). This compares with their former status of "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel." Rather than Spirit does not allow such an absurd conclusion! It is out of place in heavenly places. It is out of order among the sons of men! The mind of the Spirit will not lead men to such a conclusion!

Even though the Spirit has spoken with such firmness, yet multitudes of professed preachers and teachers continue to affirm God has cast off "His people." But they are wrong – seriously wrong! In this text, the Holy Spirit will reason extensively on this matter. Paul will aggressively confront the notion that God has cast away Israel, showing from every vantage point how utterly false it is. Men may allow for contrary views on this matter, but God does not! When God has spoken, men must keep silence.

PAUL IS AN EXAMPLE

^{11:1b} For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. Before proceeding further, the Apostle presents himself as proof that God has not "cast away His people."

SOME HAVE BEEN CAST AWAY

Keep in mind, there are groups of personalities that have been "cast away." Not the least of these is the devil and his angels, for whom the lake of fire is reserved (Matt 25:41). Not a single one of them has been retrieved! None of their number have been excluded from the curse. Sodom and Gomorrah are another example, who "suffered the vengeance of eternal fire" (Jude 7). None of their number were salvaged. If one imagines that Lot was an exception, let them consider that he was really not a citizen of Sodom, but a "sojourner" (Gen 19:9). The Amalekites are another example, whose remembrance God blotted from the face of the earth (Ex 17:14; Deut 25:19).

The presence of a remnant proves the whole has not been cast away! Paul will now cite himself as an example of the point being made. He will develop this at length, justifying his heart's desire and prayer for Israel.

AN ISRAELITE

The Spirit substantiates to our hearts that Israel has not been totally rejected. Hope remains.--by Given O. Blakely

If Israel has been cast away as a whole, Paul could not have been saved – to say nothing of the other twelve Apostles. He was an Israelite – and he IS talking about his “kinsmen according to the flesh” (9:3). Paul was not a proselyte, or a convert to Judaism. He is not speaking of himself in the spiritual sense, although he was of that spiritual number (2:29; 9:6). By saying “Israelite,” Paul means he was descended from Jacob, or Israel. He also refers to this fact in Second Corinthians: “Are they Hebrews? so am I. Are they Israelites? so am I” (11:22). He also referred to himself as “of the stock of Israel,” and a “Hebrew of the Hebrews” (Phil 3:5).

SEED OF ABRAHAM

In particular, this is the fleshly seed of Abraham, for Paul is confirming that such seed has not been “cast away” by God. He also confessed, “Are they the seed of Abraham? so am I” (2 Cor 11:22). Before his accusers he acknowledged, “I am a man which am a Jew” (Acts 21:39; 22:3). He referred to the Israelites as “mine own nation” (Acts 26:4). All of this was stated in confirmation that his fleshly lineage could be traced back to Abraham.

TRIBE OF BENJAMIN

It is true that some spiritual application could be made of the words “Israelite” and “seed of Abraham.”

Confirming this is not the thrust of his argument, Paul traces his lineage back to the “tribe of Benjamin.” He also refers to this tribal descent in Philippians 3:5.

The tribe of Benjamin only holds distinction in the fleshly lineage of Abraham. It was a very little tribe, and was nearly destroyed in the time of the Judges (Judges 20-21). Christ, as you know, was of the tribe of Judah, not of Benjamin (Heb 7:14). Thus, the salvation of a member of the tribe of Benjamin proves God has “not cast away His people.” This is beyond all controversy! Paul himself was living proof of that, and thus reminds of his own salvation.

GOD HAS NOT CAST AWAY THOSE HE FOREKNEW

“^{2a} God has not cast away His people whom He foreknew.” The Spirit will now establish the Sovereignty of God in relation to Israel. He was not caught off guard by the unbelief of the Israelites, nor was He moved into a course of action that contradicted His first and eternal purpose.

In this statement, the Spirit is allowing for the judgment of God against the nation of Israel, and the appointed desolation of their house. However, He is also showing the rejection of the ancient people was not total, nor were they moved beyond the boundary of hope, as was Sodom and the children of Amalek.

GOD HAS NOT

Again, the affirmation is made, “God has not cast away His people!” Having already cited himself as sterling example, the Spirit now moves Paul to be even more particular.

In order for God to “cast away” the Israelites, He would have to nullify His promise to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Gen 12:7; 15:5,18; 17:7; 26:3; 35:12). The marvelous promises He gave through the prophets would also need to be abrogated (Isa 1:25-27; Jer 3:18; 31:31-34; Ezek 37:16-22; Hos 2:14-23; Mal 3:4).

WHOM HE FOREKNEW

The matter of God’s foreknowledge was introduced in chapter eight. It is a driving principle in His great salvation. “For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren” (8:29). What form of reasoning would justify the conclusion that some among the decadent Gentiles were foreknown, but none among the Israelites? What Divine affirmation will lead one to believe there was line of demarcation in Israel’s history after which God foreknew no more people among them?

The Spirit will now elaborate upon this line of reasoning, showing that there remains a remnant among the Israelites. He will confirm that their present condition does not differ from former times. The presence of a remnant validates the fact that God has NOT cast away “His people.” There can be no “remnant” among a people that have been totally rejected!

In the most simplistic terms, we are to understand that God’s choice of Abraham and his seed was undergirded by His foreknowledge. Not only did He see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, He also saw those of succeeding generations whom He would conform to the image of His Son.

THE WORD TO ELIJAH

“^{2b} Or do you not know what the Scripture says of Elijah, how he pleads with God against Israel, saying, ³ ‘LORD, they have killed Your prophets and torn down Your altars, and I alone am left, and they seek my life’? ⁴ But what does the divine response say to him? ‘I have reserved for Myself seven thousand men who have not bowed the knee to Baal.’”

The Spirit now summons a Scriptural incident for our consideration. The point

He is making is that things are not what they seem to be to the flesh. Seemingly hopeless times do not confirm Divine abandonment! If men are insistent upon formulating theologies, they should be based upon the Word of God. They should also be seen in the various incidents of Scripture, and justified by the sayings of God. Remember, this line of reasoning is proving that God “has not cast away His people”—those He has foreknown among the Israelites.

DO YOU NOT KNOW?

“Or do you not know what the Scripture says of Elijah . . .” One of the great tragedies of our time is the Scriptural illiteracy that dominates the professed church. It has occasioned the spreading of many erroneous and harmful views, not the least of which is the casting away of Israel.

Among other things, this confirms the absolute centrality of Scripture in spiritual reasoning. While it may seem very apparent that this is the case, it is not at all acknowledged in the humanly structured religious thinking of our times. It is not unusual to find Christian teachers basing their thinking upon statistics, psychological principles, linguistic expertise, and other forms of human wisdom. Many a discouraged soul regularly hears sermons, and other forms of religious communication, that are solely based upon things not found in Scripture. However, the Holy Spirit will not allow such reasoning. Thinking that is not based upon Scripture is flawed to core. It makes no difference how wise it may appear, if it is not categorically supported by Scripture, it is not to be preached, and it is not to become a foundation for thought or reason. A contemporary message that puts Scripture into the background is too modern.

ELIJAH PLEADS AGAINST ISRAEL

“ . . . how he pleads with God against Israel, saying, ³ LORD, they have killed Your prophets and torn down Your altars, and I alone am left, and they seek my life?” Here is a memorable occasion from the life of one of the singular people of all time. Elijah had just confronted the prophets of Baal in a contest of contests. The purpose was to make known the real God. The times were not the best. The prophet had just passed through a long famine. Wicked Jezebel had “cut off the prophets of the LORD,” although “Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water” (1 Kgs 18:4).

After many days, Elijah confronted Ahab, charging him with troubling Israel with his iniquitous acts, forsaking the commandments of the Lord, and following the idol Baalim. Elijah told Ahab to gather all Israel together, with 450 prophets of Baal, and 400 “prophets of the groves, which ate at Jezebel’s table.” They met on Mount Carmel. The record is found in the eighteenth chapter of First Kings. The outcome of it all was that God was shown to be God, and Baal a dumb god of stone. Elijah personally slew the prophets of Baal by the brook Kishon.

Word of the prophet’s exploits got back to Jezebel, and her wickedness erupted. She send this word to Elijah. “So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by tomorrow about this time” (1 Kgs 19:2). Upon hearing this threat, Elijah “arose and ran for his life,”^{NKJV} heading for Beersheba (19:3).

After going a day’s journey into the wilderness, prophet of God sat under a juniper tree “and he requested for himself that he might die; and said, It is enough; now, O LORD, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers” (19:4). Some foolish teachers have derided Elijah, charging him with being weak and running at the threat of a mere woman. One might as well fault Paul for “despairing of life,” and having “fears” within (2 Cor 1:8; 7:5). Rather than rebuking the prophet, the Lord sent an angel to him, who prepared a special meal for him and sent him on his way to “Horeb the mount of God” (19:8). It was there, while in a cave, that Elijah “made intercession against Israel.” The account is found in First Kings 19:10.

Our text states that Elijah pled with God “against Israel.” Other versions read, “maketh intercession against Israel,”^{KJV} “appealed to God against Israel,”^{NIV} and “says words to God against Israel.”^{BBE} Here are his words. “I have been very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away” (19:10). He repeats these exact words again in verse 14. Formerly, when Elijah had challenged the prophets of Baal, he said “unto the people, I, even I only, remain a prophet of the LORD; but Baal’s prophets are four hundred and fifty men” (18:22). No one stood with him against the prophets of Baal. At that time, he stood alone. Now, Elijah reminds the Lord of that grievous circumstance.

Notice, Elijah does not speak in a railing manner against Israel. He does not plead with God to destroy them, or even to punish them. What he does do, however, is suggest that the whole of the nation was defiled, and he alone remained. And, it surely appeared to be that way. However, there was more to the circumstance than was seen by Elijah.

THE DIVINE RESPONSE

“But what does the Divine response say to him?” God does not ignore wrong assessments! If He did not with the mighty prophet Elijah, you may be sure He will not with the pretentious theologians of our day.

Ungodliness was prevailing throughout the land. The prophets of God were being slain (1 Kgs 18:4). The altar of the Lord had been torn down, for Elijah had to personally repair it before he could offer a sacrifice to God in the presence of Baal’s prophets (1 Kgs 18:30). But that was not all that had happened. God was still at work in the land!

We are apprized that Obadiah had taken a hundred holy prophets, hiding them in two groups of fifty in a cave, and sustaining them with bread and water (18:4). Now the Lord reveals an even larger number of men who had not yielded to the worship of Baal.

I HAVE RESERVED FOR MYSELF

"I have reserved for Myself seven thousand men who have not bowed the knee to Baal." This reference is found in 1 Kings 19:18, which reads, "Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him."

This was something the Lord Himself did: "I have left," or "reserved." This was a work of God, not the recognition of the work of men! The presence of these men is traced to the activity of the Lord. You cannot account for them in any other way. In fact, the Spirit will found an argument upon this circumstance.

The fact that all of Israel appeared to be totally reprobate by no means suggested that it was. We know of at least 100 prophets that were preserved, and seven thousand persons who refused to abandon God in favor of Baal. This was NOT the result of a statistical analysis. It was a revelation.

Do not miss the significance of this text! Here was a situation unknown to one of the mightiest of all prophets. It was during a time when the people of God were ruled by wicked people: Ahab and Jezebel. The worship of God was not apparent. The prophets of God were not visible or vocal. The altars of the Lord had been torn down, and the people had launched no effort to repair them. Yet, in the midst of all of this, one godly man found one hundred prophets of God, hiding and sustaining them. Further, God had left seventy times more righteous people than there were prophets, reserving them for Himself.

The Relevance of This Occasion

Men must not be hasty to write off the Israelites, imagining that because a godly remnant is not perceived among them, none exists. The sophists who reason that Israel has been cut off must hear the word of the Lord to Elijah, ponder it, and repent of their ways. Here the mind and ways of the Lord are revealed. This text fairly shouts to men, demanding that they refrain from making judgments that conflict with revelation.

THE ELECTION OF GRACE

"⁵ Even so then, at this present time there is a remnant according to the election of grace." Other versions read, "In the same way then, there has also come to be at the present time a remnant according to God's gracious choice."^{NASB} "So too, at the present time there is a remnant chosen by grace."^{NIV} "In the same way, then, in our own time,

His people." There is no room in the Divine vocabulary or purpose for such a thought or expression. Therefore, those who say such things are entirely out of order. Their speech is out of synch with both the Word and purpose of the Almighty.

On a practical note, if God does not proved right when you speak and prevail when you judge"^{NIV} (Rom 3:4).

We ARE dealing with the sayings of God here. In particular, "the answer of God" to Elijah, and the word of the Spirit regarding that answer. I find it exceedingly difficult to understand how men can so blatantly contradict these words, but they do. Of course, that is one of the reasons this strong line of reasoning is being brought to our attention by the Holy Spirit.

AT THIS PRESENT TIME

This expression is not limited to the period during which Paul was writing. Nor, indeed, is the expression "this present time" a strange one. It is mentioned two other times (Luke 18:30; Rom 8:18). While it does refer to the immediate time – i.e., right now – it is not intended to mean a fixed point in time. Its use in Scripture lends itself to the idea of ANY point in time. It is as though the Spirit embalms these words in holy writ in order that every generation might read them and apply them to its own time. That is how Jesus used the words. "Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or

The fact that all of Israel appeared to be totally reprobate by no means suggested that it was. We know of at least 100 prophets that were preserved, and seven thousand persons who refused to abandon God in favor of Baal. This was NOT the result of a statistical analysis. It was a revelation.

there is a remnant, set aside by grace."^{NJB}

These words confirm that the incident with Elijah revealed a Divine principle, or manner of working. It was not an isolated incident, but indicative of the way in which the Lord moves among people – in particular how He works with Israel. The Spirit has already refused to allow the words or thought that God has "cast away allow for such expressions, neither must we. The people of God must refuse to allow men to teach that God has abandoned Israel, when He affirms He has not. It is not a light matter, or a mere matter of opinion. God has spoken on this subject, and no person who contradicts Him will be excused. It is still true, "Let God be true, and every man a liar. As it is written: 'So that you may be wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting" (Luke 18:29-30). It is also how Paul used the expression in chapter eight of this book. "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us" (8:18). Neither of these passages remotely suggest that there will ever be a time in this world when the revealed benefits will cease to be. Jesus, for example, did not suggest that a time was coming when the person abandoning all for the sake of the Kingdom of God would no longer receive manifold more in this world, and eternal life in the world to come. Nor, indeed, did Paul intimate that some future period of time would occur in this world when the sufferings being experienced would transcend the glory to be revealed in us.

By the same token, our text does not suggest that the stated condition would cease to be at some future date. Some, failing to see this, acknowledge that a remnant did exist in Paul's day. They affirm, however, that commensurate with the destruction of Jerusalem, the Israelites were summarily cut off, with no hope of recovery. The text before us violently throws that bit of theological nonsense down to the ground, where it belongs!

A REMNANT

The presence of a remnant proves the preservation of the people. Where there is no remnant, there is no people. However, where a remnant exists, a people exist. That is precisely the meaning of Isaiah's words, "Except the LORD of hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah" (Isa 1:9). This very passage was mentioned earlier, in chapter nine, together with the promise that a remnant of Israel would be saved. "Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved: for He will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness: because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth. And as Esaias said before, Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been as Sodom, and been made like unto Gomorrah" (9:27-29).

Our text makes this affirmation: "there is a remnant!" However, you can have no remnant among a people who have been totally rejected, like Sodom and Gomorrah. In fact, the "remnant" is often counted as the whole, being the reason for its preservation. It was so in Elijah's day, and it is so "at this present time."

Throughout the history of Israel,

Were it not for the remnant, there actually could be no new covenant. Both prophets and Apostles declare the new covenant is made "with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah" (Jer 31:31; Heb 8:8). Nowhere is it affirmed that this promise was abrogated and the new covenant made with another people – nowhere! It is the presence of the "remnant" that has allowed for the righteous fulfillment of that promise.

What is more, the church is NEVER

Throughout the history of Israel, God spoke of a "remnant" within it – a residue that would be blessed. Frequently hope for the people was founded upon the presence of a "remnant."

God spoke of a "remnant" within it – a residue that would be blessed. Frequently hope for the people was founded upon the presence of a "remnant." Ponder these references.

- "The remnant of Israel" (Isa 10:20-21; Jer 6:9; 31:7; Ezek 11:13; Mic 2:12; Zeph 2:13)
- "The remnant of His people" (Isa 11:11,16)
- "The remnant of my flock" (Jer 23:3)
- "the remnant of the house of Israel" (Isa 46:3)
- "The remnant in Judah" (Jer 40:15)
- "the remnant of Judah" (Jer 43:5; 44:12,14,28)
- "The remnant of the house of Judah" (Zeph 2:7)
- "The remnant of Joseph" (Amos 5:15)
- "The remnant of Jacob" (Micah 5:7-8)
- "The remnant of His heritage" (Micah 7:18)
- "The remnant of My people" (Zeph 2:9)
- "The remnant of this people" (Zech 8:12).

These expressions are acquainting us with the ways of the Lord. This is how He works. It is how He has preserved the nation of Israel without condoning its unbelief. This is what allowed the Lord to severely punish Israel without utterly destroying it.

referred to as the "remnant" of Israel. There IS a remnant within the church; i.e., "the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ" (Rev 12:17). Even that reference can be considered a reference to Israel. At any rate, the church itself is never called a "remnant."

THE ELECTION OF GRACE

"... there is a remnant according to the election of grace." Other versions read, "according to God's gracious choice," ^{NASB} "chosen by grace," ^{NIV} "marked out by the selection of grace," ^{BBE} "God's kindness in choosing them," ^{NLT} and "set aside by grace." ^{NJB}

The Spirit now accounts for the presence of the remnant among the Israelites. It is strictly a Divine prerogative, as in the time of Elijah. The word "election" comes from ἐκλογήν, and means "a choosing out, selection, election." This word, in this precise form, is used five times in Scripture.

- "For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth" (Rom 9:11).
- "Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace" (Rom 11:5).

- “As concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes: but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers’ sakes” (Rom 11:28).
- “Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of [by ^{NKJV}] God” (1 Thess 1:4).
- “Therefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall” (2 Pet 1:10).

The word “election” is never used to describe the choice of men. It is strictly a Divine prerogative, and is used in that way with no exceptions. To confirm this is the case, the Spirit nails the matter down by saying it is “the election of grace.”

The presence of the remnant, therefore, is traced to the gracious and benevolent choice of God. I acknowledge that this does not readily fit into certain theological molds. However, the Spirit is not defending the theological stances developed by men, and neither can we. The declarations of Scripture are not to be filtered through our understanding. Rather, they are to be the basis for forming our understanding! Those who have a higher regard for human understanding than for Divine affirmation are occupying dangerous ground. God will not overlook man’s insolence, particularly when He has extended Himself to make His ways known. There is no reason to question what this text has declared. Nor, indeed, is there reason to view it as inconsequential. There is every reason to embrace it and join Paul in a prayer for Israel’s salvation.

LIGHT IN DARKNESS

If one judges by appearance, which Jesus forbids (John 7:24), Israel looks hopeless. Indeed, from one perspective, Paul’s assessment of them remains true: “the Jews: who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, so far as to say no person of an honest and good heart will dare to contend that making Scripture logical to fallen men is a responsibility with which we are charged. It is the declaration, or preaching, of the Word that is our aim. It is the objective of men to believe that and are contrary to all men” (1 Thess 2:15). But that is not the whole of the story, and Paul did not intend for it to be.

In the very midst of this morass of guilt and defilement, “there is a remnant according to the election of grace.” It is a matter of Divine choice. That choice has been motivated by His grace. It exists in spite of the circumstances, not because of them. You may rest assured God has not acted in contradiction of any aspect of His character, or any portion of His revelation. But that is not the point of this text. It is correctly assumed that whatever God does is righteous and, beyond any doubt, holy.

The responsibility of men does not include weaving texts of Scripture into a theological tapestry that is palatable to the human intellect and meets with the approval of self-acclaimed theologians. Any person who would contend that such is the case has only betrayed their unbelief and ignorance. In fact, I will go

Word, without wavering..

I have taken the time to say these things because of the nature of this text. Divine reasoning is based upon these affirmations. The prayer for Israel’s salvation is solidly justified by them. In them, the focus is placed upon God Himself, thereby igniting hope and strengthening faith. We cannot afford to be wrong about such texts! Expressions like “there IS,” and “ACCORDING to” make this clear.

INVOLVED IN DENIAL

In order to affirm that Israel has been written off, and is irrecoverable, several things must be denied. First, the fact that God foreknows some among them must be denied. Second, that God CAN choose a remnant among them must be denied. Third, that there IS a remnant among them must be denied. Fourth, that God has NOT cast away His people must be denied. Those are most serious denials!

THE CONFLICT OF GRACE AND WORKS

“⁶ And if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace. But if it is of works, it is no longer grace; otherwise work is no longer work.” This is an unusually strong affirmation!

Here is a passage that has caused no small controversy among professed believers. This circumstance is not the result of honest searching, but is evidence of the working of the “wicked one.” This verse is not a mere theological tenet. Rather, it is an explanation that justifies God’s choice of a remnant and the consequent preservation of Israel. No child of God can afford to be confused about statements like this. If Divine reasoning and purpose are supported by such statements, then failing to comprehend them causes what is revealed to become mysterious and unknowable. Who is the person that can hope to find advantages in such a situation?

A FOUNDATIONAL STATEMENT

Men have long sought to mingle the works of men and the grace of God. Finely tuned views have been developed that appear to have accomplished this admixture – at least to the satisfaction of those “understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm” (1 Tim 1:7).

The Spirit substantiates to our hearts that Israel has not been totally rejected. Hope remains.--by Given O. Blakely

It should be evident to you that this text does not allow for the combining of “works” and “grace.” They are clearly declared to be antithetical, or contrary, to each other. The subject being developed by the Spirit will not allow “works” and “grace” to be joined together. The presence of one cancels out the validity of the other. “Grace” and “works” simply cannot coexist in this matter. It is therefore utterly futile to attempt to forge such a unity.

The Spirit is developing a foundational view – something upon which all valid response is based. When it comes to the matter of foundations, man’s work is never a factor. Faith rests upon foundations, and therefore nothing of man can be in them. Here we are dealing with causes, not effects – and causes are always traced back to God. Of Him alone it is written, “For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen” (Rom 11:36). And again, “And all things are of God” (2 Cor 5:18). When it comes to the foundation, or basis, of salvation, “Salvation is of the LORD” from beginning to end (Jonah 2:9). That is precisely the intention of the following ascriptions given to Jesus. “I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty” (Rev 1:8). And again, “I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last” (Rev 22:13).

Because of this, it is out of order to force the role of “good works” into this text. The expression “good works” is used sixteen in the Scriptures, and NEVER in a bad sense (Matt 5:16; John 10:32; Acts 9:36; Rom 13:3; Eph 2:10; 1 Tim 2:10; 5:10,25; 6:18; 2 Tim 3:17; Tit 2:7,14; 3:8). All of those references, with no exception, deal with the effect of salvation, never its cause!

To take these passages and attempt to wed them to our text only pushes the truth beyond our grasp. Such attempts do not clarify “the election of grace,” but only serve to obscure it. Such explanations are not from God, and they do not serve His purpose or assist His people.

The Spirit will now take us down to the foundation of Divine working. He will explain to us WHY God does what He does, and WHY there is hope for Israel. He will account for the presence of a remnant at “this present time.” For those with ears to hear, His explanation will also account for their own salvation, which will bring glory to God and great joy and satisfaction to their hearts.

IF BY GRACE

“... if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace.” See, grace cannot coexist with works at the foundational level. Either a remnant exists because of God’s grace, or because of man’s works – but it cannot be because of both. It must be one or the other. Other versions read, “But if it is by grace, it is no longer on the basis of works, otherwise grace is no longer grace.”^{NASB} “And if by grace, then it is no longer by works; if it were, grace would no longer be grace.”^{NIV}

Grace presumes the absence of satisfactory works. That absence is the very reason for the necessity of grace. The kindness of God is not found in recognizing the goodness of man, which, in the first place does not even exist (Rom 3:12). Rather, it is revealed in His benevolent provision for man in spite of the absence of such goodness.

If God’s choices are based upon His grace (i.e., “the election of grace”), then we need not look to the worthiness of the chosen ones as the cause for that choice. It is therefore absurd to say that Israel has been totally rejected because of their works. This is not mere conjecture, for God has spoken most precisely to this point.

It Is A Matter of Revelation

“Thus saith the LORD, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; the LORD of hosts is His name: if those ordinances depart from before Me, saith the LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before Me for ever. Thus saith the LORD; If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the LORD” (Jer 31:35-37).

It is difficult to conceive of a more precise and powerful statement of Divine intent. It clearly accents the grace of God, else Israel would have been totally rejected “for all they have done.” Rather, however, than this being the case, the Lord calls upon us to consider the stability and consistency of the creation. Are there any doubts about the creations absolute consistency? He then affirms that His commitment to Israel is even more firm than that!

A Remnant and Total Rejection Cannot Exist Simultaneously

This is a marvelous picture of the statement of our text: “... if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace.” The “election of grace” is not possible if Israel has been completely rejected because of what they have done. This in no way ignores their unbelief. Nor, indeed, does it exclude the necessity of hearing and believing the Gospel of Christ.

What About the Gentiles?

If God has, in fact, abrogated all of promises to the Jews because of what they have done, how can we account for the acceptance of the Gentiles? They spurned the revelation of nature (Rom 1:19-20) and the testimony of their conscience (Rom 2:15). They changed the glory of God into an image like unto man, birds, beasts, and creeping things (Rom 1:23). They changed the truth of God into a lie, worshiping and serving the creature rather than the Creator (Rom 1:25). They were not thankful (Rom 1:21), and refused to retain God in their knowledge (Rom 1:28). They knew the judgment of God, yet continued in their iniquity, approving others immersed in sin (Rom 1:32).

If you speak of being rejected, what of the Gentiles? God “also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonor their own bodies between themselves” (Rom 1:24). He “gave them up unto vile affections” (Rom 1:26). He even “gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient” (Rom 1:28).

Yet, who is the person who will affirm the Gentile world was totally rejected by God? Let them step forth and do their best to defend such an imagination! The grace of God reached them in spite of what they did! They were not received because of their works, but because of His grace. How else can you account for the marvelous description of their acceptance. “The Gentiles, which followed not after righteousness, have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness which is of faith” (Rom 9:30). And again, “I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me” (Rom 10:20).

There you have the acceptance of the Gentiles on the precise basis of our text: “if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace.” Let no person imagine this privilege has been formally withdrawn from the Israelites!

IF IT IS OF WORKS

“ . . . if it is of works, it is no longer grace; otherwise work is no longer work.” If the righteousness of God is conferred upon men because of what they have done, it cannot be received through grace! It is not that such a condition is improbable. It is impossible! When the works of men enter into the foundational equation, defilement spreads throughout, and grace is at once obviated!

Foreshadowed Under the Law

The truth of this statement was foreshadowed under the Law – namely, that man’s work cannot have a part in the foundation of salvation. In the building of an altar to Himself, the Lord was very specific. Nothing fashioned by man could be a part of the altar itself. Thus it was written, “And if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it” (Ex 20:25). Later, Moses reviewed this for the people. “And there shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones: thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them. Thou shalt build the altar of the LORD thy God of whole stones: and thou shalt offer burnt offerings thereon unto the LORD thy God” (Deut 27:5-6). When they came into the land of Canaan, Joshua once again stated this (Heb 13:10). Just as human works would defile the ancient altar of sacrifice, so they contaminate the salvation of God, nullifying the grace of God. Of course, this is even more precisely stated in Galatians 5:4. “Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace.”

Thus, after all arguments for the mingling of grace and works have been heard, let the Lord have the final word on the matter. He is not ambiguous about it. “And if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace. But if it is of works, it is no longer grace; otherwise work is no longer work.”^{NKJV}

Foreknowledge and Works

Among other things, this confirms that God’s foreknowledge was not of men’s works, else works and grace would have been blended. This is a critical distinction to be seen! If those foreknown by God were those He saw would be obedient, then salvation is necessarily by works. In such a case, God was motivated requirement. “As Moses the servant of the LORD commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, an altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron: and they offered thereon burnt offerings unto the LORD, and sacrificed peace offerings” (Josh 8:31).

There you have the acceptance of the Gentiles on the precise basis of our text: “if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace.” Let no person imagine this privilege has been formally withdrawn from the Israelites!

This prohibition was given in anticipation of the salvation that is in Christ Jesus “with eternal glory” (2 Tim 2:10). Nothing of man can be found on the altar of God – the “altar” from which we “eat,” enjoying the benefits of salvation by men, which is precisely what salvation by works is.

However, Scripture represents men as being drawn, motivated, and changed, by God Himself. This is a consistent representation, and cannot effectively be negated. Divine foreknowledge blends with grace, not with works. The works of men are precisely what requires the grace of God. It is HIS works that are the focus of foreknowledge, not the works of men (Acts 15:18). A shout of praise should rise from us all because of it!

THE EXPLANATION

“⁷ What then? Israel has not obtained what it seeks; but the elect have obtained it, and the rest were blinded.⁸ Just as it is written: ‘God has given them a spirit of stupor, Eyes that they should not see And ears that they should not hear, To this very day.’⁹ And David says: ‘Let their table become a snare and a trap, A stumbling block and a recompense to them.¹⁰ Let their eyes be darkened, so that they do not see, and bow down their back always.’”

Those who are satisfied with simplistic and juvenile explanations of Scripture will certainly find no solace in this passage! Of course, there is nothing at all simplistic about salvation, even though grace has placed it within our reach.

Here we will see that both insight and blindness are from God. God can give eyes to see, or eyes not to see! He can cause the spirit of man to be alert and illuminated, or He can put it to sleep. This, of course, is what the Spirit affirms, and there is no room for questioning these realities. Their affirmation accounts for the present blindness of Israel. They also explain why they still can be illuminated. Armed with an understanding of these things, a godly person can expectantly entertain a heart’s desire and fervent prayer for Israel, that they might be saved. A failure to perceive this might very well eventuate in a fulfilment of this very text within the objector.

ISRAEL HAS NOT OBTAINED

“What then? That which Israel is seeking for, it has not obtained. . . .”^{NASB} This has already been affirmed. “But Israel, which followed after the law of righteousness, hath not attained to the law of righteousness” (Rom 9:31). Now the Spirit nails it into our hearts and consciences.

Only Two Ways to be Righteous
Keeping the Law

The subject at hand is the obtaining of righteousness. There are only two ways to be righteous. The first is to fully measure up to the requirements of God’s holy, spiritual, and good Law. Such a righteousness is the result of keeping all of the commandments all of the time (Deut 5:29).

In order to confirm this was an impossible task, God chose a nation through whom this could be shown. He provided them with all of the incentives required, both blessings and curses. He gave them all of the details of that Law in written form. He also allotted a sufficient period of time for that righteousness to be developed – no less than 1,500 years.

At the conclusion of that period, the pronouncement was made: “What then? What Israel sought so earnestly it did not obtain.”^{NIV} The idea is that they did not obtain it on their own, or through their own efforts – another way of saying, “not of works.” Righteousness was sought, but it was not obtained! Why not? From a previously stated perspective, because it was not sought by faith (Rom 9:32). Righteousness through the Law is not possible. The edict has gone forth from the Throne, “Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight” (Rom 3:20). And again, “for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified” (Gal 2:16). Further, “if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain” (Gal 2:21). The book is closed on this matter.

Imputed Righteousness

The other means of obtaining righteousness is to have it imputed, or credited, to you. What is more, this must be God’s own righteousness. It cannot be imaginary or fictitious. This is the righteousness that is announced in the Gospel (Rom 1:17). It is also the righteousness of which Israel was ignorant (Rom 10:3). The result, “Israel has not obtained what it seeks.” They could not measure up to the righteousness of the Law, and they were ignorant of the righteousness that comes from God.

THE ELECT HAVE OBTAINED IT

“. . . but those who were chosen obtained it”^{NASB} Other versions read, “the election hath obtained it,”^{KJV} “the elect have obtained it,”^{NKJV} “but the elect did,”^{NIV} “those of the selection got it,”^{BBE} “the chosen did obtain,”^{YLT} “the ones God has chosen,”^{NLT} and “those who were chosen found it.”^{NJB}

A Brief Word

Before proceeding further, I would like to make a cursory observation about “the elect,” or “the election.” The concept of election itself is not the result of human reasoning, but of Divine revelation. In fact, I am persuaded such a lofty concept could not even be imagined by man. The fact that God chooses is taught with remarkable clarity and abundance in His Word (Deut 7:6; Deut 18:5; 21:5; 1 Chron 29:1; Neh 9:7; Rom 16:13; 1 Cor 1:27-28; Eph 1:4; 2 Thess 2:13-14; 2 Tim 2:4; James 2:5; 1 Pet 2:9). In our text, the words “the elect” refer to those whom God has chosen. It is not necessary to join these words to all manner of human explanations. Taken as they are, they blend perfectly with everything God has said regarding Himself and His offspring, humanity. They are not in conflict with the truth, even though they do contradict the traditions of men. It is comely for the people of God to accept them as they are stated. If this is not done, they will have no edifying or comforting power for us.

These are words “taught by the Spirit, combining spiritual thoughts with spiritual words”^{NASB} (1 Cor 2:13). This is how the Spirit explains the presence of righteous people within an unrighteous nation. He accounts for their righteousness by saying they were “elect,” chosen and picked out by God. Men may not prefer to say it this way, but this is how the Spirit says it. For some, this is exceedingly difficult to receive, but God will be “justified in all of His sayings” (Rom 32:4), of which this is one. The explanation is not only stated correctly, it is articulated precisely! It is our business to receive it as it is said, thrusting from us any conflicting form of reasoning.

Subjectively, “the elect” were within the nation of Israel. There were “Israelites indeed” (John 1:47), Jews “inwardly” (Rom 2:29a), and circumcised in “heart” (Rom 2:29b). They, and they alone, obtained the righteousness of God! The first of record was the progenitor of the nation, our father Abraham (Gen 15:6). There were also David, the holy prophets, Zecharias and Elizabeth, Simeon, Anna, John the Baptist, the twelve Apostles, the 3,000 who believed on that memorable day of Pentecost, Paul, Timothy, Titus . . . etc. They were all Jews, but it only proved to be an advantage for them when they believed.

“The elect” were a “remnant,” like the 7,000 whom God reserved for Himself in the days of Elijah the prophet. All the angels that fell perished, but all of Israel did not! All of Sodom suffered the vengeance of eternal fire, but Israel did not.

God did not destroy the nation because the bulk of them did not obtain his righteousness. This should not surprise us. You have a precise parallel in Israel obtaining Canaan. The mass of the people who received the promise, were not allowed to realize it. In fact, they were excluded. Yet, as with our text, the elect “obtained it” (Num 14:26-31; 26:55; 32:11-12).

If God was willing to spare Sodom for the sake of ten righteous souls, will He blot out Israel among whom were infinitely more than ten righteous? The very thought that He would such a thing, betrays a fundamental ignorance of the nature of God and the glory of His promises.

The word “elect” includes the concept of Divine intervention. Salvation is the consequence of God’s work, not man’s. While men are surely involved in the process – hearing, believing, and obeying – it is the work of God that produces the result.

An Emphasis In “Elect”

The word “elect” includes the concept of Divine intervention. Salvation is the consequence of God’s work, not man’s. While men are surely involved in the process – hearing, believing, and obeying – it is the work of God that produces the result. If He did not send the Word to us, we would never have heard (Rom 10:15). If He did not open our hearts, we would not have believed (Acts 16:14). If He did not make us alive, we would forever have remained dead (Eph 2:1,5). He is the One who put us into Christ, making Him to become our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption (1 Cor 1:30). Jesus “made” us free (Rom 8:36; Gal 5:1). God “made us accepted” (Eph 1:6). He “made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus” (Eph 2:6). It is the Father who has “qualified us to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in the light” (Col 1:12). He, and He alone, has “washed,” “sanctified,” and “justified” us (1 Cor 6:11). There is no question about this among believers.

The word “elect” throws the spotlight upon the Lord, where it should be. It accounts for the attainment of righteousness by declaring what He has done. No child of God should be offended with this emphasis. It is one which the Lord Himself has chosen.

Without becoming distracted, it would be well to remind you that Divine election does not eliminate human responsibility. In fact, it even imposes responsibility upon men. It is written to those who “have obtained like precious faith,” “give diligence to make your calling and election sure” (2 Pet 1:1,10).

THE REST WERE BLINDED

“. . . and the rest were hardened [blinded^{KJV}].”^{NASB} Prior to this, the failure of the Israelites to obtain righteousness was traced to at least two factors.

- They sought it not by faith (9:32).
- They were ignorant of the righteousness of God (10:3).

Now an even higher reason is adduced: “the rest were blinded.” ^{KJV/NKJV} Later versions read “hardened.” The blindness of reference pertains to the heart, so that a person is rendered incapable of understanding. More was involved in this than the Israelites closing their minds. They were “blinded,” or “hardened,” by God. This will be abundantly confirmed in verses 8-10.

In a sense, the same thing happened to “the rest” of Israel that took place among the Gentiles. Though surrounded by all manner of evidence concerning the Living God, the Gentiles were given over to “uncleanness,” “vile affections,” and “a reprobate mind” (1:24.26.28). In other words, God did not intervene, opening their eyes and hearts. God “blinds” men by simply withholding understanding, as He did the ostrich when He “deprived her of wisdom, neither hath He imparted to her understanding” (Job 39:17).

This is a form of Divine judgment. As I am given to understand it, spiritual blindness is never imposed on those of tender heart, or who are seeking the truth. However, we must recognize that holy and godly people have, in the past, desired to understand mysteries of the Kingdom, yet were not allowed to do so. As it is written, “For verily I say unto you, That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them” (Matt 13:17). In their case, defective hearts were not the issue. Rather, it was not the appropriate time for such understanding to be obtained.

There are people who cannot believe because God has blinded them. “Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them. These things said Esaias, when he saw His glory, and spake of Him” (John 12:39-41).

This is precisely what happened to “the rest,” that is, those who were not “the elect.” In the end, we will find their hearts were neither honest nor good. As such, God would not allow them to see His saving truth, else He would have been obliged to convert and heal them. That, of course, is precisely what He says. Only God is able to identify “the rest,” and we do not well to attempt to make such judgments.

Notice, the Spirit divides the Israelites into two groups, “the elect” and “the rest.” That is the same sort of division mentioned in the ninth chapter. “For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel” (9:6). One body of people, yet it was comprised of two separate groups.

In a sense, Israel is also a threshing floor upon which both wheat and chaff are found (Matt 3:12). Like fish, they were all enclosed in the net of Divine Sovereignty, yet some were good and some were bad (Matt 13:47-48). They are a sort of miniature cosmos.

Actually, the same classifications can be applied to the world, and even of the professed church. There are “the elect,” and “the rest.” In both cases, the action of God was the deciding factor.

A RESTORATION QUOTATION

I have been identified with the Restoration Movement for over fifty years.

In a sense, Israel is also a threshing floor upon which both wheat and chaff are found (Matt 3:12). Like fish, they were all enclosed in the net of Divine Sovereignty, yet some were good and some were bad (Matt 13:47-48). They are a sort of miniature cosmos.

As of 2001, forty-eight of those years have been spent in focused and continual labors for the Lord. As a rule, the subject covered in this section of Romans is studiously avoided by modern members of this movement. However, that stance is not the one historically taken by those associated with it. I am taking the liberty of sharing a quotation taken from Moses Lard’s commentary on Romans. While not an exhaustive work, it did provide a typically accepted overview of Romans within the movement. His commentary is generally held in high regard among members of The Restoration Movement. The following are brother Lard’s remarks on the first part of Romans eleven.

“Paul concluded chapter ten with a quotation from Isaiah describing the nation of Israel as “a disobedient and contrary people.” Paul begins chapter eleven by giving several examples to show that despite this rebellion God has not totally rejected His people (1-6). What God has done, however, is harden the hearts of the rebellious Israelites (7-10). But the outcome of this “hardening” led to salvation coming to the Gentiles, which in turn God was using to provoke Israel to jealousy in an attempt to win them back to Him. This is also why Paul magnified his ministry to the Gentiles, hoping to save some of his countrymen by provoking them to jealousy (11-15).”

MOSES LARD’S COMMENTARY ON ROMANS

Although such comments are not a sufficient reason to shape our thinking, it is important to know that sound perspectives are given to saints of every age. The truth of God is never novel, and always pertinent. Wherever hearts are supple in the hands of the Lord, similar conclusions will be reached concerning difficult passages of Scripture. That, of course, is due to Divine influence, just as surely as a failure to see the truth is the result of Divine judgment.

The Spirit will now elaborate upon this truth, showing that it has been demonstrated in the past.

GOD GAVE THEM A SPIRIT OF STUPOR

“. . . just as it is written, “GOD GAVE THEM A SPIRIT OF STUPOR, EYES TO SEE NOT AND EARS TO HEAR NOT, DOWN TO THIS VERY DAY.” ^{NASB} Other versions read, “God gave them a spirit of slumber,” ^{KJV} “God gave them a sluggish spirit,” ^{NRSV} “God hath given them the spirit of insensibility,” ^{DOUAY-RHEIMS} “God has put them into a deep sleep,” ^{NLT} and “God has infused them with a spirit of lethargy.” ^{NJB} I give these various translations to confirm the absolute absence of any vagueness of expression. The Spirit speaks “expressly.”

Isaiah’s Prophecy

The quotation is taken from Isaiah 29:10-12. “For the LORD hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath He covered. And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed: And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned.”

A Spirit of Stupor

This was a judgment poured out upon Israel. Because they had chosen to maintain a religious shell without substance, God rendered them incapable of knowing the truth. They were honoring Him with their lips, but their hearts were far from Him. For this reason, He caused the wisdom of their wise men to fail, so that they became totally ignorant of the very truth they sought to teach. Here is how the Lord said it through Isaiah. “The Lord says: ‘These people come near to Me with their mouth and honor Me with their lips, but their hearts are far from Me. Their worship of Me is made up only of rules taught by men. Therefore once more I will astound these people with wonder upon wonder; the wisdom of the wise will perish, the intelligence of the intelligent will vanish’”^{NIV} (Isa 29:13-14). They were “blinded!”

An Application

The remarkable parallel to our times is so evident it is staggering! The regulatory approach to serving God has actually brought His judgment upon the people. This is why the wisdom of the wise has failed, and the intelligence of the intelligent has vanished. With all of the purported experts in the professed church, it is in worse shape than it has ever been. The shawl of death is draped over it, and the reproach of spiritual ignorance fills its halls. And why so? Because God will not allow such people to know and handle His sanctifying truth! They will not be able to benefit from it, or realize its fulfillment within them!

God will neither convert nor heal those bent away from Him. He has shown this to be the case in Israel of old. Those who refused to believe were not allowed to enter the promised land! Further, because a spirit of stupor was poured out upon them, it made no sense to them to believe. In such a case, the promises of God seemed foolish, inaccessible, and contrary to sound thought. Thus, they rejected them.

So it is with “the rest” whom God has “blinded” or “hardened.” They are controlled by spiritual ignorance and cannot profit from the Gospel.

Eyes and Ears

Natural capacities are not enough to bring conversion and healing! Ordinarily, men are naturally endowed with a degree of intelligence – the ability to comprehend and understand. However, these abilities are not sufficient to save the soul. They cannot take hold of the Gospel, or open the mysteries of redemption.

When it comes to the things of God, special capacities must be received. The “things of the Spirit of God” cannot be received by “the natural man.” In fact, they do not make sense to the person who is not born again – who does not have spiritual capacities. Thus it is written, “But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Cor 2:14).

Our text describes these spiritual capacities as “eyes” that can see and “ears” that can hear. These come from the Lord, who makes them “both” (Prov 20:12). “The rest were blinded” by God withholding these spiritual capacities. He did, however, give them “eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear.” That is how the Lord “blinded” them; i.e., by withholding the ability to understand, and imposing capacities incapable of understanding.

It is possible to so provoke the Lord that He will not grant the ability to hear and understand His word. The knowledge of this should provoke hearty repentance and a fervent quest to receive the love of the truth -- for unless it is received, it is not possible to be saved. As it is written, “Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness” (2 Thess 2:9-12).

DAVID’S TESTIMONY

This perspective is so vital to the salvation of the soul, that the Spirit continues to elaborate on it. “And David says, ‘LET THEIR TABLE BECOME A SNARE AND A TRAP, AND A STUMBLING BLOCK AND A RETRIBUTION TO THEM. LET THEIR EYES BE DARKENED TO SEE NOT, AND BEND THEIR BACKS FOREVER.’”^{NASB} This language is so strong it captures the minds of those who ponder it!

The quotation is taken from the sixty-ninth Psalm, which is a Messianic Psalm. The laments of the suffering Christ are articulated in language that stirs the heart. “Because for Thy sake I have borne reproach; shame hath covered My face. I am become a stranger unto My brethren, and an alien unto My mother’s children. For the zeal of Thine house hath eaten Me up; and the reproaches of them that reproached Thee are fallen upon Me” (vs 7-9). These statements are expressly said to relate to the Lord Jesus (John 2:14-17; Rom 15:3). The Psalm continues, “Reproach hath broken My heart; and I am full of heaviness: and I looked for some to take pity, but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none. They gave Me also gall for my meat; and in My thirst they gave Me vinegar to drink” (vs 20-21). These sayings are also related to the Lord Jesus, particularly as He suffered for us (Matt 26:37; Mk 14:37,38; Matt 27:34,48).

The picture is that of Israel's rejection of their Christ! The result of that rejection is stated in David's next words, which are quoted in our text. "Let their table become a snare before them: and that which should have been for their welfare, let it become a trap. Let their eyes be darkened, that they see not; and make their loins continually to shake" (vs 22-23). Those who imagine there are no penalties for rejecting the Lord Jesus – particularly while holding to a "form of godliness" (2 Tim 3:5) – need to seriously ponder this text.

Their Table Becomes a Snare

"Their table" stands for the means through which God sustained the people of Israel – the revelation of His law and will. It was given to them to bring certain advantages, namely to define sin and show how utterly helpless they were to avoid it. As it is written, "Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God. Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin" (Rom 3:19-20). In this way, the Law was a "schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith" (Gal 3:24). The Law was, in this sense, "their table." However, this is not how it served "the rest" who were "blinded."

"Their table" actually became the means of their stumbling. It became a "snare and a trap" to them – a means by which they were caught by and confined in sin! Their religion thus became the means through which they fell and were blinded to the truth of God! The point here is that this did not simply occur by chance. It was a judgment from God. It was God's reaction to their hard and calloused hearts.

If this is an explanation of the condition of "the rest" of the Israelites who did not attain unto righteousness, does it not also clarify the times in which we live? Could it be that the spiritual obtuseness that dominates much of Christendom is actually a judgment from God for their lack of love for the truth? Could it be that religion has actually become the occasion for falling and being ensnared and entrapped by sin?

It was religion that caused the Jews to crucify Jesus! It was religion that provoked the early persecution of believers. It was religion that brought on the stoning of Stephen and the persecution of and opposition to Paul. For those instigating these oppositions, "their table" had become a "snare and a trap."

God will not allow living waters to flow from a dead church! To do so would be to dishonor His own name. If Israel lost the battle when sin was found in its camp (Joshua 7), are there any so naive as to think God will give victory to the church while sin is found in it? A form of godliness that denies the power thereof will not be used to dignify the truth or expound the Gospel of Christ. Rather, such will become a "stumblingblock," never a foundation stone.

Let Their Eyes Be Darkened

When "eyes" are "darkened," men become incapable of understanding the things of God – particularly the means by which we are made righteous. On one occasion, Elymas the sorcerer withstood the preaching of Paul, seeking to turn a local official "from the faith." Paul, however, "filled with the Holy Spirit, looked intently at him and said, 'O full of all deceit and all fraud, you son of the devil, you enemy of all righteousness, will you not cease perverting the straight ways of the Lord? And now, indeed, the hand of the Lord is upon you, and you shall be blind, not seeing the sun for a time.'" It is written that "immediately a dark mist fell on him, and he went around seeking someone to lead him by the hand" (Acts 13:8-11). His eyes were darkened!

This is what happened to "the rest" who were "blinded." They became incapable of seeing the truth of God – not by chance, but by Divine judgment! Elymas did not become blind because of an infection, or some debilitating disease. His was a blindness of judgment, imposed upon him by the Living God.

"Let their eyes be darkened" is the opposite of "Let there be light." Both are brought on by God, and neither can be induced without Him. Neither one can be simulated or fabricated. In this case, even the wisdom of the religious authorities dried up, becoming vain and useless. "The wisdom of their wise men," and "the understanding of their prudent men" were cursed by God, and thus they withered, becoming fruitless. Their eyes were "darkened."

To put it another way, God said, "I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent. Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" (1 Cor 1:19-20). In such a state, it is utterly impossible to know the things of God – i.e., to comprehend them and gain advantages from them.

If it is true that spiritual blindness exists in the professed church, it is true that the judgment of God is upon it. God has deprived its leaders of wisdom. That is why they do not know. He has said, "Let their eyes be darkened!" The ONLY solution to the dilemma is to fervently seek the Lord. Then, and only then, will He be found. As it is written, “And ye shall seek Me, and find Me, when ye shall search for Me with all your heart” (Jer 29:13).

Bend Their Backs Forever

The Psalm from which this is quoted says “make their loins continually to shake” (Psa 69:23b). Our text says, “bow down their back always,” or “bend their backs forever.”^{NASB}

Both expressions refer to the same experience – that of an unbearable burden. It is so heavy the loins, or muscular center of the body, tremble or convulse. It is also so heavy that the back is bent forward, the person being unable to stand erect.

In this experience, the individual is brought to realize his own lack of strength. What he is required to carry is more than can be borne. In particular, the very religion placed upon the Jews – the Law of commandments contained in ordinances – was more than they could bear. The yoke of the Law was not easy, and its burden was not light – not for “the rest.” Only Jesus can bring true relief! Only His yoke is easy!

It is very true that men like David found great delight in the Law. “O how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day” (Psa 119:97). Jeremiah expressed similar joy. “Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart: for I am called

It is still true: the very truth bringing delight to “the elect,” is an unbearable burden to “the rest.” While both may be in the same group, they are of radically differing orders. One is blessed, and one is being judged. One can understand, and one cannot. To one, true religion is found by thy name, O LORD God of hosts” (Jer 15:16). However, these were “the elect,” and thus found delight and relief in the good word of God. “The rest,” however, “were blinded.” The very table which brought nourishment to “the elect” became a trap and a stumblingstone to them. What delighted David was a sorrowful burden to them. They were blinded!

to be delightful and liberating. To “the rest,” it is a burden grievous to be borne. In nearly every church and religious setting, these two classes remain: “the elect,” and “the rest.” To which class do you belong? If you believe the report, and are living by faith, you belong to the latter – “the rest.”

CONCLUSION

There are many factors that are brought together in the salvation of an individual. Many of them have to do with the activities of people themselves.

- The Gospel of Christ is preached (Rom 10:14-15).
- That Gospel is heard with a degree of discernment (Rom 10:17).
- The record of God’s Son is believed (1 John 5:10).
- There is a repentance from sin and a turning to the Lord (Acts 2:38).
- The convicted one calls upon the name of the Lord (Acts 2:21; Rom 10:13).
- There is a public confession that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God (Matt 16:16-18; Rom 10:9-10).
- The believer is baptized into Christ, dying, buried, and raised with Him (Rom 6:4-17).
- A walk in the newness of life begins (Rom 6:4).

These are marvelous realities, but they are not the only realities. While all of them are tied to the salvation of the soul, none of them are the basis, or foundation, of salvation! There are Divine involvements that guarantee the effectiveness of these things.

- The Lord sent the Word that is preached or published (Psa 68:11; 107:20; Acts 10:36).
- The Father draws people to the Son (John 6:44,65)
- The Lord sends the preachers, or ministers, through whom we believe (Rom 10:15; 1 Cor 3:5).
- The Lord opens men’s hearts so they can respond appropriately to the Gospel (Acts 16:14).
- We believe through God’s grace (Acts 18:27; 1 Tim 1:14).
- The Lord gives repentance (Acts 5:31;

- 2 Tim 2:25; Acts 3:26; 11:18).
- Men cannot say Jesus is Lord except through the Holy Spirit (1 Cor 12:3).
- Through the Spirit we are baptized into one body (1 Cor 2:13).
- God puts us into Christ (1 Cor 1:30).
- God makes us righteous (2 Cor 5:21).
- God raised us from death in trespasses and sins (Eph 2:1-5).
- God chose us in Christ before the foundation of the world (Eph 1:4).
- The Lord works in us both to will and to do of His own good pleasure (Phil 2:13).
- We are being changed from glory unto glory by the Holy Spirit (2 Cor 3:18).
- God is able to keep us from falling (Jude 24).

The most prominent factors about salvation are those accomplished by God! In the end, the saved from every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, will shout, “Salvation belongeth unto the LORD” (Psa 3:8), and “Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb” (Rev 7:10; 19:1). In the holy conclave of the saved, none will be pointing to themselves, or even to those through whom they believed. All eyes will be upon the Lord, and all glory will go to Him! His involvement in our salvation will be perceived as the most prominent and effective factor.

This is precisely the point that is being made in this chapter. Since salvation is of God, and is effected through His power and wisdom, the salvation of the Jews is not beyond possibility.

Their salvation will require no more Divine working than the salvation of the Gentiles – for that matter, than your own salvation! The Gentiles had nothing to recommend them to God! They had rejected the revelation given to them. The fact that it was comparatively crude to what was given to Israel only accents why it should have been received.

Add to this the many commitments God has made to Israel, and the fact that in them, God was incapable of lying. Now you have every reason to pray that Israel will be saved! You are in fellowship with the Lord Himself when you do so.

A BRIEF SUMMARY

- ❑ God has NOT cast away His people, as He twice affirms in our text (11:1,2).
- ❑ Paul himself is proof that Israel has not been totally rejected (11:1).
- ❑ That God reserves a remnant among the ancient people is confirmed by the events of Elijah’s time (11:3-4).
- ❑ The preservation of the remnant is God’s own work. The presence of the remnant cannot be confirmed by appearance, and can only be accounted for by God’s intervention (11:4).
- ❑ At the present time, there is still a remnant among Israel (11:5a).
- ❑ The remnant is there because of God’s gracious choice (11:5b).
- ❑ On the foundational level, grace and works cannot mix (11:6).
- ❑ Those who were elected obtained the righteousness God provides (11:7a).
- ❑ “The rest” were blinded by God, given a spirit of stupor so they could not believe (11:7b).

- ❑ In their blindness, their table—the means through which they were to be sustained—became a snare to them (11:8-10).

THE FOLLY OF INDIFFERENCE

There is a vital lesson to be learned in this text. Those who are indifferent to the Gospel of Christ place themselves in a most jeopardous situation. The same God who opens the eyes of men can shut them, pouring out the spirit of deep sleep upon them. He can render men incapable of believing, as confirmed after the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem (John 12:39).

ENTIRE GENERATIONS

There have been entire generations that have suffered this kind of judgment from God. This is a sobering reality to consider. It also promotes humility. One such generation lived when Jesus “dwelt among us.” Jesus said of that generation, “The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here. The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here” (Matt 12:41-42).

When Jesus spoke of the destruction of Jerusalem He said, “Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate” (Matt 23:36-38).

Again, He said of the people of His time, “Why doth this generation seek after a sign? verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation” (Mark 8:12). And again, “That the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation; from the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, It shall be required of this generation” (Lk 11:50-51). And again, “But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation” (Lk 17:25).

Yet, Some Believed – A Remnant!

Although, as a whole, that generation rejected Christ, yet the rejection was not total. The twelve Apostles, Nicodemus, Joseph of Arimathea, Mary Magdelene, other devout women, the woman at the well of Samaria, Simeon, Anna, Elizabeth, and an unnamed group who were waiting for redemption, came out of that very generation. Three thousand souls turned to the Lord on the day of Pentecost from that very generation. Shortly after that, five thousand more men were delivered from that generation. There was a remnant!

There Is Still a Remnant

There is still a remnant according to the election of grace! Yes, there are generations such as our own, where the knowledge of God is sparse and lifeless religious professionals appear to be in dominance. However, God has not abdicated the throne. He is still working among men through the Gospel of His Son, taking out of a godless generation a people for His own name (Acts 15:14).

In the Days of the Judges

As far back as the time of the Judges, this very condition was chronicled. “And also all that generation were gathered unto their fathers: and there arose another generation after them, which knew not the LORD, nor yet the works which he had done for Israel” (Judges 2:10). During that time “the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD, and served Baalim.” They “forsook the God of their fathers,” serving “Baal and Ashtaroth” (2:11-13).

It was during that very time that God raised up a righteous remnant, calling them “the Judges” (2:16-18). Men like Othniel, Ehud, Shamgar, Gideon, and finally Samuel, surfaced during those despicable times. God also raised up a righteous woman (Debra), making her the only woman judge in history – and all during spiritually decadent times. There has always been a remnant!

LIFT UP YOUR EYES

It is the persuasion of many godly people that we are living in spiritually impoverished times. These are times when God has sent a famine of hearing the Word of God upon the land, in accord with the prophecy of Amos (Amos 8:11-13). It can be a discouraging time if a proper understanding is not possessed.

Just as in the times of the Judges, the Babylonian captivity, and the days of the Lord Jesus, there remains a remnant according to the election of grace. That remnant is not only among the Jews, though they is the principle subject of our text. It also exists among the Gentiles, as it did in the city of Corinth when everything appeared hopeless. Of that Gentile city, the Lord Jesus said to Paul, "Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace: for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city" (Acts 18:9-10).

See, "There is a remnant according to the election of grace!" That means there is hope for you and your ministry, just as surely as there was for Paul and his ministry!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 36

THE REJECTION THAT IS NOT FINAL

^{11:11} I say then, have they stumbled that they should fall? Certainly not! But through their fall, to provoke them to jealousy, salvation has come to the Gentiles. ¹² Now if their fall is riches for the world, and their failure riches for the Gentiles, how much more their fullness! ¹³ For I speak to you Gentiles; inasmuch as I am an apostle to the Gentiles, I magnify my ministry, ¹⁴ if by any means I may provoke to jealousy those who are my flesh and save some of them. ¹⁵ For if their being cast away is the reconciling of the world, what will their acceptance be but life from the dead? ¹⁶ For if the firstfruit is holy, the lump is also holy; and if the root is holy, so are the branches. ¹⁷ And if some of the branches were broken off, and you, being a wild olive tree, were grafted in among them, and with them became a partaker of the root and fatness of the olive tree, ¹⁸ do not boast against the branches. But if you do boast, remember that you do not support the root, but the root supports you. ¹⁹ You will say then, "Branches were broken off that I might be grafted in." ²⁰ Well said. Because of unbelief they were broken off, and you stand by faith. Do not be haughty, but fear. ²¹ For if God did not spare the natural branches, He may not spare you either. ²² Therefore consider the goodness and severity of God: on those who fell, severity; but toward you, goodness, if you continue in His goodness. Otherwise you also will be cut off. ²³ And they also, if they do not continue in unbelief, will be grafted in, for God is able to graft them in again. ²⁴ For if you were cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and were grafted contrary to nature into a cultivated olive tree, how much more will these, who are natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree? ²⁵ For I do not desire, brethren, that you should be ignorant of this mystery, lest you should be wise in your own opinion, that blindness in part has happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. ²⁶ And so all Israel will be saved, as it is written: "The Deliverer will come out of Zion, And He will turn away ungodliness from Jacob;" ²⁷ For this is My covenant with them, When I take away their sins." ²⁸ Concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sake, but concerning the election they are beloved for the sake of the fathers. ²⁹ For the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable. ³⁰ For as you were once disobedient to God, yet have now obtained mercy through their disobedience, ³¹ even so these also have now been disobedient, that through the mercy shown you they also may obtain mercy. ³² For God has committed them all to disobedience, that He might have mercy on all. ³³ Oh, the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments and His ways past finding out! ³⁴ "For who has known the mind of the LORD? Or who has become His counselor?" ³⁵ "Or who has first given to Him And it shall be repaid to him?" ³⁶ For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things, to whom be glory forever. Amen. – Romans 11:11-36 – NKJV

INTRODUCTION

DIVINE PURPOSE

God works according to His own established purpose. The "great salvation" of men is itself referred to as God's "eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Eph 3:11). The culmination of that glorious salvation, of which we have been made partakers, is called "His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself" (Eph 1:9). In Christ Jesus, "we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will" (Eph 1:11). When the Holy Spirit challenges us to consider our own participation in this salvation, He reminds us that God "hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began" (2 Tim 1:9). When Jesus came into the world, it was according to God's "purpose" more than according to our need! From this perspective, it is written, "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil" (1 John 3:8).

When referring to the demise of the Assyrian empire, God declared His irrevocable purpose. "The LORD of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand: that I will break the Assyrian in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot: then shall his yoke depart from off them, and his burden depart from off their shoulders. This is the purpose that is purposed upon the whole earth: and this is the hand that is stretched out upon all the nations. For the LORD of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul it? and his hand is stretched out, and who shall turn it back?" (Isa 14:14:24-27). The withering of Egypt was also related to Divine purpose (Isa 19:12). When He spoke of the doom of Tyre, He said He had "purposed" to stain its pride (Isa 23:9).

God declares that what He purposes, He does (Isa 46:11). He hurls this challenge into the face of His enemies: "I work and who can hinder it?" ^{NRSV} (Isa 43:13). When He purposes something He declares, "I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it" (Isa 46:11). Again He affirms, "Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand" (Isa 14:24). Even that mysterious prophet Balaam could not help but speak the truth on this matter. "God is not a man, that He should lie; neither the son of man, that He should repent: hath He said, and shall He not do it? or hath He spoken, and shall He not make it good?" (Num 23:19).

Scripture anchors us to the purpose of God. Through Moses and the Prophets the Lord acquaints us with this Divine manner, namely that of purpose. When He purposed to make a great nation of Abraham, He did. When He purposed to deliver His people from Israel, He did. When He purposed the Babylonian captivity it came. When He purposed the end of that captivity, it came at precisely the right time. When He purposed to send His Son into the world, destroy the works of the devil, and open a way to Himself, it came to pass. He has purposed the end of the world, and it will come. He has purposed that all men will stand before Him to be judged, and they will. He has purposed that whoever comes to the Son will not be cast away, and they will not. God's "purpose" cannot be annulled by men!

IS THIS REALLY RELEVANT?

It may appear as though all of this has little relevance to our subject. However, this chapter is bathed in the language of Divine purpose! When God announces His intentions, and declares His purpose, we must set our hearts to anticipate its fulfillment. Ponder these expressions, all of which declare Divine intent. None of these things could occur independently of God. All of them rely upon His ability, and His alone.

Not a recap of history

This chapter is not a mere recap of history. It is not an academic record of what happened among men. This is the language of Divine purpose, and it recounts what God has done. Whether it was the cutting off of some of the Jewish branches, or the grafting in of some Gentile branches, it is God that has done it! None of these things could have happened without the Lord. All of them are, by their very proclamation, related to His purpose, which is woven throughout them. In this passage God is revealing how He is executing His purpose.

Not the suggestion of possibilities

This section of Scripture is not the expression of philosophy, or the suggestion of mere possibilities. If it were not for the “eternal purpose” of God, none of these things would have taken place, and none of the events would have been put into writing. In these words, we are beholding the working of the Lord!

SCRIPTURE ANCHORS US TO GOD’S PURPOSE

It is fundamental to a valid understanding that Scripture anchors us to the purpose of God. It all begins in Genesis when God announced WHY man was made (Gen 1:26-27). It continues by telling us WHY the curse of God came and man was expelled from the Garden (Gen 3:14-19). God told Noah WHY the world was going to be destroyed (Gen 6:13). He told Abraham WHY He called Him (Gen 12:1-3). It is God’s manner to not only purpose, but to announce that purpose.

When you read the Word of God with His purpose in mind, you gain such profit and understanding as is not otherwise possible. This is one of the great ministries of the Apostles and Prophets, who are related to the foundation upon which we are built (Eph 2:20). Their role was not simply to outline the duty of men. Rather, they opened up what God had intended and how it was fulfilled in Christ Jesus. It is the comprehension of that purpose that produces maturity in the believer. Thus it is written, “that you, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all the saints what is the width and length and depth

This is the language of Divine purpose, and it recounts what God has done. Whether it was the cutting off of some of the Jewish branches, or the grafting in of some Gentile branches, it is God that has done it!

and height; to know the love of Christ which passes knowledge”^{NKJV} (Eph 3:71-19).

Salvation in all of its aspects is “according to His purpose” (Rom 8:28). It is “the purpose of God” that stands (Rom 9:11), and is being brought to fulfillment by the Lord Himself. He “works all things according to the counsel of His will” (Eph 1:11).

Does Not Make Salvation Impersonal

Let no one imagine that all of this makes salvation impersonal. It does not exclude the desires of men, nor does it suggest they will be blessed independently of their involvement. The very fact that God has revealed these things confirms our involvement in them, else there would be no reason to make them known to us. Knowing of the Lord’s purpose and His intent to fulfill it, builds our faith and gives us reason to hope in Him.

A PURPOSE FOR ISRAEL

Before beginning the exposition of this section, it is necessary to confirm that God has revealed His intentions for Israel.

It is against the backdrop of this revelation that our text obtains significance.

God will gather the remnant.

“And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase” (Jer 23:3).

They will find the Lord.

“And I will be found of you, saith the LORD: and I will turn away your captivity, and I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive” (Jer 29:14).

God will bring them again.

“Behold, I will gather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely: and they shall be my people, and

I will be their God: and I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them: and I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me” (Jer 32:37-10).

They will come with weeping.

“Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither. They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn. Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock. For the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he” (Jer 31:8-11).

God will circumcise their hearts.

“That then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee. If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee: and the LORD thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers. And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live. And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee. And thou shalt return and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day” (Deut 30:3-8).

God will give them one heart and a new spirit. “Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel. And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence. And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh” (Ezek 11:17-19).

God will not hide His face from them any more. “When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies’ lands, and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations; then shall they know that I am the LORD their God, which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there. Neither will I hide my face any more from them; for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD” (Ezek 29:27-28).

Never again will they be pulled out of their land. “And I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the LORD thy God” (Amos 9:15-15).

God will make them a name and praise among the people of the earth. “Behold, at that time I will undo all that afflict thee: and I will save her that halteth, and gather her that was driven out; and I will get them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame. At that time will I bring you again, even in the time that I gather you: for I will make you a name and a praise among all people of the earth, when I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith the LORD” (Zeph 3:19-20).

HAVE THESE PROMISES BEEN ABROGATED?

Some teach that all of these promises

(and many more) have been abrogated because of the unbelief of Israel. However, if this is true, the thread of Divine promise has been broken, and we are thrust out upon the sea of uncertainty. The words of the Prophets have then failed. The promises of God have tumbled to the ground, and the door of doubt has been opened wide.

Under such a circumstance, we are faced with a God whose purposes are frustrated, even though He has revealed such a thing is not possible. Thus God would have been misrepresented to us by the holy prophets. The absurdity of such a postulate is revealed in the pivotal promise spoken by Peter at the threshold of the “day of salvation.” “Repent therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, so that times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord, and that He may send Jesus Christ, who was preached to you before, whom heaven must receive until the times of restoration of all things, which God has spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began” (Acts 3:19-21).

Those who affirm Israel is totally rejected have, by virtue of that affirmation, said the Jews are unrelated to “the restoration of all things.” Thus, they have carved out for themselves a gargantuan task they cannot fulfill. Yet, they are under obligation to prove what they say, for they have spoken for the Almighty. Our text will reveal how foolish such a postulate is. It will relate Israel to the revealed purpose of God, affirming that they will yet be delivered from their sin, to the glory of God.

HAVE THEY STUMBLERD IN ORDER TO FALL?

“^{11:11} I say then, have they stumbled that they should fall? Certainly not! But through their fall, to provoke them to jealousy, salvation has come to the Gentiles.”

The present condition of Israel has been vividly described.

It has not obtained what it sought for

- (11:7).
- Apart from “the elect” among them, “the rest were blinded” (11:7b).
- God has given them “the spirit of slumber” (11:8a).
- God has given them eyes that “they should not see” (11:8b).
- God has given them ears “that they should not hear” (11:8c).

- Their table has become “a snare and a trap to them” (11:9a).
- Their table has become a “stumbling block and a retribution to them” (11:9b).
- Their eyes are “darkened so they cannot see” (11:10a).
- Their backs “bowed down always” (11:10b).

To some, this is the language of utter hopelessness. And, indeed, if you take God and His purpose out of the picture, these words do paint a vivid portrait of hopelessness and futility. However, God is not out of the picture. What is more, the Spirit will show us there is Divine strategy in the present condition of Israel.

WE SHOULD NOT BE SURPRISED!

We should not be surprised by the line of reasoning to which we are now subjected – particularly we Gentiles. Were we not in a hopeless state? Ponder again what the Spirit said of the Gentile world.

- When they knew God, they did not glorify Him as God (1:21a).
- They were not thankful (1:21b).
- They became vain in their imaginations (1:21c).
- Their foolish hearts were darkened (1:21d).
- They became fools (1:22).
- They changed the glory of God (1:23).
- God gave them up to uncleanness (1:24).
- They changed the truth of God into a lie (1:25a).
- They worshiped and served the creature more than the Creator (1:25b).
- God gave them up to vile affections (1:26).
- Their women, in sodomy, conducted themselves “against nature” (1:27a).
- Their men burned in their lust toward one another, committing what is shameful (1:27b).
- They did not like to retain God in their knowledge (1:28a).
- God gave them over to a reprobate mind (1:28b).
- They became filled with all unrighteousness (1:29-31).
- They knew the judgment of God was against such things, but did them anyway, approving of others who did the same (1:32).

Is there a Christian person in the world who is willing to affirm the bleak condition of the Gentile world meant there was not salvation for them? Such a postulation is evidence of gross stupidity that even fools are unwilling embrace.

And if there was recovery for the Gentiles, for the depraved Gentiles, delivered over to a reprobate mind by God Himself, what spirit will move a person to affirm there can be no recovery for the Israelites, Paul’s kinsmen according to the flesh? Where did such a notion originate? What is the source of a doctrine that is a glaring contradiction of both Divine reasoning and revelation? How is it that any person would speak of the Israelites

We have before us a rather lengthy passage that builds a case for the recovery of Israel. It does not set before us mere possibilities, but a Divine purpose. All of this is presented within the context of the Gospel of Christ, justification by faith, reconciliation to God, and the ministry of the Holy Spirit to believers.

as a former people, yet would allow for the continuance of the Gentiles?

Why Am I Saying This?

It may appear as though I am expressing a pet peeve or riding a theological hobby horse. But that is not the case at all. We have before us a rather lengthy passage that builds a case for the recovery of Israel. It does not set before us mere possibilities, but a Divine purpose. All of this is presented within the context of the Gospel of Christ, justification by faith, reconciliation to God, and the ministry of the Holy Spirit to believers. It was introduced by a refreshing reminder that God foreknows, predestinates, calls, justifies, glorifies, and makes everything work together for the good of those who love Him and are called according to His purpose (8:28-30). We were reminded of the Divine choices of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. We were even given an explanation for the rise of wicked Pharaoh (9:9-17). An evident direction in reason is established.

It is not possible to have a more lofty context. It is all tied together with the Persons of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit – all of whom are depicted as intensely active. We cannot blot these things from our mind when we view this text, for it has been placed in the golden socket of those realities.

STUMBLING DOES NOT MEAN MADE EXTINCT

“I say then, have they stumbled that they should fall?” Other versions read, “Have they stumbled that they should fall?”^{KJV} “... they did not stumble so as to fall, did they?”^{NASB} “Did they stumble so as to fall beyond recovery?”^{NIV} “Have they stumbled in order that they might fall?”^{DARBY} “Was this stumbling to lead to their final downfall?”^{NJB}

Let it be clear, this is not a call for human speculation.

The Holy Spirit is not inviting the theologians and philosophers to provide their thoughts on the subject of Israel. Neither, indeed, are we remotely interested in human speculations on this subject. Let us rather hear what the Lord declares, throwing in the theological garbage can any human contradictions.

God has already told us Israel has stumbled: “they stumbled at that stumbling stone” (9:32). The question now posed is whether or not this is a permanent condition. Is Israel beyond recovery? Have they plummeted deeper than grace can reach? Have they moved beyond the perimeter of Promise? Will they ever be able to get up again?

Remember, the Spirit is speaking of the nation, not of individuals. He has already declared there has always been individuals among the nation who were accepted by God. They are the remnant, and there is still a remnant among the nation, even though the Israelites as a whole are blind and their back bowed. However, the presence of the remnant proves the people as a whole still are recognized by God.

Certain men will tell us that Israel has, in fact, fallen beyond recovery. They are no more a people, and their place has been filled by another – on a permanent basis. We will now put such affirmations to the test.

The Answer

“Certainly not!” Other versions read, “God forbid,”^{NASB} “May it never be!”^{KJV} “Not at all,”^{NIV} “By no means,”^{NRSV} “Far be the thought.”^{DOUAY} “In no way,”^{BBE} “Let it not be!”^{YLT} “Of course not!”^{NLT} “Out of the question!”^{NJB} Faith makes no provision for the conclusion that Israel has fallen beyond recovery! For those who have been justified by faith, God has not allowed place for the thought that Israel is no longer a people, or that there is no hope for their salvation. For that matter, the heavens will not support such a conclusion from any of the sons of men, be they reconciled to God or not.

When such a thought comes, cast it down with your spiritual weaponry, for it is nothing but an imagination – a thought that is exalting itself against the knowledge of God (2 Cor 10:4-5). If that appears to be too strong, keep in mind that the expression “God forbid!” or “Certainly not!” is infinitely stronger than my weak words.

The meaning of the statement before us is this:

Israel’s stumbling does not mean they are beyond recovery. It does not mean the promises made to them have been voided, or that they cannot be saved.

SALVATION TO THE GENTILES THROUGH THEIR FALL

“But through their fall, to provoke them to jealousy, salvation has come to the Gentiles.” Other versions read as follows. “But rather, through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles,”^{KJV} “But by their transgression salvation has come to the Gentiles.”^{NASB} “Because of their transgression, salvation has come to the Gentiles.”^{NIV} “But through their stumbling salvation has come to the Gentiles.”^{NRSV} “His purpose was to make His salvation available to the Gentiles.”^{NJB}

This is the language of Divine purpose. It is not the announcement of an alternative plan, or the reaction of God to Israel’s unexpected rejection of Christ. Here is an example where God has caused something remarkably good to happen out of something noticeably bad.

Gentile Acceptance

Salvation coming to the Gentiles is not generally appreciated among professed believers. It is too often taken for granted, as though it was only a small thing. This is not, however, the way those who are spiritually minded think.

It is true that the acceptance of the Gentiles was foretold by the holy prophets.

Israel’s stumbling does not mean they are beyond recovery. It does not mean the promises made to them have been voided, or that they cannot be saved.

- ❑ The uttermost part of the earth to be given to the Messiah (Psa 2:8).
- ❑ All the ends of the world will turn to the Lord, and all families of the nations worship before Him (Psa 22:27-31).
- ❑ All nations would flow into the Lord’s house (Isa 2:2-5).
- ❑ The Messiah would bring justice to the Gentiles (Isa 42:1).
- ❑ The Messiah would be a light to the Gentiles (Isa 42:6).
- ❑ The Gentiles would come to the light given to Israel (Isa 60:3).
- ❑ The forces of the Gentiles would come to the Lord (Isa 60:5,11).
- ❑ God’s glory would be declared to the Gentiles (Isa 66:19).
- ❑ The Gentiles would come to the Lord from the ends of the earth (Jer 16:19).

- ❑ God’s name would be great among the Gentiles (Mal 1:11).

The glory of these promises was generally unrecognized among the Jews. Even when they were delivered by the Prophets, there was a sort of vagueness about them that tended to make them obscure to those without faith.

Jesus alluded to the coming acceptance of the Gentiles. “And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd” (John 10:16). When the day of Pentecost was fully come, Peter referred to the Gentiles. “For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call” (Acts 2:39). Still, the matter was not seen with any degree of clarity.

Part of this was owing to the Lord’s words to His disciples, and others. When He first sent out the twelve He said, “Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel” (Matt 10:5-6). To a certain Gentile “woman of Canaan” who sought His help He said, “I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel,” referring to the Gentiles as “dogs” (Matt 15:24-26). These things appeared to further lead the disciples to look with disdain upon the Gentiles.

It was not until 10-12 years after the day of Pentecost that the first Gentiles were brought to salvation (Acts 10). At that time, the Lord wrought a special sign to Peter, showing him that the Gentiles would be received (Acts 10:9-48). Even then, the Gentile to whom Peter was sent (Cornelius) was commended to Peter in these words: “Cornelius the centurion, a just man, and one that feareth God, and of good report among all the nation of the Jews” (Acts 10:22). That event was accounted as a most remarkable working of the Lord. When the event was reported to the early leaders of the church, they responded, “Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life" (Acts 11:18). Later, when the church of Antioch gathered together to hear of the conversion of the Gentiles, Paul and Barnabas "rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles" (Acts 14:27). A significant event, indeed!

The Lord did not reveal by the prophets the means through which the Gentiles would be brought to Him. It remained for the Apostles, particularly Paul, to make that means known. Our text declares it in these words: "by their [the Jews] transgression salvation has come to the Gentiles."^{NASB}

It would be presumptuous, indeed, for the Gentiles to boast about finding the Lord, even treating the Jews as though they had been rejected. After all, the Gentiles were the rejected people all along. Salvation came to them only because the Jews had stumbled over the Stumbling Stone. Even then, the Gospel was first presented to the Jews, and that for several years.

It was in Antioch of Pisida that Paul and Barnabas "waxed bold" before a group of antagonistic Jews. "It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles" (Acts 13:46). That is a most vivid portrayal of the truth of this text.

THE REASON FOR GENTILES BEING SAVED

"To provoke them to jealousy." Other versions read "to make them jealous,"^{NASB} "to make Israel envious,"^{NIV} "to make Israel jealous,"^{NRSV} "that they may be emulous of them."^{DOUAY} "so that they might be moved to envy."^{BBE} "to arouse them to jealousy,"^{VLT} "and then the Jews would be jealous and want it for themselves."^{NLT} and "in order to stir them to envy."^{NJB}

The Holy Spirit is making a significant point: namely, that the Jews have not fallen so as never to be recovered. Thus He tells us why salvation was brought to the Gentiles. It is most humiliating to Gentile flesh, but it does need to be declared. The salvation of the Gentiles was not the real point. Rather, it was to make the Jews envious, so they would more earnestly desire the salvation of God!

This provocation was announced by Moses before he died, and before Israel entered the promised land. "They have moved Me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked Me to anger with their vanities: and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation" (Deut 32:21).

The idea behind the word "jealousy" is not related to anger or foolish conduct. Rather, it means to arouse to imitation, or to provoke them to seek the salvation that was offered to them, yet experienced by the Gentiles. Who but the Living God could entertain and implement such a lofty purpose!

RICHES THROUGH THEIR FALL

"¹² Now if their fall is riches for the world, and their failure riches for the Gentiles, how much more their fullness!" I am deeply impressed with the zealotry of the Holy Spirit in addressing this matter. It is as though the very heart of God is being opened to us, showing us Divine intentions that had not been clearly seen for centuries. Even to this very day, the things of which the Spirit is speaking are largely unknown within the professed church. We are being exposed to the wise and effective workings of the Lord – His "wonderful works." If you question whether or not God can bring good out of the evil things that are all about us, consider what glorious things have been produced by the fall of Israel – a fall that is not beyond recovery.

RICHES FOR THE WORLD

Remember, it is God who induced the fall of the Jews by placing a stumbling block before them, and making their table a snare and a trap. It is also God who has caused true riches to be "for the world" and "for the Gentiles." In this, God is working out His purpose.

The point that will now be made is that the salvation of the Gentiles does not depend upon the fall of the Jews. It is not that only one group can be saved: either Jews or Gentiles. The Spirit will show us that both Jews and Gentiles are to be saved.

The "riches" refer to the bounty of salvation. Jesus referred to these as the "true riches" (Lk 16:11), that is, riches that transfer into the world to come. These include the "riches of His goodness" (Rom 2:4), the "riches of His glory" (Rom 9:23), and "the riches of His grace" (Eph 1:7). There are the "unsearchable riches of Christ" (Eph 3:6), the "riches of the full assurance of understanding" (Col 2:2), and the richness of both mercy and faith (Eph 2:4; James 2:5).

When Israel fell, the treasures of salvation were opened to the Gentiles. The rich promises made to Israel became available to them, including the circumcision of the heart (Deut 30:6), the writing of God's laws upon the heart and mind (Jer 31:33), and the remembering of their sins no more (Jer 31:34). A new heart and a new spirit was offered to them (Ezek 36:26). They would all be taught by God (Isa 2:3), and with joy would draw water from the wells of salvation (Isa 12:3). Riches indeed!

THEIR FULLNESS

The Spirit rises even higher, bringing the believer into lofty realms upon the wings of faith. If Israel falling and losing the blessing brought salvation to the Gentiles, "how much more their fullness" will bring? Other versions read, "how much more will their fulfillment be!"^{NASB}

A source of richness

"How much greater riches will their fullness bring!"^{NIV} "How much more will their full inclusion mean!"^{NRSV} "How much greater will be the glory when they are made full?"^{BBE} "Think how much greater a blessing the world will share when the Jews finally accept it."^{NLT} "How much greater a gain will come when all is restored to them!"^{NJB}

"Their fulness" refers to a period of time when they will not be noted for having a "remnant" among a mass of unbelievers. When they are made full, the majority of them will turn to the Lord, not the minority as now.

The prophets spoke of such a marvelous time. "And I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto Me with their whole heart" (Jer 24:7). ". . . and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid" (Jer 30:10). "And I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them" (Jer 32:39).

Because this matter is going to be developed extensively in this passage, there is no need to here deal with the many prophecies relating to Israel's "fulness," or restoration to favor.

The Point

The wonderful point is that if the cutting off of all but a remnant brought Divine riches to the world, what will the inclusion, or re-grafting, of them bring! If God can bring riches from a curse, what will He bring from a blessing!

A Significant Point

Because of the antagonism of many toward this subject, it is necessary to say something more about it. Sound reason cannot be established upon absurdity! If Israel has been totally rejected, and has fallen beyond recovery, the Spirit would not speak in this manner.

It would be an insult to the Lord and a reproach to the very idea of inspiration to speak of the "fulness" of Israel if such a thing was not possible. This should be very evident.

THE MINISTRY OF PAUL

"¹³ For I speak to you Gentiles; inasmuch as I am an apostle to the Gentiles, I magnify my ministry, ¹⁴ if by any means I may provoke to jealousy those who are my flesh and God (John 8:28,38; 12:49).

It is fashionable in a generally free society to mention freedom of speech, and to create an arena in which a free

"I am speaking to you who are Gentiles."^{NASB} While this word is intended for all believers, and, like "all Scripture," is "profitable," it is particularly addressed to the Gentiles. That means this is something Gentile believers need to know. It is something that God raised up a special messenger to declare. It is not something to be withheld from "the Gentiles," and that is why it is spoken.

Rather than offering fleshly explanations for Israel, its condition, and its future Paul has woven the revelations given to him with the words of Moses and the Prophets. This is a message Gentiles need to hear, and all of the Word of God strongly supports that fact.

If you have been a Christian for any length of time, you know full well that there are untold multitudes of churches that have never been told these things. Some have even heard such things denied with enthusiasm, and those who declare them derided and maligned. If the saints are scheduled to "judge the world" (1 Cor 6:2), it seems fitting to me that the Apostle to the Gentiles would have a role in judging those pretentious preachers and teachers who have contradicted what he has so strongly affirmed in this passage.

save some of them." Paul is very deliberate in unfolding this rather sensitive and far-reaching subject. He is addressing this discourse to the Gentiles, and doing so with an acute awareness of the stewardship that had been assigned to him. He is not simply sharing his heart, although that is involved. Jesus did not call Paul into the apostleship because of any particular expertise he had. Neither, indeed, was He providing Paul with a forum in which he could put forth his personal convictions. That has never been the agenda through which the Lord of glory operates, and it is not now. Like Jesus Himself, the servant of God is only licensed to speak the words of exchange of thought can take place. While there be some measure of nobility in such efforts, they have nothing whatsoever to do with Christ's administration of the will of God. The "government" has been placed exclusively upon His shoulder (Isa 9:6-7), and He is executing His rule with strict regard for the purpose of God. The will of man does not drive this Divine government, or enter into the agenda by which it is governed.

I SPEAK TO YOU GENTILES

"For I speak to you Gentiles." Paul is not simply addressing a crowd. He is focusing in his remarks, saying things that are intended for the ears of Gentiles.

Rather than offering fleshly explanations for Israel, its condition, and its future Paul has woven the revelations given to him with the words of Moses and the Prophets. This is a message Gentiles need to hear, and all of the Word of God strongly supports that fact.

I AM AN APOSTLE OF THE GENTILES

Although Paul's Apostleship was not limited to the Gentiles, it was primarily to them. When directing Ananias to go to penitent Saul of Tarsus, Jesus said, "Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel" (Acts 9:15). When the Holy Spirit began to use Paul in the ministry, He instructed the early church, "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them" (Acts 13:2). Paul wrote to the Galatians, "when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by His grace, to reveal His Son in me, that I might preach Him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood" (Gal 1:15-16).

God revealed His hidden purpose to Paul – a purpose that had not been so revealed before (Eph 3:3-5). He was endowed with "the gift of grace" and the "effectual working" of His mighty power (Eph 3:7). He was to "preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ; and to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery" (Eph 3:8-9). Even heavenly "principalities and powers" would be shown the "manifold wisdom of God" as a result of his ministry (Eph 3:10).

The point to see here is that the words of our text are associated with that purpose. They are intended for the church, and are not to be despised. They relate to God's "eternal purpose" (Eph 3:11) and are of interest to angelic hosts.

How ministers of the Word can learn from Paul's example! Too often they are driven by the agendas of men, or even by personal preferences. No laborer in the vineyard of the Lord is allowed such liberty. If men are unwilling to preach what God wants said, they should immediately withdraw from the ministry.

MAGNIFYING HIS MINISTRY

"I magnify my ministry." Other versions read, "I magnify mine office,"^{KJV} "I make much of my ministry,"^{NIV} "I glorify my ministry,"^{NRSV} "I honor my ministry,"^{DOUAY} and "I lay great stress on this [ministry]."^{NLT} He ministered with an overwhelming sense of the One who had called and commissioned him. That is what drove him to say these words. Woe be to the person who tampers with them as though they were optional, or an opinion of Paul, or some inconsequential word. These are not sayings to be conveniently adapted to favored those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation" (Deut 32:21). The Lord would not do this, however, independently of means. He would not mysteriously move upon the people, or show them a vision of what was coming. Instead, He would move them to jealousy through the preaching of one of their own who was born again.

I do not question that God still uses means like this, provoking those who are confident they have a monopoly on the truth by unveiling great truths to, and marvelously changing, those whom they despise. We should seek grace to be alert to this Divine manner.

Those Who are of My Flesh

Some sophist might suppose Paul is speaking of awakening spiritual Jews. In order to dispel such a notion, the Apostle is very precise concerning whom he seeks to challenge. "Those who are my flesh" refers to all whose fleshly lineage could be traced back to Abraham. They were, as Paul earlier affirmed, his "kinsmen according to the flesh" (9:3).

Paul's Apostleship to the Gentiles was Divinely intended to awaken the Jews Godward. For those inclined to believe the Jews have been totally repudiated, this fact alone should dispel such inclinations. No person or group of persons who have been consigned to an irremediable state can be the target of awakening or of salvation.

Might Save Some of Them

We must not allow ourselves to equate "some" with the word "few." Already, the Lord has shown us that "some" can well refer to the majority, and to vast numbers (Rom 3:3; 1 Cor 10:7,8,9,10). Here, the word "some" does equate with "a remnant according to the election of grace" (11:6). It is a view that takes the entirety of the nation into account, not just a specific generation. Again, if Israel had been totally ejected, as was Sodom and Gomorrah, none of them could have been saved. Therefore, the very inspired intention of Paul confirms Israel has not been finally consigned to reprobacy.

As an Apostle, Paul is not at all like a President of the United States, or the King or Queen of England. In his ministry Paul did not magnify his person, but his "ministry" – "an Apostle to the Gentiles." He does not speak for the people, or a movement, but for God.

theological views, or positions that distinguish one believer from another.

As an Apostle, Paul is not at all like a President of the United States, or the King or Queen of England. In his ministry Paul did not magnify his person, but his "ministry" – "an Apostle to the Gentiles." He does not speak for the people, or a movement, but for God. In speaking as an Apostle, Paul brings glory to the One who placed him in that office.

PROVOKING TO JEALOUSY

"... if by any means I may provoke to jealousy . . ." Other versions read, "If by any means I may provoke to emulation,"^{KJV} and "in the hope that I may somehow arouse."^{NIV}

There is a marvelous strategy – preaching to one people to have a calculated effect upon another people! This was not a self-conceived strategy, but a revealed one. Around 1,500 years before Paul was called to the Apostleship, God revealed through Moses what He intended to do. "I will move them to jealousy with

Might Save

It is of more than passing interest that Paul refers to himself as saving “some of them.” This is a difficult saying for many, but there is no need for it to be. Frequently the Word of God refers to believers saving people.

- ❑ “For what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband?” (1 Cor 7:16a).
- ❑ “. . . or how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?” (1 Cor 7:16b).

- ❑ “To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some” (1 Cor 9:22).
- ❑ “Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee” (1 Tim 4:16).
- ❑ “Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins” (James 5:20).

- ❑ “And others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh” (Jude 23).

It is quite true that there is “One . . . who is able to save” (James 4:12). Yet, in Christ Jesus, the saved join together with God in that holy work. They not only participate in the Divine nature (2 Pet 1:4), but in the Divine work. Thus, they become “laborers together with God” in a most remarkable and refreshing way (1 Cor 3:9). God works in us, “both to will and to do of His good pleasure” (Phil 2:13).

RECONCILIATION THROUGH CASTING AWAY

“¹⁵ For if their being cast away is the reconciling of the world, what will their acceptance be but life from the dead?” Once again, the Spirit will reason with us concerning the glory of Israel’s restoration to the Lord. If their rejection of Christ brought a blessing to the world, what will their acceptance of Him bring? Of course, this type of reasoning is purposeless if there is no possibility of them being restored. If Israel is beyond recovery, it is utter foolishness to speak in this manner. In such a case, this would be mere fleshly wishfulness.

CAST AWAY

“For if their being cast away . . . ” Other versions read, “If their rejection,”^{NASB} “If their loss,”^{DOUAY} and “If their putting away.”^{BBE}

The rejection of the Jews is to be considered within the context of Christ Jesus and the Gospel. It was not until they “received not” (John 1:11) their own Savior that this rejection took place.

This is the rejection of which Hosea prophesied: “Then said God, Call his name Loammi: for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God” (Hos 1:9). The name “Lo-Ammi” means “not my people.”

This is now the seventh description of Israel’s judgment.

- ❑ They stumbled at the Stumbling stone (9:32).

- ❑ God gave them the spirit of slumber (11:8-9).
- ❑ Their table was made a snare and a stumbling block (11:9).
- ❑ Their eyes were darkened so they could not see (11:10).
- ❑ They fell (11:12a).
- ❑ They were diminished, or failed (11:12b).
- ❑ They were cast away (11:15).

Thus the Gospel, together with its advantages, was taken from among them. Although they were the exclusive custodians of the promises of salvation, now a believer among them would be the exception, not the rule. As a nation, they lost their advantages, and only a remnant among them now finds grace in the eyes of the Lord.

Being “cast away,” a veil is now upon their hearts when they read their own Scriptures (2 Cor 3:14; Acts 13:27). They are unable to make an association between Jesus of Nazareth and the very Scriptures that were given to prepare them to receive Him.

This veil will only be lifted when they turn to the Lord. “Nevertheless when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away” (2 Cor 3:16). Or, as Jesus said, “Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord” (Matt 23:39). No amount of academic discipline can bring an end to being “cast away.” Only turning to the Lord will accomplish that.

RECONCILING OF THE WORLD

“. . . is the reconciling of the world.” When the Jews were “cast away,” the great salvation of God was not abandoned. From that awful judgment came the reconciliation of the world!

The meaning of this passage is that ONLY after Israel rejected the “word of reconciliation” (2 Cor 5:19) was it preached to the rest of the world. For 1,500 years, messages from God had been confined to the Jewish world. But now, when, as a whole, they thrust the word of the Gospel from them, the “door of faith” was glorious opened to the Gentiles (Acts 14:27). Paul and Barnabas stated it well in Antioch of Pisidia. “It was necessary that the word of God should be spoken to you first; but since you reject it, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, behold, we turn to the Gentiles. For so the Lord has commanded us: ‘I have set you as a light to the Gentiles, That you should be for salvation to the ends of the earth’” (Acts 13:46-47). This is the precise truth expressed in the words of our text.

Now the Spirit will rise on the wings of Divine reason, confirming not only the possibility of Israel’s conversion, but what will occur when it takes place.

THEIR ACCEPTANCE

“. . . what will their acceptance be but life from the dead?” The KJV reads, “the receiving of them.” This refers to God’s acceptance, or receiving, of them in Christ Jesus. Note with care, the text does not suggest the mere possibility of Israel being received or accepted. Rather it speaks of it as a reality – something that is going to take place. Various versions refer to “their acceptance” in this way. “The receiving of them,”^{ASV} “their reception,”^{DARBY} “their coming back again,”^{BBE} “the reception,”^{VLT} “their re-acceptance.”^{NJB} There is not the slightest hint of ambiguity in those words – no suggestion that they cannot or will not be received. In fact, the Spirit bases His reasoning upon their return, something that would be absurd to the extreme if it was not possible.

Keep in mind, “their acceptance” is the same occasion as “their fulness” in the previous verse. From the standpoint of Israel it is “their fulness.” From the Divine view, it is “their acceptance.”

The Reasoning

If such remarkable benefits resulted from Israel’s rejection, what advantages will come when they are accepted? This is in keeping with the very nature of the Kingdom of God, which is to increase, expand, and become greater. It is said of the Lord Jesus, “Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end” (Isa 9:7). If that Kingdom expanded when Israel was rejected, what will happen when they are received?

LIFE FROM THE DEAD

“... but life from the dead.” Every major translation reads precisely the same way: “life from the dead.” The language is that of resurrection – living people coming from the region of the dead!

The meaning of the text is that a great spiritual resurrection will occur. This will not only be among the Israelites, but throughout the nations of the world. The great blessing came to the rest of the world when Israel was cast away, what magnitude of blessing will take place when they are again accepted. It will be like Ezekiel’s valley of dry bones (Ezek 37) and his vision of the waters (Ezek 47). There will be a global impact – it will be “life from the dead!”

THE FIRSTFRUIT AND THE LUMP

“16 For if the firstfruit is holy, the lump is also holy; and if the root is holy, so are the branches.” Here are two different symbols. The first is to a batch of dough, and the second to a tree. Other versions read, “And if the first piece of dough be holy, the lump is also; and if the root be holy, the branches are too,”^{NASB} “If the part of the dough offered as first fruits is holy, then the whole batch is holy; if the root is holy, so are the branches,”^{NIV} and “If the part of the dough offered as first fruits is holy, then the whole batch is holy; if the root is holy, so are the branches.”^{NIB} The New Living Translation offers an interpretation of the text that is based upon the context. “And since Abraham and the other patriarchs were holy, their children will also be holy. For if the roots of the tree are holy, the branches will be, too.”

THE PRINCIPLE OF FIRST FRUITS

The principle of “first fruits” was instituted under the Law (Ex 23:16,19; 34:22,26; Lev 2:12; 23:10,17,20; Num 18:26; Deut 26:10). The “first” of everything belonged to God, from mankind to the grains of the field.

The specific reference of this text is to the fifteen chapter of Numbers. Here the Lord gave procedures to be followed after the people entered into Canaan. Included in those procedures was the offering of the first fruits of the harvest of the land. It was something to be followed in all of their generations. “Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave offering in your generations” (Num 15:21).

The idea Divinely developed was that the offering of the first fruits sanctified the remainder, rendering it holy, acceptable to and blessed by God. This principle finds its highest fulfillment in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is called, “the first fruits of them that slept.” and “Christ the first fruits” (2 Cor 15:23). By virtue of that role, He sanctifies and makes acceptable all who are in Him.

THE FIRSTFRUIT AND THE ROOT

The “firstfruit” is taken from the Law, “the root” is taken from nature. Both of them stand for the whole. What is said of “the firstfruit” and the “root,” is also true of the “lump” and “the branches.” That is the point of the statement. Admittedly, the flesh will object to this form of reasoning, because it does not fit into the theological molds created by men. Yet, these are the words of the Spirit, and no person is wise or strong enough to resist them without impunity. This is “the mind of the Spirit” (Rom 8:27), and words “which the Holy Spirit teaches” (1 Cor 2:13).

Both the “first fruit” and the “root,” in this case, is Abraham specifically, and Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, generally. There is no question about them being “holy,” chosen and accepted by God – a point that has already been made (4:1-9,16; 9:7-10,13). They are the “first fruit” in the sense of being first of a special people who were accepted by God. They are the “root” in the sense of being progenitors, or forefathers, of the Israelites.

THE LUMP AND THE BRANCHES

“Lump” and “branches” are terms denoting the people coming from Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob – Paul’s “kinsmen according to the flesh” (9:3), or “Israelites” (9:4).

It is important to remember that “lump” and “branches” do not refer to individuals, but to the nation. The point being developed is that the nation of Israel has not been totally rejected. They have been, so to speak, sanctified by the “firstfruit” and “root” of their fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Later in this passage the Spirit will clearly affirm, “they are beloved for the fathers’ sakes” (11:26). We are not dealing with a theological novelty, but with an aspect of God’s eternal purpose.

“Holy,” in this case, does not mean that all of the Israelites have partaken of the righteousness of God. It does not mean they are personally devout and filled with faith. Nor, indeed, does it mean that God has reckoned righteousness to them, thereby making them "holy."

Here, "holy" means the nation is not completely cast away, for the sake of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom the promises were made. The situation is similar to an unbelieving spouse being sanctified by the believer: i.e., "For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean; but now are they holy" (1 Cor 7:14). "Holy" is also used in same sense as the children of such a divided home being "holy" because of the believer. This does not mean that the children are, by virtue of the believing spouse, personally pure and righteous before the Lord. Here the idea is that of legitimacy, not moral or spiritual purity. Even though one spouse is a believer and one an unbeliever, yet the marriage is legitimate, and the children resulting from it are legitimate, or not "bastards" (Deut 23:2).

The Point

The point is that God still recognizes the nation of Israel because of the fathers. The promises are still in place, and they are not without hope. These comments will suffice at this point. This very subject will be further developed in verses 28-31. It is essential, however, that we bring our minds into accord with this revelation.

ONLY SOME WERE BROKEN OFF

"17 And if some of the branches were broken off, and you, being a wild olive tree, were grafted in among them, and with them became a partaker of the root and fatness of the olive tree . . ."

Now the Spirit further elaborates on the reality of the situation, thereby liberating us from any tendency to speculate. Having affirmed that the nation still stands accepted before God because of the fathers, the Spirit now deals with the fact of unbelief, that still is dominant among them. He will show that the present condition of Israel is not a permanent state. Some of the people have been thrust aside, but not all of them.

SOME OF THE BRANCHES

If it is true that the Israelites as a whole have not been totally rejected, it ought to be clear that only "some" of them were removed, or "broken off." However, the Spirit does not simply leave it to the reader to draw that conclusion, even though it should be perfectly clear to the uncluttered heart. This point is too important for it to depend upon the conclusions of men.

There are at least two things being accomplished in this teaching.

First, the Gentiles are being humbled, so they will not imagine themselves to be better than the Jews, either individually or collectively. If The Gentiles are compared with the Jews as a whole, there is no comparison. The Jews outshine them in every respect, being a special people chosen unto the Lord.

Second, the Jews are offered hope, lest they be tempted to believe they are beyond recovery. They remain scattered and do not have their ancient glory. This could lead them to conclude what was revealed to the prophet Ezekiel. "Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts" (Ezek 37:11).

The Psalmist portrayed the nation of Israel as "a vine brought out of Egypt." The Lord "cast out the heathen," and "planted" it. It "made room" for it, causing it to "take deep root" and "fill the land." Yet, that very vine was eventually pillaged by the heathen, "burned with fire," and even "cut down." Still, the Psalmist prayed that God would "look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine; and the vineyard which thy right hand hath planted, and the branch

Having affirmed that the nation still stands accepted before God because of the fathers, the Spirit now deals with the fact of unbelief, that still is dominant among them. He will show that the present condition of Israel is not a permanent state.

You will recall that God revealed through Ezekiel that He would put His Spirit into Israel, causing them to live and to again come into their land (37:12-14). Our text is showing the redemptive side of that promise.

Some of the Branches Broken Off
"And if some of the branches were broken off . . ." This kind of reasoning should not take us by surprise. Jesus said the same thing takes place among those identified with Him (John that thou madest strong for thyself" (Psa 11:5-16). He knew, and we ought to know it better, that only "some of the branches were broken off!"

"Some" does not mean "few." To this point, "some" constitutes the majority, like the "some" who did not believe among the Israelites who were delivered from Egypt (Rom 3:3). Those people were like branches that "withered," and were thus "broken off" (Isa 27:11). The reason for stating it in this manner is to assure our hearts that the tree was not plucked up by the roots. The roots remain, as well as the tree. It is only “some of the branches” – original branches – that have been cut off.

A WILD OLIVE TREE

“ . . . and you, being a wild olive tree . . . ” This is the Divine view of the Gentiles: “a wild olive tree.” It speaks of a people who grew up without Divine attendance. No special attention was paid to the Gentile world. From this point of view, the nations experienced no favorable Divine intervention. While they remained under the government of God, and were often used by Him for sundry intentions of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world” (Eph 2:12b), and dead in “sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh” (Col 2:13). What a contrast with the Jews, “to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever” (Rom 9:4-5)!

GRAFTED IN AMONG THEM

And how is it that the Gentiles receive a blessing? Are they granted to have their own tree, so to speak? Does God replace the Israelites with them? Indeed not.

FATNESS

“ . . . and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree. ” Other versions read, “now share in the nourishing sap from the olive root,”^{NIV} “sharing in God’s rich nourishment of his special olive tree,”^{NLT} and “and were given a part with them in the root by which the olive-tree is made fertile.”^{BBE}

It is “the blessing of Abraham” that has “come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ, that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith” (Gal 3:14). The glorious Gospel we have received was first “preached unto Abraham” (Gal 3:8).

The splendid covenant in which we have found acceptance is the one that was made “with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah” (Heb 8:8).

The “root and fatness” is the blessedness of identity with God, and it is traced back to Abraham. Jesus, after all is the true promised “Seed” of Abraham. As it is written, “Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy Seed, which is Christ” (Gal 3:16).

In a sense, we have only taken the place of those who were “broken off.” Some versions convey this idea in their rendering of this verse. We were “were grafted in their place to share the rich root of the olive tree,”^{NRSV} and “were grafted in their place and have come to share in the rich root of the olive tree.”^{NAB} This thought will be more fully developed in the eighteenth verse.

Israel cannot, then, be totally rejected, for we that are in Christ Jesus have been taken from a wild olive tree and grafted in among them. What we are enjoying was committed to them, and belongs to them. That is still the case, and we are still “among them.”

God did not create a new thing for the Gentiles. The promises made to Abraham were not abandoned, nor was the Abrahamic tree that He planted uprooted. We have been added to them, placed among those faithful offspring of Abraham who were received and made righteous by God.

related to His “eternal purpose,” they were “wild,” developing outside of the circumference of Divine care.

Other versions read, “a wild olive shoot.” From the standpoint of language, this means a sprout, or shoot, from an uncultivated olive tree. Unlike the Jews, the Gentiles had no special revelation from God – no Divine cultivation. No prophets were given to them, no righteous judges, and no godly kings. No covenant was given to them or promised to them. They were a “wild olive tree.”

As a “wild olive tree,” the Gentiles were “afar off” (Acts 2:39), “sinners of the Gentiles” (Gal 2:15), and “aliens from the commonwealth of Israel” (Eph 2:12a). They were “strangers from the covenants

Instead, in Christ, the Gentiles are grafted into the Jewish tree – the cultivated olive tree. The Gentiles were “were grafted in among them.”

The “them,” in this case, is the “remnant” in particular, and the Israelites in general. The point is that we find acceptance “among them,” and not vice versa.

God did not create a new thing for the Gentiles. The promises made to Abraham were not abandoned, nor was the Abrahamic tree uprooted. We have been added to them, placed among those faithful offspring of Abraham who were received and made righteous by God.

PARTAKER OF THE ROOT AND DO NOT BOAST! DO NOT BOAST!

“¹⁸ . . . do not boast against the branches. But if you do boast, remember that you do not support the root, but the root supports you.” In a sense, those who declare Israel has been altogether cut off are boasting. They imagine that the Divine attention has now been turned to them, and away from Israel. The Spirit now corrects that perverse way of thinking, showing that frame of mind to be seriously flawed.

BOASTING AGAINST THE BRANCHES

“ . . . do not boast against the branches!” Other versions read, “do not be arrogant toward the branches,”^{NASB} “do not boast over those branches,”^{NIV} “Do not be uplifted in pride over the branches,”^{BBE} “But you must be careful not to brag about being grafted in to replace the branches that were broken off,”^{NLT} and “then it is not for you to consider yourself superior to the other branches.”^{NJB}

False approaches to religion tend to breed arrogance. Thus, Jesus told of a Pharisee who stood and prayed with himself, “God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men” (Lk 18:11). His religion made him pray in this manner. Earlier in Romans, our attention was drawn to those took confidence in being a Jew. “Behold, thou art called a Jew, and restest in the law, and makest thy boast of God” (Rom 2:17).

The religious world has always had to contend with those who boasted they were better than others. Such boasting, however, is brought to its most foolish and harmful level when Gentile Christians, as a group, consider themselves better than the Israelites who were broken off, or the ones who remain, with whom we have been made one in Christ (Eph 2:15). Rather than boast over them, we Gentiles should lament that any branches were broken off of their tree, and pray that they may be restored to Divine favor.

REMEMBER! REMEMBER!

“But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.” Other versions read, “You do not support the root, but the root supports you,”^{NIV} “It is not you that sustain the root, but the root that sustains you,”^{NJB} and “Remember, you are just a branch, not the root.”^{NLT}

There are some important things to remember about our situation as Gentiles.

- ❑ The Jews were the first to be the people of God.
- ❑ All of the Prophets and Apostles were Jews.
- ❑ The Lord Jesus Himself came from their stock.
- ❑ The first who were inducted into Christ were from Israel.

- ❑ The Gospel is God’s power unto salvation to “the Jew first” (Rom 1:16).
- ❑ Glory, honor, and peace are promised to every person who does good, “to the Jew first” (Rom 2:10).
- ❑ The Old Testament books, thirty-nine in number, were all written by Jews, and faithfully kept by them for our edification.
- ❑ Of the twenty-seven New Testament books, only two were written by a Gentile. Luke, who is understood to be a Greek, wrote the Gospel of Luke and the book of Acts. The rest of the books were written by Jews.

The truth of the matter is that the Jews have received no advantages from the Gentiles whatsoever. It has all been the other way around – the Gentiles have profited from them: from their Law, their Prophets, their promises, their covenant, And their Messiah.

From the standpoint of lineage, It is through Abraham that the whole world is being blessed! Indeed, the root is bearing us, and not we the root! If you trace Gentile origins, they are not good.

THINK AGAIN!

“¹⁹ You will say then, ‘Branches were broken off that I might be grafted in.’²⁰ Well said. Because of unbelief they were broken off, and you stand by faith. Do not be haughty, but fear.²¹ For if God did not spare the natural branches, He may not spare you either.”

Do not miss how tenacious the Holy Spirit is on this subject. He refuses to let it go, leaving conclusions in the hands of men. Whatever you may think of human reasoning and logic, it is not sufficient to come to the right conclusions and implications of things revealed.

YOU WILL SAY

“You will say then, ‘Branches were broken off that I might be grafted in.’” From this view, the removal of “some” of the branches was a means of making room for we Gentiles. The clear implication is that if “some of the branches” were not “broken off,” there would have been no room for we Gentiles.

However, this is not intended to be an insightful response, but one of Gentile arrogance. The supposition is that such a high value was placed upon the Gentiles, that place was made for them by removing some of the natural branches. Too, the assumption is that the removal of some of the branches was due to their vileness and unworthiness. This, then, became a source of pride to unthinking Gentile believers.

WELL SAID

“Well said . . .” Other versions read, “Quite right,”^{NASB} “Granted,”^{NIV} “This is so,”^{NAB} “Truly,”^{BBE} and “That is true.”^{NRSV} Although the observation of verse nineteen was technically true, it was not a thorough explanation of the situation, nor did it contribute to an excellent spirit among those espousing it. The Spirit will confirm the Gentiles had no merits that constituted them better than the Jews. Nor, indeed, were they to regard themselves as superior because they took the place of others.

BECAUSE OF UNBELIEF

“Because of unbelief they were broken off . . .” While some element of truth was found in the observation that some Jewish branches were removed that the Gentiles might be grafted into their tree, this was not an appropriate way to think. It was not conducive to godliness, and diminished the value of the grace of God.

Thus we are reminded that the Jewish branches were broken off “because of unbelief,” not because of a cold and calculating purpose. This truth is made abundantly clear in Scripture.

- ❑ “Some did not believe” (Rom 3:3).
- ❑ “Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles” (Acts 13:46).
- ❑ “And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles” (Acts 18:6).
- ❑ “And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not? So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief” (Heb 3:18-19).
- ❑ “Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief” (Heb 4:6).
- ❑ “Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief” (Heb 4:11).

It is the way of God to never ignore or honor unbelief! We have the Jews as a premier example of this, and it is to be duly noted. Had the branches that were broken off not been unbelieving, they would not have been broken off, Gentiles or not!

YOU STAND BY FAITH

“ . . . you stand by faith.” Here is a facet of the truth that the Gentile church has not proclaimed with any degree of acceptability. There are vast numbers of professed believers who rarely entertain such a thought. “You stand by faith!” The idea is that our standing before God is in strict accordance with our faith. We are not accepted because we attend the right church, or hold to the right beliefs. There is certainly nothing wrong with those things, but they are not in the same category as faith. There is no salvation part from faith – present faith! There can be no experience of grace apart from faith, for salvation is ever “by grace through faith” (Eph 2:8). There is no point in salvation where this word becomes obsolete, “without faith it is impossible to please him” (Heb 11:6).

Standing by faith is another way of saying, “The just shall live by faith” (Rom

We are living in a religious culture that actually makes it easy to become “haughty,” presumptuous, or arrogant. Finely tuned theologies and systems of religious thought are being perpetrated that do not require faith in God.

1:17; Gal 3:11; Heb 10:39). Our safety is not in our position, but our faith! It is not in what we have done in the past, but in our faith!

FEAR, DO NOT BE HAUGHTY

“Do not be haughty, but fear.” And why is it that those who are aligned with Christ should shun haughtiness and embrace fear? For some, this is too hard. We are living in a religious culture that actually makes it easy to become “haughty,” presumptuous, or arrogant. Finely tuned theologies and systems of religious thought are being perpetrated that do not require faith in God. It is enough to embrace these views, and the people who do so are taught they are safe because of it. Some imagine if they have the right “church” name, call themselves by a technically correct term, and do things by the rules they think are in place, they can stand before God. But all of this is a total misrepresentation. There is not a spark of truth in it. Our ONLY confidence is in the Lord. That is something of what it means to “stand by faith.” It is to “live by faith,” shaping our entire lives by unseen things, exceeding great and precious promises, and the joyful expectation of our Lord’s return. It is to be governed by unseen realities.

Honest people know these things are not common in the churches. But they are absolutely essential.

HE MAY NOT SPARE YOU

“For if God did not spare the natural branches, He may not spare you either.” This is a particularly relevant word to those who strenuously object to any thought of God again having mercy upon the Israelites, Paul’s “kinsmen according to the flesh.”

Who is the person in all of Christendom willing to affirm things are anything near ideal in the Gentile church? Where can a soul be found that will say that faith is a dominating trait in the churches? The plague of unbelief is streaming through the churches like a defiling watercourse. Some are caught in the stream unwillingly, and yet are overwhelmed by institutional propaganda.

Here the solemn warning of the Holy Spirit! “For if God did not spare the natural branches, He will not spare you either.”^{NIV} By this the Spirit means God will not spare us if unbelief is found in us! If God were tolerate an unbelieving Gentile church, He would have to apologize to the Jews who were cast off because of their unbelief! He would, in such a case, be proved a respector of persons.

There are some remarkable likenesses to unbelieving Israel that are found in the Gentile church. The irony of the situation is that these conditions are regularly acknowledged by preachers and teachers who say “we are just like Israel.”

Not going into the promised land. When Israel did not go into the promised land as directed, they were excluded from it (Num 20:24). There are also exceeding great and precious promises given to those in Christ Jesus. They involve going on to perfection (Heb 6:1-8), seeking the things that are above (Col 3:1-3), and pressing toward the mark (Phil 3:14-15). Solemnly we are told to “Fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life” (1 Tim 6:12). Do not imagine for a fleeting moment that these admonitions can be ignored and acceptance with God still be maintained. Some of Israel’s branches were cut off because of unbelief. Unbelief in the church will result in the same judgment! “For if God did not spare the natural branches, He will not spare you either.”^{NIV}

Coveting the goods of Jericho.

When Israel entered the promised land, they were forbidden to take any of the “cursed” things for themselves (Josh 6:17-18). Achan, who had successfully passed through the wilderness and arrived in the promised land, chose to disobey that Divine injunction. He coveted and took a Babylonish garment, two hundred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold. As a result, he not only lost his own life, but the life of all of his family (Josh 7:24-26). God has equally warned those in Christ to take care not to become meshed with this present evil world (Col 3:3; 1 John 2:15-17; 1 Pet 2:11). Those who ignore those warnings will be judged just as surely as Achan was judged. “For if God did not spare the natural branches, He will not spare you either.”^{NIV}

Despising the bread sent from heaven.

When Israel was led through the wilderness for forty years, God gave them “bread from heaven” (Ex 16:4; Neh 9:15; John 6:31). It was good food, and readily adapted for their journey through the wilderness. It was both adequate and consistent. Yet, Israel was discontent with the Divinely-given diet. They cried out, “our soul loatheth this light bread” (Num 21:6). As a result of their discontent, God sent venomous snakes among them, and “much people of Israel died” (Num 21:6). The Lord has also provided a good spiritual diet for those who are in Christ Jesus. It consists of “all things that pertain unto life and godliness” (2 Pet 1:3). Those who refuse this diet for the inner man in preference of the wisdom of this world will not escape the judgment of the Lord. “For if God did not spare the natural branches, He will not spare you either.”^{NIV}

Wanting a king like other nations. There came a time when Israel rejected the leading of the Lord, choosing to emulate the heathen nations about them. They made a petition of one of the greatest of all judges, Samuel. “Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now make us a king to judge us like all the nations” (1 Sam 8:5). While the saying greatly displeased Samuel, and the Lord as well, He instructed Samuel, “Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them” (1 Sam 8:7). Their choice took a heavy toll upon them. The new king would take their sons and daughters, and appoint them for himself, to serve his own interests. He would cause them “to plow his ground and reap his harvest, and some to make his weapons of war and equipment for his chariots. He will take your daughters to be perfumers, cooks, and bakers. And he will take the best of your fields, your vineyards, and your olive groves, and give them to his servants” (1 Sam 8:12-18). Heavy taxes would be leveled against them, and they would have less than they had before. Likewise, there are those within the Gentile church who have preferred the educators, psychiatrists, organizers, etc., to the Lord Jesus Christ. They have chosen to be led by mere men rather than by God and those whom He has placed in the church.

Such choices will not go unnoticed by the Lord of glory. “For if God did not spare the natural branches, He will not spare you either.”^{NIV}

Any representation of God and His love that has Him tolerant of unbelief, the failure to appropriate His promises, and sinful indulgence among His people, is nothing less than a boast against the branches. If we learn anything from Israel, it is surely that God will not ignore unbelief and indolence in His people.

SOBER REFLECTIONS

When the condition of the church is considered with the natural olive branches who were cut off in mind, it has a significant impact upon the heart and mind. God has not changed. He is no more tolerant of unbelief today than He was when Israel refused to enter the promised land. The Gospel has not mellowed God, so to speak. Rather, it has opened the door of faith to the Gentiles, allowing them to enter into favor with God “by grace through faith.”

Gentiles believers do well not to boast against the branches. They also do well to zealously avoid any doctrines that create comfort in a state of alienation. Some have taken upon themselves to construct doctrines that diminish the enormity of sin and unbelief. They speak of an “unconditional love,” the impossibility of being rejected once you are accepted, and God keeping people independently of their faith. Still others see no need for the love of the people of God, and seeking things above.

These are all views that boast against the branches, supposing that God will treat unbelief with favor and longsuffering. But that is not so.

GOODNESS AND SEVERITY CONSIDERED

“²² Therefore consider the goodness and severity of God: on those who fell, severity; but toward you, goodness, if you continue in His goodness. Otherwise you also will be cut off.” Rarely will you hear a challenge for Christians to consider these things – “the goodness AND severity of God.” These are two facets of the Divine character. Neither of them will ever become obsolete. No covenant of God has voided either of them.

False religions present God as either good or severe, but never as both. This reflects a marked tendency in men to distort the concept of God. This disposition even exists in the Christian community where people are often prone to forget or minimize one of these Divine characteristics. This can be readily seen in the hackneyed expressions “modernist” and “legalist.” The “modernist,” as ordinarily understood, finds it difficult to consider “the severity of God.” The “legalist” has trouble beholding “the goodness of God.” However, if our thoughts are to be acceptable to God, we must learn to dwell upon both of these traits, pondering them in faith.

This text will show us that neither God’s “goodness” nor His “severity” are arbitrary, or disassociated from men’s response to Him. While God’s primary motivation is His will, He cannot be moved by that will to be good toward those who choose to ignore that goodness. Nor, indeed, can His will move Him to be severe toward those were cut off because they did not believe. They are the ones who stumbled at the stumbling stone. Consider God’s reaction to them.

- They could not enter the promised land (Psa 95:10-11).
- They died in the wilderness (Heb 3:17).
- He abhorred His own inheritance (Psa 106:40).
- He gave them up to “their own heart’s lusts” (Psa 81:12).
- He “gave them up to worship the host of heaven” (Acts 7:42).
- “God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear” (Rom 11:8).

Gentiles are urged to ponder the goodness of God toward us. On the moral scale, the Gentile world had descended very low, being marked by sins and attitudes of the worst sort. Yet, God was good toward us. Ponder that goodness.

- We obtained righteousness even though we did not seek for it (Rom 9:30).
- God was found of us, even though we did not seek for Him (Rom 10:20a).
- God was manifested to us even though we did not ask (Rom 10:20b).
- We were granted repentance unto life (Acts 11:18).
- Jesus brought Divine favorable judgment to us (Isa 42:1).
- God gave Jesus as a light to us (Isa 42:6; 49:6).
- God lifted up His hand of acceptance to us (Isa 49:22).
- We were made “fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God” (Eph 2:19).
- Though from a wild olive tree, we were grafted into the cultured olive tree of Israel (Rom 11:17)
- Although to Israel belongs “the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came,” yet we have been made partakers (Rom 9:4-5).

How good it is to ponder “the goodness of God!” It is not some abstract trait that we are considering, but something that has been experienced by the Gentile world through Christ Jesus.

PONDER THE POSSIBILITY

“... if thou continue in His goodness otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.” The Spirit is careful not to leave the door open for the entrance of presumption. The fact that this dreadful sin – the sin of presumption (Psa 19:13) – is so dominant in the Gentile church is not due to any neglect on the part of the Holy Spirit. Rather, it is the outgrowth of corrupted theology that has given human explanation the precedence over Divine articulation. The fact that the things we are considering are generally unknown among professed believers is a remarkable commentary on the conduct of their

Think about the severity of God – think about it long enough, and with understanding enough, that you will do anything and everything to avoid it!

who willingly accept His goodness. This is fundamental to sound theology, as will be shown.

The word “consider” is not a cursory word. It does not refer to surface or shallow thinking. This involves extended thought, where the heart and mind dwell on a matter, seeking to understand it. The KJV and NASB use the word “behold.” Other versions use the word “see,”^{BBE} “notice,”^{NLT} and “remember.”^{NJB}

Coming from the Greek word ἵδω, this word means to perceive, become aware of, or come to know something. It is a term denoting understanding and perception. The Spirit is not merely telling us to look at God’s goodness and severity, but to ponder them until we gain some understanding of them – understanding that will assist us in avoiding God’s severity and obtaining His goodness.

CONSIDER THE SEVERITY OF GOD

“... on them which fell, severity.” Those who “fell” are the branches that

- Their own table was “made a snare, and a trap, and a stumbling block, and a recompense unto them” (Rom 11:9).
- Their eyes were “darkened” and their backs bowed down with weighty burdens (Rom 11:10).
- Their house was left desolate (Matt 23:38).
- He has allowed Jerusalem to be “trodden down of the Gentiles” (Lk 21:24).

None of these judgments were arbitrary. There was a cause for them all – a cause that was induced by human unbelief, indifference, and even obstinance. This is a revelation of God’s reaction to unbelief and rejection. No amount of fanciful theology can change that reaction. Think about the severity of God – think about it long enough, and with understanding enough, that you will do anything and everything to avoid it!

CONSIDER THE GOODNESS OF GOD

“... but toward thee, goodness.” We shepherds. It is inexcusable!

Continuance in the goodness of God is NOT automatic! If it was, such a word would never have been spoken. God is not good to people regardless of what they do! If He was, the unbelieving Israelites would have been allowed to enter into Canaan, and Jerusalem never would have been given over to the Gentiles. It does not require unusual insight to comprehend this.

There is a circumference within which men experience God's goodness, and they are to remain in it. This is expressed in a variety of ways in Scripture. All of these are addressed to those who are in Christ.

- ❑ "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live" (Rom 8:13).
- ❑ "And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of His flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreprouvable in His sight: If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel" (Col 1:21-23).
- ❑ "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth" (Col 3:1-2).
- ❑ "While it is said, To day if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation" (Heb 3:15).
- ❑ "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall" (2 Pet 1:10).
- ❑ "And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Gal 6:9).

- ❑ "If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him: if we deny Him, He also will deny us" (2 Tim 2:12).
- ❑ "But Christ as a Son over His own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end" (Heb 3:6).
- ❑ "For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end" (Heb 3:14).
- ❑ "But if we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).
- ❑ "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in My love; even as I have kept My Father's commandments, and abide in His love" (John 15:10).

What kind of theology would permit "Christians" to ignore these admonitions and still remain in God's goodness? Such notions only come by failing to consider the "severity of God," demonstrated extensively in Israel, His chosen people.

These requirements are not to be shouted from Sinai, or approached as harsh and condemning Law. They declare how we may remain in God's goodness, not provoking Him, but bringing pleasure to Him (Col 1:10; 3:20; 1 Thess 2:4; 1 John 3:22; 1 Cor 7:32).

Otherwise . . .

"... otherwise thou also shalt be cut off." Consider the unavoidable result of not remaining in God's goodness! Just like the stubborn Israelites, you will be "cut off." It appears to me that the gravity of this text has not registered on the Christian community. Provocative and displeasing conduct is not at all uncommon among those wearing the name of Christ. This unbecoming conduct is not limited to immoral involvements. That is too obvious. Before a Christian can become immoral, a great deal of neglect and hardness of heart must take place.

The failure of professed believers to seek the things that are above, add the virtues of grace to their lives, and fight the good fight of faith, is evidence they are about to be cut off! No person can remain in God's goodness who does not "go on to perfection." It simply is not possible to occupy the place where His goodness is experienced if we neglect His salvation, do not keep the rejoicing of the hope, or are not steadfast unto the end. Those who suggest such a thing is possible have simply lied, doing great damage to the people of God. If the spiritual condition of the modern church can be truthfully justified, the first thirty-nine books of our Bible can be ripped out and thrown away. In such a case, they would have no message for us. The irony of the situation is that some forms of stunted theology have actually done this, saying that God has obviated the first thirty-nine books of the Bible. The postulate is too foolish to dignify by further discussion.

ARE THESE WORDS TOO HARSH?

Admittedly, these are hard words. They sound unusually harsh to those accustomed to words of fleshly culture, but spiritual depravity. Should your mind imagine that what I have said is too coarse or severe, consider the following.

- ❑ How serious is it to be "cut off?"
- ❑ How serious is it to be deprived of God's goodness?
- ❑ What is worth being subjected to the severity of God?
- ❑ Why does the Spirit issue such a stern warning if the matter is really inconsequential?

No person of sound spiritual mind will object to stern warnings that come from heaven! They will become an incentive to press relentlessly toward the goal, refusing to be anchored to this world.

GOD IS ABLE

"²³ And they also, if they do not continue in unbelief, will be grafted in, for God is able to graft them in again." Here is a most wonderful affirmation concerning Israel. Again, the words are meaningless and pointless if Israel has been totally cut off, so as never again to be restored. Just as surely as God is always severe toward those who do not believe, just that surely He is good toward those who do believe!

Those who suggest that Israel has been irremediably cut off have affirmed that God has consigned them to reprobacy, from which they cannot recover. Were God capable of dealing with masses of people in this manner, the Gentile world would never have been offered salvation.

The point is that the present condition of Israel is precisely the same as that of we Gentiles prior to coming into Christ. They are dominated by unbelief, and so were we!

THEY ALSO

By saying “they also,” the Spirit means that God will honor faith in the Jews just as surely as He did in us. Both Jew and Gentile are received on the same basis – faith. Both Jew and Gentile are rejected on the same basis – unbelief!

IF THEY DO NOT CONTINUE IN UNBELIEF

The “unbelief” in the Israelites relates to their rejection of Jesus Christ. Of all of the benefits that were given to them, the greatest was their “time of visitation,” when Jesus “came unto His own” (Lk 19:44; John 1:11). As long as they “continue in unbelief,” the “severity of God” will be toward them.

Yet, in this expression, the Spirit pushes open the door of hope, allowing for Paul’s prayer for Israel, “that they might be saved” (10:1). It is important to remember the people as a whole are under consideration, not merely individuals. The Spirit has already established that God has never rendered it impossible for individuals within Israel to be saved, Paul himself being a chief example. Our text is speaking of the nation as a whole. The Spirit suggests it is quite possible for them NOT to “continue in unbelief.” Why would any man dare to say this was not possible?

WILL BE GRAFTED IN

As a people, if they do not continue on in unbelief, they will be placed again into the tree that grows from the root of Abraham. They will again partake of the root and fatness of their own olive tree.

Some will imagine that because the re-grafting of Israel is represented as conditional, that it is not a promise – only a possibility. But this is a total misrepresentation of the case. The Spirit will show this is a promise. What He is revealing here is that sound reason fully supports the Divine intention. The ONLY thing that presently excludes Israel from the blessing is their unbelief. Of course, that is the only thing that excludes any one from it!

The Prophets often spoke of this grafting, using different language that referred to Israel’s restoration to favor. The new covenant He would make “with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah” would involve a change of nature, fellowship with God, and the remission of sin (Jer 31:31-34) – all aspects of being grafted into the natural olive tree. They would receive a “new heart and a new spirit,” the “stony heart” would be removed from them, God’s Spirit would be put within them, and they would walk in His ways (Ezek 36:26-27) – all aspects of being grafted into the natural olive tree.

Even Moses promised Israel, “the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live” (Deut 30:6) – all aspects of being grafted into the natural olive tree.

The possibility affirmed in our text is given against the backdrop of the promises of God. If this is not the case, the statements are mere philosophy and conjecture, something in which God does not indulge, particularly when speaking of His great salvation.

GOD IS ABLE!

“... for God is able to graft them in again.” The Spirit immediately points us to the power of God, for there is no other way that Israel can be again grafted into their own tree.

Not Theorizing

The Spirit never points us to the ability of God unless what is said can be accomplished. He never theorizes about Divine ability! God is able to make the believer with a weak conscience “to stand” (Rom 14:4). He is “able” to make grace so abundant to us that we will always have sufficient resources, and be able to “abound unto every good work” (2 Cor 9:8). He is “able to subdue all things unto Himself” (Phil 3:21). Ponder how He is “able to keep” what you have committed unto Him until the last day (2 Tim 1:12), or how the Lord Jesus is “able to succor them that are tempted” (Heb 2:18). Think how Jesus is “able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him” (Heb 7:25), and how God “is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy” (Jude 24).

Is there anything about those affirmations that suggest they will NOT take place, or that we cannot rely upon them being fulfilled? Indeed not! And, that is the category of Divine affirmations into which the grafting in of Israel is placed! The ability of God is never introduced for mere speculation, but to induce both faith and hope.

The grafting in of Israel does require the power of God. It certainly cannot be accomplished by the fervent desires of godly men, else Paul’s own desire would have brought it to pass. This is the kind of power it takes to raise up a valley of scattered with bleached bones, making them a great army (Ezek 37). It is the kind of power that Jesus employs when He speaks, raising people from death in trespasses and sins (John 5:25-27).

The statement, “God is able to graft them in again,” forbids men to imagine that He will not do it! Nowhere are we urged to trust in a God who can do something, but will not! God’s ability does not violate His nature or His promises. It is always employed to accomplish His purposes. This should be evident enough, without need of further discussion.

DIVINE GRAFTING

“²⁴ For if you were cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and were grafted contrary to nature into a cultivated olive tree, how much more will these, who are natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree?” This is a section of Divine reasoning that reveals the absolute reasonableness of Israel being restored to favor. When believed, it will produce humility among the Gentiles, and hope among the Israelites.

WILD BY NATURE

Unlike the Israelites who were “cut off,” or “cast away,” the Gentiles were not withered branches lying on the ground—branches coming from a good tree. Rather, we were growing on a rejected tree, one which was “wild by nature.” It was an uncultivated tree, not not being tended by the God of heaven. It had neither the Law nor the prophets, and received neither promises nor blessings from the Lord of glory. This tree was an “corrupt tree,” and could produce no “good fruit” (Lk 6:43). Unlike Israel, it was not the result of Divine promise.

Those on this tree are described as “sinners of the Gentiles” (Gal 2:15), “children of wrath” (Eph 2:3), and “having no hope, and without God in the world” (Eph 2:12). How likely is it that such people could be removed from their corrupt tree and grafted into one blessed and cultivated by God? Those who love to think of possibilities from a human point of view should ponder this! As Gentiles, what person or system could have changed our condition?

Yet, the great God of heaven cut us out of the “olive tree which is wild by nature,” and grafted us into “a cultivated olive tree.” What is more, this was done “contrary to nature,” wholly unsupported by any natural laws, whether of probability or reason. You cannot account for the acceptance of the Gentiles apart from God Himself! He did it independently of any natural process, and in stark contradiction of anything and everything having to do with temporality.

In view of this, the Gentile church should be in a state of constant praise, moving on to perfection, and bringing forth fruit to God! I will go so far as to say that where the truth of this text is perceived, those things will take place. Where the fruit of praise and growth are not found, read, “He will be far more eager to graft the Jews back into the tree where they belong,”^{NLT} and “how much easier will it be for them, the branches that naturally belong there, to be grafted on to the olive tree which is their own.”^{NJB}

Speaking as a man, it is more likely for Israel to be restored than for Gentiles to be saved at all. There is a greater likelihood of Israel being saved than of the Gentile world! From the standpoint of possibility, it is easier for God to restore Israel than to open the door of faith to the Gentiles. From the standpoint of this truth is not being perceived. I know of no exceptions to this observation. The existence of lethargy and ignorance within the Gentile church is a sin of the greatest magnitude. In my judgment, it is not possible to overstate its seriousness.

Speaking as a man, it is more likely for Israel to be restored than for Gentiles to be saved at all. There is a greater likelihood of Israel being saved than of the Gentile world! From the standpoint of possibility, it is easier for God to restore Israel than to open the door of faith to the Gentiles.

NATURAL BRANCHES

“... how much more will these, who are natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree?” The possibility of the Gentiles being saved confirms the possibility of Israel being saved! If the promises of the Gentiles being saved were fulfilled, “much more” the promises of Israel being restored will be fulfilled!

“How much more!” Other versions probability, it is more likely that He will do so.

That is the reasoning of this verse, and it is absolutely impregnable! It demolishes bastions of thought that deny the restoration of the Jews, showing them to be the products of unbelief and spiritual insanity. To say Israel has been cut off without remedy is to deny both the power and promises of God. I cannot begin to imagine how God will regard those who have perpetrated doctrines that exclude, and even deny, that He will recover His people Israel. He has said so much on this matter, that the mouths of such men must be stopped. They reproach God, Jesus, the Prophets and the Apostles.

BLINDNESS IN PART

“²⁵ For I do not desire, brethren, that you should be ignorant of this mystery, lest you should be wise in your own opinion, that blindness in part has happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in.²⁶ And so all Israel will be saved, as it is written: ‘The Deliverer will come out of Zion, And He will turn away ungodliness from Jacob;’²⁷ For this is My covenant with them, When I take away their sins.’”

AVOIDING IGNORANCE

Other versions read, “I do not want you, brethren, to be uninformed of this mystery,”^{NASB} and, “I want you to be quite certain, brothers, of this mystery.”^{NJB}

In the Kingdom of God, ignorance concerning the revealed will of God is never justified. This is particularly true in the matter of His dealings with the people of Israel. No man of God will be content when ignorance dominates the people of God on this matter. Understand that Paul is speaking through the inspiration of God, being constrained by His fellowship with Christ, and motivated by His knowledge of God. This being the case, it is proper to say God does not want us ignorant of the matter being considered, else He would not have moved Paul to write about it.

WISE IN YOUR OWN OPINION

The reason for dispelling any ignorance on this matter of Israel is to deliver men from the vanity of human opinion: “lest you should be wise in your own opinion,” or “wise in your own estimation,”^{NASB} or “to save you from congratulating yourselves on your own good sense.”^{NJB} While religious men tend to vaunt human wisdom, there is no place for it in the Kingdom of God. It is something from which we must be delivered at all cost!

Here the Lord seeks to stop the Gentiles from glorying over the Jews. It is also designed to awaken those who were slumbering in the full light of the Gospel, imagining they were excepted by God while committing the very sins that brought Israel’s present condition upon them.

BLINDNESS IN PART

“... blindness in part has happened to Israel.” Other versions read, “a partial hardening has happened to Israel,”^{NASB} “Israel has experienced a hardening in part,”^{NIV} “a hardening has come upon part of Israel,”^{NRSV} and “part of Israel had its mind hardened.”^{NJB} I cannot conceive of a statement being any clearer! All of Israel has not been blinded, or hardened, but only a part of it! All of them

The thought occurs to me that some might not believe God can fix, or appoint, times and epochs. This trait of God, however, has been clearly revealed, so there is no justification for doubting it.

have not been cut off, but only a part of them. The whole nation has not been rejected, but only a part of it.

Let it be clear that God is not speaking here of, what is called, “spiritual Israel,” a term that is not used in any standard version of Scripture. Our text is still dealing with the descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob – Paul’s “kinsmen according to the flesh.”

The idea is not that their blindness was partial, but that the number blinded was partial. All of the nation was not blinded. Of course, that indicates they are, in fact, still a nation, else this statement would make no sense. There is still, in God’s eyes, a body of people called Israel. He will now show that He has a purpose for them that will not be frustrated.

THE FULLNESS OF THE GENTILES

The partial blindness that has “happened to Israel” is only “UNTIL” a Divinely appointed event or time. That point is “the fullness of the Gentiles,” a most intriguing term. Other versions read, “until the full number of the Gentiles has come in,”^{NIV/NRSV/NJB/NAB} and “until the complete number of Gentiles comes to Christ.”^{NLT}

The word “fullness” is slightly ambiguous, which seems to me to be intentional. It denotes a filling up, completeness, or sum total. It refers to the accession of the Gentiles into the body of Christ – being “added to the church,” so to speak (Acts 2:47). I do not understand this to mean that God has determined a fixed numbers of Gentiles to be added to the church. Rather, He has appointed a juncture in time when Gentiles coming to Him will not be the principle activity. At that point in time, (for “times” or “epochs” belong to God alone, Acts 1:7) Israel’s blindness will end. The God who imposed blindness upon them can cause it to cease. That is the point of this text.

Not A Strange Thought

The thought occurs to me that some might not believe God can fix, or appoint, times and epochs. This trait of God, however, has been clearly revealed, so there is no justification for doubting it. “It is not for you to know times or epochs which the Father has fixed by His own authority”^{NASB} (Acts 1:7). Speaking of humanity, the Spirit said through Paul, “He determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live”^{NIV} (Acts 17:26).

- God appointed the precise day when the flood would come (Gen 7:13).
- The birth of Isaac was at an “appointed time” (Gen 18:14).
- The exact day of Israel’s deliverance from Egypt was Divinely appointed (Ex 12:41).
- Joseph’s time in prison was appointed (Psa 105:17-19).
- The exact duration of the Babylonian captivity was arbitrarily appointed by God (Jer 29:10).

- God revealed to Daniel things pertaining to “the appointed time of the end” (Dan 8:19; 11:27,29,35).
- Jesus was born at an appointed time – “the fullness of the time” (Gal 4:4).
- The day of Pentecost came at an appointed time – “when the day of Pentecost was fully come” (Acts 2:1).
- The precise time of the day of judgment has been “appointed” (Acts 17:31).

Why should any person be stunned by a point in time called “the times of the Gentiles?” God has revealed sufficient about His Person and purpose that this should not take us by surprise. There is a point in time called “the fulness of the Gentiles,” and it is a line of demarcation that will change the partial blindness of Israel. It is our business not to question it. Among other things, this shows that the Gentiles are not the focus of the salvation of God. While the determination has been made to “preach the Gospel to every creature” (Mark 16:15), and “make disciples of all nations” (Matt 28:19), God has revealed that it is in order to provoke Israel to jealousy.

Jesus Speaks

The Lord Jesus Himself declared this limitation from the standpoint of time. “Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Lk 21:24). With His heart heavy, Jesus unveiled somewhat of the future to His inquiring disciples. He spoke of dark and bleak times – times of fierce judgment and punishment. The holy city, where God had placed His name, and where holy associations had been developed, would be devastated. But in the midst of it all, He revealed things would not remain that way. It would only be “until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.” He gave no indication that there would ever be a point prior to those “times” when it would be inappropriate to speak of that fullness.

ALL ISRAEL WILL BE SAVED

“And so all Israel shall be saved . . .” Other versions read, “and thus all Israel will be saved,”^{NASB} “And so all Israel will get salvation,”^{BBE} and “and this is how all Israel will be saved.”^{NJB} It is never out of order to say these words: “all Israel shall be saved.” These are revealed words. They are words taught by the Holy Spirit. At some point, they should find their way into our mouths, whether we comprehend the fullness of their scope or not.

The Reasoning

The reasoning is this. Israel’s rejection has always been partial, and never total. However, there is a point in time when their salvation will be total, and not partial. This should not be taken too far, viewing it from the standpoint of mathematical counts. The emphasis is that the general condition of Israel will be reversed. For centuries, there remained a small remnant within them, while the mass of them remained in the grip of unbelief and spiritual slumber. But a point in time will come, as appointed by God, when the mass of them will turn to the Lord and no longer be dominated by spiritual blindness. If that seems like an impossible thing, “with God all things are possible” (Matt 19:26).

For centuries, there remained a small remnant within them, while the mass of them remained in the grip of unbelief and spiritual slumber. But a point in time will come, as appointed by God, when the mass of them will turn to the Lord and no longer be dominated by spiritual blindness.

Is the Whole Church in Reference?

While the word “Israel” can also include Gentiles who have been grafted into their tree, the focus here is the nation itself. However, the sense of the text is in no way altered whether we think of “Israel” as the whole of the redeemed, or of those from the nation itself. If the former, salvation shall not reach its culmination until Jews and Gentiles are brought together into one grand family. If the latter, God’s work with Israel will not be completed until He who poured upon them the spirit of deep sleep causes the light to shine upon them.

While I do allow for both views, it seems to neutralize the text to suddenly introduce the whole of the church at this point. From the beginning of the ninth chapter, the spotlight has been shining on Paul’s “kinsmen according to the flesh.” The Spirit has accounted for their distinction. He has also explained their spiritual obtuseness. He has told us of God’s intention to provoke them to jealousy through the Gentiles. The possibility of them being turned has been declared, as well as its probability. The Spirit has affirmed their blindness is partial, and that a time has been appointed when their condition would change. Further, following this verse He will continue to elaborate upon Israel.

It seems to me to be something less than reasonable that He would here turn our attention to the whole of the body of Christ, using the words “all Israel.” If this refers to both Jews and Gentiles, we must ponder that He is speaking of the future. That would mean He was referring to Gentiles presently blinded like Israel, yet who would eventually be illuminated – something I do not believe those who contend “Israel” refers to the church are willing to affirm.

The Deliverer Will Come

“. . . as it is written: The Deliverer will come out of Zion, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob.” David prayed for this to take place. “Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion! when the LORD bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad” (Psa 14:7).

Isaiah's Prophecy

Isaiah declared this would come to pass. "And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the LORD" (Isa 59:20). This differs slightly from our text. Isaiah said the Redeemer would come "to Zion." Our text says He will come "out of Zion." Isaiah said the Redeemer would come to those who turned from transgression. Our text says He would come to "turn away ungodliness from Jacob."

There is no conflict in the passages, and we do not do well to attempt to cause such a conflict. The Spirit is providing a New Covenant view of an Old Covenant promise. Isaiah spoke of Jesus coming to His people, and being perceived by those who were discontent with transgression. Paul speaks of the Savior working from within them, forgiving their sins, and "banishing ungodliness"^{NR^{SV}} from among them. In other words, their sins would be remitted and they would receive a new heart and spirit.

Zion

"Zion" refers to the place of God's dwelling, particularly as it relates to the Jews. The name was frequently applied to Jerusalem (2 Sam 5:6-9). It appears from the Prophets that it was also the place where the temple was built (Isa 4:5; 8:18; Jer 31:6; Mic 4:7).

The meaning of the prophecy is that the Savior will become apparent to the Israelites from within their own land.

The Glorified Deliverer?

While some are persuaded this prophecy will be fulfilled by a fleshly, or external, appearance of Jesus to the Jews, I cannot concur with that opinion. That would require the merging of the eternal order with the temporal order, a glorified Christ with a people in the body. I do not believe this is possible. The impossibility of such a thing is precisely why God only allowed Moses to see His "back." God explained, "Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live" (Ex 33:20,23). Flesh is simply not adapted to behold the unveiled glory of God.

Jesus is presently glorified (Acts 3:13). For Him to appear among men without destroying them, saved or not, would require a diminishment of His Person, if not a total hiding of His glory. There is not a syllable of Scripture that remotely suggests Jesus will ever do such a thing. Nor, indeed, is there a solitary word that suggests men will ever be able to behold the full glory of Christ while they remain in the body. Nowhere does the Spirit indicate that the temporal and eternal orders will be merged. Rather, when the new heavens and earth appear, the old will be done away (Rev 21:1). Both of these events are associated with the appearance of Jesus (2 Pet 3:10-13).

The Deliverer coming out of Zion, therefore, cannot refer to a bodily return of Christ.

This is God's Covenant

"For this is My covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins." Immediately, the Spirit shows us that this is in strict keeping with God's covenant with Israel – a covenant He has not forgotten. This cannot refer to the Gentiles, for God made no covenant to take away their sins. That covenant belonged exclusively to Israel. "And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the LORD. As for me, this is my covenant with them . . ." (Isa 59:20-21).

Who can forget the marvelous promise of Jeremiah – and it is related to the covenant God would make with the houses of Israel and Judah: "for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more" (Jer 31:34).

This is not the only time this covenant is mentioned. Let us hear what Paul is promising would be fulfilled.

- ❑ "But Israel shall be saved in the LORD with an everlasting salvation: ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end" (Isa 45:17).
- ❑ "In the LORD shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory" (Isa 45:25).
- ❑ "In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them whom I reserve" (Jer 50:20).
- ❑ "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you" (Ezek 36:25).

Remember, God speaks with the panorama of His eternal purpose before Him. He does not make vain promises, or declare things that will only be abandoned at some point in time. Israel's restoration is a matter of covenant! He has said He would take away their sins!

ENEMIES, YET BELOVED

"²⁸ Concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sake, but concerning the election they are beloved for the sake of the fathers. ²⁹ For the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable." You will notice how relentless the Holy Spirit is in establishing this point. Sometimes I marvel that I could ever have been so blinded as to contend Israel has been totally rejected. Among other things, such a contention reveals how utterly unreasonable the flesh is. It simply cannot agree with God. To put it in words that the Holy Spirit teaches, "But the natural man does not receive the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him; nor can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (1 Cor 2:14).

Now, in a few words, the Spirit will spread the working of God before us. He will show how Israel is viewed from the heavens. He will also affirm what God has determined cannot be revoked. While it is apparent, I feel compelled to remind you that these are words from God. As such, they are precise, and are not to be questioned.

VIEWED FROM THE GOSPEL

“From the standpoint of the gospel they are enemies for your sake.” ^{NASB}

Once again, the Spirit points out that the Gentiles have received the Gospel because the Israelites rejected it. Presently, they are enemies of the Gospel itself, alienated from God, and opponents of Christ – all because they do not believe. Yet, from an even higher vantage point, this has occurred in order that the Gospel might come to us Gentiles. A Divine purpose is being fulfilled by the enmity of the Israelites. They are enemies for the sake of the Gentiles! How foolish, therefore, for Gentiles to boast against the Jews as though they had been permanently rejected and replaced by the Gentiles. Nothing could be further from the truth!

VIEWED FROM THE ELECTION

“... but from the standpoint of God’s choice they are beloved for the sake of the fathers.” ^{NASB} The Gospel view is not the only view! Or, to put it another way, the marvelous salvation of the Gentiles, or the nations, is not the only purpose of God. God has something larger in mind than reaching the nations, or heathen, and we do well to remember it.

There is the matter of “the election,” or “God’s choice!” This represents the highest consideration of things. It is the most precise context in which God’s workings are to be considered. Men may steer away from God’s election, or choice, but the Spirit does not. I understand this subject can be corrupted, but we ought not shun to declare it simply because wicked men may corrupt it. This is the way in which the Holy Spirit speaks about this matter.

And what of “the election,” or “God’s choice?” How is Israel considered within that context? “They are loved on account of the patriarchs,” ^{NIV} or, “beloved for the sake of the fathers.” ^{NASB} The “father’s” are Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom the promises were made.

It should not surprise us that the Israelites are loved because of their progenitors. In your own case, “God for Christ’s sake hath forgiven you” (Eph 4:32). Abraham, the chief of the patriarchs, knew God would spare many preservation of the sons of Jacob, or Israel, upon this basis. “For I am the LORD, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are for the sake of a few (Gen 18:29,31,32). Even though Solomon greatly displeased the God, He did not rend the kingdom from Solomon “for David thy father’s sake” (1 Kgs 11:12). This, then, is a Divine manner, and ought to be embraced with great joy.

Those who declare Israel has been utterly forsaken, and are no longer a people, demean the fathers. They make it appear as though God has forgotten what He promised them. Or, worse yet, that He has abrogated His promises to them.

Those who declare Israel has been utterly forsaken, and are no longer a people, demean the fathers. They make it appear as though God has forgotten what He promised them. Or, worse yet, that He has abrogated His promises to them.

GOD’S GIFTS AND CALLING

“For the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable.” ^{NKJV} Here is a word that has puzzled theologians. Such men ought to believe Divine utterances rather than making vain attempts to blend them with the theologies they have invented.

Other versions read, “for God’s gifts and his call are irrevocable,” ^{NIV} “For the gifts and the calling of God are not repented of,” ^{ASV} “Because God’s selection and His mercies may not be changed,” ^{BBE} “For God’s gifts and His call can never be withdrawn,” ^{NLT} and “There is no change of mind on God’s part about the gifts He has made or of His choice.” ^{NJB} From a linguistic point of view, then, there really is no question at all about what the Spirit has said.

Like it or not, it is true that God does not change. That is precisely why His gifts and calling cannot be changed or revoked. In fact, God Himself accounts for the not consumed” (Mal 3:6). Even the mouth of Balaam, who prophesied for wages, spoke this truth. “God is not a man, that He should lie; neither the son of man, that He should repent: hath He said, and shall He not do it? or hath He spoken, and shall He not make it good?” (Num 23:19).

“Gifts “ and “Calling”

“Gifts and calling” refer to Divine favors that are not based upon merit or worthiness. That, of course, is why they are irrevocable – because they were not given because of the worthiness of those receiving them.

It is important to consider that the Spirit is not speaking of every gift provided by God. For example, He said of giving Israel a king (Saul), “I gave thee a king in Mine anger, and took him away in My wrath” (Hos 13:11). Here He is speaking of “gifts and calling” as they relate more specifically to His eternal purpose as wrought out through Abraham. The Lord promised Abraham, “And I will establish My covenant between Me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God” (Gen 17:7-8). That is “the gifts and calling” of reference, and they “cannot be revoked.”

The point is that the choice of, and promises to, the Israelites as a whole cannot be revoked. They were not made because of their attainment, and they cannot be revoked because of the deficiencies of some of them. All of this allows for the existence of a sanctifying remnant, and the cutting off of those who did not believe. This should not confuse us, for the aim of the text is to convince us of the future restoration of Israel.

DISOBEDIENCE AND MERCY

“³⁰ For as you were once disobedient to God, yet have now obtained mercy through their disobedience,³¹ even so these also have now been disobedient, that through the mercy shown you they also may obtain mercy.” The Spirit will now pull back the curtain that obscures God’s eternal purpose, revealing Divine deliberation. These are high and lofty vistas, and will challenge stilted views of the Lord and His workings. But we should not shun to take them into our minds and hearts. Far too much time is being spent by the religious masses in the lowlands of human reasoning and explanation. It has not produced a good group of Kingdom thinkers.

GENTILE DISOBEDIENCE

“Just as you who were at one time disobedient to God have now received mercy as a result of their disobedience.”^{NIV} This is a most appropriate description of our former state. The Spirit vividly describes our condition. “For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another” (Tit 3:3).

In our text, the Spirit takes the entirety of our former lives and refers to it as “disobedient to God.” Older translations read, “have not believed God.”^{KJV/WEBSTERS/DOUAY} There is no conflict in the expressions, for unbelief is the epitome, summation, and quintessence of disobedience. All disobedience, or sin, springs from unbelief. Thus Jesus said of the convicting work of the Holy Spirit, “And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin . . . of sin, because they believe not on me” (John 16:8-9). How sorely we needed mercy.

And, praise God, we Gentiles did receive mercy! Right here, it is good to remember how gracious God has been to us. We Gentiles had not received a Law from God, and had no prophets. We were abysmally ignorant of God, even though we were living in His universe. Some have concluded this to mean God could not condemn us because we did not know. But that is a very distorted view. God did not save us out of pity, but by His mercy. As it is written, this was done that “the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy” (Rom 15:9). After accounting for our former state – one of “disobedience” – the Spirit continued, “not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, through the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit” (Tit 3:5). A constant stream of praise and now receive mercy as a result of God’s mercy to you.”^{NIV} As a rule, professing believers are so distant from God that this utterance sounds like insanity. A people can gauge their proximity to God by how reasonable the Word of God sounds.

Like it or not, the Spirit gives us a reason for Israel’s disobedience. It is a high reason, but it is intended to be comprehended. That is why it is proclaimed. When we were disobedient, God had mercy upon us because of Israel’s disobedience. Now, they have become disobedient to the Gospel in order that they may receive mercy through the mercy shown to us Gentiles.

The meaning is that the promises

Far too much time is being spent by the religious masses in the lowlands of human reasoning and explanation. It has not produced a good group of Kingdom thinkers.

thanksgiving is in order from the Gentiles, for great mercy has been shown to them!

Why have we Gentiles received mercy? The Spirit calls us to consider the Israelites. “Yet have now obtained mercy through their (Israel’s) disobedience.” It is apparent from this passage that this is a foregone conclusion, and is not open for discussion. From this perspective, we Gentiles owe our salvation to the disobedience of the Israelites. God turned to us only when He turned from them!

ISRAEL’S DISOBEDIENCE

“So they too have now become disobedient in order that they too may made to Israel would be accomplished through Divine mercy – in full recognition of their defiled state. They would not be saved because they were His people, but because God had mercy! If this were not the case, it would have appeared as though they deserved salvation because they were distinguished as God’s people.

The argument presented is simply this. If we Gentiles have been saved by the mercy of God, even though we were disobedient, why will not God do the same for the chosen people, to whom the promises of salvation were given? What form of reasoning would seek to deprive Israel of what we ourselves have received? A lofty consideration, indeed!

THAT HE MIGHT HAVE MERCY

“³² For God has committed them all to disobedience, that He might have mercy on all.” From beginning to end, “Salvation is of the Lord” (Jonah 2:9). In this verse we have yet another affirmation of this fact. Again, it is a high consideration. This is not something men would say – not even some devout religious men. It is, however, what the Lord of glory has said, and it is completely out of order to reject it.

COMMITTED TO DISOBEDIENCE

“For God has committed them all to disobedience . . .” Other versions read, “For God hath concluded them all in unbelief,”^{KJV} “For God has shut up all in disobedience,”^{NASB} “For God has bound all men over to disobedience,”^{NIV} “For God has imprisoned all in disobedience,”^{NRSV} “For God has consigned all men to disobedience,”^{RSV} “For God delivered all to disobedience.”^{NAB}

First, note this is something God has done, not man! It is the result of Divine activity, and it has been done with a beneficent purpose in mind. Because God has determined to unveil the magnitude and power of His grace throughout the ages to come (Eph 2:7), He has purposed to save men through His mercy. That salvation will not be realized through a system, a Law, or a series of routines. He will, therefore, enclose men in disobedience, so they will be unable to extricate themselves. He will confine them to that state, so that only His mercy will be able to disengage them.

Now, this confinement to disobedience will not be accomplished without means. He will not, as it were, cause men to be disobedient, for that would bring no glory to His Person.

Rather, He will shut them up to disobedience, imprisoning them in it.

This has been done in two ways: one for the Israelites, and one for the Gentiles. Both ways confirm that the entirety of humanity has been corrupted in Adam. Both declare that man cannot save himself, regardless of the tools or advantages given to him.

In summary, the Israelites were “shut up” to disobedience by the Law. The Jews were given a holy, spiritual, and good Law. It defined sin, told what was to be avoided, and what was to be done. Sufficient promises and curses were given to provide the proper incentive to fulfill that Law. However, the “strength of sin” proved to be that very Law (1 Cor 15:56). It demanded more of them than they were able to give, offered no mercy, and provided no strength. They were thus “bound over” to disobedience.

The Gentiles were “shut up” to disobedience by ignorance (Eph 4:18). God withheld Divine illumination from them. He gave them no Prophets, and left them to themselves. They were in His world which yielded an unwavering and consistent testimony of His “eternal power and Godhead.” Yet, they stumbled on in their ignorance, being disobedient to the testimony of nature and their conscience as well. They did not have sufficient moral or spiritual resources to extricate themselves from their dilemma. Thus, God had also “imprisoned them” in disobedience.

MERCY ON ALL

God had gracious intentions in this arrangement. It was that “He might have mercy on all.” Eventually, through the Gospel of Christ, the “record that God gave of His Son” (1 John 5:10), men are brought to realize their impotency, and “call upon the name of the Lord.” The Lord is then able to show mercy to Jew and Gentiles alike, lifting them from the morass of sin, and placing them on the foundation of His Son. There is no different Gospel for the Israelites, as some affirm. There is only One salvation, and one Gospel that declares it. There are no other Saviors, and hence can be no other real Gospels.

The idea is not that God will surely have mercy on every Jew and every Gentile. Rather, it is that both Jew and Gentile will be saved through His mercy. The Jew will be so saved even though he did not keep the Law. The Gentile will be so saved even though he refused to honor the testimony of nature and his own conscience.

Both Law and nature have this in common: they prove mankind is spiritually impotent. They confirm that the malignancy of sin cannot be avoided outside of Jesus Christ.

Those who minimize the mercy of God push salvation away, judging themselves unworthy of everlasting life (Acts 13:46). Those who see their need of mercy are sure to receive it, for they have learned the truth God seeks to teach them.

This passage has shown us that the Jews have not been excluded from the salvation of God that was promised to them. They will, however, receive it in such a manner as will destroy all fleshly boasting and pride of life. In this, the Gospel will be primary.

AN EXPRESSION OF PRAISE

“³³ Oh, the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments and His ways past finding out!³⁴ For who has known the mind of the LORD? Or who has become His counselor?³⁵ Or who has first given to Him And it shall be repaid to him?³⁶ For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things, to whom be glory forever. Amen.”

Here is a befitting doxology to the teaching the Spirit has placed before us. He has traced all things back to God, and now He moves the Apostle to break forth in insightful praise. Keep in mind, what has been said about the Israelites, Paul's "kinsmen according to the flesh," has prompted this outbreak of praise.

THE WISDOM AND KNOWLEDGE OF GOD

"Oh, the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! God's dealings with and purposes for the Jews are the outworking of His wisdom and knowledge. Both are deep and rich. They are deep in the sense of being profound, far beyond the narrow boundaries of human wisdom and knowledge. That is why it is such a serious thing to take what has been made known in this section of Romans and pour it into a theological mold. This is like new wine that will shatter the brittle wineskins of human theology.

The Wisdom of God

If the salvation of Israel seems beyond the border of possibility, think of the wisdom of God. Consider how deep and profound it is, and what richness comes from it. This is the wisdom by which the heavens were made (Psa 136:5). God founded the earth by His wisdom, and maintains all of its precise movements and activities (Prov 3:19). How can it be that the fulfillment of His promises to Israel could prove too challenging for His great wisdom? What is there about their conversion that demands more wisdom than He possesses?

The Knowledge of God

If you stumble at the idea of Israel having ungodliness turned away from them, ponder the "knowledge of God." What is it that God did not know when He called Abraham, chose the nation of Israel, and made marvelous promises to them? Were His promises shouted off the top of His head, so to speak, without regard to His knowledge, which sees all things? Indeed not! God always speaks with what He knows and purposes in mind. No Word of God is every uttered, and no purpose ever conceived, independently of His wisdom and knowledge.

Rather than stumbling at the declarations of this text, stand up and praise God for the depth and riches of His wisdom and knowledge! That is the only acceptable response to these teachings!

THE JUDGMENTS OF GOD

"How unsearchable are His judgments and His ways past finding out! Other versions read, "How unsearchable are His judgments and unfathomable His ways!,"^{NASB} and "How unsearchable his judgments, and his paths beyond tracing out!"^{NIV} What God determines is not subject to human analysis. His judgments and ways extend far beyond the small perimeter of man's powers of

"knows the thoughts of man" without having to be told them (Psa 94:11). But where is the man who knows the thoughts of God without having to be told what they are? Let such a person step forth! Who can decipher what God is thinking by looking to nature? What person is there who can figure out the purposes and intents of God by surveying the heavens or analyzing rocks and mountains? The question put before us is a Divine way of saying such a person will not and cannot be found! Nothing – absolutely nothing – of God's mind can be known unless He tells it. What is more, He has told us His mind concerning Israel.

Who is a counselor to Him?

"Who has become His counselor?" Or, "who has taken part in His purposes?"^{BBE} At what point is God ever lacking in understanding, so that another must give Him advice? In recent years, some have affirmed that God really does not know everything. David spoke of such people. They say, "How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the most High?" (Psa 73:11). These people imagine their ways are hidden from God, but they are not. The Divine assessment of such people is this: "Behold, these are the ungodly" (Psa 73:12).

Knowing these things, how foolish to doubt, or even disbelieve, the revelations of the Lord! Those who balk at what He declares Himself to have determined are taking the role of counselors, seeking to instruct the Lord. He will not hear them!

Knowing these things, how foolish to doubt, or even disbelieve, the revelations of the Lord! Those who balk at what He declares Himself to have determined are taking the role of counselors, seeking to instruct the Lord. He will not hear them!

Who puts God in obligation?

"Or who has first given to Him and it shall be repaid to him?" Or, "Who has given anything to him, so that His presents come only as a debt returned?"^{NJB} What person has moved God into debt? Who is the person who has initiated dialog with God, moving Him to reply. What person has brought a gift to God without being moved by Him to do so? Where is such a person? The answer ought to be obvious. No such person exists, or can exist!

The Lord asked Job, "Who has given perception. If God does not tell us something about His ways and judgments, they will never be known. They cannot be discovered through academic disciplines, or be discerned simply by frequent exposure to their effects.

WHO IS THERE?

"For who has known the mind of the LORD? Or who has become His counselor?"³⁵ Or who has first given to Him and it shall be repaid to him? These are principles relating to God – similar to laws that can be neither fully comprehended nor contradicted.

Who has known the mind of the Lord? That is, "who has knowledge of the mind of the Lord?"^{BBE}, or "who can know what the Lord is thinking?"^{NLT} God to Me that I should repay him? Whatever is under the whole heaven is Mine”^{NASB} (Job 41:11). The idea is that no person has ever given God an advantage. No one has ever increased His wealth, or added to His Person.

Is it not reasonable, therefore, that God can do what He has declared in this section of Scripture? Can He not conclude all in unbelief so that He can have mercy upon all? Can He not pour out the spirit of sleep upon Israel that He might open the eyes of the Gentiles? Can He not provoke the Jews to jealousy through the mercy He has given to the Gentiles? Was He not true and righteous in the promises He made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? Were the promises of restoration given through the Prophets a departure from the character of God?

OF, THROUGH, AND TO

“For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things, to whom be glory forever. Amen.” Another version reads, “Everything there is comes from him and is caused by him and exists for him. To him be glory for ever! Amen.”^{NJB} What a sweeping statement and fitting conclusion to this remarkable passage! It puts the glory where it belongs! It is as though the Spirit led the Apostle to conclude abruptly, not engaging in endless explanations. Enough has been revealed to saturate the capacities of man. Any further explanations would extend further than we can reach. What the Spirit now says is applied to “all things,” or “everything.” Nothing is excluded, particularly in regard to the salvation of Jews and Gentiles.

“Of Him.” That is, “because of Him,”^{YLT} or “from Him.”^{NASB} God is the Originator, the Beginning, and the First of everything! In the matter of the reconciliation of the world to God, “all things are of God” (2 Cor 5:18). This is another way of saying His will is the origin of all things, and nothing can exist independently of it. If that is too difficult to receive, think of it this way. When God is finished with the present heavens and earth, He will simply dispense with them (2 Pet 3:7). There will be no conflict with those who are otherwise minded. When He is finished with the devil and his angels, he will have them cast into the lake of fire (Rev 20:10). There will be no war, no resistance, or any opposition. He will simply do it. Even they existed only by the will of God, for when He desires for them to be taken away, they will instantly be removed.

This truth especially applies to the salvation of men, whether Jew or Gentile. However a person may choose to think of salvation, the cause of it can only be traced back to God Himself. That is another reason why “All Israel will be saved.”

“Through Him.” Things not only originate with God, they are carried out by Him. He has not set laws in motion to fulfill His good pleasure independently of His involvement. Everything was made “through Him” (John 1:3). The world was “made through Him” (John 1:10). The saints are being saved from wrath “through Him” (Rom 5:9). God carries out His own will, causing it to come to pass. That is another reason why “All Israel will be saved.”

“To Him.” That is, everything accrues to His glory, and will ultimately serve His purpose. If God “works all things together for the good” of those who love Him, and are “the called according to His purpose” (Rom 8:28), you may be sure all things will work together for His glory and good! A similar thing is said of the Lord Jesus. “For by Him all things were created that are in heaven and that are on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or principalities or powers. All things were created through Him and for Him”^{NKJV} (Col 1:16). All crowns will be cast before the throne of God, for everything is “to Him” and “for Him” (Rev 4:10). That is another reason why “All Israel will be saved.”

“Glory forever.” In Christ, we are part of an “eternal purpose.” This is no passing fancy, no fading work, no sun that sets. When all is said and done in the grand redemptive enterprise, all of the glory will go to God. All of the credit and honor will be His through Christ Jesus. Over and over we are reminded of this reality.

- ❑ “To God only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen” (Rom 16:27).
- ❑ “To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen” (Gal 1:5).
- ❑ “Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen” (Eph 3:21).
- ❑ “Now unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. Amen” (Phil 4:20).
- ❑ “Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory for ever and ever. Amen” (1 Tim 1:17).
- ❑ “To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen” (1 Pet 5:11).
- ❑ “To the only wise God our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and for ever. Amen” (Jude 25).

That, child of God, is another reason why “All Israel will be saved.”

CONCLUSION

We have walked in the high places, and I trust you had “hinds feet” so you could safely navigate in them. These can be your high places, where you feel at home, and the wonderful things of God make sense to you and comfort you. I know we have dealt with highly controversial matters. But it is man that has made them controversial, not God. These things have been revealed to clarify the things of God, not to mystify them. I urge you to join the growing number of believers who have a heart’s desire and prayer for Israel, that they might be saved. There is a sense in which you owe your salvation to them. See to it that you do not despise them, do not forget them, and seek for their blessing.

LIVING SACRIFICES TO GOD

12:1 I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service. ² And do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

INTRODUCTION

The chief benefit gained by the truth is salvation – “salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory” (2 Tim 2:10). We receive “the love of the truth” that we might “be saved” (2 Thess 2:10). Salvation begins with extrication from sin, and will be brought to its culmination when Jesus returns and we are gathered to Him.

No aspect of spiritual life is divorced from salvation. To put it another way, there is no such thing as moving on to higher things after we have been saved. If something is separate from salvation, we must be delivered from it. God has nothing good to give us that is not integral to His great salvation. This consideration is fundamental to sound thought.

In salvation we are delivered from both the guilt and power of sin. We are freed from the penalty of sin and released from the wicked one who promotes it. We are moved from the “power of darkness” into the marvelous “kingdom” of God’s “dear Son” (Col 1:13).

All of this relates to “the righteousness of God” that is announced in the Gospel, and “imputed” to us by faith (Rom 1:17; 4:22-24). As you know, this righteousness has been the matter of exposition from the first chapter of Romans through the eleventh chapter. A brief recap of the relevance of this righteousness will serve to set the background for our text.

- ❑ 1:16-17, A righteousness from God. The Gospel reveals a righteousness that comes from God through faith.
- ❑ 1:18-3:18, A righteousness that is needed. Both Jew and Gentile stand in unquestionable and consistent need of this righteousness.

- ❑ 3:19-20, The need confirmed. The Law was given to confirm man was totally unrighteous.
- ❑ 3:21, Without the Law. The righteousness of God is now revealed without the law, although it was witnessed to by both the Law and the Prophets.
- ❑ 3:22-23, By faith, for all. This righteousness is realized by faith for all who believe.
- ❑ 3:24-25, Justification. Justification, which is the Divine act whereby men are made righteousness, comes freely by God’s grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus.
- ❑ 3:26-26, Just and Justifier. Because of Christ’s propitiatory death, God is both just and the Justifier of the one believing in Jesus. That is, He Himself is righteous in pronouncing men righteous.
- ❑ 3:27-31, Apart from the Law.

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. I BESEECH YOU THEREFORE (12:1a)
- II. THE PRESENTATION OF YOUR BODIES (12:1b)
- III. PRESENTED TO GOD (12:1c)
- IV. IT IS ONLY REASONABLE (12:1d)
- V. THE CONFORMITY THAT IS CONDEMNED (12:2a)
- VI. THE REQUIRED TRANSFORMATION (12:2b)
- VII. PROVING THE WILL OF GOD (12:2c)

Justification comes independently of the Law.

- 4:1-5, The example of Abraham. Abraham is the initial and premier example of God justifying men by faith.
- 4:6-8, Confirmed by David. David confirms that God imputes righteousness to men independently of their works.
- 4:9-25, Imputed righteousness. The imputation of righteousness to Abraham shows that righteousness comes before acceptable works, and not because of them.
- 5:1-11, Spiritual life. The realization of this righteousness from God introduces spiritual life, which is sustained by our relationship to Him through faith.
- 5:12-21, Only two men. Both sin and righteousness are ultimately traced to one man: sin to Adam, and righteousness to Christ.
- 6:1-5, Baptism into Christ. In our baptism, we are united with Christ in His death, burial, and resurrection.
- 6:6-23, Presentation required. This unity with Christ demands the presentation of our whole persons to God.
- 7:1-25, Inner warfare. Justification, or being made righteous by God, has created a fierce inner conflict in the believer. The flesh wars against the spirit, and the old man against the new man.
- 8:1-4, Justification confirmed. The inner warfare confirms that we have been justified by faith, and are not condemned.

- 8:5-8, The liability of flesh. Our condition demands that we refuse to listen to the flesh, or old man, for his dominance over us will condemn us.
- 8:9-27, The ministry of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is given to assist us in subordinating the flesh. He does this by leading us in the fight, and by interceding for us when the infirmity of ignorance plagues us.
- 8:28-39, The overall purpose. The entirety of salvation is of God, who purposed it, implements it, and will bring it to a glorious consummation.
- 9:1-11:36, The example of Israel. Israel is given as an example of the total working of the Lord. In them, salvation is seen to be of the Lord, yet involve the participation of those who are saved. In them we see that “of Him and through Him and to Him are all things, to whom be glory forever.”

AN UNDENIABLE EMPHASIS

In chapters one through eleven there has been an undeniable emphasis upon Deity. God is seen as the one who has purposed salvation in all of its aspects. Jesus is declared as the One through whom that purpose is being implemented. His atoning death satisfactorily and justly addressed all of the liabilities inducted by sin. His present ministry ensures that our faith is not in vain, and that the purpose of God will be brought to its intended conclusion. The Holy Spirit works with the believers, directing, interceding, and empowering them to live in harmony with God’s purpose and for His glory.

The work of God, the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit are central in all of these considerations. In view of these things, to point the hearts and minds of men toward the capabilities and contributions of men becomes an utter absurdity. The absolute impotence of men is what necessitated the total involvement of Deity in their salvation. This was satisfactorily demonstrated in four thousand years of human history. Two thousand five hundred years without Divine direction confirmed the Gentiles were incapable of correcting their condition. One thousand five hundred years with Divine direction corroborated the Jews were equally incapable of correcting their condition.

It is, therefore, a sin of the greatest magnitude to rely upon human wisdom or power to initiate or maintain spiritual life.

THE MATTER OF FREEDOM

There is also the matter of the freedom which is experienced when we “know the truth.” As our blessed Lord said, “And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free” (John 8:32). That freedom involves freedom from sin, delusion, and Satan’s power. It involves ultimate deliverance from corruption, the grave, and the wrath of God. To put it another way, we do not need the world’s input to sustain spiritual life. In fact, it cannot be sustained by that means. We have been liberated from the dominance of the temporal order because it consistently tends to death, not life.

Whatever was impotent to bring you to Christ, is equally powerless to keep you in Christ. The order from which we have been liberated can in no way promote life in the “heavenly places,” to which we have been raised and in which we have been placed (Eph 1:3; 2:6).

SALVATION’S PRACTICALITY

Although this is not its greatest advantage, sound doctrine is practical. It interfaces with every aspect of life. There is no facet of life that is not impacted by the salvation of God. It empowers and moves the saints to

Whatever was impotent to bring you to Christ, is equally powerless to keep you in Christ. The order from which we have been liberated can in no way promote life in the “heavenly places,” to which we have been raised and in which we have been placed separate themselves from defilements. It also constrains them to appropriate all things pertaining to life and godliness, given to them by the Lord. This great salvation impacts upon private, domestic, and social life – to say nothing of spiritual relationships.

The Devil's Strategy

One of the most effective strategies employed by the "old serpent" involves the undue exaltation of academics. In this approach philosophy, speculation, and formalism spring forth and demand dominancy. All of them are offered as adequate guides for "practical" matters, which appear to be the stress of the contemporary church. Faith is thus relegated to the background, and profession is equated with possession.

Under this arrangement, reconciliation to God is taken for granted, and the wisdom of men is employed for the correction or improvement of personal, domestic, and social aspects of life. The preacher or teacher who deals with the practical aspect of life in Christ is thus thought to be the most profitable. Conversely, the preacher or teacher who deals with justification, sanctification, reconciliation, etc., is considered to be impractical – a sort of theological oddity that is beyond the capacity of the masses. There is hardly a place in the Western world where this imagination is not prominent.

Dreadful Complacency

Few professed Christians challenge this approach to life because of its remarkable popularity. Problem solvers and counselors have been added to church staffs, and even exalted to places of prominence, often supplanting those who preach and teach the Word of God. Religious organizations are filled with frolicking youth and spiritually indifferent adults, nearly all of whom are abysmally ignorant of both the Person and ways of God. Such people have been brought into the "church" by entertainment programs, shallow teaching, athletics, and self-help programs.

The number of religious organizations that are contributing to this situation is staggering. They include music, publishing, career development, motivational direction, education, and a staggering array of entertainment specialists. The number of Christian businesses operating for profit boggles the mind.

All of this may appear quite innocent, and those who raise questions about it are often viewed as negative, and even cultist, in their objections. After all, it appears as though these thrusts have been highly successful. Who would dare to question them. However, hardly any of them could exist in a strong godly environment. They would soon die out were the people of God conversant with Divine manners, intent on laying hold of eternal life, and determined to abstain from fleshly lusts that war against the soul. A sterile spiritual environment has enabled such groups to surface and appear successful.

THE TEXT BEFORE US

Our text, verses one and two of the twelfth chapter, are not the thrust of this book. Nor, indeed, is it the loftiest doctrine. It is not the heart of the Gospel, or where we are to place our emphasis. Here is where the human spirit intersects with the purpose of God. It is where faith is revealed and eternal life made known. If we have ingested what the Spirit has said in the first eleven chapters, it will be evident to our hearts that this text is the only proper conclusion, and the only appropriate response.

This is an exhortation that is based upon the solid foundation that has been put in place. That foundation is, from one view, the Person of Christ (1 Cor 3:11; Acts 4:12). It consists of His accomplishments and present ministry. From another point of view, that foundation is the fact that we have been "made righteous" by the God of heaven, because we have believed the record He has given of His Son.

As individuals who are in Christ, we ourselves are the "workmanship" of God (Eph 2:10). The exhortation that follows is a summons to bring our lives into conformity with that work. The Spirit has informed us that we have been brought into Christ, and that our "members," or human capacities, are to be presented to God (Chapter 6). He has already dealt with the fierce inward struggle that has been induced by faith (Chapter 7). He has further shown us that men cannot be made acceptable to God by their own independent efforts. They must hear and embrace the Gospel (Chapter 10).

Now the Spirit will admonish us to formally and determinedly present our bodies to God. This is not an option, but is necessitated by the very nature of salvation. The text will further confirm to our hearts that unless this is done, the will of the Lord cannot be known.

God will not bring us to glory while we allow our bodies to dictate the manner in which we live. Such a stance contradicts both the nature and power of salvation. It denies the effectiveness of salvation, and reveals that sin yet dominates the individual. This is a most sobering passage.

I BESEECH YOU THEREFORE . . .

" ^{12:1a} I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God . . . "

THEREFORE

Here is an impassioned plea – an exhortation – that is spiritually logical. It is in the nature of a conclusion to the doctrines that have been affirmed, namely those related to the appropriation of the righteousness of God. This means that the matters unveiled in the previous chapters are, in fact, designed to bring us to this conclusion. Sound exhortations must be based upon the truth of God, not upon human reasoning or raw emotion. When that truth is seen, the heart will be powerfully motivated to yield a response that will bring glory to God.

In this regard, the New Covenant differs significantly from the Old Covenant, which was founded upon Law. Under the Old Covenant, the word “beseech” most often is used of men speaking to God. Frequently men pled with God to spare them, preserve them, hear their prayers, and a few times for God to reveal Himself (Ex 33:18; Num 12:13; 14:17,19; 1 Sam 23:11; 2 Sam 24:10; 2 Kgs 19:19; 20:3; 1 Chron 21:8; 2 Chron 6:40; Neh 1:5,8,11; Psa 80:14; 116:4; 118:25; 119:108; Isa 38:3; 64:9; Dan 9:16; Amos 7:2,5; Jonah 1:14; 4:3; Mal 1:9).

Under the First Covenant, “beseech” is rarely used to urge people to walk acceptably with God. Through Moses and Joshua God did urge His people to “choose life” (Deut 30:19), and whom they would serve (Josh 24:15). Once God spoke of the eunuchs who did “choose the things that please me, and take hold of my covenant” (Isa 56:4). You will search in vain for repeated admonitions of choice under the Law. They simply are not there.

statement that immediately precedes the exhortation. “For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen” (11:36). Faith can take hold of that word, being convinced of both its truth and relevance. When that is done, an immediate and favorable response will take place. Fulfilling the word is thus seen as possible as well as necessary.

Circumstances Unveiled

Also consider the things the Spirit has unveiled to us. Some of Israel were blinded and cast away because of their unbelief (11:20). What is more, we Gentiles will also be cut off if we are guilty of unbelief (11:22)). When men cease to theorize about those statements, choosing to embrace them, they will enter into the activity toward which we are now exhorted.

God’s Predestination

Contemplate the many preceding references to God’s foreknowledge, predestination, and election.

- ❑ “Therefore hath He mercy on whom He will have mercy, and whom He will He hardeneth” (9:18).
- ❑ “Shall the thing formed say to Him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?” (9:19).
- ❑ “Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honor, and another unto dishonor?” (9:21).
- ❑ “Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been as Sodoma, and been made like unto Gomorrha” (9:29).
- ❑ “Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace” (11:6).
- ❑ “God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear; unto this day” (11:8).
- ❑ “As concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes: but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers’ sakes” (11:28).
- ❑ “For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance” (11:29).
- ❑ “For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that He might have mercy upon all” (11:32).
- ❑ “For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen” (11:36).

These are unquestionably powerful statements. Some have taken them and formed a rigid theology that has neither heart nor sense. They imagine such words mean those in Christ cannot possible lose their status. Others are convinced human responsibility is totally unreasonable – that God will do what He has determined without any regard whatsoever for those with whom He deals.

This is certainly not the place to deal with such absurdities. It is enough to note the nature of the exhortation before us, and to acknowledge it is given against the backdrop of the above declarations. Among other things, that means Divine foreknowledge, predestination, election, and purpose do not exclude the fact that there are things for which we are responsible. It means that it is not only in order, but it imperative, that we plead with the people of God to engage in such

You will search in vain for repeated admonitions of choice under the Law. They simply are not there.

Things are quite different in redemption. A change has been wrought in those who are in Christ Jesus, so that they may now be exhorted to give themselves more fully to the Lord. Fourteen times the Epistles use the words “I beseech thee,” or, “I beseech you” (Rom 12:1; 15:30; 16:17; 1 Cor 1:10; 4:16; 16:15; 2 Cor 2:8; 10:2; Gal 4:12; Heb 13:19,22; 1 Pet 2:11; Phile 10; 2 John 5).

In Christ, it is reasonable to urge believers to become active in the will of the Lord. They have received the capacity to do so, and their reconciliation to God demands that they do so.

God and All Things

In this particular text, ponder the holy activities as God requires.

All of this is in the word “therefore.” This means that failing to do what is said is totally unreasonable – it is a form of spiritual insanity. The lack of response to this exhortation reveals a corrupt heart, the presence of unbelief, and imminent danger.

BRETHREN

This is not an exhortation for sinners, but for saints. It is a word to those who have been justified, and have peace with God (5:1). It is addressed to those who are dead to sin and alive unto God (6:11). This is a word to those who are not condemned and are in Christ Jesus (8:1). Those who imagine that those in Christ Jesus can be ignored are in serious error. When no words of comfort are addressed to the saints, and no words of exhortations given to them, they are harmed, not helped.

Many a local congregation rarely hears a word of admonition to the believers. Sermons are prepared for those who are alienated, and appeals are made to those who are at a distance from the Lord. From whence does such a propensity come? Certainly not from Scripture. The words before us are addressed to people whose faith had been spoken of “throughout the whole world” (1:5). They form a reasonable transition from the doctrinal to the practical. They are a spiritually natural conclusion to what has been said.

BESEECHING

“I beseech you . . .” Other versions read, “I urge you,” ^{NASB/NIV} “I appeal to you,” ^{NRSV} “I call upon you,” ^{YLT} and “I plead with you,” ^{NLT}

Beseeching assumes reconciliation to God, and a sensitivity to His will. It does not mean that what is urged will take place without further impetus. The perceptive minister knows God works in His people both to will and do of His own good pleasure (Phil 2:13). He is confident that God will “perform” a good work in them “until the day of Christ” (Phil 1:6).

He also realizes the Lord does this, among other things, through admonitions, exhortations, and beseechments.

There is a sense of urgency and immediacy in beseeching. This is not something to be put off, or thought upon for a lengthy period while hesitating to do what is said. Beseeching, urging, or pleading, are presented in the contexts of both danger and blessing. The danger is that the hearers will not engage in the action that is urged, thus putting themselves in jeopardy. The blessing is that the intended activity will produce spiritual results that can be realized in no other way.

BY THE MERCIES OF GOD

“. . . by the mercies of God.”

Other versions read, “in view of God’s mercy,” ^{NIV} and “by the compassions of God.” ^{DARBY} Some versions refer to the of the Lord” (Psa 89:1), “great mercies” (Isa 54:7), and “sure mercies” (Isa 55:3). Our great God is also referred to as “the Father of mercies” (2 Cor 1:3).

“The mercies of God” refer to the plentitude of God’s mercy as well as its frequent expression. His tender consideration and pity are neither sparse nor infrequent.

What Does This Mean?

What is the meaning of this expression? Is the exhortation given because of the mercies of God, as though Paul said, “Because of God’s mercies, I am pleading with you to . . .”? Has the mercy of God prompted the Apostle to plead so strongly with the people? I do not doubt that the awareness of God’s rich mercies constrained the Apostle to so write. However, that is not the meaning of this passage.

Many a local congregation rarely hears a word of admonition to the believers. Sermons are prepared for those who are alienated, and appeals are made to those who are at a distance from the Lord.

The meaning is that the exhortation is to be carried out through “the mercies of God.” That is, what believers are asked to do, [i.e., present their bodies as a living sacrifice to God], is to be accomplished “in view of God’s mercy.” ^{NIV} It is to be accomplished “through the compassions of God.” ^{YLT} One version says to make the offering while “remembering the mercies of God.” ^{NJB} Still, the expression seems a bit vague to some.

“mercies of God” in the singular: i.e., “in view of God’s mercy.” ^{NIV} The plural form is, however, the correct one: [οἰκτιρημάτων] “mercies.” This word emphasizes the abundance of God’s mercy, and is used several times in Scripture. Jacob confessed to God, “I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth, which Thou hast showed unto Thy servant” (Gen 32:10). David declared “for His mercies are great” (2 Sam 24:14). Solomon prayed, “remember the mercies of David thy servant” (2 Chron 6:42). Nehemiah spoke of God’s “ manifold mercies” (Neh 9:19), and the Lord’s “abundant mercies” (Neh 9:27). There is also reference to the Lord’s “tender mercies” (Psa 25:6), “the mercies

The “mercies of God” have been declared in the previous chapters. They have to do with His gracious intentions and activities toward us. They reveal His desire to bless us.

- The saints are beloved of God (1:7a).
- God called us to be saints (1:7b).
- Grace and peace come to us from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ (1:8).
- God has provided the Gospel as the power to accomplish salvation (1:16).
- God’s righteousness has been revealed (1:17).
- God revealed Himself in His creation (1:19).
- God is rich in goodness, forbearance, and longsuffering, which lead men to repentance (2:4).

- ❑ There is no respect of persons with God (2:11).
- ❑ In spite of man's total unworthiness, the righteousness of God has been revealed apart from Law (3:21).
- ❑ The righteousness of God is given to all who believe (3:22).
- ❑ Justification is free to those who have sinned and come short of the glory of God (3:24).
- ❑ God set Christ forth, evidently and effectually, as a propitiation for sin (3:25).
- ❑ God is the God of the Gentiles as well as the Jews (3:29).
- ❑ God imputes righteousness without works (4:6).
- ❑ God quickens the dead (4:17).
- ❑ The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit (5:5).
- ❑ God commended His love to us in Christ's death for us while we were yet sinners (5:8).
- ❑ God reconciled us to Himself through Christ's death (5:10).
- ❑ The gift and grace of God has abounded to many (5:15).
- ❑ In Christ God condemned sin in the flesh (8:3).
- ❑ God provides for our needs through the interceding Holy Spirit (8:26-27).
- ❑ God works everything together for the good of those who love Him and have been called according to His purpose (8:28).
- ❑ God has determined that all in Christ will be glorified (8:29-30).
- ❑ God has provided a constant Intercessor for us in heaven (8:34).
- ❑ God shows mercy (9:16).
- ❑ God makes vessels for honor (9:20).
- ❑ God endured with much longsuffering vessels suited for destruction (9:22).
- ❑ God has not cast away Israel (11:1-2).
- ❑ God concluded all in unbelief and disobedience that He might have mercy on all (11:32).

All of these are evidences of Divine mercy. From His longsuffering toward Israel to the conferment of righteousness upon Gentiles who did not seek it, He has made Himself known. He has extended Himself to redeem humanity, sending His Son to do what Adam's offspring could not do. He empowers and sustains His people through the Holy Spirit. He provides for their protection and sustenance in the interceding Savior.

As we consider these great proclamations, we derive strength and encouragement from them. God has shown us He consistently honors faith. Those who are willing to trust Him will be helped by Him. That includes Abraham in a spiritually primitive day, and Paul responding to His call while in a nation that had rejected Christ Jesus.

There is no word in Scripture that would lead us to believe the Living God is not kindly disposed

There is no word in Scripture that would lead us to believe the Living God is not kindly disposed toward those who earnestly seek to do His will.

toward those who earnestly seek to do His will. Anywhere and everywhere men have chosen to seek the Lord and obey His will, God has undergirded their efforts. Wherever faith is found, Divine favor will be experienced. Further, hearts convinced that God is merciful will be disposed to trust Him. Those who consider that God "is good," and that "His mercy endures forever" (1 Chron 16:34; Psa 136:1), will be encouraged and empowered to do His will. While they live within the influence of that dominant consideration, Divine exhortations make perfect sense. To fulfill them becomes the preference of those who have no doubt of the reality and accessibility of "the mercies of God."

Wrath and Beginnings

The wrath of God and the imminence of the day of judgment can also have a powerful constraining force upon the heart. However, they are not intended to be a permanent constraining factor. The soul cannot advance toward glory by being surrounded by "fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries" (Heb 10:27). That often induces a beginning, but brings precious few, if any, souls into glory.

A Prevailing Consideration

At some point, the soul must be brought under the prevailing contemplation of the "mercies of God." It is only through them that we will be able to fulfill exhortations, such as the one we will now consider. If God is not good to us, we will not be able to make this presentation. If He does not pity our frail frame, we will not be able to make a "living sacrifice." If His favor is not upon us, and His grace does not sustain us, we will prove too weak for this challenge. It is "by the mercies of God" that this will be accomplished, or it will not be accomplished at all!

A FINAL OBSERVATION

I cannot leave this section without making one additional observation. Where the people of God are not constantly reminded of the "mercies of God," it is not likely that "living sacrifices" will be made. Constant diets of Law, external disciplines, entertainment, and social and domestic issues, and the like, will not produce a God-glorifying harvest. When the church becomes the focus, sacrifices are diminished. When the family becomes the center of attention, sacrifices to God are no longer the issue. When Law is the thrust, what is given to God is rarely seen in a personal way.

The people of God must wisely and consistently be given a regular diet of grace and mercy. The Gospel of Christ, which is the supreme carrier of these Divine bestowments, must be at the heart of preaching and teaching. Nothing should be allowed to move us at such a distance from the Gospel we are no longer inclined to declare it. No matter how deplorable the condition into which professed believers have fallen, even if they have left their first love like Ephesus, room must be made to declare, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God” (Rev 2:7). Even if a church is lukewarm and repulsive like Laodicea, after the rebukes have been issued, the incentives of grace must be held before them. “To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne” (Rev 2:21). Do not underestimate the power of “the mercies of God!” They will accomplish in people what no moral code, however lofty, can do.

THE PRESENTATION OF YOUR BODIES

“^{1b} . . . that you present your bodies a living sacrifice . . . ” It is interesting to speculate what practical application of the truths expounded in this book would be made by our religious peers. What kind of admonition would come to their mind when hearing of a Sovereign God who loves Jacob and hates Esau? What sort of reactions would be expected when hearing of God raising up Pharaoh, cutting some branches off of the tree of Israel, and grafting in some branches from a wild olive tree? How would men be expected to respond to the promise that God would turn away ungodliness from Jacob, or that He was able to graft them in again? What are believers expected to do when they hear about righteousness being imputed, or faith being the basis of acceptance, or God working all things together for their good?

I do not doubt that some imagine no response is necessary at all. Some simply thrust all of these things from their mind, perceiving them as too deep for them, and thus proceed with their own private agenda. The mind-set of the average Christian is far removed from making any association between the profound declarations of the Lord and the response of His people to them. However, God does require a response from us, and will exhort us to see to it that it is accomplished.

If we do not approach this text with that in mind, it will appear to be a mere option – something we may or may not do. It may even be perceived as something that separates advanced believers from juvenile ones, or leaders from followers. Although quite common, such conclusions are all delusions, bringing death to the soul and separating the individual from the Lord.

No one can afford to embrace them.

The fact that this exhortation is to be fulfilled “by the mercies of God” accentuates its indispensability. The appeal to God’s mercy does not suggest He will be tolerant of a refusal to do what He says. It does not indicate what is admonished is really not necessary, or that He is willing to remain and work with the deluded soul who ignores this requirement. Rather, “the mercies of God” confirm that He will work with us in this area. And will do so because of its absolute necessity. Neither the Law, its ceremonies, nor grace, remotely suggest that God will ever receive what is not presented to Him. His “mercies” provoke and enable that presentation to be made. This confirms how necessary the presentation is, else religion becomes intensely personal. When the exhortation “that you present” is read or heard, the sensitive soul immediately translates it into “that I present.”

The “you,” a supplied pronoun, is the “brethren” in the first clause. It is “beloved of God” and “the called of Jesus Christ” 1:7. It is those who are “justified” in 5:1, and those who “are not under the law, but under grace” of 6:14.

Responsibility Does Not End at the Beginning of Spiritual Life

As elementary as it may seem, our responsibility toward the Lord does not end when at the beginning of newness of life. Although it is not fashionable speak in this manner, God is calling His people to higher ground. Our text is an excellent example of this. In view of many religious emphases, it is interesting to consider what the text does not say. Remember, this is the beginning of a new section of the book, and it is the very first exhortation constrained by the lofty truths we have contemplated.

Depending on the church environment to which you have been subjected, you may very well have heard one or more of the following priorities. “Begin witnessing to everyone,” “Get the baptism of the Holy Ghost,” “Assume the proper role in your home,” “Get involved in politics,” or some similar emphasis. Whatever place may be assigned to these things, it is not one of priority.

“PRESENT YOUR BODIES”

“ . . . present your bodies . . . ” Other versions read “offer your bodies,”^{NIV} and “give your bodies.”^{BBE/NLT} The Amplified Bible reads, “make a full decisive

The mind-set of the average Christian is far removed from making any association between the profound declarations of the Lord and the response of His people to them.

“THAT YOU” – IT IS PERSONAL!

A legalistic religion tends to emphasize what is required in others. It moves those who are unaware that a log is protruding from their own eye, to seek to remove a small sliver from the eye of a brother. However, when the grace of God consciously surrounds the heart, one’s dedication of your bodies – presenting all of your members and faculties.”

The word “present,” or “offer,” means to place beside or near, to place something at the disposal of another. It involves the invitation for another to examine as well as accept what is offered.

Presentation, or offering does not assume acceptance by God, but earnestly seeks it. When something is offered to God, an appeal is made for it to be received. This reception is not assumed. In such presentations God looks upon the heart and the thrust of the person’s life, as well as the conformity of the offering to His requirements. There have been things offered to God that were not accepted.

- Cain’s offering was not accepted (Gen 4:5).
- King Saul’s sacrifices were not acceptable (1 Sam 15:22).
- The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to God (Prov 21:27).
- Israel’s sacrifices became an abomination to God (Isa 1:11-14; Jer 6:20; 14:12; Amos 5:22).

Under the Law, for example, there were certain requirements for offering of an animal to God.

- It had to be at least eight days old (Lev 22:27).
- It has to be offered with salt (Lev 2:13).
- A male without blemish (Lev 22:19).

In the days of Malachi God upbraided the priests for offering unacceptable things to Him. This included “polluted bread” and “blind,” “lame,” and “sick” animals (Mal 1:7). Thus the quality of the sacrifice as well as the one making the sacrifice was judged.

This reasoning is to be applied to the offering now before us, for they were written for our learning. Those ancient sacrifices, and the rules pertaining to them, revealed the mind of the Lord concerning better sacrifices. He meticulously fulfilled them in the offering of His only begotten Son. We do well not to ignore them in the presentation of our bodies to God.

What the Spirit Says of Our Bodies

A novice might imagine that God would ask us to offer our hearts, or our minds, or our wills to Him. Instead, He asks us to present our bodies! Here is the weakest part of our beings, the most culpable member of our makeup. He does not ask us to ignore our bodies, but to present them to God! He knows they are, from one perspective, “vile bodies” (Phil 3:21). That, of course, is precisely why they are to be “presented” or “offered” to Him. It is in prospect of this presentation that the following is said of our bodies.

- The Spirit quickens our “mortal bodies” (Rom 8:11).
- Our bodies are “the members of Christ” (1 Cor 6:15).
- In baptism, they have been “washed with pure waters,” thus dedicating them to the Lord (Heb 10:22).
- The body is “for the Lord” (1 Cor 6:13).
- The body is the temple of the Holy Spirit (1 Cor 6:19).
- God is to be glorified in our body (1 of presenting our bodies to God.

In delineating this aspect of spiritual life, the Spirit continued, “yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God. . . even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness” (6:13,19). Our “instruments” are all of our capacities of expression. These were formerly devoted to sin. This is described as the “throat,” “tongues,” “lips,” “mouth,” and “feet,” being given over to iniquity. Whatever is employed to think, speak, and do iniquity is now to be presented to God!

The Body Belongs to God, Yet Is Yours

Strictly speaking, the body belongs to God, both by creation and redemption. He “formed” the body “in the womb” (Isa 44:2), and purchased it in redemption (1 Cor 6:19-20). Yet, the body is also “your body.”

It is “your body” by stewardship, not

We cannot, therefore, be indifferent about our bodies. If they are “the members of Christ” and are “for the Lord,” who will dare to treat them with indifference. They are to be “presented” or “offered” to our God.

Cor 6:20).

We cannot, therefore, be indifferent about our bodies. If they are “the members of Christ” and are “for the Lord,” who will dare to treat them with indifference. They are to be “presented” or “offered” to our God.

What Is Our “Body”?

Our body involves more than the skeleton and flesh in which we live. Earlier, the Spirit spoke of our bodies in a broader sense, setting the stage for this commission. The sixth chapter declared we were not to allow sin to “reign” in our mortal bodies (6:12). That is the opposite by ownership. The advocates of abortion are completely wrong in affirming the woman has rights over her own body. It is not her body, but belongs to the One who formed and purchased it. No person is except from the declaration, “and you are not your own, for you were bought at a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God’s.”

Those who take this text and apply it to dietary practices and other aspects of health are in serious error. They detract us from the truth. Such people would never advocate fasting from both food and water for forty days – but Moses did (Ex 34:28; Deut 9:9). Jesus also “fasted forty days and forty nights" (Matt 4:2). In both cases, the body was offered to the Lord.

Some also criticize believers who are tireless in their labors for the Lord, saying they are "burning the candle at both ends." Whatever element of wisdom may be found in that saying, it is not worthy of extensive pursuit. Epaphroditus, for example, wearied himself "for the work of Christ," nearly to the point of death. It is said of him, "for the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life" (Phil 2:30). Paul referred to this type of attitude as being glad to "spend and be spent" for the souls of men (2 Cor 12:15).

While these examples are extraordinary, they reveal the extent to which the body can be presented to the Lord. Such noble souls are acutely aware that their bodies have been purchased by the Lord and belong to Him. There certainly is room for decided improvement in this area among believers.

Present Them!

Armed with an awareness of, and sensitivity to, these realities, our bodies are to be "presented" to God. There is an element of formality in this presentation, although that does not exhaust the meaning. This is not merely an attitude, although that is involved. The presentation is something like the response of Isaiah when He "heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" Having been purged of his iniquity, he immediately responded, "Here am I; send me" (Isa 6:8). He presented his body for Divine employment! When Jesus revealed Himself to Saul of Tarsus, "putting" him "into the ministry" (1 Tim 1:12), his response was immediate. He set about to conform his life to the calling he had received. Of this Paul said, "immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood: neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus" (Gal 1:16-17). He presented his body to God that Christ might "be magnified" in his body (Phil 1:20). God received it, and he was blessed.

The Western world has been plagued with a spirit of casualness – an attitude of simplicity and informality that requires little focus or rigor of mind and body. It is reflected in how people regard the work of the Lord, the fellowship of the saints, and personal holiness. It is seen in the way they speak, how they dress, and where their prime energies are spent. There needs to be a revival of presenting the body to God.

It is quite true that we are to give our hearts and minds to the Lord, our thoughts and our wills. It is also true that we are to "present" our bodies to God. After all, they are only a stewardship to be occupied for a short season. They are also the weakest and most vulnerable part of our constitution, all the more requiring that they be presented to God. Our bodies are to be placed at God's disposal, ready for His employment. It appears to me that this requires a certain aggressiveness that will separate the individual from the religious masses.

This presentation involves a persuasion of the reality of God and the supremacy of His will and work. This is not a matter of mere discipline, but of insightful commitment. The Spirit is not calling us to a routine, but to personal involvement with God. Philip had to marshal the energies of his body to join himself to the chariot of the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:29). I suggest that may have appeared far too challenging to a casual disciple (if there is such a thing). After all, the chariot was apparently moving, and it was in a desert.

The man in it was also a stranger to Philip. Philip was not told what to say, or how to join himself to the chariot. However, having presented his body to God, he "ran" to the person in the chariot, "heard" this government official reading, and asked him if he understood what he was reading (Acts 8:30). His body had been presented to the Lord.

But the presentation of our bodies to God is not always attended by such favorable circumstances. The bodies of Peter and John were "beaten" because of their presentation. However, they did not complain about the difficulty and pain related with that beating. They had presented their bodies to God. Thus, "they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His name. And daily in the temple, and in every house, they did not cease teaching and preaching Jesus as the Christ" (Acts 5:41-42). They knew why they suffered. They also knew the ultimate outcome of that suffering – reigning with Christ (2 Tim 2:12).

"A LIVING SACRIFICE"

" . . . present your bodies a living sacrifice." Every major version, and all more liberal translations and paraphrases, read the same way.

Most of the sacrifices under the Law were killed. The offering of animal life generally involved its termination. But this is not the type of sacrifice we are to make. Our bodies are to be "a living sacrifice." That is, the body is to be used in service to God, and as a means of bringing honor to Christ.

The heathen offered the bodies of their children to idols by causing them to "pass through the fire," thereby being consumed. God forbade such sacrifices to be made by His people (Lev 16:21). When their sacrifices required the taking of life, it was animal life, not life that was in the image of God. Even then, they were to be totally consumed, with nothing left for any other purpose (Heb 13:11). However, our text does not say we are to offer our bodies a “burnt offering,” but as a “living sacrifice.” The consumption of our bodies is not the objective, but their profitable employment for the glory of God.

Foreshadowed in the Levitical Priesthood

This type of sacrifice – “a living sacrifice” – was foreshadowed in the Levitical priesthood. They were not given an inheritance in the promised land. They were devoted exclusively to the Lord – living sacrifices. As it is written, “But the Levites shall do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, that among the children of Israel they have no inheritance” (Num 18:23). The tithes of the people were given to the Levites for this reason, because they had “no inheritance” among the people (Num 18:24). Even then, they were required to give a “tenth part of the tithe” back to God, for they spent their lives in exclusive service to Him (Num 18:26). Like Aaron the high priest, they were to “have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them.” God Himself was their inheritance: “I am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel” (Num 18:20). How strongly the words come through, “Therefore shall they have no inheritance among their brethren: the LORD is their inheritance” (Deut 18:2). They were living sacrifices, totally devoted to the Lord.

Depicted in the Live Goat and the Living Bird

The sacrifices made under the Law prefigured the thoroughness of Christ’s sacrifice. They introduced us to salvation by both the death and life of Jesus. After all, “if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life” (Rom 5:10). This twofold aspect of salvation is seen in two different sacrifices.

The goats. The day of atonement included the presentation of two goats. One was for the Lord, to be offered on the altar of burnt offerings. The other was a scapegoat, eventually to be released in an uninhabited place, removed from the flock and mundane use. In the case of the Lord’s goat, the life was forfeited. In the case of the scapegoat that life was preserved, but separated from all other uses (Lev 16:5-10).

Thus we have a picture of the nature of spiritual life. First, the “old man” is to be put off, mortified, and not allowed to express himself. Second, remaining life is to be removed from commitment to other uses – a “living sacrifice.”

The birds. In the cleansing of leprosy, whether in man or a house, two clean and living birds were to be taken. One of the birds was killed over running water. The living bird was then dipped in the blood of the other bird, and the blood sprinkled on the leprous person or house. The living bird was then to be loosed “into an open field,” where it could fly free (Lev 14:1-7; 35-53).

Once again, the Spirit has provided a depiction of a “living sacrifice.” This is nothing less than the offering of life itself, with all of its expressions, to the Living God. How appropriate for the mighty God to be given a “living sacrifice.”

A Continual Sacrifice

A “living sacrifice” is a continual one. It is not occasional, like those offered under the Law. Spiritual life is consistent, not cyclical. When the soul is erratic, and commitment to God uneven and sporadic, the individual is not helped and God is not glorified. Faith cannot operate on an emergency basis alone, and spiritual life cannot be lived occasionally. If the offering of our body to God is not continual, it will not be received. Such a sacrifice is inconsistent with both the nature and the purpose of God.

A “living sacrifice” cannot be offered unconsciously, or without an acute awareness that it is being done. It cannot be offered accidentally or inadvertently. It is not the result of happenstance. To offer a “willing sacrifice,” you must be both willing and deliberate.

A Conscious Sacrifice

A “living sacrifice” cannot be offered unconsciously, or without an acute awareness that it is being done. It cannot be offered accidentally or inadvertently. It is not the result of happenstance. To offer a “willing sacrifice,” you must be both willing and deliberate.

A genuine commitment of the body is made to the Lord in a full and dominating persuasion “that He is able to keep what I have committed to Him until that Day”^{NKJV} (2 Tim 1:12). Such a commitment exerts a great power upon us.

PRESENTED TO GOD

“^{1c} . . . holy, acceptable to God . . .” Other versions read, “holy sacrifice, acceptable to God,”^{NASB} “holy and pleasing to God,”^{NIV} “sanctified, acceptable to God,”^{YLT} “holy sacrifice-- the kind He will accept,”^{NLT} and “dedicated and acceptable to God,”^{NJB}

As I have already indicated, all sacrifices are not acceptable to God. Both the nature of the sacrifice and the heart of the one making it can disqualify the offering. For example, under the Law, the “hire of a harlot and the price of a dog,” could not be offered to the Lord (Deut 23:18). Also, the blood of the sacrifice could not offered “with leaven,” or yeast (Ex 34:15). The sacrifice had to be proper, else it would not be accepted. Sacrifices offered under the Law were separated from common use. They were devoted to God, and were not to have the least spot upon them, or deficiency within them. They could not be blemished or diseased, sick or lame. These requirements foreshadowed the type of sacrifice Jesus made, and the type we are to make.

The verse before us emphasizes the nature of the sacrifice – the presentation or offering of our bodies to God. It deals with a responsibility we have – a responsibility that involves the preparation of the sacrifice. Under the Law, extensive preparations were made before the sacrifice was offered. A drink offering was prepared to be presented with the burnt offering (Num 15:5). Wood was to be laid in an orderly manner on the altar (Lev 1:7-8). The priest who made the offering has to wash himself (Ex 30:20). The burnt offering was to be flayed, the head and the fat laid upon the altar, and the inwards and legs washed with water and laid upon the altar (Lev 1:6-9).

All of this prefigured the manner in which Jesus prepared Himself to be offered, and the manner in which we are to prepare to present our bodies to God. Sacrifices are not to be offered on the spur of the moment or with no thought and preparation. This is one of the manners of the Kingdom.

“HOLY”

Holiness is a quality “without which no man shall see the Lord” (Heb 12:14). “Holy” means blameless and dedicated. It involves being pure and consecrated.

Bodies presented as a living sacrifice to God must be “holy,” dedicated to Him and separated from the world. Those who labor for the Lord must themselves be clean. The words of the prophet Isaiah are appropriate here. “Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence, touch no unclean thing; go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the LORD” (Isa 52:11).

This very point is powerfully made in Second Timothy. “If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the master’s use, and prepared unto every good work” (2:21). The particular purging involved in this text is separation from false teachers (vs 16-18). The principle, however, applies to all forms of iniquity, particularly sins of immorality and bodily defilement. Human theology may allow for defiled individuals to engage in the work of the Lord, but God will not.

Our bodies are to be holy as well as our souls! How poignantly the Spirit states the case: “therefore glorify God in your body” (1 Cor 6:20). They are “the members of Christ” and are not to be given to uncleanness (1 Cor 6:13). A body that is “holy” is an “instrument of righteousness unto God” (Rom 6:13). They are bodies devoted to “holiness” (Rom 6:19).

Those who have given their bodies to sin are not to be received by the church. As it is written, “if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat” (1 Cor 5:11). These are matters that disqualify a person from Divine acceptance. “Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God” (1 Cor 6:9-10).

There is a noticeable lack of holiness in the professed church, and it is a most serious condition. The irony of the situation is that “praise and worship” is being emphasized by some of the very people who have little apparent regard for holiness. Above the noise and clamor of the religious world the Spirit shouts out, “But as He which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy” (1 Pet 1:15-16).

The truth of the matter is that a holy God cannot walk with an unholy people. A holy work cannot be fulfilled in an unholy body! When, therefore, we are called to present our bodies to God, it is understood that they are to be holy, devoted to Him, and uncontaminated with the manners and fashion of this world. Lips that speak guile and profanity ought not to seek to speak truth. Eyes filled with covetousness will not be able to see the things of God. Hands that fashion sinful things cannot minister in Jesus’ name. Feet that run in the way of transgressors cannot carry the Gospel of peace.

Let no one entertain the notion that God will receive the presentation of an unholy body. Nor, indeed, are we to imagine that God will receive us if we do not present our bodies to Him. Although these thoughts are revolutionary in some circles, they are very fundamental.

“ACCEPTABLE TO GOD”

“ . . . acceptable to God.” Other versions read “pleasing to God,”^{NIV} and “the kind He will accept.”^{NLT} The idea of “acceptable” is WELL pleasing, or especially satisfying. This is not an alternative “pleasing,” as though God will accept sacrifices from men with which He is not pleased.

You may remember there were some Israelites with whom God was “not well pleased.” It is said of them, “they were overthrown in the wilderness” (1 Cor 10:5). On the other hand, those who present their bodies a living sacrifice to God will enjoy Divine acceptance.

The idea here is that what God receives He uses in Divine employments. Bodies that are appropriately presented to Him are “sanctified and useful for the Master, prepared for every good work”^{NKJV} (2 Tim 2:21). Again it is written,

“Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you” (2 Cor 6:17). Those so characterized can enter into the “good works” for which they have been created in Christ Jesus (Eph 2:10).

By its very nature, the presentation of our bodies to the Lord is not a casual matter. They cannot be given to sin and presented to God. Our “members,” which include our bodies, cannot be yielded simultaneously “as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin,” and as “instruments of righteousness unto God” (Rom 6:13). Only one master can be served at a time, whether we speak of the mind, the soul, or the body.

Make it your aim to present your body to God, and for that presentation to be acceptable to Him. If sin necessitated the sacrifice of God’s only begotten Son, you may be sure no place will be made for it to continue in the believer.

Personal and resolute war must be declared against all forms of sin in the individual before our bodies are presented to the Lord. We must, at all costs, keep under our body. Once that is done, the presentation will be accepted, and overcoming grace will be experienced.

IT IS ONLY REASONABLE

“^{1d} . . . which is your reasonable service.” It is my understanding that a comparison is here made with the Jewish ceremonies of the Law, and idolatrous practices of the Gentiles. This statement is also to be compared with our former manner of life, when we were “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1-3), “foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another” (Tit 3:3). The Spirit will now show us that what is required of us is not an impossible yoke or burden. Nor, indeed, is it to be considered unreasonable, or something impossible to comprehend or do.

IT IS ONLY REASONABLE

Some versions use the word “spiritual” in the place of “reasonable” (NASB/NIV/NRSV). The difference between the two words is not as large as at first appears. Although it is a bit technical, a brief explanation is in order.

The word “reasonable” comes from the Greek word λογικήν [logikan], from which the word “logic” is derived. Lexically, the word means “rational,” or “spiritual,” or “belonging to the real nature of something.”

The meaning here is that what is asked of us conforms to the real nature of life in Christ Jesus. Or, to view it from the opposite side, to fail to present our bodies to God in the manner prescribed is contradictory of spiritual life. In other words, it is spiritually insane to fail to present our bodies to God. There is a form of reasoning that belongs to the Holy Spirit. It is called “the mind of the Spirit” (Rom 8:27). In the sense of our text, anything that conforms to that mind set, “the mind of the spirit,” is “reasonable.” Anything that does not is mind of the Lord. This we read, “For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace” (Rom 8:6). This may be thought to be too shallow, giving license to imagine a person can think in harmony with the Spirit, but live in contradiction of the truth. If we are tempted to think in this manner, it is well to remember the words of Solomon, “For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he” (Prov 23:7). Jesus confirmed this was the case by declaring “For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies; these are the things which defile a man” (Matt 15:19). Again He said, “out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh,” and “A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things” (Matt 11:34-35). Again it is written, “with the mind I myself serve the law of God” (Rom 7:25).

The Spirit will now show us that what is required of us is not an impossible yoke or burden. Nor, indeed, is it to be considered unreasonable, or something impossible to comprehend or do.

Thus, the word “reasonable” emphasizes how this presentation makes perfect sense to faith. The word “spiritual” underscores how it perfectly blends with the nature of life in Christ Jesus. There is nothing about the presentation of a holy body to God that conflicts with sound thought. There is also nothing about it that interferes with spiritual life, or retards our response to God.

unreasonable.

From this perspective, true spirituality does not consist of certain forms of human conduct. Rather, it is a condition where the individual is brought into accord with the

Sacrifices Under the Law

The sacrifices imposed under the Law were not intended to conform to either human nature or the nature of spiritual life. They were appointed shadows and prefigurements, designed to point us to ultimate sacrifice that would precisely conform to Divine purpose.

Sacrifices made under the Law “could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience” (Heb 9:9), and were never intended to do so. Neither, indeed, could those sacrifices “make the comers thereunto perfect” or purge the conscience of the “worshippers” (Heb 10:1-2). Also, “it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins” (Heb 10:4). From this point of view, they were not reasonable.

I am careful to say that from the standpoint of obedience, those sacrifices were reasonable. It would have been the epitome of ignorance to refuse to offer them unto God. Yet, there was a certain abrasiveness about them, for they did not accomplish what God desired. Rather, they were preparatory in both substance and nature.

It was “necessary” that required cleansing be accomplished “with better sacrifices than these” (Heb 9:23). To confirm what I have just described is the case, it is written, “In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure” (Heb 10:6; Psa 40:6). They were unreasonable as final sacrifices, and as a means of procuring a cleansed conscience. They were reasonable from the standpoint of foreshadowing the greater and effective sacrifice of Christ.

Sacrifices under the Law were, in a sense, impersonal. Although animals were taken from one’s own flock, yet the personal life of the sacrificer was not offered to God. From the standpoint of routine, a technically qualified sacrifice could be offered while the heart remained aloof from God. Further, following the sacrifice, made in strict accord with revealed procedures, the conscience remained contaminated by sin, forbidding the individual to enter into the presence of the Almighty.

In this regard, the sacrifices, and other aspects of the ceremonial Law, were “weak and beggarly elements” (Gal 4:9). They were in order until Jesus came, but are totally unacceptable in this day of salvation.

Gentile Sacrifices

All of the sacrifices made by the Gentiles are covered in the phrase, “worshiped and served the creature more than the Creator” (Rom 1:25). That is surely the epitome of unreasonableness! Elsewhere, the Spirit is even more precise on this matter: “the things which the Gentiles sacrifice they sacrifice to demons and not to God” (1 Cor 10:20; Deu 32:17).

completely unreasonable.

“SERVICE”

“Which is your reasonable service.” Other versions say, “which is your spiritual service of worship,”^{NASB} “this is your spiritual act of worship,”^{NIV} “which is your spiritual worship,”^{NRSV} “which is the worship it is right for you to give Him,”^{BBE} and “that is the kind of worship for you, as sensible people.”^{NJB}

The word “service” comes from the Greek word λατρείαν, which means “religious service based in worship of God, divine service, worship.” Thayer’s Greek lexicon defines the word as “the service and worship of God according to the requirements of the Levitical law,” and “to perform sacred services, to offer gifts, to worship God in the observance of the rites instituted for His worship.”

But, what of the sacrifice that is urged in our text? How reasonable is it to present your body to God, holy and completely? To those who live by faith and walk in the Spirit, this presentation makes perfect sense.

Israel’s “Service”

This precise word, in both English and Greek, was used in the ninth chapter, and will serve to more precisely define its use here. In the itemization of the advantages given to the Jews, the Spirit mentioned “the service of God” (9:4). Other versions read, “the temple service,”^{NASB} and “the temple worship.”^{NIV}

The “First Covenant,” we are told, “had also ordinances of divine service (λατρείας), and a worldly sanctuary” (Heb 9:1). This service was not accomplished by the people in general, but by the priests, who “went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service (λατρείας) of God” (Heb 9:6).

Their sacrifices, therefore, were fundamentally and totally unreasonable.

It Makes Sense!

But, what of the sacrifice that is urged in our text? How reasonable is it to present your body to God, holy and completely? To those who live by faith (Heb 10:39) and walk in the Spirit (Gal 5:16), this presentation makes perfect sense. To those who are in fellowship with God’s Son (1 Cor 1:9) and are walking in the light as He is in the light (1 John 1:7), it is totally unreasonable not to present their bodies in a state of holiness to God. To put it another way, halfheartedness, under whatever guise it may be presented, is totally unacceptable to God. It is also

In this case, “service,” or “worship,” related to approaching the Lord. The approach was summarized into four categories.

- Offering appropriate sacrifices. The various sacrifices, and the procedures related to them, are defined in the book of Leviticus (Lev 1:9,13,17; 5:8; 14:12; 17:5).
- Receiving guidance. Special knowledge for judgment was appropriated by the use of the Urim and Thummim, two stones that were placed in the breastplate (Ex 28:30; Lev 8:8; Num 27:21; 1 Sam 28:6).

- Regular ministry in the Lord's presence, the holy place (Ex 28:43). The priests were to keep twelve cakes of bread upon the table of showbread (Num 4:7-8). The candlestick in the holy place was to be kept burning (Ex 27:20; 35:14). Incense was also to be kept burning upon the altar of incense (Ex 30:7-8).
- Unleavened bread and the flesh of the sacrifices that were given to the priests were also to be eaten "in the holy place," the place of regular priestly activity (Lev 6:16,26; 7:6; 10:13; 24:9).

These procedures were "the service" given to the children of Israel. They were merely external because the people did not have new hearts or spirits. They were fundamentally alienated from God, their hearts being "far from Him" (Isa 29:13). In fact, they did not have a heart to do what the Lord required of them, even though they said they would. Thus God Himself lamented, "O that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!" (Deut 5:29).

A Different Kind of Reasonableness

Under the Law, the reasonableness of the "service," or "worship," was of a different order. The fact that God required it was what made it reasonable. In the minds of the people, nothing else made the service "reasonable." Neither the priests nor the people knew they were dealing with shadows and prefigurements. That was not spelled out to the people. The coming Savior, His sacrifice, and the justification that would come from it, were, at the very best, hazy and without spiritual substance to them.

The primary motivation for following the procedures of Law was not the reasonableness of the deed. Rather, it was "that he die not." When Aaron went about to minister, he was told to wear the priestly vestments "that he die not" (Ex 28:35). Aaron was not go within the veil at unappointed times, "that he die not" (Lev 16:2). On the day of atonement, incense was to be appropriately burned, with the fragrance covering the mercy seat, "that he die not" (Lev 16:13). Aaron and his sons were to wash their hands and their feet before entering the tabernacle "that they die not" (Ex 30:20-21). It is no marvel that it is written of those under the Law, "those who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage" (Heb 2:15). Under the Law, "reason" was of a different order than it is in Christ!

A Stark Contrast

What a remarkable contrast there is in "reason" under grace and "reason" under the Law. The scope of God's purpose is more clearly seen, thereby compelling the insightful person to enter more heartily into the service of God. Now, it is "the love of Christ" that "constrains" us, rather than the fear of death. It makes perfect sense to cease to live for self and to live wholly for the Lord, presenting our bodies to Him. As it is written, "For the love of Christ compels us, because we judge thus: that if One died for all, then all died; and He died for all, that those who live should live no longer for themselves, but for Him who died for them and rose again" ^{NKJV} (2 Cor 5:14-15).

Our service to, or worship of, God, then, is a matter of personal judgment. That does not mean it is optional, or that we may choose to ignore God with impunity. Those with a propensity to Law have great difficulty understanding this. They cannot conceive of a person preferring to serve the Lord without the constraint of Law. But God will have none of their foolish reasoning. A person knowingly reconciled to God does not think like one who is not. They have received a new heart and a new spirit (Ezek 36:26). God has written His laws into their minds, and put them into their hearts (Heb 10:16). To such people, it is perfectly reasonable to present their bodies, in a state of holiness, to God. It is also refreshing and satisfying.

"Reasonable service," or "spiritual worship" is the same as worshiping "God in the Spirit" (Phil 3:3). In fact, the word "worship," in the Philippians text, is precisely the same root word translated "service" in Romans 12:1 (λατρεύοντες).

The Point

The point of our text, is that the presentation of our bodies to God is not a mere ritual. It is one attended by spiritual insight and deep devotion. We do not serve God by rote, or empty routine.

Real worship consists of living for the Lord, wholly committed to Him. It is taking what we have, what we are stewards of, and presenting it to God. It is living in concert with heaven, and in harmony with the Divine agenda. What is more, it is doing this willingly, insightfully, and with great joy.

Our whole persons are involved, spirit, soul, and body. All of them were purchased, and all of them are given to the Lord. Salvation involves all of them, and all of them to be offered in service.

Real worship consists of living for the Lord, wholly committed to Him. It is taking what we have, what we are stewards of, and presenting it to God. It is living in concert with heaven, and in harmony with the Divine agenda. What is more, it is doing this willingly, insightfully, and with great joy. To put it in words that the Holy Spirit teaches, "For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh" (Phil 3:3).

Ponder the Blessings

In view of what God has accomplished for us in Christ Jesus, it is totally irrational not to give ourselves to the Lord without reservation. The Son has made us "free indeed" (John 8:36), and we are no longer debtors to the flesh, to live after the flesh (Rom 8:12). Our enemy has been cast down, and is thus no longer able to hold us captive (Heb 2:14; Col; 2:15). Our nature has been changed (2 Cor 5:17). We have become heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ as well (Rom 8:17). We are partakers of Christ and of the Divine nature (Heb 3:14; 2 Pet 1:4). We have been “made the righteousness of God” in Jesus (2 Cor 5:21; Rom 5:19). Our names are written in heaven (Luke 10:20; Heb 12:23). An eternal inheritance is reserved for us in heaven (1 Pet 1:4). We are presently kept by the power of God through faith (1 Pet 1:5). Jesus ever lives to make intercession for us (Heb 7:25). Because we are sons, God has sent the Spirit of His Son into our hearts (Gal 4:6).

In view of these things, and more, what possible reason can be adduced for failing to present our bodies as a living sacrifice to God? This is our “reasonable service,” or “spiritual worship.”

The presentation of our bodies to God ought to be as direct and formal as the presentation of the Gospel of Christ to us. The Gospel left nothing to conjecture, but told us precisely what Jesus had accomplished. When we present our bodies to God, we should avoid generalities and ambiguities. It should be clear that we intend to live for the Christ and be willingly and insightfully employed in the execution of His will.

That is what is involved in presenting our bodies a living sacrifice – or a sacrifice of life – to God. It is a resolute presentation.

THE CONFORMITY THAT IS CONDEMNED

² And do not be conformed to this world . . .” Here is a Divine requirement of which we hear very little in this day. What does it mean? Other versions read, “Do not conform any longer to the pattern of this world,”^{NIV} “be not fashioned according to this world,”^{ASV} “let not your behavior be like that of this world,”^{BBE} “Don’t copy the behavior and customs of this world,”^{NLT} “Do not model your behavior on the contemporary world.”^{NJB}

AND . . .

The requirement stated in this verse is one of the implications of presenting our bodies a living sacrifice to God. By that I mean the presentation of our bodies requires this determination. To put another way, to become like the world voids any commitment to the Lord.

THERE ARE MATTERS TO BE AVOIDED

Just as surely as there are things to be done, there are things that are not to be done. There are benefits to be appropriated, and curses to be shunned. Just as surely as we are to love God, we are not to love the world (1 John 2:15). Not only are we to place our affections on things above, we are not to place them upon the earth (Col 3:1-2). We are to not only love the Lord, but hate iniquity (Psa 97:10). This is an aspect of spiritual life that is not popular, but it is absolutely essential if we are to please God.

“CONFORMED TO THIS WORLD”

“This world” is a “present evil world” from which Jesus has delivered us (Gal 1:4). Because “the world is passing away, and the lust of it” (1 John 2:17), its present “fashion,” with all of its is “not of this world” (John 18:36). The “wisdom of this world” has been totally repudiated by God (1 Cor 1:20) because it is “foolishness” to Him (1 Cor 3:19).

When men do not believe the Gospel, it is because “the god of this world” has blinded their minds (2 Cor 4:4). Walking, or living, according to “the course of this world” is what necessitated salvation. It constitutes alienation from God and dominance by the devil (Eph 2:1-2). Satan’s hierarchy includes personalities described as “the rulers of the darkness of this world” (Eph 6:12).

To be “conformed to this world” is to absorb its manners. It is to adopt its way of thinking, and to see life from its perspective. It is to be dominated by the seen, and be oblivious of the unseen. Being “conformed to this world” means we live for the here and now, without regard to the coming of the Lord, the day of judgment, and our eternal destiny. A person who is “conformed to this world” has its set of values, and lives according to its priorities. The “wisdom of this world” ranks high with such people.

To be “conformed to this world” is to be assimilated by its culture – to become one with it, so that one is no longer in fundamental variance with it.

Just as surely as there are things to be done, there are things that are not to be done. There are benefits to be appropriated, and curses to be shunned. Just as surely as we are to love God, we are not to love the world associations, is also “passing away” (1 Cor 7:31). “This world” is the realm of temporality, and it has been infected by sin and cursed by God. The cares and concerns of “this world” actually choke out the Word of God (Matt 13:22; Mk 4:19). Satan is the “prince of this world” (John 12:31; 14:30), and thus presides over its manners. Christ said His kingdom “Friendship” with the world constitutes enmity against God. Whoever, therefore, “wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God” ^{NKJV} (James 4:4). Such are people who “mind earthly things,” and for that very reason are “the enemies of the cross of Christ” (Phil 3:19).

If the grace of God teaches us to “deny ungodliness and worldly lusts” (Tit 2:12), those who are “not conformed” to the world have been effectively taught by the grace of God. Those who are conformed to the world have spurned that grace, seeking to turn it “into lasciviousness” (Jude 4).

It is written that “the whole world lies under the sway of the wicked one” (1 John 5:19). What folly, therefore, to be conformed to it, thinking like it, and adopting its values! An order from which men must be delivered is certainly unsuitable as a pattern for thinking and doing. A realm that is expressly said to be “evil,” has nothing of value to give to us, either for the mind or for the body. Its assessments are unworthy of our embrace. Its praise is not to be sought, and its approval is to be seen as utterly worthless.

If the world loves someone, it is because that individual is conformed to the world. We know this is the case because of the words of our blessed Lord.

If the world loves someone, it is because that individual is conformed to the world.

“If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, therefore the world hateth you” (John 15:19).

A SERIOUS ADMONITION

I cannot overstate the seriousness of this exhortation. The Western world is plagued with a church that is conformed to this world. It obtains its credentials from the world, and courts the world with its approach to the things of God. The exaltation, for example, of academics over faith is nothing less than conformity to this world. An emphasis upon worldly credentials is evidence of conformity to this world. Much of what is called “contemporary Christian music” conforms to the world. The counseling thrust of the Christian community is the result of conformity to this world.

Conformity to this world puts one at variance with the world to come, and at war with God. The only way survive the destruction of the world, which is an irreversible appointment (2 Pet 3:7), and dwell at last with the Lord, is to energetically avoid conformity to it. The world does have a pattern of thought, and a way of doing things. As a person in Christ Jesus, it is your business to NOT be conformed to the world.

THE REQUIRED TRANSFORMATION

“^{2b} . . . but be transformed by the renewing of your mind . . . ” More is involved in spiritual life than not doing certain things. There is a fullness in spiritual life that causes one to leave one realm for another.

LEAVING AND OBTAINING

When we are admonished to shun some things, it is in order that we may take hold on other things. Abraham left Ur of the Chaldees in order to go to a land God would show him (Gen 12:1-3). Israel left Egypt in order to go to Canaan (Josh 5:9-10). Elisha left plowing with twelve of oxen in order to follow Elijah (1 Kgs 19:19-20). Peter, Andrew, James, and John left their fishing trade in order to follow Jesus (Matt 4:18-22).

This is the manner of the kingdom. There are things that cannot be appropriated until other things are forfeited. There are lofty climes that cannot be entered until other ones are abandoned. Many a timorous soul has never gained higher ground because of an unwillingness to abandon lower ground. The stunted growth of many professed believers is directly traceable to their unwillingness to leave the realm of flesh for the realm of the Spirit.

Thus we leave the realm of the dead to live in the domain of the living. We “sin not” in order that we might do righteousness. We cease to serve Satan that we may serve God. We leave the domain of darkness that we might walk in the light as He is in the light.

In our text, we refuse to be conformed to this world, in order that we might be transformed. There will be no genuine transformation until there is a determined and consistent refusal to be conformed to this world. And, let it be clear, a change of the magnitude described in the word “transformation” must take place if we are to ever be with the Lord!

TRANSFORMATION, THE MODE OF THE KINGDOM

God is not calling men to reformation: i.e., to simply change their habits. The summons is not simply to a different way of doing things – a discipline of life, so to speak. In transformation the individual becomes different. It is more than living by a routine, it is living with a different set of preferences, loves, and hates.

The word “transform” comes from a word that means to transfigure, or change. The Greek word is μεταμορφοῦσθαι (metamorphose), from which we get the word “metamorphosis.” The change described by this word is like that of a lowly caterpillar into a lovely winged butterfly. It is a change like that of a legless tadpole into a leaping frog, or a loathsome larvae into a flying noisy locust.

Here is a total change that God has imprinted in the natural creation. The similarities between a caterpillar and a monarch butterfly can hardly be found. Neither, indeed, can we study a tadpole, deducing from its appearance that it will someday leap from water lily to water lily, leaving the water and croaking loudly. There is nothing in the larvae that suggests it will be a locust. These crawling creatures go into a cocoon and rot, only to emerge in another form. Interestingly, the larvae cannot reproduce. That can only take place after the transformation to the winged creature has taken place.

Here, however, is a most interesting observation. Those in Christ Jesus, already made “new creatures,” are admonished to “be ye transformed!” Our change, then, is not yet complete. While we are presently being “transformed” (same word) into the same image from one degree of glory to another” by the Holy Spirit ^{NRSV} (2 Cor 3:18), we do have some responsibility in the matter. We must seek to free ourselves from simplistic views of the Kingdom that leave us sitting in the easy chair of the flesh, expecting everything will turn out well for us with very little effort on our part. Our text will allow no such conclusion. Solemnly we are admonished, “be transformed!”

An alternate word for “transformed” is “transfigured,” which comes from the same word (μετεμορφώθη). When Jesus was transfigured, a significant change took place. His face “did shine as the sun” (Matt 17:2a). His clothes “became white as light” (Matt 17:2b). As He prayed, “the fashion of His countenance was altered” (Lk 9:28). In effect, His inner glory burst through His flesh and clothing, showing Him as He had never been seen by men before. In that state, He blended so well with the eternal order that Moses and Elijah appeared with Him in glory, speaking with Him “of His decease which He should accomplish at Jerusalem” (Lk 9:31). There you have a vivid picture of transformation!

“RENEWING OF YOUR MIND”

And how is it that we are to be transformed? Rest assured, you cannot go through a moral and spiritual metamorphosis by simply changing your habits. This cannot be accomplished by rote – a heartless execution of some mere routine. Nor, indeed, can it take place as long as one is conformed to this world.

Sin has taken such a toll on the mind, that even after we have been born again, it must be “renewed.” The mind is much like a sieve when it comes to the things of God. Without due attention, they are soon forgotten, and life is viewed without a due regard for the truth. The renewing of the mind is a renovation project. It is like a dilapidated structure that needs to be refurbished throughout.

The word “renew” means a complete change for the better. It speaks of a lifting of the mind into the domain of the heavenlies. If this does not take place – if we are not transformed by the renewing of our minds – we will “faint” in our minds (Heb 12:3). Through subtlety, Satan will corrupt the mind that is not renewed (2 Cor 11:3).

For those in Christ there is “the law of my mind” that must be strengthened and refurbished with the truth of God (Rom 7:23). It is, after all, with the mind that we ourselves “serve the law of God” (Rom 7:25). No wonder we are admonished, “be renewed in the spirit of your mind” (Eph 4:23). Such a renewal results from girding up “the loins” of your mind, and hoping up “to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 1:13).

Thinking must not be the weak point of the believer. In fact, believing and thoughtlessness cannot mix together. Those who “live in accordance with the Spirit have their minds set on what the Spirit desires” ^{NIV} (Rom 8:5). They have a “sound mind” (2 Tim 1:7), and “think” upon pure and holy things (Phil 4:8). As their minds are wrapped around the Word of God, pondering it and delighting in it, they begin to “live by every word of God” (Luke 4:4). They are transformed by the renewing of their mind.

The change described by this word is like that of a lowly caterpillar into a lovely winged butterfly. It is a change like that of a legless tadpole into a leaping frog, or a loathsome larvae into a flying noisy locust.

There is, in my judgment, far too little of this in the average church. There is little transformation because of fundamental deficiencies in the mind. And, there are deficiencies in the mind because of conformity to the world. It is time for this admonition to be sounded and heeded, spoken and received.

PROVING THE WILL OF GOD

“^{2c} ... that you may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.” Just as we refuse to be conformed to the world in order that we might be transformed by the renewing of our mind, we also are transformed in order that we might comprehend the will of God. An unrenewed mind cannot discern the will of the Lord, regardless of its seeming keenness. A wrong mind cannot take hold of right things. An unholy mind cannot benefit from holy things. An ungodly mind cannot perceive what God desires or is doing.

A person has to cut loose from the world to know what God wills. There must be a renewing of the mind before His purpose can be perceived.

PROVING, A HOLY ACTIVITY

“... that you may prove...”

Other versions read, “Then you will be able to test and approve,” NIV “so that you may discern,”
NRSV “so that by experience you may have knowledge,”
BBE and “so that you may discern for yourselves.”
NJB

“Proving” is an aspect of judgment – of arriving at a proper conclusion, and being able to discern, or distinguish, something. It is to be compared with rule keeping, where discerning is not the point, but merely adhering to a set of regulations that are not understood – like a child obeying its parents. God is not honored by an inability to test and validate what is right and wrong, good and evil, or acceptable and unacceptable.

A person who does not present their bodies a living sacrifice to God will not be able to renew their mind. The one who does not renew his mind, will not be able to properly test, or examine what is set before him. Such a person will not be able to arrive at a proper conclusion concerning critical things – things pertaining to life and godliness. It does not appear as though this is generally known. Nevertheless, it is true, and there can be no effective contradiction of it. A person cannot be spiritually discerning while their mind remains unrenewed, riveted to the earth. Those who insist on leaving their minds in a state of spiritual stagnation are thereby confined to ignorance concerning the will of God. There is no way to avoid this. It is foolish to attempt to do so.

WILL OF GOD

“... the will of God.” It is the will of God that is to be tested and proved. Thus I will address this first, while touching upon the various attributes of that marvelous will, or purpose, later.

The point of this text is the establishment of “what the will of God IS.”
NASB It is not to determine if the will of God is really good, or necessary, but what it really is. What does God want?

A person has to cut loose from the world to know what God wills. There must be a renewing of the mind before His purpose can be perceived.

What is God doing?

Immediately you see that what man wants is to be given the lower place. It is God’s will that is to occupy our attention. Further, knowing His will is not simply a matter of academic definition. The very fact that it is to be discerned or comprehended confirms that it immediately related to us. The will is not impersonal, even though it does not revolve around our persons. We profit from the will of God, but we ourselves are not the center of it. Therefore, as soon as our own wills sit upon the throne of our mind, the will of God becomes obscure. The renewing of the mind, in this case, involves the purging of purely selfish interests.

The truth of this text is stated by Jesus in yet another way. His words are most arresting, unveiling the reason for the discernment of some and the ignorance of others. “If anyone wants to do His will, he shall know concerning the doctrine, whether it is from God or whether I speak on My own authority”

NKJV (John 7:17). That is yet another way of saying men “prove what is... the will of God.” Being willing to do God’s will comes from the renewing of the mind.

It is fashionable to hear this expression in certain circles: “the will of God for my life.” I do not question that the will of the Lord is intensely personal. However, that perspective can be carried too far, giving the individual greater worth than the eternal purpose of God. God’s will for your marriage, home, vocation, and the likes, is never the focus of Scripture. Moses and the Prophets did not speak in this manner. John the Baptist avoided the snare of such approaches to the will of God. Jesus certainly did not deliver the truth of God from that perspective, nor did the Apostles.

This does not mean there is no Divine direction on a personal level. It does mean that is not the focus of God’s will. If God orchestrates the selection of a wife for Isaac, it is not merely for Isaac’s sake, but for the larger matter of His great salvation. Whether it is Joseph, David, or Daniel, the involvement of the Lord with them personally was never just for their sakes. There was a larger context to His workings with them, as ought to be evident. Godly men always spoke of their participation in the will of God that extended far beyond their persons.

In the case of Abraham, it was to bless “all families of the earth” (Gen 12:3). With Joseph, it was to “save much people alive” (Gen 50:20). With John the Baptist it was to “make ready a people prepared for the Lord” (Lk 1:17). In the case of Paul, it was to “open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me” (Acts 26:18).

The people of God must learn to think beyond the narrow perimeter of their own personal lives. The “will of God” has infinitely larger boundaries than our lives. It is knowing that will that is the point of this text. Although this will be greatly misunderstood, our assemblies must be noted for a proper emphasis. They should not make us more familiar with one another than with God.

The fact that our minds must be renewed in order to recognize God's will proves how hostile they are by nature. They must be refurbished by grace and truth in order to their proper and profitable use.

GOOD

The will of God is basically "good." That goodness pervades every facet of His will. It is "good" by nature, not merely by definition. There are poor souls who do not see God's "will" as good. Like Israel in the wilderness, they murmur against their lot in life, unable to associate it with the good will of the Lord.

By saying the will of the Lord is "good," the Spirit means God's intentions are good. From the personal view, God says, "For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, says the LORD, thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you a future and a hope"^{NKJV} (Jer 29:11). From a global point of view, God said to Abraham, "in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed" (Gen 12:3). From the perspective of His intention in Christ Jesus, "God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities" (Acts 3:26).

What God wants is good. It is good for His glory. It is good for angelic hosts to behold. And, it is good for you. But your mind must be renewed before this can be seen. And you must not be conformed to this world before your mind can be renewed. And, your body must be presented to God before you can come away from the world.

ACCEPTABLE

God's will is not only "good," it is "acceptable." Other versions read "pleasing."^{NIV/BBE/NAB} The word "acceptable" means "well pleasing," "giving satisfaction," and "serving well." This is the sort of thing Jesus described to the woman at the well of Samaria. "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst" (John 4:14). He proclaimed the same thing to the multitudes he fed with a few loaves and fishes. "I am the bread of life: he that cometh to Me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst" (John 6:35).

There is a deep and abiding satisfaction in perceiving and embracing the will of the Lord. Jesus said who ever did the will of God was His brother, sister, and mother (Mk 3:35). Those who realize that will surely do "the will of God from the heart" (Eph 6:6), for they know God will do good to them. God's will is referred to as "the good pleasure of His will" (Eph 1:5). If it brings pleasure to Him, it will surely to so to you!

It is not coincidence that "good and acceptable" are joined together (Rom 12:2; 1 Tim 2:3; 5:4). It is the goodness of God's will that makes it "acceptable." It makes it pleasant and satisfying to the soul.

However, as apparent as that may seem to you now, if your mind is not "renewed," the goodness of God's will is not apparent. His salvation will not appear to be preeminent. His blessing will not appear worth seeking. His Word will not seem indispensable.

Thus, you will not be able to associate your life with what the Lord is doing. There will not seem to be a connection with preparation for glory, refinement, and being changed from glory unto glory. O, there is a great and dreadful penalty to not being transformed by the renewing of our mind. Further, it is totally unreasonable not to be.

PERFECT

"... perfect ..." God's is also "perfect," and needs to be so seen. Although the word "perfect" comes from a rather common Greek word (τέλειον), it certainly does not have a common meaning here. Etymologically speaking, the word can mean full grown or mature. That, however, seems to me to be a vulgar way of looking at God's will – as though it developed over a long period of time, or was at some time immature, infantile, and undeveloped. We do well not to drag Divine traits through the slime pit language. Too much of earth and the wisdom of men then cling to these words.

The idea here is that the will of God is free from any defect – and has always been. It stands complete of itself, and does not obtain power or effectiveness by being mixed with something else. Nothing about God's will is out of balance, unjust, or incomplete – nor has it ever been so characterized. It is absolutely consistent, never varying, never being updated, and never requiring adjustment.

Nothing can be added to the will of God, and nothing can be taken from it. It stands wholly sufficient of itself. It only remains for it to be recognized and received for what it is. That requires revelation on God's part, and proving on our part. He has already revealed His will in the "record of His Son" (1 John 5:10-11). Apart from Christ, His will is hidden.

CONCLUSION

These short, yet pungent, verses are the spiritual conclusion to the first eleven chapters of Romans. They represent the proper response to the things that have been revealed. The announcement of a righteousness from God by faith, when seen, will provoke this reaction (chapter one). The fact that all have sinned, and can make no claim of personal uprightness before God, will compel men to fulfill the admonition of our text (chapters two and three). Once the imputed righteousness of God is received, the exhortation makes perfect sense (chapter four). The effective nature of faith will confirm this to the heart (chapter five). When the realities accomplished in our baptism are comprehended, we will enter joyfully into the fulfillment of this text (chapter six). The reality of the fierce inner warfare between the flesh and the Spirit will confirm the necessity of this work (chapter seven). The fact that we are justified by faith, are not condemned, and have been given the Holy Spirit will encourage us in this work (chapter eight). The inscrutable working of God with the Jews and the Gentiles will assure us of the effectiveness of God's will (chapters nine through eleven).

Does this not constrain you to see your body from a new point of view? Can you not present it to God in expectation of good things to come? Your body is what will be employed to minister to God's people. It will be used to glorify God by letting your light shine before men. Present it to God as a "living sacrifice," the offering up of your life to the great God of heaven. When it comes to this world and the devil, be stingy with your body. Do not give it to the world for its enjoyment and your condemnation. The world and the devil have had enough of your body. Give it to them no more. Present your whole body to God, together with every form of expression of which you are capable.

Be transformed by the renewing of your mind daily, even hourly. When you sense your mind gravitating to the lower regions of the earth, renew it by the consideration of the things unseen. Thus you will be transformed, gloriously changed to a new stage of glory. When you are taken up with cares of this world, renew your mind. Ponder the promises and thus be transformed by the renewing of your mind. When you are tempted, drawn away of your own lusts, renew your mind. Neutralize the temptation by pouring the Word into your mind and meditating upon its implications. Thus you will be transformed by the renewing of your mind.

It will not be long until you will be able to test and prove the will of God. You will see how good it is, and how accessible it is by faith. In the glow of that will, what the world offers will not appear good at all. The will of God, like the sun in its zenith, will outshine all other wills, including your own. You will see how acceptable and pleasing the will of God is. It will bring lasting satisfaction to your heart, thereby diminishing life's difficulties and challenges. You will see the will of God as perfect, without any flaw. It will never bring a disadvantage to you, or hide anything good from you. From every vantage point, it is good. In every experience of it, it is acceptable. Now, enter into the fulfillment of the text.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 38

SPIRITUAL GIFTS AND SERVING GOD

^{12:3} For I say, through the grace given to me, to everyone who is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think, but to think soberly, as God has dealt to each one a measure of faith. ⁴ For as we have many members in one body, but all the members do not have the same function, ⁵ so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and individually members of one another. ⁶ Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, let us use them: if prophecy, let us prophesy in proportion to our faith; ⁷ or ministry, let us use it in our ministering; he who teaches, in teaching; ⁸ he who exhorts, in exhortation; he who gives, with liberality; he who leads, with diligence; he who shows mercy, with cheerfulness.

(Romans 12:3-8)

INTRODUCTION

Having introduced us to the proper application of the marvelous proclamations and expositions of the first eleven chapters, namely the presentation of our bodies to God, the Spirit now develops the reason for this response. It is often the nature of Christian men to approach matters of religion from Mount Sinai. Thus, words like commandment, authority, duty, and obligation, rise to the surface of their vocabulary, becoming the primary motivation for living unto God. While there is some merit to this approach, it is certainly not the highest level of involvement, nor does it represent the most noble incentive. When lawful, it is largely how those who dwell in far off places are addressed – those living in practical aloofness from God.

The presentation of our bodies to God, without defilement and acceptable to Him, has been described as our “reasonable service,” or “spiritual act of worship.”^{NIV} As such, it is utterly unreasonable not to make this presentation. To fail in this presentation constitutes one unspiritual and unacceptable before the Lord. If this assessment is true, and I am persuaded it is, it completely changes the way in which the contemporary church is evaluated. Many of its boasts fall to the ground as worthless.

The text before us elaborates on the reasonableness of the sacrifice of our lives to God. Those in Christ have been called into holy involvements, and they are to be properly prepared for them. There is an underlying assumption that we have been placed in the body of Christ for a reason. There is a work to be done by each individual that requires the presentation of one’s body as a living sacrifice to God. It is a work that requires holiness on our part, and acceptance on God’s part. What is more, apart from this work, there is no reason to be added to the church (Acts 2:47), or be placed in the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:18).

I understand this may appear too harsh. Some would rather imagine we were called out of unholy involvements,

- IV. THE GIFT OF PROPHECY (12:6b)
- V. THE GIFT OF MINISTRY (12:7a)

- VII. THE GIFT OF EXHORTATION (12:8a)

but not into holy ones. Such cannot conceive of God's employment of every member of the body of Christ, choosing to think of only a few select souls being placed into actual Kingdom activity. Of course, there is a religious superstructure in place that encourages such vanity of thought. But it is seriously wrong, and must be thrust from us as the plague it really is. It will defile the soul!

At the very outset of creation, God declared the purpose for man: "let them have dominion" (Gen 1:26,28; Psa 8:6). Initially, that "dominion" related to the creation itself: "over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." The Psalmist stated it this way, "Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet: all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas" (Psa 8:6-8).

Do not imagine for a single moment this is the most precise statement of God's purpose for mankind. It was more of an introductory statement than a complete one. Governorship of the natural creation is far from being the pinnacle of the "dominion" God intends for man. There is sufficient revelation on this matter to make it sure to our hearts and minds. Men do not now have dominion over the creation.

- ❑ Three times Paul suffered shipwreck, often involving storm and tempest (2 Cor 11:25).
- ❑ The perils to which he was subjected involved "perils of waters," "perils in the wilderness," and "in perils in the sea" (1 Cor 26).
- ❑ "Hunger and thirst," and "cold and nakedness" were also among the experiences he endured (2 Cor 11:27).
- ❑ Saints of old time who ranked high before God "wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented . . . wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth" (Heb 11:37-38).

These precious souls did not appear to have dominion over the elements, as some boast today. But that does not mean they had no dominion, or that they were not given authority. Further, they will surely rise up in the day of judgment against those who have misrepresented the will of God and the nature of His great salvation.

The thrust of the application of our salvation is not dominance over the natural realm, but the presentation of our bodies as a living sacrifice to God. Do not imagine that God has called you into Christ to avert storms and famines. Whatever you may think of the possibility of such things, they are not the framework within which Divine fellowship and utility is realized.

When Jesus sent out the seventy, He told them, "Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall by any means hurt you" (Luke 10:19). But this was by no means intended to declare the nature of future involvements with Jesus. It related to the fulfillment of a work, not a domain of authority. James was killed by Herod. The Apostles were beaten by the Jewish council (Acts 5:40). Stephen was stoned by the council (Acts 7:59). Paul was stoned at Lystra (Acts 14:19). Antipas was martyred by the enemies of Jesus (Rev 2:13). Such noble souls as these would surely wince if they heard some of the nonsense that is preached in the name of Christ today.

The immediate area of our dominion will be defined in our text. It will be seen as bearing directly upon our relationship to the people of God. That relationship will involve Divine endowments, the grace of God, and the benefit of the saints.

THINKING PROPERLY

^{12:3} For I say, through the grace given to me, to everyone who is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think, but to think soberly, as God has dealt to each one a measure of faith. This is an elaboration on WHY we are to ascertain the will of the Lord: i.e., "so that you may discern what is the will of God--what is good and acceptable and perfect." ^{NR5V} The strong intimation is that living pleasingly and profitably before the Lord is not possible while one is ignorant of His will. God is not served in a state of ignorance. In fact, ignorance of God actually alienates the soul from Him. As it is written, "They are darkened in their understanding and separated from the life of God because of the ignorance that is in them due to the hardening of their hearts" (Eph 4:18).

As the above text indicates, an ignorance of God is a mark of being unregenerate. It has no place in the believer. Wherever the smallest portion of it is found, a hearty effort must be extended to rid ourselves of it. One of the key marks of the New Covenant is, "for all shall know Me, from the least of them to the greatest of them" (Heb 8:11).

Thus we have been admonished to "present" our bodies to God, a sacrifice of life, in order that we may come to know the good will of God. With determination, we are to avoid being conformed to this world. Rather, we are to be transformed by the renewing of our minds, which transformation will enable us to know the will of the Lord.

The grace of God equips the saints of God to do the work of God--by Given O. Blakely

The Spirit will now delineate a chief aspect of God's "good, and acceptable, and perfect will." It is essential to understand this is not an academic matter, involving merely the human intellect. This will involve our participation in the will of God as well as our knowledge of it. In salvation, we have been called into fellowship with Christ (1 Cor 1:9). We become laborers together with God (1 Cor 3:9), and the extension of Christ's own Person. The church is "the fullness of Him who fills all in all" (Eph 1:23). It is the repository in which His character and power are being poured. Here is where His will is executed and His purpose is being fulfilled. Our identity with Christ in His death, burial, and resurrection (Rom 6:4-6), has been in order that He might live in us and work through us.

This marvelous circumstance is seen in the words, "For all the promises of God in Him are Yes, and in Him Amen, to the glory of God through us"^{NKJV} (2 Cor 1:20). Again, it is written, "Now thanks be to God who always leads us in triumph in Christ, and through us diffuses the fragrance of His knowledge in every place"^{NKJV} (2 Cor 2:14). The weight of this situation is also seen in Paul's testimony concerning His own participation in this purpose. "Now then, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God were pleading through us: we implore you on Christ's behalf, be reconciled to God"^{NKJV} (2 Cor 5:20).

Not Limited to the Apostles

The Apostles have been placed "first" in the church (1 Cor 12:28). They are "first" in priority, with the greater responsibility of putting the foundation in place, and making known the formerly hidden purpose of God (Eph 3:5).

This Divinely orchestrated circumstance has led some to view the Apostles as separate from the rest of the body of Christ. This view is largely in the background of people's thinking, yet has moved them to live as though there were no God-ordained ministries in Christ's body today, or at best, very few of them. Thus masses of professing Christians have been reduced to mere spectators, with relatively little, if any, involvement in the good will of God. However, there are a great number of ministries that have been put into the church "after" the Apostles. These ministries are called "spiritual gifts" (1 Cor 12:1; 14:1,12). Those possessing them are called "stewards of the manifold grace of God" (1 Pet 4:10). As the Head, Christ works through them to minister grace to His people (Col 2:19).

It is essential to understand this is not an academic matter, involving merely the human intellect. This will involve our participation in the will of God as well as our knowledge of it.

These gifts are the theme of this section of the twelfth chapter. Their presence and functionality are the reason why we are to know the "good and acceptable, and perfect will of God." As we will see, the point is not merely to know about these abilities, but to actually be a part of their fulfillment.

SPEAKING THROUGH GRACE

"For I say, through the grace given unto me." Paul does not speak out of the reservoir of flesh! Nature is not the domain from which his knowledge of the things of God has been obtained. He does not speak as a Roman citizen and resident of Tarsus. Neither, indeed, does he address the people from the perspective of one who sat at the feet of Gamaliel (Acts 22:3). He does not speak as an expert in the Law, trained and disciplined among the most strict sect of the Jews, the Pharisees (Acts 26:5). In the flesh, he was, indeed, all of these things. Yet, they were a wholly unsuitable context from which to address the people of God.

The man of God speaks "through the grace" that was given to him. By this he means he is speaking "as God's messenger."^{NLT} He speaks in the capacity of an Apostle, where God has placed him in the body. He does not venture his opinion about things, but declares what grace has enabled him to see. He has been entrusted with a message, and he now speaks in strict accord with that message.

Spiritual gifts are dispensations of the grace of God. For this reason, those possessing them are "administering God's grace in its various forms"^{NIV} (1 Pet 4:10). Words that are spoken through the grace of God are words of love and benefit. They declare gracious provisions, and announce congenial desires. They are good for us, and yield good results. They announce God's "thoughts of peace" toward us (Jer 29:11). Such words must not be received as harsh laws, but as revelations of God's goodness toward us in Christ Jesus.

Paul speaks with authority, but it is authority to edify, not to bludgeon and coerce. As it is written, "according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to destruction" (2 Cor 13:10). Again he writes, "our authority, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction" (2 Cor 10:8). When this intention is perceived, Apostolic admonitions become sweet and precious to us.

Let us devote ourselves to speaking more from grace. As it is written, "Let your speech be always with grace" (Col 4:6). Thus will our words be "good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers" (Eph 4:29).

SPEAKING TO EVERYONE

"... to everyone who is among you." The words that follow are not addressed to the leaders alone, but to everyone. They are not intended for the wayward only, but for everyone. In a day fraught with specialized ministries to special groups, it is exceedingly refreshing to read a word that is for everyone!

This circumstance should come as no surprise to us. The Gospel has been declared to be God’s power to effect salvation in “everyone who believes” (1:16). Glory, honor, and peace are promised to “everyone who works what is good” (2:10). Christ is announced as “the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes” (10:4). “Everyone” who names the name of Christ is to “depart from iniquity” (2 Tim 2:19). Christ tasted death “for everyone” (Heb 2:9). Messages of grace are for “everyone.”

This observation may appear rather elementary, and even crude and unnecessary. However, we are living in an era when the power of the truth has been decidedly neutralized by addressing special groups within the body of Christ rather than the whole body. Often differing vocabularies are used to declare varying emphases. You will find no such approach in the Word of God. John the Baptist gave counsel to the soldiers, but his message was for everyone. Jesus spoke to everyone, with occasional words to groups like the Pharisees.

The more a word is addressed to special groups of believers, the less power it has to edify. The Apostles were appointed to minister to two major bodies of people: the circumcision (Jews) and the uncircumcision (Gentiles) – Gal 2:7. Their message, however, was essentially the same. They laid the same foundation and declared the same pivotal realities. A Gospel that cannot be preached to everyone ought not to be preached to anyone. A message that is confined to one part of the body of Christ is one that ought to be viewed with suspicion, and received with great reluctance. The message before us is “to every one of you.”^{NIV}

HOW NOT TO THINK

“ . . . not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think.” Other versions read, “not to have an over-high opinion of himself,”^{DARBY} “Be honest in your estimate of yourselves,”^{NLT} and “never pride yourself on being better than you really are.”^{NJB}

We Are God’s Workmanship

At the root of this admonition is the fact that we are God’s “workmanship” (Eph 2:10), and have been placed in the body of His Son in strict accordance with His good pleasure (1 Cor 12:18). To think “more highly” of ourselves, or pride ourselves in being better than we really are, is to think of ourselves apart from our placement in the body. It is to assign a value to ourselves that does not comport with what has been given to us by God.

However, we are living in an era when the power of the truth has been decidedly neutralized by addressing special groups within the body of Christ rather than the whole body. Often differing vocabularies are used to declare varying emphases.

According to the Measure of Wisdom

To view it from another perspective, it is to conduct ourselves as though we had more wisdom than we really possess. This would involve making judgments we are incapable of making. It also involves speaking as though we had authority about matters concerning which we have no “spiritual understanding.”

Abilities That Are Received

Yet another way in which persons can think too highly of themselves is to treat their abilities as though they had not received them. As it is written, “For who makes you differ from another? And what do you have that you did not receive? Now if you did indeed receive it, why do you boast as if you had not received it?”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 4:7).

Probing Matters Unrevealed

There are matters that ought not to be probed or investigated. These are things God has not been disposed to reveal to men. It is written, “The secret things belong unto the LORD our God” (Deut 29:29). Although the curiosity of man is disposed to look into such matters, it is better to confess with the Psalmist, “LORD, my heart is not haughty, Nor my eyes lofty. Neither do I concern myself with great matters, Nor with things too profound for me” (Psa 131:1).

A remarkable amount of corruption has entered the professed church through preachers and teachers who have thought more highly of themselves than they ought to think. As well, a considerable amount of unlawful controversy and division has taken place for the same reason. This is an area where every person must take care.

THINK SOBERLY

“ . . . but to think soberly.” To think soberly is to think within the context of reality. Rather than extending ourselves beyond the borders of what we have experienced and seen, thinking “soberly” humbly acknowledges one’s own limitations.

Those in Christ are to make a proper estimation of their own gifts and abilities. In so doing, they will be able to minister to and advantage the people of God. To fail to do this will only bring disruption and discord among the saints. Each believer should so conduct their life as to avoid the aphorism, “If I could buy him for what he is worth, and sell him for what he thinks he is worth, I would make a significant profit.”

THE MEASURE OF FAITH

“ . . . as God has dealt to each one a measure of faith.” Other versions read, “as God has allotted to each a measure of faith,”^{NASB} “in accordance with the measure of faith God has given you,”^{NIV} “each according to the measure of faith that God has assigned,”^{NRSV} “measuring your value by how much faith God has given you,”^{NLT} and “recognizing that God has given to each one his measure of faith.”^{NJB}

It is true, there is only “one faith.” From one point of view, ones possession of it can be referred to as “little faith” (Matt

6:30; 16:8), or “great faith” (Matt 8:10). That, however, does not refer to a “measure of faith,” assigned by God, but to the reception and use of that faith. Peter spoke of the faith we have received as being of the same kind as that which the Apostles received: “to those who have received a faith of the same kind as ours” (2 Pet 1:1). This, however, is not the perspective of our text.

The Measure

The word “measure” does not refer to quantity, i.e., a lot of faith, or not so much faith. It refers to a vessel used for measuring, such as a cup, bowl, bushel, omer, etc. The size of the vessel does not determine the value of the substance placed in it. One may use a small spoon for measuring salt or flavoring, but a large multi-cup vessel for measuring flour or sugar. The capacity of the vessel, or the measure, is determined by what the substance it measures is used for.

So it is with the “measure of faith.” While all of God’s people are given faith, each possess it is a measure – a capacity to fulfill a particular function in the body of Christ. The faith of the Apostles made them adequate for the Apostleship. The faith of Philip and Timothy equipped them to be evangelists (Acts 21:8; 2 Tim 4:5). The faith of Apollos made him an apt exhorter (Acts 18:27-28). The faith of Barnabas made him an able encourager and consoler (Acts 4:36).

It is important to note that faith, not training, makes us effective ministers for the Lord. Men are prone to view educational attainments as kingdom credentials, but they are not. It is what God gives us that equips us for effective work in His kingdom, not what we gain from men. That may appear to be very rudimentary, but it can easily escape our attention.

The exhortation to not think more highly of ourselves than we ought to think, and to think soberly, is an admonition to concentrate on what our faith equips us to do. We are to come away from philosophizing about faith and ministries. Ministry to the saints is to be accomplished, not talked about. It is the peculiar prerogative of faith to do this. Thus we are exhorted to allow our faith to be the directing influence of our work. Our thinking is in view of our faith. Our labors are to be motivated by our faith. Our gifts are made effective by our faith.

WE ARE MANY, YET ONE BODY

“⁴ For as we have many members in one body, but all the members do not have the same function,⁵ so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and individually members of one another.”

The people of God have been called into a single body, each individual being endowed with faith that qualifies him to provide needed resources to the rest of the body. Thus it is written, “And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful” (Col 3:15). The Spirit will now show us that God has so devised nature, particularly our bodies, that it reflects His intention for the church.

THE PORTRAYAL OF NATURE

“For as we have many members in one body, but all the members do not have the same function . . .” Our bodies are a demonstration of different parts working in harmony.

This same perspective is provided in the book of First Corinthians. “For in fact the body is not one member but many. If the foot should say, ‘Because I am not a

The people of God have been called into a single body, each individual being endowed with faith that qualifies him to provide needed resources to the rest of the body.

hand, I am not of the body,’ is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear should say, ‘Because I am not an eye, I am not of the body,’ is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where would be the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where would be the smelling? But now God has set the members, each one of them, in the body just as He pleased. And if they were all one member, where would the body be? But now indeed there are many members, yet one body. And the eye cannot say to the hand, ‘I have no need of you’; nor again the head to the feet, ‘I have no need of you.’ No, much rather, those members of the body which seem to be weaker are necessary. And those members of the body which we think to be less honorable, on these we bestow greater honor; and our unrepresentable parts have greater modesty, but our representable parts have no need. But God composed the body, having given greater honor to that part which lacks it, that there should be no schism in the body, but that the members should have the same care for one another” (12:14-25). The following should be noted.

- The body consists of many members.
- Being part of the body does not consist of everyone being the same member.
- All members are not the same.
- If there were not multiple and differing members, there would be no body.
- No part of the body can say it has no need of the other parts.
- Parts which appear to be weaker are often even more necessary.
- The parts of our body that are not of themselves attractive, are attired in a more comely manner.
- There is no need to vaunt the more prominent parts.

- All of this is a deliberate arrangement so there will be no schism, or rupture, in the body.

MANY, YET ONE

“ . . . so we, being many, are one . . . ”

The word “many,” in this case, means many different kinds. “Many” are numerically large (Rev 7:9), but numeracy is not the point. Just as the body has many different functioning parts, and all of them are necessary and beneficial, so the body of Christ has many different, yet essential, parts. They are “parts” in relation to function. They serve differing, yet harmonious, purposes.

Every part of the body of Christ is functional, deliberately placed in it to minister the grace of God. The call to sober thinking summons us to think in harmony with what God has called us to do.

The Human Body

In the human body, there are external visible parts such as the head, torso, shoulders, arms, legs, hands and feet. There are also external parts that are of a different nature, like the eyes, ears, nose, and mouth. There are other external parts that have different characteristics, like hair and skin. There are internal organs like the heart, liver, kidneys, and lungs. There are internal members like bones, tissues, sinews, and blood vessels. Blood and water are a vital part of the body, as well as the brain. Within the bloodstream there are microscopic bodies that are necessary, like white and red cells, and numerous antibodies. There are entire bodies of knowledge that deal with segments of the body. Histology is the study of tissue structure, while Cytology is the study of cell structure. The human body is indeed marvelous for its diversity and complexity, and more marvelous still for its unity. How true it is, “I am fearfully and wonderfully made” (Psa 139:14). No wonder those with insight confess, “Know ye that the LORD He is God: it is He that hath made us, and not we ourselves” (Psa 100:3). That applies to the realms of both nature and grace, the flesh and the spirit, and it is marvelous to consider.

The Body of Christ

As we might expect, the realm of the Spirit is even more marvelous than the realm of nature. Nature is only a faint reflection of the domain of the Spirit. The vast variety of spiritual functions within the body of Christ, together with their harmony with one another, and effectiveness for the purpose of God, is evidence of a great God with a great salvation.

There are no exhaustive lists of the various functions within Christ’s body. Occasionally, the Spirit will mention some of them. They are largely viewed from the standpoint of their variety and effective ministry. Too, those that are provided are given in view of the church addressed by the Epistle, and are therefore not intended to be a completed listing. Some samples are provided below, confirming what marvelous variety is found in them.

Just as the body has many different functioning parts, and all of them are necessary and beneficial, so the body of Christ has many different, yet essential, parts. They are “parts” in relation to function.

ROMANS. Prophecy, ministry, exhorting, giving, and showing mercy (12:6-8). In Romans, the gifts are viewed from the standpoint of faith, which is the means through which they are executed.

FIRST CORINTHIANS. Word of wisdom, word of knowledge, faith, gifts of healing, working of miracles, prophecy, discerning of spirits, different kinds of tongues, interpretation of tongues, apostles, prophets, teachers, helps, and governments (12:8-10, 28). In First Corinthians, the gifts are viewed from the standpoint of their origin and effectiveness. They are distributed by the Spirit (12:4), administered by the Lord (12:5), and activated by God who works all in all (12:6).

EPHESIANS. Apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastor-teachers (4:8-10). In Ephesians the gifts are seen as Christ’s provision for the church during the time of our absence from Him.

FIRST PETER. Speaking and ministering (4:10-11). Peter speaks of the gifts in relation to the grace of God, declaring in their execution we are stewards of the manifold grace of God—or the grace that, in the gifts, takes various forms.

WE DO NOT HAVE THE SAME OFFICE

“ . . . and all members have not the same office.” Most versions read, “the same function.” Behind this is the postulation that every member is functional, or serves a specific and needful purpose. No believer can say they do not belong to the body of Christ because they are unable to do what they conceive to be most important. On the other hand, no believer can boast they have no need of the other members because they imagine them to be inferior.

The roles we play in the body of Christ have been assigned to us, not selected by us. The faith that has been given to us is in strict accord with that assignment. When our faith is strong, we will fulfill our function to the glory of God and the help of His people.

ONE BODY IN CHRIST

“ . . . are one body in Christ . . . ” Elsewhere it is affirmed, “there is one body” (Eph 4:4). Much is made of this in Scripture. Those who are in Christ “being many are one bread, and one body” (1 Cor 10:17). Believers “are one body,” and “by one Spirit,” have been “baptized into one body” (1 Cor 12:12,13). The precise statement of our text (“we, being many, are one body”) is also made in First Corinthians 12:20. It is also declared that in Christ, Jews and Gentiles have been reconciled unto God “in one body” (Eph 2:16). We have been “called in one body” in order that the peace of God might “rule” in our hearts (Col 3:15).

The grace of God equips the saints of God to do the work of God--by Given O. Blakely

This “one body” has been reconciled unto God and freed from the tyranny of the devil, the flesh, and the world. What is objectionable about them has been cut away from them, and they are being built together for “the habitation of God through the Spirit” (Eph 2:20).

The term “one body” is not a synonym for “one church,” as ordinarily conceived. With great care, the Spirit applies the concept of oneness to the functioning members – “one body.” This is not an institutional view, and designedly so. Those who use a text like this to disenfranchise other believers reveal the wretchedness of their own hearts. If anything, the concept of “one body” excludes those who are idle and non-contributive. Even that would be an inappropriate use of the expression.

“One body in Christ” underscores that we are not only individual members, but that we are connected to the Head of the body. Jesus ministers vitality to His people through the individual members, making them a cohesive whole. It is from Jesus as “the Head” that “the whole body, supported and held together by its ligaments and sinews, grows as God causes it to grow”^{NIV} (Col 2:19).

The Fulness of Christ

One of the most remarkable descriptions of the church is found in the book of Ephesians. Earlier I alluded to this text, but it will bear further scrutiny. With great power it is affirmed, “God placed all things under His feet and appointed Him to be head over everything for the church, which is His body, the fullness of Him who fills everything in every way” (Eph 1:22-23).

Although Jesus is “the Head of the church” (Eph 5:23) and “the head of the body, the church” (Col 1:18), that is not the point of this text. The Spirit is not speaking of authority over the church, but of provision for it. God has made Jesus “Head over everything,” investing Him with “all power in heaven and in earth” (Matt 28:18). He has authority over all of our adversaries to restrain them. He has power over all the armies of heaven, to marshal them to work for our good. He has authority over the dispensing of the gifts of grace, so that we may receive them. He has been made Head over all of these things “for” [the benefit of] “the church, which is His body”

By calling the church Christ’s

But He is not simply filling them with attitudes or character traits, although that is involved. Rather, He is endowing them with the capacity to minister in His name – to advantage His people by doing for them what He Himself does. Thus, they become workers together with Him.

“fulness,” the Spirit is affirming that Jesus is filling His people with Himself. This is another way of saying they are “made partakers of Christ” (Heb 3:14) and of the “Divine nature” (2 Pet 1:4). But He is not simply filling them with attitudes or character traits, although that is involved. Rather, He is endowing them with the capacity to minister in His name – to advantage His people by doing for them what He Himself does. Thus, they become workers together with Him.

MEMBERS OF ONE ANOTHER

“... and individually members of one another.” Other versions read, “each member belongs to all the others,”^{NIV} “we belong to each other, and each of us needs all the others,”^{NLT} and “as different parts we are all joined to one another.”^{NJB}

The body of Christ is not comprised of disconnected members. That is the condition of those without spiritual life, not those who are alive unto God. Disconnected members are like Ezekiel’s valley of dry bones. They were not connected together. It was not until the word of the Lord came in power that “the bones came together, bone to his bone,” forming something that would eventually be functional (Ezek 37:7). Then, the bones became “members of one another.”

The point here is that no individual member of the body possesses all of the fulness of Christ. To put it another way, no member is sufficient of itself, or can live in isolation from the rest of the body. Thus Titus was refreshed by the Corinthians (2 Cor 7:13), and himself comforted Paul (2 Cor 7:6). Onesiphorus “oft refreshed” Paul (2 Tim 1:16), and Phebe succored, or helped, him (Rom 16:1-2). Paul was comforted by the faith of the Roman brethren, and they were comforted by his (Rom 1:12). Aquila and Priscilla ministered to Apollos (Acts 18:26), and Apollos “helped them much which had believed through grace” (Acts 18:17). Mary “labored much” for Paul and his coworkers (Rom 16:6), and Epaphroditus “ministered to” his “wants,” or need (Phil 2:25). All of these were “members of one another,” supplying needed graces in accordance with their personal faith.

Believers Fit Together

The people of God fit together. They are a spiritual house that is “fitly framed together” (Eph 2:21). Other versions read, “the whole building, being joined together,”^{NKJV} and “the whole building, being fitted together.”^{NASB} The factor that knits and fits us together is not mere commonality, but what Jesus supplies through us. That supply is like the mortar that bonds the people of God together, thereby making the house, or temple of God, strong. Thus, from the Head, Jesus, “the whole body” is “being fitted and held together by that which every joint supplies, according to the proper working of each individual part"^{NASB} (Eph 4:16). It is the flow of grace through the individual members that fits them together – when "each part is working properly."^{NRSV}

We Need One Another

Thus, the body is not held together by its profession, but by the working of each individual member. When we come into Christ, we are "added to the church," making us one with the rest of the body (Acts 2:47). Our responsibility is now to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph 4:3). This is not done by getting together, discussing, and ironing out our differences. That is too philosophical, and has not yielded extended and profitable benefits.

The "unity of the Spirit" is kept, or maintained, by means of mutual ministry, or edification. That is the whole point of the fourth chapter of Ephesians (vs 12-16). That is involved in being "members of one another," and is the point that will now be developed.

The Promotion of Humility

There is an uncomely quality in the flesh that seeks to arrive at a point where others are not needed. To be able to stand alone, and function without the assistance of anyone else is thus thought to be an attainment of great value. First, such a state is not possible. It is purely an imagination, whether in nature or in grace. However, this is particularly true in Christ Jesus.

Our interdependence upon one another is a great promoter of humility. It regularly reminds us that our sufficiency is of God, and that it has been largely ministered to us through Christ's body, which is His means of expression. Humility opens the door for effectiveness.

GIFTS THAT ARE DIFFERENT ACCORDING TO GOD'S GRACE

"^{6a} Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, let us use them . . ."

HAVING GIFTS

"Having then gifts differing . . ." Other versions read, "And since we have gifts that differ,"^{NASB} "We have different gifts,"^{NIV} and "God has given each of us the ability to do certain things well."^{NLT} Those who are fond of applying the pronoun "we" to the Apostles, when speaking of "gifts," will have a most difficult time doing so with this passage! This text is not speaking of the Apostles, but of "the body," and all who are "members in particular." That includes the Apostles, but is not limited to them.

another" (Rom 14:19). That, of course, is why he showed them an even "more excellent way." It is the way of "charity," which edifies (1 Cor 13).

The Spirit will now reason with us

ACCORDING TO GRACE

" . . . differing according to the grace that is given to us." All versions, whether literal or paraphrased, read the same way.

"Gifts" are Kingdom abilities, or aptitudes. They fit together, yet are "different." In accounting for the difference in these abilities, the Spirit takes us to the grace of God. Prior to this (verse 3), the gifts were traced back to a "measure of faith." How is it that they are here associated with grace. The answer is simple. In all of its aspects, salvation is ever "by grace through faith" (Eph 2:8). Grace has to do with what is given, faith with how it functions. Grace assigns the gifts to us, and faith delivers them. Grace makes them "gifts," faith makes them ministries.

Further, no one has faith that does not have a connection with the Lord Jesus Christ. Additionally, no person is connected to Christ that does not have an aptitude to benefit His brethren.

It is a foregone conclusion that all of those in Christ "have gifts." They are different, to be sure, but they are very real and need to be cultured and expressed. When Paul admonished the Corinthians to "covet earnestly the best gifts," he was not suggesting they were in the body without already possessing spiritual abilities. Prior to that he reminded them, "But now God has placed the members, each one of them, in the body, just as He desired"^{NASB} (1 Cor 12:18). His point was not that they should seek after particular gifts, but ones "wherewith one may edify concerning spiritual gifts. He begins with the posit that we do have them. They are an aspect of our faith, and are determined by our "measure of faith." There are no members in the body of Christ who do not have faith, for that is what constitutes them "the children of God" (Gal 3:26). Further, no one has faith that does not have a connection with the Lord Jesus Christ. Additionally, no person is connected to Christ that does not have an aptitude to benefit His brethren. Those are the underlying assumptions of this text, and are a key to understanding them.

Grace is "manifold," or multifaceted. Thus, the gifts grace brings are various, different from each other, yet harmonious in their objective. Grace saves us, yet does it through faith. As it is written, "For this reason it is by faith, that it might be in accordance with grace"^{NASB} (Rom 4:16). Faith is the means through which the grace of God becomes effective, whether in saving the soul, or enabling it to minister to the people of God.

Differing gifts allow for expanded

The grace of God equips the saints of God to do the work of God--by Given O. Blakely ministry and a plentitude of edification. More grace can be received by the individual when that grace takes varying forms and ministries in the rest of the body. The more restricted we are on the sources of edification, the more deficient we become in our own persons. Those who limit themselves to a single “minister” can rise no higher, or receive no more, than is ministered by that solitary individual.

Further, we are not limited to those who are in our generation. Those who have completed their race may still minister grace to us. The Apostles and Prophets are primary evidences of this.

before us from the field of battle and labor. Wherever a gift has been given, whether in the past or the present, it has been “for the profit of all” of the body^{NKJV} (1 Cor 12:7).

There are some things you cannot receive unless they come from other members of the body. If Jesus received ministry from others, who are you to suppose you are exempted from such service. We read of “Joanna the wife of Chuza, Herod’s steward, and Susanna, and many others who provided for Him from their substance” Luke 8:3). In another place we read of “Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James the

LET US USE THEM

“Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, let us use them.”^{NKJV} Other versions read, “let each exercise them accordingly,”^{NASB} “let us exercise them.”^{NAB} Unused gifts become a reason for chastening, and even condemnation. Gifts are a matter of stewardship, and they are to be faithfully used for the edifying of the body.

It is particularly important to note Satan has encouraged the development of non-contributory religion. The shell of religion is kept, yet is wholly lacking in spiritual substance. There is a “form of the truth,” but a denial of “the power therefore” (2 Tim 3:5).

Notice the wording of our text. It does not say “IF we have gifts,” but “Having gifts differing.” The issue is not whether or not we have received a spiritual ability, but if we are using it. If God has placed us in the body where it has “pleased Him” (1 Cor 12:18), let us conduct ourselves in view of that placement! If God has dealt to every person “a measure of faith” (Rom 12:3), let us see to it that it finds profitable expression through us.

The Spirit will now mention several of these gifts, and how they are to be used. In my judgment, Paul deals with the more prominent gifts in Rome, as he also dealt with the more prominent ones in Corinth. The admonition will not be basically corrective, as it was in Corinth. The brethren in Rome, it appears, had conducted themselves more admirably toward one another, and thus did not require extensive teaching or correction as those in Corinth. Faithfulness does have its own reward.

The more restricted we are on the sources of edification, the more deficient we become in our own persons. Those who limit themselves to a single “minister” can rise no higher, or receive no more, than is ministered by that solitary individual.

Yet, we are not limited in this regard. Wherever a member of the body existed, grace was given to that member to minister. Some of them received grace to pass truth to succeeding generations. We may profit from them. The vast array of those who have received a “measure of faith” to minister to the saints is staggering. While there are no laws or procedures bound upon us in this regard, we are to know we are “members of one another,” even those who have gone Less and of Joses, and Salome, who also followed Him and ministered to Him when He was in Galilee, and many other women who came up with Him to Jerusalem” (Mark 15:40-41).

Jesus used Peter’s boat (Luke 5:3). He wrought a great miracle with a young boy’s lunch (John 6:9). Who is the soul who would think himself beyond receiving from others? Let us learn from our Lord to think soberly.

THE GIFT OF PROPHECY

“^{6b} . . . if prophecy, let us prophesy in proportion to our faith.” Other versions read, “If a man’s gift is prophesying, let him use it in proportion to his faith,”^{NIV} “such as the quality of a prophet, let it be made use of in relation to the measure of our faith,”^{BBE} and “if it is a gift of prophecy, we should prophesy as much as our faith tells us.”^{NJB}

THE GIFT OF PROPHECY

It is most unfortunate that some sophists have sensationalized this gift, limiting it to a declaration of the future, or coming events. That is not a fair representation of the gift of prophecy, and it has certainly not yielded optimum benefit to the people of God.

The word “prophesy” means “a discourse emanating from Divine inspiration and declaring the purposes of God, whether by reproving and admonishing the wicked, or comforting the afflicted, or revealing hidden things.”

Barclay-Newman Greek Dictionary Prophesying does include the matter of foretelling coming events, but that is a subordinate and secondary meaning. The primary meaning is forth-telling, or telling forth, things revealed by God.

We are not left to conjecture or etymological resources in this matter. The Spirit speaks directly to the subject. “But he who prophesies speaks edification and exhortation and comfort to men” (1 Cor 14:3). Other versions read, “But everyone who prophesies speaks to men for their strengthening, encouragement and comfort,” NIV “those who prophesy speak to other people for their upbuilding and encouragement and consolation,” NRSV “the word of the prophet gives men knowledge and comfort and strength,” BBE “helping others grow in the Lord, encouraging and comforting them,” NLT and “speaks to other people, building them up and giving them encouragement and reassurance.” NJB

Edification

Edification involves building up believers, promoting their spiritual strength and stamina. It is related to bringing clarity to the things of God, so that the hearer understands more clearly and is less confused. The result of edification leaves the recipient with more spiritual knowledge and understanding, a greater degree of confidence, and a larger measure of joy and peace. Where these things have been accomplished, prophesying has been done.

Exhortation

Exhortation calls the hearers up higher, urging them to appropriate what has been given to them. It arouses the soul to action that glorifies God and puts one more fully into the mainstream of the will of God. Exhortation is one of God’s chief ministries to the human will.

Comfort

Comfort is encouragement. Whereas exhortation rouses the will, comfort awakens hope, causing it to come into prominence. Comfort causes trials and hardships to be minimized. When comforted, sufferings are seen as momentary, and the prelude to a greater weight of glory.

PROPHESYING AND FAITH

Prophesying is to be done in strict accord with one’s faith – what the prophet is able to see. Before the term “prophet” became prominent, those who prophesied were called “seers.” Thus it is written, “Beforetime in Israel, when a man went to inquire of God, thus he spake, Come,

If one objects that men should not be expected to do what Jesus did, it must be remembered that Christ’s body is where He pours forth Himself. This is where His “fulness” is deposited, and where He ministers to His brethren and let us go to the seer: for he that is now called a Prophet was beforetime called a Seer” (1 Sam 9:9).

A “seer” was someone who perceived or understood. The truth had been unveiled to the person, and he spoke what he had seen, or comprehended. In this regard, false prophets were those who had seen a “vain vision,” or one that was not true (Ezek 13:7).

Prophets Cannot Be Trained

It goes without saying, but you cannot train a prophet. Such a person is not produced by an educational or academic process. Like all other spiritual gifts, it requires a “measure of faith” to be a prophet—to be able to edify, exhort, and comfort the people of God.

The Proportion of Faith

Being a prophet does not qualify a person to speak on matters he does not understand. A person who speaks in the behalf of God can only declare what he has seen—what he comprehends, or understands. To fail to confine oneself to this is to refuse to speak “in proportion” to one’s faith.

“In proportion” to faith is strict agreement with one’s faith, only declaring what has been apprehended, or understood. It is never right to venture an opinion in the name of a prophet. There must be a direct correlation between the faith of the speaker and what he speaks. If this Divinely imposed rule was duly honored, a great number of ministers would quickly resign their positions.

Opening the Scriptures

The person who prophesies is able to “open the Scriptures,” as Jesus did to the two on the road to Emmaus (Lk 24:32,45). If one objects that men should not be expected to do what Jesus did, it must be remembered that Christ’s body is where He pours forth Himself. This is where His “fulness” is deposited, and where He ministers to His brethren.

A person who is fundamentally ignorant of the Scriptures should not be given license to speak much to the people of God. Those who do speak in the behalf of Jesus are to “speak as the oracles of God” (1 Pet 4:11). Other versions read “let him speak, as it were, the utterances of God,” NASB and “as one speaking the very words of God.” NIV Their speech is to not only be in words “taught by the Spirit, combining spiritual thoughts with spiritual words” NIV (1 Cor 2:13), but in strict harmony with the Scriptures. A real prophet will never declare something that is at variance with the Word of the Lord.

The person who is gifted to prophesy, speaking unto men to edify, exhort, and comfort, ought not be assigned menial duties that are unrelated to those ministries. When the Lord has gifted an individual for a noble ministry to His people, no other work is honorable.

All too often, this is the tactic of the institution. They ignore abilities God has given to those within their walls, assigning to them works that are more suited to the goal of the institution than the work of the Lord. I fear this is a far more serious condition than men are inclined to think. Such actions rob the saints, dishonor Jesus, and ignore God.

THE GIFT OF MINISTRY

“^{7a} . . . or ministry, let us use it in our ministering . . . ” Other versions read, “If it is serving, let him serve,”^{NIV} “or the position of a Deacon of the church, let a man give himself to it,”^{BEBE} and “If your gift is that of serving others, serve them we.”^{NLT} There is a peculiar wording in this verse. The NKJV captures the full sense of the expression: “or ministry, let us use it in our ministering.” The “it” that is used in ministering is the gift of ministry itself. In other words, the gift cannot be used for self-serving, but for serving others. The idea is stated most precisely in the words of our blessed Lord. “Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many” (Matt 20:28), or “the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve.”^{NASB} There is a Divinely appointed intent in the bestowment of spiritual gifts, and they are to be executed in strict fulfillment of that intention. Men are not at liberty to inhibit these gifts or seek to reassign them.

had grown exponentially, the number of disciples being “multiplied.” A sense of care for one another had developed. The mass of believers were “of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common” (Acts 4:32).

However, in process of time, some inequities began to occur in meeting the needs of various people. It is written, “And in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations” (Acts 6:1). Knowing the people of God have been called to peace, the Apostles immediately set out to resolve the problem. “Then the twelve summoned the multitude of the disciples and said, “It is not desirable that we should leave the word of God and serve tables. Therefore, brethren, seek out from among you seven ministry. The importance of this work of service is seen in the caliber of men who were required to accomplish it. They were to be “men of good reputation, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom.”

The word pleased the people. They did not need a further explanation of the requirements, and they made perfect sense to them. Finding men duly qualified (Stephen, Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas, Nicolas), they “set [them] before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them,” thereby setting them apart for the work. They did their work well, for it is written, “And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith” (6:7).

An Official Office

Unlike the offices of an Apostle (except for Mathias, Acts 1:16-26), and Prophet, men had a hand in selecting deacons. They did not make deacons, but recognized and set them apart for the work of serving. Because of the involvement of others, requirements were specified for these servants (1 Tim 3:8-13). This is a legitimate office, placed in the body of Christ.

There are those, gifted of God to administer practical and business affairs of the church. Such is not a menial work, as indicated by the qualifications set forth in the sixth chapter of Acts, and the third chapter of First Timothy. It might be well to briefly recount them.

- Men of honest report, or a good reputation.
- Full of the Holy Spirit.
- Full of wisdom.
- Grave, or reverent.
- Not double-tongued, giving conflicting words.
- Not indulging in much wine.
- Not greedy of filthy lucre, or pursuing

The importance of this work of service is seen in the caliber of men who were required to accomplish it. They were to be “men of good reputation, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom.”

THE GIFT OF MINISTRY

Those who place an undue emphasis upon spiritual gifts rarely mention this one. The word translated “ministry” refers to the office, or function, of the “deacon.” This is an office of “service,” or “ministry,” and involves seeing to the needs of others.

A Unique Need

The need first arose in the church approximately two years after the day of Pentecost had “fully come.” The church men of good reputation, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business; but we will give ourselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the word” (Acts 6:2-4).

Although the work was important, it was not one to be done by Apostles, who had been placed in the body in a different capacity. It was not that the work was demeaning. It was, however, something that would require extended involvements, which would have detracted the Apostles from their commissioned dishonest gain.

- Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.
- Men who are first proved, or put to the test.
- Men who are found blameless.
- Their wives must be grave, reverent, and dignified.
- Their wives must not be slanderers or gossips.
- Their wives must be sober or temperate.
- Their wives must be faithful in all things.
- The deacons must be the husband of one wife.
- They must rule their children and their own houses well.

Those who serve well as deacons will experience growth in Christ. It is written, “For those who have served well as deacons obtain for themselves a good standing and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus” ^{NKJV} (1 Tim 3:13). Two notable examples of the fulfillment of these words are Stephen and Philip, both of whom went on to become great preachers of the Word.

In my judgment, this is a particularly weak area in the contemporary church.

USING IT IN MINISTRY

The gift of ministry is to used in ministering – in serving others. Attention is to be given to the work of service, and seeing to the needs of others. Some degree of creativity or originality may be used. The idea is to use the faith given to the individual in the manner in which it is intended to be used.

A person with the gift of service should not be put into a leadership capacity. His ability to lead will be discovered while he is ministering to the needs of others, working under the leadership of someone else. Neither, indeed, should gifted servants be required to fulfill duties unrelated to their calling. That would be as unreasonable as an Apostle serving tables. God is not honored by ignoring His gifts to do man’s will.

Expanding the Thought

There is a sense in which this requirement can be fulfilled in every member of the body of Christ. Though He was the King, Jesus served (John 13:4-5). The Apostles, though placed first in the church, served (Acts 20:34). Prophets serve the saints by edifying, exhorting, and comforting them.

Regardless of the particular function assigned to the saints, they are admonished, “through love serve one another” (Gal 5:13), and “be subject one to another” (1 Pet 5:5). The spirit of service is a most wonderful quality.

There is a word on ministering given by Peter. It is appropriate for this discussion. “If any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 4:11). To attempt to do God’s work in the energy of the flesh is strictly forbidden. In fact, it is impossible.

The Lord gives the work, and the ability to do it as well. It is our business to put the ability and the work together. The purpose for this is clearly stated: “so that in all things God may be praised through Jesus Christ.” ^{NIV} If, then, these directives are ignored, God will not be praised in all things through Jesus Christ. Who is able to measure the magnitude of such a transgression? It is on the part of wisdom to avoid such a sin.

THE GIFT OF TEACHING

“^{7b} . . . he who teaches, in teaching . . .” As simplistic as it may appear, the one gifted to teach is to use that gift to teach. Just as worldly abilities cannot be employed to do the work of God, spiritual abilities are not intended to fulfill worldly duties. Although there may be disagreement on this matter, our text is quite clear on the subject. Our gifts are involved in being members of the body of Christ, and that body is the target for our ministry. Now we come to the gift of teaching – the person endowed with the ability to instruct, expound, and clarify.

THE GIFT OF TEACHING

This gift is ranked third in the dispensation of grace: “thirdly teachers” (1 Cor 12:28). Some of the more external and attention-getting gifts are “after that.” Teaching would be involved in “the word of wisdom” and “the word of knowledge” (1 Cor 12:8). It appears, however, that “teaching” is more consistent than a word of wisdom or knowledge. Those endowments appear to functions within a more broad base. It is also on a more consistent basis.

This gift is mentioned in Ephesians, and is linked with pastoring, or

The gift of teaching is not intended to instruct in the field of economics, domestic responsibilities, or motivational skills. Whatever may be said for those fields of discipline, they are wholly unrelated to the body of Christ. deal with specific issues, while “teaching” shepherding – feeding the flock of God (Eph 4:11). A teacher can instruct people in the ways of the Lord. A teacher can “expound” the way of the Lord more perfectly and thoroughly to someone with an immature view (Acts 18:26).

THE WORK OF TEACHING

The teaching of reference does not pertain to the things of this world. This is a vital distinction that must be grasped by the saints. The Spirit opens the real nature of teaching in a statement made to the Galatians. “Let him who is taught the word share in all good things with him who teaches”^{NKJV} (Gal 6:6). Other versions read “taught in the Word,”^{KJV} and “instruction in the Word.”^{NIV}

The purpose for spiritual gifts is not the correction of society, or presenting resolutions for social ills. Believers are certainly not opposed to such things, but they do not require Divine endowments, and we greatly err in imagining they do.

A “teacher” puts a handle, so to speak, on the Word of the Lord, so people can carry it in their minds, and apply it to their lives. Such a person makes the Word of God come alive, opening it like a precious box of jewels.

Nicodemus knew Jesus was a “Teacher” (John 3:2). His teaching separated Him from all other teachers, for “He taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes” (Mk 1:22). No less than fourteen times the Gospel’s say of Jesus, “He taught.” Jesus has taken this aspect of His Person and endowed certain within His body with the ability to teach His Word.

Paul was ordained a “teacher of the Gentiles” (1 Tim 2:7). In Ephesus he “taught publicly, and from house to house” (Acts 20:20). Apollos “taught diligently” (Acts 18:25). Paul and Barnabas taught the Word of the Lord (Acts 15:35). For a year and six months Paul taught in Corinth (Acts 18:11). For two whole years he dwelt in his own hired house “teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 28:31). The Apostles were noted for “teaching the people” (Acts 5:25,42).

The church at Antioch was noted for having several “teachers” (Acts 13:1). Some of them are named: “Barnabas, and among “the spirits of just men made perfect” (Heb 12:23). Yet, “their works do follow them” (Rev 14:13), being public and known to many. It is never wrong to learn from such kingdom notables, not lifting ourselves up as though we had no need to be taught. The Lord gives the gift of teaching because there is teaching to be done. Those so gifted are to devote themselves to teaching.

Those who are teachers should Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.”

Once again, it is a sin of the greatest magnitude to take members of the body that have been given the gift of teaching, and assign them to roles wholly unrelated to teaching. Yet, this is being done continually in churches and various other Christian institutions. It is not unusual to find a certain obstinance in professed Christians that refuses to recognize the gift of teaching. Such assign their own criteria for teaching the Word of God, for which action they will surely be judged. When God makes a person a teacher, whether it is Paul, Apollos, or Aquila, it is the business the people of God to give ear to what is declared by them.

No small number of these teachers have completed their race, and are now determine to leave the people of God more informed and knowledgeable of the Word of God. Let them refuse to be moved into areas of spiritual trivia by those who cannot see afar off. Men may fancy that they can study the Word of God for themselves, needing no teaching from others. But when they have finished pondering this puff of theological smoke, let them explain why God has placed teachers in the church? Let them consult with the Ethiopian eunuch who unashamedly replied, when asked if he understood a certain Scripture he was reading, “How can I, except some man should guide me?” (Acts 8:31).

Let the teacher devote himself to teaching, and let him not think his labors are in vain! God has called him to, and endowed him for, a most noble work. Many a confused and helpless soul will be helped by their teaching. Let them be strong, and quit like men.

THE GIFT OF EXHORTATION

“^{8a} . . . he who exhorts, in exhortation . . .” While a prophet speaks “unto exhortation,” the one “who exhorts” specializes in it. Just as some people’s faith equips them to prophesy, the faith of some enables them to effectively serve others, and the faith of still others makes them capable teachers, just so, the faith of some is tailored to make them exhorters. The church must make room for the work of these people, for God has placed them in the church.

The grace of God equips the saints of God to do the work of God--by Given O. Blakely

That is the area where they are effective, not the world.

THE GIFT OF EXHORTATION

An exhorter is one who moves people into Kingdom activity. He awakens sluggish wills, and rallies the people to activities that honor God and prepare them for eternity. Following their baptism into Christ, Peter “with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation” (Acts 2:40). When Barnabas came to Antioch, he “exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord” (Acts 11:23). Judas and Silas, themselves prophets, “exhorted the brethren with many words” (Acts 15:32). Barnabas and Paul confirmed the souls of the disciples, “exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God” (Acts 14:22). When Apollos was disposed to pass through Achaia, the brethren wrote letters to the people, “exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had believed through grace” (Acts 18:27).

There are people within the body of Christ who can move us from slothfulness to faithfulness. Some can stir us up, so that we will run more energetically and with more consistency. When they address us, the commissions of the Lord seem more doable, and we are encouraged the more to heartily enter into them.

EXHORTING

And what are such people to do? How should one who has been given the gift of exhortation conduct his life? He must give himself to exhortation. The people of God need his ministry, and he needs to speak that he might be refreshed (Job 32:20).

However, there is a most unfortunate circumstance in our part of the world. The institutionalized church has made no provision for the gift of exhortation. They have made room for the lecturer and the scholar, but not the exhorter! They have adjusted their roster to allow for administrators and assistants, but have no place for the gift of exhortation. If an exhorter was present in the average church, when would he exhort?

When was the last time you heard a stirring call to lay hold on eternal life, or to save yourself from this wayward generation? How about a summons to faithfulness, diligence and constancy? When are exhortations sounded to continue in the faith, and cleave unto the Lord with purpose of heart? For many, these words have a strange sound. But they are not strange, and those who challenge us with such admonitions are gifts from God to us!

Now, you cannot train an exhorter, for he is motivated by his heart, not his head. His gift comes from God, not from exposure to human expertise. It is a ministry that flows from a perception of what is needed among the saints. The one who exhorts has a driving compulsion to see the saints laying hold of the benefits that have been provided for them.

THE GIFT OF GIVING

“^{sb} . . . he who gives, with liberality . . .” Although the gifts mentioned in Romans are few in number, they represent an extremely wide range of ministry. From prophets to servants, and teachers to givers, we are being exposed to the breadth of salvation. Let me remind you that all of these gifts have two sides. The first is the ability that comes from God. The second is a heart to do it for the glory of God. Thus a prophet will declare the Word, even if it jeopardizes his life. The one who serves will do so, even if it is not appreciated. The teacher will expound the Word, even though it is not popular, and may become inconvenient. The one who exhorts has a heart to do so, even when it represents a new and challenging thought to the listeners.

they are not exercised. The heart is also looking for an opportunity to use the gift. Now, we will see how those with the gift of giving are to fulfill their ministry.

say that we are not to be covetous, and are to be content with such things as we have (Heb 13:5). But do not imagine for a moment that everyone in the body of Christ subsists on a meager fare. The Word of God affirms, “not many noble are called” (1 Cor 1:26). It does not say, “not ANY noble are called.”

Let me remind you that all of these gifts have two sides. The first is the ability that comes from God. The second is a heart to do it for the glory of God.

THE GIFT OF GIVING

There are some who despise the thought of having possessions. They believe there is virtue to poverty, and that God is always honored by having just enough for ourselves. But this is not a fair representation of the case. I am quick to

As already mentioned, there were some noble women who ministered to Jesus out of their substance (Lk 8:3). During the early days of the church, when unusual circumstances existed, “as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles’ feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need” (Acts 4:34-35). They had the gift of giving!

During those days, Barnabas, called

The gifts of God come with a longing to do them, and a great dissatisfaction if “the son of consolation,” “Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles’ feet” (Acts 4:37). He had the gift of giving!

When Paul sent the converted slave Onesimos back to his master Philemon, he said, “If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account” (Phile 18). He had the gift of giving.

When the churches in Macedonia heard of the needs of some of the brethren, they rallied to the cause, gathering a gift for them. Of them Paul said, “For I testify that they gave as much as they were able, and even beyond their ability. Entirely on their own, they urgently pleaded with us for the privilege of sharing in this service to the saints.

And they did not do as we expected, but they gave themselves first to the Lord and then to us in keeping with God’s will”^{NIV} (2 Cor 8:3-5). They had the gift of giving!

There are people, strategically placed within the body of Christ, who have the means to assist others. They also have the heart to do so. They are quick to see lacks that need to be met, like the good Samaritan who saw the beaten and robbed man by the wayside (Luke 10:33-35). He had the gift of giving! How are such people to give? What is to be their reaction to need?

GIVING WITH LIBERALITY

“Let him do it with simplicity.” The word “simplicity” means most sincerely, without seeking self interests, and with personal sacrifice. It is giving without the clutter of pride or the quest for glory. Consequently, because of this glorious simplicity, the giving is bountiful and liberal, with no thought of having less because of giving generously.

Other versions capture this sense. “He who gives, with liberality,”^{NKJV} “let him give generously,”^{NIV} “let him give freely,”^{BEBE} and “give generously from the heart.”^{NJB} Concerning this ministry, it will be enough to remind you of the words of our Lord: “freely ye have received, freely give” (Matt 10:8). And again, “It is more blessed to give than to receive” (Acts 20:35). God be praised for these liberal souls! They have been placed in the body to relieve it of undue concerns, and sweeten life’s cup. Only eternity will reveal the effects of their generous spirits.

THE GIFT OF LEADING

“^{sc} . . . he who leads, with diligence . . .” Other versions read, “he that ruleth, with diligence,”^{KJV} “if it is leadership, let him govern diligently,”^{NIV} “he who has the power of ruling, let him do it with a serious mind,”^{BEBE} “if one is over others, with diligence,”^{NAB} and “if you are put in charge, you must be conscientious.”^{NJB} This word will be intimidating to those who do not like to be a subordinate, and challenging to those possessing this particular gift.

THE GIFT OF LEADING

There are some who believe everyone in the body of Christ is equal. But this is not the case at all. There are some who “are over you in the Lord, and admonish you” (1 Thess 5:12). These do not lead by coercion, or the exertion of carnal authority, but they do lead. Remember, it is God who gives this gift. First Corinthians refers to this gift as “governments,”^{KJV} or “administrations”^{NASB} (1 Cor 12:28). First Timothy refers to the “elders that rule well,” or “direct the affairs of the church well,”^{NIV} affirming they are “worthy of double honor.” These are particularly singled out as “those who work hard at preaching and teaching”^{NASB} (1 Tim 5:17).

The thirteenth chapter of Hebrews

These are not bosses, like those who govern the men of this world. They lead by example (1 Pet 5:3), and by their faithful admonishing, teaching and preaching (1 Thess 5:1;2 1 Tim 5:17). They are watching for men’s souls, not their business, not their homes, and not their private lives.

also speaks of those “that have the rule over you.” They are described as watching for men’s souls, and those who will give an account for their responsibility. Heb 13:17,24). Peter admonishes elders, “Shepherd the flock of God which is among you, serving as overseers, not by compulsion but willingly, not for dishonest gain but eagerly; nor as being lords over those entrusted to you, but being examples to the flock” (1 Pet 5:2-3).

These are not bosses, like those who govern the men of this world. They lead by example (1 Pet 5:3), and by their faithful admonishing, teaching and preaching (1 Thess 5:1;2 1 Tim 5:17). They are watching for men’s souls, not their business, not their homes, and not their private lives. They do not have the kind of authority that makes men answerable to them. However, they are answerable to God for how they handle their stewardship.

A “leader” is directing people in a path he himself has taken. He is demanding enough to keep the people moving forward, but gentle enough not to discourage them. I have found there are not a lot of this type of people, and it is probably good there is not.

LEADING WITH DILIGENCE

What is a leader to do – a person who has “power with men” (Gen 32:28)? Some, because of the recalcitrance of people, withdraw from leadership. They do not feel it is worth all of the aggravation. But if a person is genuinely gifted to lead, the word of the King is straightforward: “he who leads, with diligence.”

The word “diligence” means with earnest care and consistency. Those he is leading do not wander from the straight and narrow path because of his indolence. The Lord was serious in dispensing the gift of leadership to him, and he is serious in executing it to the glory of God.

While the Apostles and other disciples were awaiting Divine empowerment for their work, Peter “stood up in the midst of the disciples,” calling their attention to the need to replace Judas. He correlated the matter with Scripture and, under his direction, a replacement was selected by God through them (Acts 1:15-26). He was a leader, and he led with diligence.

Early in the history of the church, dissension arose over the acceptance of the Gentiles, and what laws would be binding upon them. Paul and Barnabas, and certain other men, were sent to Jerusalem “about this question.” Instead of calling for a congregational meeting, they appealed to “the Apostles and elders”

(Acts 15:2-4). They were endowed with the gift of leadership, and executed their gift with diligence (Acts 15:23-31).

As with the other spiritual gifts, spiritual leaders cannot be trained, even though men speak as though they can. They are gifted by God, not educated by men! They are to understand that God is with them in their work. He has equipped them for effective ministry. That will motivate them to be diligent in the execution of their responsibilities. Jesus is surely with them throughout the duration of their ministry.

THE GIFT OF SHOWING MERCY

^{8d} “ . . . he who shows mercy, with cheerfulness.” Here is a gift for which the flesh has no longing. It can more easily covet to prophesy, teach, or rule. It can even seek recognition through giving like Ananias and Sapphira. However, to show compassion or mercy is not attractive to the flesh. There is a great need for this ministry, and thus God has especially gifted some to show it. There is a sense in which all believers are to show mercy. Jesus said, “Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy” (Matt 5:7). In fact, the “wisdom that is

THE GIFT OF SHOWING MERCY

Those with the gift of mercy abound in the grace of being merciful. It is their strength, and they delight to show it. They have a sense of the need of mercy, detecting candidates for it before others do, and being quick to meet that need. Mercy involves compassion, and helping the needy out of a sense of profound pity for, and empathy with, them.

When Jesus interrogated a certain man concerning the good Samaritan, He asked him, “Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbor unto him him” (Luke 10:37). Mercy, therefore, relieved the afflicted person, provided for his continued care, and took care of any debts that were incurred.

Let it be clear, “he who shows mercy” is the person particularly endowed with the ability to detect the need for mercy, and meet it. While this word may be applied to anyone showing mercy, whether particularly gifted or not, it has specific application to the person who has been placed in Christ’s body to show mercy. What is to be the manner in which that individual “shows mercy?”

SHOWING MERCY WITH CHEERFULNESS

“Cheerfulness” involves a cheerful disposition: gladness of heart because of the opportunity to show kindness to the needy. It also involves a “readiness of mind,” which finds great joy in exhibiting the mercy. The person with a “ready mind” looks for an opportunity to “do good to all men, especially those of the household of faith” (Gal 6:10).

In this manner, the gifted person is participating in the Divine nature. It is said of Jesus, “I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart” (Psa 40:8; Heb 10:7). Also, it is said of God Himself, “He delights in mercy” (Micah 7:18). There are some to whom the Lord has especially given this quality.

Those with the gift of mercy abound in this grace. It is their strength, and they delight to show it. They have a sense of the need of mercy, detecting candidates for it before others do. Mercy involves compassion, and helping the needy out of a sense of profound pity for, and empathy with, them.

CONCLUSION

We see from this brief but pungent passage, that spiritual gifts involve the consent of our wills and the exercise of our faith to become effectual. They come to us because of the grace of God, and our faith is the means through which we are both qualified and enabled to use them. They are designed to bring advantages to the body of Christ. They also bring great satisfaction to those who faithfully handle them, becoming one of the primary means through which they accrue rewards and treasures in heaven. Give due attention to what you can do for the Lord, and do it diligently and energetically.

The grace of God equips the saints of God to do the work of God--by GIVEN O. Blakely

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 39

CONDUCT BECOMING OF THE CHILDREN OF GOD

^{12:9} Let love be without hypocrisy. Abhor what is evil. Cling to what is good. ¹⁰ Be kindly affectionate to one another with brotherly love, in honor giving preference to one another; ¹¹ not lagging in diligence, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord; ¹² rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation, continuing steadfastly in prayer; ¹³ distributing to the needs of the saints, given to hospitality. ¹⁴ Bless those who persecute you; bless and do not curse. ¹⁵ Rejoice with those who rejoice, and weep with those who weep. ¹⁶ Be of the same mind toward one another. Do not set your mind on high things, but associate with the humble. Do not be wise in your own opinion. ¹⁷ Repay no one evil for evil. Have regard for good things in the sight of all men. ¹⁸ If it is possible, as much as depends on you, live peaceably with all men. ¹⁹ Beloved, do not avenge yourselves, but rather give place to wrath; for it is written, "Vengeance is Mine, I will repay," says the Lord. ²⁰ Therefore "If your enemy is hungry, feed him; If he is thirsty, give him a drink; For in so doing you will heap coals of fire on his head." ²¹ Do not be overcome by evil, but overcome evil with good. ^{NKJV} (Romans 12:9-21)

INTRODUCTION

Often spiritual life is represented as not being practical – not touching upon every aspect of life. Thus we hear sayings like, “Do not be so heavenly minded you are no earthly good,” “Lighten up,” or “What about real life?” There seems to be a prevailing attitude among professed believers that commitment to God and the Word of God is too cerebral, and has little to do with day-to-day living. This erroneous view is precisely why Scripture is often ignored in preference for dealing with the supposed issues of the day. The development of “seeker friendly” formats and services is also traceable to this perspective. The persons who are devoted enough to the Lord that He dominates their conversation are considered a bit “weird,” and out of touch with reality.

COMMON, BUT WRONG

Although these are common perceptions, they wholly misrepresent God and His truth. They distort salvation, reproach Jesus, and do despite to the Spirit of grace. They reveal a frame of heart that is appropriately called “minding earthly things” (Phil 3:19). The people of God must develop a certain intolerance of such misrepresentations, for they contaminate the soul. They introduce carnal imaginations into the stream of thought, tending to harden the heart and dull the conscience. They put too much distance between the individual and eternity, pushing the coming of Christ and the day of judgment out of prominence in both heart and mind. No one should doubt the reality of these things. Only brief self examination will confirm what happens to the individual when the accent is removed from the things of God to matters relating to life in this world.

The propensity of church people to entertainment, trivia, issue-centered preaching and teaching, counseling, and spiritual brevity and shallowness, are all outgrowths of this misperception: i.e., that heavenly mindedness is impractical.

IN SPITE OF CLARITY

This delusion exists in spite of the total absence of humor in the Bible, the obviously single focus of Jesus, and the spiritual thrust of Apostolic doctrine. One will search in vain for an extended commentary on the political issues of the day in which an inspired writer lived. The social issues of the day are equally shunned by inspired writers. The only mention of things relates to spiritual life, preparation for eternity, and fellowship with Deity. There is such a remarkable consistency in this, it is difficult to see how the thrust of Scripture could be missed. This condition is a confirmation of the dulling effect of carnal mindedness, or minding earthly things.

ALL OF LIFE ADDRESSED

Lest some conclude that being justified, or having the righteousness of God imputed to us, does not influence our manners in this world, the Spirit speaks of the practicality of spiritual life. With unusual power, He shows us there is no facet of legitimate life and human relationships that is not impacted by newness of life. In so doing, the Spirit removes all excuses for not living wholeheartedly for the Lord. No valid reason can be adduced for failing to love the Lord with all of the heart, soul, mind, and strength. There is no justification for having our minds nailed to the earth.

F a i t h addresses every aspect of life in this world. The person who has been reconciled to God will find no point in life where the Lord may be pushed into the background, the Word of God ignored, and citizenship in heaven forgotten. Whatever causes these things to occur is wrong, and is to be shunned with zeal and consistency. Nothing about salvation allows for forgetting God. Nothing about newness of life moves a person to navigate in this world without an acute awareness of the coming of the Lord and imminent judgment. The law of God is not put into our hearts and written in our minds only to be placed into the background of thought. This should be abundantly clear.

THE PROPER CONTEXT

The context in which we live, think, and speak, is critical. Basically, there are only two contexts: “this present evil world” and “the world to come.” To put it another way, there are the contexts of time and eternity.

Let it be clear, the “present world” is fundamentally evil, contaminated by sin. Because of this, Jesus has “delivered us” from it (Gal 1:4), and it is destined for destruction (2 Pet 3:10-12). To make this world, or time, the context in which we live is disastrous. It contradicts the fact that we have been delivered from it.

The “world to come” is the lasting one. There is where the fulness of eternal life will be received (Mark 10:30). The “world to come” is the subject of Apostolic exposition (Heb 2:5). Every commandment, exhortation, correction, and elucidation of Scripture is set within the context of “the world to come.” If it were possible to remove that world, or if it were just an imagination, there would be no need for Christ Jesus or the Scriptures. Salvation in all of its aspects is couched in the setting of eternity!

The exhortations to which we will now be subjected are to be received as matters that tend to orient us for glory.

Life in this world is not their ultimate objective. Rather, they are given in order that life in this world will not distract us or disqualify us from the glory to which we have been appointed by God's grace.

IN VIEW OF THE TIMES

I have taken the time to mention these things because of my persuasion of the wickedness and religious corruption of the times. Certain religious manners and preferences have arisen that are not right.

They are in sharp conflict with the revealed purpose of God, and do not contribute to the eternal well being of people. Men have been given too much honor, and God has been given too little. The wisdom and writings of men have been given too much prominence, and the Word of God too little. In the mind of the average church member heaven is a distant thought, and the coming of the Lord is rarely brought into the meditative process.

As we enter into this section of practical exhortations, you will find they have more weight when they are considered within the context of eternity. When you contemplate your reception of the righteousness of God, these admonitions will make perfect sense, and you will desire to fulfill them. If they are viewed only as our duties, to be fulfilled in the energy of the flesh, they will appear beyond your reach. There is an unwavering consistency in this.

THE RESPONSE OF LOVE

^{12:9a} Let love be without hypocrisy. Other versions read, "Let love be without dissimulation,"^{KJV} "Love must be sincere,"^{NIV} "Let love be genuine,"^{NRSV} "Let love be unfeigned,"^{DARBY} "Let love be without deceit,"^{BBE} and "Let love be without any pretense."^{NJB} Our love is to be without disguise. It is to be the genuine expression of the "new man," the outgrowth of the "newness of life." The righteousness that has been given to us WILL express itself in this way. Just as surely as God Himself is averse to pretense, so the life that He has given to us cannot be so characterized.

The word "dissimulation" means "to hide under a false appearance." English synonyms include "camouflage, cloak, dress up, and mask."^{MERRIAM-WEBSTER} Love with dissimulation, or hypocrisy, is love that is not genuine, even though the individual expressing it may not even know it. One of the dreadful results of walking in the flesh, or not living by faith, is that the individual can fall into reprehensible conduct without even knowing it. This is precisely why this exhortation is given – to awaken the heart to self examination.

Love with dissimulation, or feigned love, is draped with culture and painted with fleshly refinement. It is not what it appears to be. The fact that we are exhorted to avoid this pretense confirms that the seeds of such a tendency remain within our natural man. If we do not set ourselves to avoid ostentatious love, we may easily be lulled into a spiritual sleep that finds us wearing the mask of carnal politeness.

THE SOURCE OF LOVE

The Genuineness of love is not determined by the feeling of the individual. Nor, indeed, is it determined by the intention of the person. The thing that makes love genuine is its source! Love "without hypocrisy" is the love that flows out from the love that has been "shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit" (Rom 5:5). This love is not pumped up by the individual. It is not a mere attempt to do what is right,

"But above all these things put on love, which is the bond of perfection"^{NKJV} (Col 3:14). A lack of love disrupts the "unity of the Spirit," allowing for the entrance of Satan, delusion, and spiritual death.

There is an attractiveness to genuine and uncomplicated love. It draws the people of God together, for it is consistently selfless, always seeking the welfare of others. It brings the saints together in mutuality, building up each member. Thus there comes an "increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love" (Eph 4:16). That is the "bond of perfection" that causes one maturing member to profitably adhere to another.

INSTITUTIONAL LOVE

There is a feigned love I have chosen to call "institutional love." It is a love that centers in religious institutionalism rather than the love of God. Jesus spoke of this kind of love when He said, "For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so?" (Matt 5:46-47). Such love is based upon mere human confraternity. It gives no weight to faith, and certainly not to Divine acceptance.

There is a considerable emphasis in our day on religious camaraderie. This involves civility that is based upon institutional identity rather than the love of God. It has no place in Jesus.

Love is the spiritual adhesive that binds the saints of God together. That is why it cannot be fabricated, simulated, or expressed in pretension.

although the effort of the individual is involved. This is part of "the fruit of the Spirit," and is the consequence of walking in the Spirit.

THE BOND OF PERFECTION

Love is the spiritual adhesive that binds the saints of God together. That is why it cannot be fabricated, simulated, or expressed in pretension. It is written,

IMPOSSIBLE TO CONTRIVE

The admonition, “Let love be without dissimulation,”^{NKJV} does not suggest that genuine love – the “fruit of the Spirit” – can be possessed, yet imperfectly expressed. The idea here is that no professed believer is to attempt to cover up hatred and ill-will with the mask of love, or charity. In other words, those who do not love the people of God are not to pretend as though they did.

HELP IS AVAILABLE TO US

It is good to know that Divine help is available to us through our faith. The Lord can “make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men” (1 Thess 3:12). Other versions read, “cause you to increase and abound in love for one another, and for all men,”^{NASB} and “make your love increase and overflow for each other and for everyone else.”^{NIV} In such a case, love will not be with hypocrisy. It will also yield the benefits only genuine love can produce. Some of them are as follows.

- Faith works by love (Gal 5:6).
- In love we serve one another (Gal 5:13).
- Love edifies, or builds up (1 Cor 8:1).
- Love suffers long (1 Cor 13:4a).
- Love is kind (1 Cor 13:4b).
- Love does not envy (1 Cor 13:4c).
- Love does not parade itself (1 Cor 13:4d).
- Love is not puffed up (1 Cor 13:4e).
- Love does not behave rudely (1 Cor 13:5a).
- Love does not seek its own (1 Cor 13:5b).
- Love is not easily provoked (1 Cor 13:5c).

- Love thinks no evil (1 Cor 13:5d).
- Love does not rejoice in iniquity (1 Cor 13:6a).
- Love rejoices in the truth (1 Cor 13:6b).
- Love bears all things (1 Cor 13:7a).
- Love believes all things (1 Cor 13:7b).
- Love hopes all things (1 Cor 13:7c).
- Love endures all things (1 Cor 13:7d).
- Love will cover a multitude of sins (1 Pet 4:8).

Love that is feigned is totally lacking in these traits. It may have a polished appearance, but it brings no benefit to the saints. Neither, indeed, can it open a door of opportunity for those who are outside of Christ. Love that is by dissimulation is totally worthless, and is to be discarded. God does not honor it, and neither can we.

THE RESPONSE TOWARD EVIL

“^{9b} Abhor what is evil.” Other versions read, “Hate what is evil,”^{NASB} and “Avoid what is evil.”^{NJB} The strength of this word is apparent. The word “abhor” means to “hate utterly,” entirely and totally. It also means to shrink away from, as from something that is loathsome or detestable. To “abhor” is to draw away circumference of evil influence.

The intention of this exhortation is not simply the development of an attitude, but of a godly response. All of these are reactions that reflect the Divine nature. They include an attitude, feeling, or outlook, but extend into the area of the strong aversion that exists deep within the individual. It is the word μισέω. The word used in our text (ἀποστρυφούντες) comes from another root word (στρυφέω). The difference between the two is that the latter is “hatred expressed.”^{VINCENT}

ABHOR MEANS TO DEPART

That is why I prefer the word “abhor,” for it carries the idea of withdrawal more than an inward attitude alone. That withdrawal, of course, is driven by an inward response to evil, which compels the believe to take action. Thus, when God said of Israel, “I abhor the excellency of Jacob, and hate his palaces” (Amos 6:8), He meant that He would withdraw from them, leaving them to the behest of their enemies. When the Psalmist said, “the LORD will abhor the bloody and deceitful man” (Psa 5:6), he meant the Lord would have nothing to do with such a man. The Lord “greatly abhorred Israel,” “He forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh, The tent He had placed among men, and delivered His strength into captivity, And His glory into the enemy’s hand” (Psa 78:60-61). Again it is written, “Therefore the wrath of the LORD was kindled against His people, So that He abhorred His own inheritance.”

Much of the psychological jargon that is spewing from the pulpits of the land leaves one imagining God tenderly embraces those He abhors. Nothing could be further from the truth, as Satan and his angels can testify.

from, out of a sense of utter disgust and repulsion. Something that is abhorred goes against the nature of the person. It chafes against the soul, and weighs the heart down with offensiveness. For that reason, the individual cannot abide the presence of the thing abhorred. He will not allow himself to remain within the will and of action.

In the matter before us, to “abhor” is to have such a horror of something that is expressed by withdrawal. From the viewpoint of language, there is a Greek word for hatred that emphasizes the attitude of the heart and mind. It is a

And He gave them into the hand of the Gentiles, And those who hated them ruled over them” (Psa 106:40).

Let there be no mistake about this. What or who the Lord abhors, He leaves, or forsakes. You do not want your thinking to be loose or unstable on this point. Much of the psychological jargon that is spewing from the pulpits of the land leaves one imagining God tenderly embraces those He abhors. Nothing could be further from the truth, as Satan and his angels can testify.

The Relevance of the Observation

It may appear as though all of this has little to do with our text. But that is not the case. The response that is enjoined upon us is nothing less than the expression of the “Divine nature” (2 Pet 1:4), called the “new man,” or a “new creature” (Col 3:10; 2 Cor 5:17). We are being admonished to withdraw from the very things God and Christ withdraw from. They are things that God cannot tolerate, and that He will not abide in His presence.

Those who insist on remaining close to what God abhors will themselves become detestable to God.

That is precisely why the Lord speaks to His people in this manner. “Therefore Come out from among them And be separate, says the Lord. Do not touch what is unclean, And I will receive you”^{NKJV} (2 Cor 6:17). This is not a popular word in our time, but it is a very needful one, and must often be declared.

The Lord leaves no stone unturned in His appeal to us to abhor whatever is evil. “You who love the LORD, hate evil!” (Psa 97:10). “The fear of the LORD is to hate evil” (Prov 8:13). “Hate the evil” (Amos 5:15). “Depart from evil” (Psa 34:14). One of the telling marks of the Savior of the world is that He “hates wickedness,” or “iniquity.” For this reason, God bestowed the greatest blessing upon Him. “God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows” (Psa 45:7; Heb 1:9).

A person who abhors “that which is evil” will join David in this holy resolve. “I will set nothing wicked before my eyes; I hate the work of those who fall away; It shall not cling to me. A perverse heart shall depart from me; I will not know wickedness” (Psa 101:3-4). When the Word of God brings understanding to the heart, the believer shouts, “Through thy precepts I get understanding: therefore I hate every false way” (Psa 119:104).

One of the marks of a wicked man is, “he abhorreth not evil” (Psa 36:4). On the other hand, one of the points for which Jesus commended backsliding Ephesus was, “you cannot bear those who are evil” (Rev 2:2). We could do with a revival of that kind of attitude!

Reports of men and women falling into immortality are not confined to the politician arena. It has become altogether too common in the professing church. Why do such things occur? It is because the offenders did not “abhor that which is evil.”

We must not allow the psychiatrists to deceive us about, what is called, “fallen leaders.” Reports of men and women falling into immortality are not confined to the politician arena. It has become altogether too common in the professing church. Why do such things occur? It is because the offenders did not “abhor that which is evil.” If such poor souls expect to be received by God, they do well to admit this is the case, and to aggressively seek to obey this text. Their sin did not occur because they were in the wrong place at the right time. It happened because they did not “abhor that which is evil.” Sin does not lay hold of a person just because they are simple, or because others take advantage of them. It is because they do not “abhor that which is evil.” They chose to live close to what God commands them to hate and leave. They trafficked on forbidden territory with hearts that had been sullied with the love of the world.

THE DREADFULNESS OF EVIL

With the deterioration of sound doctrine and spiritual life, there has also come a blindness concerning the dreadful nature of evil. Religious people have been blinded to the reprehensible nature of “evil.” The very first issue that faced humanity related to “the knowledge of good and evil” (Gen 2:9). At the very instant man came to “know evil,” he was thrust from the presence of the Lord (Gen 3:22-24). The world of Noah’s day was utterly destroyed because “the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually” (Gen 6:5). When God became incensed against Israel, it was because they were an “evil congregation” (Num 14:27).

Jesus spoke of vain words that came “from evil” (Matt 5:37). He taught us to pray, “deliver us from evil.” Some versions read “the evil one”^{NIV} (Matt 6:13). Jesus said “evil thoughts” defile a person (Matt 15:19-20). He spoke of an “evil eye” (Mark 7:22), “evil things” (Mark 7:23), an “evil man,” and an “evil treasure” in the heart (Lk 6:45). Troubling and defiling spirits from the domain of the devil are called “evil spirits” (Lk 7:21). Our Lord spoke of an “evil generation” (Lk 11:29), “deeds” that are evil (John 3:19), and those who “do evil” (John 3:20). The works of the world, Jesus said, “are evil” (John 7:7).

The fall of the Gentile world included the invention of “evil things” (Rom 1:30). The Spirit promises that “tribulation and anguish” will come upon “every soul of man that doeth evil” (Rom 2:9). There are communications and associations that are “evil” (1 Cor 15:33). This present word, from which Jesus has delivered us, is “evil” (Gal 1:4). There is such a thing as “evil speaking” (Eph 4:31), days that “are evil” (Eph 5:16), and “evil workers” (Phil 3:2). There is an “appearance of evil” that is to be avoided at all cost (1 Thess 5:22). There are “evil surmisings,” or suspicions (1 Tim 6:4), and “evil men” that “wax worse and worse” (2 Tim 3:13). There is such a thing as an “evil heart of unbelief,” and we are to see to it that it does not enter into us (Heb 3:12). There are “evil thoughts” (James 2:4), and “evil” that can flow from the tongue (1 Pet 3:10).

The consistency and firmness with which we are addressed concerning evil makes it inexcusable for a tolerant attitude toward it. No justification can be given for choosing to be around evil, or allowing its encroachments into our hearts and minds.

What Is “EVIL”?

The word “evil” is very large in both its meaning and its implications. It carries the ideas of disadvantageous, bad, harmful, and painful. It also connotes useless, unprofitable, and unserviceable. Anything or anyone that is “evil” is wicked, poisonous, and has no redeeming qualities. Evil inflicts injury upon the soul, corrupts the mind, and defiles the conscience. “That which is evil” is inherently bad. It is like a piece of rotten fruit that cannot be made good. It is to be discarded, and that with great haste.

You cannot sanctify something that is evil. You cannot convert it to useful purposes. It is contaminated throughout, and cannot blend with the unseen things to which we have been called (2 Cor 4:17-18). Whatever has the taint of the world upon it is evil. Whatever Satan uses is evil. Whatever competes with God is evil. Whatever makes living for the Lord more difficult is evil. Things that interrupt communion with the Lord are evil. Actions, thoughts, and objects that will cause shame on the day of judgment are evil. Evil is the opposite of God. It is what Jesus hates, and what causes the Holy Spirit of God to grieve. It is what stops the Spirit’s work, drives a wedge between the soul and its Creator, and makes the blessing of God seem unworthy of pursuit.

And what is to be our response to evil? We are to “abhor it.” When we are aware of it, we are to draw back in revulsion, putting a distance between it and us. We are to refuse what it offers, and close our ears to its suggestions. We are to run from it like Joseph fled from Potiphar’s wife.

Abhorring evil is not the result of a disciplinary procedure, or the exercise of self-will. Rather, it is the result of a heart that has been duly sensitized to the Lord. As Moses’ face was altered by exposure to the glory of God, so the heart is sharpened and stimulated. Evil became especially repulsive to Moses after he had been in the presence of the Lord – even more so than to Aaron, who had remained in the presence of the people (Ex 32:19-24). That is the secret to obtaining an utter hatred of sin – dwelling in the presence of God, walking in the light of His countenance.

THE RESPONSE TOWARD GOOD

“^{9c} Cling to what is good.” Other versions read, “Cleave to that which is good,”^{KJV} “hold fast to what is good,”^{NRSV} “keep your minds fixed on what is good,”^{BBE} “hold on to what is good,”^{NAB} and “Stand on the side of the good.”^{NLT}

Here is an aggressive stance – one that requires sustained effort and determination: “Cling,” “hold fast,” “hold on to!” The picture is of something that can be elusive – something that may not always be as accessible as it is at the moment. The word translated “cling,” or “cleave,”^{KJV} means to be joined to something – to be glued, or fastened firmly, together. Coming from κολλάω, this word is used to describe both illicit and holy relationships. “What? know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for two, saith he, shall be one flesh. But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit” (1 Cor 6:16-17). Whatever is joined becomes a single entity, working together for a common objective.

Be Glued to Good!

This text exhorts us to be bonded to good, not merely acquainted with it. It is to be identified with good, not merely admit to its uprightness. The attitude toward evil was two-fold: have a disdain for it, and turn from it. Likewise, there is a two-fold response to good: love it, and attach ourselves to it.

Clinging to “what is good” presumes a preference for it. It also involves satisfaction and enjoyment realized from it. There is also a refusal to let it go.

WHAT IS “GOOD”?

“Good” is the opposite of evil, and is so represented throughout Scripture. No less than ninety-seven times, the words “good and evil” occur in Scripture. The first warning in human history regarded these extremities (Gen 2:9,17). In a plea to Israel, the Lord associated “good” with life, and “evil” with death (Deut 30:15).

“Good and evil” are the extremes on the scale of moral values. “Good” blesses, giving advantage and leading to heaven. “Evil” curses, robbing the soul and leading to hell.

“Good” is anything that is associated with the strait and narrow way that leads unto life (Matt 7:13-14). It is related to the “fruit of the Spirit,” which “is in all goodness and righteousness and truth” (Eph 5:9). “Good” has the hand of God upon it, who is Himself “good” (Psa 34:8; 100:5), and is “abundant in goodness” (Ex 34:6). In fact, as compared with all that is created, “there is none good but one, that is, God" (Matt 19:17).

The Nature of Spiritual Life Seen

Here, the nature of spiritual life is seen. Not only are we to disassociate ourselves from evil, we are to associate ourselves with good. We are not only to refrain from doing evil, but engage in doing good. We avoid what tears down, and embrace what builds up. We shun what causes spiritual deterioration, and take hold of what contributes to spiritual growth and stability. In all of this, our heart is not only in accord with our thoughts, words, and deeds, it is the governor that dictates what we do.

Doing Good IS Emphasized

The particular point of emphasis here is the DOING of good. It is engaging in benevolent and helpful conduct toward all men, particularly those who live by faith. As it is written, "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith" (Gal 6:10). "Good," in this case, leaves the ones to whom it is directed better. It opens the door for the blessing of God, and leaves the individual with spiritual advantages.

Thus, we are admonished, "Depart from evil, and do good" (Psa 34:14; 37:27). Again, "Trust in the LORD, and do good" (Psa 37:3). It is possible for our words to "do good to him that walks uprightly" (Mic 2:7). Jesus admonished "do good to them that hate you" (Matt 5:44), and to "do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again" (Lk 6:35).

Those with an abundance of resources are exhorted to "do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to give, willing to share, storing up for themselves a good foundation for the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life" (1 Tim 6:18-19). Here is something we must not forget. "But do not forget to do good and to share, for with such sacrifices God is Doing good is actually God ministering to others through a willing vessel. It is the result of walking so close with the Lord that others are actually benefitted by it.

Competitive Influences

For this reason it is written, "He that

There are contrary winds about us that can cause us to veer off course. We dare not imagine that adhering to the good will happen without any effort on our part. While it is true that our effort is not the determining factor, neither is it something that is excluded.

well pleased"^{NKJV} (Heb 13:16). Those who desire to love life and see good days are admonished, "eschew evil, and do good" (1 Pet 3:11).

"Good" is not to be the subject of empty discussion and philosophizing, it is to be done. Only as we engage in the doing of good can we be joined to it. We cannot "cling" to what we do not do. We can claim no association with anything with which we are not personally involved.

An Expression of the New Creation

Doing good, or bringing eternal advantages and kindness to others, is the expression of the new creation. By nature, "there is none that doeth good, no, not one" (Psa 14:3; Rom 3:2). Our text, therefore, is not speaking of mere human goodness, kindness, or thoughtfulness.

doeth good is of God: but he that doeth evil hath not seen God" (3 John 11). The fact that we are exhorted to "cling to that which is good" confirms we are in the midst of competitive influences. There are contrary winds about us that can cause us to veer off course. We dare not imagine that adhering to the good will happen without any effort on our part. While it is true that our effort is not the determining factor, neither is it something that is excluded.

If you have been in the Lord for any length of time, you have experienced the value of brethren who "do good" to you. Such kind and tender souls have associated themselves with good, clinging to it, and refusing to purge thoughts of doing good from their minds. You know how profitable that can be. May you be such a soul, holding on to the good.

THE RESPONSE TOWARD ONE ANOTHER

¹⁰ Be kindly affectionate to one another with brotherly love, in honor giving preference to one another . . ." In Scripture, a considerable amount of attention is given to believer's involvements with one another. Unity is not a mere institutional formality, and the attitude and conduct of believers among themselves is given substantial weight. Our adversary the devil has been particularly effective in the matter of disrupting the unity of the Spirit, which can only be maintained in "the bond of peace" (Eph 4:3). Sectarianism has taken its toll among the people of God, as well as a worldly-minded spirit. These conditions have compelled professing believers to view admonitions like the one before us in relation to a particular denomination. Some even restrict them to their local congregation. As a result, a significant amount of inconsideration and harshness exists in the Christian community. This is a most unfortunate circumstance that has actually neutralized the effectiveness of the truth, and brought great reproach upon the Lord Jesus Christ.

It is imperative that the admonition before us be taken seriously. It is not a mere suggestion, nor is it something that is optional. It does not represent a high level of spirituality, only to be attained by a few unusual souls.

KINDLY AFFECTIONED

"Be kindly affectionate to one another . . ." Other versions read, "Be devoted to one another," ^{NASB} "be tenderly affectioned one to another," ^{ASV} "with genuine affection," ^{NLT} and "let your feelings of deep affection for one another come to expression." ^{NJB}

Kind affection involves cherishing the people of God and being profoundly considerate of their welfare. This is the kind of affection a parent has for a child, or for family members. The word carries the meaning of "tenderly affectionate, very loving, and naturally devoted to." ^{ROBERTSON} This is a love that is "not called out by circumstance, but is the natural love of kindred." ^{VINCENT}

Spiritual love, part of "the fruit of the Spirit," is like a great tree with many branches. Kind affection is one of those branches, upon which much fruit can be borne. Tender affection is to be expressed among the household of faith regardless of social or domestic distinctions. The master can be profoundly considerate of the slave, who may reciprocate with joy. Thus Onesimus the slave can become profitable to Philemon the master (Phile 10-11), and a Centurion can seek the welfare of his slave (Matt 8:5-6). The Jew can be kindly affectioned toward the Gentile, enjoying a reciprocation of the same. Thus Titus the Greek can comfort Paul the Jew (Gal 2:3; 2 Cor 7:6), while Paul ministered and cared for Gentile believers (Rom 15:9-12). The thoughtful consideration can be enjoyed between male and female, in a beneficial and un sinful way. Thus Phebe can minister to Paul (Rom 16:1-2), and Paul can minister to Lydia (Acts 16:14,40). Spiritual affection can be experienced between the young and the old in Christ Jesus. Thus Eli can minister to young Samuel, while Samuel served him (1 Sam 3:1-16).

The fact of our oneness in Christ allows for being kindly affectioned toward one another. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus" (Gal 3:27-28). The Lord Jesus was tender toward all who were drawn to Him. He was gentle toward Nicodemus the Jew (John 3:1-16), and a Gentile centurion (Luke 7:1-9). He was gracious to a man who was a demoniac

Kind affection involves cherishing the people of God and being profoundly considerate of their welfare. This is the kind of affection a parent has for a child, or for family members.

(Mark 5:15), and a woman who was an adulteress (John 8:10-11). He healed an older woman, Peter's mother-in-law (Lk 4:38-39), raised a twelve year old girl, and blessed little children (Lk 8:41-42,52-54; Mark 10:16). He answered the prayer of a master, and healed his servant (Matt 8:6-7). He was "kindly affectioned."

Tender affection does not discriminate among the children of God! Yet, we are admonished to BE kindly affectioned toward one another, extending ourselves to express what God has put within us. The reason for this requirement is obvious: when what the Lord gives us is not used, it soon withers and becomes useless.

There is a profound need for tender affection within the household of faith. Because of our faith, we have become pilgrims and strangers in the world (1 Pet 2:11). The world does not love us because we no longer belong to its order (John 15:19). If, therefore, we are lacking in tenderness toward one another, we will have robbed the people of God of something provided for them.

You will note that the requirement is to express the tender affection, not receive it. It is not the business of the King's children to seek for others to bestow tender affection upon them. Rather, it is their lot to bestow it upon their brethren. They will soon find the affection returning many fold to them, fulfilling the word of the Lord, "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again" (Luke 6:38). Many a small soul has become disgruntled because they did not receive the attention they thought was due to them. Almost without exception, such people have been stingy with their own affection, and thus have reaped an extremely small harvest of the same.

With Brotherly Love

" . . . with brotherly love."

This is a special kind of love, devoted to the family of God. This is the love that drives being "kindly affectioned" one to another. It is mentioned at least four other times in Scripture.

First, this love is taught to us by God Himself – not in the Scriptures, but within the context of fellowship with the Father and the Son. "But concerning brotherly love you have no need that I should write to you, for you yourselves are taught by God to love one another" (1 Thess 4:9). This is not a mere academic lesson, but involves the communication of God's own propensity to love to those who have been joined to His Son.

Second, brotherly love is never to terminate, or find a conclusion. In Christ, no provision is made for it to end. "Let brotherly love continue" (Heb 13:1). This is not a crisis quality, or one that is intended to be temporary. It is an ongoing trait that enables the survival and growth of the saints.

Third, brotherly love is the outcome or purifying our souls in obeying the truth through the power of the Holy Spirit. "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently" (1 Pet 1:22). The new birth is necessary before this love can ever be exhibited.

Fourth, the love of the brethren is the experiential proof that we have passed from death unto life. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because do so in "brotherly love." But the matter does not end there, as though we were fulfilling a law from Mount Sinai.

In Honor

" . . . in honor . . . " With very few exceptions, every translation uses the word "honor." This is the frame of spirit we are to have when we are kindly affectioned toward one another with brotherly love. It is to be done "in honor," "showing honor," ^{NRSV} or "with honor." ^{DOUAY}

To "honor" means to respect, recognize as valuable, and esteem. This is Giving Preference

" . . . giving preference to one another." Brotherly love is altogether selfless. It does not seek its own, but prefers another. Other versions read, "give preference to one another," ^{NASB} "Honor one another above yourselves," ^{NIV} "outdo one another in showing honor," ^{NRSV} "each taking the lead in paying it [honor] to one another," ^{DARBY} "putting others before yourselves," ^{BBE} "take delight in honoring each other," ^{NLT} and "regard others as more important than yourself." ^{NJB}

Flesh cannot do this, for it sees no benefit in it. That is why this attitude is so exceedingly rare. It is not of this world. This is the frame of spirit that Jesus displayed freely. He said, "Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many" (Matt 20:28). It is seen when He miraculously provided tribute money for both Himself and Peter (Matt 17:27). It is seen when He washed the disciples feet (John 13:4-5), and prepared an early breakfast for them (John 21:9). How often His disciples must have recalled Jesus' acts of humility and consideration.

In preferring one another, we speak honorably of each believer, throwing the mantle of love upon them all, lest they be disgraced by some unwilling weakness. If our brethren have sins, we prefer they not be seen, and extend ourselves to conceal them from others. This word is appropriately described in Philippians 2:3-4. "Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others."

There is a certain dignity associated with being called "the sons of God" (1 John 3:1-2), and it is our business to recognize it in our brethren. If our Father is going to "honor" those who serve the Son (John 12:26), we do well to also give them "honor."

we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death" (1 John 3:14).

Brotherly love is the well from which "brotherly kindness" (2 Pet 1:7) and tender affection are drawn.

PREFERRING ONE ANOTHER

As with several passages of Scripture, there is a Divine progression in this thought. As we allow the sails of inspiration to bear us up, we will find ourselves mounting up with the wings of the eagle, soaring into lofty heights. Not only are we to be kindly affectioned, we perceiving the people of God as He sees them – as "jewels" belonging to Him (Mal 3:17). There is a certain dignity associated with being called "the sons of God" (1 John 3:1-2), and it is our business to recognize it in our brethren. If our Father is going to "honor" those who serve the Son (John 12:26), we do well to also give them "honor."

To honor the saints by being kindly affectioned toward them in brother love, is the opposite of despising them. It involves preferring their company, benefitting from the grace they have received, and bestowing labor upon them.

THE SPIRIT OF SERVICE

"¹¹ Not lagging in diligence, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Here the Spirit touches upon an area of especial weakness among believers. In the routine matters of life, whether directly or indirectly related to the Lord's work, there is an attitude to be avoided, and one to be obtained. The Divine stamp of approval is never given to halfheartedness, retardation, and slowness of response. Never are such traits commended or represented as being tolerable. Those who are bent in such a direction will do well to give heed to this word, receiving it with all sobriety.

NOT SLOTHFUL

"Not lagging in diligence. . . " Other versions read, “Not slothful in business,”

KJV “not lagging behind in diligence,”NASB
*“Never be lacking in zeal,”*NIV “Be not slow in your work,”BBE and “Never be lazy in your work.”NLT

Here, the various translations appear to obscure the text. Linguists insist that the word “business,” as used in the KJV, is not correct. Yet Thayer, the esteemed Greek lexicographer defines the word used here (σπουδή) as, “earnestness in accomplishing, promoting, or striving after anything.” That, of course, is precisely what the word “business” means: “purposeful activity . . . an immediate task or objective . . . a particular field of endeavor.”MERRIAM-WEBSTER

The Meaning

In this verse “diligence” means commitment to do something, or giving oneself to the completion of a specific task: i.e., the business of learning, What is your business here?, the best in the business, etc.

The meaning of the exhortation is this: whatever you set your mind and hand to do, do not be slothful in accomplishing it. It is another way of saying, “Whatever your hand finds to do, do it with your might” (Eccl 9:10). Bringing that exhortation into the domain of the New Covenant, it says, “And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ” (Col 3:23-24). Another way of saying the same thing is, “See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil” (Eph 5:15-16).

You will search the Scripture in vain for any word of encouragement for slothful souls. Slothfulness and lagging behind have no place in the walk of faith. God is not slothful. Jesus is not slothful. The Holy Spirit is not slothful. The holy angels are not slothful. What would lead any soul to believe this grievous trait is acceptable among men – particularly those who have been delivered from the power of darkness, and translated into the kingdom of God’s dear Son (Col 1:13)?

In this time of falling away, the church is not noted for its zeal. There is an unfortunate spirit of stupor that has one (James 5:16). Our love for one another is to be done “fervently” (1 Pet 1:22). Those who repent are to do so with zeal (Rev 3:19).

Can you imagine Noah being slothful in building the ark? How about Israel’s preparation to come out of Egypt? “Whatever you do” (Col 3:17), throw

There is an unfortunate spirit of stupor that has settled upon the Christian community, and it is altogether unacceptable. Aggressive preachers, teachers, elders, and deacons are not common.

settled upon the Christian community, and it is altogether unacceptable. Aggressive preachers, teachers, elders, and deacons are not common. In practical financial and business matters, Christians do not generally have good record.

We are solemnly admonished, “And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him” (Col 3:17). It should be evident that no place is made for slothfulness in that exhortation.

FERVENT IN SPIRIT

“ . . . fervent in spirit.” Other versions read, “keep your spiritual fervor,”NIV “be ardent in spirit,”NRSV “enthusiastically,”NLT and “with conscientiousness and an eager spirit.”NJB This is equivalent to “with all your might” (Eccl 9:10), “heartily” (Col 3:23), and “making the most of every opportunity”NIV (Eph 5:16).

Apollos is an example of fervency. “This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord” (Acts 18:25). Another example is Epaphras. “Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ, saluteth you, always laboring fervently for you in prayers” (Col 4:12). We are told that the prayer heaven will honor is a “fervent” yourself into it. Do so because the Lord is honored by it. Do so because the people of God are helped by it. Do so because you are adorning the doctrine by it.

SERVING THE LORD

“ . . . serving the Lord.” Spiritual fervor is not an end of itself. It is the spirit in which God is served. Nothing in all of Scripture remotely suggests that God is served by halfheartedness or lukewarmness. Those who attempt to serve the Lord in a spirit of disinterest, infrequency, or out of a sense of obligation are not serving the Lord, and their efforts will not be recognized by Him. It simply is not possible to love God with all the heart, soul, mind, and strength, and be haphazard or nonchalant in serving Him.

Those religious leaders who have pioneered brief meetings, infrequency of gatherings, and shallow presentations, should explain their preferences and practices in view of this passage. They have chosen to cater to the carnal mind, and to a manner of religious life that does not comport with the revealed will of God. It is quite true that we ought not be overbearing, or more demanding of the saints than the Lord. Such a custom is altogether unacceptable. Everyone, however, does well to take this text seriously, and to purge from their lives all forms of indolence and sloth.

HOPE, TRIBULATION, AND PRAYER

“¹² Rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation, continuing steadfastly in prayer . . .” Faith responds correctly

New Life in Christ Expresses Itself Consistently and to the Glory of God.--by Given O. Blakely and beneficially under all circumstances. It always walks through difficulties, through the fire and water, hand-in-hand with the Deliverer. The eye of faith always sees beyond trials and tribulations, enabling the survival of the child of God, even though he is sorely tested.

Our text now addresses the difficulties of life. These are areas where survival and continuance are maintained with great difficulty. The race that is set before us leads to glory, yet it goes through the grievous "straits" in which even our persecutors "overlook" us (Lam 1:3). Faith is triumphant, overcoming the world, but not without a fierce conflict. If this was not the case, admonitions regarding "hope," "tribulation," and "prayer" would not be necessary.

These three responses are to accompany our service to the Lord: "serving the Lord" (verse 11). These are attending graces. They do not stand by themselves, but are put to work in the crucible of service to God. Apart from that service to, or worship of (12:1-2), the Lord, they have neither meaning nor purpose.

HOPE

"Rejoicing in hope . . ." Other versions read, "Be joyful in hope," ^{NIV} "As regards hope, rejoicing," ^{DARBY} and "Being glad in hope." ^{BBE} The Spirit has already mentioned this marvelous quality: ". . . our Lord Jesus Christ: by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God" (5:2). This rejoicing, therefore, is "by," or "through," Christ Jesus. It is realized by means of His power and through fellowship with Him. Yet, this does not mean no effort is required from us. God does not admonish Jesus to cause us to rejoice in hope. We are the ones exhorted to do so! Divine appointments must be appropriated through faith.

What does it mean to "rejoice in hope?" Hope regards the future. It is faith peering beyond the horizon of time and circumstance, seeing what God has "prepared for them that love Him" (1 Cor

2:9). Hope does not look down, but up. It does not survey the circumstances, but ponders the future, when we will "ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess 4:17). Hope does not ask, "What is happening to me?," but declares, "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry" (Heb 10:37). Hope does not linger in the outer court of where we are, but looks into the most holy place, where we are going.

Rejoicing in hope results from the contemplation of "the crown of righteousness" that will be given to us (2 Tim 4:8). It is awakened by the consideration of receiving "praise from God" (1 Cor 4:5), and hearing His "well done!" (Matt 25:23). When our thoughts

These are areas where survival and continuance are maintained with great difficulty. The race that is set before us leads to glory, yet it goes through the grievous "straits" in which even our persecutors "overlook" us linger on the fact that we are "heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ" (Rom 7:17), joy erupts, pouring refreshing water upon our souls. Meditating upon the coming glory, when we will "ever be with the Lord," sitting with Him in His throne (Rev 3:21), and reigning with Him (2 Tim 2:12), summons rejoicing to the place of dominance.

Things related to "the hope of His calling" (Eph 1:18) can only bring joy when they are duly considered. "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away" (Rev 21:4-5). "And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him: and they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads. And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever" (Rev 22:3-5).

If these things seem too good to be true, the God of heaven adds, "These sayings are faithful and true" (Rev 22:6).

It goes without saying that rejoicing in hope is only possible as these blessed realities are brought to the forefront of our thoughts. You may consider the possibility of your circumstances in this world improving. You may even associate such improvement with the grace and power of God. But such thoughts cannot produce the rejoicing of hope. If, whether concerning your own person, or those to whom you minister, you labor to bring rejoicing in the hope of earthly circumstance improving, you have not done well. You must hold the revealed future for all saints before people if they are to rejoice! Neither faith nor hope can flourish and refresh while thoughts are wrapped around earthly circumstances.

TRIBULATION

"... patient in tribulation . . ." Other versions read, "persevering in tribulation," ^{NASB} "patient in affliction," ^{NIV} "be patient in suffering," and ^{NRSV} "endure in affliction" ^{NAB}

Patience is perseverance, persistence, or endurance. It is making progress when the details of life are not conducive to progress. It is continuing in the race when it leads through the Red Sea of impossibility or the burning desert of trial. Patience shouts to the soul what Moses was told to cry out to Israel: "speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward" (Ex 14:15).

Patience is also an aspect of faith. Faith appropriately responds when it enters into the furnace of tribulation. Rather than being beat down by the flames, it becomes more determined than ever to stand. When circumstance throws troops of complication and walls of impossibility before the child of God, faith shouts, “For by Thee I have run through a troop: by my God have I leaped over a wall” (Psa 18:29).

It is not possible for those who live by faith to avoid tribulation.

Jesus has declared, “In the world ye shall have tribulation” (John 16:33). The only issue here is whether we will continue to run the race set before us or not. Many a professed believer has thrown in the towel when things become seemingly too difficult. Such imagine they will find relief by withdrawing from the race, and ceasing to fight the good fight of faith (1 Tim 6:12). Thus, they are thrown to the ground by discouragement, and pummeled into despair by frustration. Poor souls, indeed, for they have actually incurred the indignation of God by their response. Is it not written, “but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul” (Heb 10:38-39).

This is the word from heaven: “be patient in tribulation!” No other alternative is offered! This can only mean that our Father has graciously supplied all that we need to be “patient in tribulation.” If we quit in tribulation, it is because we have not availed ourselves of the resources God has provided. It is because we have not believed, or kept the faith. There is no valid reason for this to happen!

PRAYER

“ . . . continuing steadfastly in prayer.” Other versions read, “continuing instant in prayer,” ^{KJV} “devoted to prayer,” ^{NASB} “faithful in prayer,” ^{NIV} “persevere in prayer,” ^{NRSV} “be constant in prayer,” ^{RSV} and “at all times given to prayer.” ^{BBE} importunate widow, who refused to cease from asking until she received an answer (Luke 18:1-8). They are also seen in the mighty prophet Elijah, who prayed seven times for rain – until his servant saw a small cloud forming, about the size of a man’s hand (1 Kgs 18:44). The early church was “instant in prayer,” immediately going to the Lord when they

Many a professed believer has thrown in the towel when things become seemingly too difficult. Such imagine they will find relief by withdrawing from the race, and ceasing to fight the good fight of faith

The words “continuing steadfastly,” or “continuing instant,” come from a single word (προσκαρτεροῦντες). The word has a broad meaning. It includes the ideas of continuance and readiness. It also means to pay persistent attention to, and be devoted to.

The meaning of the exhortation is this: we are to remain so sensitive and devoted to prayer that it is your first and continual resort. Concerning our response, we are to be “instant in prayer,” not tardy or slow in heart. Concerning the manner of prayer itself, we are to “continue steadfastly” in it, not giving up in difficult cases. Regarding our attitude concerning prayer, we are to be “devoted to prayer,” not allowing anything to move us from it.

All of these are seen in the were threatened (Acts 4:24-31).

“Continuing instant in prayer” requires a sensitive spirit – one that is more aware of heaven than it is of earth. Such a soul is not shaken by circumstance, or moved by threats from the enemy. It is persuaded that God is “a very present help in the time of trouble,” and relies upon that fact (Psa 46:1).

Such people live and move and have their being within the framework of an acute consciousness of God. They know they are reconciled to Him. They know they have access to Him. They know He is seeking their welfare. Without such persuasions, one cannot continue “instant in prayer.” With them, such prayer is possible to the child of God. Blessed is the person who knows that joyful sound, and embraces it with joy and faith!

THE RESPONSE TOWARD NEEDS OF SAINTS

¹³ . . . distributing to the needs of the saints, given to hospitality.”

Here is an exceedingly practical area of living by faith. It is not common to hear exhortations in this area, or to behold any degree of consistency in the fulfillment of the exhortation. I want to keep before you that the Spirit is showing how faith works. He is also revealing the response of the individual to whom righteousness has been imputed. The individual who is able to fervently desire, and enter into, these good works possesses confirmation that he is righteous. As it is written, “ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of Him” (1 John 2:29). And again, “he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as He is righteous” (1 John 3:7).

DISTRIBUTING

“Distributing to the needs of the saints.” Other versions read,

“Distributing to the necessity of saints,” ^{KJV} “contributing to the needs of the saints,” ^{NASB} “Share with God’s people who are in need,” ^{NIV} and “When God’s children are in need, be the one to help them out.” ^{NLT}

For some, this is a most difficult text. Particularly in the Western world, a kind of Christianity is being marketed that looks with disdain upon any believer being needy. The resurrection of the health and wealth gospel (falsely so called) teaches that salvation includes financial prosperity and health of body. Thus, these benighted souls surmise, need is an evidence of unbelief. Of course, if these people were right, you would not contribute to the needs of the saints, but exhort them to have no needs at all. The best thing to do with such teaching is to throw it into the theological scrap heap.

The word “distribute” postulates that we are stewards of the resources God has given us. They are not intended to be for ourselves alone, but are to be used for the glory of God. Those who have more than an adequate supply of resources are admonished to handle them properly. “Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life” (1 Tim 6:17-19). Notice the wealth of insight that is here made known.

- ❑ The rich are to be “charged,” commanded, ^{NKJV} or instructed ^{NASB} regarding their riches.
- ❑ The rich are not to be “highminded,” haughty ^{NKJV} or conceited. ^{NASB}
- ❑ They are not to “trust in uncertain riches,” of fix their hope in fading resources.
- ❑ Their hope is to be firmly “in the living God.”
- ❑ The things they have received have come from Him, who richly supplies us all things to enjoy.
- ❑ The rich are to “do good” with their riches.
- ❑ They are to see to it they are “rich in good works,” rather than only in goods or possessions.
- ❑ The rich are to be “ready to distribute,” “ready to give,” ^{NKJV} and “generous.” ^{NASB}
- ❑ They are to be “willing to communicate,” or “share.” ^{NKJV}

- ❑ By so doing, they are “storing up for themselves a good foundation for the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life,” or “storing up for themselves the treasure of a good foundation for the future, so that they may take hold of that which is life indeed.” ^{NASB} good works. Faithfulness in this area directly impacts upon our future—“the time to come.” Finally. It relates to taking hold of eternal life. When, therefore, we speak of giving to the needs of the saints, we are not dealing with a trivial and inconsequential matter!

Determining Our Eternal Destiny

Jesus revealed that our response to the needs of His brethren – “the saints” – had a direct bearing upon our eternal destiny. He mentioned several areas, relating them all to Himself personally. “I was hungry . . . I was thirsty . . . I was a stranger . . . I was naked . . . I was sick . . . I was in prison.” The response of the people to these situations revealed whether they were “sheep” or “goats,” accepted or rejected. It became the basis for being on His right hand or left hand. It determined if they inherited the kingdom prepared for them, or were cursed, forced to depart from him and have their part in the everlasting fire prepared for the devil and His angels.

Those who were blessed to be forever with the Lord were told, “you gave Me food . . . you gave Me drink . . . you took ME in . . . you clothed Me . . . you visited Me . . . you came to Me.” Those who were cursed and cast into everlasting fire were told: “you gave Me no food . . . you gave Me no drink . . . you did not take Me in . . . you did not clothe Me . . . you did not visit Me.”

In both cases, the people were not aware of any action they had performed toward the Lord Himself. The righteous responded, “Lord, when did we see You hungry and feed You, or thirsty and give You drink? When did we see You a stranger and take You in, or naked and clothe You? Or when did we see You sick, or in prison, and come to You?” The wicked responded, “Lord, when did we see You hungry or thirsty or a stranger or naked or sick or in prison, and did not minister to You?”

Our Lord’s answer unveiled the kind of realm into which we have been called. To the righteous He said, “Assuredly, I say to you, inasmuch as you did it to one of the least of these My brethren, you did it to Me.” To the wicked He replied, “Assuredly, I say to you, inasmuch as you did not do it to one of the least of these, you did not do it to Me.” (Matt 25:32-46).

Weighty Words

Within the context of those words, our text takes on a greater weight. This is no mere suggestion: “Distributing to the necessity of saints.” No wonder David exclaimed, “Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the LORD will deliver him in time of trouble” (Psa 41:1) – particularly when they are the saints of God (Gal 6:10)!

The Experience of the Early Church

Almost immediately, the early church was faced with the need of the saints. Devout men “from every nation under heaven” had flocked to Jerusalem to observe the feast of Pentecost. They had not come to stay, but had planned to return home after the festivities. However, during their stay, they heard the news of the exalted Savior, were convinced of their need to be reconciled to God, and were "added to the church." As a result, they remained, basking in the blessing of the Lord and the newness of life.

Consequently, their resources soon were depleted, and need surfaced. Faith rose to the occasion. It is written, "And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need" (Acts 2:44-45).

While this was an unusual circumstance, it provides an excellent example of being "ready to distribute." We are told that God "is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love, which ye have showed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister" (Heb 6:10). Such sharing is described as "sacrifices" with which God is "well pleased" (Heb 13:16).

Elsewhere the Spirit reminds us that the love of God does not dwell in the individual who fails to respond to the needs of Christ's brethren. "But whoever has this world's goods, and sees his brother in need, and shuts up his heart from him, how does the love of God abide in him?" (1 John 3:17).

What of Those with Chronic Needs?

What of those with chronic needs, who always seem to stand in need of assistance? What is to be done in their case.

The Helpless

First, there ARE people who, due to debilitating circumstances, always need to be helped. Such was the beggar Lazarus, full of sores, who was daily laid at the gate of a rich man (Lk 16:20). In the case of Lazarus, he found no relief until he died and was escorted by angels to Abraham's bosom (16:22). There was also the lame beggar who was carried every day and placed at the "gate of the temple" (Acts 3:2). His situation was changed when Peter and John, in the name of Jesus, eliminated his need (3:6-7). There was also blind Bartimaeus who regularly begged alms (Mark 10:46).

Thus, there are people whose need is never really eliminated, and we ought not to grow impatient with them. They have disadvantages that prohibit them from meeting their needs. Of such, Jesus said, "For you have the poor with you always" ^{NKJV} (Matt 26:11).

Elsewhere the Spirit reminds us that the love of God does not dwell in the individual who fails to respond to the needs of Christ's brethren.

The Slothful

There are others, however, whose need has arisen because of their lack of diligence and productivity. The role of believers is not to nurse such along, ignoring their slothfulness. Of such, it is written, "For even when we were with you, we commanded you this: If anyone will not work, neither shall he eat. For we hear that there are some who walk among you in a disorderly manner, not working at all, but are busybodies. Now those who are such we command and exhort through our Lord Jesus Christ that they work in quietness and eat their own bread" (2 Thess 3:10-12).

From the very moment man was thrust from the garden, hearty work was ordained. "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen 3:19). Any person who seeks to avoid this judgment is in rebellion against God. Such souls are sluggards who can always find a reason for NOT working, or NOT eating his bread as the result of his own work. Of such Solomon said, "The sluggard will not plow by reason of the cold; therefore shall he beg in harvest, and have nothing" (Prov 20:4). He hands "refuse to labor," and thus God has withdrawn help from him (Prov 21:25).

You see, then, that discretion is required as we distribute "to the necessity of the saints." We are handling God's resources, and therefore are to do so for His honor and glory, as well as the assistance of the poor.

HOSPITALITY

"... given to hospitality."

Other versions read, "practicing hospitality," ^{NASB} "extend hospitality to strangers," ^{NRSV} "pursuing hospitality," ^{DOUAY} "ready to take people into your houses," ^{BBE} "And get into the habit of inviting guests home for dinner or, if they need lodging, for the night," ^{NLT} and "look for opportunities to be hospitable." ^{NJB}

In a day of economical motels and credit cards, this exhortation may sound strange. It may even be viewed as a cultural thing, with no bearing upon the nature of spiritual life. However, the Holy Spirit does not apply the effects of imputed righteousness and faith to mere cultural matters. Such a postulate is wholly without foundation. It has the Lord admonishing us to conform to culture on the one hand, and yet refuse to conform to the fashion of the world on the other hand (Rom 12:2; 1 Cor 7:31). Such thinking is unbefitting for those with renewed minds.

There are numerous examples of hospitality in Scripture.

- Pharaoh to Abraham (Gen 12:16).
- Melchizedec to Abraham (Gen 14:18).
- Abraham to angels (Gen 18:1-8).
- Lot to angels (Gen 19:1-11).
- Abimelech to Abraham (Gen 20:14-15).
- Sons of Heth to Abraham (Gen 23:6-11).
- Laban to Abraham's servant (Gen 24:31).
- Laban to Jacob (Gen 29:13-14).
- Isaac to Abimelech (Gen 26:30).
- Joseph to his brethren (Gen 43:31-34).
- Pharaoh to Jacob (Gen 45:16-20).

- Jethro to Moses (Ex 2:20).
- Rahab to the spies (Josh 2:1-16).
- Men of Gibeah to the Levite (Judges 19:16-21).
- Pharaoh to Hadad (1 Kgs 11:17,22).
- David to Mephibosheth (2 Sam 9:7-13).
- The widow of Zarephath to Elijah (1 Kings 17:10-24).
- The Shunammite to Elisha (2 Kgs 4:8-10).
- Elisha to the Syrian spies (2 Kgs 6:22).
- Job to strangers (Job 31:32).
- Martha to Jesus (Lk 10:38; John 12:1-2).
- A Pharisee to Jesus (Luke 11:37-38).
- Zaccheus to Jesus (Luke 19:1-10).
- Simon the tanner to Peter (Acts 10:6,23).
- Lydia to Paul and Silas (Acts 16:15).
- Jailor to Paul and Silas (Acts 16:33-

- 34).
- Publius to Paul (Acts 28:7).
- Phebe to Paul (Rom 16:2).
- Onesiphorus to Paul (2 Tim 1:16).
- Gaius (3 John 5-8).

Considerable blessing was conferred upon people in the above instances of hospitality. It became an environment in which encouragement was ministered and the work of God was extended. In Zaccheus' case, salvation came to his house in the atmosphere of hospitality. In Rahab's case, her whole family was spared because of her hospitality. The father of Publius was healed because of his hospitality to Paul. The Shunammite woman was given a child because of her hospitality.

Let the people of God be known for their kindly spirit, and for sharing their home and possessions with others. We can well afford to receive others because Christ "has received us to the glory of God" (Rom 15:7).

One of the qualifications for an elder is, "given to hospitality" (1 Tim 3:2), and even being a "lover of hospitality" (Tit 1:8). Before a widow can be supported by the church, she must "have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted" (1 Tim 5:10). Such hospitality is to be given to one another "without grumbling" (1 Pet 4:9).

Here is a virtue in which considerable advancement can be realized. The church is deficient in this area.

THE RESPONSE TOWARD OUR PERSECUTORS

"¹⁴ Bless those who persecute you; bless and do not curse." Spiritual life expresses itself on all levels, and in all relationships. There is no legitimate area of life where it is not productive, or does not bear fruit. Here, faith responds to those who persecute and abuse the saints.

BLESS! BLESS!

How are we to respond to those who hurt us - who persecute us, and do all manner of evil against us? How does Divine life react to people like that? What kind of grace are we to seek to help in a need such as that?

Bless!

Here is a challenge worthy of the people of God: "Bless your persecutors!" ^{NJB} Seek their advantage! Ask the Lord to bestow benefits upon them. Pursue their welfare!

Jesus put it this way: *"But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for He maketh His sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust" (Matt 5:44-45).

Spiritual life expresses itself on all levels, and in all relationships. There is no legitimate area of life where it is not productive, or does not bear fruit. Here, faith responds to those who persecute and abuse the saints.

One of the traits to which Paul confessed was this: "being reviled, we bless" (1 Cor 4:10).

When a band of men and officers came to arrest Jesus in the garden, Peter rushed to His defense, drawing his sword, "and smote the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus" (John 18:10). The reaction of Jesus to that deed is recorded by Luke. "And He touched his ear, and healed him" (Lk 22:51). He blessed His enemies, and did good to those despitefully using Him.

Luke records the first words Jesus said after He was crucified: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do" (Lk 23:34). He was blessing His enemies, and those who persecuted Him. Stephen did the same regarding his enemies, blessing them with these words, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge" (Acts 7:60). He blessed them while the stones they were throwing battered the life from his body.

To bless our enemies is not a natural disposition, and it cannot be carried out in the energy of the flesh. You will have to live in fellowship with Christ to do it, and you really have no choice but to do so.

Do Not Curse!

Of old time, holy men were known to curse their enemies. Elisha cursed forty two children who had chided him saying, "Go up, thou bald head; go up, thou bald head." Two she bears forthwith came out of the wood and mauled them all to death! On another occasion, when hostile men were sent to Elijah by the king of Samaria, he called fire down from heaven upon them, consuming two groups of fifty, together with their leaders (2 Kgs 1:10-12).

Drawing upon these two occasions, the disciples of Jesus once confronted some Samaritans who did not want to receive Jesus because they saw He was headed for Jerusalem. Infuriated by the circumstance, James and John asked the Lord, "Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?" Most solemnly, the Lord replied, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them" (Lk 9:52-56).

Thus did He set the tone for His followers to "curse not!"

If it seems too difficult for this word to be fulfilled in your life, you must consider Job, who had neither Bible nor kindred spirits around him. He confessed, "If I rejoiced at the destruction of him that hated me, or lifted up myself when evil found him: neither have I suffered my mouth to sin by wishing a curse to his soul" (Job 31:29-30).

Even under the Law, the Lord demanded of the people, "If thou meet thine enemy's ox or his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again. If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, and wouldest forbear to help him, thou shalt surely help with him" (Ex 23:4-5). I doubt not that most Israelites failed to see the kernel of truth in that commandment. But that must not be said of us!

Some centuries later, David, the man after God's own heart, acknowledged, "But as for me, when they were sick, my clothing was sackcloth: I humbled my soul with fasting; and my prayer returned into mine own bosom. I behaved myself as though he had been my friend or brother: I bowed down heavily, as one that mourneth for his mother" (Psa 35:13-14).

Even Solomon declared, "Whoso mocketh the poor reproacheth his Maker: and he that is glad at calamities shall not be unpunished" (Prov 17:5). Through the poor, the hearts of men are discovered.

The Lord, therefore, has asked nothing of us that is too difficult. We have, by grace, been called into affiliation with the One who reconciled us when we were enemies (Rom 5:10). We have been the recipients of great blessing, and can now refrain ourselves from cursing our enemies, and those who do us harm.

REJOICING AND WEEPING WITH OTHERS

¹⁵ Rejoice with those who rejoice, and weep with those who weep. Here is another admonition that cannot be fulfilled by mere discipline, or out of a sense of obedience alone. Heart and affection can be admonished, but they cannot be commanded, as in the sense of law. In this very sensitive exhortation we are urged to make the experiences of our brethren our own. How can such a word be viewed as a cold and heartless commandment, or obeyed out of a sense of obligation? Your heart will tell you such a thing is not possible.

Nature cannot rise to this requirement. It has neither the strength nor the inclination to do so. Neither, indeed, can legalism fulfill this admonition. Job's "friends," driven by a spirit of law, were not able to weep with Job in his sorrow, nor rejoice with him in his deliverance. They were suspicious, not sensitive, and antipathetic, not empathetic. Although God refused to excuse their inconsideration, these men lived in the dim light of limited revelation. However, those living in the high noon of

The saved cannot always rejoice or weep with the unsaved, for they do not have the same sense of values. While there are common experiences in which measured empathy can take place (death, birth, etc), those occasions are not the thrust of this word.

the Gospel of Christ are abundantly capable of rejoicing with those who rejoice, and weeping with those who weep. It only remains for them to do so.

HOUSEHOLD RESPONSES

This is an encouragement to identify more fully with those who are in Christ Jesus. The saved cannot always rejoice or weep with the unsaved, for they do not have the same sense of values. While there are common experiences in which measured empathy can take place (death, birth, etc), those occasions are not the thrust of this word.

Rejoicing with Those Who Rejoice

David provided an example of one trusting person rejoicing with another. "My soul shall make her boast in the LORD: the humble shall hear thereof, and be glad" (Psa 34:2). And again, "They that fear thee will be glad when they see me; because I have hoped in thy word" (Psa 119:74).

Elizabeth, who gave birth to John the Baptist, experienced the same type of fellowship. When John was born, “her neighbors and her cousins heard how the Lord had showed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her” (Luke 1:58).

Another picture is provided in the parable of the lost sheep. The good shepherd left the ninety and nine sheep to find the one that was lost. Finding it, he carried it upon his shoulder “with rejoicing.” Upon returning home, “he calleth together his friends and neighbors, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost” (Luke 15:4-6).

One of the measures of true spiritual advancement is the ability to rejoice at the well being and successfulness of our brothers and sisters. It confirms that we have been delivered from the tyranny of self. Thus, if “one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it” (1 Cor 12:26). There is a great comfort that comes to us in the realization that our brethren are rejoicing with us. It mitigates otherwise selfish tendencies.

Weeping with Those Who Weep

When we rejoice with those who rejoice, the joy is, as it was, multiplied. However, when we weep with those who weep, sorrow is reduced, and made more bearable.

One remarkable passage that touches upon this matter, regards our consideration of those who are suffering in bonds, or chains. “Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body” (Heb 13:3).

This is not a mere formality, like those who came to lament the passing of Lazarus (John 11:33-38), or the passing of Jairus’ daughter (Mark 5:37-40). It is an action driven by insight, and the capacity to participate in the experiences of those of like precious faith.

WHY WE CAN REJOICE AND WEEP

Common. These responses are possible because of the “common faith” (Tit 1:4) that exists among us. We are all members of one body, have the same values, have left the same condemned realm, and are headed for the same glorious liberty.

Capacity. In Christ, we have the capacity to rejoice and weep with fellow strangers and pilgrims. We are able to do this by virtue of the same Spirit that we possess. We also have been given the same kind of nature in Christ, and have the same law written upon our hearts and put into our minds.

Versatility. Faith can adapt to all kinds of experiences. While we are rejoicing in our own blessings, we can, at the same time, weep with those who have been less fortunate. Suffering ones, on the other hand, can rejoice in their brethren who have been exalted at the same time they are standing in the furnace of trial. Faith works at the extremities of human experience as well as at its center – in the valleys as well as on the mountains.

Many of us have been able to negotiate through very difficult times because our brothers and sisters wept with us. Also, we have been able to handle great blessings without being overcome with pride, because our brethren rejoiced with us. This is a good family benefit.

One might ask why such an exhortation is necessary. It is because the remnants of the old nature remain in us, quite willing to express themselves during times of spiritual obtuseness. Sinful selfishness can overcome the expression of mutual feelings if we do not walk by faith and live in the power of the Spirit. Satan is particularly active in this area, and thus we are to be alert to his delusions.

HAVING THE SAME MIND

“^{16a} Be of the same mind toward one another.” Other versions read, “Live in harmony with one another,”^{NIV} “Have the same respect one for another,”^{DARBY} “Have the same regard for one another,”^{NAB} and “Give the same consideration to all others alike.”^{NJB} This is another way of saying we are not to have “respect of persons,” for “if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin” (James 2:9).

There are several texts in which we are admonished to “be of the same mind,” embracing the same perspectives of God and His great salvation, or having the same emphasis (Rom 15:6; 1 Cor 1:10; 2 Cor 13:11; Phil 1:27; 2:2; 4:2). However, that is not the thrust of this verse.

The key here is “toward one another.” That is, we are not to be selective about those with whom we “rejoice” or “weep.” We are not to have our favorites, so to speak, developing religious cliques, or groups. This is a lamentable tendency that is quite common among professed Christians. Sectarianism encourages such a stance, driving wedges between those whom faith unites.

This is having “the same love” (Phil 2:2) and thoughtful consideration toward one another. Being “of the same mind toward one another” will move us to “by love serve one another” (Gal 5:13). We will thus live considerately of one another, “forbearing one another, and forgiving one another” (Col 3:13), thereby encouraging growth in Christ Jesus.

In this attitude, we view one another as we are in Christ Jesus, without regard to social or other fleshly distinctions. We are all born of God, washed, sanctified, and justified. We have all received the Spirit of adoption, an eternal inheritance, and grace for grace. Our names are all written in the book of life, the angels minister to us all, and Jesus makes intercession for us all. Recalling these, and other things, will assist us in having the same regard for one another. This will produce a pleasant spiritual environment in which encouragement and comfort will be ministered.

It must be remembered that faith has alienated us from the world. It does not and cannot love us, even though we often receive helps from it. But they are not of the sort that are received from the household of faith, and are not to be compared with the same. At the very best, those who are of the world can assist us in temporal ways. We are grateful for such helps, but they are not to be compared with the lifting up of the hands than hang down, and the strengthening of the feeble knees received amidst the saints of God. There is a comfort that is superior. There is a help that is more excellent. There are advantages that are more beneficial, more laden with Divine resources. These are blessings Jesus ministers through the members of His body. No one can bring these to us but those who are reconciled to God. They are needful to us all.

THE RESPONSE TOWARD SELF

“^{16b} Do not set your mind on high things, but associate with the humble. Do not be wise in your own opinion.” Once again, I am reminded of the presence of the sinful nature within us. It is what necessitates exhortations like this, and we do well to remember it. You may recall the fierce spiritual struggle that was depicted in the seventh chapter of Romans. There arise in us thoughts and inclinations that we hate, and we are powerless to stop them from asserting themselves. Time and time again, we must reject them, throwing them down in the energy of faith (7:15-18). All of this confirms that in our natural persons, or “flesh,” there is nothing good, nothing salvageable, nothing that must be allowed to dominate (7:18). With the Adamic nature we “serve the law of sin” (7:25).

Salvation has freed us from an obligation to the flesh. We are no longer debtors to it, to live after it – even though it is constantly crying to us for attention (8:12).

This condition is the reason for this word. There is in us a propensity that must be cast down to the ground, and that with aggression.

MINDING HIGH THINGS

“Do not set your mind on high things, but associate with the humble.” Other versions read, “Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate,”^{KJV} “do not be haughty in mind, but associate with the lowly,”^{NASB} “Do not be proud, but be willing to associate with people of low position,”^{NIV} and “Pay no regard to social standing, but meet humble people on their own terms.”^{NJB}

The idea is that we are not to gravitate to people who appear to give us the greater advantage. The KJV version accentuates this by saying, “condescend to

There arise in us thoughts and inclinations that we hate, and we are powerless to stop them from asserting themselves. Time and time again, we must reject them, throwing them down in the energy of faith men of low estate.” The meaning is not to condescend to ourselves be men of low estate (although that is emphasized in the next clause), but to be identified with others who are of lower social standing.

The church in Rome had people from “Caesar’s household” (Phil 4:21), and those who served in the households of others, having none of their own (16:10,11). There was not to be division in the church with, for example, the slaves meeting together in one place, and those of high social standing in another. The most advanced in Christ were to associate themselves with those of most ignoble backgrounds and associations, showing no preference.

The Lord Jesus

Our blessed Lord lived out this spirit in a public manner. It was so contrary to the nature of the religious bigots of His day, that they criticized Him for it. They said of Him, “Behold a man gluttonous, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners” (Matt 11:19). Jesus was neither gluttonous nor a winebibber (drunkard). However, because He condescended to bring the Gospel to them, His enemies thought He had become defiled by the association.

Again, when He stooped to wash the disciples’ feet, He was condescending to be identified with men of low estate (John 13:4-5). He was the King, yet was not demeaned by performing the work of a servant to those He Himself created!

Again, when mothers brought their little children to Jesus, that He would “touch them,” His disciples were much displeased. It seemed much to lowly for the Master Teacher to engage in such mundane things. Therefore, the disciples sternly “rebuked those that brought” the little children. When the Lord saw this conduct, He was “greatly displeased.” He told His disciples to cease from forbidding little children to be brought to Him. He then took the little children “up in His arms, put His hands upon them, and blessed them” (Matt 19:13-16). He stooped to be identified with the lowliest estate of all – that of little children.

The Practice of Paul

We learn from Scripture that a certain runaway slave, Onesimus, was converted by Paul. This took place when Paul was in prison (Philemon 10). Onesimus was probably in prison with Paul at the time. Later, Paul referred to him as “a faithful brother,” sending him to Colossae with Tychicus (Col 4:9). Eventually, Paul sent him back to Philemon, saying he would prove profitable to his former master (Philemon 11-16). This circumstance would never have arisen if Paul, from an illustrious Jewish background, did not associate with Onesimus the runaway. He was not haughty in mind, but associated with the lowly.^{NASB} This was not grace given to an Apostle, but grace for the saints.

Who can forget the time when Paul was shipwrecked. The entire crew of the ship, together with its prisoners (of whom Paul was one), finally making it to the shore of an island of uncultured and “barbarous” people. Because of “the rain, and because of the cold,” the islanders received them, even kindling a fire for them. Paul, however, did not simply sit by the fire, but “gathered a bundle of sticks” for the fire. In the process, he was bitten by a poisonous snake, which he shook off in the fire, that no one else would be harmed (Acts 28:2-3). He condescended to be identified with men of low estate, thereby opening the door for the Lord to work on that island.

The church has too long suffered from men of haughty spirit, who refused to be identified with those they imagined were too lowly. It is our business to make sure this uncomely trait is not in us.

WISE IN OUR OWN EYES

“Do not be wise in your own opinion.” Other versions read, “Be not wise in your own conceits,”^{KJV} “Do not be wise in your own estimation,”^{NASB} “Do not be conceited,”^{NIV} and “do not claim to be wiser than you are.”^{NRSV} Flesh tends to provoke us to overestimate our own worth. It is not unusual to find professing Christians engaging in all manner of activities for which they are not well suited. Some, for example, imagine that academic credentials qualify them for these tasks. Those in Christ are to “think soberly,” and in strict accord with their role in the body of Christ (12:3).

Isaiah declared, “Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight!” (Isa 5:21). Solomon enjoined, “Be not wise in thine own eyes; fear the LORD, and depart from evil” (Prov 3:7). Again he warned, “Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? there is more hope of a fool than of him” (Prov 26:12). Paul warned those who speculated about the Jews without hearing what God has said of them, “For I do not want you, brethren, to be uninformed of this mystery, lest you be wise in your own estimation, that a partial hardening has happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles has come in”^{NASB} (Rom 11:25).

A person who is wise in his own eyes has used worldly standards to make that vain determination. He has asked the world for the criterion of judgment. Such a person is solemnly warned, “Do not deceive yourselves. If any one of you thinks he is wise by the standards of this age, he should become a ‘fool’ so that he may become wise”^{NIV} (1 Cor 3:18). Whether it is in the area of logic, language, history, or other forms of worldly knowledge, the world cannot produce “wisdom” in the child of God. The wisdom of this world, in its totality, is “foolishness in God’s sight” (1 Cor 3:19). It tends to puff up, and cause men to over-evaluate their own worth before God and to the saints. Such people must give heed to the words of our text!

Those who are “wise” in their “own opinion” are leaning to their own understanding. They do not understand “through faith” (Heb 11:3), and thus their understanding is vain. For this reason it is written, “Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding” (Prov 3:5). The person who is wise in his own eyes has failed to give heed to this word. For this reason, his wisdom is without value.

If this word was given due heed within the professing church, it would require changes of great magnitude. The structure of local congregations and Christian institutions would be altered so radically, one would scarcely be able to identify the results with what presently exists. There is a certain manner in place in the professing church, that has assigned high value to things of minuscule spiritual worth. People with very little spiritual insight have been vaulted into places of prominence. They have been given the responsibility of teaching and training others in the ways of the institution while they themselves are grossly ignorant of the ways of God. It may appear that this is a harsh judgment, and is characterized by inconsideration. However, when men are unable to move about in heavenly places, handle the Word of God, and open the mysteries of the Kingdom, they are not wise, regardless of their imagined credentials. A system that allows, and even encourages, them to consider themselves wise is seriously deficient, to say the least. I doubt that it can be blessed by God.

GODLY RESPONSES

“¹⁷ Repay no one evil for evil. Have regard for good things in the sight of all men.” Good and evil are all about us, personally impacting upon our lives. It is essential that we respond properly to them both.

DO NOT REPAY EVIL FOR EVIL

“Repay no one evil for evil.” Other versions read, “Never pay back evil for evil to anyone,”^{NASB} and “Do not give evil for evil to any man.”^{BBE} The commandment is firm.

Under the Law

Under the Law it was written, “But if any harm follows, then you shall give life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, burn for burn, wound for wound, stripe for stripe” (Ex 21:23-24). Again it was written, “If a man causes disfigurement of his neighbor, as he has done, so shall it be done to him; fracture for fracture, eye for eye, tooth for tooth; as he has caused disfigurement of a man, so shall it be done to him" (Lev 24:19-20). And again, "then you shall do to him as he thought to have done to his brother; so you shall put away the evil from among you. And those who remain shall hear and fear, and hereafter they shall not again commit such evil among you. Your eye shall not pity: life shall be for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot" (Deut 19:19-21).

The Law was a harsh and retaliatory system. It was ordained of God, and was suited for those who were not reconciled to Him. It was a covenant for those who lived in the flesh, under the dominance of sin, with a defiled conscience and an unchanged heart. It was designed to keep sin in check, lest it break forth on all sides, becoming uncontrollable.

Because the people had not been joined to the Lord, and were unlike Him in their thoughts and ways, they were often required to take some matters into their own hands. They were charged with the responsibility of restraining sin from bursting out of bounds, as it did in the days of Noah. However, this was not the ideal situation, to say the least.

Under the New Covenant

Things are quite different under the New Covenant. This difference is not owing to a mere change of the legal code. It is because men themselves are changed. Their sins are remitted, and the law of God is written upon their hearts and put into their minds (Heb 10:16-17). They are partakers of the Divine nature (2 Pet 1:4), partakers of Christ (Heb 3:14), and have been made "a new creature" in Christ Jesus (2 Cor 5:17).

Jesus said, "You have heard that it was said, 'An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.' But I tell you not to resist an evil person. But whoever slaps you on your right cheek, turn the other to him also. If anyone wants to sue you and take away your tunic, let him have your cloak also. And whoever compels you to go one mile, go with him two. Give to him who asks you, and from him who wants to borrow from you do not turn away" NKJV (Matt 5:38-42). In the words of our text, "Repay no one evil for evil."

Peter admonished us, "not returning evil for evil or reviling for reviling" (1 Pet 3:9). Whether in word or deed, those who do evil to us are not to be allowed to set our agenda, or determine how we react. The Lord is our Shepherd, and as such dictates how we respond to our enemies.

The Law was a harsh and retaliatory system. It was ordained of God, and was suited for those who were not reconciled to Him. It was a covenant for those who lived in the flesh, under the dominance of sin, with a defiled conscience and an unchanged heart.

If you are tempted to return evil for evil, heed this word: "Do not say, 'I will recompense evil'; Wait for the LORD, and He will save you" (Prov 20:22). It is our responsibility to "See that no one renders evil for evil to anyone, but always pursue what is good both for yourselves and for all" (1 Thess 5:15).

Should we choose to ignore this word, all manner of evil will be awakened within us. When we set ourselves to return evil for evil, the "old man" is raised in great strength, and begins to sit upon the throne of our heart and mind. He will not rule us well, and will again put us on the broad road that leads to destruction. Returning evil for evil gives a large room of residence to the devil, and he will not fail to occupy it.

REGARD GOOD THINGS

"Have regard for good things in the sight of all men." Other versions read,

"Provide things honest in the sight of all men," KJV "Respect what is right in the sight of all men," NASB "Be careful to do what is right in the eyes of everybody," NIV and "but take thought for what is noble in the sight of all." NRSV

This is another call for a total departure from self-centeredness. We are to have a regard for how others – even "everybody" – perceives our manners.

This does not mean we are to become pleasers of men, for then we would cease to be the servants of Christ (Gal 1:10; Eph 6:6; Col 3:22). However, there is a general sense in men, even unregenerate men, of what is good and proper. While the wicked may not act upon this general knowledge, we must not be guilty of violating that consciousness.

Prepare beforehand. By saying "Have regard," or "provide" for such things, the Spirit means we are to think about our manners ahead of time. We are to consider how "all men" will view what we do – not because we seek to please them, but because we do not want them to have a wrong view of life in Christ. Whether it is our countenance, words, deeds, clothing, or social preferences, the world must not conclude that we are no different than they. They must not see our profession as empty and without an impact upon our lives.

Avoiding offence. Young Titus was told to exhort young men about these things. The words given to him are applicable to us as well, and we do well to take them seriously. "Likewise exhort the young men to be sober-minded, in all things showing yourself to be a pattern of good works; in doctrine showing integrity, reverence, incorruptibility, sound speech that cannot be condemned, that one who is an opponent may be ashamed, having nothing evil to say of you" (Tit 2:6-8). An aggressive exhortation, indeed!

Make no mistake about this, we are to "be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world" (Phil 2:15). The name of the Lord and His doctrine has suffered much reproach because of the manners of many who wear His name. They have not provided for things honest in the eyes of all men.

Adorn the doctrine. There is a word spoken to slaves that is also a timely one for us all. It will have particular application to those in the employment of others, yet can be adapted to every person in Christ. "Exhort bondservants to be obedient to their own masters, to be well pleasing in all things, not answering back, not pilfering, but showing all good fidelity, that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things" (Tit 2:9-10).

What others think of your expressions does have a bearing on how you are to live. If you live in violation of even the common sense of goodness that all men have, you greatly dishonor the Savior, and place yourself in great jeopardy. God will not ignore such inconsideration. Again, we live in times that require this to be taught aggressively. There is far too much looseness in the professing church concerning this matter. The attitude of the people living under the Judges has resurfaced to the shame of the church. "In those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was right in his own eyes" (Judges 17:6; 21:25). Our text forbids such an attitude, for no person in Christ is an island to himself. Hence, he cannot live independently of the body. The church is the "fulness" of Christ (Eph 1:23), and thus is essential to us.

IF YOU DETERMINE THE CIRCUMSTANCE

¹⁸ If it is possible, as much as depends on you, live peaceably with all men. Other versions read, "Do your part to live in peace with everyone, as much as possible,"^{NLT} and "As much as possible, and to the utmost of your ability, be at peace with everyone."^{NJB} Agitation and turmoil are the foe of spiritual progress. Many a soul has gone down in defeat because of a troublesome environment! If you want a harvest of righteousness, "the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace" (James 3:16). The NIV reads, "Peacemakers who sow in peace raise a harvest of righteousness."

There is such a thing as being able to "MAKE peace" – that is what our text declares. This is not a constant circumstance, or something over which we have total control. However, there are times when peaceableness depends upon us: "as much as depends upon you!" A wise woman once said to the fierce warrior Joab, "I am one of them that are peaceable and faithful in Israel." Her words spared a city, and only a single offender was punished. Peace depended on that wise woman (2 Sam 20:19-21).

There is a sense in which we are the cause of division and agitation. Even as Jesus said of Himself, "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword" (Matt 10:34). But this is not the preference of "The Prince of peace" (Isa 9:6). He prefers that men be reconciled to God, and gave His life for that purpose (2 Cor 5:18-20).

So it is with the children of God. We do not desire to have war and conflict all about it. It is not in our heart to set every person against us, and be constantly opposed in what we do. We find no delight in such circumstances. As David would say, "I am for peace: but when I speak, they are for war" (Psa 120:7). We will do everything short of dishonoring our Lord to keep peace. We will not go out of our way to make war or cause dissension, but will extend ourselves to "make peace."

As with all such matters, this high regard for peace is to be had in our associations with "all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith" (Gal 6:10). May the words of our blessed Lord find residence in our hearts: "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God" (Matt 5:9). The benefit is worth the effort.

THE RESPONSE TOWARD OUR ENEMIES

¹⁹ Beloved, do not avenge yourselves, but rather give place to wrath; for it is written, "Vengeance is Mine, I will repay," says the Lord. ²⁰ Therefore If your enemy is hungry, feed him; If he is thirsty, give him a drink; For in so doing you will heap coals of fire on his head. This is a text worthy of deep contemplation.

Perhaps you have begun to see the magnitude of these exhortations. They extend far beyond the capabilities of the flesh or mere civility. That is one of the reasons for the abundance of them, and the insistence that they be carried out. This moves us to rely the more upon the Lord, showing us how utterly insufficient we are of ourselves.

If we keep religion in the realm of philosophy, it will place no pressure upon us. Nor, indeed, will it move us to call upon the name of the Lord, or to see the futility of our own understanding and strength. But if we will hear the words of this passage, particular regarding our response to our enemies, we will move beyond the boundary of speculation. The passage before us is a most excellent example of this truth.

AVENGE NOT YOURSELVES

“Beloved, do not avenge yourselves. . .”

Other versions read, “Never take your own revenge, beloved,”^{NASB} “Beloved, do not look for revenge,”^{NAB} and “Do not give punishment for wrongs done to you, dear brothers.”^{BBE}

You are not to be the judge of your enemies, or the avenger of wrongs done to you. God has withdrawn that right from you. The Lord does not allow us to take matters into our own hands, dispensing vengeance as though we had omniscience. Even under the Law it was said, “Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself: I am the LORD” (Lev 19:18).

One of the judgments again Edom, Esau’s descendants, was that they took vengeance themselves. “Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah by taking vengeance, and hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them; Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; I will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it; and I will make it desolate from Teman; and they of Dedan shall fall by the sword” (Ezek 25:12-13). If God reacted in this manner to the self-assertive vengeance of the Edomites, what will be His response to such conduct among those who wear the name of His Son?

This prohibition does not suggest that those who wrong you have not been duly noted by your Father in heaven. In fact, it is written, “it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you” (2 Thess 1:6). You must believe His promise, and be willing to wait for Him. His judgment will be righteous taking everything into consideration.

“ . . . but rather give place to wrath; for it is written, ‘Vengeance is Mine, I will repay,’ says the Lord.” Other versions read, “but leave room for the wrath of God,”^{NASB} and “but leave it to the wrath of God.”^{RSV} The meaning is that we are provide room for God to execute His wrath, not take it upon ourselves to settle the matter. The implication is that if we take matters into our own hands, God will not work for us.

God has spoken, declaring the right to show wrath “belongs” to Him. It does not belong to us. The reason for this is simple. “For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God” (James 1:20). God’s purpose is not served, and His name is not honored by the explosion of man’s anger. It is something to be controlled.

All of this means that unlawful wrath

You are not to be the judge of your enemies, or the avenger of wrongs done to you. God has withdrawn that right from you. The Lord does not allow us to take matters into our own hands, dispensing vengeance as though we had omniscience.

is resident in the flesh, and is to be subdued in the power of the Spirit. “Wrath,” or “outbursts of wrath,”^{NKJV} are part of the “works of the flesh” (Gal 5:20). If you have been truly wronged, God will settle your case.

HOW TO TREAT YOUR ENEMY

“Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink.” How flesh cringes when it hears this word! Once again, even under the Law, there was a glimmer of this kind of conduct. “If you meet your enemy’s ox or his donkey going astray, you shall surely bring it back to him again. If you see the donkey of one who hates you lying under its burden, and you would refrain from helping it, you shall surely help him with it” (Ex 23:4-5). This word, therefore, ought not have a strange sound to us, even though it is challenging.

These words are taken from Proverbs 25:21-22. “If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink: for thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the LORD shall reward thee.” Jesus said the same thing in these words, “do good to them that hate you” (Matt 5:44).

If these words appear too difficult (and surely they are not), let us remember the action of our Lord toward us when we were His enemies. “When we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son” (Rom 5:10). Let us also remember what our Father in heaven did.

“But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;) and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus” (Eph 2:4-6). These recollections will assist us in doing good to our enemies whenever it is in our hand to do so. Although they may not receive the Word from us, or give ear to our testimony, yet they may be put in a situation where they will receive the normal amenities of life from us. Thus the way may very well be paved for the Lord to work in them as He did in Saul of Tarsus.

In So Doing

“. . . for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.” This does not mean we intend to heap coals of fire upon the heads of our enemies. Rather, it means that is what will result. We cannot do good to our enemies, giving them bread and water, with the intent of bringing misery upon them. That should be evident, for it is not in keeping with the spirit of the passage.

The figure of “coals of fire” heaped upon the head is, indeed, a figure of intense pain. This pain, however, is of a special sort. It is the pangs of a condemning conscience – the bitter regret of having wronged someone to whom no wrong was due. It is the conviction that the wrong inflicted by our enemies was not right. Thus the door is opened for repentance. At least one paraphrased version emphasizes this: “and they will be ashamed of what they have done to you.”^{NLT}

This teaching is also expounded by Peter, and confirms this is the intent of the passage: “having your conduct honorable among the Gentiles, that when they speak against you as evildoers, they may, by your good works which they observe, glorify God in the day of visitation” (1 Pet 2:12). The day of visitation is the time when God judges the person, whether in a temporal punishment, or when Jesus comes again.

Again Peter writes, “But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts, and always be ready to give a defense to everyone who asks you a reason for the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear; having a good conscience, that when they defame you as evildoers, those who revile your good conduct in Christ may be ashamed” (1 Pet 3:15-16).

Thus, a gracious response to our enemies can be used of God to convince them of their wrongdoing and move them to repentance. By the same token, a failure to react in the prescribed manner will place the blood of our persecutors on our own hands.

It Has Been Noticed

It is not that those who do evil to you have not been duly noted in heaven. Nor, indeed, does this mean they are excluded from all judgment if they do not repent. But, we are not the ones charged with the responsibility of exacting this judgment. We have been “joined to the Lord” (1 Cor 6:17), and He alone “will repay” (Heb 10:39).

OVERCOMING, BUT NOT OVERCOME

“²¹ Do not be overcome by evil, but overcome evil with good.” Here is a short but pungent word. Here is something we are NOT to do, and something we ARE to do. Both of them have to do with evil that is directed toward us. Among other things, this alerts us to the inevitability of suffering at the hands of men.

WHAT WE ARE NOT TO DO

Regarding evil, we are not to allow it to overcome us. This is the evil that men do to us. Their persecutions are not to be the means by which we fall. They are not to be the occasions when flesh erupts with defiling power. This has to do with being slow to anger, and having control of your own spirit. As it is written, “He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city” (Prov 16:32). Nothing must be permitted to stop the well of blessing flowing from us. Thus it is written, “Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing” (1 Pet 3:9).

When “rivers of living water” cease to flow from our belly, or inmost person, we have been “overcome by evil” (John 7:37-38). It is possible for believers to actually be vanquished by the evil that is done to them. That possibility, however, is only because of the flesh, which is to be subdued. As stewards of life, God has supplied us with all of the graces necessary to “not be overcome by evil.” If you will put on “the whole armor of God” and “resist the devil,” you will NOT be overcome by evil (Eph 6:10-18; 1 Pet 5:8-9).

WHAT WE ARE TO DO

If you are looking for a challenge worthy of a hearty effort, here is one. “Overcome evil with good!” In a way, you can overcome the evil person by doing good to him when he does evil to you: feeding him when he is hungry and giving him something to drink when he is thirsty. After all, “greater is He that is in you, than he that is in the world” (1 John 4:4). Why should you not be able to continue doing good, even when those aligned against you continue to do evil?

If we avenge ourselves, we have been overcome by evil. If we “do good” to our enemies, we are overcoming evil with good.

In this case, overcoming evil does not mean evil disappears, or that the wicked cease to inflict evil upon us. Rather, it means that the intentions of the evil doer are not realized. Daniel’s opponents sought to get rid of him by raising a false accusation against him. He overcame evil with good, continuing in prayer in spite of the threat of a lion’s den. The evil intent of his enemies was not realized. They were the losers, not Daniel. His response is still ministering to and encouraging us.

As for you, you have been given even more grace than Daniel received. It is not that you are greater than Daniel. Rather, you are participating in the salvation of which he received but faint glimpses. He lived in a preparatory period. You are living in “the day of salvation” when more is being given to men than was ever given before. This is the time of spiritual plentitude, when heaven has been opened to the sons of men. It is a time of fulness, satisfaction, and adequacy. The way to God has been thrown open for heavenly commerce! The sun of righteousness has risen in power. There is no reason why you cannot excel in this regard. I encourage you to put your hand to the plow!

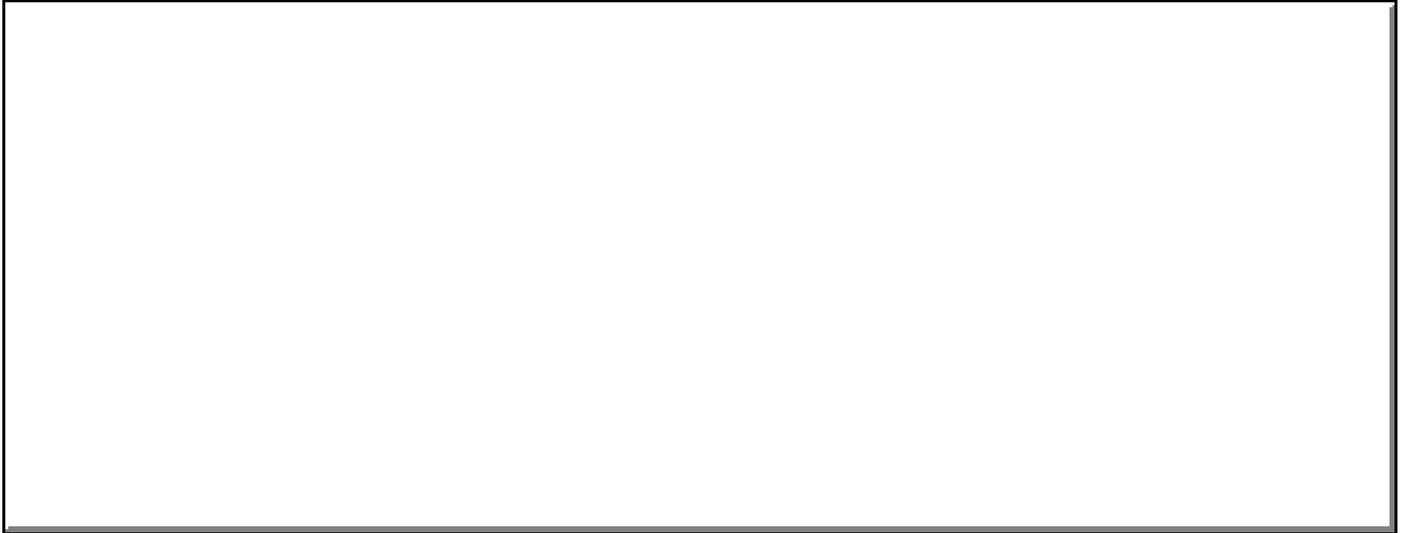

CONCLUSION

Now, be up and doing this great commission! The Lord has set before you an array of responsibilities that are too great to be fulfilled in the energy of the flesh. Mere human discipline cannot accomplish them. There is no secret knowledge in the world that will put them within your reach. This is work for faith! It is doing that is accomplished through the power of the Holy Spirit! Your “new man” can do all of these things, and your “old man” is set to resist them. I encourage you to throw yourself into the doing of them, all the while calling upon the name of the Lord. As you see them being fulfilled in your life, joy and confidence will come together in your heart, causing strength and determination to become strong within you. Now, “Be of good courage . . . play the men . . . and the LORD do that which seemeth Him good” (2 Sam 10:12). There is no reason why a harvest of righteousness cannot be enjoyed by you, dear child of God!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 40

SUBJECTION TO THE GOVERNMENT

13:1 Let every soul be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and the authorities that exist are appointed by God. ² Therefore whoever resists the authority resists the ordinance of God, and those who resist will bring judgment on themselves. ³ For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to evil. Do you want to be unafraid of the authority? Do what is good, and you will have praise from the same. ⁴ For he is God's minister to you for good. But if you do evil, be afraid; for he does not bear the sword in vain; for he is God's minister, an avenger to execute wrath on him who practices evil. ⁵ Therefore you must be subject, not only because of wrath but also for conscience' sake. ⁶ For because of this you also pay taxes, for they are God's ministers attending continually to this very thing. ⁷ Render therefore to all their due: taxes to whom taxes are due, customs to whom customs, fear to whom fear, honor to whom honor. ^{NKJV}

(Romans 13:1-7)

INTRODUCTION

All of life is significantly altered when we are "joined to the Lord" (1 Cor 6:17), or become a "new creation" in Him (2 Cor 5:17). "Old things" do pass away, and "all things" do "become new." No aspect of life is unaffected when we are in "fellowship" with God's "Son, Jesus Christ our Lord" (1 Cor 1:9). Of course, the very concept of "Lord" suggests this is the case, for He is "Lord of ALL" (Acts 10:36). For some, this only speaks of duty, obligation, and commandments. While all of these things are surely involved, that does not exhaust the meaning of Jesus being exalted to the right hand of God. A few examples of the extensiveness of Christ's authority will suffice to set the stage for this lesson.

- ❑ He has been exalted to give repentance and remission of sins (Acts 5:31).
- ❑ In the capacity of LORD, He has been sent to "bless" us, by turning us away from our iniquities (Acts 3:26).
- ❑ He has been given power that He might "give eternal life" to those God has given to Him (John 17:2).
- ❑ He comes to give us an understanding, that we might know God (1 John 5:20).

- ❑ In the capacity of LORD, He is "bringing many sons to glory" (Heb 2:10).
- ❑ He is bringing us to God (1 Pet 3:18).
- ❑ He has been exalted that "at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is LORD, to the glory of God the Father" (Phil 2:9).
- ❑ We have "peace with God" through Jesus Christ as LORD (Rom 5:1).
- ❑ We "joy in God" through Jesus Christ the LORD (Rom 5:11).

- ▶ GOVERNING AUTHORITIES OR HIGHER POWERS (13:1)
- ▶ RESISTING GOD-ORDAINED AUTHORITY (13:2)
- ▶ HOW TO AVOID BEING AFRAID (13:3)

- Grace now reigns “through righteousness to bring eternal life through Jesus Christ our LORD”^{NIV} (Rom 5:21).
- We are “alive unto God through Jesus Christ our LORD” (Rom 6:11).
- God grants us the gift of eternal life “through Jesus Christ our LORD” (Rom 6:23).
- Our thanksgiving to God is received by Him “through Jesus Christ our LORD” (Rom 7:25).
- God's love is experienced by us “through Jesus Christ our LORD” (Rom 8:39).
- Grace and peace are dispensed to us by “God our Father, and from the LORD Jesus Christ” (1 Cor 1:3).
- We are “washed,” “sanctified,” and “justified” in “the name of the LORD Jesus Christ” (1 Cor 6:11).

If Jesus Christ was not “LORD,” we could not repent, be acceptable, or receive remission of sins. We could not be turned away from our iniquities or receive eternal life. We could not understand God, be brought glory, or be brought to God. Peace with God and joy in God depend upon Jesus being “LORD.” The reign of grace, being alive unto God, and the gift of eternal life are all owing to Jesus being “LORD.” Our thanksgiving would not be acceptable if Jesus had not been exalted. The love of God could not be lavished upon us if Jesus was not “LORD.” Your experience of grace and peace, as well as your washing, sanctification, and justification, require that Jesus be “LORD OF ALL.”

The salvation of God is such a demanding work, that it could not be initiated, experienced, or maintained without an exalted and reigning Savior.

ESSENTIAL OBSERVATIONS

These observations are essential to a proper response to the great work of God within us. Already, the Spirit has affirmed numerous things that we are to do, and that with great power.

- Overcome evil with good (12:21b).

TO BE TAKEN SERIOUSLY

No person of sound mind will deny that these admonitions are to be taken seriously. They are not options, and no provision is made for them to be ignored.

Faith, with all of the various graces that are realized through it, are in order to the doing of these things. The Lord Jesus has been exalted to assure that our efforts are not in vain. Because He is Lord, He will get the required resources to us, subdue our enemies, and sustain us in our labors for Him. But none of this will happen until we, in faith, put our hands on the plow. That will only occur when we see that receiving God's righteousness has a direct bearing upon such matters.

I have become convinced over the years that the vast majority of people professing identity with Jesus are lacking in this area. They have not seen the relevancy of whole-hearted service to God, or made the correlation between daily living and justification. It is the business of the church to assist such souls to see these things more clearly.

TWO SIDES TO LIFE

While it is true that we are not primarily the servants of men, nor are we to court their favor, yet spiritual life does have an impact upon our peers. Jesus urged us to live in such a manner as would display the “light of life,” given to us in Him (John 8:12). The outcome of this exhibit of light is marvelous. “Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven” (Matt 5:16).

There is such a thing as serving Christ in a manner that is “acceptable to God, and approved of men” (14:18). While it is true the world, or the ungodly, cannot love the people of God (John 15:19), sinners can be brought to a point where they can “be ashamed, having nothing evil to say of you” (Tit 2:8). It is possible to “provide things honest in the sight of all men” (Rom 12:17). Faith does put us an enmity with the world, but not because we conduct ourselves foolishly, or do things that are commonly acknowledged as base and reprehensible.

The section we are now entering deals with our relationship to civil government.

It confirms that Christ has not called us to be agitators, or to raise insurrections against civil authorities. Here is an area where our light can shine without compromising our commitment to God. Further, this is the only passage of Scripture that treats this subject to this extent. It should therefore capture our attention all the more. Here is the Divine perspective of temporal authority among men, and of our appropriate response to it.

GOVERNING AUTHORITIES, OR HIGHER POWERS

^{13:1} Let every soul be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and the authorities that exist are appointed by God. The social context that existed when the Apostles wrote was not democratic. The first democratic forms of government were developed in the Greek city-states during the sixth century B.C. The imperial onslaughts of Macedonia and Rome crushed these forms of government. There was a republic form of government which allowed input from the citizens. Ultimately, that form gave way to the Roman emperors. Democracy in any substantial form did not reappear until the seventh century. All of Scripture, therefore, was written to people familiar with a governmental dictatorship.

It is essential to see this, for many read the Scriptures as though democracy was the only valid form of government. Such a view neutralizes the potency of the text before us. Also, it should be remembered that Nero was the Emperor in Rome (54-68 AD) when this book was written. Our text will not excuse the atrocities committed by Emperors like Nero, and that is not its intention.

No God-ordained institution makes sin right, or justifies overlooking it. That is true of government as well as the church, and a husband as well as a king. There will be sufficient examples in Scripture to confirm this is the case.

SUBJECTION IS FOR EVERY SOUL

“Let every soul be subject . . .” Other versions read, “Let every person” ^{NASB}

“Everyone must submit himself.” ^{NIV} “Everyone is to obey . . .” ^{NJB} Here is an area where believers are to exercise their wills in faith. No person is exempt from this requirement. The submission is to be voluntary, not forced by civil law.

You may recall that at the time Jesus was crucified, an insurrection against the government had taken place among the Jews. The Roman government ruled in their very own city, Jerusalem, where God had placed His name (1 Kgs 11:36). The uprising was so strong, that murder had been committed during it, and several were being held in prison. Mark tells us of this circumstance. “And there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection” (Mk 15:7). You may also recall that the Jewish mob preferred to have Barabbas released and Jesus crucified. In the sense of our text, Barabbas was not “subject” to the power, nor did he “submit himself.”

HIGHER POWERS

“ . . . governing authorities . . . ” Other versions read, “the higher powers,”

^{KJV} “authorities that are above him,” ^{DARBY} and “the government.” ^{NLT} I prefer the term “higher powers,” ^{KJV} for it more precisely conveys the idea intended. These are superior, or supreme authorities. This means, of course, that, from a social point of view, all souls are not on the same level.

Peter briefly expounded on this very subject, exhorting us to submit ourselves to the ordinances imposed by these powers. “Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord’s sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme; or no governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well” (1 Pet 2:13-14). The people of God must not be noted for being lawbreakers, or raising insurrections against the government. We are solemnly charged to “be subject to governing authorities.”

An Area Where These Powers Have No Power

There is an area in which civil authorities are given no power. That is in the matter of the individual’s identity with the Living God. When civil authority contradicts the mandate of the Lord, it is not to be obeyed. There are sufficient examples of this in Scripture to dissolve all doubts on the subject.

Egyptian Midwives

During the oppression of Israel in Egypt, “the king of Egypt” gave a commandment to the midwives who attended Jewish mothers giving birth. “When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, then ye shall kill him: but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.” The midwives refused to obey the edict of the king. “But the midwives feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men children alive.” When called to account for their deeds, they told the king, “the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.” Those with a legalistic mind-set would say they disobeyed duly constituted authority, even resorting to lying to excuse their disobedience. However, this was not the response of the Lord, who gave the king of Egypt his authority. “Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty. And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that He made them houses” (Ex 1:15-21).

Moses

When the time drew nigh for Moses to lead Israel out of Egyptian bondage, he “went out unto his brethren.” Seeing an Egyptian smiting a Hebrew, he “looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.” When the thing was eventually made known to Pharaoh, he sought after Moses. However, Moses did not yield to him, but “fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian” (Ex 2:11-15). Later, rather than requiring Moses to be subject to Pharaoh, who received his authority from God, the Lord said to him, “I have made thee a god to Pharaoh” (Ex 7:1).

Daniel

When an edict went out from king

Darius “that whosoever shall ask a petition of any God or man for thirty days, save of thee, O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions,” Daniel refused to honor it. Instead, when he “knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime” (Dan 6:10). For refusing to honor the king, Daniel was, indeed, thrown into a den of lions. You already know the rest of the story (Dan 6:16-26).

Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego

Earlier, on another occasion, King Nebuchadnezzar set up a large golden image in the plan of Dura. It was ninety feet high and nine feet wide. At the dedication of this image, he made a decree. The herald shouted it out, “To you it is commanded, O people, nations, and languages, that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer, and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up: and whoso falleth not down and worshippeth shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.” Although it was a sovereign decree, issued by someone God Himself had set up, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego refused to obey it. When confronted by the king, and threatened with the fiery furnace, they replied, “O Nebuchadnezzar, we have no need to answer you in this matter. If that is the case, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and He will deliver us from your hand, O king. But if not, let it be known to you, O king, that we do not serve your gods, nor will we worship the gold image which you have set up.” The result of their civil disobedience is one of the better known facts of Divine history (Dan 3:1-30).

Wise Men from the East

When the blessed Savior made His entrance into the world some of the only people aware of what was happening were some wise men from the East. After making a long journey, and coming to Jerusalem, they made inquiry of king Herod concerning the one “born king of the Jews.” Having been informed by those knowing the Scriptures that Bethlehem was the place of birth, the wise men continued on their journey. Before leaving, Herod, who received his authority from God, strictly charged them, “Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.” His word, however, was countermanded by a dream from God. The wise men thus ignored the word of Herod, and “departed into their own country another way” (Matt 2:1-12).

Peter and John (Acts 4:18-19)

When Peter and John powerfully preached Gospel, they were summoned before the Jewish rulers, elders, scribes, and high priest – all of whom received their power from God. These authorities commanded Peter and John, “not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus.” Without any hesitation, “Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.” After being further threatened and released, Peter and John went to the brethren. They prayed fervently with them, and a great outbreak of fruitful preaching followed (Acts 4:5-33).

The Apostles

On another occasion, when the Apostles were powerfully declaring the Gospel, the high priest, an office created by God Himself, became indignant. It is written that they "laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison." That very night "the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them forth, and said, 'Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life.'" Later, after the Apostles had done as they were commanded, the "captain and the officers" apprehended them, bringing them before the council and the high priest. When reminded they had been commanded not to teach in the name of Jesus, "Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men" (Acts 5:17-29).

Conclusion

The authority given by God to earthly magistrates, governors, kings, and the likes, is never given precedence over the authority of God Himself. When duly sanctioned earthly authority, from the domestic to the political level, requires disobedience to God, it is operating outside of Divinely appointed boundaries.

AUTHORITY IS FROM GOD

"For there is no authority except from God." Other versions read, "there is no power but of God," ^{KJV} "for there is no authority except that which God has established," ^{NIV} "there is no power which is not of God," ^{BBE} and "the government, for God is the one who put it there." ^{NLT}

Here is a foundational teaching with which many souls have had great difficulty. Further, there is also a considerable amount of difficulty encountered when attempting to apply this principle to every-day life. Notwithstanding, let us have the courage and faith to receive this saying, knowing that it is frequently declared. Viewed correctly, and applied in wisdom, it will prove to be a great consolation for us.

With the single exception of "Divine power," (2 Pet 1:3) or authority, all power is delegated.

Only God the Father Himself has not received power, authority, dominion, or jurisdiction. Because of the emptying of Himself even the Lord Jesus Christ has been "given all power" (Matt 28:18). Even the blessed Holy Spirit functions in strict accord with "the will of God" (Rom 8:27; John 14:26).

What Is "Power" or "Authority"

The word "power," or "authority," includes the idea of jurisdiction or right. It is decision-making power that impacts upon others. It embraces the concept of leadership, and even the governing of other individuals. On the lowest level, we would have parents over children (Eph 6:1-2) and husbands over wives (Eph 5:23). At a higher level, there are shepherds or overseers over the flock of God (Acts 20:28). At still another level, and specifically the one addressed in our text, there is civil government, kings, rulers, governors, and the likes. At the ultimate level there is Jesus Himself, who is "Head over all things" (Eph 1:22).

Within the church, the Holy Spirit administers a diversity of gifts, all designed for mutual edification (1 Cor 11:4). There are also individuals within the church who have been given the gift of "administrations," or "governments" (1 Cor 12:28). The Apostles were given authority to deliver the doctrine to be followed by all believers (Acts 2:42), and to edify (2 Cor 10:8), and to give "commandments" to the saints (2 Pet 3:2).

When Jesus began to send forth the twelve "two by two," He gave them "power over unclean spirits" (Mk 6:7). Upon the triumphant return of "the seventy," sent forth by Jesus, He announced to them, "Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall by any means hurt you" (Lk 10:19; Psa 91:13).

We Must Accept This Postulate

As you can see, there is a wide variety of authority that has been distributed among the sons of men. However, all of it has come from God, "for there is no authority except from God." Self-appointed or existent power is an imagination. There is no such thing! "For there is no authority except from God."

While this may cause questions to arise in our minds, we must thrust such doubts from our thinking. Our first and foremost responsibility is to receive this word without question. If we fail to do this, the teaching that follows will make no sense, and Satan will tempt us to reject it in favor of our own opinion.

Power, or authority, involves the right to operate in a competitive arena without being hindered by it. It includes others serving the one with power, as well as the fulfillment of specific objectives.

AUTHORITIES ARE APPOINTED BY GOD

"... and the authorities that exist are appointed by God." Other versions read, "the powers that be are ordained of God," ^{KJV} "and those which exist are established by God," ^{NASB} "The authorities that exist have been established by God," ^{NIV} "those authorities that exist have been instituted by God," ^{NRSV} "those that exist are set up by God," ^{DARBY} and "All governments have been placed in power by God." ^{NLT}

Scripture is written in such a way as to encourage trust in God. This verse is an excellent example of that fact. We are in a world where we are subject to authority. There is domestic authority. Our social responsibilities involve authorities. Citizenship in a nation and its subsidiary divisions is related to authority. Even within the body of Christ, there are individuals invested with authority. But we must not be intimidated by these conditions, for “the authorities that exist are appointed by God,” who is our Father.

The particular focus of this passage is political, or civil, authority. These powers, however good or evil they may be, “are appointed by God.” He appoints them in the interest of His eternal purpose, using them as He sees fit, to implement His own good and acceptable and perfect will.

Powers, or authorities, ONLY exist because they have been appointed by God. They cannot be called into being by a created personality. As it is written, “For promotion [exaltation^{NKJV}] cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south. But God is the judge: He putteth down one, and setteth up another” (Psa 75:6-7).

Again, we have numerous examples of powers being appointed by God, some for good, and some for evil.

Pharaoh was told, “And in very deed for this cause have I raised thee up, for to show in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth” (Ex 9:16; Rom 9:17).

Nebuchadnezzar, who dominated the world, was raised up by God. “And now I have given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, My servant; and the beasts of the field I have also given him to serve him. So all nations shall serve him and his son and his son’s son, until the time of his land comes; and then many nations and great kings shall make him serve them” (Jer 27:6). Again the Lord declared, “For thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: ‘I have put a yoke of iron on the neck of all these nations, that they may serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and they shall serve him. I have given him the beasts of the field also’” (Jer 28:14). God punished Israel through this king for their disobedience in the matter of not letting the land enjoy its sabbaths (2 Chron 36:21; Jer 26:9; 32:28). For this reason, God referred to Nebuchadnezzar as “My servant” (Jer 25:9).

God also raised up and used Cyrus for His own purpose (2 Chron 36:22-23). God took the kingdom from Saul and gave it to David (1 Sam 15:28; 2 Sam 6:21). Darius also “took the kingdom” after God had deposed Belshazzar on the very night he made a feast for a thousand of his lords (Dan 5:1-31). God raised Cyrus up according to His own commandment, to build the house of the Lord (Ezra 6:14).

God is ever imminent in the affairs of men and nations. In fact, He is the ultimate manager of all nations, “For the kingdom is the LORD’S: and he is the governor among the nations” (Psa 22:28). Again, it is written, “For God is the King of all the earth.” (Psa 47:7). For that matter, the Lord Jesus is the “Lord of lord and King of kings” (1 Tim 6:15; Rev 17:14; 19:16). He is also “the prince [or ruler] of the kings of the earth” (Rev 1:5). All of this is involved in the words, “For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God.”

Jesus’ Word to Pilate

In confirmation of this, the Lord addressed a word to Pilate, who, according to appearance, was in charge of the situation. When He refused to answer Pilate, he said to Jesus, “Speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?” With the tone of Divine authority and insight Jesus replied, “You could have no power at all against Me unless it had been given you from above”^{NKJV} 19:11).

CONCLUSION

We must not allow men to rob us of this truth. Times have not changed the manner in which God governs the world. He still “raises the poor from the dust and lifts the beggar from the ash heap, To set them among princes And make them inherit the throne of glory. For the pillars of the earth are the Lord’s, And He has set the world upon them”^{NKJV} (1 Sam 2:8).

From a practical point of view, this is one of the obvious reasons why God can “work things together for our good” (Rom 8:28). It also confirms to our hearts that “If God be for us, who can be against us” (Rom 8:31). The God who gives authority does not relinquish one portion of it. He can withdraw power immediately from those to whom He gives it. He also uses those with power to ultimately serve His own immutable purpose. No believer, therefore, should balk at being subject to the higher powers. If Joseph and Mary asked no question when they were taxed by Caesar, how could we explain to them on the day of judgment why we refused to pay them to those God has placed over us? Something to ponder!

RESISTING GOD-ORDAINED AUTHORITY

“² Therefore whoever resists the authority resists the ordinance of God, and those who resist will bring judgment on themselves.” Here is a Divine conclusion, one that is to be embraced by all believers. It is not a suggestion, but a statement of Kingdom reality. It is based upon the revealed situation. There is no power, or form of authority, that has not been dispensed, or is not controlled, by the Living God.

THEREFORE

In view of the realities that have been affirmed, this is the only proper conclusion. Our thoughts must be affected by this truth so that we can walk acceptably before the Lord.

RESISTING GOD’S ORDINANCE

“ . . . whoever resists the authority resists the ordinance of God.” Other versions read, “Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God," ^{KJV} "he who resists authority has opposed the ordinance of God," ^{NASB} "he who rebels against the authority is rebelling against what God has instituted," ^{NIV} and "those who refuse to obey the laws of the land are refusing to obey God." ^{NLT}

It is important to have a working grasp of the three key words in this expression: "resist," "authority," and "ordinance."

Resist. To "resist" is to refuse to submit. It is to oppose, dispute, or challenge. It means to be arrayed against, or hostile toward.

Authority. This refers to another person's jurisdiction over us – someone to whose authority we have been subjected. It is someone who can tell us what to do, imposing their will upon us.

Ordinance. This is an arrangement put into place by God. It is an kind of authority that has been ordained by God.

Remembering that our text is speaking about civil authority, or government, the Spirit mentions a category of people who refuse to subject themselves to duly constituted authority. They choose their own will over that of the power ordained by God. They imagine they are self-governed, and have been excluded from any responsibility to another authority.

In the words of Jude, these are individuals who "despise dominion," or "reject authority," ^{NKJV} and are not hesitant to "speak evil of dignities" (Jude 8). This was the very first area in which the devil tempted man – in the matter of subjection to authority (Gen 3:5). When Saul was first made king, the "children of Belial" refused to submit to him (1 Sam 10:27). In a telling prophecy concerning Christ Jesus, the Psalmist spoke of those who rejected His authority, seeking to break the bands of His dominion from themselves (Psa 2:1-6). Jesus spoke a parable affirming those who refused Him as having that very trait. "But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us" (Luke 19:14). The Lord speaks of flattering lips and His commitment to cut them all off. One of the traits of those so characterized is this: "Who have said, With our tongue will we prevail; our lips are our own: who is lord over us?" (Psa 12:4).

Whether it is civil authority (the subject of our text), domestic authority, or that which Jesus has placed within His church, resistance of authority is never taken lightly by God. What He has put into place is to be honored. The holy angels are themselves keenly aware of this requirement. On one occasion, when Michael the archangel disputed with the devil concerning the body of Moses, he "did not dare pronounce against him a railing judgment, but said, "The Lord rebuke you" (Jude 9). Although he did not subject himself to the devil, for God had not placed the devil over him, Michael knew Satan's authority had come from God, and thus he did not dare cast a reviling aspersion at the devil. Satan has been given authority over evil, and over the kingdoms of this world (Lk 4:6).

Even the Law spoke to this subject, and with great clarity. "Thou shalt not revile the gods, nor curse the ruler of thy people" (Ex 22:28). Here, the word "gods" is applied to magistrates and earthly dignitaries, as in Psalm 138:1. Solomon also addressed this subject. "Curse not the king, no not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in thy bedchamber: for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter"

(Eccl 10:20).

You may recall the occasion when Paul rebuked Ananias the high priest, when he commanded that he be struck on the mouth. Paul replied, "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?" Those standing by replied to Paul, "Revilest thou God's high priest?" Knowing the Word of God, Paul responded, "I did not know, brethren, that he was the high priest; for it is written, 'You shall not speak evil of a ruler of your people'" (Acts 23:1-5). In this case, the "ruler" was a religious one, not a political one. Yet, Paul was aware of the need to give him honor, even though Ananias was personally a dishonorable man.

How much more serious it is for those who are living under authorities that have been placed over them, to resist those authorities! The gravity of their sin is revealed in the next clause.

BRINGING JUDGMENT ON OURSELVES

"... and those who resist will bring judgment on themselves." Other versions read, "and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation," ^{KJV} "and they who have opposed will receive condemnation upon themselves," ^{NASB} "and those who resist will incur judgment," ^{NRSV} "and rebels must expect to receive the condemnation they deserve." ^{NJB}

The word "judgment," or "damnation," is as strong as it sounds. This precise word is used at least eleven times in the New Covenant Scriptures, and is always of great significance.

- ❑ "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation." (Matt 23:14).
- ❑ "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" (Matt 23:33; Mark 12:40; Luke 20:47)
- ❑ "But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation." (Matt 3:29).

- ❑ "And shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." (John 5:29) with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not." (1 Pet 2:3)

Other translations use the alternative words "condemnation" and "judgment."

out to all such individuals. I do not know the full nature of that punishment, but I do know it is something to be avoided at all cost. Authorities that have been put in place by the Almighty God are to be honored to the fullest extent possible.

The Example of Paul

Although Paul vigorously defended his character in a court of law, he did not do it in resistance of the law itself. In fact, he announced that he was ready to submit to any punishment due to him if he had violated the law. Here is what he said. "For if I am an offender, or have committed anything deserving of death, I do not object to dying; but if there is nothing in these things of which these men accuse me, no one can deliver me to them. I appeal to Caesar" ^{NKJV} (Acts 25:11). That is the response of a man dominated by faith, who had the utmost regard for the authorities ordained by the God of heaven.

Faith will move us to a proper response in this area. While it is not at all popular to think in this way in our type of government, we do well to discipline our thoughts and manners accordingly. You may be sure, God will ordain no government that liberates His people from the obligation to honor duly constituted authority—particularly since that authority is given by Him. Nor, indeed, does His salvation give such license.

Faith will move us to a proper response in this area. While it is not at all popular to think in this way in our type of government, we do well to discipline our thoughts and manners accordingly.

- ❑ "And not rather, (as we be slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say,) Let us do evil, that good may come? whose damnation is just." (Rom 3:8)
- ❑ "Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation." (Rom 13:2)
- ❑ "For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body." (1 Cor 11:29)
- ❑ "Having damnation, because they have cast off their first faith." (1 Tim 5:12)
- ❑ "And through covetousness shall they

The meaning of the word is damnation, condemnation, be condemned, a verdict, or a sentence. There is nothing inconsequential about this word, and it most assuredly does not have that tone in our text.

One might ponder whether or not God Almighty would condemn people for refusing to submit to the government of the land. Their own imaginations may excuse such disobedience as though it was relatively minor in the eyes of the Lord. However, wherever such authority is resisted and rejected, unless it be because of submission to the Lord Himself, God has determined punishment will be meted

HOW TO AVOID BEING AFRAID!

³ For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to evil. Do you want to be unafraid of the authority? Do what is good, and you will have praise from the same." It is possible for fear to grip the heart of those receiving this instruction – particularly if they are living under a heathen government like Rome. The Spirit therefore speaks to our hearts, assuring us there is no inherent disadvantage to submitting ourselves to the powers ordained by God. He will set before us the norm, not an inviolable rule. There may be despots who will persecute believers for doing good, but we are to regard them as departures from the general principle of civil authority.

NOT A TERROR TO GOOD WORKS

"For rulers are not a terror to good works." Other versions read, "For rulers are not a cause of fear for good behavior," ^{NASB} "For rulers hold no terror for those who do right," ^{NIV} "For rulers are not a terror to good conduct," ^{NIV} and "For the authorities do not frighten people who are doing right." ^{NLT}

Paul, moved by the Spirit, wrote these words while Nero was Emperor. He is not writing to condone everything rulers did, but is setting forth the general rule.

Believers are to think of rulers in terms of what God has ordained, not in terms of their persons. Our thoughts are not to be shaped by exceptions to the rule – a tendency against which we will have to wrestle.

Exemplary citizens are not to expect an outbreak of terror against them, even though such may happen. There may be a Pharaoh that arises who does not know Joseph, and oppresses the people (Ex 1:8-11). A Herod may rise who thinks nothing of slaughtering masses of children under two years of age (Matt 2:16). Nevertheless, we are not to consider this the normal way the government responds to those who do “good works.” Robert Haldane wisely observes, “No man was ever punished because he would not injure his neighbors.” Exposition of Romans

What Are Good Works?

These are the works formerly described as “things honest in the sight of all men.” As I understand it, this emphasizes the avoidance of things commonly considered to be evil. “Good works” are the deeds that result in being good citizens, who behave well in their various neighborhoods. Those committing such deeds will do no harm to their neighbor. In so doing, they bring an advantage to their community, and have nothing to fear from the government.

We learn from this passage that one of the primary reasons for government is the encouragement of well doing. By this means, God has ordained that civility and obedience is to be encouraged.

A TERROR TO EVIL WORKS

“For rulers are . . . a terror . . . evil.” Other versions read, “For rulers are . . . a cause of fear . . . for evil,” ^{NASB} “For rulers hold . . . terror . . . for those who do wrong,” ^{NIV} and “For rulers are . . . a terror . . . to bad.” ^{NRSV} Those who engage in “evil” do harm to their neighbors, engaging in selfishness and ill will. They tend toward ruthlessness, like those in the days of Noah, when “the earth as filled with violence” (Gen 6:11).

God has ordained civil government for the punishment of those who inflict harm upon others, living only for themselves. That punishment is to be of such a nature as strikes terror into the heart of the offenders. They are not to imagine there is no penalty for evil works.

In this arrangement, God has ensured the inhabitants of the world do not fully duplicate the times of Noah, when violence and abuse ran rampant throughout the world.

DO YOU WANT TO BE UNAFRAID

“Do you want to be unafraid of the authority?” Other versions read, “Do you want to have no fear of authority?” ^{NASB} and “Do you want to be free from fear of the one in authority?” ^{NIV}

It is not God’s will that we live in continual fear of the authority of government, whatever its level. This is exceedingly practical – so much so that it can escape our consideration. Fear is distracting to the individual, corrupting the soul and defiling the affections. It is no vain word that God now gives, teaching us to avoid being afraid of those who have authority over us.

In this arrangement, God has ensured the inhabitants of the world do not fully duplicate the times of Noah, when violence and abuse ran rampant throughout the world.

DO WHAT IS GOOD

“Do what is good, and you will have praise from the same.” Other versions read, “Then do what is right and he will commend you,” ^{NIV} “Then do what is good, and you will receive its approval,” ^{NRSV} and “So do what they say, and you will get along well.” ^{NLT}

Doing good has to do with man-to-man conduct, particular in regard to keeping the laws of the land. Any civil law, even though fashioned crudely, does not allow for pillage, violence, and extortion. By the same token, governments generally look with favor upon those who are mindful of their neighbors.

One might object to this line of reasoning, citing governments that have oppressed the common people and persecuted the saints. However, these are not fair representations of the principles declared in our text. This is a matter of faith – of believing God. If it is true that God raises up kings, and deposes them as well, He will surely be mindful of His people in both cases. We are therefore to commit the keeping of our souls to God “in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator” (1 Pet 4:19). It is our business to trust God and do good, providing things honest in the sight of all men. Even if we suffer for righteousness sake, we still do not have to live in terror of the king.

EXAMPLES

As you might expect, there are some notable Scriptural examples of the recognition of those who did good. A brief consideration of them will serve to open the door of hope to us, encouraging us to translate this text into godly living.

Joseph

Joseph was recognized for trustworthy and exemplary work on at least three occasions. Potiphar identified Joseph’s goodness, making him “overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand” (Gen 39:1-5).

Again, when Joseph was falsely charged by Potiphar’s wife, and because he refused to do evil, he was wrongly sent to prison. But even there, he continued to do good. The result is most remarkable. The keeper of the prison “committed to Joseph’s hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it. The keeper of the prison looked not to any thing that was under his hand; because the LORD was with him, and that which he did, the LORD made it to prosper” (Gen 39:22-23).

Again, in order that the purpose of God might be fulfilled, Joseph was brought before Pharaoh to interpret a critical dream for him. When standing before the monarch, Joseph did not chide him for being wrongly accused and imprisoned. Instead, he did good, giving the word of the Lord for a coming time of crisis, and offering a God-ordained solution. Again, the authority was mindful of him. The Pharaoh’s response to Joseph’s counsel is encouraging for those willing to believe God and do good. “And the thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants. And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man in whom the Spirit of God is? And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as God hath showed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art: thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou” (Gen 41:37-40).

Nehemiah

Another case in point is Nehemiah. He was in a foreign land, and serving a heathen monarch, Artaxerxes the king. On one occasion, upon hearing of the desolation of Jerusalem and the house of God, Nehemiah’s countenance fell. The king noticed the sadness of Nehemiah, for this was not his usual manner. Normally, he served the king with a cheerful countenance and spirit. When the king detected Nehemiah had sorrow of heart, he asked him about the matter. Upon hearing about the desolation of Jerusalem, the king simply asked, “What do you request.” After Nehemiah had prayed, he asked to be sent to the holy city to rebuild it. The king did, indeed, send Nehemiah, providing letters of authorization to begin the work (Neh 2:1-7). Thus Nehemiah was rewarded for doing good.

Daniel

Daniel was taken captive at a young age in the Babylonian captivity. Early on he was recognized for his ability and excellent spirit. He determined to please God, and not partake of the king’s dainties. Yet, he did so in wisdom, carefully avoiding any reproach to the king. Not only did God give Daniel wisdom, it was recognized by the king. Nebuchadnezzar “made Daniel a great man, and gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon” (Dan 2:48).

Belshazzar “clothed Daniel with scarlet, and put a chain of gold about his neck, and made a proclamation concerning him, that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom” (Dan 5:29).

Darius “set over the kingdom an hundred and twenty princes, which should be over the whole kingdom; and over these three presidents; of whom Daniel was first: that the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage. Then this Daniel was preferred above the presidents and princes, because an excellent spirit was in him; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm” (Dan 6:1-3).

Daniel “prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian” (Dan 6:28).

Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego

These three young men maintained their spiritual integrity along with Daniel. Yet, they were not reactionaries against the heathen government of Babylon. As a result, and at the request of Daniel, the king set them “over the affairs of Babylon” (Dan 2:49; 3:12). Following their deliverance from the fiery furnace, Nebuchadnezzar made a decree, “That every people, nation, and language, which speak any thing amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill: because there is no other God that can deliver after this sort. Then the king promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, in the province of Babylon” (Dan 3:29-30).

AN APPLICATION

Many professing Christians conduct themselves unacceptably among those who have authority over them. They speak ill of their managers, or those to whom they are responsible. They have a murmuring spirit, and continually complain about how they are treated. Such small souls do well to take heed to our text. Someday they will confront Joseph, Nehemiah, Daniel, and Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. How will they explain their conduct to those precious souls who did good and remained cheerful in a heathen land and under heathen kings?

It is good for the people of God to set themselves to be industrious, helpful, and noted for doing good. God has established authority for the encouragement of those who do good, as well as the punishment of those who do evil.

If you are a child, then do good and be industrious. Your parents will honor you. If you are employed, then be exemplary in your conduct and attitude. Your managers will encourage you. If you are a member of the body of Christ, submit to those who have the rule over you, and they will feed you and do good to you. If you are a student, be a model one, and your teacher will esteem you. As citizens, be noted for keeping the law without being forced to do so. It will honor God and help you.

HE IS GOD’S MINISTER

“⁴ For he is God’s minister to you for good. But if you do evil, be afraid; for he does not bear the sword in vain; for he is God’s minister, an avenger to execute wrath on him who practices evil.”

Capital Punishment

We now come to the matter of capital punishment, a subject hotly debated in the professed Christian community. Here is how the Holy Spirit reasons on the matter, leaving no room for any contrary views. Those who oppose capital punishment saying it is better to show mercy, forget what God has ordained. God did not ordain the “higher powers” to have mercy on evil doers, but to punish them. Government is not intended to placate those who insist on doing evil, but to strike terror into their hearts.

The issue here is society itself, not the individual. The Lord has made provision for the suppression of social ills and outbreaks of uncontrollable violence. In my understanding, this is in order that

His anger not again break forth as it did in the days of Noah. It is not enough for God simply to promise He will “never again destroy every living thing, as I have done”^{NASB} (Gen 8:21). Just as surely as His promise of the remission of sin was implemented by means, so His promise to refrain from destroying every living thing is being implemented by means. The Divine nature cannot change. God cannot simply overlook sin, passing it by as though it did not exist (Ex 34:7; Nah 1:3).

Civil law is an appointed means of keeping iniquity from breaking beyond the bounds of Divine tolerance. As we will see, there is nothing casual about it. It is not intended to eliminate evil, but to suppress it.

GOD’S MINISTER TO YOU

“For he is the minister of God to thee for good.” Other versions read, “For he is God’s servant to do you good,”^{NIV} “for of God it is a ministrant to thee for good,”^{YLT} “The authorities are sent by God to help you,”^{NLT} and “it is there to serve God for you and for your good.”^{NJB} This is a most provocative text!

“He” is the ruler, or civil authority, whether an individual, like a king, or a group, like a senate or some other form of republic government. God has ordained this authority for our good – particularly the good of His people. The “good” has two sides: the encouragement of good, and the punishment of evil. We learn from this that sin is so ingrained in humanity that it must be forcibly restrained, else it will break forth in ever-increasing measures. This is confirmed whenever law becomes slack, and wickedness is not duly punished. If all governmental restraints were removed believers would be more fiercely attacked in every city and region of the world. The persecutions that are unleashed against them now are only because of the slackness of the law. But how much worse it would be if there was no civil law at all! Let us learn to view civil authority in the way God describes: “a minister to THEE for good.” It seems to me that God will honor such an attitude.

Examples of civil authorities which ministered to God’s people “for good” include Pharaoh (Gen 41:44-46), Cyrus (2 Chron 36:22-23, Darius (Dan 6:1-2), and Artaxerxes (Ezra 6:14; 21), Ahasuerus (Esther 8:1-2,11), Felix and Agrippa (Acts 25-26), etc.

We also learn from this passage that rulers are not put into place to execute their own pleasure. That such rulers exist, cannot be denied – men who use the authority God ordained to fulfill their own purposes, and to seek their own advantage. That, however, is an abuse of power, not the proper use of it. God will judge such rulers, as He did Pharaoh, Sihon, Og, Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Herod, and others. We can safely leave such matters with the Lord. They will all give an account to God for the manner in which they governed, and the diligence with which they encouraged good and suppressed evil.

We also learn from this passage that rulers are not put into place to execute their own pleasure. That such rulers exist, cannot be denied – men who use the authority God ordained to fulfill their own purposes, and to seek their own advantage. That, however, is an abuse of power, not the proper use of it.

IF YOU DO EVIL

“But if you do evil, be afraid.” “Evil,” in this case, is the transgression of the laws under which we have been placed. The only exception to this is when the laws countermand the laws of God. In that case, obeying the laws of the land would be evil, even though we may be punished for it. Such men as Moses, Daniel, Shadrach, Meschech, Abednigo, and the Apostles, provide us with examples of choosing to serve God rather than men, even though that choice was attended by political opposition.

This is the ordinary view of government, which is God’s means of encouraging good and suppressing evil. When God’s people break the laws of the land, which disobedience is NOT owing to an allegiance to Him, or a desire to obey God rather than men, they are not to look to the Lord for protection. They are to “be afraid.” When we “do wrong,” we ought to expect to be “buffeted for our faults” (1 Pet 2:20). This is something of what is involved in providing things that are “honest in the sight of all men” (12:7).

We should not expect to be treated considerably when we break the laws of the land. With the single exception of obeying God rather than men, such deeds not only have broken civil law, but the law of God as well. No wonder we are to “be afraid” under such circumstances.

BEARING THE SWORD

“... for he does not bear the sword in vain.” Other versions read, “for it does not bear the sword for nothing,”^{NASB} “for the sword is not in his hand for nothing,”^{BBE} “for it does not bear the sword without purpose,”^{NAB} and “because it is not for nothing that the symbol of authority is the sword.”^{NJB}

Bearing the sword, is carrying the means to execute punishment to evildoers. That sword is not a mere show, but a symbol of authority to carry out due punishment. The “sword” also speaks of the ultimate civil punishment, which is death. This means that civility will be forced upon men if they insist upon doing evil. God has ordained that those bent on doing evil and bringing disruption and harm to society in general, be forcibly caused to stop their wickedness.

We have in the crucifixion of Christ an inspired example of the proper and improper use of “the sword,” or capital punishment. Jesus was consigned to death unjustly, while the two thieves were so punished justly. Although many who wear the name of Jesus object to capital punishment, the penitent thief knew the truth of situation. He said to his cohort in crime, “Do you not even fear God, seeing you are under the same condemnation? And we indeed justly, for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this Man has done nothing wrong” (Lk 23:40-41). Notice how he related the punishment to the fear of God, as well as the exercise of civil authority. This came from a man who was only introduced to Jesus, yet his perception was vastly superior to that of many who wear the name of Jesus in our time. What is more, Jesus did not rebuke him for his observation. In fact, it led the man into a state of repentance in which he asked to be remembered by Jesus when He came into His kingdom. Jesus took him as a trophy of grace into the realm of paradise (verse 43).

AN AVENGER TO EXECUTE WRATH

“... for he is God’s minister, an avenger to execute wrath on him who practices evil.” The Spirit will once and for all throw down to the ground the notion that capital punishment is wrong.

That is a wicked imagination that has been raised by people with, at the very best, a distorted understanding. What is here affirmed will grate against the flesh, and we should not be surprised that it does. However, this word is directly related to our heavenly Father. It is not, under any conditions, to be questioned, much less denied.

He is God’s Minister

“For he is God’s minister.” Other versions read, “He is God’s servant,”^{NIV} “It is the servant of God,”^{NRSV} and “it is there to serve God.”^{NJB} Notice, some translations use the word “he,” while others use the word “it.” In the case of the former, “he” is the person using “the sword.” In the second “it” is the sword itself, which is designed to serve God. In both cases, the essential sense of the text is maintained. God has established “the sword” to bring an end to the malefactors. He has also established the person who has been given authority to use it.

Here is an office that is not necessarily held by a person who fears God, yet that person is “God’s minister.”

That means the office that he holds has been ordained by God. It also means the individual has been elevated to that office by God Himself. Additionally, it means that the means of suppressing evil has been appointed by God.

An Avenger

“... an avenger.” Other versions

Here is an office that is not necessarily held by a person who fears God, yet that person is “God’s minister.” That means the office that he holds has been ordained by God. It also means the individual has been elevated to that office by God Himself.

read, “a revenger,”^{KJV} “an agent of wrath,”^{NIV} and “His revenger.”^{NJB}

Here is a person – an offspring of Adam, whether an individual or an institution – that is appointed to carry out vengeance: “an avenger.” This may appear strange after believers have been admonished, “avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord” (12:19). However, “God is not the author of confusion.” His words are not intended to confound the godly.

This text reveals one of the ways in which God takes vengeance. All vengeance is not reserved unto the day of judgment, and consignment of sinners to the lake of fire. As it is written, “Some men’s sins are clearly evident, preceding them to judgment, but those of some men follow later” (1 Tim 5:24). One way in which such sins are “clearly evident” is when punishment is inflicted upon offenders by their peers – as with Achan (Josh 7), and the thieves dying with Jesus (Matt 27:44).

When we are admonished to “leave room for the wrath of God”^{NASB} (Rom 12:19), rather than taking it upon ourselves to be a revenger, it may well be that God will use government to execute His wrath. Our text affirms that is His appointment. God, then, has set an order in place that allows for the swift and decisive punishment of evildoers. That role has not been given to the church, but to the government, the “higher powers” among men. It is good for us to give thanks for this arrangement!

To Execute Wrath

“... to execute wrath on him who practices evil.” Other versions read, “to execute wrath on the wrongdoer,”^{NRSV} “to execute wrath on the wrongdoer,”^{NIV} and “to execute HIS wrath on the wrongdoer,”^{RSV} The magistrate is not executing his wrath upon the wrongdoer, but the wrath of God. Ultimately, the wrongdoer has offended God. Secondly, he has offended men. Punishment is the appointed penalty for evil – doing wrong!

Immediately after the flood, God instituted capital punishment. In my understanding, this was in order to suppress the duplication of the society judged in the flood. God directed Noah, “Surely for your lifeblood I will demand a reckoning; from the hand of every beast I will require it, and from the hand of man. From the hand of every man’s brother I will require the life of man. Whoever sheds man’s blood, By man his blood shall be shed; For in the image of God He made man” (Gen 9:5-6). Because man is made in the image of God, his life is sacred. If an animal kills a man, that animal must die: “from the hand of every beast will I require it.” If a man kills a man, “his blood shall be shed.” Men may not like this rule, but God has put it into place, and has never rescinded it.

In order to keep evil from dominating His people Israel, God commanded the death penalty for a number of offences. Murder (Num 35:16-33), adultery (Lev 20:10), incest (Lev 10-:11-14), bestiality (Ex 22:19), sodomy (Lev 18:22; 20:13), whoredom (Deut 22:21), the rape of a virgin (Deut 22:25), kidnaping (Ex 21:16; Deut 24:7), witchcraft (Ex 22:18), offering human sacrifice (Lev 20:2), striking or cursing one's parents (Ex 21:15,17), disobedient and rebellious children (Deut 21:19-21), working on the Sabbath day (Ex 35:2), false prophets (Deut 13:1-5), sacrificing to false gods (Ex 22:20), not hearkening to the priest or judge (Deut 17:12).

There were also offences of a lesser nature that were punishable by scourging (Lev 19:20; Deut 25:2), and imprisonment (Lev 24:12; Num 15:34). There was also financial restitution for injury inflicted upon another (Ex 21:32-35). A person stealing or killing an ox was to restore five for one (Ex 22:1a). For sheep, the restitution was four to one (Ex 22:1b). If the animal was found alive and restored to the owner, an additional one was also to be given (Ex 22:4).

Not only was wrath executed as a punishment of the evil doer, but in order that others "shall hear, and fear, and shall do no more any such wickedness as this is among you" (Deut 13:11; 17:13; 19:20; 21:21). Solomon also said, "Smite a scorner, and the simple will beware: and reprove one that hath understanding, and he will understand knowledge" (Prov 19:25). And again, "When the scorner is punished, the simple is made wise" (Prov 21:11). This same principle is even applied to rebuking sinners within the church. "Them that sin rebuke before all, that others also may fear" (1 Tim 5:20).

In these various laws, the Lord has revealed how He is impacted by human sin – all evil doing. It should strike a certain fear in the hearts of those prone to disobedience, rebellion, and the offending of their peers.

From the death penalty to various other forms of punishment, civil authorities have been appointed by God to take His vengeance upon offenders. This arrangement is not to be questioned. Rather, such punishments are to be avoided by an honorable life.

One may be tempted to take this text and go further with it than the Spirit has. Such an inclination must be moritified. It is enough to take it seriously, and live so as to avoid social punishments.

WRATH AND CONSCIENCE

"⁵ Therefore you must be subject, not only because of wrath but also for conscience' sake." As the Spirit is wont to do, He will now draw some conclusions for us. These conclusions are based upon the solid foundation of Divine ordination.

YOU MUST BE SUBJECT

"Therefore you must be subject . . ."

Other translations read, "Wherefore ye must needs be subject."^{KJV} "Wherefore it is necessary to be in subjection,"^{NASB} "Therefore, it is necessary to submit to the authorities,"^{NIV} and "You must be obedient, therefore."^{NJB}

By saying "you must be subject," the Spirit accentuates how unreasonable it is NOT to be subject to the "higher powers." if they are ordained by God, how utterly foolish to resist them, or refuse to subject oneself to them!

Someone might object that subjecting ourselves to civil authorities might very well be to our harm. And, indeed, it does appear that way to the flesh. However, this submission is done in the persuasion that the Lord is truly "the kingdom is the LORD'S: and He is the Governor among the nations" (Psa 22:28). With great boldness faith declares, "The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me" (Heb 13:6). The believing souls knows, "The king's heart is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water: He turneth it whithersoever He will" (Prov 21:1). We must be willing to trust the Lord in this matter, else our hearts will trouble us to the point of distraction.

BECAUSE OF WRATH

" . . . not only because of wrath . . ."

This is the lowest level of perception. If we are not subject to the authorities, choosing to ignore them, we will be punished. The fear of that punishment ought to provide some incentive for living in an orderly and unoffensive manner. If, by Divine decree, he does not carry the sword in vain, then it is the height of foolishness to proceed against the ruler or rulers of the land.

The "wrath" we seek to escape is primarily that of God, and secondarily that of the civil authority. It is God's wrath because He has put the authorities in place to punish evil doers. It is the wrath of the government because if we violate the law, he will execute wrath against us as directed by God.

As I have said, this is the lowest level of human incentive. It is better suited for those who are more beastly than manly, and are more stubborn than sensitive. The further a person is from God, the more needful this incentive becomes.

BECAUSE OF CONSCIENCE

" . . . but also for conscience' sake." This is the highest incentive – for the sake of one's conscience. One of the marks of a godly person is this: "I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men" (Acts 24:16). Our hearts will confirm that social order and tranquility is proper, and that we should do our best to maintain it, never disrupting it out of selfish ambition. After all, "the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace" (James 3:18). The objective of God's commandment involves obtaining and maintaining a "good conscience" (1 Tim 1:5). If one thrusts a "good conscience" from them, they will surely make "shipwreck of the faith" (1 Tim 1:19).

The writer of the book of Hebrews made this petition of his readers. "Pray for us: for we trust we have a good conscience, in all things willing to live honestly" (Heb 13:18). Maintaining that good conscience with spiritual aggression will have its impact upon our enemies, even if they are within the government. Thus it is written, “Having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ” (1 Pet 3:16).

For conscience sake, therefore, let us subject ourselves in a godly manner to the authorities of the land. Let none of us be viewed by our rulers as wayward, disobedient, or rabble rousers. Rather, let us be noted for being good citizens who are no threat to civility and tranquility.

Even when rulers have treated the saints unjustly, beating and incarcerating them, they were faced with a humble people. Imprisoned men like Joseph, Jeremiah, John the Baptist, Peter and John, and Paul, did not organize rebellions against the governments that treated them unjustly. The injustices leveled against them would be settled by God Himself, and they knew it. In the meantime, faith can confess with Paul, “I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ, according to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death” (Phil 1:19-20).

If Joseph and Mary asked no question when they were taxed by Caesar, how will we be able to explain to them on the day of judgment why we refused to pay them to those God has placed over us? We have received more insight than they!

WHAT ABOUT TAXES?

“⁶ For because of this you also pay taxes, for they are God’s ministers attending continually to this very thing.” We must never allow the wisdom of men to cause us to gloss the Word of the living God. Although this is a sensitive subject in many circles, the Holy Spirit speaks candidly concerning it, providing no opportunity for rebellion among the children of the Lord. If Jesus was born during a time of world-wide taxation (Luke 2:1-2), it should not surprise us that something good can occur when we pay our taxes as unto the Lord. This is one of the primary ways in which we submit ourselves to the “higher powers.”

PAY TAXES

“For because of this you also pay taxes . . .” Other versions read, “For this cause pay ye tribute also,” ^{KJV} “This is also why you pay taxes,” ^{NIV} and “For the same reason you also pay taxes.” ^{NRSV} And what is the reason for which taxes are to be paid? There is a twofold way of looking at this. First, the magistrates and officials have been ordained to subdue evil and encourage good. Our taxes, or tribute, will assist them in meeting this requirement. Second, because we will be punished if we do not pay them. Third, for the sake of our conscience, which is to be shaped by the Word of our Lord.

The Words of Jesus

This very issue of taxes, or tribute money, came up during Christ’s ministry among men. On one occasion, the Pharisees sent their disciples to Jesus, “with the Herodians,” who were a political party devoted to Herod. The question they asked of Jesus was this: “Tell us, therefore, what do You think? Is it lawful to pay taxes to Caesar, or not?” The Spirit

Jesus’ telling point was this. The tax money has the image of Caesar upon it. Do not hesitate to give it back to him as he requires. The image of God, however, is upon man himself. He is, therefore, to give himself to God. One of the ways in which this is done is in the paying of taxes. Our text plainly says, “Pay taxes!”

GOD’S MINISTERS

“ . . . for they are God’s ministers attending continually to this very thing.” These authorities are “God’s ministers” in the keeping of order and social tranquility. The “very thing” to which they give themselves is ruling, or keeping order. “ . . . for the authorities are God’s servants, who give their full time to governing.” ^{NIV} The idea is that our taxes allow them to do their job more effectively.

If Jesus was born during a time of world-wide taxation (Luke 2:1-2), it should not surprise us that something good can occur when we pay our taxes as unto the Lord.

tells us that Jesus “perceived their wickedness, and said ‘Why do you test Me, you hypocrites? Show Me the tax money.’” When they brought Him a “penny,” or Denarius, “He said to them, ‘Whose image and inscription is this?’ They said to Him, ‘Caesar’s.’ And He said to them, ‘Render therefore to Caesar the things that are Caesar’s, and to God the things that are God’s.’” His answer caused them to marvel, just as it has done today.

The effort required for a person to govern a people is too great for the average person. It requires “continual” involvement, with hardly a moment being their own. That is the very point of this text, though it may seem rather mundane: “to take care of such things at all times.” ^{BBE} Why should those who have been reconciled to God make the tasks of those ordained by Him more difficult? Both faith and reason affirm they should not. When heeded, believers will not.

RENDER TO ALL THEIR DUE

“⁷ Render therefore to all their due: taxes to whom taxes are due, customs to whom customs, fear to whom fear, honor to whom honor.”

There is to be a certain consistency in our response to civil authorities. We are not given the liberty to pick and choose whom we will honor. This obligation is owing to the dignity that goes with any office ordained by God. If man himself, without regard to the position he holds, is to be given due honor because he is “made after the similitude of God,” (James 3:9), what of those who have been placed in positions of authority by Him?

We are living in a time of great disrespect and social rebellion. This passage should be declared often to the people of God, lest they be lulled into sleep by carnality, or the wisdom of this world. It is to be remembered that despising dominion is classed along with the exceeding sinners of Sodom and Gomorrah. They are more like Satan than they are like God (Jude 7-8).

RENDERING TO ALL THEIR DUE

“Render therefore to all their due.” While the deeds that follow are to be done on a voluntary basis, they are, nevertheless, debts to be honored. Because the saints are strictly charged to “owe no man anything” (Rom 13:9), they are to see to it these debts are paid, sincerely, respectfully, and as unto the Lord Himself.

To “render” is to pay, give, perform a duty, or discharge what is due. To fail in this regard is to be characterized by rebellion. In such a case, not only is the authority dishonored, the name of the Lord is also reproached, God is disobeyed, and the flesh takes the dominance.

TAXES THAT ARE DUE

“... taxes to whom taxes are due.” Here taxes are called a debt – something that is “due.” It involves an obligation that has been placed upon us. Ultimately, that obligation is to God, who has inspired these instructions. The amount of tax that is owed is to be paid, and it is to be paid to the one or ones to whom it is due. If Joseph and Mary asked no question when they were taxed by Caesar, how could we explain to them on the day of judgment why we refused to pay them to those God has placed over us?

CUSTOMS THAT ARE DUE

“... customs to whom customs.” These are not “customs” in the sense of manners, or certain ways of doing things, i.e., “it is not our custom” to do thus and so. It is more related to “customs” costs related to imports and exports – a levy that is paid for the handling and transporting of merchandise. Jesus referred to such charges when He asked Peter, “What do you think, Simon? From whom do the kings of the earth take

If Joseph and Mary asked no question when they were taxed by Caesar, how could we explain to them on the day of judgment why we refused to pay them to those God has placed over us?

customs or taxes, from their sons or from strangers?” (Matt 17:25). All such dues are to be “rendered” or paid.

FEAR THAT IS DUE

“... fear to whom fear.” This is a wholesome respect that will not allow the fearing person to disobey or disrespect the dignitary. There are certain people placed among us to whom fear is “due.” This is not a cringing fear that moves the individual to strive to merely please men. After all, “The fear of man bringeth a snare” (Prov 29:25). This is actually a fear that proceeds from the fear of God, not one that replaces it.

Solomon counseled his son, “My son, fear thou the LORD and the king” (Prov 24:27). Under the Law, it was commanded, “Ye shall fear every man his mother, and his father” (Lev 19:3). That is a wholesome respect that will not speak reproachfully to them or dishonor them by disobedience or disrespect. This is a fear of offending or dishonoring, rather than a cringing fear of an evil doer.

HONOR THAT IS DUE

“... honor to whom honor.” All men are not alike. There are some to whom honor is due. Children are to honor their parents – they owe them that honor (Ex 20:12; Eph 6:1). There is an honor that is to be paid to the aged. The Law prescribed, “You shall rise before the gray headed and honor the presence of an old man, and fear your God: I am the LORD” (Lev 19:32). This has all but been eliminated in our country, which has come to venerate youthfulness above maturity. Many religious programs cater to the youth instead of rising before the aged.

Peter wrote, “Honor the king” (1 Pet 2:17). Elders that “rule well” are to be “counted worthy of double honor” (1 Tim 5:17). Servants are to consider their masters “worthy of all honor” (1 Tim 6:1). Husbands are to give “honor” unto their wives” (1 Pet 3:7).

There are also certain customs and protocols related to meeting higher officials. God Himself, for that matter, has established a certain protocol in approaching Him: i.e., “a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water” (Heb 10:22). It should not surprise us that a faint reflection of this is involved in approaching dignitaries He has put over us. An example of such a protocol is seen in Esther’s approach to the king, who was her own husband. When she approached him to plead for her people, she “put on her royal apparel.” When the king held out the scepter of acceptance, she “drew near, and touched the top of the scepter.” When asked concerning her request, she appealed to the good will of the king: “If it seem good unto the king” (Esth 5:1-3).

In my judgment, the modern church is sadly lacking in the requirements of this text. Disrespect reigns supreme among those bearing the name of Jesus Christ—at least in the Western world. Both civil and spiritual leaders lack the respect that is due to them by the Word of the Lord.

CONCLUSION

Let those who imagine that spiritual life lacks practicality, give due heed to the passage we have just reviewed. This is an exposition of the nature of spiritual life. It is one of the ways “rivers of living water” flow from the “belly,” or inward parts of the children of God (John 7:39). Where such responses are not found, spiritual life is not found, for this is the way in which life from God expresses itself in the world.

Thus far, the Spirit has declared the following effects of justification, or the imputation of righteousness.

- ❑ The body is presented to God as a living sacrifice (12:1-2).
- ❑ Thoughts concerning oneself are in strict comportment with the measure of faith given (12:3).
- ❑ Care is taken to minister to the members of Christ’s body in strict accord with the gifts administered to us (12:4-8).
- ❑ Consistent and God-honoring attitudes are exhibited toward the people of God (12:9-10).
- ❑ Appropriate responses to the circumstances in which we find ourselves (12:11-21).
- ❑ Submission to the “higher powers,” or civil authorities (13:1-7).

In these matters, the justification of life is made known. This principle is stated in the fifth chapter. “Therefore, as through one man’s offense judgment came to all men, resulting in condemnation, even so through one Man’s righteous act the free gift came to all men, resulting in justification OF life” (5:18). Some translations read “justification AND life”^{NRSV/NJB} Others read substantially the same, “acquittal and life.”^{NAB/RSV} The NIV reads, “justification that brings life.” While there is an element of truth in all of these expressions, in my judgment they fail to express the true meaning.

Ordinarily, it is the individual that is said to be justified. “. . . this man went down to his house justified” (Lk 18:14). “. . . all that believe are justified” (Acts 13:39). “. . . a man is justified by faith” (Rom 3:28). “For if Abraham were justified by works” (Rom 4:2). “. . . them he also justified” (Rom 8:30). “. . . ye are justified” (1 Cor 6:11), etc.

That is not, however, the manner of speaking in Romans 5:18. The Greek word used here is ζωης (zo-as). This precise word is used no less than forty-seven times in the New Covenant Scriptures. Forty of those times it is translated “OF life.” Phrases used include “days of life,” “resurrection of life,” “bread of life,” “words of eternal life,” “light of life,” “ways of life,” “Prince of life,” “newness of life,”

“Spirit of life,” “savor of life,” “word of life,” “book of life,” “promise of life,” “hope of eternal life,” “end of life,” “crown of life,” “grace of life,” “tree of life,” and “water of life.”

All of this may seem like an academic diversion, with little or no value. Yet, in my judgment, a most powerful facet of redemption is to be seen in this expression, and the passage before us.

In Christ Jesus, life itself, or living, is made acceptable to God: “Justification OF life.” Not only is the person sanctified, but the life lived by that individual is also made holy. Divine life exhibits itself in the expressions of life, not in a mere profession. Where these expressions are not found, there really is no evidence spiritual life.

Beginning with the twelfth chapter, the Spirit unfolds the manner in which the life of God expresses itself. The various admonitions set before us are not cold obligations, to be fulfilled under the bludgeon of threats. Even though they are duties, they are also evidences that we have been “made righteous” by a gracious God. The knowledge of this situation will prove a great encouragement for advancement to God-honoring maturity.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 41

LOVING YOUR NEIGHBOR

13:8 Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law. ⁹ For this, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. ¹⁰ Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. NKJV

(Romans 13:8-10)

INTRODUCTION

This section of Romans is a commentary on the practicality of the "justification of life" (Rom 5:18). It reveals how spiritual life behaves itself in this world – when men are in a "house of clay" (Job 4:19), hounded by a personal "adversary" (1 Pet 5:8-9), and assaulted with "all that is in the world" (1 John 2:15-17). These exhortations are infinitely more than theoretical goals for successful living. There is a compulsory tone to them that does not permit them to be ignored.

THE SECOND COMMANDMENT

This is an Apostolic exposition of the second commandment: "And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Matt 22:39). It is part of the summation of the Law – a sort of heading under which many of the detailed laws were Divinely grouped. The Ten Commandments dealt with interpersonal relationships.

- ' "Honor thy father and thy mother."
- ' "Thou shalt not kill."
- ' "Thou shalt not commit adultery."
- ' "Thou shalt not steal."
- ' "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."
- ' "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's . . ." (Ex 20:12-17).

The Levitical Law gathered these commandments, together with all of their implications, and declared, "Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself: I am the LORD" (Lev 19:18). These precise words are found nowhere else in the writings of Moses and the Prophets. Nowhere do any of the prophets refer to this as "the second" commandment. If the Holy Spirit had not "moved" holy men to speak in such a manner, I do not believe humanity would have concluded such a thing.

Jesus and the Apostles, however, frequently refer to this commandment. Jesus grouped it with the commands to do no murder, not commit adultery, not steal, not bear false witness, and honor your father and mother (Matt 19:19). When asked concerning “the great commandment in the Law,” He said it was “the second” great commandment (Matt 22:39; Mark 12:31). Our text affirms it briefly comprehends all of the commandments regarding human relationships (Rom 13:9). Galatians 5:14 declares “all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.” James 2:8 refers to it as fulfilling “the royal law.” We are not, therefore, speaking of something inconsequential, as though “second” suggests a lack of importance.

THE FIRST COMMANDMENT HONORED FIRST

Notwithstanding, the Holy Spirit is careful to deal first with our relationship to God. Within the framework of that “first and great commandment,” the “second” obtains its significance. A brief review of this thrust will serve to set the stage for the exposition of this section.

Let me be clear: I am showing here the superiority of our relationship with, and duty toward, the God of heaven. Until this matter is satisfactorily addressed, no person will approach the second commandment with seriousness and resolution.

- ‘ Jesus is preeminently “the Son of God with power” (1:4).
- ‘ The Gospel of Christ is “the power of God unto salvation” (1:16).
- ‘ The subject of the revelation contained in the Gospel is “the righteousness of God” (1:17).
- ‘ The fall of the Gentile world is directly related to its rejection of God (1:19-- 32).

- ‘ It is “the goodness of God” that leads us to repentance (2:4).
- ‘ The whole world was guilty because it did not “seek after God” (3:11).
- ‘ The Law produces the realization that the whole world is “guilty before God” (3:19).
- ‘ The sin of humanity reveals it comes “short of the glory of God” (3:23).
- ‘ Abraham’s justification was based upon him believing God (4f:2-5).
- ‘ Being justified by faith, we have “peace with God” (5:1).
- ‘ The Holy Spirit sheds “the love of God” abroad in our hearts (5:5).
- ‘ We are “reconciled to God” through the death of Christ (5:10).
- ‘ We are to reckon ourselves to be “dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God” through Jesus Christ our Lord (6:11).
- ‘ We ourselves are to be “yielded unto God” (6:13).
- ‘ In Christ, we have become “servants unto God” (6:22).
- ‘ We have been married to Christ in order to “bring forth fruit unto God” (7:4).
- ‘ With our minds, we serve the “law of God” (7:4).
- ‘ The Holy Spirit makes intercession for us according to “the will of God” (8:27).
- ‘ Our bodies are to be presented “unto appears to have been given precedence over “the first and great commandment.” However, this is never done in Scripture. Man-to-man responsibilities are never delineated until man-to-God obligations are first declared. What is more, issues related to loving our neighbors as ourselves are always expounded within the light of our relationship to God in Christ Jesus. This is absolutely consistent throughout the Apostles’ doctrine.

Our text is a sterling example of this Apostolic manner; i.e., God first, man second. Not until the matter of living unto God has been established, is our duty toward one another taken up. The reason for this is apparent. Man is made “in the image of God” (Gen 9:6), “in the likeness of God” (Gen 5:1), and “after the similitude of God” (James 3:9).

This circumstance is what mandates that we love our neighbors as ourselves. They are the “offspring of God” (Acts 17:29), whom we are to love. This is not a heartless social law, but a reasonable moral and spiritual one. It flows more from a perception of the truth than from the compulsion of mere obligation. It is, in the strictest sense of the word, an expression of a new heart and spirit—the result of the Law of God being written within the heart, and put into the mind.

The fulfilling of “the second” commandment appears to have been given precedence over “the first and great commandment.” However, this is never done in Scripture. Man-to-man responsibilities are never delineated until man-to-God obligations are first declared.

- God”* (12:1-2).
- ‘ It is not until these fundamental responsibilities to God are expounded that we are brought to consider human relationships. Right here I must mention what I believe to be an underlying weakness in modern Christianity. The fulfilling of “the second” commandment

Relation to God is the root of the matter. That is where everything valid begins. Reconciliation to God precedes reconciliation to man. Love for God antedates love for man. You can never begin with man and end up with God. Loving your neighbor will never bring you to love God. Being mindful of your neighbor does not lead to mindfulness of God.

ON THE MATTER OF DEBT

^{13:8} Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law. This is a text that has, in my judgment, been greatly distorted by those with a propensity toward legalism, or cold and lifeless law. While care must be taken not to become loose in our views of debt, equal care must be taken not to impose human opinion upon this text, or make it say something that conflicts with the general tenor of Scripture. Living by faith is difficult enough. We have no need to be brought under the rules and opinions of mere mortals. The early church took care not to impose upon Gentiles too many rules (Acts 15:29). We do well to be as considerate toward those who are genuinely seeking to live by faith. Spiritual life is not nurtured within the framework of regulations. It derives its strength from faith, not rules.

THE CONTEXT

This verse is a continuation of the thought introduced in verse seven. “Give everyone what you owe him: If you owe taxes, pay taxes; if revenue, then revenue; if respect, then respect; if honor, then honor.”^{NIV} None of these are to be left outstanding, as though we were free to choose when such dues were to liquidated.

OWING NO MAN

“Owe no man anything . . .” Other versions read, “Let no debt remain outstanding,”^{NIV} “Be in debt for nothing,”^{BBE} “Pay all your debts.”^{NLT} The thrust of the passage is not to avoid debt, but to satisfy the debt, paying what is due. The debts to which verse seven refers cannot be avoided. They were created by God, not man, and they are to be honored with dispatch and without hesitation. Once again, the only exception to this rule is when the authorities honored require us to dishonor or disobey God. Such occasions, however, are the exception to the rule. Sound doctrine is always built around the norm, not the exception.

Many people who would consider it reprehensible to refuse to pay back monies or goods that were borrowed, think nothing of refusing to pay their taxes, or give honor and respect to those to whom it such due. “Owing,” in this

Living by faith is difficult enough. We have no need to be brought under the rules and opinions of mere mortals. The early church took care not to impose upon Gentiles too many rules case, is withholding what is due to the person.

Indebtedness for Service

Owing does not always involve those under authority honoring those having authority over them. Sometimes the table is turned, and the one in authority gives honor to the ones under him. The Law sited a rule involving indebtedness that dealt with employees, or hired servants. “You shall not oppress a hired servant who is poor and needy, whether one of your brethren or one of the aliens who is in your land within your gates. Each day you shall give him his wages, and not let the sun go down on it, for he is poor and has set his heart on it; lest he cry out against you to the LORD, and it be sin to you” (Deut 24:14). Leviticus 19:13 reiterates this law. The labors of a hired servant incurred a debt, and they were to “owe not man anything.”

Note, the hired servant was “poor and needy.” That is the circumstance that required this law. This does not mean it was wrong to accrue wages, according to a mutual agreement. An example of such an agreement is found in Laban and Jacob (Gen 30:28-29; 31:8). Another such agreement was found between Pharaoh’s daughter and Moses’ mother (Ex 2:9). The requirement for daily payment did not hold true in these cases.

An Example from Jeremiah

Another example of not paying debts is found in Jeremiah 22:13. “Woe to him who builds his house by unrighteousness and his chambers by injustice, Who uses his neighbor’s service without wages and gives him nothing for his work.”^{NKJV} (Jer 22:13). Here, the service and labor of one’s neighbor is not to be considered worthless. Unless an offsetting agreement has been made with the neighbor, his labor in the behalf of the individual is to be considered a debt to be paid.

This particular example is considerably prevalent in the Christian community. Countless churches regularly expect men of God to expend labor without proper remuneration. While no covetousness is to be found within the laborer, the people receiving spiritual benefit from the work are to consider the following. “Let him who is taught the word share in all good things with him who teaches”^{NKJV} (Gal 6:6). The idea here is that the teacher has shared what God has given him. Those with whom he has shared those things are to share with him what God has given them. It is a matter of debt, and they are to “owe no man anything.”

Again, it is written, “For it pleased those from Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor among the saints who are in Jerusalem. It pleased them indeed, and they are their debtors. For if the Gentiles have been partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is also to minister to them in material things”^{NKJV} (Rom 15:27). The benefits the Roman brethren had derived from the saints in Jerusalem rippled into eternity. They had become “debtors” to them, and were not to leave the debt unpaid.

This exceedingly practical area is regularly ignored among professing believers. It has, in my judgment, brought great disgrace upon the name of the Lord. With a few gracious exceptions, this has been the manner among churches of the Restoration Movement, with whom I have been affiliated. This is largely owing to the neglect of sound teaching on the matter.

Debts of Ability

Solomon spoke of the debt of doing good to your neighbor in his time of need. “Do not withhold good from those to whom it is due, when it is in the power of your hand to do so. Do not say to your neighbor, ‘Go, and come back, and tomorrow I will give it,’ when you have it with you” ^{NKJV} (Prov 3:27-28). Here is a different kind of debt, yet it is very real. When a need is experienced by our neighbor, and we have the power and goods to meet that need, we are debtors to him. That debt is to be paid. We have robbed him if we withhold such things from him.

Withholding Is Robbery

To withhold what is due another is to “owe,” in the sense of our text. Such debt is actually a breach of the eighth commandment: “Thou shalt not steal” (Ex 20:15). In such a case, the theft is failing to pay what is due, rather than breaking into the neighbor’s house and taking something already in his possession. This is the very thing for which God upbraided Israel. They had robbed Him, the Lord declared. “Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me” (Mal 3:8). Israel remonstrated, asking how it was possible that they had robbed God. The Lord’s answer unveils something of the magnitude of our text. “But ye say, Wherein have we robbed Thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed Me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in Mine house, and prove Me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it” (Mal 3:8-10). It is not wise for believers to ignore this text.

Many a professed believer has committed this very sin – they have robbed God by withholding what is due to Him. Although some teachers are fond of telling us tithing is not valid under the New Covenant, they only betray their own ignorance of the Divine nature. Tithing, like faith, preceded the Old Covenant. Both Abraham and Jacob paid tithes, or the first tenth of their goods (Gen 14:20; 28:22). Further, neither of them was commanded to do so.

“No Man”

“Owe no man anything” covers every aspect of debt, and every individual to whom such debt is owed. Taxes are debts to be paid. Honor is a debt to be discharged. Fear toward the authorities ordained by God is a debt to be paid. Honor for those in places of authority is a debt to be satisfied. Hired services are debts to be cleared. Assistance given men in times of need are debts to be liquidated. Profiting spiritually from those who have communicated the truth of God is a debt to be honored. Opportunities to be helpful to those in need are a debt to be settled.

When a need is experienced by our neighbor, and we have the power and goods to meet that need, we are debtors to him. That debt is to be paid. We have robbed him if we withhold such things from him.

You see what an exceedingly large matter this is. It is to be taken seriously by every believer.

ON THE MATTER OF FINANCIAL DEBT

It is not unusual for certain teachers to use this passage to condemn all financial indebtedness. I now approach this matter with great care, for the strictest allowance must be made for the conscience of every believer. However, the conscience of one believer cannot be bound upon another, particularly when it is based upon a view of Scripture, and not the Scripture itself.

It should at once be obvious to you that this passage is not condemning debt itself. Where there is no debt, nothing can be “due.” The very idea of not allowing a debt to “remain outstanding” ^{NIV} suggests that one has been incurred. It goes without saying that we should never incur debts we know we will not be able to pay. Debt should always be taken seriously, for in it we become obligated to the world. Debt can cause our roots to sink too deeply in this present evil world, and should therefore always be approached with great sobriety.

Under the Law

Under the Law, provision was made for lending money to the poor among God’s people. No usury, or interest, was to be charged a fellow Israelite. Yet, the money was to be repaid. “If you lend money to any of My people who are poor among you, you shall not be like a moneylender to him; you shall not charge him interest” (Ex 22:25). Of course, if it is morally wrong to incur debt, it would be a sin to create it by lending.

Jesus’ Parables

In one of His parables, Jesus likened the Kingdom of heaven to a king to whom certain servants were indebted. The Lord forgave debts, while one of his forgiven servants demanded that debts owed him be paid by those with no means to pay them (Matt 18:23-35). The point germane to our text is this: if debt itself was sinful, it would not be used in as a key factor in the exposition of the Kingdom of heaven. The parable itself presumes the legitimacy of debt. Else, there would be no point to the parable.

The Widow and Elisha

All debt is not self-incurred. On one occasion, a recently widowed wife of one of the sons of the prophets came to Elisha. Although her departed husband was a prophet and feared the Lord, he had incurred a debt. Her crisis was that the debt was due, yet she had no means by which to pay it. She reported, "Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that thy servant did fear the LORD: and the creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to be bondmen." The prophet did not rebuke her for being in debt, nor did he cast aspersions upon her husband for falling into debt. Instead, he was used of God to provide a miraculous means for paying the debt (2 Kgs 4:1-7). Thus, by paying the debt, she "owed no man anything."

Nehemiah's Day

In Nehemiah's day, the people "borrowed money for the king's tribute," offering their lands and vineyards as collateral. Nehemiah did not condemn the people for borrowing. Rather, he rebuked the Jewish rulers for exacting usury from their brethren (Neh 5:4-7).

Christ's Teaching

Jesus taught us, "Give to him who asks you, and from him who wants to borrow from you do not turn away" (Matt 5:42). Of course, if it was sinful to create a debt, those who acquiesced to it by allowing someone to borrow from them would be causing their brother to stumble. Jesus did forbid lending as a money-making venture (Lk 6:34-35). He did not, however, condemning lending or asking for something to be advanced. Another of His parables was based upon an individual petitioning his neighbor, "Friend, lend me three loaves" (Lk 11:5-9). If indebtedness itself was sinful, it could not be an example of obtaining an answer to prayer.

Debt is not wrong. Refusing to pay debt is what is wrong. Our text assumes the existence of debt, not the sin of it. Further, it is not limited to financial matters, and not one syllable of the text suggests financial priorities.

A Word of Caution

This by no means suggests believers can take a loose view of financial indebtedness. Nor, indeed, does it intimate it is proper to pile up needless debts. Such an approach to life requires a covetous spirit and a sense of being at home in this world. Faith will not allow either attitude. A spirit that grasps after carnal things stands on the precipice of eternal ruin.

It is ever true, "the borrower is servant to the lender" (Prov 22:7). Indebtedness is always to be taken seriously. All debts are to be paid, whether they are debts of money, tribute, customs, fear, or honor. While earthly associations are inferior, they are not to be regarded as beyond godly obligation. Those who wear the name of Jesus are to live in view of their relationship to God through Christ. They are not free to grasp the things of this world as though they were primary, or incur debts as though life in this world was fundamental. At no point are they at liberty to ignore their debts.

As to making laws concerning the extent to which borrowing and debt is allowed, God has not given us license to legislate to our brethren. I have every confidence that when our text is taken seriously, it will move the trusting soul to carefulness in the matter of making debts. Also, as I have shown, there are numerous debts you owe that were not created by you, but by your Lord. They are to be paid as well as the ones we ourselves incur.

LOVE ONE ANOTHER

"... except to love one another." Other versions read, "except the continuing debt to love one another,"^{NIV} "but to have love for one another,"^{BBE} and "except the debt of love for others."^{NLT}

The meaning of the text is this: loving one another is a debt that cannot be liquidated. It cannot be fully paid or thoroughly satisfied. It is not only a large debt, it is a growing one. It is as though the interest on it keeps on accruing at a large rate. What is more, it is a debt that is not intended to be eliminated.

The Reasoning of Flesh

Flesh will reason there is no need to pay on the debt at all, seeing we cannot pay it off. However, this is erroneous reasoning, for the debt is very real. Hence, payment must be made on it, else we have, in fact, stolen from our brethren, taking from them what rightfully belonged to them. It is as though we only paid off the interest on the debt, never really reducing the principle.

A Focused Debt

Love is what we "owe" to our brethren. Notice, the debt of love is to "one another"—the people of God, or the "household of faith." We have a "special" relationship to them that transcends all other human relationships (Gal 6:10). This does not mean we are not responsible to love our enemies, bless those who curse us, do good to those who hate us, or pray for those who spitefully use and persecute us (Matt 5:44). However, our love toward the saints is of a different order. It is more profound, more extensive, and associated with greater benefits.

The particular comparison being made is between what we owe to civil authorities, and what we owe to the people of God. Our obligation to the "higher powers" involves paying tribute and customs, fear, and honor (13:7). Our relationship to the brethren is on a much higher level. That level does include the matter of honor. However, civil authorities make demands of us, the people of God do not. We do not love the brethren because they have required that we do so, but because we desire to. Our hearts are knit with them, and we have been made one with them. That is not the kind of relationship we sustain to other men, whether they be political leaders, those who maintain law and order, or those by whom we have been employed. It is more personal and more rewarding.

Our Relationship to the Saints

The relationship we sustain with the people of God is a frequent subject in Scripture. The variety of references to this association serve to accentuate the importance of our text.

Brethren. Redemption relates its constituents to one another. Because we have participated in a "common salvation" (Jude 3), and have a "common faith" (Tit 1:4), we are "brethren." This is by Divine design. "For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren" (Rom 8:29).

Same body. Because of their connection to the Head, Jesus Christ, the people of God are "one body." They are motivated and governed by the same head, and are designed to work together. "That the Gentiles should be fellowheirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel" (Eph 3:6).

Same Household. God has a household over which He presides. He sustains and cares for this household, giving them exclusive gifts and privileges. "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God" (Eph 2:19).
