The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 1

APOSTOLIC GREETING

1:1 Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God, 2(Which he had promised afore by his prophets in the holy scriptures,) 3Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh; 4And declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead: 5By whom we have received grace and apostleship, for obedience to the faith among all nations, for his name: 6Among whom are ye also the called of Jesus Christ: 7To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints: Grace to you and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ. (Romans 1:1-7, KJV)

INTRODUCTION

The book of Romans is to inspired literature what a unique and exquisite painting is to finer art. It is set within the framework of “eternal purpose,” and highlights the means through which we are brought into fruitful affiliation with the Living God. The rich colors of grace and Divine love are accented throughout the book, showing salvation to be the focus of Divine intention.

While “all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable,” there are Divinely inspired words that are addressed more specifically to faith. These are foundational words, upon which the faith, hope, and love of the saints of God rest. All books of Scripture contain, and revolve around, these utterances. There is correction in God’s word, but that is not the heart of it. There is also instruction in righteousness—words that speak directly to living godly in this world. Neither are these words the center of Scripture. This situation does not take from their essentiality and seriousness. It is, in my understanding, a cardinal principle of Scripture, that all rebuke, correction, and instruction are designed to bring the believer back to the foundations, where real progress in the faith can be made. For this reason, it is written, “If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?” (Psa 11:3).

A SUMMATION OF THE BOOK

A number of subjects will be addressed in this Epistle, but the Spirit will always bring us back to these foundational considerations.

- † The indispensability of men possessing righteousness.
- † The absolute failure of men to be righteous in their own strength.
- † The provision of righteousness announced in the Gospel.
- † Justification, or the realization of righteousness, comes by faith.
- † A very real union with Jesus Christ is realized in our justification.
- † The “flesh,” or what we are by nature, is totally unacceptable, and invariably leads to death, or separation from God.
- † Justification causes the future to become more relevant than the present, thus compelling us to live, and be saved, by hope.
- † The entirety of salvation, from beginning to end, is of the Lord, and is according to a predetermined purpose.

- † Faith, above all things, is effective before God.
- † The foundational role of Israel in the formation and growth of the church.

All other subjects addressed in Romans are but branches sprouting from the trunk of Divine purpose. The larger branches always have to do with how God has and is implementing this purpose through Christ Jesus the Lord. The fulfillment of that purpose depends solely upon the Son of God. Our participation in that glorious purpose depends upon our faith, which alone can take hold of the wondrous message of the Gospel of Christ.

INNER WARFARE

The most extensive teaching concerning the inner warfare experienced by the believer is found in this book (Chapter 7). This wonderful exposition of spiritual life sheds great and indispensable light on the life of faith. You will find it to be a key to spiritual understanding. The Spirit will set the stage for understanding this warfare in the preceding chapters with unusually strong affirmations.

PRELIMINARY THOUGHTS

This book was written while Paul was still a free man (as compared with the prison Epistles). It is generally understood to have been written from Corinth around 58 A.D. By his own admission, Paul had not yet been to Rome when he wrote this foundational Epistle. Yet, he longed to come there to impart “some spiritual gift” to them (1:12), be comforted by their mutual faith (1:13), and preach the Gospel to them (1:15). He also declares that he had frequently “purposed to come” to them in order that he might have fruit among them (1:12).

His arrival in Rome (Acts 28:16) came approximately three years after this Epistle was written (A.D. 61).

THE ORIGIN OF THE ROMAN CHURCH

We are not provided any record of the origin of this body of believers. There is no evidence that it was founded by an Apostle, which is itself an arresting consideration. Roman Catholic tradition affirms it was founded by Peter, but there is no evidence of this. Further, Paul would doubtless have mentioned Peter in the Epistle if this were the case.

Yet, this church had become renown throughout the world: “First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world” (1:8). Paul refers to several in Rome with words of unusual commendation. “Greet Priscilla and Aquila my helpers in Christ . . . my well beloved Epaphroditus, who is the firstfruits of Achaia unto Christ . . . Mary, who bestowed much labor on us . . . Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellow prisoners, who are of note among the apostles, who also were in Christ before me . . . Amplias my beloved in the Lord . . . Urbane, our helper in Christ, and Stachys my beloved . . . Apelles approved in Christ . . . them which are of Aristobulus’ household . . . Herodion my kinsman . . . them that be of the household of Narcissus, which are in the Lord . . . Tryphena and Tryphosa, who labored much in the Lord . . . Rufus chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine . . . Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, and the brethren which are with them . . . Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympas, and all the saints which are with them” (16:3-15).

An impressive list, indeed! Notice their only real distinction is found in their association with Christ Jesus. That is the thing that made them unique. How wonderful it would be to see an impressive list like that concerning the churches of our day.

Here was a body of believers, in the midst of a despotic political empire that had no former association with the Prophets, John the Baptist, Jesus, or the Apostles. All of this WITHOUT the apparent presence, at that time, of an Apostle! There were “strangers of Rome” present at the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:10). We know from Acts 18:2, that Aquila and Priscilla had been e x p e l l e d from Rome with other Jews. How sparse our knowledge of this body of believers.

A Great Testimonial

The “beloved of God” in Rome, “called to be saints,” stand as a testimony to what the Lord can do. There was no Apostolic effort to found the church. The congregation in Jerusalem did not plan a strategy to establish a church in this citadel of paganism—around 1,200 miles away. Yet this church was raised up—and a significant one at that!

The worth of a church is not determined by its founder, but by its faith. Those who are sectarian in spirit could not have received the church at Rome, because it was not founded by the Apostles. But Paul, who had the Spirit of Christ, received them as brethren, acknowledging the unusual number and quality of believers among them.

PURPOSE FOR WRITING

The objectives realized by this marvelous Epistle are, in my perception, several. I will only mention them here, developing them further as we proceed with an exposition of the book. Each of these matters is carefully expounded in the power of the Holy Spirit, and are central in Apostolic doctrine. It is difficult to conceive of a more weighty presentation of the Good News.

- † The meaning of the Gospel of Christ.
- † The relationship of the Gospel to the Law.
- † The relationship of the Gospel to the Prophets.
- † The relationship of the Gospel to the universal need of humanity.

THE MAN GOD USES

Rom 1:1 Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God.

While this appears to be a somewhat standard introduction, there are precious jewels of truth to be found in it. Any word of Scripture must be addressed as a profitable word from God.

PAUL

Throughout Divine history, there have been men who have so distinguished themselves in their service to God, that their names have been sanctified. It is, after all, the person who makes the name, and not the name who makes the person.

Think of the renowned names of Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Job, Joseph, David, Peter, John, and others. Who can forget such names as Sarah, Miriam, Rahab, Deborah, Mary, and Elizabeth. Their faith and manner of life made those names significant to the entire world. Others have brought reproach upon names through their unbelief and sin—people like Cain, Nimrod, Achan, Korah, Herod, and Judas. The power of character can thus be seen—power to cause honor or reproach to be brought upon a name.

The name “Paul” has been recognized by saints and sinners alike from the beginning of his life in Christ Jesus. The distinction given to that name is owing to his faith, and the aggressive manner in which he served the Lord Jesus Christ. This name is mentioned no less than 156 times in Scripture, and every single time it refers to the same individual.

Formerly, Paul was known as “Saul, of Tarsus” (Acts 9:11). The name “Saul” means “Desired,”^{Strong’s} certainly befitting of one so eagerly sought by the Lord Jesus Himself. Precisely when he began to be known exclusively as Paul is not clear. The first reference to the Apostle of the Gentiles as “Paul” is found in Acts 13:9, around A.D. 46, or nine years after his conversion. “Then Saul, (who also is called Paul,)” From that point on, he is referred to as “Paul.” The only reference to “Saul” after that is when Paul recounts the appearance of Jesus to him in his call to the apostleship (Acts 22:7,13,14).

The name “Paul” means “Small,” or “Little.”^{Strong’s} By way of comparison, when Samuel upbraided king Saul for his flagrant disobedience, he referred to the time when he was in God’s favor. “When thou wast LITTLE in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the LORD anointed thee king over Israel?” (1 Sam 15:17). In the case of Paul, his commendable smallness was the latter part of his life, as compared with king Saul, whose latter life was his worst time. Paul’s smallness consisted of his renunciation of everything that was gain to him. He did this in order to “win Christ” and be “found in Him not having a righteousness” of his own (Phil 3:7-14). Everywhere his name is mentioned, his zeal for the Lord is what comes to mind.

A SERVANT OF JESUS CHRIST

The distinguishing trait he first mentions is that of being Christ’s “servant.” The meaning of this word has been dulled in our time by thoughtless use. The word “slave” is more appropriate, carrying the real meaning of the word to our generation. It describes a person whose sole existence is wrapped up in carrying out the will of someone else. Unquestioning obedience identifies the slave, and so it was with the Apostle Paul. He knew nothing of “life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.” When it came to life in this world, he chose death to life, servitude to liberty, and the pursuit of God’s will to a quest for happiness.

CALLED TO BE AN APOSTLE

In the Kingdom of God, key positions are assigned. This is evident throughout Scripture, and is quite different from an institutional approach to serving the Lord. Think of the people God chose, and whose role in history was assigned. Noah (Gen 6:8), Abraham (Gen 12:1-3), Joseph (Psa 105:17-21), Moses (Ex 3:4-10), Aaron (Heb 5:4), David (), the Prophets (Amos 2:11), John the Baptist (John 1:6), and the Apostles (John 15:16). None of them volunteered for their office, or gained it by pursuing a “career path.” The supreme example, as always, is that of our Lord Himself. It is said of Him, “And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron. So also Christ glorified not Himself to be made an high priest; but He that said unto Him, Thou art My Son, to day have I begotten thee. As He saith also in another place, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec” (Heb 5:4-6). Precisely the same procedure was involved in Paul becoming an “Apostle.” He was CALLED to be one.

It is no different to this very day. We are told preachers cannot preach “except they be sent” (Rom 10:15). Elders are made overseers by the Holy Spirit (Acts 20:28).

Evangelists, pastors and teachers are gifts from Christ, not careers (Eph 4:11). Every member is strategically placed in Christ’s body. As it is written, “But now God has placed the members, each one of them, in the body, just as He desired”^{NASB} (1 Cor 12:18,28). Spiritual gifts are distributed according to God’s will (1 Cor 12:11). The Word of God knows nothing of highly polished professional ministers, carrying about with them the credentials of this world. In the Kingdom of our God and His Christ, the placement of God is the individual’s credential, or authorization.

This is precisely why Paul says “CALLED to be an Apostle.” He does not appeal to self-developed expertise, professional training, or any natural gifts and abilities. He makes no appeal to his instruction by Gamaliel (Acts 22:3). He is writing to them in an appointed role, and that is sufficient reason to receive what he declares. The validation of his ministry will be confirmed in the message he delivers, and its power upon those receiving it..

SEPARATED UNTO THE GOSPEL

God-given gifts and abilities are to be employed in His work, and His alone. An Apostle was not called to be a politician, business man, or academic scholar. Paul was “set apart for the gospel of God.”^{NASB} By this, he means he was detached from the world in order to declare and expound the “Gospel of God.”

And why is the Gospel here called “the Gospel of God?” Is this not a strange sound in our day? Of course, this is not the only place such an expression is used. At least seven times the Spirit refers to “the Gospel of God” (Rom 1:1; 15:16; 2 Cor 11:7; 1 Thess 2:2,8,9; 1 Pet 4:17)^{KJV}. Here is a term rarely heard in our day.

The Gospel is the proclamation of what God the Father has accomplished through Jesus Christ His “only begotten Son.” Jesus did the Father’s will (John 5:30), reconciling the world unto Him (Rom 5:10). The Gospel if most properly called, “The Gospel of God.” It is the good news of His satisfaction, and is therefore called “the glorious gospel of the blessed God” (1 Tim 1:11).

Being “separated to the Gospel of God,” that is where Paul’s expertise was found—and how clearly that is seen in his writings. Although he sat at the feet of Gamaliel, Paul makes not a solitary reference to anything that notable Jewish teacher communicated. He was separated unto the “Gospel of God.” Although himself a Roman citizen, and able to appeal to judicial protocol (Acts 22:25-29; 25:11), he provides not a single syllable about governmental issues, trends, or advances. He was “separated unto the Gospel of God.” His ministry was in strict comportment with his calling. In keeping with what is required of stewards, he was “faithful” (1 Cor 4:2).

A GOSPEL THAT WAS PROMISED

“(Which He had promised afore by His prophets in the Holy Scriptures,)” The Apostle is most careful to distinguish what he proclaims from all other gospels; i.e., “another gospel” (2 Cor 11:4; Gal 1:6). Right here we soar high above contemporary religion. Rarely, if ever, will one hear a correlation made between the Gospel of God, or the Gospel of Christ, and the holy Prophets. But this a repeated association made by the Holy Spirit.

HE PROMISED by HIS PROPHETS

From one perspective, the whole matter of salvation in Christ Jesus is referred to as “the promise.” This is particularly true when it is considered from the vantage of the New Covenant, which is the pledge, or basis, of our salvation.

ABRAHAM

Three times in the fourth chapter of Romans, what is experienced in Christ Jesus is called “the promise” (Rom 4:13,14,16). The focus of that passage is the blessing of righteousness by faith, as revealed in Abraham, “who is the father of us all.” In him we find the example of having faith, and the response of God to that faith.

The third chapter of Galatians also refers to the Abrahamic promise, equating it with the New Covenant. Five times in that chapter, the Spirit refers to “the promise” (Gal 3:14,17,19,22,29). In that passage, “the promise” is the announcement that God would bless the world through the Seed of Abraham. In relation to our text, this was “the Gospel of God which He had promised before by His prophets.” Abraham, by Divine definition, was “a prophet.” In fact, the word “prophet” is first applied to Abraham (Gen 20:7), which is a most arresting consideration.

From one perspective, the whole matter of salvation in Christ Jesus is referred to as “the promise.” This is particularly true when it is considered from the vantage of the New Covenant, which is the pledge, or basis, of our salvation.

THE PROPHETS

From the very beginning, the Gospel was identified with the message of the prophets. When Jesus first began to preach, announcing His mission, He said He was doing what Isaiah the Prophet had foretold (Luke 4:18-19). On the day of Pentecost, Peter distinguished both the happenings of the day and his unique message with the prophets (Acts 2:16,30). Throughout the book of Acts, the Gospel was consistently said to be according to the words of the holy Prophets. “All the Prophets . . . have likewise foretold of these days” (Acts 3:24). “To Him give all the Prophets witness” (Acts 10:43). “And to this agree the words of the Prophets” (Acts 15:15). Paul confessed, “I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the Prophets and Moses did say should come” (Acts 26:22). From morning until evening he “expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the Prophets” (Acts 28:23). Peter affirmed the salvation declared in the Gospel had been announced beforehand by the Prophets (1 Pet 1:10). There is no question about this.

The Lord Jesus Himself

As the “Author of eternal salvation” (Heb 5:9), the Lord Jesus Himself was the theme of the Prophets. His birth (Matt 2:6; Mic 5:2), life (Lk 2:40; Isa 53:2), ministry (Lk 4:18-19; Isa 62:1-3), death (1 Pet 2:24; Isa 53:4-6), resurrection (Acts 2:27; Psa 49:15), ascension (Eph 4:8; Psa 68:18), and high priestly ministry (Heb 5:6; Psa 110:4), were foretold by the Prophets. Thus the heart of the Gospel, the Son of God, was declared by the Prophets.

The Nature of Salvation

The nature of salvation was also prophesied by the Prophets. A genuine change would be wrought in man. A new character would be given that would compel the individual to obey God by preference. A sampling of these wonderful promises will suffice to confirm this point.

- † Men would receive understanding—the “eyes of the blind will be opened.”
- † The ability to discern the voice and direction of the Lord—“the ears of the deaf will be unstopped.”
- † The debilitating effects of sin would be overcome—“the lame man leap as an hart.”
- † Acceptable praise would be offered by the people—“the tongue of the dumb will sing.”
- † Where no awareness of God was found, an abundance of revelation and refreshment would break forth—“for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert.”
- † The refreshment would be consistent, and not sporadic—“And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water.”
- † A way of access to God would be made for those rescued from the world—“And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness.”
- † Good tidings would be proclaimed to the meek.
- † The brokenhearted would be healed.
- † Liberty would be announced to the captives.
- † The prison in which bound prisoners were confined would be opened.
- † A time of Divine acceptance would be announced.
- † A Divine exchange program would be inaugurated: beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness.
- † The waste places of life would be rebuilt.

- † A new kind of covenant would be made in which God’s laws would be put into men’s inward parts and written on their minds, they would all know the Lord, and iniquity would be remembered no more.
- † Thorough cleansing and sanctification would be realized.
- † A new heart and a new spirit would be given to those blessed by God.
- † The stony and rebellious heart would be removed.
- † God’s Spirit would be put within men, causing them to walk in His statutes, keep His judgments, and do them. (Isa 35:4-9; 61:1-4; Jer 31:31-34; Ezek 36:25-27).

A LITTLE KNOWN APPROACH

Today, this approach to Jesus has been placed to the side in preference of answering people’s perceived needs. Little is known of Jesus Christ and His great salvation because of a fundamental ignorance of prophets. Even though the church is “built upon the foundation of Apostles and Prophets,” the professed church has grossly neglected those prophets. This neglect has contributed to the extensive spiritual ignorance that prevails among professed Christians. The result has been the development of “another Jesus” bearing little resemblance to the One foretold by the Prophets. The “other Jesus” is not only proclaimed by perceived cults, but in many churches that are considered to be fundamental, orthodox, and conservative.

A thorough knowledge of the Prophets is certainly not essential to receiving Christ and obeying the Gospel, and we should not present this subject as though it were. But there is more to the life of faith than a beginning. If believers intend to successfully navigate through the wilderness of this life, the Messiah foretold by the Prophets must not be strange to them. Gentile churches were reminded of the words of the Prophets (Rom 3:21; 16:26; Eph 2:20; 3:5), and so must the churches of our time.

The message of the Prophets serves as the great confirming evidence of valid spiritual experience. Their prophecies are a sort of spiritual encyclopedia, defining what happens when a person is “born again.” Both the nature of the New Covenant and those within it are described in most remarkable detail. Any view of life in Christ that does not stand the test of the Prophets is not true, and is therefore not on the proper foundation.

The Apostles opened up what the Prophets foretold. By Divine determination, their doctrine lays down a foundation for our faith. The proper interpretation of experience will come through an understanding of the Prophets. When what they affirmed would happen, occurs in you—and you know it—confidence will erupt like a spring of everlasting life in your heart.

HOLY SCRIPTURES

With great deliberation, the Holy Spirit moves us away from human philosophy and opinion. There was a time in history when the truth of God was passed along among men by word of mouth. There are at least two things that can be said of those times. First, the scope of revealed truth was very narrow. Second, it was known among relatively few people. Even the record of great revelations and prophecies came long after their origination.

So far as Scripture is concerned, Moses is declared as the first writer (Lk 16:29; 24:27,44; John 1:45; 5:46-47). The whole of Scripture prior to Jesus is referred to as “Moses and the Prophets” (Acts 26:22; 28:23). Again, Jesus referred to the whole of pre-Apostolic Scripture as “in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms” (Lk 24:44).

THE FIRST PROPHECY

The first prophecy of Scriptural record is that of Enoch, “the seventh from Adam” (Jude 14). It is generally understood that his prophesy was handed down by word of mouth rather than by writing—a most remarkable thing of itself. There is a view of the Jude text that states it was taken from the Apocryphal “Book of Enoch.” There is, however, no satisfactory support for this view.

However a person chooses to consider this quotation from Enoch, its inclusion in Scripture is a rich commentary on how God keeps His word in tact and pure. Here is the most ancient prophecy spoken by a man. It was uttered over 2,900 years before Jesus was born.

If God kept the word of Enoch intact without it being written, how much more will He maintain the integrity of Scripture—written truth inspired by Him. While Enoch undoubtedly prophesied of the coming of the flood, Jude applies his word to the second coming of the Lord. “Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of His saints, To execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against Him” (Jude 14-15). Therein is again confirmed that Jesus is the locus of all Scripture.

INTEGRITY OF SCRIPTURE ASSUMED

Thus, in saying the Gospel of God was according to the Holy Scriptures, the Spirit has established their absolute integrity. If there was any doubt whatsoever about the truth of Scripture, our faith could not be founded upon what if written therein. The higher critics, therefore, who have caused men to question the accuracy of Scripture have attacked our faith. They are not qualified to be the critic of Scripture. However, Scripture shall be their critic in the day of judgment. As Jesus said, “the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day” (John 12:48).

It is no wonder that Paul said of the “holy Scriptures,” “which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus” (2 Tim 3:15). Contained within the framework of Scripture—particularly the writings of the holy prophets, are promises of a proclamation that would be good news—“glad tidings of good things” (Rom 10:15).

THE CENTRALITY OF SCRIPTURE

In this day of distorted theological emphasis, the centrality of Scripture must again be affirmed. These days more attention is being paid to HOW it is said rather WHAT is said. Human programs have supplanted Divine promises, and “science falsely so called” has upstaged holy Scripture, given by inspiration of God. Even among professing preachers, there is an unhesitating acknowledgment of a lack of acquaintance with Scripture. The condition tragic beyond description, yielding insipid and powerless followers.

The “Gospel of God”—the good news of the “wonderful works of God” (Acts 1:11)—is not according to human logic. Nor, indeed, is it according to self-perceived, or institutionally dictated, human needs or desires. It is according to what God “promised before through His prophets in the Holy Scriptures.”

The righteousness of God, now given to men upon the basis of their faith, was “witnessed by the law and the prophets” (Rom 3:21). The revelation of the Gospel mystery “now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets” (Rom 16:26). Jesus died and was raised the third day “according to the Scripture” (1 Cor 15:3-4).

In a classic demonstration of the truth of Scripture, and because it is living, the Spirit assigns personality to it. “The Scripture foresaw that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, and announced the gospel in advance to Abraham: “All nations will be blessed through you”” (Gal 3:8). And again, “the Scripture hath concluded all under sin” (Gal 3:22). And again, “Wherefore also it is contained in the Scripture, Behold, I lay in Zion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded” (1 Pet 2:6).

What will be declared in the book of Romans is in strict accord with the word of the Prophets in the Scriptures. Do not look for new and novel teachings, like those confused Athenians (Acts 17:21). Rather, there will be a powerful proclamation of the message for which the Prophets prepared us. If the holy Prophets did not foretell the gospel that is being preached, it may be discarded as spurious and powerless.

In this day of distorted theological emphasis, the centrality of Scripture must again be affirmed. These days more attention is being paid to HOW it is said rather WHAT is said. Human programs have supplanted Divine promises, and “science falsely so called” has upstaged holy Scripture, given by inspiration of God.

Every true proclaimer of the Gospel can say with Paul, “Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come . . .” (Acts 26:22). By so doing, men can be encouraged to “search the Scriptures” to confirm whether the Gospel being heard is really true (Acts 17:11).

If it were required of every professed preacher to declare what the prophets declared was coming, their ranks would quickly be thinned out. However, this is what God requires, and He will hold every preacher accountable for properly presenting Christ Jesus and salvation.

THE HEART OF THE GOSPEL

“Concerning His Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh.” The identity of the Gospel is not taken for granted. The Holy Spirit makes the proper Gospel associations to those who have already heard, believed, and obeyed it. The criticality of the Gospel to the walk of faith necessitates these continual associations. Already the Spirit has reminded us the true Gospel is the one promised by the Prophets. If there is no correlation between the gospel embraced and the one promised by the Prophets, “another Gospel” has been espoused. Now the text goes to the very heart of the Gospel—the spirit of the message. Just as surely as a person has a heart, or central part, so does the Gospel have a pivotal point.

CONCERNING HIS SON

The Gospel is fundamentally about the Son of God—it is the Gospel “concerning His Son.” Everything about the Gospel hinges upon the Lord Jesus Christ. When it reveals the righteousness of God (Rom 1:17), it does so through the proclamation of the Son. If the wrath of God is made known in the Gospel (Rom 1:18), it is by beholding the cursing of the Son for the sake of fallen man (Gal 3:13). The Gospel is about the Son of God, sent to be the Savior of the world.

The basic view of the Savior is that He is “the Son of God”—the “only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth” (John 1:14). As a believer, you are A son of God (Rom 8:14,19; Phil 2:15; 1 John 3:1-2). Jesus Christ is “THE Son of God” Matt 14:33; Lk 1:35; John 1:34). In his gospel, Mark made this clear: “The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, THE Son of God” (Mk 1:1).

In this identity—“His Son”—the Spirit is affirming that Jesus came into the world to perform “the will of the Father” (John 5:30). He was begotten by the Spirit of God to fulfill the will of God. He came into the world to save the world because that was the purpose of the Father. At the very heart of the Gospel, therefore, is the proclamation of the Son of God who came to accomplish the will of God in our behalf.

JESUS CHRIST

The expression “Jesus Christ” refers to the Son’s ministry as a Man.

JESUS

“Jesus” is His human name, and emphasizes what He came to do. When the Savior was born, the angel of the Lord told both Mary and Joseph His name was to be called Jesus. “And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call His name JESUS . . . Joseph, son of David, do not be afraid to take to you Mary your wife, for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Spirit. And she will bring forth a Son, and you shall call His name JESUS, for He will save His people from their sins” (Lk 1:31; Matt 1:10-21). In obedience to this word, it is said of Joseph,

The Gospel concerns Christ’s humanity as it relates to our salvation. It spends no time whatsoever addressing novel matters about His life that have no immediate relevance to our salvation.

“and he called His name JESUS” (Mt 1:25).

The name “Jesus” is the Greek equivalent of Joshua, who is referenced in Acts 7:45 and Hebrews 4:8. The name “Jesus” appropriately means “the Lord saves.” This name was not unique to Jesus, but was common among the Jews. Thus we read of “Jesus, which is called Justus” (Col 4:11). It is also the Greek equivalent of Joshua (Heb 4:8). However, our Lord has ascribed such greatness to the name, that throughout the world, wherever it is heard, HE is remembered.

Among men, Jesus has no peers. He is “THE Man” (1 Tim 2:5), “the SECOND Man” (1 Cor 15:47), and the “LAST Adam” (1 Cor 15:45). The Gospel concerns Christ’s humanity as it relates to our salvation. It spends no time whatsoever addressing novel matters about His life that have no immediate relevance to our salvation. No wonder it is written, “the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy” (Rev 19:10).

CHRIST

“Christ” means “anointed one”—in this case, THE anointed one. Others have been anointed: i.e. Aaron (Ex 29:7), Saul (1 Sam 9:16), David (1 Sam 16:12), and Solomon (1 Kgs 1:34)—but none of them were “THE Christ.” That honor belongs to the Lord Jesus alone. While men anointed the ones mentioned before, God the Father anointed Jesus. As it is written, “God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit and with power” ^{NKJV} (Acts 10:38). Again, it is said of Him, “Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows” (Heb 1:9).

As “the Lord’s Christ” (Lk 2:26), Jesus was appointed to by Himself resolve the dilemma of sin. Upon the basis of His vicarious, or substitutionary, death those who believe on Him would be released from both the guilt and power of sin. Thus, when Jesus began His ministry, He declared this word was fulfilled in Him: “The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath anointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent Me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, To preach the acceptable year of the Lord” (Lk 4:18-19).

The Gospel particularly opens up that marvelous announcement. It declares we are living in a time when God will accept men, absolving them of guilt, purifying their hearts, and making them “partakers of the Divine nature” (2 Pet 1:4). All of this is upon the firm foundation of the work of “THE CHRIST, the Son of the living God” (Matt 16:16-18).

As “the Christ,” Jesus is the only Man truly and fully recognized by God. Upon Him, and Him alone, hangs the destiny of all men. That is the precise teaching of Romans 5:15-21.

OUR LORD

To remove any question concerning the relevancy of the Person of the Gospel, the Spirit adds He is “OUR Lord.” Right here, it is important to deal with a bit of theological haberdashery that has become fashionable. You have no doubt heard people say men should “make Jesus their Lord.” Others have said, “You have made Him your Savior, now make Him your Lord.”

No such language or concept can be found in the Word of God. Let it be clear that it is not possible for Jesus to be Savior and not Lord—in ANY sense. You have no role whatsoever in making Jesus Lord. The Spirit has spoken expressly on this matter. “God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ” (Acts 2:36). Further, “He is Lord of all” (Acts 10:36), whether men choose to accept Him in that capacity or not.

Secondly, everywhere the terms “Lord” and “Savior” are ascribed to Jesus, “Lord” is either used first, or clarifies Who the Savior is. Concerning the latter, when Jesus was born, the shepherds were told, “For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which IS Christ the Lord” (Lk 2:11). And again, “For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, THE Lord Jesus Christ” (Phil 3:20). And again, “Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the commandment of God our Savior, and Lord Jesus Christ, which is our hope” (1 Tim 1:1). In all other instances, “Lord” is always before “Savior” (Tit 1:4; 2 Pet 1:11; 2:20; 3:2,18).

The point is that Christ Jesus cannot be compartmentalized. He cannot be received partially, or only in one of His capacities. It is not possible to experience Him as Savior, but not as Lord. The very notion is an absurdity. Men must flee from such approaches to the Savior, for they dull the conscience and cause spiritual sleep to descend upon the soul.

SEED OF DAVID

Jesus is “the Seed” of the “woman” (Gen 3:15), the “Seed” of “Abraham” (Gal 3:16), and “the Seed of David” (Rom 1:3; 2 Tim 2:8). Each of them emphasize an aspect of His humanity.

† Because deliverance from sin must be accomplished by someone partaking of the human nature, Jesus is called the

The Lord Jesus Christ cannot be received partially, or only in one of His capacities. It is not possible to experience Him as Savior, but not as Lord. The very notion is an absurdity.

Seed of the woman—one “made of a woman, made under the law” (Gal 4:4).

† Because He is the solitary One through whom the world would be blessed, He is called Abraham’s Seed, to whom the promises were made (Gal 3:16; Heb 2:16).

† Because He would accomplish salvation through a righteous rule, or reign, He is called “the Seed of David.” In this case, the Lord became the Savior, and the Savior was exalted to be the Lord (Acts 2:36; Phil 2:9-10).

Here is a wonderful aspect of redemptive truth that appears to be scarcely known. Our salvation is being brought to its completion by a reigning King. He is presently ruling “in the midst of His enemies” (Psa 110:2), bringing “many sons to glory” right through the enemy’s territory (Heb 2:10).

All of this is the fulfillment of God’s ancient promise to David, the man after His own heart. “I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for my name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever” (2 Sam 7:12-13). The Psalms also confirm this promise: “The LORD hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it; Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne” (Psa 132:11).

Isaiah also declared it: “And in mercy shall the throne be established: and he shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle of David, judging, and seeking judgment, and hasting righteousness” (Isa 16:5).

Jeremiah proclaimed this truth: “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper; and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby He shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS” (Jer 23:5-6).

Ezekiel announced it: “And I will set up one shepherd over them, and He shall feed them, even My Servant David; He shall feed them, and He shall be their shepherd. And I the LORD will be their God, and My Servant David a prince among them; I the LORD have spoken it” (Ezek 34:23-24).

Jesus is pointedly declared to be “the Son of David” (Matt 1:1; 9:27; 15:22). He is the promised “Seed,” or Offspring, that would reign forever. Peter declared the fulfillment of this promise on the day of Pentecost: “Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption” (Acts 2:30-31). Death was the vassal of Jesus, serving His purpose. When His death had met the Divine requirement, Jesus struck it down to the ground in an act of triumph.

Thus the promise of an everlasting kingdom, administered in righteousness by the Offspring of David, is fulfilled in Jesus Christ, our Lord. The nature of salvation demands such a King. The challenges of this great salvation are of such magnitude men cannot manage them. As an Apostle, separated unto the Gospel of God, Paul was appointed to declare and expound this truth. He will this it with power in this very Epistle, blessing our hearts, strengthening our faith, and anchoring our hope.

THE GREAT CONFIRMING WORK

“And declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead.” Again, the focus is still on “the Gospel of God,” to which Paul was separated. That Gospel was foretold by the prophets. It concerns the Son of God, who is the Man Jesus, who is God’s anointed One, and our Lord. He is also the fulfillment of God’s promise to David, that He would raise up someone to seat on his throne forever. I cannot proceed further without noting that none of these things are given preeminence in the institutional church. All of them are areas of theological weakness in the average congregation. This situation, however, can be resolved by returning to Christ-centered preaching and teaching.

DECLARED TO BE

In salvation, declaration takes the precedence over explanation. The power of God is channeled through the proclamation of the Gospel, which is itself “the power of God unto salvation” (Rom 1:16).

The Gospel of God is an affirmation of Divine accomplishments. It announces amnesty, proclaims propitiation, and reports reconciliation. All of this centers in God’s appointed Servant, the Lord Jesus Christ (Isa 42:1; 49:9; 52:13; Zech 3:8; Matt 12:18).

WITH POWER

In order for this salvation to be fully accomplished, not only was a basis required, but a powerful reigning King also. Upon the ground of the accomplished reconciliation and satisfaction of God, Jesus was granted “all power in heaven and earth” to bring the sons home to glory. That is what is required to convey us safely through the morass of sin and this “present evil world.”

Now, through the Gospel, Jesus Christ is proclaimed to be the Son of God “WITH POWER”—all power in heaven and earth. While Divine power will be the means through which His enemies become His “footstool” (Matt 22:44; Acts 2:35; Heb 1:13; 10:13), that is not the focus of this text. The “power” given to Him is in order to the justification, sanctification, and glorification of those believing in Him. Justification refers to the Divine work whereby sinners are acquitted of their sin, cleansed of its guilt and power, and given the very righteousness of God. Sanctification is the process whereby believers are separated from the power of sin, and brought into conformity to the image of Christ Jesus. Glorification is the grand culmination of salvation in which perfect spotlessness and blamelessness are achieved, and every vestige of sin and the sinful nature removed from us—when we will “be like Him.”

The obscurity of the Son of God in much preaching is staggering to consider. It is, in my judgment the reason for such a high level of spiritual sterility within the professed church.

Now it takes power, Divine power, to accomplish such a large work! The “Gospel of God” announces that Jesus Christ has been given that power. He has been given to the church in this marvelous capacity: “far above all rule and authority, power and dominion, and every title that can be given, not only in the present age but also in the one to come. And God placed all things under His feet and appointed Him to be head over everything FOR the church”^{NIV} (Eph 1:21-22). The extent of His dominion exceeds our abilities of comprehension. Elsewhere the Spirit says of His exaltation, “Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him” (1 Pet 3:22). There is no power, or authority, that is not subject to Him—whether it is for us or against us.

Both our enemies and the multitudes of holy angels that are appointed to minister to us, bow to Him.

In a remarkable declaration of the extent of Christ’s authority, it is affirmed that there is a single personality that is NOT subject to Him. It is the Father Himself, Who has subjected all things to the Son. “Now when it says that ‘everything’ has been put under Him, it is clear that THIS DOES NOT INCLUDE GOD, who put everything under Christ”^{NIV} (1 Cor 15:27).

It is no wonder, therefore, that such wonderful promises are given to those who believe on Jesus—or trust wholly in Him. “Whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life . . . He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life . . . he that believeth on me shall never thirst . . . he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live . . . whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness . . . whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins . . . whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed . . . he that believeth on him shall not be confounded . . . Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?” (John 3:15,16; 3:36; 11:25; 12:46; Acts 10:43; Rom 9:33; 1 Pet 2:6; 1 John 5:5).

While such texts clearly imply the necessity of believing, that is not their focus. The concentration of such passages is the RESULT of believing—the outcome of unreservedly replying on the Son of God. The reason for the strength of these promises is the power of the Savior. Because He is the “Son of God WITH POWER,” we may trust implicitly in these Divine commitments. How blessed, indeed, is the person who trusts in Christ!

SPIRIT OF HOLINESS

The declaration that Jesus is the Son of God with power is “according to the Spirit of holiness.” This is a unique phrase, and conducive to much exploration. Most versions read the same way (NKJV, RSV, NRSV, NASB). The NIV reads, “Who through the Spirit of holiness was declared with power to be the Son of God.”

“The Spirit of holiness” refers to Christ’s fundamental nature. Although the Holy Spirit played a prominent role in the resurrection of Christ, it is Christ’s own Spirit that is the focus of this verse. Peter preached this truth with great power on the day of Pentecost, opening it to our understanding. He confirmed that Christ could not be retained by the grave—it was simply not possible. This is owing to the superiority of holiness. Thus Peter proclaimed, “Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because IT WAS NOT POSSIBLE THAT HE SHOULD BE HOLDEN OF IT. For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved: Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope: Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell (hades, or abode for the spirit), neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption (the body, in the grave)” (Acts 2:24-27).

Thus, though Christ “was crucified through weakness, yet He liveth by the power of God” (2 Cor 13:4). Because He was absolutely holy and sinless, death could hold neither His Spirit nor His body. Thus, we have a Savior who is both all-powerful and all-holy!

THE RESURRECTION

The resurrection of Christ confirmed the Father’s acceptance of His death for the transgressors. The resurrection of Jesus was the MEANS by which He was declared to be the “Son of God with power.”

Salvation hinged upon three great accomplishments of Christ: His death, resurrection, and intercession. The Spirit reasons with us in this manner. “Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea RATHER, that is risen again. Who is even at the right hand of God, Who also maketh intercession for us” (Rom 8:34).

The same truth is powerfully affirmed in the ninth chapter of Hebrews. “For Christ did not enter a holy place made with hands, a mere copy of the true one, but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us (intercession) . . . but now once at the consummation of the ages He has been manifested to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself (death) . . . so Christ also, having been offered once to bear the sins of many, shall appear a second time for salvation without reference to sin, to those who eagerly await Him (resurrected Christ returning for us)” (9:24,26,28).

The centrality of Christ’s resurrection

Because He was absolutely holy and sinless, death could hold neither His Spirit nor His body. Thus, we have a Savior who is both all-powerful and all-holy!

is declared in a number of ways.

- † Through it Jesus was declared to be the Son of God with power (Rom 1:4).
- † We have been born again to a living hope through Christ’s resurrection (1 Pet 1:3).
- † Our baptism obtained its effectiveness through Christ’s resurrection (1 Pet 3:21).
- † The imputation of righteousness upon the basis of our faith is owing to our Lord’s resurrection (Rom 4:24).
- † Christ’s resurrection is the Divine pledge that we also will be raised from the dead (1 Cor 6:14; 2 Cor 4:14).
- † In Christ’s resurrection, we have also been raised up to sit with Him in the heavenly places (Eph 2:5-6).
- † Christ’s resurrection confirms those trusting in Him have been delivered from the wrath that is coming (1 Thess 1:10).

- † Jesus was raised in order that we might be justified (Rom 4:25).
- † The power devoted to those in Christ Jesus is the very power that raised Him from the dead (Eph 1:19-20).

It is no wonder, therefore, that such a great emphasis is placed on the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is a Gospel emphasis—the heart and core of “the Gospel of God.” Seeing this, the Apostle abandoned all competing pursuits that he might know Christ “and the power of His resurrection” (Phil 3:10).

In the resurrected Christ we not only find Divine confirmation that he is the Son of God, we also find power for living. It is a power that cannot be grasped without the eyes of our understanding being opened by God—but God is willing to do open the eyes of our understanding that we may see “the exceeding greatness of the power that is toward us who believe” (Eph 1:15-19). God is “able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that works in us” (Eph 3:20).

One further thing should be noted on the matter of Christ’s resurrection. The ONLY proof we have of it is the testimony of the Gospel. The evidence of it has been withdrawn from the arena of flesh and blood. Those who say they demand tangible evidence before they will believe are in great error. You may recall that Thomas made this foolish assertion: “Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe” (John 20:25). Confronted with the living Christ, he quickly recanted on this demand, saying, “My Lord and my God.” Jesus gave a telling reply to the confession of Thomas—one to which we all do well to take heed. “Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed” (John 20:28-29). Notice, Jesus conferred a blessing on those who “have not seen, and yet have believed.” He did NOT, however, confer a blessing upon Thomas who only believed after he had seen! Taken seriously, this account is conducive to great sobriety. As well, it is devastating to many attempts to prove the authenticity of Scripture by physical evidence.

Thus the Spirit anchors our faith to a risen, yet unseen, Christ. He points us to the “Gospel of God” for proof of the matter—a testimony impregnated with Divine power! He tells us God Himself has declared Jesus Christ is His Son “with power.” The ONLY proof of that indispensable reality is the word of the Lord. But, as all real believers know, that is really all the proof we require!

WHAT AND WHY

“By whom we have received grace and apostleship, for obedience to the faith among all nations, for His name.” The Spirit never leaves us in the hands of human reasoning. The truth of God is consistently declared in such a manner as to encourage faith and trust in God. Although Paul has already affirmed his Apostleship, and the focus of it, he now elaborates on it. In doing this, he is, through the Spirit, drawing attention to the purpose of His Apostleship, rather than to the Apostleship itself.

This, of course, is not characteristic of the wisdom of this world. Among men, office is more frequently exalted above function, bringing glory to men. But in God’s Kingdom, function is exalted above office, so that the office is nothing unless the function is carried out. Were this single verity to be seen within the professed church, it would radically alter its view of preachers, elders, evangelists, deacons, etc. Paul had been called to DO something, not merely to fill a formal office. In this very Epistle, we will find him effectively doing what he was called to do.

GRACE AND APOSTLESHIP

First Paul has summarized the Gospel for us, showing it to have originated with God, and proclaiming the Lord Jesus Christ. Now he will authenticate his role in the Kingdom by showing its relationship to that Gospel. If what we do does not directly interface with “the Gospel of God,” it has no relevance in the Kingdom of God.

The order of the gifts received is important. First grace, then Apostleship. First Divine favor, then ministry. Grace is given to us to fulfill our ministry, not as a reward for performing it. In this, we are to understand that being called to the Apostleship was owing to the grace of God. By grace, Paul was an Apostle. That, of course, is how anyone comes to be a laborer together with God. The understanding of this contributes significantly to a faithful and fruitful ministry. A failure to perceive it causes one to trust in human wisdom and rely

When “received,” grace is always productive. It is never an end of itself, but the Divinely appointed means to an ordained end. It is the means through which we are saved by faith (Eph 2:5-8). “Everlasting consolation and good hope” also come “through grace” (2 Thess 2:16).

As Paul indicates in this passage, he was given grace to do something. Elsewhere he states the grace of God made him a skillful master-builder, who could lay a good foundation (1 Cor 3:10). Because of grace, he “labored more abundantly” than the other apostles (1 Cor 15:10). His impeccably holy life was also owing to the grace of God (2 Cor 1:12). Grace made the Apostle what he was, and he knew it. That is a blessing.

In the final analysis, grace is a stewardship, given to men in order that they might work together with God. Everyone in the body of Christ receives grace—grace to do something. They are responsible for fulfilling their role to the glory of God. Peter states it this way. “As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God” (1 Pet 4:10).

The grace of God is “manifold,” or multifarious and diversified, because that is the nature of God’s work. While there are common graces found among God’s people—traits that are to be found in us all—there are also unique ministries. Paul will now elaborate upon his own ministry—the “Apostleship.” It was a ministry given to him by the grace of God, and was given in strict accord with the Divine agenda. The grace of God will not undergird a humanly conceived agenda.

Neither will the Lord assign a ministry without providing grace to fulfill it. It is a blessed condition when these two matters are perceived with some degree of clarity.

FOR OBEDIENCE

The stated objective of the Paul’s “Apostleship” was “for obedience to the faith among all nations, for His name.” This is an intriguing phrase, and conducive to much meditation. Other versions read, “to bring about the obedience of faith” (NASB). “To the obedience that comes from faith” (NIV). Both the etymological structure and the doctrine of this verse confirm it means “the obedience that springs from faith”^{Robertson}. Faith is the living spring from which all valid response to God issues. It is the sanctifying factor in all Kingdom labor. “Without faith, it is impossible to please” God (Heb 11:6).

That is a Scriptural axiom that must never be allowed to dim in our understanding.

Later in this Epistle, the Spirit will refer to this same truth. He will state that God's eternal purpose "was kept secret since the world began, But now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for THE OBEDIENCE OF FAITH" (Rom 16:26). In the Greek text, the wording is precisely the same, with not a single variation: εἰς ὑπακοήν πιστεως. The meaning here is that Paul's Apostleship was to this intent, or for this objective: that men might render obedience to God because they believed the Gospel. Someone has well said of faith, "Faith is a commanding principle exacting obedience to itself." ^{J. Barmy}

UNLIKE OBEDIENCE UNDER THE LAW

This is totally unlike the obedience that was common under the Law. That was an obedience of mere routine. The reason for this circumstance was owing to at least two things.

First, the people did not have a heart for obedience. At the foot of Sinai, when they declared in fear they would do all God had commanded, the Lord gave His response to Moses—and it is a telling one. "I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee: they have well said all that they have spoken. O that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!" (Deut 5:28-29). Their hearts were unrenewed, and therefore their obedience was flawed to the core. Law, spoken from heaven, could not effect a change in the heart of the people. Therefore, the Lord declares their intentions were good, but they did not have the capacity to fully do what God required of them.

Second, the Law was not an economy of faith. It did not require faith, and was not established on faith. This is not a matter of conjecture, but of express revelation. "The law is not based on faith; on the contrary, The man who does these things will live by them" (Gal 3:12). The Law, or First Covenant, depended wholly upon doing. Life was promised to the one who thoroughly kept the Law, without a single deviation—and ONLY to such.

Holy people had always obeyed out of faith, which is a higher principle than Law. Thus the Scriptures speak of "the law of faith" (Rom 3:27). This is a "law" that produces the results required by God.

A DIFFERENT KIND OF OBEDIENCE

Now, in Christ Jesus, comes a different kind of obedience that was commanded under the law— obedience that springs from faith. It is not that such obedience was totally strange. Holy people had always obeyed out of faith, which is a higher principle than Law. Thus the Scriptures speak of "the law of faith" (Rom 3:27). This is a "law" that produces the results required by God.

One of the classic passages of Scripture on this matter is the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. That text is devoted to affirming the effectiveness of faith, and why it is not possible to please God without it. The passage is filled with examples of extraordinary human responses to God—and all of them proceeded from faith. A brief review of them will serve to confirm the truth of our text.

- † By faith Abel offered a more excellent sacrifice.
- † By faith Noah, being warned of God, built an ark to the saving of his house.
- † By faith Abraham obeyed when he was called to leave his country and kindred.
- † By faith Abraham sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country.
- † By faith Abraham offered up Isaac, accounting God was able to raise from the dead.

- † By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Eau concerning things to come.
- † By faith Jacob, when dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph, while worshipping.
- † By faith, Joseph commanded that his bones be carried out of Egypt when Israel was delivered according to God's promise.
- † By faith Moses' parents hid him, not fearing the edict of the king.
- † By faith Moses refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter.
- † By faith Moses forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king.
- † By faith Moses kept the Passover.
- † By faith the Israelites passed through the Red Sea.
- † By faith the walls of Jericho fell down.
- † By faith Rahab received Israel's spies in peace, and did not perish with those who believed not.

None of these exceptional responses could have been elicited by Law. They all came from faith, the most powerful incentive among men. It is greater than a trembling mountain and earth-shattering noise. Faith, because it is in the heart, provokes obedience "from the heart" (Rom 6:17), which is an absolute requisite with God.

Settle it in your mind, where there is no obedience, there is no faith. As James would say it, "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also" (James 2:26). Just as a body without a spirit is not a person, so faith without works is not faith. It is only a pretension.

The obedience that comes from faith is "obedience unto righteousness" (Rom 6:16), or an obedience that results in righteousness^{NASB}. It is the obedience that also proceeds from the sanctifying work of the Holy Spirit. As it is written, "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ" (1 Pet 1:2). Just as surely as faith made sick people whole through the word of Jesus (Matt 9:22; Mk 10:52), so faith produces obedience in those who believe the Gospel.

A BRIEF SUMMATION

Thus Paul’s Apostleship was an assignment from God, by grace, to declare “preach the Gospel”—but not merely to voice it. Through his preaching he was to elicit a response from men—the “obedience that comes from faith.” He was not merely fulfilling an obligation, but working together with God in the grand enterprise of salvation.

This is a facet of preaching the Gospel that sorely needs to be restored. Too much preaching puts no pressure upon the hearers. It is too novel, too intellectual, too entertaining—too academic. It neither brings faith nor provokes obedience. Such preaching is more related to the novelties of the “Epicurean and Stoic philosophers” of Athens than the preaching ordained by God (Acts 17:18-21; 1 Cor 1:21). When hearing about the lifeless philosophers of Corinth, who were influencing the church, Paul wrote the following. “But I will come to you soon, if the Lord wills, and I shall find out, not the words of those who are arrogant, but their power. For the kingdom of God does not consist in words, but in power”^{NASB} (1 Cor 4:19-20).

The Gospel itself is a compelling message. It cannot be heard with indifference. It is God’s “power unto salvation” (Rom 1:16). The failure to obey it will also result in sure condemnation (2 Thess 1:8). Oh, that God would raise up great preachers of the Gospel. Powerful proclaimers that would bring such pressure to bear upon the hearts of men that they would cry out, “What shall we do?” (Acts 2:37; 9:6; 16:30), thereby rendering an obedience that is honoring of the Lord Jesus. It is time to declare war on lifeless lectures and entertaining speeches in the churches!

AMONG ALL NATIONS

The Gospel is not a provincial or parochial message. It is the message through which the promise to Abraham is being fulfilled: “all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?” (Gen 18:18; 22:18). When Israel disobeyed God, they were judged by being dispersed, or driven, into “all nations” (Deut 28:37; 30:1). But now, Jesus having “put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself” (Heb 9:26), the nations are targeted for a blessing through the message of the Gospel. Sin had extended to every nation, and thus the Gospel will be brought to every nation—even to “every creature” (Mk 16:15).

Some men have a burden for a particular people, or a specific country or nation. This is a noble thing. But ponder relatively crude circumstances.

And look how effective his ministry has been! From every nation men and women have yielded the obedience of faith because of the Gospel he faithfully preached. In the last day, when the final harvest is gathered, the fruit of this single man will be a sight to behold! Paul himself was an example of the type of obedience faith produces. The secret to his prolific ministry was his faith!

FOR HIS NAME

The Spirit adds these significant words: “for His name,” or “for the sake of His name”^{RSV}. The New Jerusalem Bible reads, “for the honor of His name,” while the New Living Translation reads, “bringing glory to His name.” Here is a wonderful aspect of the preaching of the Gospel and the obedience that comes from faith. The meaning of the words is that Paul sought to bring honor and glory to Christ through his Apostleship. He did not seek his own glory, having discarded as “dung” those things that were “gain” to him (Phil 3:8).

Too much preaching puts no pressure upon the hearers. It is too novel, too intellectual, too entertaining—too academic. It neither brings faith nor provokes obedience. Such preaching is more related to the novelties of the “Epicurean and Stoic philosophers” of Athens than the preaching ordained by God a ministry to “ALL nations!” Some few men have so regarded their ministry. The great preacher John Wesley is reported to have said, “The world is my parish.”

If you imagine that you have a lot of responsibilities, consider the extent of Paul’s call and ministry. He was “THE Apostle of the Gentiles” (Rom 11:13). His ONLY qualification for this extensive ministry was the “grace and Apostleship” he had received! He thought in terms of “Rome,” “Spain,” “Macedonia,” and “Syria” (Rom 1:15; 15:24; Acts 16:10; 15:41). He ministered in synagogues (Acts 18:4), market places (Acts 17:17), and places where philosophers gathered (Acts 17:19). He preached by rivers (Acts 16:13), in prisons (Acts 16:30-32), and before kings and judges (Acts 23:24; 26:2). His words were heard in the palaces of Rome (Phil 1:13; 4:22) and an upper chamber in Troaz (Acts 20:8-11). His ministry was experienced in the barbarous island of Malta (Acts 28:4). The extent of his ministry would be impressive and unparalleled in this day of jet planes, television, and internet communications. Yet it was all accomplished under Whatever reproach has been brought upon the name of our blessed Lord, it never came from the Apostle Paul! Throughout history, men, causes, and institutions have arisen that have heaped glory and honor unto themselves. Men have become so vain as to “call their lands after their own names” (Psa 49:10). But it was not so with Paul, nor will it be the case with any person of faith.

God Himself honored, or glorified, the Son! Jesus once said, “If I honor Myself, My honor is nothing: it is My Father that honors me” (John 8:54). In one of the great prophecies of the extent of Christ’s salvation, the Father said, “It is too small a thing that You should be My Servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved ones of Israel; I will also make You a Light of the nations So that My salvation may reach to the end of the earth”^{NASB} (Isa 49:6). This truth had been written upon the heart and mind of Paul. He was in fellowship with the Lord Jesus Christ. He therefore sought to bring glory to His Lord in “all nations.”

Those who limit their spiritual focus to a specific society, limit the glory due to Christ. Their interests should extend as far as their God-given abilities allow. The honor of Jesus is at stake!

Every time someone believes and obeys the Gospel, honor is brought to the Lord Jesus. It justifies His death, proving it to be efficacious. It glorifies His resurrection, confirming its power can raise men from death in trespasses and sins. It demonstrates the power of His intercession, which supports all believers in their ministries as well as their circumstances.

Lest we become proud in our approach to Kingdom work, God works among men for the sake of His beloved Son. While God surely loved the world, He loves the Son more! Jesus is His “well beloved Son”

(Matt 3:17; 17:5; Col 1:13). When the Father forgives us, it is “for Christ’s sake” (Eph 4:32). When it comes to our faith, and the fellowship of suffering that prepares us to reign with Christ, it is written, “For unto you it is given IN THE BEHALF OF CHRIST, not only to believe on Him, but also to suffer for His sake” (Phil 1:29).

Thus, in his ministry, Paul joined with the Father in bringing honor and glory to the Son. After all, “It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, Who is even at the right hand of God, Who also maketh intercession for us” (Rom 8:34). What is more fitting than to minister “for His name.” What greater honor can be afforded a mortal than to say, He expended himself for the honor of Jesus’ name! Think more of Jesus, and of the glory that is due His holy name. It is godly to think in such a manner, and ungodly not to do so.

If you have been associated with organized religion for any length of time, you know this is an exceedingly rare perspective. That very circumstance confirms the aloofness from God, rank unbelief, and lifeless routine that is being promoted.

Wherever an acute awareness of God is not being produced, or honor is not being brought to Jesus, or hearty obedience is not being rendered to God, only two possibilities exist. Either the Gospel is not being preached, or it is not being believed. Unless that situation is remedied, there is no hope of being saved. I realize these words may appear strong, but the Word of God leaves us with no alternatives.

THE HEAVENLY CALL

“Among whom are ye also the called of Jesus Christ.” The manner of this text is a heavenly manner—it is the way God speaks of our salvation. Where such language is strange, the people do not know “the manner of the kingdom” (1 Sam 10:25). We live in a day when speech has become loose, casual, and empty. It is not capable of carrying great thought. Men have even sought to reduce the Word of God itself to the language of the street, which is not capable of conveying Divine thought in a powerful manner. Much of the Scripture involves the development of a special nomenclature through which God can effectively communicate with His offspring. This is one of the great ministries of the Old Covenant, with the tabernacle service. Time will not allow me to develop this thought to any significant extent here. It is enough to observe that the pivotal points of the Gospel are all expressed in terms that were developed in God’s covenantal relation with Israel. Some examples include lamb, altar, sacrifice, blood, washing, holiest place, holy place, priest, high priest, intercession, pleasing fragrance, atonement, sanctify, redeem, reconcile, anointed, and others. The promises of a coming Savior were all expressed by holy Prophets, and in specially revealed terms. Their words were the appointed containers of Divine meanings, making them special to the people of God.

AMONG WHOM

This verse is an excellent confirmation of this truth. A view of God’s people is stated that is most edifying. It serves to clarify our understanding of salvation. First, the Spirit includes the Roman believers as suitable recipients of the Gospel. They were “among” the “all nations” to whom the Gospel was sent, and for whom it was tailored. This view at once devastates any notion of fleshly distinctions. Even though citizenry in Rome was counted as something superior, yet from heaven’s viewpoint, they were “among the nations”—one portion of a needy populace.

The Spirit provides another view of human commonality to the Ephesians. “And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins: Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the

To my knowledge, it was never God’s manner to employ the language of alienated people, using it as a container for heavenly truth. With remarkable consistency, the Holy Spirit took ordinary words and assigned to them extraordinary lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others" (Eph 2:1-3). Although men are prone to "measure themselves by themselves, and compare themselves with themselves" (2 Cor 10:12), the Gospel approaches them as having a common need. That is why a devastating blow is dealt to sectarianism and human pride wherever the Gospel is believed.

The truth of the matter is that "in Adam all die" (1 Cor 15:22). Sin has leveled the human race, so that the barbarians of Malta need the Gospel, and the salvation it announces, as much as the lords of Caesar's household. Men may boast of superior civilizations and greater attainments, but it is all in vain. That view is too low for the people of God. While there is a very small element of truth to it, it is unworthy of embrace, for it contributes to pride, and moves people to consider the Gospel as less needful than it really is. It is a fleshly view, which is prohibited in the Kingdom of God.

WE WERE CALLED

At the point we were subjected to the Gospel, a distinction began to develop. Through the "glad tidings of good things" (Rom 10:15) we were "called" by God to God. As it is written, "But we should always give thanks to God for you, brethren beloved by the Lord, because God has chosen you from the beginning for salvation through sanctification by the Spirit and faith in the truth. And it was for this He called you through our gospel, that you may gain the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Thess 2:14). For some, this is too difficult to believe. To them, it is like as theological brier or thorn that cannot be handled. But this is not an appropriate response to the truth. It is honoring to God to believe His Word, and confess that it is the truth. After all, God will be "justified" in all of His "sayings" (of which this is one), and will "overcome," or prevail, when there is a conflict between His words and man's perception of them (Rom 3:4).

The people of God are frequently referred to as "called." One of the more familiar texts is Romans 8:28. "And we know that all things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are the called according to His purpose." (NKJV) The Spirit further affirms, "Moreover whom He predestined, these He also called; whom He called, these He also justified; and whom He justified, these He also glorified" (Rom 8:30).

The "calling" of reference, therefore, is central in our salvation. It is not tangential, or something of novel interest on the side. The importance of the concept of calling can be seen in the following affirmations of Scripture.

- † Called into the fellowship of God's dear Son (1 Cor 1:9).
- † Called to peace (1 Cor 7:15).
- † Called into the grace of Christ (Gal 1:6).
- † Called into liberty (Gal 5:13).
- † Called in one hope of our calling (Eph 4:4).
- † Called to obtain glory (2 Thess 2:14).
- † Called out of darkness into His marvelous light (1 Pet 2:9).
- † Called to inherit a blessing (1 Pet 3:9).
- † Called to His eternal glory (1 Pet

a lofty one, not to be viewed through the template of man's theology. Fleshly thinking must not touch this Gospel!

DIVINE INITIATIVE

The very idea of a "call" emphasizes an initiative. In this case, a Divine initiative. A call is not in answer to a request, but is an invitation offered by an interested party who has an concern in the one being called.

The saints of God are exhorted to remember their calling—when it first registered upon their conscience that there was room for them at the Master's table. That call came by means of the Gospel, yet it was intensely personal. It was a call that transcended earthly distinctions. "Consider your own call, brothers and sisters: not many of you were wise by human standards, not many were powerful, not many were of noble birth" (1 Cor 1:26). There was a single objective in the calling: "ONE hope of your calling" (Eph 4:4). It was a "high calling," or an "upward call" (Phil 3:14).

The calling was "holy," and not prompted by our works or accomplishments. It was wholly at the discretion of a wise and loving God. As it is written, "Who has saved us and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was given to us in Christ Jesus before time began" (2 Tim 1:9). Because the call came from heaven, it is appropriately called a "heavenly calling," of which we are "partakers" (Heb 3:1).

The very idea of a "call" emphasizes an initiative. In this case, a Divine initiative. A call is not in answer to a request, but is an invitation offered by an interested party who has an concern in the one being called.

5:10). Paul has already said he was "called to be an Apostle." Now he tells the Roman brethren they are also "the called of Jesus Christ." Other translations highlight the uniqueness of this expression: "among those who are called to belong to Jesus Christ" (NIV, RSV, NRSV), "and by His call you belong to Jesus Christ" (NJB), "marked out to be disciples of Christ" (BBE). Literally, the phrase may be translated "called to be Jesus Christ's" (Robertson). Although of themselves these translations do not establish the truth of the text, they do confirm that it is Referring to his own Apostleship, Paul confesses that even though he was appointed to be an Apostle, yet He was called by God's grace. "But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb and called me through His grace, to reveal His Son in me, that I might preach Him among the Gentiles, I did not immediately confer with flesh and blood, nor did I go up to Jerusalem to those who were apostles before me; but I went to Arabia, and returned again to Damascus" (Gal 1:15-17). It is important to avoid a view of our calling that does not allow the unreserved acceptance of statements like this. He is a wise man that is willing to accept the testimony of holy Scripture without doubting.

A “call” assumes some recognition of the invitation on the part of the one being called. Men have longed debated this subject. Some affirm no response is possible unless there is a quickening from God, while others affirm the ability to respond is inherent in the human nature. I am not sure, however, that the Word approaches the subject in such a simplistic manner.

Something must be said about the necessity of a call in the first place—and no one responds who is not first called. The very fact that the God of heaven sends out an invitation to humanity indicates how far sin had taken us from Him. The indictment of heaven against the human race is, “there is none that seeketh after God” (Rom 3:11). Some might object that there are SOME who do seek after God—but the Spirit says there are “none.” The meaning is that no one by nature persistently seeks after God—in spite of the fact that philosophers have said that they do. There is a vast difference between making false gods, and earnestly seeking after the true God.

God has appointed that men seek Him, making every effort to find Him. As it is written, “From one man He made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth; and He determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live. God did this so that men would seek Him and perhaps reach out for Him and find Him, though He is not far from each one of us”^{NIV} (Acts 17:26-27). Yet, because of sin, any seeking that men do on their own misses the mark, bringing them to the wrong conclusion.

Amidst this hopeless condition, the calling of God surfaces—a Divine summons that is effectual. Just as surely as God called out for Adam (Gen 3:9), through the Gospel a call goes out from heaven. We must learn to count on this call attending the preaching of the Gospel.

Divine Drawing

The call of God is the manner in which He draws, or allures, us to Himself. Jesus declared the indispensability of this drawing. “No man CAN come to me, except the Father which hath sent Me draw him” (John 6:44). Later, in the same discourse, this same truth is stated in another way. “Therefore said I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father” (John 6:65). This is the Divine manner of the heavenly Kingdom.

The awakening of the soul is not to be taken lightly, as though it were the mere product of human initiative. If men are sensitive of God, have an ear to hear, or eyes to see, they are obligated to confess the origin of them both.

This is not strange language. The Lord has consistently presented Himself as engaged in drawing people. “The LORD has appeared of old to me, saying: Yes, I have loved you with an everlasting love; Therefore with lovingkindness I have drawn you” (Jer 31:3). “I drew them with gentle cords, With bands of love” (Hosea 11:4). “Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her” (Hosea 2:14). Let us have done with any view of salvation that makes no allowance for the drawing power of God.

The awakening of the soul is not to be taken lightly, as though it were the mere product of human initiative. If men are sensitive of God, have an ear to hear, or eyes to see, they are obligated to confess the origin of them both. “The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the LORD hath made even both of them” (Prov 20:12). Everyone does not possess a hearing ear—or an ear capable of detecting the voice of the Lord. That is precisely why Jesus said, “He that hath ears to hear, let him hear” (Matt 11:15; 13:9,43). It is why the Spirit repeated said to the churches, “He who has an ear, let him hear what the Spirit says to the churches.” (Rev 2:7,11,17,29; 3:6,13,22; 13:9).

Moses told Israel, “Yet the LORD hath NOT given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day” (Deut 29:4). This was not an arbitrary decision—as though Israel wanted ears to hear, but God refused to grant them. Their obstinate hearts withheld these things from them (Ezek 12:2). See how different it is with those in Christ Jesus? They have been given ears to hear, and have thus been effectively drawn, or called by God Himself, to Jesus. They have a preference for the Lord, and a longing to hear from Him.

If one chooses to believe men have an innate ability to hear, or be sensitive of, the Living God, very well. That is very much a part of the Divine likeness that we bear—even by nature. However, that ability cannot be aroused without Divine influence. Thus it is written, “He awakens my ear to hear as the learned”^{NKJV} (Isa 50:4).

This in no way negates the universality of the offer of salvation. It excludes no one who is seeking, or desires to come to the Lord. It is not a fatalistic view. Rather, this is the Divine explanation of your salvation. It is one that brings all glory to God, and it is the truth.

CALLED TO CHRIST

Our text says we are “the called of Christ”—or the called ones belonging to Christ. This expression parallels that of First Corinthians 1:9: “God is faithful, by whom you were called into the fellowship of His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord.”^{NKJV} The nature of our salvation is expounded in this statement. In order for us to be saved, we have to be brought under the care and direction of the Son of God. God gave us to Jesus in order that He might “bring us to God” (1 Pet 3:18).

This aspect of salvation is so particular that Jesus took special note of it when He was preparing to die for our sins. “While I was with them in the world, I kept them in Your name. Those whom You gave Me I have kept; and none of them is lost except the son of perdition, that the Scripture might be fulfilled. But now I come to You . . . I do not pray that You should take them out of the world, but that You should keep them from the evil one (John 17:12-15).

If any believers imagine they are capable of being kept through their own efforts alone, let them bend low, still their souls, and hear the prayer of Jesus! The Lord Jesus would not leave His disciples unprotected for three days and three nights! In that appointed interim, the powers of darkness were being loosed. The Son, mindful of the gravity of the situation, turned them over to the care of the Father while He laid down His life and took it up again! What a rich commentary on the weakness of man and the love of God and Christ!

Now, Jesus is the Captain of our salvation, leading us to the “better country” and the “city which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God” (Heb 11:10,16). He is the Shepherd who leads and feeds us, and the Minister of the heavenly sanctuary from Whom our supplies are being received (Heb 8:1-2). There is nothing we need that He does not give, or WANT to give. He is the Mediator of the New Covenant.

And how is it that God brings us under the care of this “great Shepherd of the sheep” (Heb 13:20)? We are “CALLED” to Him! There is an appeal that requires sensitivity of heart and soul. If you have any doubts about the sincerity and effectiveness of this call, “the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable” (Rom 11:29). It is a “high calling”

(Phil 3:14), a “heavenly calling” (Heb 3:1), and a “holy calling” (2 Tim 1:9). The ONLY ones who do not profit from this calling are those who “refuse” it (Heb 12:25). But those giving heed to it, will be given by God to Jesus Christ for safe keeping and direction. It will be a most satisfying and joyful condition, yielding the full assurance of faith! In the lively awareness of this truth, you will be able to live triumphantly. You can trust in that!

Does this not open the marvelous treasure of First Corinthians 1:30? “It is because of Him (God) that you are in Christ Jesus, who has become for us wisdom from God--that is, our righteousness, holiness and redemption.” How gracious of our God to be so precise on the matter of our salvation!

AN APPROPRIATE DESCRIPTION AND BLESSING

“To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints: Grace to you and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.” The priorities of the Apostle are certainly revealed in this introduction. We have no idea of the recipients of this marvelous Epistle until this verse. The man of God first tells us his heavenly assignment and role in the salvation of God. He then affirms he is declaring what the holy prophets of God said was coming. He identifies the true Christ, relating Him to the eternal King that would come from David. He affirms this is the One—the ONLY One—that has been declared to be the Son of God with power through “the resurrection from the dead.” He is the One that has commissioned and enabled Paul. His purpose is bring about the obedience that results from faith. He then declares we have been called to be given to the Lord Jesus.

What a marvelous context in which to address believers. In his opening words, he has stripped away all flesh, and shown the world to be worthless. He has not given a syllable of worth to anything proceeding from the flesh, firmly fixed our attention on God, Christ, the Gospel, and the real reason for preaching. Suffice it to say, there are countless believers that are regularly submitted to preaching and teaching that rarely, if ever, make such holy associations.

We also learn from this that it is out of

We also learn from this that it is out of order to attempt to serve men until we have first honored God through Christ, and in the Gospel. Too, if our intentions are not to promote the obedience that comes from faith, we are not really serving the Lord.

order to attempt to serve men until we have first honored God through Christ, and in the Gospel. Too, if our intentions are not to promote the obedience that comes from faith, we are not really serving the Lord. All vain activities are to be forthrightly abandoned in favor of joining with the Lord in His revealed purpose—working with Him (1 Cor 3:9). No other work is acceptable.

ALL THAT BE IN ROME

Because Paul has the spirit of Christ, he is not a sectarian. He writes to “ALL” the believers in Rome. He is not writing to the magistrates, the university teachers, or the merchants of Rome—at least not in those temporal capacities. He will clearly identify that his words are addressed to those who are in Christ Jesus.

We know from the close of this Epistle that “all that be in Rome” included a wide range of believers. There was an assembly meeting in the home of Aquila and Priscilla (16:3-5), people in prison (16:7), households (16:10-11), and all the saints with “Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympas” (16:15). There were married and single, men and woman, relatives, and those “of note among the Apostles” (16:3-7). All of them were included! Wherever a person aligned with Jesus could be found in Rome—this was for them.

A Gospel that cannot be preached to everyone should not be preached to anyone! Whether he was writing to his relatives, prisoners, spiritual leaders, or a married believers, the message was the same—“all that be in Rome.” Such a condition is possible because there are no fleshly distinctions in Christ Jesus. As it is written, “For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus” (Gal 3:26-28).

A soon as we begin to minister the truth of God with fleshly distinctions in mind, the Gospel necessarily loses its prominence in the minds of both the speaker and the hearers. This is because “the Gospel of God” (to which Paul was separated) recognizes no such distinctions. While the Scriptures do contain words addressed to special people (husbands, wives, children, servants, masters, married, single, etc.), they are never at the heart of the Gospel. They are always secondary, and designed to bring the people into the center of the Gospel, where common affiliation and true spiritual benefit are experienced. One of the telling signs of a powerless church is the penchant to present the Gospel as though there were fleshly distinctions in Christ Jesus.

BELOVED OF GOD

Through the Holy Spirit, and under the administration of the Lord Jesus, Paul will now speak to the people of God. He will address them from the highest view, thereby appealing to their new natures. It is the Apostolic manner to begin Epistles in this manner—recognizing the status of the people of God in Christ Jesus.

What a gracious word: “beloved of God!” Other versions read, “To all in Rome who are loved by God”^{NIV}, “To all God’s beloved in Rome”^{NRSV}. The NIV is very weak in this regard, for the word used here is not “loved,” but “dearly loved,” as I will establish. It speaks of a special relationship, not an ordinary one.

Notice, he does not address those who love God (although they surely did), but those GOD LOVES! Through these words, the Spirit is teaching us where to begin with our spiritual reasoning. It is ever true, “We love him, because He first loved us” (1 John 4:19). The river of love belongs to Him. Our love is but a small tributary when compared with overflowing His. As it is written, “In this is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins”^{NKJV} (1 John 4:10).

Too, let none imagine that this salutation was for every citizen of Rome. While, in a general sense, “God so loved the world,” that is not the love of which Paul writes. Nor, indeed, does the Spirit know anything about God loving every person alike, be he Paul the Apostle or anyone loves Me, he will keep My word; and My Father will love him, and We will come to him, and make Our abode with him” (John 14:21,23). This is the love of which our text speaks, and it is a wonderful love indeed!

The word “beloved” is a special word in Scripture. It is derived from the Greek word ἀγαπητός, which means beloved dear, very much loved, one not only greatly loved, but in a unique way.^{Robertson} No person separated from Jesus is ever so described! This word is used over sixty times in the New Testament Scriptures, and is never applied to someone outside of Jesus Christ.

A soon as we begin to minister the truth of God with fleshly distinctions in mind, the Gospel necessarily loses its prominence in the minds of both the speaker and the hearers. This is because “the Gospel of God” (to which Paul was separated) recognizes no such distinctions.

“Beloved of God” means especially endeared to Him because of their association with His well beloved Son. To be loved by God is to be advantaged by Him. It is to experience Him being “for us,” so that none can effectively be “against us” (Rom 8:31). To be “beloved of God” is the opposite of provoking God, as did the Israelites of old (Deut 32:16; 1 Kgs 14:22; Psa 78:58; 106:29). God finds great delight in those who are “beloved” by Him. He delights to walk with them as He did with Enoch and Noah (Gen 5:22; 6:9).

Such are people “after His own heart,” as David (Acts 13:22), and are His friends like Abraham (James 2:23).

SPECIAL TO GOD

To be “beloved of God” involves being special to Him. As it is written, “But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, HIS OWN SPECIAL PEOPLE”^{NKJV} (1 Pet 2:9). In another place it is stated that Jesus “gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from every lawless deed and purify for Himself HIS OWN SPECIAL PEOPLE, zealous for good works”^{NKJV} (Tit 2:14). We do well to NOT be among those thinking these words to be strange.

This should not be a strange idea to us. God said this to Israel, “Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation” (Ex 19:5-6). When He delivered Judas the betrayer. Although such heresy is often spouted from the mouths of the unlearned, it is totally false, and a gross misrepresentation of the Living God.

If this word—“beloved of God”—was suitable for saints and sinners alike, it would derive no special comfort for the saints. If the grace of God, which brought salvation (Tit 2:11) makes no distinction in those receiving it, of what value is it? If God loves us no more when we are in Jesus than when we were bond-slaves to sin, what benefit is there to being in Christ Jesus?

Jesus has already declared the Father’s love is not lavished upon just anyone. He provided a Savior in His love, but He will not heap His love upon a single rebellious soul. Thus Jesus affirmed, “He who has My commandments and keeps them, he it is who loves Me; and he who loves Me shall be loved by My Father, and I will love him, and will disclose Myself to him . . . If them from Egypt, it was “to be unto Him a people of inheritance” (Deut 4:20). Again, it is said of them, “For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth” (Deut 7:6), and again, “Thou shalt be blessed above all people” (Deut 7:14).

The concept of being special to God, therefore, is not an unusual one, but has been articulated many times. However, when it comes to those who are in Christ Jesus, this endearment is brought to a new level. The church is so special, it is the chosen “bride” of Christ (John 3:29; Rev 21:2,9,17). Think of the magnitude of this statement: “Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God” (Rom 7:4). If Abraham was particular about obtaining a bride for Isaac (Gen 24:7-9), how much more is God discriminating concerning the bride of His Son? You may rest assured, no one will be married to Christ who is not precious and beloved of God! Conversely, no one who loved by Him will be excluded from the Bride.

This specialness can be experienced at the personal level, as confirmed in the Apostle John— “the disciple whom Jesus loved” (John 19:26; 21:20).

Only to the degree that we can see we are “beloved of God” will the accolades of this world come to mean nothing to us.

One further word on this. The status of “beloved of God” is not one TO BE attained by the saints. It is a condition that is unquestionably enjoyed in Christ Jesus. Paul’s salutation is simply a recognition of the status of those who have been “joined to the Lord” (1 Cor 6:17).

CALLED TO BE SAINTS

While it is totally unreasonable to do so, Satan tempts men to believe they can be unholy and still retain the status of “beloved of God.” All manner of teaching has been propagated to encourage this type of thinking. The Spirit, however, will not give men the luxury of thinking in such a spiritually slipshod manner. If we had to be delivered from the guilt and power of sin to be made acceptable to God, it is inconceivable that we could revert to sin again, and remain accepted by God. Such a thought reflects a level of spiritual stupidity that is completely unacceptable.

The call of God is in order that we might be “saints.” The same phrase—“called to be saints”—is found in First Corinthians 1:2. Coming from the word ἁγίους, “saints” means pure, blameless, consecrated, holy.^{Strong’s} This word—“saints”—is like a two-sided coin. One side is HOLY—pure, and free from sin; blameless, and without spot. The other side is CONSECRATED—dedicated to the Lord, and able to come into His presence without being consumed. Both of these are inherent in the word “saints.”

Here, then, is the reason why God called us: to be holy, and to be consecrated, or devoted, to Him. Any approach to religion, or Christianity, that is not based upon these objectives is not of God. It is a delusion that has been perpetrated by the devil. An unholy church is a reproach to Jesus and a desecration of the name of God.

The truth affirmed in these words—“called to be saints”—is repeatedly proclaimed in Scripture. In a marvelous association with Divine choice, the Spirit declares, “He (God) hath chosen us in Him (Jesus) before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love” (Eph 1:4). The ultimate objective of our salvation is said to be “That He might present it (the church) to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish” (Eph 5:27; Col 1:22).

Those who allow for identity with God while maintaining a preference for sin are deceived. We have been called “with a holy calling” (2 Tim 1:9), and holiness is imperative. The Spirit leaves no question on this matter. “But as He who called you is holy, you also be holy in all your conduct, because it is written, ‘Be holy, for I am holy’” (1 Pet 1:15-16). And again, “Pursue peace with all people, and holiness, without which no one will see the Lord” (Heb 12:14).

The phrase “called to be saints” does not suggest believers are not saints NOW. It is an affirmation that this is what God intended by summoning us to Himself. We experience the firstfruits of being saints now, and are so recognized. No less than forty-seven times, the Epistles refer to the people of God as “the saints”—the holy ones! The status will be fully realized when we see the Lord as He is, and are thereby conformed fully to His image (Rom 8:29; 1 John 3:1-2).

GRACE AND PEACE

The nature of life in Christ can be seen by the blessings conferred upon believers. Here two indispensable things are mentioned: “grace and peace.” How often these are joined together in Scripture (1 Cor 1:3; 2 Cor 1:2; Gal 1:3; Eph 1:2; Phil 1:2; Col 1:2; 1 Thess 1:1; 2 Thess 1:2; 1 Pet 1:2; 2 John 1:3 . . . etc., etc.). These are Kingdom necessities, like bread and water are to the flesh.

GRACE

“Grace” is Divine favor, wherein a preference for the individual is found with God. It is the cause of our salvation, and the means through which it is maintained (Eph 2:5-8). No man can enter into the Kingdom of God without grace, and no one can advance in Christ without it. There are no Divine requirements that can be fulfilled without it, and no ministries that can be accomplished apart from it. The grace of God pervades every aspect of the Kingdom of God.

God's grace is the spiritual environment in which we "stand," or are stabilized. As it is written, "we have access by faith into this grace in which we stand" (Rom 5:2). And again, "this is the true grace of God in which you stand" (1 Pet 5:12). By this, the Scripture means we can only survive in this world by remaining in God's favor. Should we choose to "provoke the Lord to jealousy," we will not be able to stand. We are not "stronger than He" (1 Cor 10:22).

Lest any despair, thinking that remaining in God's favor is wholly dependent upon our accomplishments, the Spirit makes clear that grace is accessed by faith. Salvation in its entirety, from beginning to end, is "by grace" and "through faith" (Eph 2:8). It is our acceptance of, and adherence to, the Son of God that endears us to Him.

Thus our text awakens the soul concerning the grace of God. Not only are we to know of its necessity, we are to expect more of it to be given to us. As it is written, "He gives more grace" (James 4:6). When we are pleasing to the Lord, He will lavish His love upon us. That is why it is written, "That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing" (Col 1:10). The effect of pleasing God is set forth in the person of Enoch. He is one of two men in the history of humanity, that did not experience death. There are two things we know about Enoch. (1) He "walked with God" (Gen 5:22,24), and "he pleased God" (Heb 11:5). The Spirit makes clear that FAITH was the prominent trait in Enoch. That is why he "pleased God"—he believed and trusted Him, convinced that God "IS, and that He is a Rewarder of those who diligently seek Him" (Heb 11:6). And what was the result of this pleasing? He "was translated that he should not see death."

Those who imagine they have no need of grace are walking in darkness. What is more, they are a source of displeasure to God. It is no wonder, therefore, that Paul expresses the desire for the people of God to experience "grace." in increasing measures.

I have deep regrets that I have long been identified with a movement that rarely speaks of the grace of God. I know all too well of the futility of life without this wonderful grace. I must confess that whatever I have learned of the grace of God has come independently of that movement. Much of my own understanding has been appropriated in the crucible of conflict with the Bible in my hand. Further, I have found my experience is not at all uncommon. I am quick to say there are many others within the group of reference that have also discovered the grace of God, and been richly satisfied with it. For this, I praise God. I also must acknowledge they have discovered the glory of God's grace outside of the theological boundaries of an

Thus our text awakens the soul concerning the grace of God. Not only are we to know of its necessity, we are to expect more of it to be given to us. As it is written, "He gives more grace" (James 4:6). When we are pleasing to the Lord, He will lavish His love upon us.

PEACE

"Peace" involves quietness of soul—a condition where agitation does not dominate the inner man. Here is a possession that is given to men, not achieved by them. Jesus said to His disciples, "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give to you; not as the world gives do I give to you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27). Our text confirms this was not an experience unique to the Apostles.

Just as surely as we cannot stand without the grace of God, neither can we remain firm while in a state of agitation and inner turmoil. Your own experience in Christ will confirm this to be the case. As soon as we become agitated and distraught, we begin to waver, thinking and acting foolishly. We need the stabilizing influence of His peace. Elihu spoke correctly when he said, "When He gives quietness, who then can make trouble?" (Job 34:29). That is precisely why Jesus followed His promise of peace with the words, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27b).

This is a peace that "surpasses ALL understanding" (Phil 4:7a). It cannot be comprehended by the sociologist, nor explained by the psychiatrist. It is a gift from God, transcendent to anything of the natural order. As such, it is able to "guard your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus"^{NKJV} (Phil 4:7b). Like a powerful and alert sentinel "peace" keeps our hearts from being distracted by temptation and moved away from the grace of God.

In Christ, we have been called to possess this peace. What is more, this peace is dominating, or ruling, in nature. It is capable of controlling our hearts, ruling them with tenderness and eternal profit. Thus it is written, "Let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts, since as members of one body you were called to peace"^{NIV} (Col 3:15).

The peace of God will enable the saints to spend the night with lions (Dan 6:22), and walk about in a furnace of fire (Dan 3:25). It will enable Peter to sleep in prison, expecting death in the morning (Acts 12:6), and Paul to shake off a venous snake that had fastened to his hand (Acts 28:3-5). The peace of God will enable you to walk confidently in the very midst of trouble.

However, peace is more than quietness in the time of trouble. It is also confidence in the presence of the Lord, trouble or not. It empowers the believer to remain close to the Lord in feast or famine, flood or drought.

FROM GOD AND JESUS

With great care the Spirit anchors our faith in God. The grace and peace we require are available in abundant supply. They will come to us "from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ." This blessing is repeatedly written to believers: i.e., "Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Cor 1:3; 2 Cor 1:2; Gal 1:3; Eph 1:2; Phil 1:2; 1 Thess 1:1; 2 Thess 1:2; 1 Tim 1:2; 2 Tim 1:2; Tit 1:4; Philemon 3; 2 John 1:3). This, then, is a general blessing conferred on all saints everywhere. It is our business to ponder and receive it.

The Father and the Son are active in our salvation. They work together in bringing us to glory. Jesus alluded to this when He said, "If anyone loves Me, he will keep My word; and My Father will love him, and We will come to him and make Our home with him"^{NKJV} (John 14:23). They are not inactive Residents. Let it be clear that grace and peace are ministered from within the believer—out of the experience of Divine fellowship. We cannot receive blessing from the Father and the Son while in an alienated state. If we are aloof from God, we are also aloof from grace and peace.

There is a great need for believers to be convinced of the presence and blessing of both the Father and the Son. The fall of humanity was so extensive that it requires the involvement of the entire Godhead to accomplish its retrieval. The holy angels are included as well (Heb 1:13-14). A special realm—"heavenly places"—must be occupied (Eph 1:3; 2:6), and a glorified King must be our Leader! Who is the soul who will take such a great salvation casually, as though it required no effort from us? To "neglect" it is disastrous (Heb 2:3).

An approach to God that hinges upon Law knows nothing of this, choosing to focus on the works of men rather than the "wonderful works of God." It gives too much credit to fallen man. Let us rejoice and be glad in our involvement with the Father and the Son. As it is written, "He who abides in the doctrine of Christ has both the Father and the Son" (2 John 9). Abiding "in the doctrine of Christ" is remaining in a state where we are motivated by, and earnestly cling to, what God has declared concerning Christ. It is maintaining a joyful grasp of the record God gave of His Son, and experiencing the "power of God unto salvation" that is experienced through it. The Spirit does not speak in vain when He ascribes the very power of God to the Gospel of Christ!

CONCLUSION

Thus we have been introduced to this marvelous Epistle. Our hearts have been pointed upward, and our minds focused upon God and Christ. The worth of the Apostle Paul has been traced to him being Christ's servant. This was not an honor he took upon himself, but he was "called" to this privileged role. Whatever other involvements may have been available to Paul, God "separated" him from them all. His major activity was declaring "the Gospel of God"—the good news concerning "how great things the Lord hath done."

Our thoughts concerning the Gospel have been associated with the promises declared through the Prophets, who spoke "concerning His Son Christ our Lord." No other message is honored by God. No other message possesses Divine power. If an understanding of our salvation is to be gained, it will come through a Gospel that declares what the holy Prophets said was coming. A Gospel based upon a human assessment of human need has no place in the church.

The Divine validation of Christ's Sonship took place at His resurrection. By that resurrection God Himself confirmed and declared that all power belongs to Christ—power to seek and save us, bringing us to glory. The ultimate confirmation is not what you experience, but what Jesus experienced by the power of God. That confirmation is contained in a testimony that is designed for faith. All who do, in fact, take hold of that Gospel

Fifteen hundred years of moral administration under the Law confirmed that valid obedience cannot be induced by a demand—not even a Divine demand. This is not owing to any weakness or deficiency on God's part. The failure of the Law to evoke acceptable obedience among men was due to the weakness of the flesh.

testimony by faith, will experience the blessing of God. God will not ignore the one who believes the record He has given of His Son!

The purpose of true ministry is declared to be inducing obedience that comes from faith. That is a common objective to be realized among "all nations." Fifteen hundred years of moral administration under the Law confirmed that valid obedience cannot be induced by a demand—not even a Divine demand. This is not owing to any weakness or deficiency on God's part. God forbid that such a vain imagination should find our place in our thinking. The failure of the Law to evoke acceptable obedience among men was due to the weakness of the flesh (Rom 8:3). The highest work of the Law was found in the ministry of the High Priest. But with the advent of Jesus Christ, even that ministry was abolished. The Spirit states it this way, "For on the one hand there is an annulling of the former commandment because of its weakness and unprofitableness, for the law made nothing perfect"^{NKJV} (Heb 7:18-19).

The people of God have been identified as those who have been called by God to Jesus Christ. The objective of the call was to bring them to, and under the beneficent reign of, the Savior. Our immediate identity with Christ by faith is the appointed means through which we will be brought to glory. A blessed arrangement, indeed!

Believers are also dearly loved by God—special to Him, and the objects of His affection. They are thus suitable recipients of grace and peace, which come from both the Father and the Son. Through Christ, a way has been made for us to remain in Divine favor, or to “abide” in His “love” (John 15:10). It is the unique prerogative of faith to enable us to “keep ourselves in the love of God” (Jude 21). That is the all-pervading objective for believers: to remain in love and favor of God.

The remainder of this Epistle will keep these pivotal realities in focus.

Nothing will be declared that ignores them, or places them into the background. Frequently, and in different ways, the Spirit will point to the truth declared in these opening verses. He will make no provision for flesh to be prominent or Christ to lack prominence.

The absolute criticality of identity with the Father and the Son will be constantly affirmed. Not a single word will be said about affiliation with a religious institution created by men. No value will be placed on mere human assessment. When salvation is addressed, it will always center in the Lord Jesus Christ. Further, He will consistently be seen as God’s appointed Minister. The centrality of Divine favor in the whole of our salvation will also be accented. Anything displeasing to God jeopardizes salvation. Faith will be held forth as our preeminent response, always effective, and always honored by God.

The Spirit will lead us into a manner of thinking that finds the eyes of our heart focused on Jesus as the exclusive Means of salvation--in all of its aspects. Everything depends upon Him! What we are by nature will be declared to be unacceptable to God, and utterly powerless and ineffective. We must live in the power of what God has given us in, and because of, His Son. The Spirit does not speak in vain when He ascribes the very power of God to the Gospel of Christ.

Lesson Number 2

APOSTOLIC GREETING

^{1:8}First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world. ⁹For God is my witness, whom I serve with my spirit in the gospel of his Son, that without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers; ¹⁰Making request, if by any means now at length I might have a prosperous journey by the will of God to come unto you. ¹¹For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established; ¹²That is, that I may be comforted together with you by the mutual faith both of you and me. ¹³Now I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oftentimes I purposed to come unto you, (but was let hitherto,) that I might have some fruit among you also, even as among other Gentiles. ¹⁴I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise. ¹⁵So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also. (Romans 1:8-15, KJV)

- VIII. DETERMINED TO PREACH (1:15)

Having heard of the saints of Rome, the Apostle writes to them. He does so as an Apostle, fulfilling His Apostolic office. While Paul traveled the world preaching to both Jews and Gentiles, he only wrote to the people of God—those who were in Christ Jesus. This is the society most endeared to the Lord. As it is written, “Savior Jesus Christ, who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from every lawless deed and purify for Himself His own special people, zealous for good works”^{NKJV} (Tit 2:14). And again, “But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, His own special people”^{NKJV} (1 Pet 2:9). These are the people upon whom God’s attention is placed. They are the ones who are fed and led by the Lord Jesus Christ, and for whom He faithfully intercedes. They, and they alone, have been given God’s Holy Spirit, and are properly called “the sons of God” (Gal 4:6;

1 John 3:1-2). Paul had the Divine perspective of the saints, and was therefore aggressive to bring spiritual advantage to them. After all, that is why the Apostolic gift was given: “For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ . . . ” (Eph 4:11-16).

All of this may appear quite obvious, requiring no affirmation. However, this is not at all a common perception in our time. The burden of religious emphasis is being placed on recruitment, with all manner of fanciful explanations for it. But this was not the Apostolic emphasis. The Apostles declared the Gospel with great power to rulers and common people, in market places and synagogues, among barbarians and the cultured. But the thrust of their ministry was toward the saints, who faithfully continued in their “doctrine” (Acts 2:42).

We must not take this indispensable ministry for granted. The unacceptable level Scriptural knowledge in the average church is the direct result of its emphasis. Much of the preaching and teaching that is heard does not leave one with the dominating persuasion that we “live by every Word of God” (Lk 4:4). But when you read the doctrine of the Apostles, that comes across with great power.

Throughout this book there will be a strong appeal to the Scriptures. Affirmations will be buttressed with the Word of God, and we will be told the Scriptures were written for our learning, that we might experience endurance and encouragement through them (15:4). We will be fed with the Word of God.

THE CONTEXT ESTABLISHED

With spiritual expertise, Paul has established the true context of this book.

In his introduction (vs 1-7), he makes no reference to the social or political climate of either Rome or Corinth, from which he wrote. He has elevated their thinking above “this present evil world,” and assisted them into the heavenly realms. He has set the tone for the Epistle, thus opening the door for the Lord to work among the people. Do you remember his Eighteen contextual statements that have nothing whatsoever to do with geography, social issues, political boundaries, or congregational difficulties. All of these are common to all saints of all ages. All of them center in God, Christ Jesus, and the purpose of God.

In his introduction (vs 1-7), he makes no reference to the social or political climate of either Rome or Corinth, from which he wrote. He has elevated their thinking above “this present evil world,” and assisted them into the heavenly realms.

Thus our minds have been directed into green pastures, and beside still waters. We have been brought up higher. We see Paul in his heavenly assignment. We see the Gospel in its association with God. We see the Prophets, and the Scriptures as the appointed container of truth. Jesus is declared in relation to God, His promise to David, and the focus of the Prophets. The purpose of Paul’s ministry is affirmed to be the obedience that comes from faith. The people of God are told who they are, and why they have been called. What a marvelous perspective.

We need not look for the context of this book! It has been declared for us. What is written is given to us with God, Christ, the Gospel, and our call to Jesus in mind. Those verities will stabilize everything affirmed in this Epistle to our hearts. In their light, it will all have spiritual power, make sense to us, and nourish our hearts. I do not cease to marvel at the consistent manner in which Scripture was written.

FIRST THINGS FIRST

“1:8 First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world.” The one in fellowship with Jesus is sensitive of, and thankful for, the working of the Lord. In a grand confession of this truth, Isaiah wrote, “all that we have accomplished you have done for us”^{NIV} (Isa 26:12). Apostolic doctrine confirms this with great effectiveness. “For it is God who works in you to will and to act according to his good purpose”^{NIV} (Phil 2:13). Thus holy men prayed for Divine working to take place believers—for the Lord to work in them what was pleasing in His sight. “May the God of peace, who through the blood of the eternal covenant brought back from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, equip you with everything good for doing his will, and may he work in us what is pleasing to him, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory for ever and ever"^{NIV} (Heb 13:20-21). God is honored by a due recognition of His own work. Thus the Apostle begins with a thank offering for the accomplishments in the brethren in Rome.

Like all who are in Christ Jesus, the brethren in Rome were the "workmanship" of God Himself, "created in Christ Jesus" (Eph 2:10). They were His own creation in the Son.

I THANK MY GOD

Thanksgiving ranks high in the Kingdom of God. It is directly related with being in the body of Christ. "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful" (Col 3:15). Our prayers and supplications are to be attended "with thanksgiving" (Phil 4:6). The Spirit speaks of overflowing with thanksgiving (Col 2:7). Words of thanksgiving are pointedly compared with speaking that is not acceptable. "But fornication and all uncleanness or covetousness, let it not even be named among you, as is fitting for saints; neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor coarse jesting, which are not fitting, but rather giving of thanks"^{NKJV} (Eph 5:3-4). There is no question, therefore, about the role of thanksgiving in the life of the believer.

The extent of our thanks can be seen in the passage before us. Believers might be tempted to limit thanksgiving to benefits they have personally received. And, indeed, such benefits must be acknowledged in grateful thankfulness to God. But what about thanking God for brethren you have not seen, or for a body of believers you have never visited? What about giving thanks for a group that has never supported your ministry, or sent you a letter, or been devoted to your work? Now there is real sensitivity to God, and evidence of a selfless spirit as well.

And why is Paul so quick to give thanks to God? It is because he is sensitive to the working of the Lord. He knows the origin of faith, and the Cause behind conversion.

FOR YOU ALL

The Apostle does not give thanks for the leaders, or for the more gifted, but for them "all." They are "all" the "workmanship" of God. They have all believed, and had been placed in the body where God was pleased to place them.

Paul said much the same thing to the Thessalonians. "We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is fitting"^{NKJV} (2 Thess 1:3). To the Ephesians he wrote, "Therefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus and your love for all the saints, do not cease to give thanks for you" (Eph 1:16). The Colossians were told, "We give thanks to the God and Father of our Lord

Like all who are in Christ Jesus, the brethren in Rome were the "workmanship" of God Himself, "created in Christ Jesus" (Eph 2:10). They were His own creation in the Son.

Jesus Christ" (Col 1:3).

Faith enables the soul to recognize the work of God, and therefore give thanks for it. It is important to note that God is not thanked for something He did not do. Believers are the result of Divine working, and it is comely to give thanks to God for them.

Later he will say to the Roman brethren, "But God be thanked that though you were slaves of sin, yet you obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine to which you were delivered"^{NKJV} (Rom 6:17).

Here is an aspect of spiritual life that could be afforded greater prominence among the people of God.

FAITH THAT IS SPOKEN OF

What is the thing that provokes such thanksgiving to God? It is not the administrative genius of the brethren in Rome. Nor, indeed, is it any form of institutional achievement or appearance. Rather, it is the report of their FAITH, which was "spoken of throughout the world."

It was the consistent manner of the Apostle to give thanks for the FAITH of God's people—something rarely heard among professing believers. Thanks was given for the Thessalonians because their faith was growing "exceedingly" (2 Thess 1:3). When Paul heard of the "faith" of the Ephesians, he ceased not to give thanks for them (Eph 1:15). The same was said of the Colossians (Col 1:4).

The Thessalonians also had a faith that was spoken of throughout the world. "Your faith toward God has gone out, so that we do not need to say anything" (1 Thess 1:8). Timothy brought "good tidings" of the "faith" of the Thessalonians to Paul, thereby provoking thanksgiving through him (1 Thess 3:6-9).

Giving thanks for believing brethren is an expression of spiritual insight, for faith does come from God. It is "given" unto men to believe (Phil 1:29), and faith is "obtained" through the righteousness of God (2 Pet 1:1). It is truly "by grace" that we have believed (Acts 18:27). The Spirit affirms of the Lord Jesus that it is "Through Him you believe in God" (1 Pet 1:21). This is why those with spiritual understanding give thanks to God wherever faith is perceived.

One might well ask the question, "What are churches noted for today?" It is our prayer that it will be their faith. I have been in many an assembly where unbelief was more evident than faith. However, we are part of a Covenant that makes no allowance for unbelief.

I gather the faith of these good brethren was of note among the people of God, for they alone would recognize it as faith. Only those who treasure faith speak favorably of its presence in others.

The world is not able to receive those who are not its own. As the Lord said, "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you"

(John 15:19). If any servant of God seeks to please men, he abruptly ceases to serve God at precisely the point he seeks to please men. As it is written, "If I were still trying to please men, I would not be a servant of Christ" (Gal 1:10).

DIVINE WITNESS AND SERVICE

"For God is my witness, whom I serve with my spirit in the gospel of his Son, that without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers." Being "joined" to the Lord and in fellowship with His Son (1 Cor 1:9), Paul speaks of God with a refreshing familiarity. Rather than shrinking back from the living God with a smitten conscience, he calls the Lord to be his witness—to attest that what he is saying is precisely the truth.

GOD IS MY WITNESS

A similar expression, and even stronger, is found in Second Corinthians 1:23. "Moreover I call God as witness against my soul, that to spare you I came no more to Corinth. Not that we have dominion over your faith, but are fellow workers for your joy; for by faith you stand."^{NKJV} I give this text because of its contrast with the one in Romans. Because of the sorrow brought to the Apostle by the conditions at Corinth, he "came no more to Corinth." He calls God to witness "against" his soul is this is not the truth. In the case of the Romans, he desires to come to them because of the report of their faith, and calls God to attest that this is the truth.

This is a form of oath, frequently used in Scripture. In his indictment of Israel, Moses called heaven and earth to witness against them (Deut 4:26; 30:19; 31:28). Other prophets used a similar oath (Mic 1:2; 2 Chron 18:13).

In so speaking, God Himself is summoned to attest to the truth of what is being said. It is not that such a summons causes God to hear what is affirmed. All things are "naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do" (Heb 4:13), whether we acquiesce to it or not. This expression joyfully submits to Divine appraisal, knowing it will confirm the truth of what is being said. Only one with faith can speak in such a manner.

In a practical way, this manner of speaking confirms the deep interest of the Apostle in the believers in Rome. He was not writing out of a mere sense of obligation, or in the role of a Kingdom official, as it were. In becoming a laborer together with God (1 Cor 3:9), the heart of Paul was knit to his work.

SERVING WITH MY SPIRIT

Paul now draws attention to what he is doing. He is not communicating as a mere friend, or as a member of the same religious institution. Nor, indeed, is he writing as an authority who has "dominion" over their faith (2 Cor 1:14). He is writing as a servant of the Lord—a representative of the Lord of glory.

Paul speaks of God with a refreshing familiarity. Rather than shrinking back from the living God with a smitten conscience, he calls the Lord to be his witness—to attest that what he is saying is precisely the truth.

Serving

The word "serve" is an elevated word, and refers to the kind of service introduced under the law—the ministry of the priests in the Tabernacle service. This particular word is used twenty-two times in the New Covenant Scriptures, and is always associated with worship (Matt 4:10; Lk 1:74; 2:37; 4:8; Acts 7:7,42; 24:14; 26:7; 27:23; Rom 1:9,25; Phil 3:3; 2 Tim 1:3; Heb 8:5; 9:9, 14; 10:2; 12:28; 13:10; Rev 7:15; 22:3). The only reference to idolatrous worship is found in Romans 1:25: "who worshiped and served the creature more than the Creator."

The point to be seen is that "serve" does not refer to unwilling or forced servitude. It is not the mere carrying out of an obligation. This is the New Covenant manner of "worship" – serving the Lord. It is putting His interests above our own because of our acceptance by Him. Such service parallels that of the priests of old, who moved about in the holy place accomplishing the service of God" (Heb 9:6 ").

With my spirit

Paul's service is not by rote, or lifeless routine—something altogether too common in the average church. The "spirit" in a person is their essential part. Just as the body is the most outward part of our being, so the "spirit" is the most inner part of us. The verse could also read "with my whole heart," as it does in the NIV, or "with everything that I am in Christ Jesus. "

Here is the part that is instructed by God. As it is written, "there is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding" (Job 32:8). Pharaoh recognized this type of knowledge in Joseph. He said of him, "Forasmuch as God hath showed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art" (Gen 41:39). This was also said of the four young men who were taken in the Babylonian captivity (Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah): "God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams" (Dan 1:17).

This type of tutelage and understanding cannot come through mere mental disciplines or erudition. Just as the Spirit "bears witness with our spirit," confirming we are the children of God (Rom 8:16), so God teaches our spirits the realities of the Kingdom of God. When that essential part of our persons drives our service to God, we are serving him with our spirit.

This is a higher form of service. It involves faith, confidence, and persuasion. The love of Christ compels such service, and the threat of rejection or militant opposition cannot quench it. Not only is it higher, it is the only acceptable service.

There is no pretension in the person serving God with their spirit. This is not professional duty, but service from the heart. Tragically, there is such a thing as a religious mask—a form of pretension that finds one speaking for God, yet not possessing a compelling love for Him. In Christ, such ostentatiousness is altogether out of order and unacceptable. In a world of professionalized clergy and institutionalized religion, this is difficult for some to receive. Nevertheless, it is the truth. God will accept no service that is not “with” our “spirit.”

The service of reference is mentioned in the third chapter of Philippians—one of the hallmark descriptions of the saints of God. “For we are the circumcision, who worship God in the Spirit, rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh” (Phil 3:3). Why is the Holy Spirit mentioned in Philippians, and Paul’s spirit in Romans? It is because the Holy Spirit is the Divine Animator, as it were, of the human spirit. He is the One who imparts the life and the understanding. Because it flows out of the human spirit, our service is also said to be “with my spirit.” This is a glorious confirmation of the reality of our reconciliation to God.

SERVING IN THE GOSPEL

See with what spiritual precision the Apostle speaks. His service is not in the “church,” but “in the Gospel.” This expression means he served God by preaching, or declaring the Gospel. Some versions accent this perspective. “I serve with my whole heart in preaching the gospel of his Son.”^{NIV} “Whom I serve with my spirit by announcing the gospel of his Son.”^{NRSV} “Whom I serve in my spirit in the preaching of the gospel of His Son.”^{NASB}

The Gospel has no power for the individual until it is preached, or declared. But when it is declared, or articulated, it is attended by Divine power to such an extent that the Gospel itself becomes “the power of God UNTO salvation” (Rom 1:16). It is not the power of God to effect political change, marital stability, or economic soundness. Rather, it is the means by which men are extricated from sin, become righteous before God, and have their names written in heaven. That is what “salvation” is all about, and Paul was serving that interest.

Tragically, there is such a thing as a religious mask—a form of pretension that finds one speaking for God, yet not possessing a compelling love for Him. In Christ, such ostentatiousness is altogether out of order and unacceptable.

By serving “in the Gospel,” Paul’s ministry contributed to the salvation of men—not only initially, but in bringing them to perfection. The ministry of “the Apostle of the Gentiles” has absolutely no relevance in a business environment, a military strategy, or a political agenda. All of those are centered in this world. The Gospel comes from another realm, and prepares men for “the world to come.” O, that God would raise up a mighty army of Gospel proclaimers in our generation!

Paul had not only believed and embraced the Gospel, he was a participant in it. Having died and been buried with Jesus, He was now living with Him. For him, the “newness of life” had carried him into a labor that focused on the Gospel, and compelled him to speak and write it.

THE GOSPEL OF HIS SON

Behold with what care the Spirit speaks! There is such a thing as “another gospel: which is not another” (Gal 1:6-7). Some declare a gospel of “health and wealth.” Others announce a prosperity gospel, while some speak of the Gospel of the Holy Spirit. There are even some who entertain a gospel of the Sabbath day. Even further down the ladder of spiritual delusion, there are benighted souls who deliver a gospel announcing God is pledged to solve all of our problems.

The Record

However, the real Gospel concerns the Son of God, Jesus Christ our Lord: “the Gospel of His Son.” This is nothing less than the salient and good news of the accomplishments and current ministry of Jesus in the behalf of men. John called it “the record that God gave of his Son,” identifying it even further: “And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son” (1 John 5:10-11).

The word “record,” as used in First John, is a powerful one. Other versions use the word “witness” NKJV, NASB or “testimony.” NIV, NRSV

Interestingly, the literal meaning of the word used here (marturian) is “evidence given,”^{Strong’s} or “objective information given in proof of something.” Herein is a marvelous truth. The powerful evidence of the Person, accomplishments, and ministry of Jesus is not to be found in a vision. It is not hidden in the archaeological evidences uncovered by men. Here is evidence, or proof, of a higher order.

The corroborating evidence of God Himself, concerning His Son, is a message! It is the Gospel, or good news, of His Son. As simplistic as that may sound, it is far from artificial or on the surface of thought. Here is God’s proof of His Son—a proclamation!

The centrality of the Gospel of God’s Son makes provision for the entrance of faith. It is the message through which faith is brought to us. As it is written, “How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things! But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report? So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Rom 10:14-17).

PRAYING WITHOUT CEASING

"God is my witness . . . that without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers." I vividly recall when it first registered upon my spirit that this passage did not fit well into my theology. I had accepted the view that the primary interest of God was the lost, and that the loftiest concern of the servant of God was those outside of Christ. It all sounded innocent enough, and, given a twist or two, some Scriptures seemed to support the view. Our Father certainly did "so love the world," providing for its salvation (John 3:16). Jesus did come "to seek and save the lost" (Lk 19:10), and admonished His disciples to pray "the Lord of the harvest," that He would "send forth laborers into His harvest" (Matt 9:38). These are precious affirmations.

The ministry of Jesus and Apostolic doctrine confirm the concentration of Divine power and interest is devoted to the church—the body of Christ! The most insightful teaching of Jesus was directed to His disciples. His most sensitive disclosures of the truth were to them. The Holy Spirit is given to the people of God, and He bears witness with their spirit, and intercedes for them (Rom 8:16,26). The Lord Jesus "ever lives to make intercession for them" (Heb 7:25). Every spiritual gift is given for the edifying of the body (Eph 4:11-16; 1 Cor 12:7). The body of Christ is appropriately described as "the fulness of Him that filleth all in all" (Eph 1:23). It is the repository for everything Jesus has to give.

This is not unrelated to our subject. Paul calls God to witness that he "always" makes mention of the brethren in Rome in his prayers. It is as though he said that mentioning the believers in Rome was appropriate in all of his prayers. Among other things, that reveals the churches were a prevailing concern for the Apostle. He was the "Apostle to the Gentiles," and took that to include edifying believers among all nations.

We will find in this Epistle that as soon as Paul heard of the faith of a body of people, he was compelled to edify them, building them up in the most holy faith. He brought them into his prayers, and into his purpose and calling as well.

How Paul Prayed

We are not left to conjecture concerning the content of Paul's prayers for believers. They follow the same pattern of our Lord's final intercessory prayer upon earth: "I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given recorded in the third chapter of that book. "That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God" (3:16-19).

The ministry of Jesus and Apostolic doctrine confirm the concentration of Divine power and interest is devoted to the church—the body of Christ! The most insightful teaching of Jesus was directed to His disciples. His most sensitive disclosures of the truth were to them.

The Colossians

Upon hearing of the faith and love among the Colossian brethren, Paul set himself to pray for them. He shares with us the focus and substance of those prayers. "For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; that ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God; strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness" (Col 1:9-11).

The Thessalonians

An Apostolic prayer for the Thessalonians is also recorded for our edification. "Wherefore also we pray always for you, that our God would count you worthy of this calling, and fulfil all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power: that the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Thess 1:11-12).

Hebrew Believers

Another poignant prayer is recorded in the book of Hebrews. It is beautiful in both expression and content, revealing the Kingdom manner. "Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is wellpleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen." (Heb 13:20-21).

me; for they are thine" (John 17:9). These are a "special people" to God, and there to the Apostle as well. Any lack of regard for believers reveals a lack of regard for God.

The Ephesians

The letter to the Ephesians contains words almost identical to those of our text: "Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints, cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers" (Eph 1:15-16). And how did he pray for those brethren? "That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him: the eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power" (Eph 1:17-19).

Another prayer for the Ephesians is

Summation

The manner of Paul's prayers for the people of God are evident, bringing great solace to the hungry heart. They reveal the will of God for His people, and the type of prayers that are in order for all saints everywhere in our time. A brief summation of those prayers will serve to prepare us for the remainder of this book.

- S That God would give them the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Himself.
- S That God would open the eyes of their understanding, or heart.
- S That they would know the hope to which God has called them.
- S That they would see the rich glory of God's inheritance in the saints.
- S That believers would comprehend the greatness of the power that is devoted to them.
- S That they would be strengthened with might by God's Spirit in the inner man.
- S That Christ would dwell in their hearts

- by faith.
- S That they would be rooted and grounded in love.
- S That they would comprehend the marvelous extent of their salvation.
- S That they would know the love of Christ which surpasses knowledge.
- S That they would be filled with all the fulness of God.
- S That they would be filled with the knowledge of His will.
- S That they would walk worthy of the Lord, pleasing Him in all things.
- S That they would be fruitful in every good work.
- S That they would increase in the knowledge of God.
- S That they would be strengthened with all might according to His glorious power.
- S That they would possess all patience, or endurance, and longsuffering WITH joyfulness.
- S That God would count them worthy of calling.

- S That God would fulfill all of the good pleasure of His goodness in them.
- S That God would fulfill the work of faith with power in them.
- S That the name of Christ would be glorified in them.
- S That God would make them perfect in every good work, to do His will.
- S That God would work in them what is pleasing in His sight.

Although by no means an exhaustive list, there are twenty-three things prayed for the church—the body of Christ. They are all pointing in the same direction: perfection in Christ Jesus. Stated another way, being prepared for the marriage supper of the Lamb (Rev 19:7).

Throughout this book, its doctrinal tone will confirm the Apostolic agenda is to make the saints of God strong in the faith. This circumstance should encourage us to also seek the spiritual welfare of the those who are in Christ Jesus.

THE REQUEST

"¹⁰Making request, if by any means now at length I might have a prosperous journey by the will of God to come unto you." Not only does Paul confirm he prays for the people of God, he will also make known the nature of some of his prayers for himself. In both views—prayers for the saints and prayers for himself—we will see the centrality of the Kingdom of God in his thinking. Other than things directly related to his Apostleship, we know very little about the personal circumstances of Paul. Because his life was not wrapped up in himself, but in the Lord, he spoke and wrote little of himself. Yet, from time to time, and as it related to his Apostolic office, he would share some of his personal requests to God. They were all made within the context of salvation, and Paul's role in the eternal purpose of God.

MAKING REQUEST

Humility is seen in this statement: a "request" was made. While I do not desire to linger on this point, a request is "made" when it is thoughtfully presented to the Lord. Job spoke of ordering his "cause" before the Lord, presenting his case as a spiritual lawyer (Job 23:4). The mind is engaged in such a request, and desires are matched, or laid alongside, the "good and acceptable, and perfect will of God" (Rom 12:2). It is never acceptable to pray independently of the will of God, or purely out of selfish interests. "Making" a request involves an acute awareness of

Notice the manner in which the Lord urges us to pray. It confirms that our requests are presented with the salvation of God in mind. "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all

There is a spirit of self-interest that has risen to dominate the average church. Like a defiling deluge, it has washed God-consciousness from the people. The church is now being inundated with preaching that is filled with psychological jargon and worldly perspectives. Prayers for the church rarely rise above the level of mere earthly circumstance. It is a tragic situation, and has not occurred suddenly.

this when coming before the Lord of glory.

God has invited His people to make requests of Him. Even though God knows the hearts of men, having intimate knowledge of all of their thoughts (Matt 12:25; Heb 4:13), He still urges us to make our requests "known" to Him—articulating them in His presence.

understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus" (Phil 4:6-7). Our prayers are to be bundled with thanksgiving, thus emphasizing that we pray as recipients of the good things of God. The conferment of the "peace of God" upon us, and the maintenance of good hearts and minds "through Jesus Christ" corroborate that God works all things with a mind to the salvation that is in Christ Jesus “with eternal glory.”

I have taken the time to briefly state these things because of the times in which we live—or the generation we have been given to “serve” (Acts 13:36). There is a spirit of self-interest that has risen to dominate the average church. Like a defiling deluge, it has washed God-consciousness from the people. The church is now being inundated with preaching that is filled with psychological jargon and worldly perspectives. Prayers for the church rarely rise above the level of mere earthly circumstance. It is a tragic situation, and has not occurred suddenly.

The relevance of this condition should be very apparent to us. God simply will not work for the advantage of those who are basically unaware of Him. For that reason, doubt and unbelief disqualify prayer. That is why requests are to be made “with thanksgiving”—with an acute sensitivity to His working and blessing.

We will find that the request Paul makes has absolutely no relevance outside of the purpose of God. It is made within the context of God’s purpose and will, and with the spiritual advantage of the saints in mind. Not only had Paul, like all believers, been raised to sit with Christ in heavenly places (Eph 2:6), he conducted his life from that vantage point.

BY ANY MEANS

The phrase “by any means” is frequently found in Scripture (1 Kgs 20:39; Psa 49:7; Lk 10:19; Acts 27:12; Rom 1:10; 11:14; 1 Cor 8:9; 9:27; 2 Cor 11:3; Gal 2:2; Phil 3:11; 1 Thess 2:3). Other versions read, “by some means”^{NKJV}, “at last . . . the way may be opened”^{NIV}, “somehow by God’s will”^{RSV}, “if in any way”^{Darbys}.

The expression emphasizes the uncertainty of life—from our point of view. God does not lay life’s plans before us, detailing every aspect of them—not even for an “the Apostle to the Gentiles.”

Solomon wrote, “Boast not thyself of to morrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth” (Prov 27:1). Speaking through James, the Spirit reminds us to conduct our lives with this in mind. “Ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away. For that ye ought to say, If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that” (James 1:14-15). The Lord Jesus confirmed that this condition should not occasion feelings of futility or remorse. While we neither know nor control tomorrow, it is all in the hands of the Lord of glory. “Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof” (Matt 6:34).

We will find that the request Paul makes has absolutely no relevance outside of the purpose of God. It is made within the context of God’s purpose and will, and with the spiritual advantage of the saints in mind.

The phrase “by any means” reveals the joyful optimism of faith. Paul had made his request known unto God. He knew all to well that the details of his future had not been revealed to him. His heart had also taken hold of the fact that “with God all things are possible” (Matt 19:26), and that every available means are under His control. He saw no need to speculate about HOW his request could, or would be, processed by God. Rather, he left the matter with the Lord, willing to accept “ANY means” in the fulfillment of his request. I do not question that he remained alert in his spirit for the fulfillment of his request, not expecting it to happen independently of his perception.

While doctrinally a small matter, this phrase—“if by any means now at last”^{NKJV}—reveals the joyful anticipation of faith, and the settled determination to leave matters in the hands of the Lord. Faith does affect the entire person.

A PROSPEROUS JOURNEY

Precisely what is “a prosperous journey?” It is not a journey attended by prosperity, as ordinarily conceived. Rather, it is a journey that is culminated—one in which Paul finally reaches Rome. Other versions highlight this perspective. “ . . . now at last I may find a way in the will of God to come to you.”^{NKJV} “ . . . I may somehow at last succeed in coming to you.”^{NRSV}

There is thus a two-fold sense in which the journey would be “prosperous.” First, that it would be one meeting with the approval and blessing of God (“by the will of God”). Secondly, that his desire to see the brethren at Rome would at last be granted. The beloved Apostle thought in terms of his Apostleship: faithfulness to the One who called him, and benefit to the people of God.

BY THE WILL OF GOD

Here is an expression that is not common in our day. We live in the midst of a society that has been cultured to think primarily of itself. Self interests are commonly sought above the will of God. There is even a strain of theology that teaches men it is a sign of unbelief to submit our desires to the will of God. Those embracing this nonsense imagine that demanding from God is an indication of strong faith, and that submitting to His will is a sign of unbelief. The supposition is too foolish to recognize or embrace.

The Apostle does not hesitate to submit his request to God’s will. He allows for the possibility that there is a higher agenda than his own, and that God’s will supercedes his own. The Kingdom of God does not resolve around the desires of men—even holy men. We must make it our business not to lose sight of this.

God’s will is the highest expression of will and purpose. No person is ever at a disadvantage to prefer and submit to God’s will. David, for example, “served his own generation by the will of God” (Acts 13:36). Paul himself was “called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God” (1 Cor 1:1). The Lord Jesus “gave Himself for our sins, that He might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father" (Gal 1:4). If the will of God was sufficient to effect our salvation, we may rely implicitly upon it in the details of life, and in our desires as well.

The will of God is the environment in which we can stand "perfect and complete" (Col 4:12). The whole of life in Christ is lived "to the will of God" (1 Pet 4:2). His will is what we seek to "do" (Eph 6:6; Heb 10:36). Faith causes His will to become our will. It knows the will of God is "good, and acceptable, and perfect"

(Rom 12:2). Submitting to God's will is always right, never placing the believer in a spiritual disadvantage. That truth penetrates every level of life—even down to desiring to go to a specific city and be with a particular people, as revealed in this very text.

A NOBLE OBJECTIVE

"For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established."

Much of the religion of our day is marked by carnal casualness. It is not centered in the good work of the Lord, and has little to do with edification or bringing spiritual advantage to the people of God. This way of thinking is not the manner of the Kingdom, and should not be dignified as though it was.

In his desire to come to Rome, Paul is not thinking of mere camaraderie, or the promotion of some personal agenda. His reasoning is within the perimeter of the Gospel and His call to declare it to the nations.

A LONGING

A "longing" is a strong compulsion. Just as the flesh has powerful lusts, the renewed heart has strong longings or desires. For whatever it is worth, the word "long" comes from epipoqw, which means "Have a great affection, yearn for someone, zealously yearn over." Barclay-Newman Paul expressed a similar yearning to the Philippians: "For God is my record, how greatly I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ" (Phil 1:8). This, then, is a compelling desire that produced determinations and strong prayers to God within the Apostle. This is not the expression of a sense of mere duty, or the urge to fulfill an official capacity. This is the very heart of Paul.

The Apostle did not express this desire to everyone. In fact, it is only expressed to the churches in Rome and Philippi. He also spoke to Timothy after this manner: "Greatly desiring to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy" (2 Tim 1:4). The recollection of some churches caused grief and deep concern in the heart of Paul. "I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain" (Gal 4:11). "For first of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear that there be divisions among you; and I partly believe it" (1 Cor 11:18). But there were some who had endeared themselves to Paul by their faith toward God and love to all saints.

In this case, the imparting of a spiritual gift does not refer to transferring a spiritual aptitude to someone else: i.e., enabling some of the brethren in Rome to prophesy, work miracles, etc. Rather, it speaks of sharing with the brethren the things he had received from God. The word "impart" does mean to "give over or share," Barclay-Newman and is so translated by the NRSV and NIV. Paul desired to share with them what he had received.

It is the prerogative of God's people to be a blessing to all who hear of them. There are some believers who, when they are remembered, cause great longings to rise in their brethren. They are a source of encouragement and consolation to those who live by faith.

Paul desired to minister to the saints what God had ministered unto him. This, of course, is the purpose for spiritual gifts—to profit the people of God through them. As it is written, "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to each one for the profit of all" NKJV (1 Cor 12:7). It is, as stated in another place, "that the church may receive edification" NKJV (1 Cor 14:5).

In stating his desire, Paul confirmed his delight in determining to "excel to the edifying of the church" (1 Cor 14:12). The one imparting spiritual benefit to the people of God through the exercise of the gift given to him, is a good steward of God's grace. As it is written, "As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God. If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen" (1 Pet 4:10-11).

In my lifetime I have confronted relatively few people who have a driving compulsion to share what they have received from God with His people. This is always an evidence of a lack of faith in God and love for His people. The same Spirit who imparts spiritual gifts (1 Cor 12:4-9) will, if not quenched, lead the individual to the proper use of them.

It is the prerogative of God's people to be a blessing to all who hear of them. There are some believers who, when they are remembered, cause great longings to rise in their brethren. They are a source of encouragement and consolation to those who live by faith.

IMPARTING SOMETHING SPIRITUAL

Paul's longing was not driven by a desire for mere friendship in the flesh. He was seeking the spiritual advantage of the people of God—bringing them to maturity in Christ. He was also endeavoring to fulfill His appointed ministry.

It is always appropriate to minister to the earthly needs of God's people, doing good to them (Gal 6:10). It is even better to minister to their spiritual needs, thus preparing them to live triumphantly in this world, and gain the world to come.

THE OBJECTIVE OF THE IMPARTATION

And what was the objective sought by the Apostle sharing with them what he had received? It was not simply the fulfilling of an obligation. By the grace of God, Paul had become a participant in the very work of God. His objectives, therefore, aligned with those of God Himself. His ministry to them was "to the end ye may be established."

The word "established" is a key word representing a fundamental aspect of life in Christ Jesus. The word means to set something up so it remains immovable. It is the word used to describe Christ's determination to lay down His life a ransom for many. "And it came to pass, when the time was come that He should be received up, He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem" (Lk 9:51). His determination was so evident the Samaritans did not receive Him "because His face was as though he would go to Jerusalem" (Lk 9:53). His mind was made up, and He could not be moved from His intention.

Establishment – A Necessity

The establishment of the people of God is like that. It means their minds are firmly fixed on the goal, and they cannot be moved from it. They will stand the tests of flood and desert, of drought and fire. Those who are established do not vacillate. They do not waver, and are not double minded. They are reliable, consistent, and faithful under all circumstances.

If you have been in Christ for any length of time, you know how exceedingly rare such individuals are—spiritually established individuals. The early churches, for example, were "established in the faith" by the ministry of Paul and those with him (Acts 16:5). Timothy was sent to the Thessalonians "to establish" them so they would not be "moved" by the "afflictions" they were enduring (1 Thess 3:2).

When Jesus told Peter Satan had desired to sift him, and that He was praying his faith would not fail, He said, "and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren" (Lk 22:32). This ("strengthen") is the same word, and precisely the same concept. Strengthening the brethren is establishing them in the faith, making them solid and immovable in Jesus. It involves feeding the sheep.

It is always appropriate to minister to the earthly needs of God's people, doing good to them (Gal 6:10). It is even better to minister to their spiritual needs, thus preparing them to live triumphantly in this world, and gain the world to come.

God Himself is devoted to this work. As it is written, "But the Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you, and keep you from evil" (2 Thess 3:3). And again, "But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you" (1 Pet 5:10). And again, "And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you: To the end he may stablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints" (1 Thess 3:13). And again, "Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, Comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work" (2 Thess 2:17).

The Lord has made abundant provision for the stability of His people. He has provided gifts to perfect, or mature them through edification. The determined outcome is that they "be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into Him in all things, which is the Head, even Christ" (Eph 4:11-15).

No Provision for Juvenility

There is no provision in Christ for remaining in a state of spiritual juvenility.

I am painfully aware that the contemporary church receives stagnant disciples without the slightest twinge of conscience—but God does not. God is not glorified by unstable and ungrounded believers. The Lord Jesus is not honored by followers who are unable to stand, lacking firmness of conviction and the full assurance of faith. These conditions are a reproach to God, and negate any profession of faith. If God has determined we "be no more children," and has made abundant provision that we no longer remain in that state, who is the person who can justify remaining there?

In nature, an eventual lack of maturity is an abnormality, and is so recognized. But in the realm of the Spirit, it is more than an abnormality. In nature, it is possible to be born with deficiencies that make maturity impossible. However, this is not the case in the Spirit. In Christ we become a "new creation," and there are no flaws in that new creation. It progresses from "glory to glory," being changed into the image of Christ by the Spirit of God (2 Cor 3:18). Those who do not eventually mature in Christ are a living contradiction of the very nature of spiritual life. Their status is totally unacceptable.

Thus, through the Spirit, Paul has set the tone for this Epistle. It will contribute to the stability of the brethren. A message will be presented that will ground them in the faith, and enable them to stand against the wiles of the devil. His aim is to make the saints better, their faith stronger, and their hope clearer.

I cannot leave this section without emphasizing that every ability the Lord places in the body is designed to contribute to the stability of His people. If what a person is doing in the name of the Lord brings no stabilizing influence to the saints, it has not come from God. It does not deserve to be associated with Jesus. At the best, it is a fabrication of men, and at the worst a delusion of the devil. Both, of course, are totally unacceptable. It is no wonder that the Apostle extended himself to establish the saints of God. He knew the manner of the Kingdom.

THE POWER OF MUTUAL FAITH

"¹²That is, that I may be comforted together with you by the mutual faith both of you and me." While the Apostles were placed "first" in the church (1 Cor 12:28), they are not above the church. They are a part of it, and thus were advantaged by those to whom they ministered. In great tenderness, Paul confesses to this marvelous arrangement. Not only was he desirous to deliver to them what he had received, he was intent upon receiving benefits from them.

It is the nature of faith to bring glory to God and advantage to His people. Just as surely as faith honors God and Christ, bringing great delight to them, it also builds up the saints, bringing edification to them. There is a consistency in this Divine arrangement that never fails. The only way to displease God is to cease to live by faith. Likewise, the only way to fail to bring spiritual benefit to the brethren is to cease walking by faith.

COMFORT

"Comfort" is one of the premier ministries of the Kingdom of God. The word "comfort" is a large one meaning to encourage, help, console, cheer up, and relieve from sorrow. It presumes warfare, opposition, and fleshly frailty. Interestingly, the word "Comforter" is applied to the Holy Spirit Himself (paraklhton—John 14:16,26; 15:26; 16:7). It is said of the early church, they "were edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Spirit were multiplied" (Acts 9:31). In John 14:16, Jesus refers to the Holy Spirit as "another Comforter," indicating that Jesus Himself was also a "Comforter." In fact, He is called "the Consolation (paraklhtsin--Comforter) of Israel" (Lk 2:25). In addition, God Himself is declared as He "Who comforteth us in all our tribulation" (2 Cor 1:4). Thus, the entire Godhead is involved in our comfort, encouragement, help, and consolation. Also, the Scriptures are affirmed to have been written that we "that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope" (Rom 15:4). Additionally the person who prophesies "speaks edification and exhortation and comfort to

It is no wonder, therefore, that this is such a significant ministry in the body of Christ. Those who have no interest in ministering comfort and encouragement to the people of God have no reason to expect Divine support in their labors.

The Need for Comfort

Rather than being a spiritual luxury, comfort is a necessity. Our status as strangers in this world (1 Pet 2:11), together with the opposition of Satanic hosts (Eph 6:12), and a contrary law within our members (Rom 7:23), require the refurbishment of our energies.

Faith is in sharp conflict with the entire world order. As a result it tends to wane without refreshment. The most holy of men have been brought to a status where they "were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that" they even "despaired even of life" (2 Cor 1:8). When one "fights the good fight of faith," there is constant need for building up, encouragement, and comfort. This is one of the many reasons contention among the people of God is so wrong. It tends to tear down rather than build up.

A Different Word

The word used here is different—a sort of compound word. The KJV translates it "comforted together" (sumparaklhtai). Other versions read, "encouraged together"^{NKJV, NASB} and "mutually encouraged."^{NIV, NRSV} The idea is that of reciprocation—each helping the other.

This is a form of spiritual synergy. Synergy is combined action where one part helps the other part to work better. Our fleshly bodies are an example of this type of Divine design. Thus an Apostle helps the church at Philippi to fulfill their ministry, while a representative from that church helped the Apostle to fulfill his ministry (Phil 2:25-28; 4:18-19).

In this way, the body of Christ is "tempered together" (1 Cor 12:24). The members are, by Divine determination, dependent upon one another. No one of them or group of them possesses all of the things available to them in Christ Jesus.

There are some things that must be "ministered" through those in fellowship with the Head, Jesus Christ. As it is written, "the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God" (Col 2:19).

When Paul says "comforted together," he is speaking of nourishment being ministered and knitting together resulting.

MUTUAL FAITH

The means through which "comforting together" is accomplished is "mutual faith." Thus, the faith of one saint builds up and encourages the faith of another saint. The faith of an Apostle not only beyond the point where advantage can be realized from other members of Christ's body. It is important to observe we are not dealing with religious novelties here. Mutual edification is not denominational camaraderie or sectarian fraternity. The edification and strengthening of God's people cannot be achieved by fleshly means. It can only come through faith, which is our sole means of accessing "spiritual blessings in heavenly places."

A valid congregation of believers is engaged in mutual spiritual improvement. A more firm grip upon eternal verity is submitted to its expressions. Who is able to discern the harm brought upon believers by expressions of unbelief! How many times I have heard such words Jonathan, on the other hand, went to David in the woods "and strengthened his hand in God" (1 Sam 23:16). Upon beginning his leadership in Israel, David did the same with his soldiers. "And now may the LORD show kindness and truth to you. I also will repay you this kindness, because you have done this thing. Now therefore, let your hands be strengthened, and be valiant" ^{NKJV} (2 Sam 2:6-7). In the early church, Judas and Silas, "themselves being prophets also, exhorted and strengthened the brethren with many words" ^{NKJV} Acts 15:32). When Paul and company visited the churches, they "were strengthened in the faith, and increased in number daily" (Acts 16:5). This is the manner of the Kingdom.

In my judgment, there is altogether too much activity in the churches that does not leave believers strengthened, edified, or comforted. Much of the dialog I hear these days is nothing more than academic prattle, or crudely stated opinions. It does not produce spiritual tenacity in the people of God, or lift them up above smoke of the battle field. It is too close to the earth and too far from heaven. It relies upon men, and not upon God.

God has spoken too frequently and with too much clarity for their to be any ignorance on this subject. Edification is a fundamental activity among the faithful, and is not to take second place to other interests. "Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another" (Rom 14:19). "Let every one of us please his neighbor for his good to edification" (Rom 15:2). "Wherefore comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do" (1 Thess 5:11). This is the type of activity Paul longed for.

A valid congregation of believers is engaged in mutual spiritual improvement. A more firm grip upon eternal verity is promoted. Hearts are encouraged to fight the good fight of faith and lay hold on eternal life. Heaven is made more clear, and earth is pushed into the background.

strengthens the faith of a Roman believer, the faith of the Roman believer fortifies the faith of an Apostle. What a marvelous arrangement, and it is available to all!

While measures of faith differ (Rom 12:3), the nature of faith remains the same. There is at least a twofold ministry of faith. First, it appropriates the grace of God, bringing us into God's favor enabling us to appropriate righteousness (Eph 2:8; Rom 3:22,25; 4:5). Second, it equips the child of God to function within the body of Christ to the benefit of all. This particular verse refers to the latter ministry of faith. Paul will open this truth more extensively in the twelfth chapter. The bulk of my comments will be reserved for that section.

No ministry, however lofty, puts one promoted. Hearts are encouraged to fight the good fight of faith and lay hold on eternal life. Heaven is made more clear, and earth is pushed into the background. Where these things are not, to some degree, taking place, the gathering is actually pointless.

There are no activities in the Kingdom that are unrelated to readying people to stand before God and receive an eternal inheritance.

There is a word declared in Joshua 14:8 that is appropriate here. Joshua compares the effect of the unbelieving spies on the people of Israel. "Nevertheless my brethren who went up with me made the heart of the people melt, but I wholly followed the LORD my God." ^{NKJV} This is what unbelief does—it weakens those

UNFULFILLED PURPOSE

"¹³Now I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oftentimes I purposed to come unto you, (but was let hitherto,) that I might have some fruit among you also, even as among other Gentiles." Grace had so enveloped the heart of the apostle that he rarely thought of anything but fulfilling his ministry—at least that is what comes across in Scripture. In a day of divided interests and lukewarmness this is a strange occurrence. Actually, it was not all that common in the first century. But zeal is still the standard for the people of God because that was the manner of the Savior. Isaiah prophesied of the Lord Jesus, that He "was clad with zeal as a cloak" (Isa 59:17). When Jesus "dwelt among us," upon beholding His manner, "His disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up" (John 2:17; Psa 69:9; 119:139). Now the Apostle declares how he has partaken of that Divine nature. Just as Jesus approached his ministry with zeal, so Paul entered into his ministry with zeal.

IGNORANCE UNWANTED

There are aspects to life in the Spirit that are public, and are not to be hidden. This contradicts the course of nature, which tends to make people more private in the intentions of their heart. Already Paul has stated his fervent desire to come to the brethren at Rome (1:10-11). But he does not want them to suppose this was but a casual intention, easily forgotten, or placed into the background of thought when the door was not immediately opened. Many an unstable soul has had noble desires, only to abandon them because they could not be fulfilled when they desired. I have often pondered what marvelous opportunities have been passed by only because individuals have not been willing to "wait upon the Lord," thereby renewing their strength (Isa 40:31).

PURPOSING

Those who imagine that prayers are only to be offered once, or that intentions must not be valid if they cannot be fulfilled quickly, are simply wrong. Paul states he had "planned many times to come" to the brethren in Rome.^{NIV} He did not conclude that a failure to fulfill those plans indicated they were out of order.

I ought to point out, however, that Paul was sensitive enough to the Lord to recognize when his intentions were not in synch with the Divine agenda. Once, when they "tried to go into Bithynia" the Holy Spirit "did not permit them" (Acts 16:7). We are not told precisely how the Spirit forbade them, but it is evident they were able to recognize His direction. But such was not the case with his intentions to go to Rome. That was a consistent desire of the apostle, and was neither rebuked nor forbidden by the Lord. I can only conclude, therefore, that Paul was in fellowship with the Savior in this desire.

Several years before Paul actually came to Rome, he expressed his deep desire to do so. After remaining in Asia for two full years, "Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, I must also see Rome" (Acts 19:21). Around four years later, on a boat destined to be dashed to pieces in a storm, Jesus had appeared to Paul saying, "Be of good cheer, Paul; for as you have testified for Me in Jerusalem, so you must also bear witness at Rome" (Acts 23:11). It was not until over two years later that Paul finally arrived in Rome (Acts 28:16), a little over two years after he wrote this Epistle.

It seems to me that "purposing" is a vital part of our labors in the Lord. After all, our salvation is associated with Divine "purpose" (Eph 1:9,11; 3:11; 2 Tim 1:9; 1 John 3:9). It is certainly in order to set our minds and hearts on some honorable Kingdom work, and to be intent about it. In fact, there is a rich fellowship to be had with our Lord in determining to fulfill our ministry in the body of Christ.

Do you have something you have "purposed" to do for the Lord? Is there some honorable work you have longed to do, that will bring glory to the Lord and a sense of fulfillment in your ministry? Do not abandon that purpose easily. Learn from our text to keep godly intentions, expressing them often in your prayers.

HINDRANCE

The most noble of intentions can meet with obstacles. Circumstance can raise, what seems to be, impenetrable walls between you and your desire. The phrase "let hitherto" means "hindered until now."^{NKJV} Later, Paul will say he had "been much hindered from coming to" the Romans (Rom 15:22). He does not say it was not yet time to come, but that he was hindered from coming. He does not say the Lord had told him not to come, but that he was hindered from coming.

The word "hindered" means prevented, forbidden, or withstood. Those who imagine their faith will invariably break down barriers instantly, need to examine this text carefully. We live in a spiritual environment where our intentions can be delayed, and even thwarted altogether. This is partially involved in "troubled on every side," "perplexed," "persecuted," and "cast down" (2 Cor 4:7-9). While faith ultimately triumphs over these things, we are not to imagine they will not occur.

Once Paul wrote to the Thessalonians, "Therefore we wanted to come to you; even I, Paul, time and again; but Satan hindered us" (1 Thess 2:18). However, even though "Hope deferred makes the heart sick," yet when at last "the desire comes, it is a tree of life" (Prov 13:12).

Satan hinders in a number of ways. He has an allotted degree of power in nature. The fact that Paul was "shipwrecked" three times, and that a deadly serpent burst out of a bundle of sticks, fastening itself on Paul's hand, were not mere happenstance (2 Cor 11:25; Acts 28:3). You may remember Satan's assault against Job. It involved robbery, fire from heaven, a great wind from the wilderness, and sore boils from the sole of Job's foot to the crown of his head (Job 1:15,16,17,19; 2:6-7). When the devil sifted Peter, he employed the questioning of some women (Matt 26:69-73).

There is a wide arsenal of weaponry that our adversary employs against us. He certainly cannot operate independently of God, to Whom he is responsible. However, from time to time, he is granted leave to put us to the test, and he does so aggressively. From a higher vantage point, this is the proving our faith. In such tests the extent of our trust is revealed, and the firmness of our resolution proved.

So it was with the Apostle. Time and again he sought to go to Rome. His commission as an Apostle compelled him to do so. The nature of the Gospel urged him to remain firm in his resolve. And the good word about the faith of the brethren in Rome also encouraged him to maintain his cause. Satan was neither strong enough or wise enough to stifle that desire. Faith gained the victory for Paul. It will do the same for you!

Another Type of Delay

But there is one other aspect to Paul being hindered that should be considered. Some delay was the result of preaching in other areas. "The Gentiles in Antioch and Syria and Cilicia" also needed to be tutored in the manner of the Kingdom, and thus Paul was sent there with Barnabas (Acts 15:22).

The Apostle zealously entered into his labors, all the while keeping his desire to go to Rome. He was willing to submit his will to the King, and wait for Jesus to use the key of David to open the appropriate door. He is a notable example for us all!

FRUIT

The longing of the Apostle was related to His Apostleship. He was not seeking mere friendship in the flesh. How poignantly he states the matter: "that I might have some fruit among you also, even as among other Gentiles." There was more to Paul's calling than preaching—although that was at its heart. Results were also involved. I have often heard people say "we are not held responsible for results." There certainly is an element of truth in that saying, but it

The Lord Jesus declared that His Father would remove, or take away, "every branch" in Him that "beareth not fruit" (John 15:2). He further asserted that the glory of God and our status as disciples hinged upon fruitbearing.

Fruitfulness is not an option— something that may or may not be possessed. Unfruitfulness, Jesus declared, is the result of the word of God being "choked," or suffocated by the cares of this world is too small to contain the whole of the matter. God has an intense interest in fruit, being glorified by it.

Fruitfulness Is Not an Option

Fruitfulness is not an option— something that may or may not be possessed. It is something provided for by Jesus, and earnestly sought by God. He is glorified by fruitfulness, and dishonored by a lack of it. Unfruitfulness, Jesus declared, is the result of the word of God being "choked," or suffocated by the cares of this world (Matt 13:22). It is a trait ascribed to "the works of darkness," and with which we are to have "no fellowship" (Eph 5:11). The people of God are to be reminded to maintain good works "that they be not unfruitful" (Tit 3:14). In His mercy, God has provided resources so that we will "neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Pet 1:8). However, NO provision has been made for NOT being fruitful! It appears to me that this is almost unknown among many who profess the name of Christ. Fruitlessness is altogether too common in the churches.

"Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples" (John 15:8). We are not, therefore, considering something that is inconsequential.

Fruit Among the Gentiles

While Paul's ministry was not limited to the Gentiles, they were the primary target of his labors. Now, he desired to "reap some harvest among"^{NRSV} the Romans, as well as other Gentiles. The zeal with which he labored in the Lord's harvest is a singular phenomenon in Scripture. By his own confession, and in tribute to God's grace, he "labored more abundantly than they all" (1 Cor 15:10).

Even though the fruit was gathered for the Lord, yet Paul calls it his own. I assume this is because he really recognized no other work as worthy of his commitment than that to which the Lord had called him. He was a "laborer together with God" (1 Cor 3:9), and did his reaping in the name of the Lord. Too, as a good steward, he was garnering sheaves to give back to the Lord.

THE GOSPEL DEBT

"¹⁴I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise." The power and effectiveness of faith can be seen in the perspectives and resolves it produces. Its superiority over a system of Law is thus seen. "The Law," the Spirit affirms, "is not of faith" (Gal 3:12). Consequently, it did not produce the kind of resoluteness revealed in our text. People "under the Law" were thus described by God: "Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men" (Isa 29:13). They remained aloof from God, even though He had spoken to them, directed them, and "hewed them by the Prophets" (Hos 6:5). But this is not the case with those brought into a covenantal relationship with God through Jesus Christ. This verse (14) particularly confirms this to be true.

INDEBTEDNESS

To be a "debtor" is to be under obligation. Further, the obligation is correct, offering no alternative but submission. The idea presented is that of one who has received something of great magnitude, and consequently is indebted.

It requires only a modicum of thought to see viewing oneself as a "debtor" is not a response of the flesh. Flesh perceives no indebtedness to God, and therefore neither honors nor serves Him. Further, its servitude to sin is not perceived as slavery, but as a willing and right preference.

The indebtedness of which the Apostle speaks is an explanation of his desire to have "fruit" among the believers in Rome (verse 13). That desire was not driven by a fleshly view of them, or mere professional interest. There were higher motives.

The Nature of the Gospel Message

The nature of the Gospel itself produces indebtedness among those receiving it. It is a proclamation for "every creature" (Mk 16:15). It offers a Divine resolution to a universal dilemma. The forgiveness (Eph 1:7), peace (Rom 5:1; 10:15), reconciliation (2 Cor 5:18-20), and justification (Acts 13:39) it announces are for "all men" (Rom 5:18). It announces a Savior that is for "all men" (1 Tim 4:10). That circumstance made Paul "a debtor."

The Nature of the Apostolic Office

The Apostolic office, by its very nature, involves serving the interests of another. The word "Apostle" means, an ambassador of the Gospel, one commissioned by Christ, a messenger that is sent.^{Strong's} Such were sent by Jesus to preach and to bear fruit. As our Lord said, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain" (John 15:16). That commission made Paul "a debtor."

The Condition and Nature of Man

The condition of man, created by the entrance of sin and death, requires the hearing of the Gospel. "All have sinned" (Rom 3:23; 5:12), and therefore require the Good News of salvation for sinners. It makes little difference whether sinners are refined or crude, cultured or barbaric, they are all in a condemned state. That detail made Paul "a debtor," and he gladly accepted that status.

GREEKS AND BARBARIANS

The words "Greeks and barbarians" does not refer to where people lived, but to the language they spoke. "Greeks" were not people living in Greece, but people speaking the Greek language, which was they were candidates for the Gospel.

Paul, seeing the true nature of the Gospel, and possessing the knowledge of God, preached the Gospel to those noted for thought, and to those not distinguished by their thinking. He knew the Gospel announced Divine provision for the learned and the unlearned.

Those who are most cultured and refined need the Gospel, as well as those who are more savage and barbaric. Sophistication and crudeness are only veneers, or surface distinctions.

A REMARKABLE GOSPEL

I have long marveled at the greatness of the Gospel of Christ. Over the years I have witnessed its transforming power in those who have believed it, embracing the Christ it proclaims. With joy I have witnessed people lacking formal training and disciplined thought become remarkably clear thinkers and articulate speakers. Without being soiled by the philosophies of men, I have seen them learn to read, speak, and reason upon the things of God. Their transformation was so thorough and effective, that those unacquainted with their past could not believe they were once "unlearned and ignorant."

I have also witnessed the most cultured and disciplined minds humbled by their acceptance of the Gospel. I have seen the learned become as fools, willing to abandon worldly wisdom in favor of the wisdom of God. Under the powerful influence of the Gospel, they came to depend upon God without any reliance whatsoever upon their natural abilities and powers. Their transformation was equally impressive, so that people no longer thought of them in regard to their fleshly attainments.

Scriptural Examples

We have examples in Scripture of men of disciplined thought being joined to those considered to be "unlearned and ignorant." Moses, for example, "was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds" (Acts 7:22). Amos was "a gatherer of sycamore fruit" (Amos 7:14).

Daniel, in the king's court, was one in whom was found "an excellent spirit, knowledge, understanding, interpreting dreams, solving riddles, and explaining enigmas"^{NKJV} (Dan 5:12). John the Baptist came from the wilderness, then the universal language. Under the reign of Alexander the Great, commencing in 336 B.C., Greek was promoted as the universal language. It was associated with culture and refinement.

When, therefore, Paul says he was debtor to the "Greeks and to the Barbarians," he means to the cultured and refined, as well as uncouth and uncivilized. Those who are most cultured and refined need the Gospel, as well as those who are more savage and barbaric. Sophistication and crudeness are only veneers, or surface distinctions. Beneath those distracting appearances, "there is no difference, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom 3:23). Therefore, whether on the barbaric island of Melita (Acts 28:1-2), or in the Areopagus, "in the midst of Mars Hill," surrounded by the most astute thinkers of the world (Acts 17:22, Paul was indebted to preach the Gospel.

WISE AND UNWISE

This is another way of looking at "Greeks and Barbarians." The first view is of their culture, or appearance. The second is of their attainment. The Greeks were noted for their worldly wisdom. They had a precise language, books, libraries, and a host of philosophers as well. The Barbarians did not have these things. Philosophers and writings did not come from their ranks. Yet, with the "wise,"

"clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey" (Mark 1:6).

Paul was a Pharisee, "brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers" (Acts 22:3; 23:6). Peter and John from the writings and words of these men? Has there ever been a person who read the Gospel of John, First Second and Third John, and First and Second Peter, who concluded from those writings they were former fisherman? From the writings of Moses, would anyone conclude he had been raised in the house of effectiveness of their ministry, was not owing to their natural abilities or former culture. The powerful influence of the Gospel and their affiliation with the Living God made them what they were! That is the nature of the Gospel. It elevates the lowly, and humbles the proud. It brings bread and water to all who thirst, regardless of their earthly pedigree. This single fact has had a profound impact upon my own spirit.

The greatness of these men, and the effectiveness of their ministry, was not owing to their natural abilities or former culture. The powerful influence of the Gospel and their affiliation with the Living God made them what they were!

The Scripture establishes that outside of Christ, here are no real distinctions before God: "there is no difference." Also, fleshly distinctions are not recognized in Christ Jesus, who is the heart of the Gospel. In Him "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female" (Gal 3:28).

were fisherman, noted among the religiously elite for being "unlearned and ignorant" (Matt 4:18-23; Acts 4:13).

Who is the person who, after being acquainted with the words of Moses, Amos, John the Baptist, Paul, Peter, and John, will dare to decide from their words who was learned and who was unlearned? Which individual will venture to say who was educated and who was not, judging Pharaoh, subjected to all of the wisdom of Egypt? Or, that Amos was a farmer, or John the Baptist someone living in the wilderness? Had we not been told Luke was a physician, would anyone have concluded that to be the case from the books of Acts and Luke, which he wrote? To ask these questions makes their answer very apparent.

The greatness of these men, and the

The awareness of these circumstances, among other things, made Paul a "debtor" to everyone. Each of us have good reason to thank the Lord this is true. Only grace makes real distinctions among men—and those relate exclusively to our ministries within the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:28-29), and personal fellowship with Christ Jesus.

DETERMINED TO PREACH

¹⁵*So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also.*" There is a remarkable amount of religious folklore that has been associated with preaching the Gospel. Some examples are, "No one should hear the Gospel twice until everyone has heard it once." "The Gospel is only preached to sinners, believers are taught." "You never preach to believers, only to unbelievers." All of these, and more, have been driven by an institutional agenda, and have not one syllable of support from the Word of God. This verse will confirm this to be the case, and that, as we may expect, with great power.

AS MUCH AS IS IN ME IS

This is an extension of the thought expressed in the previous verse—that he is a debtor to all men. The word "So" is explanatory, as though he said, "That is why." Others versions read, "hence" ^{NRSV}, "That is why" ^{NIV}, "Thus" ^{NASB}. Because, therefore, he is a "debtor," Paul now speaks of his determination.

While it may appear cumbersome, the expression "as much as in me is" has great meaning. Again, different translations unveil something of this meaning. "Hence, my eagerness" ^{NRSV}. "That is why I am so eager" ^{NIV}. "Thus, for my part, I am eager" ^{NASB}. "As far as it depends upon me" ^{Darby}.

In this expression we behold the yielded heart of the Apostle. No part of his real person stood against this resolve: "as much as in me is." He was not struggling with whether the resolve was right or not: "as much as in me is." Just as surely as he loved the Lord with all of his heart, and soul, and mind, and strength, so he was fully devoted to the execution of God's will: "as much as in me is." He had been transformed by the renewing of his mind (Rom 12:2), and thus was eager to fulfill his ministry: "as much as in me is."

This sort of resolution brings great glory to God. When the heart is settled and solid about doing the will of God, the Lord Jesus is honored. May there be more of this type of attitude among those who are serving the Lord.

READINESS

The cry of faith is "I am ready!" Every place faith dominates, readiness is made known. Readiness means forward in spirit, predisposed, and willing. ^{Strong's} It includes the idea of willingness and eagerness—chomping at the bit, so to speak. It is more than simply being prepared, like a speaker being ready to make a speech. Readiness means the matter is dominating the mind and pulling at the heart. It involves thinking about the matter, and looking intently for the opening of the door of opportunity by the Lord of hosts. Distracting issues have been settled, and any doubts resolved.

On one occasion, Paul expressed his preparation for both living and dying in these words, "I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 21:13). Another example of Paul's readiness was expressed in relation to his imminent death. "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith" (2 Tim 4:6). That is an excellent epitaph for every believer to seek.

Faith prepares us for the work of the Lord. It also produces the strong confidence required to enter into it with zeal. It was reliance upon the Lord that contributed mostly to Paul's readiness, not mere academic preparation.

PREACHING THE GOSPEL TO BELIEVERS

And what is it that Paul was eager, willing, and prepared to do? It was "to preach the gospel to you who are in Rome also." Mind you, they were already "beloved of God" and "called to be saints" (v 7). Their faith had been reported "throughout the whole world," being held in high regard (v 8). Paul even looked forward to being encouraged by their faith

(v 12). There were a host of notable spiritual leaders among them (chapter 16). Yet, Paul is eager to come and "preach the Gospel" to them!

Let us forever put to rest any notion of relevance to those who have believed and obeyed it. They have only been introduced to the Gospel. The best of us have but entered the vestibule of the "glorious Gospel of the blessed God" (1 Tim 1:11). The Good News of Jesus is an exceeding

Let us forever put to rest any notion that a single member of the body of Christ has passed beyond the necessity of hearing the Gospel. The pit from which such a notion has been lifted was created by a restricted and lifeless view of the Gospel of Christ.

that a single member of the body of Christ has passed beyond the necessity of hearing the Gospel. The pit from which such a notion has been lifted was created by a restricted and lifeless view of the Gospel of Christ. No less than sixty-five times, churches and believers are told of the Gospel (Rom 1:1,9,15,15; 10:15,16; 11:28; 15:16,19,20,29; 1 Cor 1:17; 4:15; 9:12,14,16,18; 15:1; 2 Cor 4:4; 8:18; 9:13; 10:14,16; 11:7; Gal 1:7,11; 2:5,7,14; 3:8; 4:13; Eph 1:13; 3:6; 6:15,19; Phil 1:5,7,12,17,27; 2:22; 4:3,15; Col 1:5,23; 1 Thess 2:2,4,8,9; 3:2; 2 Thess 1:8; 2 Tim 1:8,10; Phile 13; Heb 4:2). The centrality of these references are evident.

Do not imagine the Gospel has no more large room, worthy of extensive and prolonged inquiry..

If there is one prevailing deficiency that exists in the modern church, it is its woeful ignorance of the Gospel. That unfamiliarity is the fountain from which unbelief, contention, and wayward conduct have come. Wherever the knowledge of the Gospel is lacking, so are all other matters relating to life and godliness. There is a great need in our time for powerful preachers of the Gospel—for men with insight and inner compulsion to open to the church what God has accomplished for them in Jesus. Refreshment and stability for the saints will result.

CONCLUSION

A BRIEF SUMMATION

The powerful interrelationships of Scriptural truth are evident in this passage. With an expertise that can only come from the Spirit of God, the Apostle has woven a beautiful tapestry. He has included God, Christ, and the Spirit. The Scripture, the Prophets, and the Gospel have been mentioned. Christ Jesus has been seen as the Master sending His servant, the Son of God, and the Seed of David. He is affirmed to have been declared to be the Son of God with power through His resurrection from the dead. Paul has presented himself as called by God, designated as an Apostle, and separated to declare the Gospel. He affirms he received grace and Apostleship for the purpose of producing among all nations obedience that comes from faith.

The brethren in Rome have been identified as the beloved of God and called to be saints. Grace and peace have been conferred upon them from both the Father and the Son. Thankfulness to God is expressed for the faith of the brethren in Rome, and that it is spoken of throughout the world. God is called to witness that Paul is serving the Lord with his spirit, and in the Gospel of His Son. Prayer to God is mentioned as the means used to obtain a prosperous journey to the brethren at Rome. The Apostle expresses a profound desire to bring some advantage to the saints in Rome, and to be encouraged by their faith. Because of his indebtedness to all men, Paul desires to have some fruit among those in Rome, greatly desiring to come and preach the Gospel to them. And that is just his

introduction!

ONLY IN THE LORD

Where can such remarkable versatility be found except in the Lord Jesus Christ? Where is it possible to develop such dexterity of thought, save in the power of the Holy Spirit? We have been wafted into higher realms, and prepared for heavenly tutelage. Great things will be brought to us in this most holy environment.

FLESH EXCLUDED

The total absence of any fleshly values should be apparent to every one. Absolutely no significance is placed upon mere human accomplishments or natural abilities. Rather, the Apostle is moved to bring us into the place where God is "all in all" (1 Cor 12:6; 15:28; Eph 1:23).

MANNER AND CONTENT

It is true that God is "is above all, and through all, and in you all" (Eph 4:6). It is also true that "all things are of God" (2 Cor 5:18), and Jesus Christ is "Lord of all" (Acts 10:36). Both the manner and content of the Apostolic writings reflect these things with remarkable consistency. They never gave undue glory to man, or suggested there was such a thing as too much glory for God.

I realize these things are most evident to us when, in our hearts and minds, we are in the heavenly places. But these things are not apparent to every one wearing the name of Jesus. There is a remarkable amount of Christianity all around us that reasons after the manner of men, and ascribes glory to the flesh. It is enough to say that such things ought not to be.

REAL PROFITABILITY

Real spiritual profitability is experienced by faith and in heavenly places. It is always true, "the flesh profiteth nothing" (John 6:63). This is "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be" (Rom 8:7). However men may choose to refine their natural abilities, it is still true, "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (1 Cor 2:14).

These realities are why the Scriptures speak as they do. It is why they appear meaningless and unprofitable to those who are in the flesh. It is also why holy men of God never accommodated themselves to the flesh. Those spoke and wrote with an acuteness awareness of the God to whom they were accountable, and the Gospel that had been entrusted into their care.

The book of Romans is a rich resource of spiritual insight. But we must be "in the Spirit" to receive it. The subjects addressed in it will be delivered from a lofty perspective. The faith of the Roman brethren demanded that this be the case—and ours does as well. If we will come to the truth in recognition of the poverty of nature and the power of the Spirit, we will soon be receiving the understanding and perspectives required to fight the good fight of faith. God is greatly to be praised for having supplied such an abundance of truth! He is, after all, a God that is "abundant in goodness and in truth" (Ex 34:6). Truly, there is, as the song says, "manna all around."

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 3

THE GOSPEL AND LIVING BY FAITH

1:16 For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. 17 For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith. (Romans 1:16-17, KJV)

INTRODUCTION

In Christ, there are central matters that are to dominate our hearts and minds. Secondary things must never be approached or handled as though they were primary, and primary things are not to be addressed as though they were secondary. As simplistic as that may appear, it is staggering how much contemporary Christianity majors on minors, and minors on majors. This is never insignificant, and always yields disastrous results. Those who choose to relegate Divinely emphasized things to the background of their thinking will not escape the judgment of God. God will be “justified” in all of His “sayings” (Rom 3:4). Those “sayings” are characterized by an emphatic tone—an undeniable accent.

institutional emphasis that made little of the Gospel, the righteousness of God, and believing. The Gospel was acknowledged to be the power of God, yet was rarely preached. The righteousness of God was hardly mentioned at all, and believing was viewed more as a commandment than the appointed means of remaining alive before God. I entertain these memories with great sorrow and shame, thankful that grace has retrieved me from their delusive power.

The passage before us focuses on three fundamental Kingdom realities. One is objective, and the others are subjective, dealing with our experience. The first is “the Gospel of Christ,” which is a Divine source. The second and third are “the righteousness of God” and “faith,” or believing, experienced by the child of God. Throughout the Scriptures these are always primary. They are never treated as though they were inconsequential, and are never represented as “not as important” as other things. This has not always been as apparent to me as it is now. I was an inadvertent victim of an

The person enamored of a religious institution does not view the Gospel as an ongoing necessity. It can easily be forgotten, or upstaged by church, theological, social, or economic issues. Very rarely is the Gospel of Christ a subject of exposition in an institution-centered setting.

The institutional mind-set also sees righteousness, if ever considered, as a goal more than a possession. Believing is considered noble, but is largely taken for granted, with a greater stress being placed on obedience, or strict adherence to a moral code. This is largely done from Mount Sinai, with little regard to the grace of God.

I do not mean to be overly critical on these matters, but feel it is imperative to briefly address them. I have personally experienced the impact of such an approach, and can testify to the difficulties that attend recovery from its debilitating affects. In this lesson, I will endeavor to capture the revealed view of the Gospel of Christ, without any regard whatsoever of its impact upon historical or contemporary religious thinking. I make no apology for this approach. In fact, I am compelled to labor with everything that is within me to see the Gospel from heaven's point of view. I see no other view as desirable or profitable.

We will find the Gospel has a direct relationship to the conferment of God's righteousness upon men, and men having faith in God. Where the Gospel of Christ is not preached or known, faith will, at the very best, be weak. Further, there will be no lively awareness of acceptance with God, or the experience of His righteousness. These things, and more, make the passage before us a critical one.

I AM NOT ASHAMED

^{1:16a} For I am not ashamed . . .”

This is a most wonderful expression of confidence: “I am not ashamed.” Further, to declare it without hesitancy is evidence of a faith that has apprehended the truth. Shame, in this case, does not mean remorse, or a sense of guilt, as Adam and Eve felt after their transgression (Gen 2:25). Here it means a fear of embarrassment, or expecting to be proved false. This type of shame produces a reluctance to speak, through fear of being humiliated.

I should suppose that nearly every believer has, at some time, wrestled with this kind of shame. It is what constrains a person to keep silence around those who are intimidating—like the armies of Israel before Goliath. Such shame comes from a lack of “the full assurance of faith” (Heb 10:22). While such shame is not of itself sinful, unless it is addressed and overcome, it will have eternal consequences. Thus our Lord said, “Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of Me and of My words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when He cometh in the glory of His Father with the holy angels” (Mark 8:38).

CONFLICT WITH THE WORLD

In saying He is “not ashamed” of the Gospel of Christ, the Apostle is acknowledging that it is in sharp conflict with the wisdom of this world. Elsewhere, the Spirit affirms this is, indeed, the situation. “For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God” (1 Cor 1:18). The prophets foretold that God would decimate the wisdom of this world, showing it to be poverty-stricken and impotent. “For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent” (1 Cor 1:19; Isa 29:14; Jer 8:9). The NIV reads, “I will destroy the wisdom of the wise; the intelligence of the intelligent I will frustrate.”

I should suppose that nearly every believer has, at some time, wrestled with this kind of shame. It is what constrains a person to keep silence around those who are intimidating—like the armies of Israel before Goliath.

If God has “destroyed the wisdom of the wise,” who is the person who will attempt to resurrect it? Where is the individual who will imagine he can buttress the Gospel of Christ with one toothpick of worldly wisdom? It cannot be done, and where it seems to have been done, men have only been deceived.

When God says He has “brought to nothing the understanding of the prudent,” He means there is no capacity there to take hold of the things of God. It can neither discover nor support what is revealed in the Gospel of Christ.

The Supreme Display

The height of folly found in the world's wisdom relates directly with the Gospel of Christ. In sending His Son into the world—God manifest in the flesh—God brought down the seeming bastion of worldly wisdom. The Spirit puts it this way. “Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to nought: but we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory” (1 Cor 2:6-8).

By saying “the princes of the world,” the Spirit is viewing the world's wisdom in its most refined and developed state. He is not speaking of governmental princes, but of those expert in the thought patterns of this world. They came from the philosophical, political, and religion sectors of humanity. The early church referred to this conspiracy as “Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel,” declaring they “were gathered together” against Jesus, whom God had anointed (Acts 4:27).

In Jesus, the Divine nature was displayed in a more precise and extensive manner than ever before. The testimony of creation, as impressive as it was (Psa 19:1-5), was but a faint whisper when compared to the life of Jesus of Nazareth. Our Lord was “a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst” of a people who had been cultured to receive Him (Acts 2:22; Rom 9:1-4). And what did they do? They “crucified the Lord of glory!”

They did not do this dastardly deed as barbarians, but as those who professed to have reasoned out the matter. They condemned Him to death upon the basis of their perverted understanding of the Law, and on the basis of expediency (Mark 14:64; John 11:49-50). Pilate thought it wise to consent to the matter because of political convenience (Mark 15:15).

God’s Assessment of the Situation

With remarkable clarity, the Spirit speaks on this subject, justifying those who rely solely on the power of the Gospel. “For since in the wisdom of God the world through its wisdom did not come to know God, God was well-pleased through the foolishness of the message preached to save those who believe. For indeed Jews ask for signs, and Greeks search for wisdom; but we preach Christ crucified, to Jews a stumbling block, and to Gentiles foolishness, but to those who are the called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God”^{NASB} (1 Cor 1:21-24).

Neither Greek philosophy nor Jewish theology brought people to know God. Indeed, it was both that philosophy and theology that moved men to crucify the Lord of glory!

In His infinite wisdom, God knew the poverty of the human mind apart from Revelation. His Word is sufficient proof that this is the case. But to render humanity totally without excuse, He displayed the abysmal deficiency of worldly wisdom by saving men entirely apart from it. He ignored the Jewish quest for signs, and the Greek’s search for wisdom, choosing to save men through a message—a revealed message.

The Natural Man Is Destitute

“The natural man,” cultured or not, “does not receive the things of the Spirit have led Egypt astray in all that it does, as a drunken man staggers in his vomit”^{NASB} (Isa 29:11-15).

Paul, knowing the Gospel and firmly relying upon it, is not ashamed to declare of God, for they are foolishness to him; nor can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 2:14). When it comes to comprehending the things of God, the Spirit affirms the situation with no uncertainty: “verily every man at his best state is altogether vanity” (Psa 39:5).

The Spirit does not let this matter go, as though it was of little consequence. “For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, ‘He catches the wise in their own craftiness’; and again, ‘The LORD knows the thoughts of the wise, that they are futile’”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 3:19-20). What God said of the most astute world thinkers in Isaiah’s time can be said of our day as well. “The princes of Zoan are mere fools; The advice of Pharaoh’s wisest advisers has become stupid. How can you men say to Pharaoh, ‘I am a son of the wise, a son of ancient kings’ Well then, where are your wise men? Please let them tell you, And let them understand what the LORD of hosts Has purposed against Egypt. The princes of Zoan have acted foolishly, The princes of Memphis are deluded; Those who are the cornerstone of her tribes have led Egypt astray. The LORD has mixed within her a spirit of distortion; They the message that is unapproved by the world. He will not engage in a lengthy dialog to show the Gospel is harmonious with the wisdom of this world, for it is not. Nor, indeed, does He attempt to prove it according to the world’s criterion. All such efforts, however valuable they may appear, are a manifestation of shame. Those who attempt to show that the Gospel of Christ is not at a fundamental variance with the wisdom of the world bring no honor to Jesus by their efforts. Further, their attempts will not accomplish the work of God. That, among other things, is why Paul is “not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ.” His lack of shame is not a mere sectarian statement.

NOT UNREASONABLE

It is not that the Gospel is unreasonable, and it must never be presented as though it is. In it, Divine reason is presented, which is the only valid reasoning. The “wisdom of this world” is a species of reason that has been repudiated by God. Consequently, it must also be disowned by us. In its place, the Lord offers a higher form of reason that is based upon faith. This reasoning is both satisfying and precise—so much so, that none who see it are ashamed to declare it. It is, in every way, superior and solitary.

THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST

^{1:16b} . . . of the gospel of Christ . . . Here is spiritual precision: “the Gospel of Christ.” It is not the gospel of the church, or of the Spirit, or of anything else finding its focus in this world. Concerning its origin, it is “the Gospel of God” (Rom 1:1). Considered from the standpoint of what it brings, it is “the Gospel of your salvation” (Eph 1:13), the “Gospel of peace” (Rom 10:15), and the “Gospel of the grace of God” (Acts 20:24). But when it comes to the substance of the Gospel itself, it is the announcement of the Person, accomplishments, and present ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE GOSPEL “Good”

The Gospel is “good news.” It is not a good moral discipline, or a good law, but good “news.” It is inherently “good”—that is its nature. This is a message that speaks of benefits, as compared with requirements.

The Gospel is “GOOD news” in view of the circumstance brought on by sin. It is not “good” because of its impact upon economics, social circumstances, or political conditions. Those elevating such matters to undue importance will, by that very emphasis, abandon the Gospel. They will no longer perceive it as the ultimate good news.

There is no flaw in this message—it is “good.” It is like a thoroughly good tree, from which only good fruit can come (Matt 7:17-18). Nothing inherently bad can come from the Gospel of Christ. There is nothing about the news that it brings that is of itself morose or sullen. No matter how you look at it, it is good. It is beneficial and it is righteous, partaking of the character of God Himself. This is what makes opposition to the Gospel so reprehensible.

“News”

The Gospel is not a good idea, or a good philosophy. It is good “news”—a message that is beneficial, sound, and wholly sufficient. The word translated “Gospel” is an exceeding large one (εὐαγγέλιον—eu-ang-gel-ion). It emphasizes the proclamation of the message, as well as the nature of the message itself. This is the “good news” of something achieved by someone else in the behalf of humanity. It is a message that is not subject to change or updating.

The Gospel is a Divine announcement. It is the broadcast or report of something that has occurred in the behalf of men. It is not the announcement of possibilities, but of accomplishments. Unlike worldly news, this is news that never becomes obsolete or useless. When proclaimed in the twenty-first century, it is as fresh and powerful as it was when announced in the first century. The trends and preferences of the world have no effect upon the Gospel. New discoveries by the sons of men do not impact upon the Gospel, alter its message, or nullify its power. Nor, indeed, do they add any weight to it.

Entirely by Revelation

The Gospel in its entirety has come by revelation. Not a single syllable of the Gospel is a conclusion, or the result of human reason. Over and over this is emphasized in the Scriptures. From the standpoint of the benefits announced in the Gospel, they are said to be “revealed” to men “through the Spirit” (1 Cor 2:10). The point of this particular affirmation is not who the men were through whom the revelation came, but the NECESSITY of the revelation: i.e., “Eye has not seen, nor ear heard, Nor have entered into the heart of man The things which God has prepared for those who love Him” (1 Cor 2:9). Unless God had undertaken to make them known to men there is no possible way they could have been perceived.

The great benefits announced in the Gospel were formerly hidden from men. As it is written, “the mystery of Christ, which in other ages was not made known to the sons of men, as it has now been revealed by the Spirit to His holy apostles and prophets: that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, of the same body, and partakers of His promise in Christ through the gospel” (Eph 3:5-6).

The “Gospel of Christ” could never have been compiled by men or angels. No created intelligence, regardless of its superiority, could have constructed the Gospel, even with the prophecies of the holy prophets in hand. It had to be revealed from heaven, through the Holy Spirit—and that at Divine discretion.

Hidden to the Prophets

There were prophecies of the coming Messiah, and some details about what would occur when He came—but they were all very obscure. The prophets through whom those revelations came were intrigued by what they said, but were not granted a clear understanding of them. As it is written, “Of this salvation the prophets have inquired and searched carefully, who prophesied of the grace that would come to you, searching what, or what manner of time, the Spirit of Christ who was in them was indicating when He testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glories that would follow. To them it was revealed that, not to themselves, but to us they were ministering the things which now have been reported to you through those who have preached the gospel to you by the Holy Spirit sent from heaven; things which angels desire to look into” (1 Pet 1:10-12).

Among the sons of men prior to Christ, the “holy prophets” rank the highest. Although they were inspired by God, yet they were not able to decipher the grandeur or the details of the central message they proclaimed. The message was so extensive, and so replete with spiritual advantages, they could only introduce it. And, even their introduction to it had to be revealed.

The word “Gospel,” therefore, includes these key elements.

- † It is essentially a good report, bringing glad tidings to the hearers.
- † It is fundamentally an announcement, not an outline of acceptable conduct, or a moral code of law.
- † It is a message that would never have been conceived or known had God not revealed it.

To my knowledge, those in Christ Jesus are the only people on the face of the earth who have a good message to proclaim. In fact, they are the only ones with a message—a report of glad tidings. All other religions, including many that profess to be from Christ, have a word that is nothing more than a set of rules and procedures. There is no essential news in their avowals. They have nothing to declare, affirm, or announce.

It should be apparent why Paul was not ashamed of such a marvelous Gospel. It towered above Grecian philosophy and the traditions of the Jews. It even dwarfed the Law, which was “given by Moses” (John 1:17), and “ordained by angels in

- † He was made to be sin for us (2 Cor 5:21).
- † In His death, He was cursed by God (Gal 3:13).
- † He gave His life a ransom for many (Matt 20:28).

The death, burial, and resurrection of Christ are not intended to be an intellectual definition, to be handled as though it were a mere creed. Rather, it is a summation of the Gospel, which itself, contains many declared details.

the hand of a mediator” (Gal 3:19).

CHRIST

The Gospel is “good news,” or “glad tidings,” because of what it says, not how it is said, or who says it. It contains the message of “the Christ, the Son of the Living God.” He is the Subject of the Gospel. As soon as Jesus Christ is relegated to the background, the Gospel is no longer being preached, and thus Divine power “unto salvation” is no longer being experienced. This accounts for much of the spiritual impotence that is found among professed believers.

At this point, men are tempted to be too simplistic. They imagine, for example, that First Corinthians 15:3-4 is an exhaustive definition of the Gospel. “For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; And that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day according to the Scriptures.” This is not intended to be an intellectual definition, to be handled as though it were a mere creed. Rather, it is a summation of the Gospel, which itself, contains many declared details.

I am compelled to show the glory of these three cardinal points by pointing out the matters related to them. A remarkable number of insights are contained in them.

Christ Died for Our Sins

Christ’s death, necessitated because of “our sins,” is the subject of Divine elaboration. All of the points shown below are inherent in that death, and are the subject of extensive Divine exposition.

- † He bore, or carried, our sins in His body on the tree (1 Pet 2:24).

- † He took away the sins of the world (John 1:29).
- † He gave His life for the sheep (John 10:11).
- † No man took His life from Him, He laid it down that He might take it up again (John 10:17-18).
- † He purchased the church with His blood (Acts 20:28).
- † We are justified freely through the redemption of Christ (Rom 3:24).
- † God has set Jesus forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood (Rom 3:25).
- † God commended His love to us in the death of Jesus (Rom 5:8)
- † We are justified through His blood (Rom 5:9).
- † We are reconciled to God through the death of His son (Rom 5:10).
- † We are buried by baptism into Christ’s death (Rom 6:3-4).
- † God condemned sin in the flesh of His Son (Rom 8:3).
- † God did not spare His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all (Rom 8:32).
- † In His death, Christ is our Passover, sacrificed for us (1 Cor 5:7).
- † We are bought with the price paid in Christ’s death (1 Cor 6:20).
- † If One died for all, then all are dead (2 Cor 5:14).
- † He died that we might no longer live unto ourselves, but unto Him who died for us (2 Cor 5:15).
- † He gave Himself to deliver us from this present evil world (Gal 1:4).
- † In His death, He redeemed us from the curse of the Law (Gal 3:13).
- † We have redemption through His blood, even the forgiveness of sins (Eph 1:7).
- † We are made nigh unto God by the blood of Christ (Eph 2:13).
- † In His flesh, Jesus abolished the enmity, even the law of commandments

- contained in ordinances (Eph 2:15).
- † He gave Himself to sanctify and cleanse the church (Eph 5:26).
- † Christ died in order to present His church to Himself without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing (Eph 5:27).
- † He made peace through the blood of His cross (Col 1:20).
- † In the cross, He plundered principalities and powers, making a public display of them (Col 2:15).
- † In His death, he delivered us from the wrath to come (1 Thess 1:10).
- † He died for us that whether we wake or sleep, we might live together with Him (1 Thess 5:10).
- † He gave Himself to redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a special people, zealous of good works (Tit 2:14).
- † He tasted death for every man (Heb 2:9).
- † Through His death, He destroyed the devil (Heb 2:14).
- † He obtained eternal redemption for us (Heb 9:12).
- † Through Christ’s blood, our conscience is cleansed, or purged, from dead works (Heb 9:14).
- † Through His death we receive the promise of an eternal inheritance (Heb 9:15).
- † The New Covenant, or “will,” has been sanctified by the blood of Christ (Heb 10:10).
- † In offering Himself in death, Jesus has perfected forever all who are sanctified (Heb 10:14).
- † Through His blood, we enter into the holiest place—the very presence of God—Heb 10:19).
- † The way to God has been dedicated through Christ’s death (Heb 10:20).
- † Through His blood, we are washed from our sins and made kings and priests unto God (Rev 1:5-6).

He Was Buried

The burial of Christ was not simply a technicality. He was active during the time He was buried. Too, it provided time to assure that He really did die, tasting death for every man in the fullest sense of the word. Here is also a point at which unity with Christ is realized.

- † In His burial He was “numbered with the transgressors” (Num 53:12).
- † While His body was in the tomb, He preached to the spirits that were disobedient in the days of Noah (1 Pet 3:18-20; 4:6).

- † In our baptism, we are “buried with Christ” (Rom 6:4; Col 2:12).
- † The burial of Christ was “the sign of the prophet Jonah” to an adulterous generation (Matt 12:39-40).
- † His grave was made with the wicked, and the rich as well (Isa 53:9).
- † The woman with the precious alabaster box of ointment anointed Jesus for His burial (Matt 26:7-12).
- † The grave was not capable of holding the body of Jesus (Acts 2:29-26-32).

He Rose Again

The resurrection of Christ is the engine of our salvation—the source of its power. Over and over this is affirmed in Scripture.

- † In regeneration, we are united with Him “in His resurrection” (Rom 6:5).
- † The desire to know the power of His resurrection dominates those living by faith (Phil 3:10).
- † Jesus was declared to be “the Son of God with power, by the resurrection from the dead” (Rom 1:4).
- † We are begotten again to a living hope “by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead” (1 Pet 1:3).
- † The resurrection of Christ is what validates our baptism (1 Pet 3:21).
- † The resurrection of Christ validated His death, and inducted Him into His intercessory ministry (Rom 8:34).
- † We are reconciled by His death, and saved by His (resurrection) life (Rom 5:10).
- † He is able to save us because, being raised from the dead, He “ever lives to make intercession” for us (Heb 7:25).
- † The blood of the cross obtained its effectiveness when, after His resurrection, Jesus entered into heaven with it (Heb 9:12).
- † The risen Christ, having entered into heaven, is now appearing in the presence of God “for us” (Heb 9:24).
- † The power employed to raise Jesus from the dead, is precisely the power that is now devoted to those in Christ (Eph 1:19-21).
- † Jesus was “raised for our justification” (Rom 4:25).
- † His resurrection is God’s pledge that we will also be raised (1 Cor 6:14; 2 Cor 4:14).
- † Jesus being raised from the dead, we can now be joined to Christ and bring forth fruit unto God (Rom 7:4).

- † The same Spirit that raised Jesus from the dead, dwells in believers, giving life to their mortal bodies (Rom 8:11).
- † Confessing the Lord Jesus with our mouth, and believing in our heart that God raised Him from the dead, results in our salvation (Rom 10:9).
- † If Christ is not raised, our faith is vain (1 Cor 15:17).
- † Believers are raised up together with Christ and made to sit with Him in heavenly places (Eph 2:6).
- † In His resurrection, we were “delivered from the wrath to come” (1 Thess 1:10).

CONCLUSION

There is no aspect of salvation that is not immediately related to the Lord Jesus Christ. Further, the association falls under one or more of these realities: The death, the burial, or the resurrection of Christ. A matter that does not connect with these essentials is unrelated to salvation. Further, at the point we are not identified with all three of these, we cease to be identified with Christ. God has made no provision for anyone to be saved subject of the Gospel. Ponder the statements made of Him.

- † Christ died for the ungodly (Rom 5:6).
- † Christ died for us (Rom 5:8).
- † Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement (5:11).
- † It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us (Rom 8:34).
- † Christ came, who is God blessed forever (Rom 9:5).
- † Christ is the end of the Law for righteousness (Rom 10:4).
- † Christ pleased not Himself (Rom 15:3).
- † Christ also received us to the glory of God (Rom 15:7).
- † Christ, the power of God and the wisdom of God (1 Cor 1:24).
- † Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us (1 Cor 5:7).
- † God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself (2 Cor 5:19).
- † Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the Law (Gal 3:13).
- † Christ also loved the church and gave Himself for it (Eph 5:25).
- † Christ Jesus came into the world to

The death, the burial, or the resurrection of Christ. A matter that does not connect with these essentials is unrelated to salvation. Further, at the point we are not identified with all three of these, we cease to be identified with Christ.

without being identified with the death, burial, and resurrection of His Son.

The “Gospel of Christ” is the proclamation of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. It includes the insightful declaration of the result of these pivotal accomplishments, and their bearing upon our acceptance with God. There is no Apostolic writing that does not major on the preaching of the Gospel. It is found in all of their writings, and provides the logic and incentive for living by faith. At some point, all of their doctrine intersects with the death, burial, and resurrection of the Lord.

I cannot leave this matter without again emphasizing that Jesus Christ is the save sinners (1 Tim 1:15).

- † Christ is appearing in the presence of God for us (Heb 9:24).
- † Christ put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself (Heb 9:26).
- † Christ has made us free (Gal 5:1).
- † Christ has suffered for us in the flesh (1 Pet 4:1).

These are only representative of the consistent thrust of the Scriptures. When it comes to accomplishments, the premier and effective ones belong to Christ, and to Christ alone. Only what He has done provides a basis upon which the grace of God is conferred upon men through faith.

Salvation is only as near as the Gospel is clear. Where the Gospel is suppressed, or pushed aside in favor of supposedly more relevant matters, the salvation of people is at stake. It makes no difference whether the people are presently alienated from the life of God, newborn babes, or tenured saints – if the Gospel is not preached salvation will not be accomplished. God has made no provision for salvation without Gospel.

I realize all too well that this perception is rejected by a significant number of professed believers. Yet, it is the truth, and is consistently and overwhelmingly affirmed and supported by the Scriptures. The “Gospel of Christ” has not lost its absolute centrality!

THE POWER OF GOD

^{41:16c} . . . for it is the power of God . . . Paul is elaborating on WHY he is “ready to preach the Gospel” to those who are in Rome (1:15). He already identified those who “are at Rome also” as “beloved of God, called to be saints,” whose “faith is spoken of throughout the whole world” (1:7-8). He is not speaking, therefore, about declaring the Gospel in the market places and halls of learning, although he doubtless is determined to do that also. At this point, however, he is focusing on those who are in Christ Jesus, loved greatly by God, and renowned for their faith. He is “ready to preach the Gospel to them,” persuaded of the advantages it will bring to them. He will open the Gospel more fully to them, for the Gospel is like a rich fruit of many tasty layers. Further, Paul had been granted unusual insight into the Gospel—an understanding to be shared as a rare jewel with those of “like precious faith.”

to bring people within hearing distance of that glorious Gospel.

While it has an appealing sound to it, those who represent the church as existing primarily for assistance of those in difficulty and need have seriously misrepresented the case. The “church of the living God” is fundamentally “the pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15). Lest there be some question about especially precious to God, whose faith was proclaimed throughout the world, needed the Gospel, how much more many churches of our time, which give little evidence of either characteristic. Let the people of God place a high priority on the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Let none assume they have grasped more than a small measure of its magnitude. A message that affirms what the Lord has done cannot be small in any sense.

If those especially precious to God, whose faith was proclaimed throughout the world, needed the Gospel, how much more many churches of our time, which give little evidence of either characteristic.

THE POWER

Here we rise higher than the limits of human language. As ordinarily conceived, the word “power” is an exceedingly small receptacle, incapable of containing an adequate concept of the Gospel. Thus, the Spirit says “the power OF GOD.” The accent is thus placed upon God, not the power itself. In other words, the power is something God employs to accomplish His intentions.

NOT A PROBLEM SOLVER

While a considerable amount the Apostolic writings deal with problems and difficulties in the church, that is not the primary ministry of the Apostles. Nor were they sent as mere recruiters, aiming only to enroll individuals, so to speak, among the people of God, or to inflate their own number of disciples. Paul stated it well when he wrote, “For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect” (1 Cor 1:17). Those who imagine this to be a denigration of baptism betray an inexcusable level of spiritual ignorance. No such notion is found in Scripture.

what constitutes “the truth,” the Spirit provides a marvelous elaboration. “And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory” (verse 16). All of that “mystery” pertains to the Lord Jesus, and is contained in the Gospel Paul is determined to preach.

THE GOSPEL ITSELF

Thus, the Gospel itself is the point of consideration: “IT is the . . .” It possesses indispensable spiritual properties that are necessary to our salvation. Furthermore, the Gospel has not lost any of these qualities, nor have any believers passed beyond their need of them: “it IS the . . .”

The word from which “power” is translated has long been the subject of academic comment. It comes from the word δύναμις (dun-a-mis), which some say equates to the English word “dynamite.” It all sounds plausible to the sophist: i.e., “the Gospel is God’s dynamite.” While it is true that the secondary meaning of “dynamite” is something having a powerful effect, it is still not an adequate word to use in our text. Dynamite is explosive, blowing things apart. But the Gospel brings things together.

The Means of Accomplishment

“The power” refers to the means employed by God to accomplish His purpose. It is effective in bringing about the fulfillment of what God has determined. This is the “power” that belongs to God (Matt 6:13). It is only effective to accomplish His purpose. This

The fundamental responsibility of the Apostles was to declare and expound the the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Any rebuke, correction, or resolution of difficulties was

All of this may appear to be an exercise in futility, but it is not. If those power will not implement the will of men. It is not accessible in any sense to those who are not reconciled unto God. It is toward them “who believe,” and only so, as affirmed in Ephesians 1:19.

The “power of God” is always associated with the accomplishment of something. It is never related to mere theory, or to a pointless display. Thus, when Mary conceived the Savior, “the power (δύναμις) of the Highest” overshadowed her to accomplish the conception. When sick people came to Jesus “out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem, the power (δύναμις) of the Lord was present to heal them” (Lk 5:17). The “preaching of the cross,” to those who are being saved, “is the power (δύναμις) of God” (1 Cor 1:18). In every case, God has an objective, and His “power” is the means of fulfilling or accomplishing it.

Mere Religious Display

Men must exercise themselves to come away from the tendency to desire mere religious display. We live in an entertainment-crazed culture, where amusement is a primary objective. This mind-set has penetrated the professed church, causing people to think more subjectively than objectively. By that, I mean their concept of religion is scarcely related to what God is doing. It has more to do with what they are doing.

Those in the grip of this delusion measure everything by its applicability to everyday life. They do not think in terms of what the Lord is doing, or the world to come, or of the inevitabilities of death and judgment. This condition is precisely why the Gospel of Christ is not afforded a place of prominence. Professed preachers find it much easier to speak on other matters—novelties that appeal to the self-seeking interests of men. That is why they are not “determined” to “preach the Gospel” with power and insight to those who are “beloved of God” and “called to be saints.” This is not an innocent and harmless circumstance, and God will hold all in strict account who either neglect or pervert the Gospel of His Son.

IN ORDER TO SALVATION

^{1:16d} “ . . . unto salvation . . . ” The “power of God” is employed to effect a purpose, to fulfill a Divine objective. It is not effective to accomplish anything unrelated to that purpose. This is precisely why the effective preaching of the Gospel requires some understanding of what God is doing. God has not called men to be robots that parrot a message. Rather, in Christ, men becoming “workers together with God,” “fishers of men,” and “ministers” by whom men “believe” (1 Cor 3:9; Matt 4:19; 1 Cor 3:5).

SALVATION

The gospel is the appointed means of effecting salvation—“the power of God unto (in order to) salvation.” He does not say initial salvation, but “salvation.” Salvation involves more than extrication from the guilt and power of sin, just as the salvation, or deliverance, of Israel involved more than coming out of the confines of Egypt.

The Case of Israel

Israel is set before us as an example of salvation. Their salvation was initiated when they came out of Egypt. For those who believed, it was culminated when they entered into the promised land of Canaan. Between those two points were a number of salvation-details. In addition to actually coming out of the land of Egypt, the following was also included.

- † They all were under the cloud (1 Cor 10:1a).
- † They all passed through the sea (1 Cor 10:1b).
- † They were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea (1 Cor 10:2).
- † They all ate the same spiritual food (1 Cor 10:3).
- † They all drank the same spiritual drink them (Deut 31:4).

- † Bitter waters were purified for them (Ex 15:25).
- † A covenant was given to them (Ex 19-20).
- † The Jordan River parted for them (Josh 3:17).
- † The walls of Jericho fell down for them (Josh 6:3-20; Heb 11:30).
- † The city of Jericho was given them (Josh 5:2).

Salvation involves more than extrication from the guilt and power of sin, just as the salvation, or deliverance, of Israel involved more than coming out of the confines of Egypt.

Indeed, there was more involved in Israel bring saved than simply leaving Egypt! They had to pass through the Red Sea and the Jordan River at flood-stage. They had to be fed with manna in the wilderness and nourished with water from a rock in a desert place. Their clothing and their health had to be sustained, and their enemies repulsed. It was Divine power that accomplished it all!

So It Is In Salvation

So it is in salvation! When we are delivered from the guilt and power of sin, we are no more put on automatic pilot, than Israel was in the wilderness. They needed to be led in the day, and in the night as well. Even when they came to the borders of the promised land, enemies were confronted and victory had to be achieved. It was all through God’s power. So it is with those in Christ Jesus.

- (1 Cor 10:4).
- † They were led by a pillar of cloud by day (Psa 78:14a).
- † They were led by a pillar of fire by night (Psa 78:14b; Ex 13:21-22).
- † Though nomads for forty years, their feet did not swell (Deut 8:4; Neh 9:21).
- † Their clothing and shoes did not wear out (Deut 8:4; 29:5).
- † Enemy nations were conquered by

The largeness of our salvation serves to emphasize the necessity of the Gospel. The time in which we are blessed to live is “the day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2). It is the time when salvation is being effected by the powerful Gospel of Jesus Christ. Ponder how the Spirit speaks of this salvation.

- † It is a “helmet” of protection (Eph 6:17).
- † It produces “hope” (1 Thess 5:8).
- † It is a “great salvation” (Heb 2:3).
- † It is an “eternal salvation” (Heb 5:9).
- † There are indispensable things that “accompany salvation” (Heb 6:9).
- † It is “ready to be revealed in the last time” (1 Pet 1:5).
- † It is the objective, or “end,” of our faith (1 Pet 1:9).
- † It is presently “nearer than when we first believed” (Rom 13:11).
- † God succors, or nourishes us, “in the day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2).
- † We are to “work out” our own salvation “with fear and trembling” (Phil 2:12).
- † Holy angels are presently ministering to those who “shall be heirs of salvation” (Heb 1:14).

What is there about these expressions that would lead any soul to believe salvation had been experienced in its totality? What would lead anyone to imagine there is nothing more to salvation than has presently been experienced?

There are enormous vistas of this great salvation yet to be seen, to say nothing of being experienced. Our bodies are not yet “saved.” But they will be, and we are “waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body” (Rom 8:23).

Christ’s Intercession

The intercessory ministry of Jesus confirms that salvation has not yet been brought to its culmination. Thus it is written, “Wherefore He is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them” (Heb 7:25).

The Intercession of the Holy Spirit

The work and intercession of the Holy Spirit is also required in this great work of salvation. “Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered” (Rom 8:26).

Our Own Involvement

We ourselves are involved in the process, working out our own salvation with fear and trembling, persuaded that it is God who is presently at work in us (Phil 2:12-13).

A Work in Process

Salvation is a Divine work-in-process. We “SHALL be saved from wrath through Him” (Rom 5:9). We “SHALL be saved by His (intercessory) life” (Rom 5:10). We “are BEING saved”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 1:18). “For we are to God the fragrance of Christ

It is not enough for people simply to be told what to do. There must be an incentive to do what is required. God has already shown us this cannot be accomplished through the Law. The Law was the “strength of sin” (1 Cor 15:56), but it had no strength to produce either faith or hope.

among those who are BEING saved and among those who are perishing”^{NKJV} (2 Cor 2:15).

Salvation is the process whereby we are being “conformed” to the image of God’s Son (Rom 8:29). We are advancing “from glory unto glory,” being brought to “the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ” (Eph 4:15). From the subjective view, we are “pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus” (Phil 3:14). Also, we are running the race that is set before us, “looking unto Jesus” (Heb 12:1-2). All of this comes under the umbrella of “salvation.”

Until we are fully “like Him,” with Satan bruised under our feet, and “ever with the Lord,” we are “being saved” (1 John 3:1-2; Rom 16:20; 1 Thess 4:17). As long as we wrestle “against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places” (Eph 6:12), salvation is not to be taken for granted.

Not Finished Yet!

If our salvation was complete, we would not require the intercession of Jesus. It would no longer be essential for the Spirit to intercede for us. There would be no need for the ministry of the holy angels. Our own spiritual aggression against darkness, and in pressing toward the goal, would be an absurdity if salvation had already been brought to its culmination.

THE APPOINTED MEANS

And what is the appointed means of bringing salvation to completeness? What is the “power of God” to effect the appointment to salvation (1 Thess 5:8)? It is the Gospel of Christ! That is “the power of God for salvation.” We embrace it to come into Christ, and we cling to it to remain in Christ. Thus it is written of the Gospel, “By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain” (1 Cor 15:2). There is no point where salvation moves you beyond the perimeter of the Gospel, or reduces it to something that is secondary or no longer essential. If the Son of God is presently appearing in the presence of God as a newly slain Lamb (Rev 5:6) – if that is what is required in heaven – how necessary it is for us to maintain such a view of Him on earth!

It is not enough for people simply to be told what to do. There must be an incentive to do what is required. God has already shown us this cannot be accomplished through the Law. The Law was the “strength of sin” (1 Cor 15:56), but it had no strength to produce either faith or hope. Therefore, being “weak through the flesh,” (Rom 8:3), it could not empower men for “denying ungodliness and worldly lusts,” or constrain us to “live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world.” Only the grace of God can do that, and the Gospel of Christ brings that message (Tit 2:12). It is “the gospel of the grace of God” (Acts 20:24).

The Lord’s Table

Jesus instituted the Lord’s table to keep the Gospel alive and vibrant in our hearts and minds (1 Cor 11:23-28). This is not a mere formality, to be fulfilled out of a sense of obligation. Rather, it is an activity that brings us closer to the heart of the Gospel, and consequently within the influence of “the power of God.”

Incentive for Godliness

When the Spirit ministered rebuke or correction in righteousness, He consistently made an appeal to the Gospel of Christ. Remember that IT is God’s power in order to effect salvation. A few examples will suffice to confirm this point.

- † Incentive to give of our resources to help needy brethren (2 Cor 8:9).
- † To provoke the avoidance of fornication (1 Cor 6:13-19).
- † To be longsuffering with our brethren, being tenderhearted and forgiving (Eph 4:32).
- † To purge sin from among us (1 Cor 5:7).
- † Discouraging a return to Law as a means of gaining Divine acceptance (Gal 3:10-13).
- † To receive one another (Rom 15:7).
- † The pursuit of humility (Phil 2:5-8).

Everything Relates to Salvation

In Christ, everything relates to salvation. Nothing pertaining to life and godliness is separate from salvation. Every single aspect of spiritual life is driven by the power associated with the Gospel of Christ. The knowledge of this single reality will produce a revolution among God’s people that can scarcely be imagined.

Wherever the Gospel is not being preached, salvation is not being implemented. God’s “great salvation” can neither be initiated nor maintained apart from the “glorious Gospel of the blessed God.” Settle it in your mind to give a high priority to the Gospel of Christ. Then you will find God giving a high priority to you.

TO EVERY ONE THAT BELIEVES

^{4:16e} . . . to every one that believeth . . .” Because of the low estimation given to believing God, this verse is often glossed. It is one of the great affirmations of the Spirit, pregnant with both meaning and power. It is not a deficient statement, or one that must be coupled with other affirmations to become effective.

Faith, or believing God, is what connects us with “the power of God.” Believing a word from God is always viewed as bringing advantage to the one believing. Disbelieving God always brings disadvantage to the one refusing to believe. The text before us accentuates the former. The Gospel of Christ “is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.”

The effectiveness of believing is frequently stated in Scripture.

- † “And by Him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses” (Acts 13:39).
- † “That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life” (John 3:15).
- † “For God so loved the world, that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life” (John 3:16).

- † “I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on Me should not abide in darkness” (John 12:46).
- † “. . . whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins” (Acts 10:43).
- † “. . . whosoever believeth on Him shall not be ashamed” (Rom 9:33).
- † “For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth” (Rom 10:4).
- † “I am the bread of life: he that cometh to Me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst” (John 6:35).
- † “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on Me hath everlasting life” (John 6:47).

confounded” (1 Pet 2:6).
 † “Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God” (1 John 5:1).

The strength of these texts is evident. In all of them, believing is the fundamental thing. It is the supreme qualification, and in every instance it is based upon the Gospel of Christ—the record God has given of His Son.

Care must be taken to avoid any view of God’s Word that minimizes believing. If someone imagines that believing has nothing to do with obeying, they must think again. Faith always obeys, as confirmed in the eleventh chapter of

The word “believeth” or “believes” is not referring to a point in time, or an event that took place in the past. This is something presently occurring. It is a trust and reliance that is in process now.

- † “I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live” (John 11:25).
- † “And whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die” (John 11:26).
- † “Behold, I lay in Zion a Chief Corner Stone, Elect, Precious: and he that believeth on Him shall not be”

Hebrews. It is always unbelief that disobeys. Those who walk acceptably with God are called “believers” (Acts 5:14; 1 Tim 4:12). As already stated in the fifth verse of the first chapter, their obedience is the result of their faith, or believing.

WHAT IS BELIEVING?

Because of the general disregard of

A person, then, who IS believing is living in the assured persuasion of the truth of the Gospel. Its certainty has been so impressed upon the human spirit that, to the precise degree of that faith, the entire life is shaped in view of the realities proclaimed in the Gospel of Christ.

the value and effectiveness of believing, further consideration of it will be profitable. Remember, the Gospel of Christ IS the very power of God in order for salvation “for everyone who believes.”

Etymologically, the word “believe” has strong implications, but they are only introductory, and by no means exhaustive of its meaning. The word comes from πιστεύοντι (pis-teu-on-ti), which is in the present active mode. A precise translation would read “is believing.” The word “believeth” or “believes” is not referring to a point in time, or an event that took place in the past. This is something presently occurring. It is a trust and reliance that is in process now. The Gospel of Christ is the power of God in order to salvation to everyone who is believing. This casts an entirely different light on this verse than is ordinarily entertained.

Some read the verse with a mind to those who are alienated from God and lost in sin. To them, the text reads “to everyone who WILL believe.” But that is not what the text says. Others, convinced their aggressive involvement is not required in their salvation see the verse as saying “to everyone who HAS believed.” But that is not the word declared here.

This statement has no applicability whatsoever to someone who is not in the process of believing.

The Nature of Believing

“Believing” is not mere intellectual assent, or lifeless acceptance. It involves persuasion, confidence, and trust, or reliance on the truth declared. “Believing” is the verb form, or expression of, faith. Faith is defined as “the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen” (Heb 11:1). The word translated “substance” is larger than a single English word. It involves confidence, assurance, conviction, and realization. By saying faith is the “substance of things hoped for,” the Spirit means faith makes them real to the individual, “substantizing” them to the soul. The things themselves are real, and the persuasion is real, reaching into the human spirit. The word translated “evidence” is equally large. It means verification, proof, and certainty. It means that faith itself is the proof of the things “not seen.”

A person, then, who IS believing is living in the assured persuasion of the truth of the Gospel. Its certainty has been so impressed upon the human spirit that, to the precise degree of that faith, the entire life is shaped in view of the realities proclaimed in the Gospel of Christ. No human expression has the power of faith.

Demons Believe, But Not This Way

This is not the believing that is ascribed to demons. Of them it is written, “Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble” (James 2:19). Their persuasion is not of the truth of the Gospel. They believe there is “one God,” conducting themselves with an acute awareness of their accountability to Him (Matt 8:29). Further, their persuasion of God has not come from the Gospel, but from their exposure to His immediate influence.

Let no person attempt to neutralize this text by equating demons believing there is “one God” with a reliance upon, or believing in the Lord Jesus Christ.

An Unequivocal Statement

The unmitigated statement of this text should speak to our heart. The Gospel of Christ IS the power of God unto salvation to EVERYONE who is believing. The Spirit does not say it CAN be the power, but that it IS the power. It is not God’s power to salvation for SOME who believe, but to EVERYONE who believes.

What, then, ought to be our approach to believing? How should we regard it? With zeal, we must “fight the good fight of faith” (1 Tim 6:12), endeavoring with all that is within us to keep believing, trusting, and relying upon Christ Jesus. God has made a pledge in this statement, and will not repent of it. If we will exercise ourselves to believe the Gospel, the power of God will see to it that we stand at last, pure before the Lord.

THE JEW FIRST, AND ALSO THE GREEK

^{1:16f} ... to the Jew first, and also to the Greek ... There have arisen all manner of teachings in the church concerning the Jews. Many of them reflect an extremely distorted view of the word of God. Remembering that “all Scripture is given by inspiration of God,” this text is to be viewed as precise and without flaw. The tendency to conform Scripture to preconceived notions must be mortified, and our thoughts brought into harmony with Divine utterance.

THE JEW FIRST

First, if God has thoroughly repudiated the Jews, this statement could not be made. Not only is the Gospel God’s power unto salvation to the Jew, it is to the “Jew FIRST.” The Spirit does not say the Gospel WAS God’s power unto salvation to the Jew “first,” but that it IS. The word “first” means first in rank as well as in time.

Elsewhere, the Spirit identifies three categories of people. They are “Jews,” “Gentiles,” and “the church of God” (1 Cor 10:32). The superior distinction is given to “the church of God,” to be sure, for that is the body of Christ. However, that by no means indicates that the Jews are no longer recognized by God.

Mentioned Elsewhere

This is not the only place the phrase “Jew first” is used. The other places will confirm to our hearts both the nature and declaration of this text. “Tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of THE JEW FIRST, and also of the Gentile; But glory, honor, and peace, to every man that worketh good, to THE JEW FIRST, and also to the Gentile: For there is no respect of persons with God” (Rom 2:9-11). Thus we have three affirmations concerning the Jews being “first.” (1) In the experience of the power of the Gospel to those who are believing. (2) The punishment of every soul that does evil. (3) The gift of glory, honor, and peace to every soul who works good. None of these have any significance whatsoever if God has no regard at all for the Jews.

The Spirit also refers to Jews and Gentiles in expounding the nature of salvation. “Or is God the God of Jews only? Is He not the God of Gentiles also? Yes, of Gentiles also, since indeed God who will justify the circumcised by faith and the uncircumcised through faith is one” (Rom 3:29-30). Notice, the Spirit does not refer to a past arrangement, but a present one: “IS.” This text also places the Gentiles in second place: “Gentiles ALSO.” The same identity is ascribed in Romans 9:24. “Even us, whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but ALSO of the Gentiles?”

Rather than the Jews being summarily dismissed from Divine consideration, in Christ the Gentiles are made “fellowheirs (with the Jews), and of the same body, and partakers of His promise in Christ by the gospel” (Eph 3:6). In Christ Jew and Gentile are made “one new man” (Eph 2:15)—a condition with no significance if the Jews no longer have a Divinely recognized identity.

Gentile Distinction Recognized

To further show the absurdity of the notion that the Jews have utterly ceased to be a people before the Lord, note that the Spirit continues to refer to “the Gentiles.” It is the existence of the Jews that allows for the term “Gentiles,” or “Greeks.” The word “Gentiles” obtains no significance apart from the “Jews.” Further, the Epistles refer to “the Gentiles” no less than 40 times. Outside of Christ, both Jew and Gentile still exist. Neither of them has ceased to be. In fact, the ONLY place those distinctions are removed is in Christ (Gal 3:28; 5:6; 1 Cor 12:13).

What About Jerusalem’s Destruction

Thus we have three affirmations concerning the Jews being “first.” (1) In the experience of the power of the Gospel to those who are believing. (2) The punishment of every soul that does evil. (3) The gift of glory, honor, and peace to every soul who works good.

Some, inordinately eager to justify the position that the Jews have been summarily rejected, trace it back to the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. It was at this point, they affirm, that the Jews were finally written off.

This destruction was foretold by the Lord Jesus. He even told WHY the judgment would come. It was because they rejected Him, not knowing the time of their “visitation” from on high. Our Lord wept over the prospect of that coming judgment (Luke 19:42-44). He also referred to this destruction when affirming the devastation of the temple (Matt 24:2; Mk 13:3). He associated this destruction with the “abomination of desolation” prophesied by Daniel. It would be so fierce that those with child would suffer, and running, or fleeing from the city would be required (Mk 13:14-20).

Did all of this mean a total rejection of the Jews, as some affirm? Indeed not. The Lord spoke most precisely on this matter. “But woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days! for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Lk 21:23-24). Jesus left the door open, and we do well to consent to His word.

Categorical Statements

There is so much said on this subject it is a marvel that the erroneous doctrine to which I have referred has risen. Later in this Epistle, the Spirit will also refer to a time associated with the Gentiles. “I do not want you to be ignorant of this mystery, brothers, so that you may not be conceited: Israel has experienced a hardening in part until the full number of the Gentiles has come in”^{2NTV} (Rom 11:25).

The ninth chapter of Romans affirms the Jews STILL have certain advantages. Such a statement is foolish if they are no longer a people. “Then what advantage has the Jew? Or what is the benefit of circumcision? Great in every respect. First of all, that they were entrusted with the oracles of God”^{NASB} (Rom 3:1-2). The advantages are detailed in the 10th chapter. “Israelites, to whom belongs the adoption as sons and the glory and the covenants and the giving of the Law and the temple service and the promises, whose are the fathers, and from whom is the Christ according to the flesh, who is over all, God blessed forever. Amen” (9:4-5). If a person imagines this is referring to the church, or spiritual Israel, then the “giving of the Law and temple service” as well as the fleshly generation of Jesus, has come from the Gentiles.

The eleventh chapter of Romans develops this thought in a most extensive manner. Because we will expound it later, I will only list the strong arguments presented concerning the Jews.

† God has NOT cast away His people (11:1a).

- † Paul himself, an Israelite according to the flesh, confirms this did not occur (11:1b).
- † Just as surely as there was a remnant in Elijah’s day, so there is a remnant among this people today (11:2-5).
- † Israel has not stumbled so as to fall, or beyond recovery (11:11a).
- † Salvation has come to the Gentiles to provoke the Jews to jealousy (11:11b).
- † If their fall brought riches to the Gentiles, much more will blessing be brought by their recovery (11:12).
- † Paul’s Apostleship to the Gentiles was in order to provoke the Jews to jealousy, saving some of them (11:13-14).
- † If casting them away meant the reconciling of the world, the receiving of them will be life from the dead (11:15).
- † The “firstfruit” and the “root” are still “holy.” That is why the larger mass and the branches are “holy” (11:16).
- † Only “some of the branches” of the natural Jewish tree were broken off (11:17a).
- † Some of the Gentiles, a wild olive tree, have been grafted in “among” the Jews (11:17b).
- † Gentile believers are partaking of the nourishing sap of the olive root of Israel (11:17c).
- † The Jewish branches were NOT broken off so that the Gentiles might be grafted in. Salvation is NOT a replacement program (11:18-21).
- † God is able to graft the Jews in again (11:23).
- † It is reasonable for them to be grafted into their own tree once again (11:24).
- † Blindness “in part” has happened unto Israel (11:25a).
- † The blindness is only until the full number of the Gentiles are come in (11:15b).
- † The Deliverer will turn away ungodliness from Jacob (a name never applied to the church, 11:26).
- † God’s covenant to take away their sin is still in place (11:27).
- † Although presently they are “enemies” for the sake of the Gentiles, they are still “beloved for the fathers’ (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob) sake” (11:28).
- † The gifts and calling of God are without repentance (11:29).
- † Just as we Gentiles have obtained mercy because of their unbelief, so through the mercy extended to us, they will also obtain mercy (11:30-31).

† All of this is a remarkable display of the arresting wisdom of God. It confirms His judgments are unsearchable and His ways past finding out (11:33-36).

It is exceedingly difficult for me to imagine how a case for “the Jew first” could be established any more certainly!

God Has Not Forgotten

God has not forgotten the promises made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Nor, indeed, has He blotted from His recollection the covenant He made with

Thus, those who say God has finished with Israel must give an account of themselves to God. They must also explain to us why the sun is still shining, and why the moon and the stars can be seen at night.

Israel—the promised New Covenant we presently enjoy, and over which Jesus is presiding.

One final word from Jeremiah will confirm the reason for the Gospel being the power of God unto salvation “to the Jew first.” I will give this marvelous prophecy from the NRSV. Hebrews 8:8-13 and 10:16-17 confirm that this is the New Covenant we are now enjoying.

“The days are surely coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah. It will not be like the covenant that I made with their ancestors when I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt--a covenant that they broke, though I was their husband, says the LORD. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put my law within them, and I will write it on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. No longer shall they teach one another, or say to each other, ‘Know the LORD,’ for they shall all know me, from the least of them to the greatest, says the LORD; for I will forgive their iniquity, and remember their sin no more” (Jer 31:31-34).

All who are acquainted with the New Covenant know that it is the framework in which our salvation is being accomplished. Outside of Christ, not one syllable of this covenant finds fulfillment.

The Lord did not end this promise through Jeremiah with these words. With solemnity and determination He added the following words, which He is never represented as withdrawing. “Thus says the LORD, who gives the sun for light by day and the fixed order of the moon and the stars for light by night, who stirs up the sea so that its waves roar-- the LORD of hosts is His name: If this fixed order were ever to cease from my presence, says the LORD, then also the offspring of Israel would cease to be a nation before me forever. Thus says the LORD: If the heavens above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth below can be explored, then I will reject all the offspring of Israel because of all they have done, says the LORD” (Jer 31:35-37).

Thus, those who say God has finished with Israel must give an account of themselves to God. They must also explain to us why the sun is still shining, and why the moon and the stars can be seen at night. They are obliged to account for how the “fixed order” of nature could remain while Israel has been repudiated. Let them stand before us and give their measurement of the heavens, and tell how they have explored the foundations of the earth. If they can present such evidence, then we will acknowledge that God did “reject all the offspring of Israel because of all they have done, says the LORD.”

But if they must acknowledge the continuance of the sun, moon, and stars—and if they cannot measure the heavens or explore the foundations of the earth--then let them throw away their despicable doctrine, for it cannot be true! In their doctrine they have reproached God and contradicted His promise! Their teaching reveals the presence of unbelief and brings dishonor the God of Israel.

The Gospel IS the power of God unto salvation “TO THE JEW FIRST.” Let none doubt it, or allow their hearts to entertain some imagination concerning the total rejection of the ancient people. Let us acknowledge the truth of our Jew or pagan.

The Greeks, the Spirit declares, had a desire for wisdom. As it is written, “the Greeks seek after wisdom” (1 Cor 1:22). Because of this demand, they considered considered secondary, salvation immediately begins to wither, and the believer becomes weak. It makes little difference what profession of faith is made, apart from the Gospel of Christ salvation will not be realized.

The Jews were the best in the religious realm, and the Gentiles in the cultural realm. But they both needed salvation, and the Gospel of Christ is God’s power to accomplish that need.

Savior’s own words: “salvation is of the Jews” (John 4:22).

AND ALSO TO THE GREEK

As I have pointed out in a previous lesson, the word “Greek” is not a geographical consideration, but a cultural one. At the time this Epistle was written, Greek was the universal language. It represented the world in its most refined and cultured state. However, in spite of the seeming disparity between oppressed Jews (whose only distinction was their revealed religion) and the self-developed superiority of the Greek world, the Jews ranked “first,” and the Greeks were viewed as “also.” In fact, another word for “Greek,” as commonly known, is a non-

the “preaching of the cross” to be “foolishness” (1 Cor 1:23). The Apostles did not cater to this penchant, but preached “Christ crucified.” Unlike impotent Grecian wisdom, the Gospel declares the “power of God and the wisdom of God,” neither of which were found in Grecian culture (1 Cor 1:24).

The Jews were the best in the religious realm, and the Gentiles in the cultural realm. But they both needed salvation, and the Gospel of Christ is God’s power to accomplish that need.

CONCLUSION

Salvation in all of its aspects is accomplished through the Gospel of Christ. As soon as the Gospel is

This circumstance accounts for the spiritual poverty and moral weakness that is too often found in the churches. There is no “power unto salvation” apart from the Gospel of Christ. On the other hand, wherever the Gospel is declared in the insight of power of the Holy Spirit, salvation will become more evident through appropriate growth in Christ.

Whatever makes the Gospel seem irrelevant cannot be from God—unless it is a delusion, sent as a judgment for not loving the truth (2 Thess 2:10-12). In Scripture, when men refused to embrace the Gospel, they were told, “but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles” (Acts 13:46).

Not only, therefore, is the Gospel “the power of God unto salvation, to every one who believes,” it is something that can be rejected, thereby bringing the judgment of God upon the individual. Allow no teaching to enter your heart that makes little of the Gospel of Jesus Christ! It is the record God has given of His Son.

THE REVELATION OF THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD

^{17a} For therein is the righteousness of God revealed . . . Here we begin the doctrinal portion of this Epistle—and it is lofty. Keep in mind, this is a declaration of the Gospel—an opening up of the good news. It will immediately be apparent to you that what is here proclaimed is rarely heard in Christian circles. In the sense of this text, I have scarcely ever heard any reference whatsoever to “the righteousness of God.” This is, however, an extensive theme that will be expounded from this point through the conclusion of the eighth chapter.

“THEREIN”

The word “therein” refers to the Gospel of Christ. Not only is it “the power of God unto salvation,” the Spirit now tells us WHY it is: “FOR therein . . .” I have rarely heard a message, or read an article, dealing with Romans 1:16 that associated it with the Divine explanation of its power, which is verse seventeen. I credit this significant omission to the effect of institutionalized religion upon those embracing it. A systematized religion has the tendency of imposing spiritual blinders upon the soul, producing extremely restricted understanding.

The Gospel is more than a simplistic message. It is a spiritual container in which much can be found. Too often the Gospel is viewed entirely apart from this fundamental consideration: it is an appointed receptacle that holds life-giving benefits. Further, it is what is IN the container that makes it effective.

Illustrated In Nature

The Gospel is much like a complex fruit, containing many nutritious elements. A marvelous example of this principle is the peanut. From this seemingly uncomplicated crop George Washington Carver produced over 300 different products. They included cereals, oils, dyes, soaps, flavors, and food substitutes. He found a use for the nut, the shell, and the plants left in the ground. His work in this area is one of the remarkable achievements in this world.

By simply viewing a picture of a peanut in the shell, or of the nut within the shell, or of the plant in the ground, these incredible things are not evident. It required someone with insight to open the possibilities of the peanut to us mortals. However, even if brother Carver (himself a believer in Christ) did not discover these uses, they were all still resident in the lowly peanut.

The Gospel Reveals Something

“Therein is revealed . . .” Whatever is “revealed” in the Gospel is what gives it effective “power unto salvation.” We are to understand that salvation cannot be realized apart from what is “revealed” within it. This is something that is found wherever the Gospel is found. It is not a mere part of the Gospel, but is revealed in the Gospel. The Gospel, then, sheds light on something—something that is required for our salvation.

The surface view of the Gospel—like looking at the peanut itself—is the proclamation of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. These are the pillars upon which the Gospel are founded. However, it is what is made known by these pivotal accomplishments that brings “power unto salvation.”

This is the bane of declaring the Gospel from merely a historical perspective: i.e., “two thousand years ago.” It is also the weakness of seeking to buttress the Gospel with tangible evidence and logical proofs. Neither of those things, however useful they may appear, possesses the “power of God.” I suppose that both, like the law, are good if a man uses them lawfully (1 Tim 1:8). However, a considerable amount of effort is yet to be expended to support that supposition.

Remember, the Spirit is accounting for the power and effectiveness of the Gospel of Christ. The proclamation of the Person and accomplishments of Christ reveal what is now affirmed. Any Gospel that does NOT reveal this, is really “another gospel,” and is to be discarded as theological garbage.

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD

The “righteousness of God” is mentioned five times in this book. In every case, it is a pivotal deliberation (1:17; 3:5,21,22;10:3). This is not an academic consideration—like learning a mathematical table—because it is “revealed.” Later, the Spirit will affirm “the righteousness of God” is “manifested,” or “made known” (3:20). This is, then, something to be perceived, comprehended, or understood.

Not Referring to God Being Righteous

This is NOT referring to an understanding that God is righteous. It is certainly the truth that “God is righteous” (Isa 41:26). Unquestionably, “the LORD our God is righteous in all the works which He does”^{NKJV} (Dan 9:14). He is “righteous in all His ways, and holy in all His works” (Psa 145:17). Whatever He has done is right, and is not to be questioned by mortals. His judgment, whether condemning or justifying, is always “righteous” (Rom 2:5; 2 Thess

I am persuaded the masses of professed believers have not yet been convinced of the necessity of righteousness. They have heard a Gospel so thoroughly diluted with the wisdom of this world that they can scarcely arrive at a valid conclusion concerning righteousness or Divine acceptance.

1:5). In delivering up His Son He was righteous (Rom 8:3). He is also righteous in justifying the ungodly (Rom 3:25).

However, this is not the sense in which “the righteousness of God” is used in this text—or in any other texts using that expression.

A Conferred Righteousness

The Gospel reveals a righteousness that God confers upon men—and it is His very own righteousness. The glorious Gospel does not make known that God is righteous, although that can certainly be seen in it. That revelation, however, has been affirmed from the beginning of God’s dealings with men (Gen 18:25; Judges 5:11; Ezra 9:15; Job 36:3).

Righteous—“the righteousness of God”—is a premier consideration in the Kingdom of God. Jesus said, “But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness . . .” (Matt 6:33). This is a righteousness to be appropriated. Seeing this, Paul affirmed his life was lived in order to be “be found in Him (Jesus), not having my own righteousness, which is from the law, but that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is from God by faith”^{NKJV} (Phil 3:9). He knew that righteousness was imperative to be accepted by God, and that he could not develop it himself.

I am persuaded the masses of professed believers have not yet been convinced of the necessity of righteousness. They have heard a Gospel so thoroughly diluted with the wisdom of this world that they can scarcely arrive at a valid conclusion concerning righteousness or Divine acceptance.

We must exercise ourselves to break free from shallow and distorted views of salvation. It is still true, “the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God” (1 Cor 6:9), and without holiness, “no man shall see the Lord” (Heb 12:14). Make no mistake about this, the unrighteous man has a mandate from heaven, and there is no way to avoid it with impunity. “Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts” (Isa 55:7-9). Unrighteousness, then, has to do with more than our deeds. It has to do with our way, or manners, and our thoughts as well. Unless we are righteous in both of those areas, our future is hopeless!

Two Ways to be Righteous

There are two types of righteousness mentioned in Scripture. One depends upon men, and the other comes from God.

Of the Law

The first is called a righteousness which is “from the Law.” This is NOT a righteousness from God, but one proceeding from self-effort alone: “my own righteousness” (Phil 3:9). When Jesus comes, He will “find” all men. At that time, there will be no hope whatsoever for any person having only his “own righteousness, which is from the Law.”

In this righteousness, the individual fulfills the “righteous requirements of the Law,” carefully and without flaw doing everything that God requires. This “righteousness” is particularly described for us. Appropriately, the description is provided by Moses, through whom the law was “given” (John 1:17). “For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them” (Rom 10:5). The Levitical law declared, “Ye shall therefore keep my statutes, and my judgments: which if a man do, he shall live in them: I am the LORD” (Lev 18:5). Nehemiah also said of God’s laws, “which if a man do, he shall live in them” (Neh 9:29). Ezekiel made the same statement: “which if a man do, he shall even live in them” (Ezek 20:11,13,21). Jesus said the same thing in answer to a man asking about obtaining eternal life: “Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live” (Lk 10:28).

The Spirit declares that this approach has nothing whatsoever to do with faith. “Yet the law is not of faith, but the man who does them shall live by them” (Gal 3:12). The Amplified New Testament reads, “But the Law does not rest on faith—does not require faith, has nothing to do with faith—for it itself says, He who does them (the things prescribed in the Law) shall live by them, [not by faith].” This is too strong for those with a propensity for Law. But it is the truth!

Here DOING is compared with BELIEVING. Under Law, becoming righteous is traced back to DOING as its cause. Mind you, this is not the doing of God. Remember, the Law is “not based upon faith.” This is not speaking about God working in us “to will and to do of His own good pleasure” (Phil 2:13). The life of the individual is thus placed in his own hands. There will be NO Divine intervention, no new birth, and no provision for reconciliation. Being alive to God will depend solely upon the impeccable and flawless performance of the individual. That is the “righteousness of the Law.” A single offence voids all other seeming works of goodness, making the individual guilty of breaking every jot and tittle of the Law (James 2:10).

Let us imagine for a moment that we did, in fact, find someone who did everything they were commanded to do. Even though that is only an imagination, Jesus did tell us what would occur were such a person found. “So likewise you, when you have done all those things which you are commanded, say, ‘We are unprofitable servants. We have done what was our duty to do’^{NKJV} (Lk 17:10). Ponder what good word is ever said to an “unprofitable servant!” Tell me if there is so much as a spark of hope held out to such a servant.

This righteousness must be revealed before it can be appropriated, confirming it does not proceed from man. Rather, it is brought to man—quite different from the righteousness of the Law.

But let us take the matter even further. Hear the Spirit as He reasons concerning our father Abraham, “the friend of God.” “What then shall we say that Abraham our father has found according to the flesh? For if Abraham was justified by works, he has something to boast about, but not before God” (Rom 4:1-2).

If you have ever thought yourself equal to the challenges of the Law, quickly abandon such foolishness! The righteousness that comes from the Law is a vaporous one. It simply is not possible, for the Law “was not made for a righteous man” (1 Tim 1:9). It can neither produce or sustain a righteous man. The Law itself is “righteous,” but it cannot produce a single righteous deed, or right a solitary wrong. Its ministry is that of condemnation, not justification. As a covenant, the law was “the ministration of death,” and “the ministration of condemnation” (2 Cor 3:7,9). It did not remove sin, but defined it and confirmed men were guilty of it (Rom 3:19-20).

Throughout history, men have had a propensity to imagine they could become righteous by keeping the very Law they had broken. Once broken, however, the Law cannot be mended together in such a manner as to produce righteousness. That should be apparent to every thoughtful soul. It will also produce a strong longing in the tenderhearted for a righteousness that is accepted by God. The Gospel announces just such a righteousness.

Of Faith

The Gospel reveals a righteousness that comes from faith. It is called “the righteousness of faith” (Rom 4:13), or “the righteousness that comes by faith.”^{NIV} This righteousness must be revealed before it can be appropriated, confirming it does not proceed from man. Rather, it is brought to man—quite different from the righteousness of the Law. This will be more fully developed in the next section.

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD

There is only one righteousness that is acceptable to God, and that is His own. Here is a spiritually technical point that will yield much benefit. Some have viewed this righteousness as the “righteousness of Christ,” even though no such reference is ever found in Scripture. This view sees Jesus as fully keeping the Law in our behalf. Because of His flawless obedience, His righteousness is then imputed to us. Although Jesus was flawlessly righteous, it is not His righteousness that is imputed to us. That is, it is not the righteousness developed in the arena of spiritual warfare that is given to us. It is God’s own righteousness that is granted to us because of our “faith in His blood” (Rom 3:25)—i.e. , our persuasion of its effect.

The purpose of Christ’s righteousness life was not the development of a righteousness to be imputed to us. Rather, it was in order to qualify Him to make the required sacrifice that would atone for the sins of the world. It was in order that He might fulfill the righteous demands of God for reconciliation.

While the righteousness of our text does, indeed, come from God, it also belongs to Him. It is a righteousness to which men submit themselves—not one that is developed by them. This is precisely the point developed in the tenth chapter. “Since they (Israel) did not know the righteousness that comes from God and sought to establish their own, they did not submit to God’s righteousness”^{NIV} (10:3).

Thus the Gospel not only reveals that God Himself is righteous in reconciling the world to Himself, but that He graciously and willingly confers that very righteousness upon all who believe in Christ. This is a required righteousness, without which there is no hope of heaven. That is a righteousness that will stand uncontested before the tribunal of heaven, both now and in the last day. It is revealed in the Gospel of Christ, and appropriated by faith.

FROM FAITH TO FAITH

This is doubtless one of the most profound of all utterances. It declares the means by which righteousness is appropriated, and the effect it has upon the individual. The phrase “from faith to faith” is my particular focus. The thing that is revealed through the Gospel is this: the righteousness of God is “from faith to faith.” Other versions read, “through faith for faith”^{NRSV}, “by faith from first to last”^{NIV}, “from faith unto faith”^{ASV}, “from start to finish by faith”^{NLT}, and “based on faith and addressed to faith”^{NJB}.

The idea is that our experience of the righteousness of God springs from faith, then feeds, nourishes, and enhances faith. To put it another way, we must believe in order to be given the righteousness of God, and we must possess the righteousness of God in order for our faith to be perfected. Righteousness—the imputed righteousness of God—is the Divinely appointed link between “first believing” (Rom 13:11) and possessing faith when the Lord comes again (Lk 18:8). Fighting the good fight of faith and laying hold of eternal life (1 Tim 6:12) is contingent upon this righteousness. At no point is righteousness severed from faith.

PAUL’S TESTIMONY

It is no wonder Paul was so eager to be found possessing this righteousness in the last day, when nothing else will really matter. “More than that, I count all things to be loss in view of the surpassing value of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them but rubbish in order that I may gain Christ, and may be found in Him, not having a righteousness of my own derived from the Law, but that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which comes from God on the basis of faith”^{NASB} (Phil 3:8-9).

The relevance of this to the life of faith is confirmed in the Apostle’s next words. “that I may know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being conformed to His death, if, by any means, I may attain to the resurrection from the dead” (Phil 3:10-11). Thus the righteousness received by faith is seen as itself provoking further faith. The more aware the believer is of the possession of the righteousness of God, the more strength faith gains.

RIGHTEOUSNESS THROUGH FAITH

The righteousness of God is appropriated by appointed means—FAITH. Apart from faith, it cannot be possessed. Later in this Epistle, the Spirit will strongly affirm this to be the case. With a soul-jarring emphasis it is declared, “with the heart man believeth unto righteousness” (10:10). The NASB reads, “with the heart man believes, resulting in righteousness.”

When early believers were lured into the snare of Law, they were reminded, “knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law but by faith in Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Christ Jesus, that we might be justified by faith in Christ and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law no flesh shall be justified”^{NKJV} (Gal 2:16). The word “justified” means to be “made righteous.” Not only is the individual exonerated from all sin, but is given a new and spotless nature—the “new man.” The “new man,” or the “new creation,” is nothing less than “the righteousness of God,” granted upon the basis of faith in and reliance upon the Lord Jesus Christ. The perception of this will clarify First John 3:9 and 5:18.

And what is it that sparked that indispensable faith? Was it the Law? Indeed, not, for “the Law is not of faith.” It was the Gospel that brought the righteousness of God within our reach—that declared Christ died and has been exalted because He thoroughly pleased God in His atoning death. That is why it is written, “faith comes by hearing”—the hearing of the Gospel of Christ (Rom 10:14-17).

To put it another way, the righteousness is offered by the Gospel and received by faith. Someone has well said that when we are first born again, we see the Lord’s favoring look toward us – but at a distance. As our faith grows, however, that favor of the Lord toward us is seen more clearly. This produces a bold confidence and determined perseverance. Without faith, it is not possible to obtain the righteousness of God. Further, without the righteousness of God, it is not possible for faith to grow. Thus His righteousness comes to us through our faith, and our faith is strengthened by His righteousness—“from faith to faith.”

This arrangement confirms to our heart that salvation is not a once-for-all matter—at least not from the participative point of view. Salvation is a work that can only be brought to a culmination while we are within the favor of God. It cannot be accomplished from a distance, or while men are in a state of practical alienation from God. The imputation of the righteousness of God allows for the completion of the work.

Because this subject will be developed extensively in the third and fourth chapters, this should suffice to introduce it to us. Your own experience will confirm to you that there is scarcely a word being uttered in modern churches on this subject. Where this is true, the work of God is not being done, people are not being perfected, and victory is not being experienced.

Should a person choose to still cling to the foolish notion that the Gospel is not for the believer, let him ponder how utterly absurd this text would be if that were true. The Gospel is as essential as it is to be found in Christ possessing the righteousness of God that comes by faith.

Now the text will elaborate on the phrase “to faith,” or “in order to faith.” We will see that it is not possible to remain spiritually alive without faith. Also, it will become apparent that faith is not possible—at any point of life in this world—apart from hearing the Gospel of Christ. Faith and the hearing of the Gospel are joined together, and cannot be separated.

The Gospel continues to be a feast of fat things, and wine one the lees, nourishing our faith.

THE JUST SHALL LIVE BY FAITH

HABAKKUK

It is first affirmed by the prophet Habakkuk. He states it with a very personal tone. “Behold the proud, His soul is not upright in him; But the just shall live by his faith” (Hab 2:4). Here believing is contrasted with pride, so that the unbelieving soul is the proud one, and vice versa. The prophet also concludes that only personal faith can sustain the soul. One person cannot live toward God upon the basis of the faith of another.

GALATIANS

Paul concludes from this statement (“the just shall live by faith”) that it is evident no man is justified by the law. “But that no one is justified by the law in the sight of God is evident, for the just shall live by faith”^{NKJV} (Gal 3:11). Those, therefore, who fail to see this are blind.

Notice that living is associated with justification as well as being born again. Those imagining they can remain justified while believing only “for a while” (Lk 8:13-14) are in the grip of delusion.

HEBREWS

In the book of Hebrews, the Spirit

makes a strong case for the necessity of faith, showing that without it condemnation is inevitable. “Now the just shall live by faith; But if anyone draws back, My soul has no pleasure in him. But we are not of those who draw back to perdition, but of those who believe to the saving of the soul”^{NKJV} (Heb 10:38-39).

Here, faith is contrasted with drawing back from God, shrinking into the bushes of delusion. From this perspective, faith is leaning and pressing toward the Lord. It is getting closer so He can be the better heard, and His hand can be placed upon us, as Jacob’s hands were placed upon Joseph’s sons.

AN EXPOSITION

The statement, “For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith” is now expounded by the avowal “The just shall live by faith.” This is a fundamental consideration.

THE JUST

A “just” person is a “righteous” person, or one whose life is marked by uprightness—as God views uprightness. The standard by which the state of rightness is measured is the will or character of God. Viewed from the standpoint of legality, the “just” person is one who can stand before the Divine tribunal and NOT be condemned.

Prior to the Law

NOAH. Prior to the giving of the Law, the first man said to be “just” was Noah. It is said of him, “Noah was a just man, perfect in his generations. Noah walked with God” (Gen 6:9). Considering the time in which he lived, and the scarcity of Divine revelation, Noah is a most remarkable man. Of the multitudes living at that time, he is the ONLY man who “found grace in the eyes of the Lord” (Gen 6:8). His righteousness was viewed in comparison with the wicked generation in which he lived: i.e., “perfect IN his generations . . . “righteous before Me IN this generation” (Gen 6:9; 7:1). From Noah to Abraham, nearly a thousand years, no person was said to be “just” or “righteous.”

ABRAHAM. In Abraham, God introduced the kind of righteousness experienced in Christ Jesus. Abraham was righteous, but not merely in comparison with his generation. His righteousness, or becoming “just,” was imputed to him. Thus it is written, “And he believed in the LORD; and He counted it to him for righteousness” (Gen 15:6). This affirmation is the basis of Apostolic doctrine (Rom 4:3-6,9,11,20-25; Gal 3:6-14; James 2:23). The Psalmist also referred to this imputation of righteousness in Psalm 106:31). Thus we are introduced to a man that was MADE righteous by God because of his faith.

THE LAW. Under the Law, being “just,” or “righteous,” had to do with approved conduct—meticulously keeping the Law. Viewed in the strictest sense of the word, Solomon said, “For there is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not” (Eccl 7:20). It is further confirmed in the Psalms and this very Epistle, “There is none righteous, no not one” (Psa 14:1-3; 53:2-3; Rom 3:10). In the general sense of the word, there were people considered “just” because of their upright character and devotion to keeping the Law. Among them were Joseph, husband to Mary (Matt 1:19), Zechariah and Elizabeth, parents of John the Baptist (Lk 1:5-6), John the Baptist (Mark 6:20), Simeon, who blessed Jesus in His infancy (Lk 2:25), Joseph of Arimathea, in whose tomb Jesus was buried (Lk 23:50), and Cornelius (Acts 10:22).

Our Text

When our text speaks of “the just,” or “the righteous”^{NASB,NIV}, it is not speaking of a comparative righteousness like that of Noah. Nor, indeed, is it speaking of people who are “just” in the sense of Joseph, Zechariah, Elizabeth, and Simeon. This is not “just” as defined by the Law: i.e., “Moses describes in this way the righteousness that is by the law: ‘The man who DOES these things will live by them’” (Rom 10:5).

In this text “the just” are those who have been MADE just. Like Abraham, their righteousness has been imputed to them upon the basis of their faith. This is the whole argument of the text. The Gospel is God’s power in order to salvation to all who believe that Gospel. Therein, by means of the Gospel, a “righteousness from God” is revealed (1:17; 3:20).

I must be emphatic on this point. This is not a mere technicality. The Spirit will reason on this precise point through the eighth chapter. It is one of the most extended developments of a subject (if not the most) in all of Scripture. We learn from this that men are easily blinded to this. We also see that no real progress will be made in spiritual life where this is not comprehended.

Now, the Spirit will tell us how the life, granted in justification, is maintained. He will declare how those who have gained God’s approval remain in that status. He will affirm how those who have been raised from death in trespasses and sins keep alive.

LIVING BY FAITH

“The just shall live by faith,” or “The righteous will live by faith.”^{NIV} Note, it does not say the just OUGHT to live by faith, but that they will. Their faith has brought them life, and their faith will

“Living” is not mere existence. It is not simply being in a certain place, or maintaining a certain identity. In professed Christian circles, this is too often the view. Being “alive” involves being “married” to Christ and bringing forth fruit to God (Rom 7:4). It includes the capacity to hear “what the Spirit is saying to the churches” (Rev 3:22).

Being alive is running the race with endurance while “looking unto Jesus” (Heb 12:1-2). It is wrestling against the inimical powers of darkness (Eph 6:12), and waiting for God’s Son from heaven (1 Thess 1:9-10). It involves the “fruit of the Spirit” being found in us (Gal 5:22-25; Eph 5:9), and working out our “own salvation with fear and trembling” (Phil 2:12).

Those who are “living” are wearing the “whole armor of God” (Eph 6:10-17), “hastening unto the coming of the day of God” (2 Pet 3:12), submitting to God and resisting the devil (James 4:7). They are anticipating a “better country,” and thus consider themselves to be “strangers and pilgrims on the earth” (Heb 11:13-14,16).

And how are these justified ones able to maintain that life? How is it that they are able to “endure unto the end”? They are living by faith, for that is how the person who has been made “just” lives. Elsewhere it is said, “For we walk by faith, not by sight” (2 Cor 5:7).

How marvelously Paul testified of his own life in Christ Jesus. “I have been crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me”^{NKJV} (Gal 2:20). There simply is no other way to remain “dead indeed unto sin and alive unto God” (Rom 6:11).

The very thing that brought us life keeps us alive. The Spirit says it this way. “As you have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk in Him” (Col 2:6). Faith constrains us to lean the weight of our souls upon the Lord, depending upon Him to “bring us to God” in a blameless and joyful state (1 Pet 3:18; Jude 24-25).

Faith and the Gospel

If “the just shall live by faith,” then how is that faith kept strong and vibrant? Settle it in your mind that there is no spiritual life where there is no faith! How can we “continue in the faith grounded and settled,” seeing as that is an absolute requisite to being presented before God “holy and unblameable and unreprouvable in his sight” (Col 1:22-23)? IT IS OUR EXPOSURE TO, AND EMBRACE OF, THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST!

Do not imagine this to be an overly simplistic and powerless statement. Men may accent human effort, which is indeed required. But the Spirit will associate our faith with the Gospel, never allowing it to be sustained without that Gospel. Thus believers are admonished to strive together “for the faith of the Gospel” (Phil 1:27). And what is “the faith of the Gospel”? It is not the faith itself of which the Gospel speaks, for the Gospel does not speak of faith, but of the One in Whom faith resides. Faith “comes” us as we reach out, taking hold on the Gospel.

This is nothing less than the faith that “comes from hearing” the Gospel (Rom 10:14-17). Colossians 1:23 refers to a faith that does not allow us to be moved away from the “hope of the Gospel”—i.e., the hope produced by the embrace of the Gospel. When Paul determined to strengthen and encourage the Thessalonians in their faith, he sent Timothy, a “fellow laborer in the gospel of Christ” (1 Thess 3:2). This is why Paul was ready to “preach the Gospel” to the believers in Rome. He knew it was the nourishing root from which faith springs and by which it is also sustained.

If it is true that “the just shall live by faith,” then spiritual life cannot be found where faith is not present. Further, faith cannot come or remain independently of the Gospel of Christ. That is why we begin our spiritual lives by overtly participating in the Gospel through our baptism (Rom 6:1-8). It is also why we continue to refresh our hearts and minds by the regular remembrance of the Christ of the Gospel around the Lord’s table. Faith will never take you beyond a need for hearing the Gospel of Jesus Christ, for it cannot remain without that life-giving message.

Further, as Scripture affirms, the Gospel is anything but simplistic. It is more than an historical narrative. Neither, indeed, is it the statement of a lifeless theological creed. It is THE message through which God reveals what we so sorely require. How we need to hear it! It towers above all other messages, bringing life and hope to humanity, and nourishing and sustaining our faith.

CONCLUSION

We have dealt with one of the most profound passages of Scripture. It is ironic that it is often viewed as one of the more simplistic ones, and is therefore very much neglected. Many have made mention of this text only in reference to evangelism and reaching the lost. But the Spirit has associated it with being right before God and living by faith. The Gospel of Christ is an ongoing spiritual resource in which “the righteousness of God” is made known. The Spirit does not say this righteousness WAS revealed by means of the Gospel, but that it IS made known IN the Gospel.

No believer will go long without having to contend with the devil’s assault upon his sonship. Just as surely as Satan aggressively sought to bring Christ’s Sonship into question at the beginning and conclusion of His ministry (Matt 4:3-6; 27:43), so he will seek to bring your Divine acceptance into question. He will use adverse circumstances, false teaching, and even personal imaginations, to convince you that God has really not received you. When this happens, you must “fight the good fight of faith,” aggressively engaging the devil and his devices in order to keep the faith.

While all of your effort is involved, the real source of your victory is your faith. It, and it alone, “is the victory that overcomes the world” (1 John 5:4). And, if that is too ambiguous for you, the Spirit clarifies what is meant. “Who is he who overcomes the world, but he who believes that Jesus is the Son of God?” (1 John 5:5). The person who maintains that persuasion cannot lose!

And, how is it that the conviction that Jesus is the Son of God can be kept fresh? It is through the Gospel, and only through the Gospel! As meaningful as apologetic, historical, and archeological evidences may appear, which one of them has ever contributed one gram of substantiation that “Jesus is the Son of God?” The only source of proof is found in the Gospel, which itself is a revelation from God (2 Tim 1:10).

If the people of God are to be strong, they must hear the Gospel of Christ. Men of God must take this precious message and open its sustaining contents to the people. Their recollection of Jesus at the table of remembrance must be lifted above lifeless routine into the realm of invigorating life.

Let those who have correctly required believers to be baptized now take the Gospel and open to those “baptized into Christ” what really occurred in that singular event. None of them knew the fulness of that occasion when it took place, and precious few of them have a remotely adequate knowledge of its effects now. They are, because of a high level of spiritual ignorance, trusting in their baptism instead of the One into whom they were baptized. It is all in the Gospel of Christ.

Those who have a penchant for church patterns and organizations need to hear how it has been purchased by the blood of Christ, and raised up to sit with Him in heavenly places. They need to be reminded of the remarkable and unparalleled power that is devoted to them, and how God is preparing to present the church to Christ as a spotless bride. It is all in the Gospel of Christ.

The Gospel is a great light from heaven. In a grand statement of our God, the Spirit affirms He “has saved us and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was given to us in Christ Jesus before time began, but has now been revealed by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel” (2 Tim 1:9-10).

What is there that is pertinent to any aspect of salvation that has no connection with “life and immortality?” Is there any commandment or obligation that has nothing to do with “life and immortality?” Is there any human relationship divorced from “life and immortality?” Is there a single aspect of the body of Christ that has nothing to do with “life and immortality?”

Let those who imagine the Gospel to be irrelevant point us to a single human responsibility or relationship having nothing to do with “life and immortality”

Of course, to ask these questions is to answer them. There is nothing, absolutely nothing, having to do with our relationship to God through Christ, that is disassociated from "life and immortality." Here, in "life and immortality," the whole of our lives is encompassed. These deal with this world and the one to come; with fighting the good fight and obtaining the prize. Both living and dying are found in them. And it is all "brought to light," or illuminated, by the Gospel of Christ!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 4

WRATH and UNRIGHTEOUSNESS

1:18For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who suppress the truth in unrighteousness, 19because what may be known of God is manifest in them, for God has shown it to them. 20For since the creation of the world His invisible attributes are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead, so that they are without excuse, 21because, although they knew God, they did not glorify Him as God, nor were thankful, but became futile in their thoughts, and their foolish hearts were darkened. 22Professing to be wise, they became fools, 23and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like corruptible man; and birds and four-footed animals and creeping things. 24Therefore God also gave them up to uncleanness, in the lusts of their hearts, to dishonor their bodies among themselves, 25who exchanged the truth of God for the lie, and worshiped and served the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed forever. Amen. 26For this reason God gave them up to vile passions. For even their women exchanged the natural use for what is against nature. 27Likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust for one another, men with men committing what is shameful, and receiving in themselves the penalty of their error which was due. 28And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a debased mind, to do those things which are not fitting; 29being filled with all unrighteousness, sexual immorality, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, strife, deceit, evil-mindedness; they are whisperers, 30backbiters, haters of God, violent, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, 31undiscerning, untrustworthy, unloving, unforgiving, unmerciful; 32who, knowing the righteous judgment of God, that those who practice such things are deserving of death, not only do the same but also approve of those who practice them. (Romans 1:18-32^{NKJV})

INTRODUCTION

A righteousness from God has been made known through the Gospel of Christ, which is the power of God to accomplish salvation. This righteousness is appropriately described as “the righteousness which is from God by faith” (Phil 3:9). It is also represented as “the GIFT of righteousness” (Rom 5:17). It is not conferred upon individuals because they have, through their own efforts, become worthy of such a bestowment – like the conferment of an academic degree upon one who has fulfilled all of the requirements for that degree. The bestowal of this righteousness from God is based entirely upon faith.

The Spirit will now confirm that this arrangement is an absolute necessity. Before the almighty God, righteousness can be obtained in no other way. When sin entered into the world, nature could provide no place through which it could exit. With it came the death sentence, which also could not be reversed by natural means. To emphasize the nature of sin, the entrance of sin and death, siamese twins that cannot be separated, a single deed opened the door for them. It was not a mass of sin that brought death and all forms of malignancy into the world, but a single act of disobedience. Thus it is written, “Therefore, just as through one man sin entered the world, and death through sin, and thus death spread to all men, because all sinned . . . by the one man’s offense many died . . . For the judgment which came from one offense resulted in condemnation . . . by the one man’s offense death reigned through the one . . . through one man’s offense judgment came to all men, resulting in condemnation . . . by one man’s disobedience many were made sinners” (Rom 5:12-19).

NO ROOM FOR OPINION

There is no room for opinion or conjecture on this matter. Keep in mind, the “one offense” through which sin and death rushed into the world was not a murder, or some form of brutality. When compared with the deplorable results sin has provoked, that first deed appears quite small. But it was not small. Sin is never trivial. It is the NATURE of sin that is so reprehensible, not its appearance.

This section of Romans will confirm why sin is so utterly loathsome and repugnant to God. It is not possible for righteousness to be produced by any person guilty of sin! The condition spawned by sin can only grow worse. It can never become better. All efforts to correct the human condition through mental or physical disciplines are vain—absolutely unavailing!

This situation is not easily acknowledged by men. The wisdom of this world perceives humanity as fundamentally good, being in the process of development and improvement. This approach is not limited to non-religious wisdom, but is also found throughout the Christian community. It is not rare to find devoted Christians who are persuaded righteousness—the kind required by God—is the result of keeping a code, or measuring up to Divine standards for living. Significant theological battles have been waged through the centuries over these matters.

Our text will firmly establish that there would no need for a righteousness from God, were man remotely capable of fulfilling the Divine requirements for being righteous. As we will see, humanity needs more than mere direction. Sin has utterly corrupted every part of man, from his body to his soul. There is no part of that which is “born of the flesh” that is good or undefiled. It has been rejected in its totality, thus requiring the new birth.

THE EXTENT OF SIN

After the flood, God revealed to Noah that He would never again destroy all humanity as He did in that judgment. His promise is thus stated: “Never again will I curse the ground because of man, even though every inclination of his heart is evil from childhood”^{NIV} (Gen 8:21). Even Solomon knew “there is no one who does not sin”^{NIV} (2 Chron 6:36). The Psalmist said it, and the Apostles confirmed it, “They are all gone aside, they are all together become filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one” (Psa 14:3; Rom 3:10).

DAVID SPEAKS

David was acutely aware of how sin had corrupted all of human nature. “Behold, I was brought forth in iniquity, And in sin my mother conceived me” (Psa 51:5). The Psalmist was not saying he was guilty of transgression from conception, but that he possessed a nature bent in that direction. It only needed opportunity to express itself. Thus he said, “The wicked go astray from the womb; they err from their birth, speaking lies” (Psa 51:5).

THE NATURAL STATE

The “natural” is the human condition apart from Christ. It is a cursed state in which no profitability can be found. This is what Jesus meant when he said, “the flesh profiteth nothing” (John 6:63). Ultimately, the “natural” condition is traced back to Adam, and is visibly attested by our bodies (1 Cor 15:44-46). This part of us—“the natural man”—cannot take hold of the things of God. Thus, it is written, “But the natural man does not receive the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him; nor can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned^{NKJV} (1 Cor 2:14).

In his natural state, man is in a futile and hopeless condition. As it is written, “The LORD knows the thoughts of man, That they are futile” (Psa 94:11). Again, believers are challenged to remember what they were before their induction into Christ—particularly us Gentiles. “. . . at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world”^{NKJV} (Eph 2:12). The state of man apart from Christ is one of alienation (Eph 4:18), death in trespasses and sins (Eph 2:1-2), and being under the power of the wicked one (1 John 5:19).

CONFIRMATION

Our text will confirm this to be the case. Remember, the Spirit is elaborating on the revelation of the righteousness that comes from God by faith, and is revealed through the Gospel. Our first exposure will be to the Gentile world. We will see that a very real need for righteousness exists, and that man is not able to meet it.

Further, the situation is highlighted by the fact that God’s wrath has been revealed against ALL unrighteousness. He cannot make friends with it or overlook it. Divine acceptance demands that the individual be made righteous, else condemnation is inevitable. Few people have seen the gravity of the human circumstance brought on by sin.

The need for a righteousness from God is firmly established by the universal effect of sin upon our race, by Given O. Blakely

THE WRATH OF GOD REVEALED

4:18a For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men . . . "The Spirit will now confirm that apart from Christ and the possession of the righteousness of God, man is in a condemned state. While men boast of God's love being upon the world, our text will affirm it is actually His wrath that is upon it. The Lord Jesus Himself witnessed to this condition. "He who believes in Him is not condemned; but he who does not believe is condemned already, because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God . . . He who believes in the Son has everlasting life; and he who does not believe the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abides on him" (John 3:18,36). In this text, the focus is upon the total absence of righteousness apart from Divine imputation.

The picture is that all men have sinned, and are dominated by sin. They possess no righteousness of their own, and thus cannot stand before God. They are in a condemned state, and subject to the wrath of God, which is focused against the entire world.

Among other things, we see here that sin is actually antagonistic toward God. It provokes His wrath and calls forth His indignation, and that without exception.

THE NEED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS EXPLAINED

There are a series of explanations in verses sixteen through eighteen. First, the reason for Paul's readiness to preach the Gospel to those in Rome is because He is not ashamed of the Gospel: "FOR I am not ashamed of the Gospel . . ." Second, he is not ashamed of the Gospel because it is God's power to effect salvation: "FOR it is the power of God unto salvation . . ." Third, the Gospel is powerful to accomplish salvation because a righteousness for men is revealed in it: "FOR therein is revealed the righteousness of God . . ." Fourth, the absolute need for a righteousness from

God is seen in His wrath and indignation against all ungodliness and unrighteousness: "FOR the wrath of God is revealed against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men . . ."

God cannot overlook unrighteousness, or be indifferent toward it. It is still true, God "will by no means clear the guilty" (Ex 34:7). He "will not at all acquit the wicked" (Nah 1:3). I realize it has become fashionable to say "God will take you just as you are." However, that is not altogether true. The very reason for Jesus was that God could NOT receive us just as we were. Settle it in your mind: there is only one Divine attitude toward ungodliness and unrighteousness: WRATH!

Eventually, the wrath of God will be unleashed against all sin—all "ungodliness and unrighteousness of men." That day is appropriately called "the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God" (Rom 2:5). There is a "wrath to come," and salvation prepares us for it (1 Thess 1:10).

What Is Wrath of God?

The wrath of God is violent—the breaking forth of the Divine nature against all that is contrary to it. It includes anger and vengeance, both of which belong to God. Scripture apprizes us that sin provokes Him to anger (Deut 4:25; 32:16,21; 1 Kgs 15:30; Psa 78:58; 106:29; Isa 1:4). The wrath of God is His reaction to all that is contrary to, and conflicts with, His nature. It is the response of His holiness.

Our text states that the wrath of God is against ALL unrighteousness and ungodliness of men. There is no way for wrong doing (unrighteousness) and "ungodlikeness" (ungodliness) to avoid the wrath of God. If they are not put away, the person in whom they are found will be consumed by the wrath of God.

It is in this sense that "our God is a consuming fire" (Heb 12:29). Thus will He take "vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power" (2 Thess 1:8-9).

The awareness of this should destroy any casualness or tolerance men have toward unrighteousness and ungodliness. Whatever finely-spun theologies may be developed by men, the wrath of God is "against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men." Men may affirm God loves us "warts and all," but that is not the truth. They may declare that "no matter what we do God loves us," but that is a corruption of the truth, not a proclamation of it. All such statements are designed to make men comfortable in their sin and deficiency. But faith will not permit us to be comfortable with what is not approved by God, and cannot enter into heaven. The doctrine of God's wrath being directed toward all unrighteousness and ungodliness of men needs to be declared.

THE GREEN TREE

Our text associates the revelation of the wrath of God with the Gospel of Christ. Something of it, therefore, must be perceived in the Gospel. In summary, the most extensive revelation of the wrath of God has, to this time, taken place when Jesus died. There the wrath of God was poured out upon the Son who bore all of the unrighteousness and ungodliness of men in His body on the tree (1 Pet 2:24).

In that awful hour, when Jesus was “made to be sin for us” (2 Cor 5:21), He endured the curse of the Almighty–Divine wrath. As it is written, “Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us (for it is written, ‘Cursed is everyone who hangs on rejected their own Savior!

At this point, Jesus made an arresting statement. “For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?” (Lk 23:28-31). What was He saying? He Himself was the “green tree,”

Him up for us all” (Rom 8:32), what will be the experience of those who have chosen sin and remained a slave to it?

If you wonder what God’s attitude is toward sin—the unrighteousness and ungodliness of men—then consider what God did to Jesus when “the iniquity of us all” was laid upon Him (Isa 53:6). If He could not tolerate imputed sin, what about willing sin? The wrath of God has, indeed, been revealed through the Gospel. Man MUST possess righteousness, for no other state is acceptable before God.

If you wonder what God’s attitude is toward sin—the unrighteousness and ungodliness of men—then consider what God did to Jesus when “the iniquity of us all” was laid upon Him (Isa 53:6). If He could not tolerate imputed sin, what about willing sin? The wrath of God has, indeed, been revealed through the Gospel. Man MUST possess righteousness, for no other state is acceptable before God.

Thus the first argument for the necessity of a righteousness from God has been established. Unrighteousness is subject to the wrath of God! Either men obtain righteousness from God, or they will be consumed by His wrath. There are no alternatives to this. Outside of Christ, the best of human deeds are only unrighteousness and ungodliness. As Isaiah said, “But we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we all do fade as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away” (Isa 64:6). There is no righteousness for men apart from what God confers upon them. The point of this text, is that they were incapable of saving themselves, and unworthy of a salvation from God. It is His mercy that will provide that remarkable salvation.

a tree” (Gal 3:13).

A most precise expression of this circumstance was given by Jesus while He was being led to be crucified. At that time, “there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which also bewailed and lamented Him.” Turning to those lamenters, the Lord said, “Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.” He then told them of the coming destruction of Jerusalem, which He had prophesied earlier. “For, behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck. Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us.” What a dreadful judgment awaited those who had not easily subjected to burning, or the fiery indignation of the Lord. He was “green” in the sense of being alive and productive, with no fault found against Him. There was no sin in Him, and Satan had nothing in Him (1 John 3:5; John 14:30). Yet, He “tasted death for every man,” was “cursed” by God, and experienced the withdrawal of the Almighty from Him. The wrath of God was poured out upon the Son in a manner described as cursing (Gal 3:13)!

Israel was like a dry tree, brittle, lifeless, and easily burned. Indeed, if the indignation of God was leveled against the Son who did not sin, what would the wrath of God do against those who were guilty of sin in the extreme? If, when the sins of the world were laid upon Christ, God did not “spare Him,” but “delivered

The introduction of a righteousness from God presumes an absolute need for it, for God does or offers nothing that is not necessary. It is not a luxury. No man is righteous by nature. Nor, indeed, can righteousness be gained by human effort.

WHEN THE TRUTH IS SUPPRESSED

“^{48b} . . . who suppress the truth in unrighteousness, ¹⁹because what may be known of God is manifest in them, for God has shown it to them.”

We will now see the reprehensible nature of unrighteousness. The KJV reads, “who hold the truth in unrighteousness.” This does not mean they maintain a grasp of the truth while themselves remaining unrighteous. Rather it means they hold back, or hold down, the truth through their unrighteousness. The word used here (κατεχόντων) is a powerful one, meaning hold back, detain, restrain, check, hold down, and suppress. Barclay-Newman

The compound nature of unrighteousness is thus seen. Wherever it is found, truth is being suppressed and held down. By this we know that iniquity is aggressive. It is not, and cannot be, neutral toward the truth of God. It is not possible to entertain a preference for sin and remain in the favor of God. Nor, indeed, is it possible to comprehend the things of God while remaining in the grip of unrighteousness.

THE TRUTH

“The truth,” in this case is the true knowledge of God. The reasoning of the Spirit will confirm this to be the case. Unrighteousness keeps men from knowing God, even though they stand in the middle of revelation. We must see this! It is not possible to know God and be unrighteous at the same time. Those who affirm they have achieved such a feat have simply lied.

When Truth Fails

“Truth,” however, is not limited to the knowledge of God, although that is the primary subject of our text. It also has to do with any revelation of heavenly reality. Even though it has been revealed by God Himself, yet it can be suppressed. There are at least two expressions of this circumstance in the prophets. “Justice is turned back, And righteousness stands afar off; For truth is fallen in the street, And equity cannot enter. So truth fails, And he who departs from evil makes himself a prey. Then the LORD saw it, and it displeased Him That there was no justice”^{NKJV} (Isa 59:14-15). “So you shall say to them, ‘This is a nation that does not obey the voice of the LORD their God nor receive correction. Truth has perished and has been cut off from their mouth’”^{NKJV} (Jer 7:28).

In both of these texts, the effectiveness of truth is the point, and not the truth itself. The truth of God cannot succumb, failing to have any vitality. However, when men attempt to place it like a “jewel in a swine’s snout” (Prov 11:22), surrounding it by their tradition and ways, the truth no longer works effectively. Thus it is said to have “fallen in the street,” “failed,” and “perished.” A stilted theology cannot accept this Scriptural perspective. Such moves men to believe God goes on working in their midst through the truth, even though they have embraced lying ways with both hands. But this is far from being the truth.

God requires cleanliness in those who bear the vessel of truth, just as foreshadowed under the Law: “Be clean, You who bear the vessels of the LORD” (Isa 52:11). The Word of God is “blasphemed” because of human conduct—something believers are admonished to avoid with all zeal. For example, as it is written, older women are exhorted to “admonish the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste, homemakers, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God may not be blasphemed” (Tit 2:5). When David was chastened of the Lord for his sin with Bathsheba, the Lord gave this reason for the judgment: “because by this deed thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the LORD to blaspheme” (2 Sam 12:14).

In an arresting discourse concerning a massive falling away from the truth, Jesus declared, “And because lawlessness will abound, the love of many will grow cold” (Matt 24:12). And why is this the case? Because truth is suppressed by unrighteousness, even as our text affirms. The Lord will not allow the truth to flourish where iniquity is preferred.

To put it another way, when truth is not loved, it is withdrawn from prominence. In a poignant statement of this case, the Spirit speaks with great specificity. “... they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness” (2 Thess 2:10-12). This principle applies to all manifestations of the truth, whether the rudimentary revelation of nature, or the more precise revelation of the Gospel of Christ. This is a truth little recognized in the religious community.

WHAT MAY BE KNOWN OF GOD

There are some things about God that cannot be known. As it is written, “The secret things belong unto the LORD our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever . . .” (Deut 29:29). Our text now addresses things concerning God that could be known.

This is a great principle of Scripture. Men are held responsible for what they can know. When God has revealed something of Himself, and men do not avail themselves of that revelation, they are held accountable for their ignorance. Here again we behold a principle that is scarcely acknowledged in the contemporary church.

There is such an abysmal ignorance of the Word of God and His great salvation, that it is staggering. Even among Christian leaders, there is more ignorance of the Gospel than familiarity. It is not an innocent situation! When God places the truth—any facet of it—within our reach, He will hold us strictly accountable for laying hold of it and becoming familiar with it. Men who choose to speculate and philosophize about religion instead of embracing what “may be known of God” have, by that very action, suppress the truth! The word of God will not work effectually in those who do not believe (1 Thess 2:13). This sadly accounts for the powerless condition of many a professed believer. They have not taken hold on “what may be known of God.”

Our text is dealing with the Gentile world who had no word from God. Their testimony, as we will find, was the creation. If God held men responsible for not beholding Him in nature, what will be said of those who have not seen Him in grace, in the Gospel, and in the Person of Jesus Christ?

GOD HAS SHOWN IT TO THEM

Remember, we are speaking of man apart from either the Law or the Gospel. God did not hold men lacking these revelations responsible for beholding Himself as declared in them. They are only responsible for what God “has shown them.” I understand the emphasis of this text to be “to them.” That is, God has so arranged things that humanity can behold things concerning Himself. He has created them with a capacity to know Him, and strategically placed him to encourage that knowledge. Here is how Paul stated it to the lifeless Athenian philosophers. “From one man He made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth; and He determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live. God did this so that men would seek Him and perhaps reach out for Him and find Him, though He is not far from each one of us" (Acts 17:26-27).

For some, this is too hard to receive, but it is the revelation of God. God determined WHEN and WHERE "every nation of men" should live. He so positioned them in time and place that they would seek Him, extending themselves to find Him. This is the manner in which He made Himself known to them. He placed them in an environment not only created by Him, but which loudly testified of Him. To be ignorant of God, therefore, is inexcusable, as the Spirit will now confirm. Revelation is always attended with responsibility.

INVISIBLE ATTRIBUTES CLEARLY SEEN

⁴⁰For since the creation of the world His invisible attributes are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead, so that they are without excuse . . . "From the very beginning, creation was structured to display invisible qualities of the Living God. All things were "made" in a deliberate manner, in order that God might be more fully known through them. This, of course, makes the evolutionary hypothesis a Satanic lie. There is not an ounce of truth to it at any level, or from any view. Those who attempt to blend Divine creation with evolution through, what is called, "theistic evolution," only betray their ignorance of God. They say God created the world, but did it over eons of time, employing the principle of evolution—which itself is nothing more than a theory. Every aspect of creation was deliberate, with nothing left to chance or long-term development.

This circumstance is precisely why the "invisible attributes" of God are "clearly seen" in the things that are made. There is a precision and harmony about them that cannot be accounted for apart from God. To say that God used lengthy periods of time to create the "worlds" (Heb 1:2; 11:3) is absurd, because time contributes to deterioration, not perfection. The very concept of "time" suggests a termination, and therefore continual demise.

Further, creation was accomplished by God's Word, which confirms its instant genesis. The vast creation was put together in a deliberate manner, and with a focused objective. But that formation was not a lengthy building process. Rather it was accomplished by Divine fiat—His word. As it is written, "By faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that the things which are seen were not made of things which are visible" (Heb 11:3). That "word" projected God's character and purpose, stamping them both on the entirety of creation like an artists signature on a painting.

Let those who are tempted to compromise with the purveyors of evolution return to a godly manner of thinking. They are suppressing the truth with their professed wisdom, and draw attention to the creation itself rather than the One who called it into being.

INVISIBLE ATTRIBUTES

To the carnally minded, this does not seem reasonable: clearly seeing invisible attributes. But this is not speaking of mere physical vision. Rather, it is speaking of comprehension or perception. Beholding the creation, men should be brought to understand something about God Himself, the Creator whose signature is found in ever facet of His creation. These invisible attributes are "clearly seen," and are incontrovertible.

We will find, however, that sin has so dulled man's capacities that he does not perceive what is evident, or conclude what is inescapable. Remember, the Spirit is establishing the necessity of a righteousness from God. At this point He will confirm that no person failing to know what can be known of God is righteous. Righteousness is not possible where God is not perceived or known. That is an axiom with alarming ramifications.

ETERNAL POWER AND GODHEAD

And what is it that can be known of God through the creation? What are the "invisible attributes" of Him that are "clearly seen?" What is it that can be "understood by the things that are made?" It is His "eternal power and Godhead." Other versions read "eternal power and Divine nature,"^{NRSV,NIV,NASB} and "eternal power and Deity."^{RSV}

"Eternal Power"

Notice, the Spirit does not say "power," but "eternal power." This is a power that does not dissipate, and is always adequate to meet Divine objectives. This is the power that makes "all things possible" with God (Matt 19:26). This is a power to create and to sustain, initiate and maintain. The vastness of creation, as well as its duration testifies to such power. While all creation has been consigned to mortality, it does not appear that way to the unenlightened. It has outlasted all living creatures within its confines, including the highest of all creation, which is mankind.

"Eternal power" is what is otherwise referred to as "Omnipotence" or "Almighty." The understanding of this power is perceived by what it has accomplished. In our text, the creation is the result of “eternal power.” In redemption, the overthrow of all opponents, and the safe arrival of the saints in glory will be declared the result of “eternal power.” As it is written, “And I heard, as it were, the voice of a great multitude, as the sound of many waters and as the sound of mighty thunderings, saying, ‘Alleluia! For the Lord God Omnipotent reigns!’” (Rev 19:6).

Creation itself is not the primary focus of attention, but the God who brought it into being with His Word. His “eternal power” is the thing to be perceived, not the so-called power of nature. The evidence of that power is intended to provoke an earnest quest within man to know the One possessing it. Such power, it is assumed, cannot be ignored unless it is done deliberately—in quest for something deemed greater.

“Godhead”

The word “Godhead” appears three times in the KJV, NKJV, Websters English Bible, and Young’s Literal Translation (Acts 17:29; Rom 1:20 and Col 2:9). Other translations say “Divine nature,” NRSV, NIV, NASB “Deity,” RSV and “Divinity” ASV, Douay Rheims, Darbys This is a most difficult word to explain on a language level. Technically, the word means “the state of being God.” This is the first thing apprehended by faith, that “God IS” (Heb 11:6). Creation clearly affirms there is a God, a Divine personality that is eternal, and is by nature Head over all, and possessing all power. Those who question the existence of God are the most unreasonable and obtuse of all people. They have ignored what can be “clearly seen” by the world in which they reside.

The Testimony of Creation

The nineteenth Psalm affirms the consistent testimony of creation. “The heavens declare the glory of God; And the firmament shows His handiwork. Day unto day utters speech, And night unto night reveals knowledge. There is no speech nor language Where their voice is not heard. Their line (chord, voice, or message) has gone out through all the earth, And their words to the end of the world” NKJV (Psa 19:1-3).

Creation calls men upward, to a consideration of its Maker. The precision with which it continues, and the harmony with which it functions, speaks of a Creator and a purpose. Men have excuse.” God will not leave sinners with an alibi for their sin! Nor, indeed, will He assume the credit for men’s failure to conclude there is an all powerful God.

Men must guard against the tendency to lapse into philosophizing at this point: i.e., Is it possible to know God by studying nature? Can man discover God on his own?, etc. All such speculations are foolish. God elsewhere affirms that “the natural man cannot receive the things of the Spirit of God” (1 Cor 2:14), and that those in the flesh developed calendars and clocks upon the basis of the accuracy of creation. The seasons of nature are used to establish seed time and harvest time. All of this testifies to a God with eternal power. If men fail to see this, it is because they are willingly ignorant, considering other matters to be of greater significance.

Creation calls men upward, to a consideration of its Maker. The precision with which it continues, and the harmony with which it functions, speaks of a Creator and a purpose.

WITHOUT EXCUSE

The Spirit will now confirm that although sin reigns uncontested among those outside of Christ—and although men stand sorely in need or a righteousness from God—yet they are “without excuse.”

While this may appear a mere technical point, it is not. Although sin has dulled man’s capacity, hardened his heart, and blinded his eyes, he is still “without cannot please God” (Rom 8:8). Notwithstanding, man can conclude there is a God, and that He ought to be sought. God positioned all peoples for this purpose, and did it AFTER the fall (Gen 10:5,25,32; Deut 32:8).

Men are without excuse for not seeking God, as the following text will confirm. Their willful ignoring of the testimony of creation is inexcusable. I would venture to say that many missionaries do not present this truth, leaving lost people to expect their situation to be justifiable. But it is not. All men need a righteousness from God because they are fundamentally unrighteous. That condition is confirmed by their failure to seek the Lord, a vocation to which they were appointed, and for which they were positioned.

THEY DID NOT GLORIFY HIM, NOR WERE THEY THANKFUL

“²¹ . . . because, although they knew God, they did not glorify Him as God, nor were thankful, but became futile in their thoughts, and their foolish hearts were darkened. ²² Professing to be wise, they became fools,²³ and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like corruptible man; and birds and four-footed animals and creeping things.” The Spirit will now trace the retrogression of humanity. He is addressing the period described later: “For until the law sin was in the world” (5:13). The Lord will not allow man to excuse or explain his failure to be righteous. With unyielding tenacity, He will charge humanity with deliberately and aggressively avoiding what could be known of God. He gave them the aptitude and the evidence, and they refused it all.

THEY KNEW GOD

The knowledge to which the Spirit refers is elementary—being aware of God’s eternal power and Divinity. They possessed a general knowledge of the existence, perfection, and eternity of God. This is not knowing God like men in this day of salvation. Notwithstanding, any knowledge of God can be productive, and the suppression of that knowledge, elementary though it may be, is disastrous.

Later, the Spirit will confirm that some inward light had been granted to man, by virtue of being in the image of God. Of the heathen it is written, “who show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness” (2:15). Thus they possessed some knowledge of God, though certainly not the whole of it. But they were responsible for what they had received. Even in that very basic state, they are said to have “known God.”

Those who imagine that a little knowledge of God excuses men for their ignorance and waywardness must look carefully at this text. Knowing that God IS, and that He is eternal, is sufficient to induce men to earnestly seek Him, as they are appointed to do.

I cannot leave this point without mentioning additional sources of the knowledge of God. Adam and Eve had some acquaintance with God. Noah also possessed some key knowledge of God. There was a revelation of His way at the tower of Babel, as well as with ancients like Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Job—all before the Law.

THEY DID NOT GLORIFY HIM

By saying they “did not glorify Him as God,” the Spirit means they did not honor Him as He had been revealed to them: an eternal God with “eternal power.” They realized He existed, but refused to give Him honor as God. Knowing God in any sense brings with it a solemn obligation to worship and serve Him. God will not excuse men from these responsibilities. Further, to glorify God is to glorify Him only, for He alone is God.

The idea here includes that of communicating the truth of God to others, of declaring what was known of Him, and thus bringing honor to Him. In this process they would have promoted a reverence for God, as well as a quest to know Him more fully. Because of their unrighteousness and appetite for sin, they chose to suppress the truth of God—to bury in the recesses of their minds what their conscience told them.

THEY WERE NOT THANKFUL

Those who imagine that a little knowledge of God excuses men for their ignorance and waywardness must look carefully at this text.

Creation testifies loudly and clearly that it has been made—made by God. That being the case, thankfulness should rise from those occupying the creation. There is to be an acknowledgment that what is possessed has come from the hand of God. But this is not what occurred in the Gentile world. Thanksgiving did not rise to God, even at the lowest level.

Here, I understand thankfulness not to mean being thankful for particular things, like food, clothing, etc. Rather, this is a thankfulness expressed in a fervent quest for the God of creation. He who made a universe of harmony and order, with beauty and grandeur, is surely capable of directing and blessing the affairs of men. But they were not thankful enough to pursue the knowledge of God, developing it and coming to know Him more. They did not use what they had!

Vain Imaginations

Notice how the failure of men to glory God and be thankful did not end there. Their thoughts then became futile: “but became vain in their imaginations.” The word “imaginations” does not mean they were merely dreaming with no regard to practicality. Their reasonings, or thoughts, were profound in their own estimation, but futile and vain imaginations from God’s perspective (which is the only valid one). Other versions emphasize this: “but their thinking became futile”^{NIV} . . . “they became futile in their speculations”^{NASB} . . . “but became futile in their thoughts.”^{NKJV}

Since the manner in which a man thinks indicates what he really is (Prov 23:7), this means the world became pointless and meaningless in its living.

This is the condition that prevailed in Noah’s day. “And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually” (Gen 6:5). Following the flood, God told Noah He would never again destroy all humanity with a flood. The reason was because no improvement would ever be realized in the natural man. “The LORD said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man’s sake; for the imagination of man’s heart is evil from his youth; neither will I again smite any more every thing living, as I have done” (Gen 8:21). The idea is that man’s thoughts were given over to vanity as soon as he refused to give glory and thanksgiving to God. I am persuaded that few people see this as the outcome of rejecting the knowledge of God.

DARKENED HEARTS

When men do not avail themselves of the provisions of God, they must suffer the consequences of their negligence. Hearts that are not given to glorifying and thanking God will be filled with darkness. Jesus said, “But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness” (Matt 6:23).

This kind of darkness is not only the result of failing to glorify and thank God, it is imposed upon men by the God of judgment. This is nothing less than the withholding of light, which is the meaning of the word “darkened”: deprived of light.^{Strong’s} The ostrich, therefore, is not the only one deprived of wisdom (Job

FOOLISH WISDOM

The irony of the situation is that men thought they were wise in their foolish thoughts. “Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools.” while wearing the badge of intelligence, they actually became simpletons. Abandoning the testimony of creation, they concocted their own ideas about God. Their ideas were not only wrong, they were in sharp conflict with the true God, who possessed “eternal power.” Rather than seeking for God to reveal Himself, they took it upon themselves to arrive at a knowledge of Him through their own reasoning. The extent of their ideas will be expressed in the next verse.

It should not surprise us that this tendency remains among all men. Tragically, it has even penetrated the so-called Christian community. Men are still developing their own ideas about God instead of embracing the revelation He has given. But all such wisdom is foolishness. How poignantly it is stated in First Corinthians: “in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God . . . ” (1:21). Left to themselves, and because of sin, men became fools, even though they professed themselves to be wise.

CHANGING THE GLORY OF GOD

The extent to which man fell is seen in the conceptions of God that he developed. In all of them—whether idols of wood and stone, or mental conceptions—there is a corruption of God. Our text states they “changed the glory of the incorruptible

BAAL

God into an image made like corruptible man; and birds and four-footed animals and creeping things.”

Men threw their energies into the creation of false gods, together with their images. They knew by the testimony of creation that there was a God, yet they refused to glorify Him as God. Instead, they constructed gods of their own making. A few that are mentioned in Scripture are listed below.

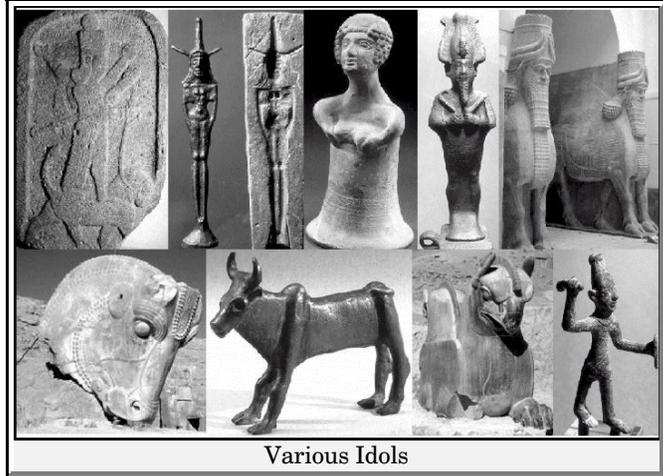

- Adrammelech, Mesopotamia (2 Kgs 17:31).

- Amon, Egypt (Nah 3:8)
- Anammelech, Babylonian (2 Kgs 17:31)
- Anat, Canaanites (Jer 44:19)
- Artemis (Diana), Greeks (Acts 19:35)
- Baal, Syria (1 Kgs 18:19)
- Ashima, Samaria (2 Kgs 17:30)
- Ash-toreth, Canaanites (1 Kgs 11:5)
- Baal-berith, Shechem (Judges 9:4)
- Baalpeor, Moabites (Psa 106:28)
- Bel, Babylon (Jer 51:44)
- Chemosh, Moabites (Judges 11:24)
- Dagon, Philistines (Judges 16:23)
- Merodach, Babylonian (Jer 50:2)
- Milcom, Ammonites (2 Kgs 11:5)
- Moloch, Ammonites (Amos 5:26)
- Nergal, Babylonian (2 Kgs 17:30)
- Nibhaz, Avites (2 Kgs 17:31)
- Nisroch, Assyria (2 Kgs 19:36)
- Rimmon, Damascus (2 Kgs 5:18)
- Succothbenoth, Samaria (2 Kgs 17:30)
- Tamuz, Babylonian (Ezek 8:14)
- Tartak, Samaria (2 Kgs 17:31)
- Zeus (Jupiter), Greek (Acts 14:11-12)

Notice, they did not change God, but the “glory of God.” That is, they changed how He appeared to men. Instead of One characterized by “eternal power” and Divinity, they likened Him to things corruptible, beginning with man, and descending to the creeping things of the earth.

All of this was an attempt to conform God to human reasoning. Men were creating a god they could understand. Men only make an image of things they think they understand. You cannot make an image of a mystery, or a complex problem.

Further, their images reflected their ideas of God, which were gross and depraved. They were not content to liken God to a man, but even associated Him with beasts of the earth and serpents that slither along the ground. They also sought to combine human and animal traits, vainly attempting to explain Deity. Their images were grotesque.

From another perspective, men deified both their lusts and their fears. They concocted fertility and love goddesses to allow the unrestrained indulgence of their depraved appetites. They made gods of their fears, thinking to gain some form of protection.

In all of this, they were zealous to change the glory of God, but not to retain Him in their knowledge. They were not content to seek Him as they were appointed to do, but made images as though they had finally comprehended Him. The universality of these attempts confirm the terrible effects of sin.

All of this is designed to teach us that men are incapable of developing a righteousness of their own. Further, their deeds were not innocent. We will find the judgment of God was leveled upon men for indulging in such a vain pursuit as “changing the glory of God.”

I cannot leave this section without drawing attention to the creation of many Christian gods in our day. Men have conjured up mental images of God that are devoid of truth, and a reproach to God. Some have conceived of God as tolerant of sin and indifferent to man’s moral uncleanness. Others have seen him as a God that saves men without their own involvement. Some perceive Him as primarily interested in improving life in this world. All of these are idols, just as surely as the golden calf and Nebuchadnezzar’s great image. They are purely the creation of men.

GOD GAVE THEM UP!

“²⁴Therefore God also gave them up to uncleanness, in the lusts of their hearts, to dishonor their bodies among themselves, ²⁵who exchanged the truth of God for the lie, and worshiped and served the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed forever. Amen. ²⁶For this reason God gave them up to vile passions.” The Gospel announces a righteousness from God—an indispensable righteousness. With great power, the Spirit is confirming men cannot do without “a righteousness from God.” They have proved by their conduct that sin has blasted all of their capacities, so that they cannot think correctly about God. The fact that not a single soul has ever stumbled upon the truth about God proves this to be the case. No person has ever known God to any measurable degree independent of a Divine initiative. Further, the initiative had to be greater than a mere appearance in nature. While the whole creation testifies to the “eternal power and Divinity” of God, it cannot circumscribe the heart, sensitize the inner ear, or of clarify human perception. The universality of sin, without a single exception, makes this incontrovertible.

For this reason, God wrote off the entire natural order. He will even remove restraints of both conscience and providence from man, confirming what he will do when left to himself. Remember, this is a judgment incurred because the testimony of creation was ignored, men became unthankful, and went about to create their own gods.

WHEN GOD GIVES MEN UP

Those who imagine you can dabble in sin and still remain immune from Divine judgment need to consider this passage. Here is how God responded to those with no written Law from heaven or copy of the Scriptures. He “gave them over in the lusts of their hearts to impurity, that their bodies might be dishonored among them.”^{NASB}

God Can Restrain Men From Sin

From this we learn that, under ordinary circumstances, the Lord does restrain men from excessive involvement in sin. Whatever you may think of the free will of man, you do well not to ascribe too much credit to it. On one occasion, God revealed His control of man’s involvement in sin to Abimelech, king of Gerar. He had taken Abraham’s wife Sarah to himself, supposing she was only Abraham’s sister. Coming to Abimelech in a dream, God told him, “Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for

No person has ever known God to any measurable degree independent of a Divine initiative. Further, the initiative had to be greater than a mere appearance in nature.

she is a man’s wife.” The king replied that he had not come near to Sarah, declaring he had not intended to take another man’s wife. God then explained to him, “Yes, I know that you did this in the integrity of your heart. For I also withheld you from sinning against Me; therefore I did not let you touch her.”^{NKJV} (Gen 22:2-6).

That is not the only incident of God restraining people. He did not allow Laban to hurt Jacob (Gen 31:7). He did not allow the hostile cities around the sons of Jacob to hurt them as they journeyed (Gen 35:5). When the Israelites observed their annual feasts, and the land seemed defenseless, God said “For I will cast out the nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders: neither shall any man desire thy land” (Ex 34:24). Abigail confessed that God had withheld David from coming to shed blood. David acknowledged this was precisely the case (1 Sam 25:26,34).

Divine Restraint Can Be Removed

But lest men assume God will always keep them from deep and profound sin, the Spirit delivers the text before us. There comes a time when God can be so provoked that all restraints are removed. In such a case, men are delivered over to the very pursuits that will cause their condemnation.

The human condition is so serious that, unrestrained, men are capable of the most heinous and unreasonable sins. Let men argue about whether we are “totally depraved” or not, and what that may or may be involve. But let us not allow our hearts to be distracted from the truth of the case. Apart from being in Christ, the heart of man is filled with all manner of impurities and sinful passions. The natural condition of man is well stated by the prophet Jeremiah. “The heart is deceitful above all things and beyond cure. Who can understand it?”^{NIV} (Jer 17:9).

It does not say God delivered them over to the devil—although there are occasions when this is done (1 Cor 5:5; 1 Tim 1:20). Nor, indeed, does he say they were delivered over to demonic powers, although the fall of spiritual Babylon is said to result in this (Rev 18:2). God delivered them over to the lusts of their own hearts! We will shortly see the devastating result of this action: God giving men over to the sinful lusts of their own hearts.

Thus, like the bottomless pit was opened by an angel from heaven (Rev 9:1), so God so judged men as to release the wretchedness that was inherent within them. Should anyone still doubt the need for a righteousness from God, let them ponder the depths to which men sink when they are given over to their lusts by God. Indeed, “it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God” (Heb 10:31).

DISHONORING THEIR BODIES

The result of being given over to the lusts of their hearts was the degrading of their bodies among themselves. One of the indications of Divine judgment is the degrading of the body. This refers to all forms of moral impurity, and will be covered extensively in the succeeding verses.

The point to be seen here is that the body belongs to the Lord. As it is written, "Now the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord" (1 Cor 6:13). The body is thus degraded when it becomes the means of self gratification through immorality.

The Spread of Evil In Our Day

The Western world is presently plagued with unprecedented outbreaks of immorality and the dishonoring of the body. Like plagues rushing out of control, men have been given over to unimaginable wickedness. Some of the vices that have become common include bulimia (episodes of binge eating and

This is a matter worthy of much thought.

EXCHANGING THE TRUTH FOR A LIE

The KJV reads, "Who changed the truth of God into a lie." This is viewing the matter from a subjective viewpoint—what the people did. They did not change the truth itself, but their representation of it, for the truth is eternal, "enduring to all generations" (Psa 100:5).

The truth, as compelling as it is, was placed to the side in favor of a lie. Even though the creation testified to the eternal power and Deity of God, yet men lusts of men, provoking them to go "a whoring with their own inventions" (Psa 106:39). How tragic to choose the lie!

THE CREATOR IS BLESSED FOREVER

"... the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen." By saying the Creator "is blessed for ever," the Spirit means that He alone is worthy of all worship and service. He only is to be honored, for He has made and upholds all things.

I have recently become acutely aware of how little honor is actually given to God. Although He is "blessed for ever," men insist on speaking more of their works than of His. We learn from this text how serious it is to rob God of His glory, and become unthankful. In this passage the Spirit affirms that the outbreak of gross immorality is directly traceable to the failure of men to give God honor and thanksgiving.

Could it be that the unthankfulness of this generation, and its refusal to give glory to God has provoked the Lord to deliver it over to the lusts of its heart? Has God overlooked the credit men give to science, medicine, human innovation, and even the devil himself?

FOR THIS REASON

"For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections..." This is now the second time we have read of God giving men up, or delivering them over, to something. Again, were it not for the "goodness of God" that leads men to repentance (Rom 2:4), this would have been the lot of all men.

Notice, God did not give them over to be controlled by "vile affections" because they were murderers like Cain, but because exchanged the glory of God for created things. They exchanged the truth of God for a lie, and worshiped and served what was made rather than the Maker. How serious is that? "For this reason God gave them up to vile passions."^{NKJV}

We will now see what these "vile passions" produced. Keep in mind that what we are reading is not the mere denunciation of the sins mentioned. Rather, it is an explanation for why they arose, and why they accelerated. It was the result of God's judgment.

purging), anorexia (excessive dieting and weight loss due to the fear of being fat), fornication (all forms of immorality), use of narcotics (from tobacco and alcohol to hard drugs), bestiality (immorality committed with animals), homosexuality, and suicide. All of these are in near-epidemic proportions, and especially among the young. Professed authorities on these subjects have been able to do little more than identify the symptoms and affects of the abuses.

Why have these things arisen? Could it be that the unthankfulness of this generation, and its refusal to give glory to God has provoked the Lord to deliver it over to the lusts of its heart? Has God overlooked the credit men give to science, medicine, human innovation, and even the devil himself? Perhaps what we are seeing is a forsaken generation, paying the penalty for thrusting God out of its life. There is a severe penalty to be paid for rejecting the righteousness of God.

chose mythology, science, astrology, nature, and other lies. They "exchanged" the liberating truth of God for the bondage-creating lie. And why did they do so? Because God gave them over to their depraved hearts. In so doing, they became spiritually stupid, and thus began their descent into the quagmire of iniquity.

They chose to worship and serve the created things rather than the Creator. If we think this is too far from the people of our time, ponder the ecological absurdities that men have embraced in our day. "Mother earth" and "mother nature" have been so exalted that people extend themselves to protect animals and atmosphere, while killing babies and abusing one another. That is the kind of affect "a lie" produces.

As soon as men embraced the lie, the glory of God faded from their view. Simultaneously, all of the powers of darkness were loosed to inflame the base

THE VILENESS OF SODOMY

^{26b}For even their women exchanged the natural use for what is against nature.²⁷Likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust for one another, men with men committing what is shameful, and receiving in themselves the penalty of their error which was due."The modesty of the Spirit in describing this situation is worthy of note. He speaks of reprehensible sins so as not to provoke the passions of the sinful nature. Yet, He speaks with enough clarity so as to remove any question concerning the “vileness” of the passions to which God consigned the unthankful.

The phrase “natural use” means instinctive intimacy between a man and a woman. Some of the more contemporary translations provide more crude language, unworthy of repeating here. The NASB reads “natural function,” while the NIV and RSV read “natural relations.”

The sin of reference is sodomy, which is consistently and powerfully condemned by God. The term men have assigned to this sin is homosexuality, which is more a term of man’s wisdom. The text declares the involvement of both women and men. Once again, an “exchange” is made—what is right for something that is wrong; the truth for a lie. The “natural use” is the one God ordained, and is the only means by which procreation can take place. The preference of sodomy was not merely “unnatural” (NRSV, NIV, NASB). The expression is much stronger than that. There are two words in the Greek text (παρὰ φύσιν). The first word means “adversatively, against, contrary to, without regard for, beyond.”¹ Barclay-Newman

The word “unnatural,” therefore, is too weak. The sin of sodomy conflicts with nature. It is contrary to it, and violates an order set in place by God Himself. Men have attempted to dignify the sin by calling woman-to-woman intimacy lesbianism. That makes it all more tolerable, and opens the door for the psychological analysts to ply their fleshly trade.

The Spirit continues on this matter, showing the extent to which “vile passions” carried their victims. “Likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust for one another, men with men committing what is shameful.”² NKJV Remember, this is the Holy Spirit speaking. What men call love, the Spirit calls “shameful.” The burning lust of men for men is not something acquired in birth. It is a result of failing to glory God and be thankful. It is the consequence of being delivered over to vile passions by the God they neglected.

Sodom and Gomorrah

You may recall that this is the very sin that brought “the vengeance of eternal fire” upon Sodom and Gomorrah. Because this is vehemently denied by sodomites, I will take the time to briefly rehearse that awesome event.

The burning lust of men for men is not something acquired in birth. It is a result of failing to glory God and be thankful. It is the consequence of being delivered over to vile passions by the God they neglected.

The condition of Sodom and Gomorrah was so vile the sound of it reached up into heaven. “And the LORD said, ‘The outcry of Sodom and Gomorrah is indeed great, and their sin is exceedingly grave.’” The nature of their sin was not explained at that point. Having sent two angels to destroy the city, the matter was made more clear. Appearing as men, these angels were entertained by Lot. After he prepared a great feast for them, and before they retired for the evening, the seriousness of the condition surfaced. “Before they lay down, the men of the city, the men of Sodom, surrounded the house, both young and old, all the people from every quarter; and they called to Lot and said to him, ‘Where are the men who came to you tonight? Bring them out to us that we may have relations with them.’” After Lot rejected their request, the angels “brought Lot into the house with them, and shut the door. And they struck the men who were at the doorway of the house with blindness, both small and great.” But their passions burned still stronger, even after the men were blinded. It is written, “they wearied themselves trying to find the doorway” (Gen 19:4-11^{NASB}). Here is a lust that refuses to be satisfied, driving men to unparalleled indulgence.

The Law

The Law, which was given to define sin (Rom 3:20), spoke directly to the matter of sodomy. “You shall not lie with a male as with a woman. It is an abomination. Nor shall you mate with any animal, to defile yourself with it. Nor shall any woman stand before an animal to mate with it. It is perversion”^{NKJV} (Lev 18:20). “If a man lies with a male as he lies with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination. They shall surely be put to death. Their blood shall be upon them”^{NKJV} (Lev 20:13). The texts are plain enough.

The Time of the Judges

The book of Judges contains an incident much like that occurring Sodom. The account describes an unnamed man of years. Returning from a day’s work, he saw a traveling man in the street of the city. The “old man” asked where he was from and where he was going. Upon learning the traveler was going to the house of God, and had no place to stay for the evening, he brought him to his own home. “Peace be with you! However, let all your needs be my responsibility; only do not spend the night in the open square. So he brought him into his house, and gave fodder to the donkeys. And they washed their feet, and ate and drank.”^{NKJV} They then spent some enjoyable time together.

The pleasantries of the evening was soon interrupted. The Scriptures say, “As they were enjoying themselves, suddenly certain men of the city, perverted men, surrounded the house and beat on the door. They spoke to the master of the house, the old man, saying, ‘Bring out the man who came to your house, that we may know him carnally!’”^{NKJV} (Judges 19:16-22). Notice, the text says they were “perverted men.” The KJV says they were “sons of Belial” (an exact translation). The NIV reads “wicked men.” The NASB reads, “certain worthless fellows.” The RSV reads “base fellows.” The NRSV reads “a perverse lot.”

The text is clear enough. These men were wicked, perverted, and base. Their condition was revealed in their preference for men—a condition that violates nature, law, and grace. It cannot be justified.

The New Testament

In this day of salvation the announcement is made, “. . . the unrighteous will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived. Neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor homosexuals, nor sodomites . . .” (1 Cor 6:9). The Law, it is affirmed, is for “the lawless and insubordinate, for the ungodly and for sinners, for the unholy thinking on the matter.

Contemporary Translations

If you are accustomed to reading one of the contemporary versions of Scripture (^{NKJV, NRSV, NIV, NASB}), you are aware the word “sodomite” is not generally used in them. Alternate words are “perverted persons” (^{NKJV}), “male temple prostitutes” (^{NRSV}), “male shrine prostitutes” (^{NIV}), and “male cult prostitutes” (^{NASB, RSV}). These are employed in the Old Testament writings. What they fail to confirm is that a “male prostitute” was. In fact, a sodomite, or a man who was intimate with another man.

The exclusion of “sodomites” from the Kingdom of God (1 Cor 6:9), appears to be more difficult to avoid. The KJV reads, “abusers of themselves with mankind,” thus emphasizing the deviate nature of the deed. The NKJV and NRSV read “sodomites.” The NIV reads “homosexual offenders.” The NASB reads “homosexuals.” The 1 Timothy 1:10 text reads much the same way. The KJV reads “them that defile themselves with mankind.” The RSV and NRSV read “sodomites.” The NASB reads “homosexuals.”

I have taken the time to explain this more fully because of the aggressive defense of sodomy that is being promoted in our day, and to which our children are subjected. Terms like “sexual orientation,” “sexual preference,” and others, are employed to break down the defenses even nature raises. But this sin is one of enormous magnitude. We must not allow Satan’s children to corrupt our lusts, to fulfill them with zeal. Here is a sin that is the result of sin! It has arisen because men have refused to acknowledge, honor, and serve the Living God.

This particular transgression has reached new depths in our time. In history, it was associated with heathen religions. Sodomites did not identify themselves with Christ, but with the gods of sensuality and lust. In our time, however, there are sodomite churches and preachers. Traditional Christian denominations are now ordaining sodomites to the ministry, and we regularly hear of “gay Christians.” We are, indeed, living in a time of severe judgment, and we do well to give diligence to make our calling and election sure.

A JUST PENALTY

The “indecent acts” committed by these people are immediately judged by God. They “received in themselves the due penalty for their perversion.”^{NIV} This is an unusually strong statement, being the only one of its kind in Scripture. Other translations read as follows: “received in their own persons the due penalty for their error.”^{NRSV} . . . “receiving in themselves due reward for their perversion”^{NJB} . . . “suffered within themselves the penalty they so richly deserved”^{NLT} . . . “getting in their bodies the right reward of their evil-doing”^{BBE} . . . “suffering in their own bodies and personalities the inevitable consequences and penalty of their wrong doing and going astray, which was [their] fitting retribution.”^{AMPLIFIED BIBLE}

Extraordinary sins do not result in ordinary retribution! This principle is included in the statement, “Some men’s sins are clearly evident, preceding them to judgment, but those of some men follow later”^{NKJV} (1 Tim 5:24). Some sin not only violates the written Law of God, but the unwritten law of nature. Such sins are especially foolish because they require the suppression of even natural understanding and inclinations. The sins of women exchanging “the natural use for what is against nature,” and men burning “in their lust for one another, men with men,” are such sins. They call for a more immediate penalty that makes the sinner more conspicuous: i.e., “receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was meet (appropriate)”.

Whether nations or individuals, those who have practiced such base sins have suffered unusual deterioration in both body and soul.

There is an impressive listing of “sexually transmitted diseases” (STD). Among them are AIDS (breakdown of the immune system, with no known cure), syphilis (highly infectious spread of lesions and deterioration effecting the skin, brain, and spinal chord), gonorrhea (inflammatory disease affecting personal parts, throat and eyes), Chlamydia (a disease that sometimes has no symptoms, and causes infertility in women), herpes (infectious disease related to cancer, which has no known cure), chancroid (an infection leaving a painful sore that often destroys tissue), etc.

Traditionally, these diseases have been found in epidemic proportions in the darker continents, noted for their religious corruption and idolatry. They are presently found in growing measures in our own country. While some innocent people have also suffered from these infectious diseases, they are the deserved “penalty” for extraordinary sin. They are a Divine judgment on a society that has rejected the knowledge of God.

Our Reaction

Should we have compassion on such sinners? Indeed we should! The Gospel is addressed to even these people. A notable example of this is found in the Corinthian church. Corinth was a place where many of these things were regularly practiced. Although a citadel of human wisdom, that wisdom was not able to keep men from rejecting God and descending into a moral pit. Because there was a tendency to ignore the seriousness of these sins, the Spirit issued a strong warning to the brethren there. “Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.” (1 Cor 6:9-10). In this text, the word translated “effeminate” (μαλακοί) means a man that is womanly, and even a young boy kept for relations with a man. The words “abusers of themselves with mankind” comes from ἀρσενοκοῖται, and means sodomite, or homosexual.^{Barclay-Newman} There is no chance that such people will inherit the kingdom of God. These are reprehensible sins—abominations.

After making this solemn pronouncement, the spirit adds, “And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God” (1 Cor 6:11). The righteousness of God, therefore, can also be conferred on those who have been guilty of such unreasonable sins, yet have believed the Gospel and fallen upon Jesus.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN MEN REFUSE THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD

The Spirit does not leave this subject quickly, or only touch upon it in a surface manner. He is establishing the absolute need for the righteousness of God. Men have no righteousness of their own, nor are they capable of producing one. When left to their own nature, they quickly descend into the bottomless pit of corruption. Apart from Divine restraint we are not able to know how profoundly wicked men would become.

We have just read of God turning men over to their own base lusts. Now He elaborates on that condition, firmly fixing in our hearts that this was a just judgment from God. It was not simply the sinful nature that carried men further into the abyss of iniquity, but God’s release of them to do so.

THEY DID NOT LIKE TO RETAIN GOD IN THEIR KNOWLEDGE

“Furthermore, since they did not think it worthwhile to retain the knowledge of God”^{NIV} God created man in

His own image, and placed him in a world that bore testimony to His “eternal power and Deity.” Additionally, the Lord deliberate assigned the times and places to be occupied by men “that they should seek God, if perhaps they might grope for Him and find Him, though He is not far from each one of us” (Acts 17:26-27).

Every advantage was afforded to men in order that they might know God. If they would have followed their conscience, Men have no righteousness of their own, nor are they capable of producing one. When left to their own nature, they quickly descend into the bottomless pit of corruption. Apart from Divine restraint we are not able to know how profoundly wicked men would become.

it would have led them to pursue the true knowledge of God. But they did not. What “may be known of God” was “manifest IN them, for God has shown it to them” (1:19). Yet, men “did not like to retain God in their knowledge.” They had no real appetite for the true God, and thus sought to develop their own.

A Deliberate Response

The action here is deliberate, and not inadvertent. They turned away from God, seeing no advantage in pursuing Him. It was an act of rejection, and there was nothing casual about it. When referring to the ultimate light, Jesus put it this way. “And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil” (John 3:19).

The principle is the same, whether we are speaking of the light revealed through the creation, or the fullest light made known in Jesus. Men reject Divine light because they prefer darkness—sin and degradation. They prefer the darkness because it matches their deeds—it is where they feel more comfortable, and where they find their greatest satisfaction.

“For everyone practicing evil hates the light and does not come to the light, lest his deeds should be exposed”^{NKJV} (John 3:20).

This is another way of saying, “the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be” (Rom 8:7). And again, “But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Cor 2:14). The condition, however, was produced by man’s own corrupt appetite. This is not the way God made man, but is the direct result of sin.

A Description of Humanity

This passage is not a description of the baser segment of humanity, but of humanity as a whole. The emphasis is on the Gentiles, or those without a written Law from God. In the second chapter, the Spirit will show that the same principles apply to the Jews, who received a written Law from God.

The reference is to “men,” introduced in verse 18, and elaborated on throughout the remainder of the chapter. There are some notables among our race who, before the Law, pursued God. Among them are Abel, Enoch, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Job. They are most unusual men, and were also noted for their acknowledgment of sin. The sacrifice of Christ was for them also, for they too needed a righteousness from God.

In my judgment, we must carefully guard against concluding only some men refused to retain God in their knowledge, or that this is something less than a universal blight. The Spirit is convincing us of the essentiality of a righteousness from God—one that is given to men. With Divine precision, He is showing the effects that sin has worked among men. It has so corrupted the human nature that nothing from it is salvageable. There is no remnant of the Adamic nature that can be reshaped or made acceptable to God. A new birth is absolutely essential! That is an postulate of Scripture that cannot be ignored. Jesus said that apart from the new birth, the kingdom of God could neither be perceived nor entered (John 3:3,5). Scripture affirms that being a Jew or a Gentile is not what counts, but “a new creature” (Gal 6:15).

I must acknowledge that it was some time before the magnitude of this truth began to burst upon my soul. At the time, however, that it became more apparent to me, it was because I was the more convinced of the exceeding sinfulness of sin (Rom 7:13). This is precisely what this text is affirming to our spirits. It is showing us that sin consistently and aggressively descends into the pit. It never reaches upward, and never encourages a quest for God—never!

Sin—of which all are guilty—moves men to thrust God from their thoughts, rejecting the obvious testimony of His creation. It causes men to prefer darkness and move swiftly away from God. Even though sinners are given great advantages, they cannot reverse their downward direction. They are incapable of yielding anything acceptable to God. They need a righteousness from God. And their condition confirms it.

The Spirit will again show us the seriousness of the human condition. He will confirm that although God has compassion, and “is love,” yet He will not ignore man’s refusal to retain Him in their knowledge, and their preference for their sin.

One More Thing

One more word on this critical point. It is imperative that we see the seriousness of men’s disinterest in God. That should be glaringly apparent in this text. And yet, in confirmation of the wickedness of the times, this very attitude has entered into the professed church.

With Divine precision, He is showing the effects that sin has worked among men. It has so corrupted the human nature that nothing from it is salvageable. There is no remnant of the Adamic nature that can be reshaped or made acceptable to God.

There is a staggering amount of disinterest in God and the things of God in the churches. More and more they are being given over to social issues, community projects, and the resolution of human difficulties. The proclamation of God’s word is not held in high regard, and the length and frequency of gatherings devoted to the things of God are being reduced to a bare minimum.

Who has not witnessed this remarkable phenomenon? And yet it is ignored to such a degree as causes the heart to tremble. This climate of disinterest has brought about a flood of unspiritual leaders, charlatans, and religious opportunists. Men of earthly expertise have supplanted those with the knowledge of God. Seminars and workshops majoring on trivia have become popular. Christian conventions are led by motivators, church-builders, administrators, and carnal specialists.

The quest of the modern church is not for the Lord, but for success and earthly recognition. Its leaders receive their credentials from institutions rather than the Lord, and become specialists in things that will pass away. They are leading men and women in ignoring God. What they are calling successful does not have one ounce of support from the Word of God. In fact, it is diametrically opposed to everything Jesus and the Apostles taught. No longer is God unknown only among the heathen tribes of the world, or the philosophical citadels of an Athens or Corinth. Now He is unknown in the church. This is a shameful condition, as confirmed by this word to the church of God in Corinth, “Come back to your senses as you ought, and stop sinning; for there are some who are ignorant of God—I say this to your shame”^{NIV} (1 Cor 15:34).

Is This Germane?

Is this observation germane, or relevant, to the exposition of this text? Some might consider it to be a needless tirade. However, this is precisely the point of our text. This is being addressed to the people of God—the explanation for the universal descent of humanity into the quagmire of sin. The condition is traced back to men’s refusal to retain God in their knowledge. Is there anyone of sound mind that imagines God will be more tolerant of such a refusal among the professed church than He was among those lacking such an abundance of revelation? When men refuse to pursue and think upon God, regardless of their profession, they are on the precipice of Divine judgment, if not at its very center.

GOD GAVE THEM OVER

“God gave them over to a reprobate mind,” or “a debased mind,”^{NKJV} or “to a depraved mind.”^{NIV,NASB} A “reprobate mind” is one that is rejected and unacceptable in every way. The word translated “reprobate” is ἄδόκιμον, and means “failing to meet the test, disqualified, worthless, and corrupted.” This is a mind totally rejected by God.

Man already possessed this kind of mind because of sin. In His mercy, however, God had restrained men from the full impact of that mind. But now, because men had refused to retain God in their knowledge, and to confirm the utter depravity of the fallen mind, God delivers men over to it, removing all restraints.

Let those who insist on elevating the human mind and the disciplines related to it, ponder this. Apart from the sanctifying influence of the knowledge of God, the mind of man is depraved, rejected, and worthless. God will receive nothing from it. This is precisely why we are born again, that we might be “renewed in the spirit of our mind” (Eph 4:23). Only then can the Law of God be served with our “mind” (Rom 7:25). In the state of nature, we are described as “alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works” (Col 1:21). That very mind kept us enslaved to sin, thereby constituting us “unrighteous” in every sense of the word.

Something to be Pondered

Those who neglect their souls, refusing to hear the Gospel and not devoting themselves to seeking the Lord and His righteousness, must ponder this. They have overestimated the strength of the human mind and will. Countless people live in the imagination that they can turn their steps toward God whenever they want. Thus they choose to enjoy “the pleasures of sin for a season” (Heb 11:25), thinking they can change their minds whenever they desire. However, they have not considered that God can deliver them over to the power of the depraved mind, causing a rapid and irrecoverable moral downfall. If this is not possible, then our text has no truth in it.

Among other things, this confirms men are controlled by what they think, “For as he thinks in his heart, so is he”^{NKJV} (Prov 23:7). Further, as we will see, to be delivered over to a “reprobate mind” locks one into iniquitous conduct.

THINGS WHICH ARE NOT FITTING

The result of being handed over to the domination of “a reprobate mind” is thus stated: “to do those things which are not fitting.”^{NKJV} Other versions say “things that should not be done,”^{NRSV} “to do what ought not to be done.”^{NIV} These are things disgraceful and shameful, unbecoming for those created in the image of God. Such things are in conflict with God and contrary to the Divine image man bears.

The Spirit has already mentioned the reprehensible sin of sodomy. That sin, however, is the depths of sin—the extent to which human depravity can express itself. Sodomites, however, were not the only ones delivered over to their corrupt minds. We are now introduced to a most impressive list of transgressions. They are all the result of Divine abandonment—of being delivered over to a “reprobate mind.” Apart from the righteousness that comes from God, this is what the human nature produces.

FILLED WITH ALL UNRIGHTEOUSNESS

“Being filled with all unrighteousness.” Other versions read, “filled with every kind of wickedness,”^{NRSV} “filled with every kind of wickedness”^{NIV} “filled with all manner of wickedness.”^{RSV} As soon as God gave men over to a “reprobate mind,” iniquity rushed in like a mighty tidal wave. It confirmed what sin had done to the spirit of man. It was not the mind of the devil to which men were consigned, but to their own mind! Notice the extent of sin’s expression in men: “filled,” “all unrighteousness.” That is, every part of their persons was affected, and every kind of sin was indulged. Rarely is such an extensive list of iniquity provided—and it is all because God gave men over to their own depraved minds. And, He did so because they refused to retain Him in their knowledge.

Unrighteousness

The general heading of these expressions is “unrighteousness”—the exact opposite of “the righteousness of God.” By nature unrighteousness is wrong—totally wrong. Legally, it is the violation of both the Nature and Law of God. All who are “unrighteous,” without exception, are excluded from the Kingdom of God (1 Cor 6:9). They are not and cannot be excepted by God.

Our text has stated, “the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who suppress the truth in unrighteousness” 1:18).

You must not fail to see the magnitude of the situation. Unrighteousness disqualifies one from Divine acceptance. As if that were not enough, it also suppresses the truth whereby men are made aware of the righteousness that comes from God. Once this truth is perceived with any degree of clarity, men will be eager to give the total credit for salvation to the Lord and His Christ.

There is no need to comment further about the condition of those “filled with all unrighteousness.” It is a dreadful condition requiring the initiative of God.

FORNICATION. From πορνεία, por-ne-a, from which the word “pornography” is derived. This is a general word denoting all forms of immoralities. It includes illicit intimacy of any sort: adultery, homosexuality, lesbianism, bestiality, and incest.^{Barclay-Newman} With all disregard for God and His will, this sin drives one to satisfy the lower appetites of the human nature. It is particularly reprehensible. Fornication, unless repented of and abandoned, excludes one from heaven. Scriptures against fornication include 1 Cor 6:13; 10:8; Eph 5:3; Col 3:5.

WICKEDNESS. From πονηρία, pon-ay-ree-ah. This means intentionally practiced evil of all sorts. It is driven by evil purposes and desires.^{Barclay-Newman} This is nothing less than the erupting of a degenerate nature. There is no evil that does not appear enticing to those practicing wickedness. Scriptures on wickedness include Luke 11:39; Acts 8:32; 1 Cor 5:8 and 1 John 5:19.

COVETOUSNESS.

From πλεonexία, pleo-nexia. This means a disposition to have more than one’s share, avarice, or greed.^{Barclay-Newman} Covetousness is called “idolatry” in Colossians 3:5, and is something with which we must contend. It comes from a fundamental dissatisfaction with what the Lord has given us. Scriptures on covetousness include Lk 12:15; Eph 5:3; Heb 13:5.

MALICIOUSNESS. From κακία, kak-ia. This means hateful feelings toward another, dislike, and ill-will.^{Barclay-Newman} The malicious person seeks to harm others in whatever way possible. Hatred dominates the heart to such an extent that delight is taken at the pain of others. Scriptures on malice include 1 Cor 5:8; 14:20; Eph 4:31; Col 3:8.

FULL OF ENVY. From φθόνου, phthonou, meaning envy, or jealousy over the good success of another. ^{Barclay-Newman} Notice they are said to be FULL of envy, so that it dominates all they do and say. Envy causes a person to view everyone as a personal competitor. The success or blessing of another person is taken as an insult, and something of which the one that is envious is more worthy. Scriptures on envy include 1 Cor 13:4; 1 Pet 2:1.

MURDER. From φόνου, phonou, meaning murder, slaughter, or killing: violently and deliberately taking the life of another. ^{Barclay-Newman} Because of a fundamental disrespect for God Himself, the murderer seeks to take the life of another without a twinge of conscience. Like Cain, the murderer thinks he gains some sort of advantage by killing. Scriptures on murder include 1 Pet 4:15; 1 John 3:15; Rev 21:8

DEBATE. From ἔριδος, eri-dos. This means strife, contention, variance, discord, quarrels, and rivalries. ^{Barclay-Newman} The debater agitates the social waters, causing disruption and argument wherever he goes. He is not content until there is contention, with persons competing needlessly against another. This is the opposite of unity. Scriptures on debate include 2 Cor 12:20.

DECEIT. From δόλου, do-lou. This means treachery, fraud, to bait by misrepresentation. ^{Barclay-Newman} Here advantage is sought by deception. Scriptures on deceit include Mk 7:22; Rom 3:13; Col 2:8.

MALIGNITY. From κακοηθείας, kako-eth-ei-as, meaning meanness, spitefulness, a disposition to produce wickedness. ^{Barclay-Newman} A malignant person is like a walking time bomb. Wherever they are, trouble is apt to break forth like a plague. They are chief ministers of Satan. Scriptures on malignity include Romans 1:29.

WHISPERERS. From ψιθυριστάς, psithur-is-tas, meaning one who bears harmful gossip against another, gossiper, talebearer, secret slanderer. ^{Barclay-Newman} The whisperer seeks to gain honor at the expense of another, spreading rumors, and defaming the name of others. Scriptures on whisperers include 2 Cor 12:20.

BACKBITERS. From καταλάλους, katalalous. This means one who speaks evil of another, evil speaking, and spreading evil reports. ^{Barclay-Newman} Like the whisperer, the backbiter does his work secretly. He raises evil reports, causing others to view his Envy causes a person to view everyone as a personal competitor. The success or blessing of another person is taken as an insult, and something of which the one that is envious is more worthy.

target with disdain. Scriptures on backbiting include 2 Cor 12:20.

HATERS OF GOD. From θεοστυγείς, theos-tug-eis, meaning hating God, or hateful toward God. ^{Barclay-Newman} The hater of God thinks nothing of ignoring God, disobeying Him, or even become angry with Him or disagreeing with Him. He had rather justify himself than the God who will judge him. Wherever God is represented, whether in His Word of in His people, this person lashes out against the representation. Scriptures on hating God include Ex 20:5; Matt 6:24; John 7:7

DESPITEFUL. From ὑβριστάς, ubris-tas. This means injurious to others, insolent, puffed up with pride and heaping insulting language upon others, a violent aggressor, one with a superior attitude mistreating others. ^{Barclay-Newman} Not only does the spiteful person have evil desires and pride, but he is aggressive to throw it like acid upon others. Scriptures on spitefulness include Ezek 36:5; Matt 5:44; Acts 14:5.

PROUD. From ὑπερηφάνους, uper-ath-anous, meaning arrogant, haughty, an empty boaster who brags of his position. ^{Barclay-Newman} The proud have nothing of which to boast, so speak about themselves in glowing and haughty words. Scriptures on the proud include Psa 40:4; Prov 15:25; James 4:6.

BOASTERS. From ἀλαζόνας, alaz-onas. This means arrogant boaster, braggart, show-off. ^{Barclay-Newman} This person loves to draw attention to himself. He wants the spotlight. Scriptures on boasters include 2 Tim 3:2; Psa 10:3; James 3:5.

INVENTORS OF EVIL THINGS. From ἐφευρετάς κακῶν, eph-eur-e-tas kak-on. This means one who schemes or plans things that are injurious or harmful, one who thinks up ways of doing evil. ^{Barclay-Newman} Instead of using his God-given abilities to glorify God, this person finds new ways to sin and promote sin. Scriptures on evil inventions include Amos 6:5; Psa 99:8; 106:39; Eccl 7:29.

DISOBEDIENT TO PARENTS. This comes from γονεύσιν ἀπειθεῖς, gon-eu-sin ap-ei-theis, meaning to parents, disobedient or rebellious, one who is not persuaded to obey his parents. ^{Barclay-Newman} Here are children that are obstinate, and unwilling to yield to the parents God has placed over them. They will not give heed to their parent's will or counsel. Scriptures on disobedience to parents include Deut 21:18; 2 Tim 3:2.

WITHOUT UNDERSTANDING. From ἀσυνέτους, asu-ne-tous, meaning without understanding, dull, senseless, foolish, unintelligent. ^{Barclay-Newman} These blunder into pits of destruction because they are blind. They reason wrongly because they cannot see. Concerning the real facts and issues of life, they are stupid. Scriptures on having no understanding include Psa 32:9; 49:20; Isa 27:11.

COVENANTBREAKERS. From ἀσυνθέτους, asun-thet-ous. This means faithless, disloyal, covenant-breaking, not keeping a promise, untrustworthy, treacherous. ^{Barclay-Newman} This person's word is worthless. He only makes a promise in order to gain a personal advantage. He thinks nothing of throwing the promise away when it no longer is seen as self-promoting. Scriptures on breaking covenant include Isa 33:8; 2 Tim 3:3.

WITHOUT NATURAL AFFECTION.

From ἀστόργους, as-tor-gous, meaning lacking normal human affection, devoid of natural affection, unloving, heartless.^{Barclay-Newman} Sin has so hardened this person that he crawls beneath the fence of nature. There is no heart in the person's life, as he is totally wrapped up in himself. Scriptures on the lack of natural affection

UNMERCIFUL. From ἀνελεήμονας, ane-le-a-mon-as. This means without compassion, pitiless.^{Barclay-Newman} Those in sore need are viewed as worthless in this person's eyes. He only thinks of what he can receive, and never of what he can give. Scriptures on unmerciful include James 2:13; Prov 21:13.

ALL SELF CENTERED

Notice that all of these sins are self trying to please men, I would not be a bond-servant of Christ^{NASB} (Gal 1:10). This approach has built many a mega-church, but it has never, and can never, please God. Such men are purveyors of flesh, and are to be given no honor.

ALL UNLIKE GOD

You will also note that these transgressions are totally unlike the God whose image we bear. That is the essence of sin: un-God-likeness.

When men pushed God into the background, they became "filled with unrighteousness," as it pervaded every aspect of their beings. Men cannot be good or right in any sense, where they refuse to retain God in their knowledge.

Men, when left to themselves, will become more and more unlike God. Their thoughts, words, and deeds, will confirm that is the case. Sin has set degeneracy in motion, and only the grace of God and the gift of righteousness can arrest it.

include 2 Tim 3:3.

IMPLACABLE. From ἀσπόνδους, as-pon-dous, meaning irreconcilable.^{Barclay-Newman}

Here is a person who cannot be tamed or toned down. His fierceness increases when attempts are made to be peaceable. Scriptures on implacable include Rom 1:31; Hosea 7:11. An implacable person is more beastly than manly.

centered. That is what sin does—it moves the individual to the center of all his considerations. There is therefore no room left for God or the things of God.

This is the reason a religion that caters to the self interests of men will not be blessed by God. "For am I now seeking the favor of men, or of God? Or am I striving to please men? If I were still

MAN NEEDS A RIGHTEOUSNESS FROM GOD

The Spirit has shown us the need of a righteousness from God, and has done so with great power. When men pushed God into the background, they became "filled with unrighteousness," as it pervaded every aspect of their beings. Men cannot be good or right in any sense, where they refuse to retain God in their knowledge. That is an inviolable principle.

WHEN MEN ARE DESERVING OF DEATH

⁴² . . . who, knowing the righteous judgment of God, that those who practice such things are deserving of death, not only do the same but also approve of those who practice them." How desperately this truth must be grasped. There is a marked tendency within the professed church to excuse those who do not know God. "How can they know to do any better," some vainly reason, "seeing they have never heard the truth about God?" To the sophist, this may appear to be sound reasoning, but it is not. It is believing in Jesus Christ that is said to require hearing (Rom 10:14-17), not pursuing God or living within an awareness of Him. There, faith is the issue. In our text it is not. The issue in our text is the refusal to proceed on the basis of the rudimentary knowledge of God that was available to man. It is that men refused to "retain God in their knowledge," however inferior men may think that knowledge to be.

Now the Spirit affirms men actually possess more knowledge of God than they are disposed to admit. The NRSV reads, "They know God's decree, that those who practice such things deserve to die." The NIV reads, "Although they know God's righteous decree that those who do such things deserve death." We are speaking of a world "without excuse" (Rom 1:20), and we do well to avoid trying to give it one. No purpose is served by alibiing for sin.

How is it that men knew "the righteous judgment of God, that those do such things are worthy of death?" We are not speaking of those subjected to the testimony of the Gospel, or even to the Law, but to that of nature. Yet, such are said to have known of God's righteous judgment, that those doing such things are deserving of death.

There is, as confirmed by Romans 2:14-15, a lingering consciousness of God and His ways that defies human explanation. "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves: Which show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing or else excusing one another." That knowledge, however inferior it may be to the knowledge of God experienced in Christ Jesus, rendered all sin inexcusable, particularly the eagerness to commit it. The epitaph over the entirety of humanity is, "without excuse!"

It appears this knowledge was intuitive, part of the Divine imagery in man. It was so strong that considerable effort was required to subdue it. That this is true can be seen in the human propensity to moral law, even in crude and undeveloped societies.

But there is more to this matter than that. God brought three severe judgments upon men prior to the Law.

Adam and Eve

The first of these judgments took place in Eden. In it, the parents of the human race were consigned to death because of disobedience (Gen 2:17; 3:24). The notion that they kept this a secret is too absurd to even consider. The activities of their first two sons bore witness to their obvious testimony of the cause of death, and the need for sacrifice.

Adam lived nine hundred and thirty years—nearly a millennium. Because the entire race sprang from him (Gen 3:20; Acts 17:26), this knowledge was no doubt passed along among men. Humanity knew about God’s judgment, and for nine hundred and thirty years, had a walking testimony to that fact among them. Adam lived well past the births of Enoch and Methuselah, and Lamech. He also lived more than 500 years after (2970 B.C.) the beginning of Sumerian civilization (3500 B.C.). The knowledge of the judgment in Eden must have been considerable.

The Flood

Then there was the flood—another Divine judgment resulting in unprecedented death. Noah lived well into the lifetime of Terah, Abraham’s father. The Egyptian, Babylonian, and Hititte empires were also formed in his lifetime. Word of the flood penetrated into multiple civilizations as the experience of Divine judgment was reported.

The three sons of Noah, who all went through the flood, were the ones through whom the whole earth was populated. It should be obvious that they did not forget the time of cursing they endured. “Now the sons of Noah who went out of the ark were Shem, Ham, and Japheth. And Ham was the father of Canaan. These three were the sons of Noah, and from these the whole earth was populated”^{NKJV} (Gen 9:19). Commensurate with the spreading of the population came also the recollection of the flood. Nearly every civilization has some record of a flood.

The destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah occurred around 1868 B.C. Not long after that, major civilizations developed, including Europe and Britain (1800) and dynasties in China (1766). The knowledge of that destruction was doubtless conveyed among them.

Thus, purely from an academic viewpoint, we can see the possibility of rather extensive knowledge about the judgment of God. Add to that the plagues of Egypt (1480), and it becomes apparent mankind could not plead ignorance concerning the judgment of God.

The point of this text, is that they were incapable of saving themselves, and unworthy of a salvation from God. It is His mercy that will provide that remarkable salvation.

All of these judgments confirm that transgressors are “worthy of death.” By suppressing the truth given to them, and indulging their sinful appetites without restraint, they forfeited their right to live—and they knew it. However, they chose to suppress that knowledge.

Mark it well, those who refuse to retain God in their knowledge really have NO right to “life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness,” politics notwithstanding.

However, in His infinite mercy, God has provided a way to extricate men from their dilemma. The point of this text, is that they were incapable of saving themselves, and unworthy of a salvation from God. It is His mercy that will provide that remarkable salvation.

APPROVAL OF WICKED PRACTICES

The wickedness of the human heart is further evidenced by the things men approve. Even though they knew God’s judgment was against such things, “they not only do the same, but also give hearty approval to those who practice them.”^{NASB} others who practice them.” Wicked men can be applauded by putting them into influential offices. They can also be approved by patronizing the corrupt music and entertainment they produce.

The NRSV reads, “but even applaud

Here we behold the corrupting nature of sin. Rather than fallen men enjoying their Creator, whose image they bear, they take delight in others who break His law and contradict His nature. In so doing, their conscience is salved, but their condemnation becomes more sure.

This very principle was announced by James to those in Christ, warning them of the consequences of preferring and giving honor to the enemies of God. “Do you not know that friendship with the world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God” (James 4:4). You cannot “approve” those who sin against God and still remain in His favor. The word of Jehu to king Jehosaphat is certainly appropriate here. “Should you help the wicked and love those who hate the LORD? Therefore the wrath of the LORD is upon you”^{NKJV} (2 Chron 19:2).

Thus all men are found richly deserving of God’s wrath. Like the prodigal, they have squandered their resources. Now they stand stripped of every vestige of righteousness and stand powerless and helpless before the Lord. They need a righteousness from God, for they have none of their own, nor are they capable of producing one.

Man must be aware of this natural condition before the salvation of God obtains any benefit, or is even seen as necessary. When the Law was given, it accentuated the realities declared in our text, “so that sin through the commandment might become exceedingly sinful”^{NKJV} (Rom 7:13). When faith perceives this, the revelation of a righteousness from God becomes “the joyful sound” (Psa 89:15). The feet of those bearing the Gospel then become beautiful, as men begin to pant for the living waters that flow from the Gospel of Christ.

But take this knowledge away—the knowledge of the awfulness of sin—and neither the Gospel nor the righteousness of God will be seen as indispensable. Men will thus think nothing of shelving the Gospel in interest of things they deem more important and relevant. Unless that view is abandoned in favor of the truth, it will become the occasion for Divine judgment and ultimate condemnation. Men do need a righteousness, and it can only come from God! You cannot get more serious than that!

CONCLUSION

I must again state the Divine purpose for this extensive condemnation of sin. We may be tempted to left our vision rest upon the sins rather than upon the point that is being made. The Spirit is establishing our need for a righteousness from God. That righteousness is appropriately called the “gift of righteousness” (Rom 5:17). It is not the recognition of the goodness of man, but a ferment that recognizes the total absence of goodness within man.

There is no salvation apart from this righteousness, but only condemnation. That is the stern reality of the case. Thus it is written, “For He made Him who knew no sin to be sin for us, that we might become the righteousness of God in Him”^{NKJV} (2 Cor 5:21). Making you the righteousness of God is just as necessary as making Jesus to be sin for you. Salvation cannot exclude either one. Further neither of them could have occurred without God. He is the One who “made” Jesus “to be sin.” He is also the One who made you become “the righteousness of God in Him.”

The only real input we have had in this matter is our sin. It was our sin that was placed upon Christ. That included all of our best efforts and works, all of which were “filthy rags.”

SOMETHING GREATER

Our text has dealt with the world, but there is a principle to be seen here that must not be overlooked. If God was so harsh with the world for rejecting the testimony of nature, what will be His reaction to those who reject His Son, and the record He has given of Him?

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 5

GOD'S RIGHTEOUS JUDGMENT

^{2:1}Therefore you are inexcusable, O man, whoever you are who judge, for in whatever you judge another you condemn yourself; for you who judge practice the same things. ²But we know that the judgment of God is according to truth against those who practice such things. ³And do you think this, O man, you who judge those practicing such things, and doing the same, that you will escape the judgment of God? ⁴Or do you despise the riches of His goodness, forbearance, and longsuffering, not knowing that the goodness of God leads you to repentance? ⁵But in accordance with your hardness and your impenitent heart you are treasuring up for yourself wrath in the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, ⁶who "will render to each one according to his deeds": ⁷eternal life to those who by patient continuance in doing good seek for glory, honor, and immortality; ⁸but to those who are self-seeking and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness; indignation and wrath, ⁹tribulation and anguish, on every soul of man who does evil, of the Jew first and also of the Greek; ¹⁰but glory, honor, and peace to everyone who works what is good, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. ¹¹For there is no partiality with God. ¹²For as many as have sinned without law will also perish without law, and as many as have sinned in the law will be judged by the law ¹³(for not the hearers of the law are just in the sight of God, but the doers of the law will be justified; ¹⁴for when Gentiles, who do not have the law, by nature do the things in the law, these, although not having the law, are a law to themselves, ¹⁵who show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and between themselves their thoughts accusing or else excusing them) ¹⁶in the day when God will judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel. (Romans 2:1-16^{NKJV})

INTRODUCTION

In order to firmly fix in our minds the absolute necessity of a righteousness from God, the Spirit is showing us the impact of sin upon humanity. He is removing every vestige of hope in the flesh, confirming it to be utterly corrupt. In Adam there is nothing but death, for

"in Adam all die" (1 Cor 15:22). The argument is devastating. Jesus assured us of the impotence of the "flesh," or the natural part of us, coming from Adam, when He said, "That which is born of flesh is flesh." His point is that this condition requires the new birth: i.e., our natural birth itself requires that we be "born again" (John 3:3-6). There is no way that flesh can rise above the one from whom it was born—Adam. Men are "sinful" by nature as well as by deed. In fact, it is their nature that compels them to sin, and causes them to stumble.

However, the Spirit does not say that men can do nothing but sin—although that is technically the truth. Although that approach has been taken by some theological persuasions, it is not the Divine manner. Those limiting themselves to such reasoning will find themselves involved in endless arguments with the unlearned. Men will argue that humanity has not been thoroughly contaminated by sin, but retains some vestiges of goodness.

Man has in particular, they will argue, retained the power of choice and reason, and thus can be salvaged. While there is an element of truth to this, it is lacking in both incentive and power.

The Spirit shows us the affects of sin, and does not theorize about it. Already, He has declared that, although surrounded by unquestionable evidence of the “eternal power and Divinity” of God, men chose to worship and serve the created rather than the Creator (1:19-25). Delivered to his own lusts, a staggering moral plummet took place, where men conducted themselves “contrary to nature” in debasing and reprehensible sins (1:26-27). Others, who did not stoop to that level were characterized by a wide range of degenerate behavior that sharply contrasted with the Divine nature (1:28-31). Rather than seeking the God of Whom nature testified, they found their pleasure in sinful peers, who had also fallen short of the glory of God (1:32).

Thus, with great effectiveness, we have been shown both the power and universality of sin. But the thread of reasoning does not stop here. There remains a segment of humanity that appears to have risen above all of these reprehensible vices. Through culture, the flesh has been so polished as to make it appear acceptable. But it is not. Men have only masked sin. Their outward sanctity is only pretension, and within, like the Pharisees, they are “full of dead men's bones” (Matt 23:27).

All men need the righteousness of God. The idolater, sodomite, and those expressing attitudes and works contrary to the Divine nature stand together in a common need. Now we will see that the sanctimonious need a righteousness from God also. No man is excused from sin, and thus all men need a righteousness from God—the righteousness of God Himself. All men need this righteousness

INEXCUSABLE

“^{2:1} Therefore you are inexcusable, O man, whoever you are who judge, for in whatever you judge another you condemn yourself; for you who judge practice the same things.” No one has been able to escape the devastating effects of sin. Yet, there are some who imagine that they have, because they are able to subdue the outward expressions of it. Such people take it upon themselves to judge others upon the basis of their external achievements. Thus the cultured Greeks thought nothing of referring to the less cultured as “Barbarians.” The Spirit is confirming, however, that the Gospel is a message to “both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians” (Rom 1:14). They stand together in their need for a Savior and a righteousness from God. The disciplines of both body and mind, however admirable they may appear, are no substitute for the righteousness of God. Although these things have been held in high regard by men, they are not honored by God. As our Lord said, “for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God” (Lk 16:15).

One might remonstrate, pointing to men like Cornelius, whose prayers and alms came up before God for a “memorial” (Acts 10:4). He was neither Jew nor born again. Some might object, “How is it that his works were received by God?” Although his works were, indeed, honorable, they had no saving efficacy. God did not pronounce Cornelius “righteous” because of his prayers and alms. Instead, he sent a man to tell him what he “ought to do”—words where by he and his house “will be saved” (Acts 10:6; 11:13-14). He too needed a righteousness from God. The conduct and prayers of Cornelius indicated he had seen his need of the Lord, having no righteousness of his own. That sort of individual is not described in this text. Rather, it is the person who assigns value to his own accomplishments, and speaks derisively of those who have not measured up to his pretentious standards. You will immediately recognize the presence of this attitude in the religious community.

The Jews will be the particular focus of this chapter, although that focus does not exclude the moralists extant among the Greeks.

INEXCUSABLE

The word “inexcusable” is an unusually strong one. It leaves no room for negotiation or explanation. It means without excuse, or indefensible. God will not allow the individual to explain the reasoning behind the condemned action, because no acceptable rationale can be offered for it.

There are those who do not approve of idolatry, sodomy, and the various vices that have already been mentioned. They would raise their voice in protest of such things, yet still perceive no need for a righteousness from God. This would include men like Socrates (469-399 B.C.), Plato (428-347 B.C.), Aristotle (384-322 B.C.), and those influenced by their thinking. They exalted thought, and even probed the spiritual nature of man. Yet, to a man, they all rejected God. Such men are representative of some of the individuals now addressed in our text. The indictment will also include the Jews, who clung to religious form, but lacked the power that comes through the Gospel alone. In principle, it will also include those who identify themselves with Christ, yet do not seek a righteousness from God.

THOSE WHO JUDGE

The attention of the Spirit is now turned to hypocrites, who pass judgment upon others, yet have no regard for their own need of righteousness. This is not the “righteous judgment” of which our Lord spoke (John 7:24). This is rather the hypercritical judgment of Matthew seven. “Judge not, that you be not judged. For with what judgment you judge, you will be judged; and with the measure you use, it will be measured back to you. And why do you look at the speck in your brother’s eye, but do not consider the plank in your own eye? Or how can you say to your brother, ‘Let me remove the speck from your eye’; and look, a plank is in your own eye? Hypocrite! First remove the plank from your own eye, and then you will see clearly to remove the speck from your brother’s eye” (7:1-5).

This is a judgment that results from men “measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves” (2 Cor 10:12). Their own boastful achievement is the criteria by which others are judged. But, like the Pharisees, only the outside of their lives is clean. Of them, Jesus said, “Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you are like whitewashed tombs which indeed appear beautiful outwardly, but inside are full of dead men’s bones and all uncleanness. Even so you also outwardly appear righteous to men, but inside you are full of hypocrisy and lawlessness” (Matt 23:27-28). In fact, apart from the salvation effected by the Gospel that is all men can clean—the outside. Only God can purify the heart. To put it another way, men cannot change their own nature. As Jeremiah put it, “Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil” (Jer 13:23).

The point of the text is not simply that sitting in judgment upon others is wrong. The point being established is that all men stand in need of a righteousness from God. Those who refuse God’s righteousness, placating their own conscience with the imagination that they have achieved a righteousness of their own, are the subjects of this admonition.

SELF-CONDEMNATION

The outward show of goodness is not sufficient to establish that one is righteous. Sin has contaminated man at his very core, so that sin dwells in him, and is at home in him. Even the seemingly best of people have this problem. As Paul confessed, “. . . sin that dwells in me . . . evil is present with me . . . another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind . . .” (Rom 7:17,20,21,23).

The presence of the principle of sin within us should keep us from having a condemning spirit. It is only the “new creation” that is pure before God, and that “workmanship” belongs to the Lord alone (Gal 6:15; Eph 2:10).

Although in principle this text applies to the cultured Greeks, it more fully applies to the Jews. The Gentiles had been given the testimony of nature. The Jews had been given the fuller testimony of the Law. Every possible advantage had been given to them, so that, if it was possible, they could have become righteous through their own works. They are described as “Israelites, to whom pertain the adoption, the glory, the covenants, the giving of the law, the service of God, and the promises; of whom are the fathers and from whom, according to the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, the eternally blessed God. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5). Truly, they excelled in advantages.

Because of their distinction from all other nations, they sat in judgment upon them. But their natures remained the same as the nations they condemned, even though it was often subdued. To such Jesus says, “Judge not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned” (Luke 6:37).

ILLUSTRATED IN DAVID

Although David was a man after God’s own heart (1 Sam 13:14; Acts 13:22), he also stood in need of a righteousness from God. His nature had been polluted by sin even as others. In him, we find an example of the kind of judgment our text mentions.

When David sinned with Bathsheba, it was a most grievous sin in the eyes of the Lord. It is written, “But the thing that David had done displeased the LORD” (2 Sam 11:27). Because David’s conscience had not yet stricken him, the Lord sent Nathan the prophet to confront him about the matter. Nathan related an account of two men: one rich, and one poor. The rich man had large flocks and herds, while the poor man had only “only little ewe lamb.” He had “bought and nourished up” the little lamb. In fact, it grew up with him and his children, and ate the man’s food and drank from his cup. A certain traveler came to the rich man’s house. Instead of taking from his own bountiful flock, the rich man “took the poor man’s lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.” It was a pathetic thing to do.

Upon hearing of this gross injustice, David became incensed. “And David’s anger was greatly kindled against the man; and he said to Nathan, As the LORD liveth, the man that hath done this thing shall surely die: and he shall restore the lamb fourfold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity. And Nathan said to David, Thou art the man” (2 Sam 12:1-7). Nathan continued, “Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul; And I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things. Wherefore hast thou despised the commandment of the LORD, to do evil in his sight? thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon" (v. 7-9). This is one of the most tragic incidents of all Scripture. It shows the need of a righteousness from God.

That is the kind of judgment we are dealing with. It is a judgment that sees and judges harshly wrong doing on the part of others, yet fails to recognize the corruption within self. There is no person who does not have the seeds of corruption within. Even it is not expressed frequently, or the appearance of it is kept down, yet it disqualifies one being called righteous. That condition—the natural state of all men—demands that a righteousness be received from God. There is other option if one is to be received by the Living God.

THE JUDGMENT OF GOD

"But we know that the judgment of God is according to truth against those who practice such things. ³And do you think this, O man, you who judge those practicing such things, and doing the same, that you will escape the judgment of God?"

It is essential that we understand "the judgment of God" to be an expression of His nature, or Person. It is something that cannot be forever suppressed. Eventually, God will confront and condemn everything and everyone that is contrary to Him. It is inevitable. His throne is "prepared . . . for judgment" (Psa 9:7), and the preparation is not in vain. Not only does "mercy and truth" go before His "face," but, He declares, "justice and judgment are the habitation of His throne" (Psa 89:14; 97:2).

JUDGMENT THROUGH JESUS

These qualities have not disappeared in Jesus. Rather, He has come to affirm them forever. As it is written, "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever" (Isa 9:6-7). Eventually, "we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ" (2 Cor 5:10), for God "will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom He hath ordained; whereof He hath given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead" (Acts 17:31). Not one small portion of His judgment will be compromised at that time. It will be thoroughly righteous, and in complete keeping with His Divine and holy nature.

This circumstance is what required the atoning death of Christ, for sin could not be removed in any other way. Only those whose sins have been "covered," and to whom the Lord will "not impute

He then judged sin, as compelled by His own nature. In this outpouring of His wrath, Jesus was "made a curse," thereby confirming the indignation of God that is toward all unrighteousness and ungodliness of men Gal 3:13).

REMEMBER THE PURPOSE

Remember the purpose for this text.

It is to confirm the need of a righteousness from God. Not only is man lacking a righteousness that stands the test of Divine judgment, He is not capable of producing such a righteousness.

It is essential that we understand "the judgment of God" to be an expression of His nature, or Person. It is something that cannot be forever suppressed. Eventually, God will confront and condemn everything and everyone that is contrary to Him. It is inevitable.

The wrath of God is against ALL unrighteousness and ungodliness of men (Rom 1:18). Earlier, those who stopped short of a quest for God, creating false gods and images of them, have been shown to be unrighteous and without excuse (1:19-25). Too, those who have stooped to the sin of sodomy have been proved particularly reprehensible. Their conduct was the result of being turned over to the base passions of the flesh (1:26-27). Additionally, those who did not fall into the baser sins (only because God did not deliver them over to such base lusts), were given over a "reprobate mind." Their own nature and way of thinking caused them to be "filled" with all manner of unrighteousness (1:28-32).

Now, the Spirit is showing that those having a more refined appearance have not managed to extricate themselves from sin. In the case of Gentile philosophers, the sinful nature remained, corrupting them within. The Jews, even in covenant sin," will survive the judgment day. No wonder such people are called "blessed" (Psa 32:1-2; Rom 4:6-8).

SIN JUDGED IN JESUS

In Christ, the judgment of God against sin was fulfilled. As it is written, "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh" (Rom 8:3). In this case, "the flesh" was Christ's flesh, which bore only "the likeness" of sinful flesh. By imputation, our sins being placed upon Him, God made Jesus "to be sin for us" (2 Cor 5:21).

with, and blessed by, the true God, were likewise in bondage to sin. Although they experienced miraculous deliverance, direction, and provision, their nature remained unchanged. Even when they were given a Law from heaven, and Prophets to correct them, they remained fundamentally sinful. They are described as a “disobedient and gainsaying (contrary) people” (Rom 10:21).

Armed with the Law, and a unique status with God, they sat in judgment upon others, while doing “the same things” as those they judged.

JUDGMENT ACCORDING TO TRUTH

Our text reads, “We are SURE that the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things.” ^{KJV} Other versions read “we KNOW . . .” This word (“sure,” or “know”), means perceive, see, or understand. This is the description of a dominating understanding—one that cannot be avoided. God cannot overlook the sinful nature! His character will not allow Him to do so. Even when our sins were placed upon the pure Lamb of God, His judgment broke forth against it. His judgment is “according to truth.”

This expression (“according to truth”) means in strict keeping with the real situation. It also speaks of conformity to God’s own nature. Those who willingly entertain a preference for sin will be exposed when God “judges the world.” Their judgment will not be according to their profession. Nor, indeed, will it be according to a theological position they embraced and propagated. It will be “according to truth.” If, for example, they are Jews, and can boast of having the Law, the Divine service, the covenants, and all manner of other benefits, they will still be judged “according to truth.” It is what they are within that will determine their destiny. The due consideration of this reality will make sin distasteful.

Those who do not possess the righteousness of God will be judged according to their own righteousness, and it will not stand up under Divine scrutiny! I am persuaded this is not generally known in the Christian community—at least not in any satisfactory measure. The failure of men to speak of the righteousness of God, and its conferment upon men through Christ, confirms this to be the case. God will not play games with people, pretending they are something they are not. He will have no respect of persons, but will judge all men “according to truth.”

His judgment will be “AGAINST” those who practice such things as have been described (1:19-32). It makes little difference whether they are flagrantly practiced outwardly, or entertained in the privacy of the heart and mind. For it to be any other way would require that God “deny Himself,” and He CANNOT do that (2 Tim 2:13).

The person who “does” sin, or allows its expression, must not think for one moment that he will “escape the judgment of God.” Such a person is deceived. It makes no difference what official theology he has embraced, or how convinced he is that he is safe in his sin. Jesus came to deliver men from wrath, saving them from their sins (Matt 1:20), and making them free from its power and consequences (John 8:36). Those who remain under the dominion of sin have not been delivered or freed, and the judgment of God is against them. This condition cannot be covered up by a theology that says once they are saved they are always saved, or that they cannot lose their salvation. All such teachings are an attempt to misrepresent God and His great salvation.

ONLY ONE HOPE

There is only one hope, and that is to possess “the righteousness of God!” No other righteousness, however acceptable it may appear to men, will be recognized by God. Furthermore, the righteousness of God is not intended to make us analysts of our peers, but acceptable to God. That is its sole purpose.

ONE FINAL TIME

Lest it escape our attention, permit me to state the intention of this text once again. The judgment of God is against all unrighteousness and ungodliness of men. There is no possible way for this to fail of fulfillment. Those who rely upon their own righteousness, and even judge others while doing so, will also be subject to this devouring judgment.

Unrighteousness is the necessary consequence of sin—Adam’s sin. Thus it is written, “through the offence of one many be dead . . . judgment was by one to condemnation . . . by one man’s offence death reigned by one . . . Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation . . . by one man’s disobedience many were made sinners” (Rom 5:15-19).

To confirm this is the case, God turned men over to their own corrupted minds, and a descent into the quagmire of sin resulted. The only reason some segments of our race, particularly the Jews, did not descend as far as others was owing to Divine restraint, not human discipline. Delivered over to the corruption of the human heart, there is no depth to which humanity will not fall.

Thus, those who judge others worthy of condemnation, while themselves failing to appropriate the righteousness of God, will be judged harshly. They too possess a corrupt and defiled heart. The things for which they condemn others are actually resident in their own hearts, even though they may succeed in subduing a public outbreak of them.

The point is that they also need the righteousness of God—the righteousness that is announced by the Gospel of Christ. It is not acceptable to merely be clean outwardly. Men need real righteousness. The judgment and consequent wrath of God is against everything else. God is greatly to be praised for providing a righteousness that will stand in the day when He judges the world through Christ. Be eager to possess it. Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness.

THE GOODNESS OF GOD

“Or do you despise the riches of His goodness, forbearance, and longsuffering, not knowing that the goodness of God leads you to repentance?” These words may appear harsh, but they are not. They are more like the passionate words of a gracious individual trying to convince a perishing person to come out of a condemned and burning house. Those who do not possess the righteousness of God, and particularly those who are going about to establish their own (Rom 10:3), must see the situation correctly. Such might imagine that the absence of Divine visitation upon them is indication that God approves of them. They thus reason, “If God is not punishing me, He must receive me and place worth upon my good works.” But this is not at all the case. The Spirit will now show us the graciousness of God in forbearing the punishment of the self-righteous.

THE ACT OF DESPISING

The word “despise” is an usually strong one. Coming from καταφρονεῖς, it means to treat with contempt, look down upon, and think nothing of. More particularly, it means “to treat with neglect, disregard, despise, disdain, or think little or nothing of.”^{Thayer} This is not an intellectual sin, as though a person thought upon the goodness of God and replied, “I hate God’s goodness, and want nothing to do with it.” Rather, something that is despised is NOT thought upon. It is pushed to the back of human thought in preference for other things. Thus, to despise the goodness of the Lord is to consider it unworthy of extended thought or energetic pursuit. The consideration of Divine goodness is rejected in favor of other priorities.

Those who ponder God’s “goodness and forbearance and longsuffering” will come to the same conclusion as Jeremiah. “It is of the LORD’S mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not” (Lam 3:22). With understanding, those who do not despise these Divine qualities will say with Jacob, “I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast showed unto thy servant” (Gen 32:10).

To despise the Lord’s “goodness and forbearance and longsuffering” is to fail to come to these conclusions. It is to neglect to see that only the withholding of Divine wrath has kept sinners alive. Only the longsuffering of the Lord has stopped them from dropping into hell. Rather than God recognizing their good works, He has had to restrain Himself from destroying them because of their deeds. That is the real situation.

One of the treacherous traits of lukewarmness is that it leads one to despise what is sorely needed for recovery and acceptance. We are living in such a time. Men—religious men—seem blissfully unaware of, and disinterested in, the goodness, forbearance, and longsuffering of God. It is a most serious condition.

Only the longsuffering of the Lord has stopped them from dropping into hell. Rather than God recognizing their good works, He has had to restrain Himself from destroying them because of their deeds. That is the real situation.

THE RICHES OF HIS GOODNESS

“. . . the riches of his goodness and forbearance and longsuffering . . .” The goodness of God is a rich repository for the soul. When the Lord revealed His glory to Moses, He described the disclosure in these words: “I will make all my goodness pass before thee” (Ex 33:19). As “the Lord passed by before Him,” the Lord Himself “proclaimed, The LORD, The LORD God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in goodness and truth” (Ex 34:6).

Goodness

The “goodness” of man does not “extend” to God (Psa 16:2), but God’s “goodness” is “laid up for those who fear” Him (Psa 31:19). The Divine attribute of “goodness” includes kindness and a gracious attitude. It accents that sinners have not provoked God to act contrary to His own nature.

The expression “riches of His goodness” emphasizes the abundance of kindness and gracious consideration. However, His goodness must be properly understood. Rather than constraining God to merely tolerate the insolence and self-righteousness of man, it is an expression of the intention to convert men to Himself, turning them away from their own vanity. This will be further developed in the following comments.

“Forbearance”

The “riches” of God’s “forbearance” speaks of His leniency toward those deserving His wrath. It is true that God prefers mercy over sacrifice (Hos 6:6). The Lord forbears pouring His wrath upon men in order that He might show mercy to them. That is His preference. He is not looking for a reason to condemn men, but for an opportunity, so to speak, to save them.

Longsuffering

The “riches” of His “longsuffering” stresses the Lord’s “patience, forbearance, longsuffering, and slowness in avenging wrongs.”^{Thayer} One of the very wonderful attributes of our God is “slow to anger.” As it is written, “The LORD is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy. He will not always chide: neither will he keep his anger for ever” (Psa 103:8-9). Again it is written, “The LORD is gracious, and full of compassion; slow to anger, and of great mercy” (Psa 145:8).

In pleading with Israel, Joel appealed to the longsuffering of God—His slowness to anger, and preference to bless the people. “So rend your heart, and not your garments; Return to the LORD your God, For He is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness; And He relents from doing harm^{NKJV} (Joel 2:13). This is God's nature.

In his foolish protestation of God showing mercy on Nineveh, Jonah said he knew God was longsuffering. "I know that You are a gracious and merciful God, slow to anger and abundant in lovingkindness, One who relents from doing harm" (Jonah 4:2). He was correct in this observation, but was unaware that the message he delivered to Nineveh was the means God chose to be gracious.

The longsuffering of God is actually "space to repent," allowing for man to turn his face toward the Lord, and engage in a fervent quest for Him (Rev 2:21).

THE TRAGEDY OF NOT KNOWING

*" . . . not knowing that the goodness of God . . . "*Already humanity has been charged with not retaining God in their knowledge (1:28). Now the Spirit reveals the affects of that action. It brought men to the point where they did NOT know the means through which they could be brought to repentance.

Wherever it is found, this is an inexcusable ignorance. God has made Himself known to men. That revelation confirmed that He is good, forbearing, and longsuffering. When this is not "known," a condition is introduced that will, if not corrected, eventually lead to condemnation. As it is written, "when the Lord Jesus is revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on those who do not know God, and on those who do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. These shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His power, when He comes, in that Day, to be glorified in His saints and to be admired among all those who believe, because our testimony among you was believed" (2 Thess 1:7-10).

The Spirit moved Peter to state the reality and value of God's longsuffering, relating it to salvation. "The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some count slackness, but is longsuffering toward us, not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance^{NKJV} (2 Pet 3:9). Divine longsuffering is not a mere idea.

The world says, "What you do not know cannot hurt you." But nothing could be further from the truth. In the Kingdom of God, ignorance is lethal, and not knowing is disastrous.

BEING LED TO REPENTANCE

" . . . the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance . . . " However, all is not hopeless, praise the Lord! The "goodness of God," duly considered, will provoke repentance in those who have been deceived and hardened by sin. It is true that those who are favored by God, regardless of the extent of that favor, have despised His goodness if they remain impenitent.

If men will ponder "the goodness of God," allowing their hearts and minds to dwell upon it, it will lead them to any required repentance. This is the best way to come to repentance, much to be preferred over His chastening. This is the aspect of spiritual life to which the Spirit referred when He said, "For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world" (1 Cor 11:31-32). Rather than stubbornly continuing in sin, seeking their own fleshly satisfaction, men ought to ponder how good God has been to them. He has not dealt with them "according to" their sins (Psa 103:10). By this, the Spirit means God's judgments have been less harsh than the sins of men deserve.

Even in His punishments, God is good, allowing for men to be sensitive and come to Him. No wonder it is twice stated in Scripture, "but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished" (Jer 30:11; 46:28). His judgment never goes beyond the boundary of God's character.

All of this is designed to provoke men to repent of their refusal to retain God in their knowledge. It is intended to turn them from seeking their own ways to seeking the Lord, to which vocation they have been appointed (Acts 17:26-27).

We must never permit this truth to escape us: "the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance." It LEADS us when we ponder it, thinking upon the good things He has done, and of His tenderness toward us. This will only come., however, when the seriousness of transgression and the need for a righteousness from God are duly considered. When these two conditions are not contemplated, the goodness of God will not lead us.

Divine influence is required if repentance is to be realized. Traditionally, men have described repentance as a change of mind, and, indeed, that is the truth. However, changing a mind that has been devoted to sin is no small task.

It is equivalent to a leopard changing its spots, or an Ethiopian the color of his skin (Jer 13:23). Notwithstanding that difficulty, repentance is imperative. As Jesus said, "but unless you repent you will all likewise perish" (Lk 13:3,5).

Repentance Is A Gift

Jesus has been exalted to "give repentance" (Acts 5:31). Thus the Savior is said to have been sent from God "to bless you, in turning away every one of you from your iniquities" (Acts 3:26). When the Gentiles turned to God, early believers assessed the remarkable event in these words: "Then God has also granted to the Gentiles repentance to life" (Acts 11:18). That is why Jesus said repentance was to be "preached," or declared (Lk 24:47). When servants of God are endeavoring to recover sinners, they are to do so believing "God perhaps will grant them repentance, so that they may know the truth, and that they may come to their senses and escape the snare of the devil, having been taken captive by him to do his will" (2 Tim 2:25-26). That provides a great incentive to recover sinners.

Our text has revealed the manner in which the Lord gives repentance. It is not an overpowering or crushing of the human spirit, but a gentle leading into a change of mind. It occurs as the sinner is exposed to the marvelous goodness of God, particularly as declared in the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

I have taken the time to briefly elaborate on this because I am persuaded this aspect of repentance is not generally known. I believe this accounts for the lack of emphasis upon the Gospel of Christ, as well as the unacceptable level of moral deficiency and weakness within the professed church. It is a most serious condition for which much grace is needed.

TREASURING UP WRATH

“^{6a}But in accordance with your hardness and your impenitent heart you are treasuring up for yourself wrath in the day of wrath . . . ”

HARDNESS AND IMPENITENCE

Here is truth worthy of extended consideration. Hardness and a lack of repentance (“impenitence”) always go together. Men do not repent because their hearts are calloused and hard. Also, their hearts become even more stony because they do not repent. A lack of repentance is never innocent, incidental, or to be treated as though it were not lethal to the soul. Unless a person repents, hell is sure.

“Impenitence” is more than simply not repenting. It is REFUSING to repent, obstinately clinging to sin under the delusion that it brings advantage.

When men struggle with making the right choice, it is because of hardness of heart. We do well not to adopt an approach that leaves them thinking they have a lot of time to make up their minds concerning the Lord. Away with long-term orientation programs designed to prepare people to become Christians. Where did such a foolish notion originate? Let there be a return to the urgency of turning to the Lord.

Moses

Moses said, “I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore CHOOSE life, that both thou and thy seed may live” (Deut 30:19). He did not say “think,” but “choose!” The choice was to be made, and made at that time. “Choose life.”

Joshua

Joshua challenged the people, “And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD” (Josh 24:25). If the people refused to serve the Lord, Joshua demanded that they decide that very day which god they were going to serve. He would not let them imagine a state of indecision was allowed.

Elijah

When Elijah confronted four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal, he first challenged the children of Israel. “How long will you falter between two opinions? If the LORD is God, follow Him; but if Baal, follow him” (1 Kgs 18:21). He did not see remaining in the state of indecision as in any way advantageous. He called upon the people to make up their mind, and do it then!

John the Baptist

When John the Baptist arrived on the scene, sent by God (John 1:6), he confronted a spiritually sterile people. He did not provide an orientation course to ease the transition from disinterest to interest. Instead he cried out, “Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand!” (Matt 3:2). He did not mean “think about repenting.” His was a summons to repent NOW, else they would miss the blessing.

The Lord Jesus Christ

When Jesus came out of the wilderness, having been tempted of the devil, He began to preach “Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand” (Matt 4:17). There was nothing casual about His word. He did not provide an academic study to acclimate people to a new way of thinking. His call was to repent NOW!

MORE ON THE HUMAN CONDITION

As is characteristic of the Gospel, our text is providing more insight into the condition of sinners. In particular, it is showing the state of everyone who does not possess the righteousness of God. Remember, the point being developed is that men need a righteousness from God. It is not a luxury, but a necessity.

Already the Spirit has shown us that human nature has been so corrupted that men left to their own devices descend into unimaginable depths of sin. There is not a soul that will rise higher, seek God, or become righteous, if delivered over to the desires of their mind.

Secondly, those who have achieved some degree of external refinement (whether Gentiles by philosophy or Jews by the Law) are nevertheless under condemnation. They too need a righteousness from God, because their own righteousness is nothing but filthy rags, to be quickly discarded (Isa 64:6).

Now the Spirit gives us another reason for eagerly seeking to obtain “the righteousness of God” that is announced in the Gospel.

WRATH CAN BE TREASURED UP

“You are treasuring up for yourself wrath in the day of wrath.” The Spirit has already told us that God’s wrath is against “all unrighteousness and ungodliness of men.” God cannot make peace with sin, and consequently not with sinners. In due time, the wrath of God will break forth against all who are not reconciled to Him. Our text refers to that time as “the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous believe the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abides on him”^{NASB} (John 3:18,36). For the righteous, treasures in heaven are increasing. For the wicked, the wrath of God is increasing.

The very day in which the righteous will be rewarded is the one in which the wicked will be punished. For the righteous, it is the “day of redemption” (Eph 4:30). For the unrighteous, it is “the day of wrath,” “the great day of His wrath,” and “the wrath of the Lamb” (Rev 6:16,17).

Accenting this aspect of the Lord’s return (i.e., that the righteous will be rewarded and the unrighteous punished), the Spirit says the following. “You who are troubled rest with us when the Lord Jesus is revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on those who do not know God, and on those who do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. These shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His power, WHEN HE COMES, in that Day, to be glorified in His saints and to be admired among all those who believe, because our testimony among you was believed” (2 Thess 1:7-10). Thus, the very day when Jesus comes to be glorified in His saints, and admired by all who believe, will be the day when He takes vengeance on all who know not God and obey not the Gospel.

Whether knowingly or unknowingly, all men are storing up for that day. Either wrath or blessing is being “stored up.” God is not indifferent to the way people respond to Him, even though His longsuffering is so interpreted by sinners.

A CONSIDERATION

We live in a time when the urgency of appropriating salvation has been replaced with a sort of gentle tolerance of unbelievers. It is not often that you hear a clarion call to choose who you will serve NOW. In fact, there has been a whole religious thrust to reduce the chaffing effect of the word of God. This has proceeded from the wisdom of men.

The new theological jargon is “seeker-friendly.” It is a purely psychological view, with no substantiation in Scripture whatsoever. It does not view seeking as declared in the Word of God, but views someone coming to “church” as a seeker. A gentle atmosphere is sought that takes care not to intrude upon the supposed “seeker.” There is a consequent reduction in edification and the nurture of the saints, which is the sole purpose for believers gathering together (1 Cor 14:26). The appearance, content, and length of the gathering is tailored for those who are NOT in Christ – a most peculiar strategy.

When once the gravity of the situation registers upon the soul, all such efforts will be replaced by Gospel-centered, God-glorifying, saints-edifying efforts. In such an environment, men will be pressed to make up their minds—to choose who they are going to serve. Sinners must be reminded of their real status in order that the Gospel may obtain a good sound to them. As long as they refuse to choose the Lord and obtain His righteousness, they are storing up wrath for themselves. It is not pleasant to consider such a thing. But that is what causes it to have a challenging effect upon the soul. It is the truth—revealed truth.

ONCE AGAIN

Lest I wander too far from the intent of the text, allow me to again remind you of its purpose. We are hearing the Spirit confirm that we NEED the righteousness of God. God will accept NO righteousness that we have achieved on our own. He will ONLY receive the righteousness He gives to men through faith in His Son.

Further, if we tarry to receive that righteousness, wrath is being stored up for us. The wrath of God is AGAINST all of the unrighteousness and ungodliness of men—which is whatever has not come from Him.

The choice before all men is, righteousness from God or wrath from God. There are no other alternatives. The Gospel puts God’s righteousness within our reach. It also provides incentives to seek and appropriate that righteousness. If it is refused, Divine indignation is stored up for that person, and will be poured out on judgment day. There is no good reason for men to continue in sin.

The fact that God is longsuffering does not mean He has forgotten His wrath. Rather than pouring it out upon the wicked immediately, it is being stored up as well as held back.

judgment of God.”

There will be differing measures of that wrath, as seen in this text. Those who have long resisted the Lord will experience larger measures of that wrath and indignation “which shall devour the adversaries” (Heb 10:27). In somber tones the Spirit speaks to those clinging to their own righteousness, and refusing to obtain the righteousness of God. “You are storing up wrath for yourself in the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God.”^{NASB}

Just as the truly righteous are laying up for themselves “treasures in heaven,” so the unrighteous are “storing up wrath for” themselves (Matt 6:19). The Lord does not forget the labors of the righteous (Heb 6:10) or the hardness of the wicked. The fact that God is longsuffering does not mean He has forgotten His wrath. Rather than pouring it out upon the wicked immediately, it is being stored up as well as held back.

Jesus spoke of this same condition when describing those who did not believe on Him. “He who does not believe is condemned already . . . he who does not

GOD'S RIGHTEOUS JUDGMENT REVEALED

“^{6b} . . . and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, ⁶who will render to each one according to his deeds: ⁷eternal life to those who by patient continuance in doing good seek for glory, honor, and immortality; ⁸but to those who are self-seeking and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness; indignation and wrath, ⁹tribulation and anguish, on every soul of man who does evil, of the Jew first and also of the Greek; ¹⁰but glory, honor, and peace to everyone who works what is good, to the Jew first and also to the Greek.”

The “day of wrath” will be more than a Divine explosion of anger and destruction. That will surely occur, but it will flow from the righteous character of God. It will not be like a mere man losing his temper. A burst of wrath from man confirms he has lost control of himself, but that is not what will happen in the day of God’s wrath. It will be a time when the “righteous judgment” of God will be made known directly, and not by testimony, as it is now.

RIGHTEOUS JUDGMENT

In this world, God gives indications of His “righteous judgment.” It is declared in the Gospel, which announces the judgement of God against sin. When He made Jesus “to be sin for us,” God “condemned sin in the flesh” of His Son (2 Cor 5:21; Rom 8:3). Divine judgment has also been revealed in the descent of men into moral degradation, as they were given over to baser lusts because of their refusal to retain God in their knowledge (1:25-27). The judgment of God was further revealed as men were delivered over to a “reprobate mind” to do things that are not fitting (1:28). In all of these things, God’s judgment was righteous.

But these judgments are only token ones. They are designed to awaken slumbering sinners. Much of the judgment of God is being withheld, lest the race of man be consumed in it.

There is an appointed day, however, when the judgment of God will no longer be restrained, or mingled, as it were, with mercy. It is then that the fulness of Divine judgment will be made known. The absolute correctness of this judgment will also be revealed in a most precise manner. God will be “justified” in all of His sayings, particularly those relating to His judgment (Rom 3:4). No one will be sent to hell unjustly. No person will be gathered to be forever with the Lord unrighteously. There will not be a dissenting voice heard throughout all the universe. That God is impeccably just and righteous will be evident, and the mouths of all the ungodly will be stopped.

How frequently the “righteous judgment” of God is declared in Scripture. “He shall judge the world in righteousness . . . He loveth righteousness and judgment . . . He shall judge thy people with righteousness . . . But judgment shall return unto righteousness . . . righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne . . . the righteous judgment of God” (Psa 9:8; 33:5; 72:2; 94:15; 97:2; Thess 1:5).

The heavenly chambers will echo with praise in that day—extolling the righteous judgment of our God. “Thou art righteous, O Lord, which art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus. . . . true and righteous are thy judgments . . . true and righteous are his judgments” (Rev 16:5,7; 19:2). The righteousness of God’s judgments will be perceived. Then, there will be no sympathy for the ungodly, and no tolerance of their wicked ways. No tears will be shed because of the damnation of the ungodly.

While we are in the world, our hearts seek for the reconciliation of the lost, and we weep over the sin of the sinner. God is longsuffering toward them, and His grace is offered to them. But when the “righteous judgment” of God is unveiled, all of that will abruptly end. The “day of salvation” will conclude, and the “door of hope” will be closed.

ACCORDING TO HIS DEEDS

All men will be dealt with in strict accordance with their deeds, or what they have done. This is a consistent proclamation throughout Scripture, and is disruptive to stilted theology. Judgment will be “according to” the works, or deeds, of men. “And I saw the dead, small and great, standing before God, and books were opened. And another book was opened, which is the Book of Life. And the dead were judged according to their works, by the things which were written in the books. The sea gave up the dead who were in it, and Death and Hades delivered up the dead who were in them. And they were judged, each one according to his works” (Rev 20:12-13).

Jesus said, “For the Son of man shall come in the glory of His Father with His angels; and then He shall reward every man according to his works” (Matt 16:27). Paul said, “For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad” (2 Cor 5:10). Of the wicked it is said, “whose end shall be according to their works” (2 Cor 11:15). Of the godly it is declared, “every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor” (1 Cor 3:8). Our labor is not in vain in the Lord.

Sowing and Reaping

In the "righteous judgment" of God, the law of sowing and reaping will be brought to fruition. This is a law that begins in this life, and will be culminated in the day of God's wrath and righteous judgment. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting" (Gal 6:7-8). No person will reap what they have not sown! Those who have made no investment in their souls, refusing to be "led by the Spirit," will NOT receive eternal life. Those who have followed their own will, rejecting the good and perfect will of God, will not enter into the "everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2 Pet 1:11). Conversely, those who have lived by faith and walked in the Spirit, will be joyfully received into the presence of the Lord.

A considerable percentage of professed Christians appear to live in complete insensitivity to this fact.

ETERNAL LIFE

"To those who by persistence in doing good seek glory, honor and immortality, He will give eternal life."^{NIV} This text sharply conflicts with much theology, and sadly so. The Holy Spirit here associates "eternal life" with "doing good." Many are unable to make such an association. Yet, the Spirit is very precise in His expression. He does not say they are saved because they do good. Rather, there is an underlying quest that compels these people to do good—and it is that quest that sanctifies their doing. Further, it is not merely "doing good" that will be rewarded, but "persistence in doing good," or "patient continuance in well doing."^{KJV}

Doing Good

Just what is "doing good?" To some, it may be seen as simply being neighborly, or the avoidance of doing obviously wrong things. But this is not the case, for that kind of behavior is based upon the flesh, and not the Spirit.

Here the Spirit shows us the impact of "a righteousness from God" upon the individual. Righteousness is not only imputed to us, it is effective in enabling men to live godly. Thus men so energetically engage in the pursuit of eternal life that their whole lives are restructured by that pursuit. "Doing good" refers to being personally involved in the "good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Rom 12:2). At the lower end, it is doing "good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith" (Gal 6:10). At the high end, it is being perfected by God working within us "in every good work to do His will" (Heb 13:20). In every case, it is personal involvement in the will of the Lord.

There is an appropriate way in which the promises of God are to be sought. This is not only an activity of the mind. It includes the marshaling of all our resources in the quest.

There is an appropriate way in which the promises of God are to be sought. This is not only an activity of the mind. It includes the marshaling of all our resources in the quest. "Doing good" involves the subordination of the flesh, living by faith, and walking in the Spirit.

Seeking for Glory

"Doing good" is not the fundamental thing, but a means to the fundamental thing. In the doing, men are seeking for "glory." The Gospel announces that glory can be obtained because of the satisfactory work of Jesus. The soul that believes that Gospel engages in a fervent pursuit of that glory.

The eternal purpose of God includes the glorification of all who are in the Son. As it is written, "and whom He justified, them He also glorified" (Rom 8:30). The consummate experience of the righteous will occur at the appearing of the Lord. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory" (Col 3:4). If that does not take place, life has been lived for nothing, and everything has been vanity!

The resurrection of the dead is the occasion when our bodies will be transformed to be like that of our Lord. Thus it is said of the body, "It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory" (1 Cor 15:43). The Spirit also says of this circumstance, "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able even to subdue all things unto Himself" (Phil 3:21).

Seeking for glory assumes a fundamental discontent with our present situation. We are not discontent with the treasure we have, but with the vessel in which is presently resides (2 Cor 4:7). It is "the flesh" that offends us, for it lusts against the Spirit, competing for our hearts (Gal 5:17). The faithful ever confess, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin" (Rom 7:24-25). Glorification will remove the circumstance of contention. No longer will we find "another law" in our members, "warring against" the law of our mind (Rom 7:23).

Faith moves us to aggressively "seek for glory." It makes us discontent with the wilderness of this world, and a body destined to return to the dust. The Word of God knows nothing of a person in Christ with no interest in "glory." The desire for it is inherent in the new creation. It must not be subdued or ignored, for to do so is to forfeit the prize.

Seeking for Honor

The child of God desires recognition from God. Having been delivered from this "present evil world according to the will of our God and Father" (Gal 1:4), the believer places no value on the accolades of the world. But faith is not content to remain unrecognized or unacknowledged. It seeks for the public recognition of God Almighty. At once you will recognize this is a foreign thought to many professing Christians. However, it is the truth.

Jesus once chided His enemies, "How can you believe, who receive honor from one another, and do not seek the honor that comes from the only God?^{”NKJV} (John 5:44). On another occasion, the Holy Spirit explains some chief rulers who believed on Him did not, for fear of being put out of the synagogue, confess him. “For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God”^{”NKJV} (John 12:43).

In comforting believers, the Spirit refers to the time when God will openly honor the saints. *“Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord comes, who will both bring to light the hidden things of darkness and reveal the counsels of the hearts. Then each one’s praise will come from God”^{”NKJV} (1 Cor 4:5). There are people whom “the Lord commends” (2 Cor 10:18). That commendation will be made public on the day of the Lord.*

In another poignant saying, Jesus said, “If anyone serves Me, let him follow Me; and where I am, there My servant will be also. If anyone serves Me, him My Father will honor”^{”NKJV} (John 12:26). The persuasion of the truth of this promise has a powerful influence upon the soul. It will compel the believer to think, speak, and live in order to obtain recognition from God in the day of Christ. It neutralizes the adverse affects of the world’s rejection, and the failure of even religious peers to appreciate our labors. Though little known, here is a wonderful aspect of salvation and hope: diligently continuing in well doing in anticipation of receiving honor from God.

Seeking for Immortality

The new creation cannot acclimate to death. Life is everything—eternal life. Yet, “it is appointed unto man once to die” (Heb 9:27). It is true of every believer, “but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day” (2 Cor 4:16). The perception of that circumstance produces an intense longing for “immortality.”

Immortality is a quality possessed by God alone. As it is written, “the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; Who only hath immortality” (1 Tim 6:16). The promise of immortality is inherent in the Gospel, which brings it to light (2 Tim 1:10).

Immortality will occur for the believer when death is totally eradicated. As it is written, *“For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory” (1 Cor 15:53-54). This is a state in which no aspect of our persons will diminish or wane in any sense. We will thus be perfect in spirit, soul, and body, conformed to the image of Christ. What a blessed contemplation! Immortality is something for which faith seeks. It is not content with death or the deterioration that is associated with it. Faith can only reside where there is life.*

life through Jesus Christ our Lord^{”NKJV} (Rom 5:21). Without righteousness, there can be no “eternal life.”

The required righteousness, however, does not come from men, but from God. It is not developed by men, but imputed to men. Further, the Spirit has confirmed the universal need of this righteousness.

Now the Spirit has confirmed that the righteousness that is given to us upon the basis of faith, engages us in the pursuit of glory, honor, and immortality. That is imputed righteousness working within us. Whoever consistently sets about to do good, earnestly seeking for glory, honor, and immortality, will be granted the fulness of eternal life. This will be a righteous and true conferment, for all of God’s judgments are righteous.

What can be said of a religion that does not encourage such a quest? What element of goodness can be found in any approach to God that leaves the individual disinterested in seeking for glory, honor, and immortality? Is there any one capable of sound thought that can conclude God will dignify such an approach by granting eternal life? To ponder the question is to answer it.

Men seek immortality by faithful continuance in well doing. Thus, they are not overwhelmed by the hardships of life. Once again, this is not a common perspective in the modern church.

Men seek immortality by faithful continuance in well doing. Thus, they are not overwhelmed by the hardships of life. Once again, this is not a common perspective in the modern church.

Eternal Life and Seeking

We must be careful not to miss the intent of this passage. Humanity has been indicted for NOT seeking after the Lord—for refusing to retain God in their knowledge. Even though all of nature, and their conscience as well, shouted out for men to “seek the Lord,” they stopped short of finding Him. Even though God strategically placed man in both location and time so that he might “seek the Lord” (Acts 17:26-27), he did not do so.

“Eternal life,” while a gift from God (Rom 6:23), is also the consequence of righteousness. Thus it is written, “as sin reigned in death, even so grace might reign through righteousness to eternal

INDIGNATION, WRATH, TRIBULATION, AND ANGUISH

“But to those who are selfishly ambitious and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, wrath and indignation. There will be tribulation and distress for every soul of man who does evil.”^{”NASB} If we are tempted to think this is simply a theological discourse, designed to assure that we maintain a correct doctrinal statement, we must think again. The total absence of ambiguity, and the absolute sobriety of the text assures us of its criticality. This is not small thought, or something around which elaborate arguments are to be developed.

Without the righteousness of God, men are shut up, or confined, to their own corrupted resources. Because our text has introduced us to a list of despicable sins, men might be tempted to think of sin and rebellion only in terms of gross immorality and obvious infractions of God's Law. The Spirit thus provides a grand summation of sin so we may understand that it excludes men from the Kingdom of God.

Selfishly Ambitious

The KJV version reads "contentious." That is, the person seeks his own will so aggressively that he contends with everyone who does not feed his self-centeredness. The NRSV and NIV read "self-seeking." This reveals how those without the righteousness of God are primarily interested in themselves, and not the glory of God. The NASB reads "selfishly ambitious." This emphasizes that such people are aggressive to fulfill their own personal interests, which have made no provision for honoring God. In its essence, sin makes the individual self-centered, even though all men are made in the image of God. That is confirmed in the very first sin, when Satan lured Eve into thinking more of herself than of God.

Not Obeying the Truth

Truth, or ultimate reality, is to be obeyed. It is not to be ignored. To fail to obey the truth is to "reject" it^{NIV}, obstinately refusing to yield to its demands. Looking at this matter from a more practical point of view, truth is what God has revealed about Himself and His purpose. The very fact that truth is to be "obeyed" shows it conflicts with the natural will of man. Obeying the truth involves abandoning self-will, and energetically buying the truth, determined not to sell or forfeit it (Prov 23:23).

Obeying Truth the Pictured in Baptism

A classic example of obeying the truth is found in our baptism. In that case, the truth, of doctrine, is the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. Obeying the truth is becoming intimately associated with all of those facts. We are "crucified with Him" (Rom 6:6; Gal 2:20), "buried with Him" (Rom 6:4; Col 2:12) and "raised up" like Him (Rom 6:4; Col 3:1). Much is made of this in Scripture.

Because of being so joined with the truth, baptism is referred to as obeying with the heart the "form of the doctrine" (Rom 6:17). Thus we are brought into harmony with the truth.

NOT obeying the truth is failing to conform to it. It is refusing to subscribe to its demands and thrusting it away. Bewitched by false teachers, the Galatians regressed into a state where they did "not obey the truth" (Gal 3:1; 5:7). This is a consequence for rejecting the righteousness that comes from God.

Those subjected to the truth of God, regardless of its magnitude, will be held responsible for failing to obey it.

Obeying Unrighteousness

While those refusing to receive the righteousness of God decline to obey the truth, they DO "obey unrighteousness." They reject godly impulses in favor of ungodly ones. They yield to what is NOT right, while rejecting what IS right. In fact, they reject the truth in order that they may follow evil.^{NIV}

Jesus described this disobedience in vivid words. "And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved" (John 3:19-20). Second Thessalonians 2:12 refers to this condition as believing "not the truth," but having "pleasure in unrighteousness."

The Reward

What will be the result of those who are "self-seeking," "do not obey the truth," and "obey unrighteousness?" The word is sobering. "Indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil." There are some approaches to preaching and teaching that do not even allow for such expressions. These are "words . . . which the Holy Spirit teaches, comparing spiritual things with spiritual" (1 Cor 2:13). It is not possible to ignore or minimize them without suffering the consequences. Candidly, I am persuaded that a significant percentage of professed Christians do not believe these words.

Indignation

Indignation is the boiling over of Divine wrath. It is the venting of the nature of God against those contrary to it. Such indignation is consuming. As it is written, "fiery indignation which will devour the adversaries" (Heb 10:27). This is a passionate and consuming anger.

Wrath

The very word is arresting. This word emphasizes the focus of God's anger against His adversaries. It will be concentrated on "all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men" (Rom 1:18). It is also depicted as coming "upon the children of disobedience" (Eph 5:6; Col; 3:6) whose conduct has been directed by Satan himself.

There is an aspect to this that should jar all men from their complacency. While those in Christ have "not been appointed to wrath" (), Divine wrath does still exist, and believers are to be mindful of it.

God has represented Himself as "willing to show His wrath, and to make His power known" (Rom 9:22). Not only is "wrath" an aspect of God's Person, it cannot be eternally subdued. Eventually, it will be directed toward all who have refused to pursue the knowledge of Him, and have rejected His righteousness.

Tribulation

The wicked will be punished with "tribulation," trouble^{NRSV}, or anguish.^{NIV} If men cannot be persuaded to seek the righteousness that comes from God, let them ponder the outcome of being found without it! Their trouble will begin in this world, and particularly just prior to the coming of the Lord and the consequent passing of the heavens and the earth (2 Pet 3:10-12). They will call for rocks and mountains to fall upon them as they anticipate the "wrath of the Lamb" (Rev 6:15-16). That will only be the beginning of their tribulation.

The greatest of all tribulation will occur when the unrighteous are cast “into the fire that never shall be quenched: Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched” (Mk 9:44,46,48). Let no person doubt it, “It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God” (Heb 10:31).

Anguish

Anguish is personal torment. While indignation and wrath come from God, tribulation and anguish are the experiences realized by men through them. There is a hopelessness in “anguish.” “Anguish” means narrowness

Those supposing obtaining a righteousness from God is not that important, must consider the alternative. Remember, the point of this passage is to confirm our need for the righteousness of God. If men do not avail themselves of it, they will suffer the due penalty for their disobedience.

JEW FIRST, AND ALSO TO THE GREEK

Because the Jews have been given more, more is required of them. They were the first to hear both the Law and the Gospel. The entire ministry of Jesus was spent among them. All of the the day when the righteous judgment of God is revealed against anything and everything unlike Himself.

GLORY, HONOR, AND PEACE

In order to build the faith and hope of the saints, the Spirit reaffirms, “but glory, honor, and peace to everyone who works what is good, to the Jew first and also to the Greek” (v 10). What a marvelous promise, and how essential it is that we hear it often.

Notice the addition of the word “peace.” What a precious contemplation that is. In this world saints experienced resistance to working “what is good.” The resistance came from within, from the “flesh” (Gal 5:17). It came from the devil himself (1 Pet 5:8-9). It also came in the form of persecution, evil speaking, and the general opposition of the ungodly (Matt 5:11-12). The saints of God will eventually be delivered from all opposing influence and struggles, Peace will be given to them that is unequalled. In the ultimate fulfillment of Isaiah’s prophecy, the Lord will extend “peace like a river” (Isa 66:12).

They were the first to hear both the Law and the Gospel. The entire ministry of Jesus was spent among them. All of the prophets testified to them. Thus, the stricter accountability will be required of them.

of place, dire calamity, and extreme affliction. It is when the soul is pressed as in an olive press, and no relief is experienced.

All men suffer “tribulation” “anguish” to some degree. For the believer, they are experienced only in this world—and even then, only in measure. They not only recover from these times of grief, but are made the better for them. But for the unrighteous, this is not so. When God pours His indignation and wrath upon them, they will never recover, and never realize comfort in any form.

prophets testified to them. Thus, the stricter accountability will be required of them. Revelation is wed to responsibility.

Because the “Greeks,” or the most cultured among the Gentiles, are not innocent, indignation, wrath, tribulation, and anguish will come upon them also. There is no respect of persons with God.

Wherever a soul is found that continues doing evil, these judgments will occur. The only alternative to doing evil, is to obtain a righteousness from God. It is the only thing that will stand the test of

Once again, this arrangement is “to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile.”^{KJV} Thus both punishment and reward will begin with the Jews. God forbid, therefore, that should imagine they no longer have any recognition in heaven! If they are first in experiencing the power of the Gospel (1:16), first in punishment (2:8-9), and first in reward (2:10), how can they have lost all identity with the Lord? We do well to have “the mind of Christ” on this matter. If God so regards them, who is man to despise them? Let us acquiesce with the Lord.

NO PARTIALITY WITH GOD

“1 For there is no partiality with God.” Here is an aspect of God that is repeatedly proclaimed. Moses declared, “For the LORD your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great God, mighty and awesome, who shows no partiality nor takes a bribe” (Deut 10:17). King Jehosaphat charged the judges of the land, “Take heed to what you are doing, for you do not judge for man but for the LORD, who is with you in the judgment.”

Now therefore, let the fear of the LORD be upon you; take care and do it, for there is no iniquity with the LORD our God, no partiality, nor taking of bribes” (2 Chron 19:6-7). Elihu was right when he said to Job, “Yet He is not partial to princes, Nor does He regard the rich more than the poor; For they are all the work of His hands” (Job 34:19). Peter said to the household of Cornelius, “In truth I perceive that God shows no partiality”

(Acts 10:34). Speaking of some who had exalted themselves due to their expertise in the Law, Paul said, “But from those who seemed to be something; whatever they were, it makes no difference to me; God shows personal favoritism to no man; for those who seemed to be something added nothing to me” (Gal 2:6).

Because God is no respecter of persons, every man will receive according to his investments. God will not be mocked. As it is written, “Do not be deceived, God is not mocked; for whatever a man sows, that he will also reap. For he who sows to his flesh will of the flesh reap corruption, but he who sows to the Spirit will of the Spirit reap everlasting life” (Gal 6:7-8). In somber tones, the Spirit says, “But he who does wrong will be repaid for what he has done, and there is no partiality” (Col 3:25).

Peter adds a word on this matter also, confirming that life is to lived in view of this certainty. “And if you call on the Father, who without partiality judges according to each one’s work, conduct yourselves throughout the time of your stay here in fear” (1 Pet 1:17).

And what does all of this mean? Why is it emphasized so much? It is because men tend to trust in a profession, or in an outward identity with God. Thus the Jews relied upon what they were called, and made their boast in the Law, which was, as a covenant, given exclusively to them (Rom 2:17). Because that matter is addressed later in this chapter, I will forgo further comments at this time.

While men tend to distinguish themselves from others by their creeds, names, and proper positions, these are not the primary distinctions. To be sure, God will not condone the embrace of a lie, or holding to doctrines that are not true. However, neither will He condone the person or church who is meticulous in doctrine, but fails to grow up into Christ in all things (Eph 4:15). We have the church in Ephesus as an example. “I know thy works, and thy labor, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars: and hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name’s sake hast labored, and hast not fainted. Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love” (Rev 2:2-4).

THE SEPARATION OF THE RACE

According to the flesh, the sons of men were separated with Israel in mind. Thus it is written, “When the Most High divided their inheritance to the nations, When He separated the sons of Adam, He set the boundaries of the peoples According to the number of the children of Israel” (Deut 32:8).

Now, that is a noble distinction. Yet, it did not give the Jews cause to imagine they were not guilty of sin, or did not require a righteousness from God. Jerusalem was destroyed as well as Babylon! David was punished as well as loving everyone the same. Thus, they affirm, God loves the drunkard as much as He does the fervent servant of the Lord. No such representation is ever given in Scripture. In fact it contradicts what is said about God’s attitude toward people. For example, God referred to David as “a man after My own heart” (1 Sam 13:14). He also affirmed “Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated” (Rom 9:13). The Lord referred to Abraham as “My friend” (Isa 41:8). John was “the disciple whom Jesus loved” (John 20:2). God told Israel “if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people” (Ex

Cain. There is no partiality or respect of persons with God. That is a truth it is to our advantage to grasp more fully.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

Suffice it to say, multitudes of professed believers are conducting their lives as though God DID respect persons. Even though they lack the righteousness of God, they imagine they are received by God because of their position, or the church they attend, or some other imagination. They are not endeavoring to fight the good fight of faith, and thus lay hold on eternal life (1 Tim 6:12). Yet, they imagine they are saved, or at least that they stand a good chance of getting into heaven.

The blight of spiritual mediocrity and indifference are so common, few people consider them to be of any consequence at all. If such views are acceptable with God, then He a respecter of persons, and does show partiality.

Unable to receive this, some affirm that God’s lack of partiality is revealed in 19:5). In Jesus, that kind of preference is brought to its apex. It is said of those in the Son, “But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, His own special people” (1 Pet 2:9). Do you imagine God loves everyone the same, or that there are none who are favored before Him?

Being no respecter of persons means God will not violate His character to either accept or reject men. He will remain true to Himself, for He “cannot deny Himself” (2 Tim 2:13). If a non-Jew like Cornelius prays and gives alms out of a good heart, his prayers and alms will come up before God (Acts 10:4). If a disciplined church like Ephesus, noted for testing the false prophets, is found lacking love for Jesus, they will be rebuked and threatened with removal (Rev 2:1-4). There is no respect of persons with God. In confirmation of this, His judgment will “begin at the house of God” (1 Pet 4:17). God will not overlook the lack of righteousness—not even among those of His own house!

SIN AND THE LAW

“For as many as have sinned without law will also perish without law, and as many as have sinned in the law will be judged by the law.”

The Spirit continues to bring home to our hearts the need for a righteousness from God. He has already shown that human nature is so corrupt it embraces sin eagerly, and does not engage in a continual effort to know God and appropriate His righteousness. All are guilty, none are innocent. All are deserving of judgment and condemnation, and none have attained unto true righteousness. Rest assured, God would the lake of fire. Rather, it is to confirm their need of a righteousness from God. It is also designed to show us that apart from Divine intervention that righteousness will not be appropriated.

The Gentiles sinned “without the Law,” but they did not sin without testimony. They had the witness of both that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit” (1 Pet 4:6). He is doubtless referring to an earlier statement he made regarding Christ preaching to “spirits.” “For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water” (1 Pet 3:18-20).

Thus, in the judgment of those who had no law, they will not be measured by what they did not obtain. Rather, they will be judged in accordance with what was given to them.

not provide His righteousness for us if we did not stand in need of it.

We will now see that the entrance of the Law did not change the human condition. Neither the Jews nor the Gentiles were deterred by the Law. Sin continued to ravage the race, thereby confirming its need for a righteousness from God.

Remember, God is no respecter of persons, and thus shows no partiality. Whether sin is committed in the absence of Law, or while one is in possession of it, it still is subject to the wrath of God.

SINNING WITHOUT THE LAW

Notice, the text does NOT say those sinning “without law” will be excused because they received no law from God. Neither, indeed, does it say those who sinned without the law will be judged without the law. Those are contrivances of men that obscure the reasoning of the text. Those who have sinned without the benefit of Divine law will “perish,” or be destroyed without it.

The purpose of this text is not to explain why people will be consigned to nature and their conscience, and both are powerful witnesses. They had to suppress the truth, as meager as it may appear, in order to continue in their sin.

Thus, in the judgment of those who had no law, they will not be measured by what they did not obtain. Rather, they will be judged in accordance with what was given to them. The Spirit has already shown us that the Gentiles failed to listen to the testimony of nature and their conscience. In so doing, He is removing all excuse for sin from men. He is confirming that there really is no one who, of themselves, is righteous. There is a universal need for righteousness among the Gentiles. Further, they are not innocent in the matter.

I am careful to say that we must not press this text beyond the point being made by the Spirit. Universal condemnation is NOT the point, but universal need—and there is a great difference between the two. As to the eternal status of those who were “without law,” that is an arena in which we are not licensed to operate.

Peter informs us that “the gospel was preached also to those who are dead,

I realize great controversy rages over these texts. In my judgment, it is far better to take them as they stand, acknowledging they are most profound, extending beyond the perimeter of human knowledge. Believing it will help us refrain from making unwarranted judgments concerning others.

SINNING IN THE LAW

While the Gentiles sinned “without law,” the Jews did so “in the law,” or under the tutelage of the Law. With all of its meticulous instructions and precise definitions, it could not remove man’s basic tendency to sin. Even with its many threats, it remained powerless to change the human nature. The spirit does not say those who did not sin under the Law will be exonerated by the Law. Sin is again assumed, for the Lord is establishing there is no one who does not need the righteousness of God.

Just as the Gentiles will be held accountable for listening to nature and their conscience, so the Jews will be held accountable for listening to the Law. They will be measured by the very Law in which they made their boast. That law will not support them. They are basically sinful, and the Law cannot pronounce such a person righteous.

NOT HEARERS BUT DOERS ARE JUSTIFIED

which possessed a righteousness of its own. Elsewhere it is called “the righteousness of the law” (Rom 2:26; 8:4). Such a righteousness is purely idealistic, and no person actually possesses it. Those who imagine they do are only deceived. Paul referred to this kind of righteousness as a “mine own righteousness, which is of the law” (Phil 3:9). He knew that kind of righteousness would not hold up before the throne of God. It did not depend upon God, but upon men. That is why Paul called it “my own righteousness.”

There is an advantage to hearing the Law, but it is not total advantage. As it is written, “What advantage then has the Jew, or what is the profit of circumcision? Much in every way! Chiefly because to them were committed the oracles of God” (Rom 3:1-2). As our text will show, the Law gave no lasting advantage simply because it was heard or received. The advantage came in the DOING of it.

The Law promised life, or justification, to the doer. “And I gave them my statutes, and showed them my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them” (Ex 20:11). “Ye shall therefore keep my statutes, and my judgments: which if a man do, he shall live in them: I am the LORD” (Lev 18:5). Nehemiah affirmed this also (Neh 9:29). Ezekiel declared this to be the case (Ezek 20:11,13,21). Jesus announced this principle to a certain lawyer (Lk 10:28). Paul affirms it to the Romans (10:5) and the Galatians (Gal 3:12).

THE DOERS OF THE LAW

This is not a suggestion that such a person exists. Rather, it is affirming what the Law promised. It was a sincere promise, yet one which required more than man could give. The Law had to be done in its entirety, from the ceremonial to the moral requirements. The summation of the Law should have made it apparent that it was never intended to give life. “You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your strength. And these words which I command you today shall be in your heart” (Deut 6:5-6).

With an expertise that can only come through the Spirit, Paul has shown that no member of the human race has qualified for the justification, or life, offered by the law. After all, the Law “is not made for a righteous man” (1 Tim 1:9). That is, it was not a moral yardstick to identify who is really righteous. Instead, it pointed out that no one was righteous, but that all had gone astray. As it is written, “Now we know that whatever the law says, it says to those who are under the law, that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God. Therefore by the deeds of the law no flesh will be justified in His sight, for by the law is the knowledge of sin” (Rom 3:19-20).

A WRITING IN THE HEART

“... for when Gentiles, who do not have the law, by nature do the things in the law, these, although not having the law, are a law to themselves, ¹⁵ who show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and between themselves their thoughts accusing or else excusing them.” Verses fourteen and fifteen are the conclusion of a parenthetical phrase that began in verse 13. The entire parenthesis (vs 13-15) is an elaboration of verse twelve, “For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law.”

The point is that God has provided all men with a law. Formally, it was written on tables of stone, and given as a covenant to Israel. But it was also given intuitively, blazoned upon the conscience of those who did not receive it upon tables of stone. Now the Apostle takes that matter further. He will confirm the Gentiles are not innocent, even though no covenant of law was made with them. They did receive something.

This is spiritual reasoning, necessary because of man’s inclination to justify himself and excuse his sin. The flesh does everything it can to produce a justifiable reason for transgression. However, the

Even though man has fallen and is the slave of Satan, he still retains a likeness to God. That likeness is found with the thought processes. There remains in sinners a tendency toward Divine law.

Spirit will not allow excuses to be given. All men have ignored something in order to sin. With the Gentiles, it was their conscience.

“DOING” BY NATURE

“... for when Gentiles, who do not have the law, by nature do the things in the law.” Even though man has fallen and is the slave of Satan, he still retains a likeness to God. That likeness is found with the thought processes. There remains in sinners a tendency toward Divine law. Every nation, whether primitive or cultured, has sought to enforce some kind of law. They have developed rewards for keeping this law, and punishment for violating it. While all of the laws do not reflect the truth of God’s law, yet they reflect the “work of the law,” which is to define wrong and provide penalties for its violation.

All of this is done apart from any Divine coercion, and in spite of the devil’s promotion of lawlessness. It is not the result of education, or social influences that have molded the character of the Gentile world. “By nature” means the described work has resulted from something born in us, as distinguished from something developed through mental disciplines. This natural law is faintly mirrored in the brute creation. The ant, for example, provides food for itself in the summer, and gathers in a harvest, “having no guide, overseer, or ruler” (Prov 6:6-8). Bees know how to build cells and store honey. Beavers know how to cut wood and build dams. All of this is done intuitively, without a written code. It is a testimony to us.

Man, who is a higher creation than the creatures of nature, also possesses intuitive powers. They are of a higher order. Men must learn to build, store, plant, and sow. But when it comes to right and wrong, good and evil, a sense of it remains, even though eroded by iniquity.

In this verse, “doing” does not mean fulfilling all of the details of the Law intuitively. Rather it means endeavoring to develop and enforce some moral standard. Thus many, if not all, heathen nations have laws concerning murder, theft, honoring parents, and the like. They also have ways of enforcing those laws, ensuring they are not violated to the detriment of their society. Thus they “do instinctively what the law requires.”^{NRSV} They seek to manage human conduct.

The Spirit is not speaking of an exact replica of the law within the human conscience, but only a faint image of it. Just as the Divine image within man has been marred by sin, so the instinctiveness of right and wrong are crude and incomplete. Yet, this circumstance renders men without excuse.

Every Man Enlightened

There is an expression in the Gospel of John that illumines this passage. It speaks of the Lord Jesus coming into the world. Of that entrance it is written, “That was the true Light which gives light to every man coming into the world.”^{NKJV} (John 1:9). The phrase of interest is “which gives light to every man.” This phrase does not change, whether we read the verse as saying the enlightening One was coming into the world, or everyone that comes into the world is enlightened.

Viewed from the standpoint of our text, this accounts for the Gentiles doing by nature the things contained in the law. A sort of inner illumination was given to them—a remnant of the Divine image which shows the necessity of avoiding evil and doing good. It is not adequate to save a person, but it is sufficient to remove all excuses for sin, and confirm that a righteousness from God is needed.

“... these, although not having the law, are a law to themselves.” Having no written law is not the same as having NO law. By saying the Gentiles were “a law unto themselves,” the Spirit means their intuitive knowledge of right and wrong was to them what the Law of Moses was to Israel.

The Gentiles were just as responsible for living up to their inner law, as the Israelites were for living up to the Law of Moses. Their law was a lesser one, but still needed to be obeyed.

In this passage we learn that men are not as destitute of spiritual knowledge as Satan would have us believe. That condition accounts for the complete rejection of human righteousness, regardless of the level of enlightenment enjoyed. The righteousness of men can never be anything but partial and inconsistent. Both of these traits are unacceptable to God, and will not survive the day of judgment.

The conscience is not a perfect judge, for it can be distorted and fragmentary in its conviction. However, the smallest restraining and compelling power is honored by God.

THE WORK OF THE LAW

“... who show the work of the law written in their hearts.” The “work of the law” is the impression of the need for discriminating between good and evil. The work is crude, but the likeness of God’s law is perceived. The worst of societies have known there are things to be suppressed and things to be encouraged.

If you were to take the details of their concepts, they would not agree with the law. Some societies allow for murder, adultery, and other forms of immorality. The “work of the law” is seen in the attempt to structure life, identifying good and evil. There is a sense that God “is,” and that He should be worshiped and served. Thus men have created idols and given themselves to the service of what they conceive to be greater than themselves. Technically, they are wrong. Yet their very actions confirm “the work of the law” within them. They knew enough to make their sin indefensible.

By saying the work of the law is “written in their hearts,” the text means it is part of their nature—born into them by Divine appointment. It is an aspect of the Divine image that men bear.

THEIR CONSCIENCE

“... their conscience also bearing witness, and between themselves their thoughts accusing or else excusing them.” The conscience, one has said, is equal to a thousand witnesses. It is ever present with us, and will not let us go. It can condemn us or approve us. It is like a judge that presides over the lives of men.

The conscience is not a perfect judge, for it can be distorted and fragmentary in its conviction. However, the smallest restraining and compelling power is honored by God. God will hold men accountable for their response to their conscience.

The conscience testifies to the work of the law written upon the heart. It shouts out to men when they do wrong, and commends them when they do good. All of this is highly limited, particularly regarding the Gentiles. Yet, it is sufficient to provoke them to seek the Lord and a better understanding.

THEIR THOUGHTS

By nature, the Gentiles contend with a condemning and approving conscience. In their thoughts men without the true knowledge of God wrestle with a sense of right and wrong. The Divine image within man is marvelously confirmed by this circumstance. The conscience produces thoughts that aggressively condemn wrong, or set about to justify what is conceived to be right.

The worst of men have thought more about good and evil, and right and wrong, than they are willing to admit. We know this is the case, because the Holy Spirit argues that men are inexcusable before God because of thoughts induced by their conscience.

By nature, men call themselves into their own moral court. In it, their conscience testifies to the character of their work. The thoughts of men are like lawyers that plead the case to the conscience. Some thoughts are accusatory, and others argue for the acquittal of the person.

There is no individual who does not

KNOWLEDGE of right and wrong. It is NOT speaking of a will, or basic desire, to do good and avoid evil. That is an important distinction to see. If one doubts this to be the case, ponder that, without exception, “all have sinned and come short of the glory of God” (Rom 3:23).

Sin has so corrupted men that they WANT to sin—want to please themselves. This is a dominating desire, and is so strong all men suppress retaining God in their knowledge. That is why they do not but how to perform what is good I do not find” (Rom 7:18). Alas, this is too hard for some to receive. Within the Christian community there are some who contend this is not true of believers—even though one of the premier believers confessed it.

If the sanctified will cannot perfectly carry out its desires, what of the will that remains under the domination of sin? What power of nature enables the will to prefer good and hate evil? There is no such power in the natural man. If this were not the case, it would not be necessary to be born again (John 3:3-6).

This passage has dealt with knowledge, not will. It has also confirmed the knowledge was suppressed and rejected in preference for personal gratification. This is true of all men, whether they be Jew or Greek.

contend with this form of inner examination. Some, because of their love for sin, eventually sear the conscience, silencing its voice and thus breaking down the last barrier to deep involvement in sin. But the fact that they had to contend with their conscience, and think about what they did, confirms the work of the law was written upon their heart. How precious is a good conscience!

NOT SPEAKING OF THE WILL

This passage is speaking of the seek the Lord. That is why the Lord has to “seek” them, else they will never be found (Lk 19:10).

Men must guard against the tendency to place too much emphasis upon the will of man. It is not as strong as some have imagined. Even after we have been “joined to the Lord” (1 Cor 6:17), our wills cannot fully implement what they desire. As it is written, “For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) nothing good dwells; for to will is present with me,

A RIGHTEOUSNESS FROM GOD

Again, the point of these powerful arguments is that men need a righteousness from God. This is the righteousness that is revealed in the Gospel. It is a righteousness that can only be appropriated by faith.

It is man’s Unrighteous condition that compelled him to choose and serve sin. He is fundamentally unrighteous, and stands in need of another righteousness which is not his own (Phil 3:9).

THE DAY GOD WILL JUDGE

“6 . . . in the day when God will judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel.” With the parenthetical statement completed, the Spirit now returns to the thought initiated in verse twelve. The full thought is as follows, “For as many as have sinned without law will also perish without law, and as many as have sinned in the law will be judged by the law . . . in the day when God will judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel” (v. 13,16). That is, the time when those without law and those with law will be judged is “in the day when God will judge” all men. This is “the judgment” to which all men have been appointed (Heb 9:27), and which no man can avoid.

“The secrets” of reference include the “thoughts” mentioned in verse fifteen; i.e., “their thoughts accusing or else excusing them.” These were not publicly uttered, but were kept within. Men struggled with their own sins, even though they did not always acknowledge such struggles. Saul of Tarsus was not the last person who found it hard to “kick against the pricks” of a goading conscience (Acts 9:5; 26:14). By the grace of God, he was brought out of the condition because he placed a high value on his conscience, always honoring it in accord with the level of his understanding (Acts 22:3-4; 23:1; 24:16; 26:6). He too, in spite of honoring his conscience, needed a righteousness from God.

In the end, in the day of judgment, we will find that no person continuing in sin was truly innocent. We must beware of any tendency to excuse sin, or imagine we have no need of a righteousness from God. If men will be judged for not honoring their untrained conscience, what will be the portion of those who have heard the Gospel of Christ, and have willingly remained in sin?

This is the judgment that will result in “eternal life” for those seeking for glory, honor, and immortality. It is also the judgment where “indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish” will be passed on every soul of man that does evil” (2:7-9). It is appropriately called

“THE day,” for the day of judgment is always viewed as singular (Matt 10:15; 11:22,24; 12:36; Rom 2:5; 2 Pet 2:9; 3:71 John 4:17; Jude 6).

BY JESUS CHRIST

God is going to judge the world by His Son. That will cast the judgment in the most favorable light, for the Son walked in this world, facing the devil, relying upon God, and tasting of the human experience. Therefore it is written, “Because He has appointed a day on which He will judge the world in righteousness by the Man whom He has ordained. He has given assurance of this to all by raising Him from the dead”^{NKJV} (Acts 17:31). It is Jesus who has been “ordained by God to be Judge of the living and the dead”^{NKJV} (Acts 10:42). The judgment seat belongs to Him. Therefore, “we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that each one may receive the things done in the body, according to what he has done, whether good or bad”^{NKJV} (2 Cor 5:10).

This is particularly important. The Gospel is the good news concerning Christ. Inherent in that wonderful message is the availability of a righteousness from God. That righteousness will carry us through the judgment, passing all Divine scrutiny. However, the day of judgment will be a dreadful day for those who have rejected this righteousness from God, choosing to develop their own imagined righteousness. This is a most serious consideration, to which all men do well to take heed.

Christians are hearing about the day of judgment, the reward of the godly, or the punishment of the ungodly. Where that condition exists, the Gospel is really not being preached.

The Gospel of Christ is against the backdrop of the conditions described in our text. It assumes universal guilt and

ACCORDING TO MY GOSPEL

Paul often refers to the Gospel as his own (i.e., Rom 16:25; 2 Tim 2:8). He does this because it had been committed to him as a stewardship, and he was the custodian of it. He had also entered into it, being himself joined to the Lord and partaking of its benefits.

Why is it that the judgment of the secrets of men is associated with the Gospel? This is a totally foreign thought to many believers. These days, few helplessness. It also assumes the essentiality of a righteousness from God, and the total unacceptability of a humanly developed righteousness.

The fact of imminent judgment, and the devouring of God’s adversaries bring an urgency to the Gospel that all discerning souls realize. It is all “according to” the Gospel. Those who imagine the Gospel to be simplistic do well to look more closely in it. They will soon behold marvelous things.

CONCLUSION

The gravity of the text reviewed should be apparent to all. Sin has brought a condition upon humanity with wide sweeping affects. Men have been left “inexcusable.” The corrupt human nature has consistently ignored the testimony of nature, the witness of the conscience, and the unmistakable voice of the Law. Even when men knew God, they thrust the knowledge from them. They refused to retain Him in their knowledge. They also ignored their conscience, finding reasons to continue in their sin. Even when given the written law of God, men excused their proclivity to sin and sat in judgment upon those with the same vices as themselves.

Until these things are properly seen, little value will be placed upon “the righteousness of God” that is revealed in the Gospel. As long as men retain the deluded view that they are good, or that the capacity for goodness remains in them, they will see no need for a righteousness from God.

In salvation, God has not only provided for the needs of men, but for the expression of His own graciousness. Although He owes nothing to any person, He has graciously provided His own righteousness to them, undeserving though they be. His Son assumed all of their liabilities, thereby allowing God to remain righteous in justifying fallen man. That justification includes the complete exoneration from guilt. It also includes the conferment of a righteousness that will stand the test of Divine judgment. Even the revelation of the “secrets of men” will diminish that righteousness. It ought to be clear that this righteousness is indispensable.

I have every confidence that a firm persuasion of a need for righteousness, together with the glorious sound of the Gospel, will produce the right response. However, where the conviction of a need for “the righteousness of God” is lacking, and where the Gospel is not being proclaimed, men are shut up to condemnation. It is a situation from which they cannot extricate themselves. They must both be delivered, and receive righteousness and eternal life as gifts from God. Without these, there simply is no hope.

When we begin to assign values, let the preeminent ones go to God, Christ, the Gospel, and this “great salvation.” Let us place such a high premium upon the righteousness of God that we will not allow an evil heart of unbelief to rob us of its presence and blessing.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 6

BOTH JEWS AND GENTILES ARE GUILTY

(BOTH NEED A RIGHTEOUSNESS FROM GOD)

^{2:17}Indeed you are called a Jew, and rest on the law, and make your boast in God, ¹⁸and know His will, and approve the things that are excellent, being instructed out of the law, ¹⁹and are confident that you yourself are a guide to the blind, a light to those who are in darkness, ²⁰an instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, having the form of knowledge and truth in the law. ²¹You, therefore, who teach another, do you not teach yourself? You who preach that a man should not steal, do you steal? ²²You who say, 'Do not commit adultery,' do you commit adultery? You who abhor idols, do you rob temples? ²³You who make your boast in the law, do you dishonor God through breaking the law? ²⁴For 'the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles because of you,' as it is written."
(Romans 2:17-24^{NKJV})

INTRODUCTION

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. BOASTING IN FLESHLY DISTINCTIONS (2:17a)
- II. CONFIDENCE IN THE FLESH (2:17b-18)
- III. THINKING THAT IS TOO HIGH (2:19a)
- IV. FORM AND REALITY (2:19b-20)
- V. SCRIBES AND PHARISEES AGAIN (2:21-22)
- VI. BOASTING IN THE LAW (2:23)
- VII. THE NAME OF GOD BLASPHEMED BECAUSE OF THOSE WEARING HIS NAME (2:24)

The flesh possesses an inherent tendency to overestimate natural capacities. Although God has spoken at length concerning the fall of man and his need for justification, men continue to think they can measure up to God's requirements if only they have enough information. This is not the truth, and the Spirit is effectively confirming that in this text. He has shown the universal and consistent decline of humanity when left to their own resources. The Gentiles and Jews stand together in this assessment. Neither God nor Satan forced humanity to decline. At the very seat of their being, where the will resides, they chose what God had condemned.

Nature itself shouted to them of God's "eternal power and Godhead." Their own conscience cried out in objection. Still, whenever men were delivered over to their own wills, they plummeted downward. There were not exceptions.

All of this is most unpleasant to the flesh. It does not want to hear of its own deficiency and corruption. Nevertheless, God does not spare bringing these things to our attention. If we are going to seek "first" God's righteousness (Matt 6:33), we must first be persuaded that we have none of our own. With powerful words, the Spirit is confirming this is the case. In our own selves, we are unrighteous. In fact, the very best part of us (our righteousnesses) are filthy rags before God, to be disdained and discarded with haste (Isa 64:6).

Now the Lord will show further evidence of the deep corruption of mankind. He will focus upon the people who received more than any other society, the Jews. Although unparalleled advantages were given to them, they still did not rise from the moral pit into which sin had cast humanity. They had more information than anyone else. They were blessed above all others. They were given every possible benefit apart from regeneration, and yet sin dominated them, and did so ruthlessly.

Because of the strength of this argument, I am compelled to restate the advantage they received. It is staggering to consider. If external favor is sufficient to induce righteousness, the Jews would certainly have been righteous.

They were given God's own words. "What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God" (Rom 3:1-2). Advantage and advance, however, are not the same. If receiving the Word of God is of itself sufficient to correct human conduct, then a moral change should have been evident in Israel. But it was not! Even with such a marvelous advantage, flesh remained unchanged.

Now the Spirit will confirm it is not possible to obtain Divine acceptance by means of conferring blessings upon the flesh. It is not possible to have more fleshly distinction than Israel, and yet it was not adequate to make them righteous.

BOASTING IN FLESHLY DISTINCTION

2:17a Indeed you are called a Jew . . . "In all of the world, and throughout all history, there is only one nation that has achieved formal acceptance by God. That is the Jewish nation. This does not set well with the nationalist, but it perfectly accords with the Scriptures. Hear the Word of the Lord.

"For you are a holy people to the LORD your God, and the LORD has chosen you to be a people for Himself, a special treasure above all the peoples who are on the face of the earth" (Deut 14:2). "For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth. The LORD did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people: But because the LORD loved you, and because he would keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt" (Deut 7:6-8). These are only representative of a number of similar Divine affirmations (Deut 26:18-19; 28:9-10; Ex 19:5-6).

PAUL'S PERSONAL AFFIRMATION

To confirm this distinction is absolutely unique, Paul cites the fleshly advantages he had. They ALL pertained to his identity with Israel. "Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more: Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee; Concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless" (Phil 3:4-6).

peoples were classified as "Gentiles," or "the nations." They had no overt distinction before God. Only the Jew possessed that.

With great power, the Spirit will show that no name, national identity, or mere profession will gain the approval of God. If the Jews, favored above all fleshly people, needed a righteousness from God, there can be no question about every one else requiring it.

CALLED A JEW

The word "Jew" is used thirty-two times in Scripture. It is first used in the book of Esther, where it occurs no less than eight times. All of them refer to Mordecai, carried away by Nebuchadnezzar in the Babylonian captivity. Jesus is called "a Jew" (John 4:9), as well as Peter (Acts 10:28), Aquila (Acts 18:2), Apollos (Acts 18:24), and Paul (Acts 22:3). This section of Romans has affirmed the Gospel is God's power unto salvation "to the Jew first" (1:16). Eternal reward and punishment will also be "to the Jew first" (2:9-10).

The word "Jews" occurs forty-five times, also being mentioned first in the book of Esther. The mother of Timothy is called a "Jewess" (Acts 16:1), as well as Drusilla, the wife of Felix the Governor (Acts 24:24). I only mention this to point out the recognition and use of this term by the Holy Spirit.

The only reason for the distinction of this people is God's choice and blessing of them. Surely, if

All fleshly glorying is wrong. However, if it were allowed, it could only be based upon fleshly distinctions created and recognized by God Himself. These belonged exclusively to the Jews.

Notice, there is not a solitary reference to anything unrelated to "Jewry." There is no reference to any Grecian learning from Tarsus (if he had even participated in such). No earthly credentials were cited, whether academic supremacy or oratorical skills. All fleshly glorying is wrong. However, if it were allowed, it could only be based upon fleshly distinctions created and recognized by God Himself. These belonged exclusively to the Jews.

THE POINT TO BE PROVED

The Spirit is stripping from humanity all self-confidence, showing that all men need a righteousness from God. He will particularly focus upon the Jews, for they alone had an outward basis which appeared to justify boasting. All other fleshly distinction can bring Divine acceptance, the Jews will qualify.

God's exclusive dealings were with them. "Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen" (Rom 9:4-5).

Adoption. God made them His own people—"adoption." Above all other peoples, they belonged to Him Ex 19:5; Deut 7:6; 10:15; 26:19). He focused His attention upon them, even populating the world with them in mind (Deut 32:8). They belonged exclusively to Him.

Glory. The Lord revealed Himself to them, showing them facets of His Person that were not vouchsafed to any other people—"glory." They saw more of the Lord than any other people. His glory led them, fed them, and protected them. When He spoke, He spoke to them. When He revealed Himself, He did so to them.

Covenants. Almighty God made agreements only with them. He made certain promises to them, showing His commitment to them—"covenants." He told them if they would obey Him, they would receive unprecedented blessings. Perhaps you have not thought recently of the magnitude of some of those promises.

- ▶ No male or female would be barren among them or their cattle—Deut 7:14.
- ▶ God would bless their water and their bread—Ex 23:25a.
- ▶ He would take sickness away from them—Ex 23:25b.
- ▶ He would make all of their enemies turn from them—Ex 23:27.
- ▶ He would drive all of the enemies from their land in one year, lest the beasts of the field multiply against them—Ex 23:29.
- ▶ He would bless them in the city and in the field—Deut 28:3.
- ▶ God would bless the offspring of the people, land, cattle, and sheep—Deut 28:4.

- ▶ Their baskets and kneading bowls would be blessed with an abundance of food—Deut 28:5.
- ▶ They would be blessed when they came in, and blessed when they went out—Deut 28:6.
- ▶ God would cause their enemies to be smitten before them, and run seven different ways—Deut 28:7.
- ▶ He would command a blessing upon their storehouses—Deut 28:8a.
- ▶ Everything they put their hand to would prosper—Deut 28:8b.
- ▶ They would be plenteous in goods, offspring, cattle, and crops—Deut 28:11.
- ▶ The heavens would give rain to them at the proper time—Deut 28:12a.
- ▶ They would lend to many nations, and never borrow—Deut 28:12b.
- ▶ God would make them the head, and not the tail—Deut 28:13.

were given directions on how to approach God. No other nation had a tabernacle, or a God-honored priesthood. No other sacrifices were acceptable, and God's glory filled no other dwelling devoted to Divine service. It all belonged to them. "The service" refers to the activities related to the tabernacle, and later the Temple (Ex 27:19; 30:16; 39:40; Heb 9:6,9). It belonged exclusively to the Jews.

The promises. The promises of a Savior and a new and effective covenant were given to the Jews (Lk 1:54,55,69-74; Acts 2:39; 3:25-26; 13:32-33). No other people received promises of either a Savior or a new covenant. It is said of the Gentiles, they were "strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world" (Eph 2:12).

The fathers. This term refers to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—the progenitors of the Jewish people. It also included the faithful leaders of that unique nation (Acts 3:22; 13:32; Rom 11:28; 15:8; Heb 1:1). There were no Gentile priests, prophets, or kings among the people of Israel. When it came to God-blessed progenitors, they all belonged to Israel.

There were no Gentile priests, prophets, or kings among the people of Israel. When it came to God-blessed progenitors, they all belonged to Israel.

These are only a sampling of the covenants God made with Israel. If Divine commitments alone can make men better, these surely would have been effective.

The Law. The giving of the Law was an historical epoch. In this revelation, God communicated a moral code of remarkable precision. Sin was defined, and the Sovereignty of God revealed. If Divine tutelage in the matter of right and wrong is sufficient to spark a change in humanity, this certainly would do it. Even the giving of the Law was most marvelous. They received it "by the direction of angels"^{NKJV} (Acts 7:53). Galatians 3:19 reminds us "it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator." The Ten Commandments, the "words of the covenant" (Ex 34:28) were written by the very finger of God (Ex 31:18). No one else was so favored.

The Service. The worship of God belonged exclusively to them. They alone

Jesus came from their lineage. Even the Lord Jesus, according to the flesh, came from Jewish ancestry (Rom 1:3). The promised "Son," whose name would be called Immanuel, was promised to them (Isa 7:14; 9:6-7). The lineage of the Lord Jesus, according to the flesh, is strictly through Jewish ancestry. Although Luke does trace Christ's lineage back to Adam, it is through the ancestors of the Jewish race.

GROUND FOR BOASTING?

People boast of being an American, but what is that to compare with being a Jew! Above being a Roman citizen (Acts 22:25-29), Paul was a Jew. Our text will affirm, however, that this was no ground for boasting before God. The mouths of all who are not righteous before God are, by that very condition, stopped by God. It makes no difference what they have received, or how unique they have been according to the flesh. The flesh, even when blessed by God, cannot produce acceptable goodness.

We will see this is a most relevant facet of the truth. Those in Christ “have no confidence in the flesh” (Phil 3:3). God will allow “no flesh to glory in His sight”

(1 Cor 1:29). You may be sure, if Jewish flesh cannot glory, no flesh can. They own the only fleshly distinction before God.

CONFIDENCE IN THE FLESH

“2:17b . . . and rest on the law, and make your boast in God,¹⁸ and know His will, and approve the things that are excellent, being instructed out of the law . . . ” Here is an extensive delineation of “confidence in the flesh”—or glorying in external, or apparent advantage. This is particularly reprehensible since the new creation has “no confidence in the flesh” (Phil 3:3), for in the flesh “dwells no good thing” (Rom 7:18). It “profits nothing” (John 6:63), even when given every possible advantage.

REST ON THE LAW

This does not speak of a love for God’s law, as expressed in Psalm 119:97. “O how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day.” Those who were upbraided were merely boasting in their possession of the Law, not the keeping of it. It was as though they had received a valuable and rare relic, but found no real utility for it. Their reliance upon the law was, as someone has said, “blind and mechanical.”^{Robertson} The possession of the Law, as well as their academic understanding of it, was thought to have made them superior. Jesus put it this way to the Pharisees. “Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me” (John 5:39).

By resting, or relying, upon the Law, they trusted in what God had given rather than in God Himself. The fact that He gave them the Law was taken as a sign of Divine approval. Because of the blindness of their heart, they were unaware that the Law was given “that every mouth might be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God” (Rom 3:19).

MAKE YOUR BOAST IN GOD

The Living God was viewed more as a national treasure than as the Sovereign God of heaven. He belonged, as it were, to them. Thus they failed to see the situation correctly. They belonged to the Lord, He did not belong to them, as though He was their private possession.

In this case, although the Jew was living in condemnation, he glorified in

Of course, Jewry is the only religious institution God has ever sanctioned—and that was only until the entrance of the Savior into the world. If such boasting is not allowed for the Jew, you may be sure it is soundly condemned in institutions that are purely of human origin.

God being, as he thought, the God of the Jews. Later the Spirit will point out the absurdity of such an assumption. “Is He the God of the Jews only? is He not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also” (3:29).

To “boast in God” is to view Him as exclusively identified with an institution—in this case, the Jews. Of course, Jewry is the only religious institution God has ever sanctioned—and that was only until the entrance of the Savior into the world. If such boasting is not allowed for the Jew, you may be sure it is soundly condemned in institutions that are purely of human origin.

KNOW HIS WILL

Knowing the will of God is ordinarily commendable, and is the objective for every child of God (Rom 12:10). But that is not the case here. This is a prideful, or boastful, knowledge. It is not the spiritual knowledge of the will of God (Col.1:9-10). Here the knowledge of the Law is vainly placed above the doing of it. The law did not pronounce the blessing upon those who “KNEW” the Law, but those who DID it (Gal 3:12). The propensity of the Jews to glory more in knowing that in doing is epitomized in the Pharisees. Once, when they sent officers to arrest Jesus, the men returned without Him. The Scripture records the dialog between the officers and the Pharisees. Here is how they reasoned. “Then the officers came to the chief priests and Pharisees, who said to them, ‘Why have you not brought Him?’ The officers answered, ‘No man ever spoke like this Man!’ Then the Pharisees answered them, ‘Are you also deceived? Have any of the rulers or the Pharisees believed in Him. But this crowd that does not know the law is accursed.”

The Law did not say the person who “does not know the law is cursed.” Rather, it declared “Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them” (Gal 3:12; Deut 27:26). Being an expert in what God requires does commend the individual to God. That is not sufficient ground for boasting.

To view it another way, knowing all of the answers cannot make a person righteous.

APPROVE THINGS THAT ARE EXCELLENT

Again, approving things that are excellent is the objective for every true believer. As it is written, “And this I pray,

Even with all of the advantages given to them by God, the Jews still needed a righteousness from Him, by Given O. Blakely that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment; That ye may approve things that are excellent" (Phil 1:9-10). However, that is not the condition described in this text. This is a self-confidence produced by the flesh. It approaches the "approval" in question from a purely academic viewpoint.

This type of approval was seen in the Pharisees, who sat in judgment upon the conduct of even Jesus and His disciples. Thinking themselves experts in the Law, they bound their own perception of the Law upon others. That perception, however, was a human tradition, and not the real meaning of the Law. Matthew provides us a vivid example of this kind of reasoning. "Then came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying, why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread. But he answered and said unto them, Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition?" (Matt 15:1-3).

The scribes and Pharisees were not the last people to bind their own tradition upon others, imagining themselves capable of "approving things that are excellent."

INSTRUCTED OUT OF THE LAW

According to Divine mandate, the Jews were taught out of the Law from early childhood. As it is written, "You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, when you walk by the way, when you lie down, and when you rise up" (Deut 6:7).

This was good knowledge, and not to be despised. However, it did not make the individual righteous, regardless of the extent of the knowledge gained. At the very best, the Law, together with the Prophets, were able to make the submitted one "wise unto salvation" (2 Tim 3:15), but it could not bring the experience of salvation. That comes through Christ alone. As it is written, "For it is the God who commanded light to shine out of darkness, who has shone in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ" (2 Cor 4:6). That is quite different from glorying that one has been "instructed out of the Law." Such is vain boasting that places no value on Christ.

There is a significant point made in this text. Possessing the word, even having a sense of its meaning, is not sufficient to make a person righteous. Even if the individual is able to explain the circumstances under which Scripture was written, giving the historical context and profound language significations, it has no affect whatsoever on making the person righteous before God. A church, for example, that possesses the truth is not necessarily one that is commended by it. Some may boast of being "the New Testament church," imagining that their pattern and manners commend them hope of Divine acceptance. That only comes through faith in Christ.

The Church at Ephesus

Recalling the church at Ephesus will suffice to confirm what we have said. Much like the Jews of old, they were experts in evaluating the conduct of others. They were even commended for their condemnation of gross doctrinal corruption. However, the single flaw they had was sufficient to cause their rejection if they did not repent. They had neglected Jesus Christ, who is made our righteousness. Here is the record. "To the angel of the church of Ephesus write, These things says He who holds the seven stars in His right hand, who walks in the midst of the seven golden lampstands: I know your works, your labor, your Possessing the word, even having a sense of its meaning, is not sufficient to make a person righteous. Even if the individual is able to explain the circumstances under which Scripture was written, giving the historical context and profound language significations, it has no affect whatsoever on making the person righteous before God.

before God. That is much like boasting in being a Jew, having the Scriptures, and being able to approve things that are excellent.

The purpose of redemption in Christ Jesus is not to produce a flawless organization. It is not to build a spiritual tower of Babel, the result of a unified human initiative. God is not seeking to restore the church at Jerusalem, or the commendable one at Philippi. His objective is not to fill every church with certain spiritual gifts. It is not even to assist men in building and maintaining a godly nation. All of those things may have a place, but it is certainly subordinate to the purpose of God.

The Divine initiative has always involved paving the way for the righteousness of God to be given to men. Without that righteousness, there is no patience, and that you cannot bear those who are evil. And you have tested those who say they are apostles and are not, and have found them liars; and you have persevered and have patience, and have labored for My name's sake and have not become weary. Nevertheless I have this against you, that you have left your first love. Remember therefore from where you have fallen; repent and do the first works, or else I will come to you quickly and remove your lampstand from its place; unless you repent" (Rev 2:1-5).

It should be evident that this type of conduct did not end with Ephesus. Many a person and church are living in practical alienation from God. Their love has cooled and their vision has dimmed. They may boast in their intellectual grasp of Scripture, and may point us to the precision of their religious activities. All of that does not make them righteous.

THINKING THAT IS TOO HIGH

^{19a} . . . and are confident that you yourself are a guide to the blind, a light to those who are in darkness, ²⁰an instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes . . . ” Here the Jews are chided for thinking more highly of themselves than they ought to think. They did, indeed, gain Divine advantage in receiving the Law (Rom 3:1). They were a chosen people, and were favored above all other nations on the face of the earth. But none of that was owing to their own doing. Divine initiative brought it all.

The confidence of reference comes from being wise in ones own eyes (Prov 26:12). God’s view of such confidence is declared by the prophet Isaiah. “Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight!” (Isa 5:21). This is not a confidence that comes from a sense of Divine acceptance or the experience of the grace of God. It is the result of thinking exposure to the truth, and an academic understanding of it, qualifies the individual to instruct others in the ways of the Lord. Let it be clear, this is emphatically not the case.

THE EXAMPLE OF NICODEMUS

Nicodemus is a case in point. While there is no evidence that he was a judgmental man, or that he was unduly harsh with others, the Lord pointed out his fundamental deficiency in spiritual matters. With a tone of authority Nicodemus said, “Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.” Quickly, Jesus announced that a new birth was necessary before one could “see” or “enter” into the Kingdom of God. After a brief elaboration, Nicodemus, with all of his acquaintance with the Law, still did not understand. He replied, “How can these things be?” It was then that our Lord exposed the depravity of a merely human understanding of the Law. “Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness. If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?” (John 3:1-12). As I understand it,

As valuable as erudition is, it is not the heart of kingdom-understanding. A disciplined and logical mind, and a thorough acquaintance with the text of Scripture are not to be despised. However, neither are they to be elevated as though they were sufficient in themselves. They have no impact at all upon human character.

Nicodemus was not being obstinate, but had not yet seen the deficiency of nature in the matter of comprehending the things of God.

SPIRITUAL UNDERSTANDING

As valuable as erudition is, it is not the heart of kingdom-understanding. A disciplined and logical mind, and a thorough acquaintance with the text of Scripture are not to be despised. However, neither are they to be elevated as though they were sufficient in themselves. They have no impact at all upon human character. They cannot change the affection or renew the heart. Neither, indeed, can they bring righteousness to the person possessing them. That is the point of our text.

There is a higher form of understanding. It does not promote pride, or “puff up” those who have it, as earthly knowledge does (1 Cor 8:1). This is “spiritual understanding,” and it comes from God. It is the RESULT of true righteousness, and not the cause of it. Paul prayed for believers to have this kind of understanding. “For this reason we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to ask that you may be filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; that you may walk worthy of the Lord, fully pleasing Him, being fruitful in every good work and increasing in the knowledge of God” (Col 1:9-10).

THE DESCRIBED PLIGHT

Those addressed in our text considered others “blind,” those who were “in darkness,,” “foolish,” and “babes.” That assessment, however, was not determined by the attainment of the people, but by comparing them with themselves. They were judged to be such simply because they were not Jews. They had not received the Law, and did not have an understanding of it. The haughty Jews, on the other hand, considered themselves “guides,” “light,” “instructors,” and “teachers.” This was not because they were any better in the eyes of the Lord. It was not because their hearts were more pure, or because they were righteous in the eyes of the Lord. It was solely upon the basis of external, or fleshly, advantage.

As real as that advantage was, however, it had not changed their character, cleansed their hearts, or made them pure in the eyes of the Lord. Their flesh was more cultured, it is true. However, it was still flesh, for “that which is born of flesh is flesh,” and can be nothing else. They too needed a righteousness from God. That necessity disqualified them from sitting in judgment upon others.

Even with all of the advantages given to them by God, the Jews still needed a righteousness from Him, by Given O. Blakely righteousness from God. That does not allow for immorality, but provides strength to kill it at its root—in the heart. To put it another way, righteousness from God brings with it a hatred for sin. That is because we become “partakers of the Divine nature,” which is repulsed by all forms of sin, whether they are expressed externally or not.

INSTITUTIONAL DEFICIENCY

In our time and place, institutionalism has been equated with life in Christ Jesus. The institution trains and authorizes those who will speak for the Lord. The credentials conferred upon such people have nothing whatsoever to do with being born again, possessing the righteousness of God, or being taught by God. They are precisely the same kind of credentials of which the Jews boasted—except they are not as credible as theirs. The Jews DID receive the law from God, and were singularly blessed by Him above all people. No nation has ever enjoyed such a favored status—or any status at all, for that matter.

In my judgment, those who exalt the institution owe us an explanation. What is it that excludes them from the rebuke of this very text? Have they been excluded in the matter of requiring a righteousness from God? If not, how is it that they speak so little of it, if, indeed, they ever do? This passage is certainly relevant to our day. It has all the freshness and power it did to the Romans. It is the peculiar prerogative of God’s word to always be relevant.

FORM AND REALITY

^{19b} . . . having the form of knowledge and truth in the law. ²⁰ An instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, which hast the form of knowledge and of the truth in the law. Here the Spirit develops a critical distinction between empty profession and spiritual possession.

“FORM”

Something that has “form” is made accessible to the human mind. “Form” is the orderly presentation of reality. It is not the reality itself, but so clothes the reality that it becomes useful. Thus, until the earth took form, no real purpose was served by it, and the glory of God could not be seen in it. “And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep” (Gen 1:2; Jer 4:23). Until, however, the earth took form, it was not a suitable arena for the working of salvation in its midst.

Baptism

In the sixth chapter of this book, baptism is referred to as “that form of doctrine to which you were delivered” (6:17). It is a depiction of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. Yet, it is not the reality of those things. Unless there is a real participation in them, neither obedience nor baptism has really occurred.

The Humility of Christ

When Jesus entered into the world,

He “took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men” (Phil 2:7). But the matter extended to more than mere form. He fulfilled the form to the most exacting degree. “He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross” (Phil 2:8), and “was tempted in all points like as we are” (Heb 4:15).

Therefore, in our text, the ultimate possession is not merely the “form of knowledge and of the truth.” That is an advantage, but not the ultimate advantage. The Jews, however, rested in their possession of the “oracles of God,” even though in their hearts they were at parts: and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom” (Psa 51:6). The truth must be part of the individual before it brings eternal advantage. It cannot simply be housed in the memory, or embraced as a formal creed.

One aspect of the New Covenant that is especially precious pertains to this very matter. In His promise of the New Covenant, God said, “I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts” (Jer 31:33). Hebrews 8:10 reads, “I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts.” This refers to a basic change in the nature of man. The Law of God is thus harmonious with the renewed human spirit. The individual finds it to be his preference, and continual subject of meditation (Psa 1:2).

THE LAW, NOT AN END OF ITSELF

The Law was not an end of itself. That is, it was not enough to simply have received it. To boast, therefore, in the knowledge of it was unwarranted. It was possible to be an expert in the sayings of the Law, and yet be totally lacking in righteousness before God. It was not intended to produce confidence in men. Rather, it was a schoolmaster, or tutor, “to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith” (Gal 3:24). Duly heeded, the Law will convince men of their need for a Savior, constraining them to call upon the name of the Lord.

The truth must be part of the individual before it brings eternal advantage. It cannot simply be housed in the memory, or embraced as a formal creed variance with them. The shell of the truth is not enough. A mere academic, or theoretical knowledge is not sufficient to save the soul.

Truth within

God desires truth to be found in the inner recesses of man. As it is written, “Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward

You see, then, how serious a condition is being described by the Spirit. Rather than bringing the Jews to an acute awareness of their need for a Savior, they imagined that they were exalted above all others by the mere possession of the Law. Thus they sat in judgment upon others, while failing to seek after a righteousness from God.

Perhaps you have heard someone boast of knowing what the Scripture means through contextual, language, or historical considerations. Some have even said it is not possible to understand the Scriptures unless one has a working knowledge of the Greek and Hebrew. It all have no spiritual power. It would be a time of falling away and strong delusion. The prophecy is relevant to this text. In Romans, the Jews are being upbraided for their feelings of superiority, even though they stood in need of a righteousness from God just like the Gentiles. The prophecy of reference confirms that precisely the same attitude became prevalent in the Gentile church.

Ultimately, true knowledge comes from acquaintance with God, through Christ, and by the Spirit. Although some may flinch at such a declaration, they cannot overthrow it. There is not a single aspect of salvation that can be experienced independently of fellowship with the Father and the Son.

“But know this, that in the last days perilous times will come: for men will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, unloving, unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, despisers of good, traitors, headstrong, haughty, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying its power. And from such people turn away!”^{NKJV} (2 Tim 3:1-5).

Remember, the point of this passage is to show that all men need the righteousness revealed in the Gospel of Christ. Even those with expert knowledge of the Law need this righteousness. Their knowledge does not make them righteous.

may sound quite innocent, but it is not. It comes under the very subject of our text.

Ultimately, true knowledge comes from acquaintance with God, through Christ, and by the Spirit. Although some may flinch at such a declaration, they cannot overthrow it. There is not a single aspect of salvation that can be experienced independently of fellowship with the Father and the Son. Just as there is no valid work without faith, there is no spiritually valid knowledge that is developed solely by man. Our text is a sound condemnation of those who imagine such a knowledge does exist.

The Kingdom of God is so revealed that the form, or external identity, can be maintained, while lacking its inner power. The “power” is found in the righteousness of God which comes by faith. Where that righteousness is not found, there can be no spiritual power. Where it is found, confidence in the flesh is destroyed, for God has determined “That no flesh should glory in his presence” (1 Cor 1:29).

KNOWLEDGE PUFFS UP

Confirming that fleshly knowledge (as compared with “spiritual understanding”), puffs up the flesh, behold how these people viewed those they instructed. They imagined themselves to be instructors “of the foolish,” and “teachers of babes.” And what was the basis of this observation? Was it spiritual immaturity, or a lack of acquaintance with God through Christ? Indeed not. Those so judged had simply not measured up to the donnish

Even those with every possible external advantage need a righteousness from God. That should be apparent from the Gospel itself.

SCRIBES AND PHARISEES AGAIN

“²¹You, therefore, who teach another, do you not teach yourself? You who preach that a man should not steal, do you steal? ²²You who say, ‘Do not commit adultery,’ do you commit adultery? You who abhor idols, do you rob temples?”

subdue the flesh, for that can only be done through the Spirit. As it is written, “if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live” (Rom 8:13). In the energy of the flesh, men may change the appearance of the sin, but they cannot change its nature.

with Christ from the basic principles of the world, why, as though living in the world, do you subject yourselves to regulations; ‘Do not touch, do not taste, do not handle,’ which all concern things which perish with the using; according to the commandments and doctrines of men? These things indeed have an appearance of wisdom in self-imposed religion, false humility, and neglect of the body, but are of no value against the indulgence of the flesh” (Col 2:20-23). Suffice it to say, an appearance of wisdom is not sufficient.

THE NECESSITY OF A RIGHTEOUSNESS FROM GOD

Where the righteousness of God is not possessed, religious men are shut up to inconsistency. They will not be able to

The Impotence of Mere Discipline

In addressing this very matter, the Scriptures speak of the worthlessness of religious discipline, or procedures that rely on regimen. “Therefore, if you died

Even with all of the advantages given to them by God, the Jews still needed a righteousness from Him, by Given O. Blakely

The “basic principles of the world” are carnal means of controlling the appetites of the flesh. At the highest end, they are represented in the Law and its attending ordinances. At the lowest end they are regimens and procedures developed by men to restrain an outbreak of wrong doing. They are also employed to culture the person from a mere external point of view.

Nearly all contemporary teaching on morality falls into this category—“Basic principles,” or rudiments, “of the world.” They are not spiritual in nature, nor do they produce spiritual results. They do have an appearance of wisdom. That is why those who hawk them to the spiritually ignorant are so successful in convincing men of their worth. But it is a “self-imposed religion,” void of any Divine influence. God is not in it, nor is salvation central to it. It is an attempt to regulate the flesh without God or Christ. The rules imposed upon men by this approach “lack any value in restraining sensual indulgence.”^{NIV} It cannot take away the desire to sin, which is the problem with fallen man.

difficulty—uncleanness within. Sin has defiled man at the very center of his nature. That is precisely why he needs a righteousness from God.

Referring to this condition, Jesus declared this about man’s righteousness. “For I say to you, that unless your righteousness exceeds the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, you will by no means enter the kingdom of heaven”^{NKJV} (Matt 5:20). How is it that our righteousness could “exceed” that of the Pharisees? It certainly could not come by mere human discipline, for they were masters at that. Jesus said they made their external lives “clean”—something of God, that you may keep your tradition” (Mark 7:6-9).

Ponder the gravity of the matter we are considering. Here was an approach to God that left people unchanged within—full of hypocrisy and iniquity. It left their hearts far from God, moved them to prefer the traditions of men, and caused them reject the commandment of God. Is it possible for a condition to be more serious?

I have taken the time to view the scribes and Pharisees because it is directly related to the attitude now condemned. This frame of mind is altogether too common in our day, and needs to be exposed for what it is. It may produce “nice” people, and aid in developing outward culture. However, it is not accepted by God. His requirement is that man possess the righteousness given by Him, and revealed in the Gospel.

Nearly all contemporary teaching on morality falls into this category—“Basic principles,” or rudiments, “of the world.” They are not spiritual in nature, nor do they produce spiritual results. They do have an appearance of wisdom.

DO YOU NOT TEACH YOURSELF?

“You, therefore, who teach another, do you not teach yourself?”^{NKJV} Formalistic and lifeless religion has the trait of making people judgmental of those who do the very things found in themselves. Speaking to teachers, the Spirit says, “The husbandman that laboreth must be first partaker of the fruits” (2 Tim 2:6). In this case, the teacher must first ingest the word he declares. That is another way of saying “teach yourself.”

In our day we have seen several examples of Christian teachers who have revealed their own abysmal ignorance of living unto God. Some of them fell into the very transgressions they vehemently denounced. Why do such things occur? Because apart from the righteousness of God, no real change takes place within the individual. And even if the righteousness was once obtained by faith, if it is not maintained by faith, the individual will revert back to inward uncleanness.

The Scriptures refer to this condition as “always learning and never able to

SCRIBES AND PHARISEES

This approach to controlling eruptions of immorality was employed by the scribes and Pharisees. By its very nature, this course of action dealt only with the outward man. Thus Jesus severely indicted them. “Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess. thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men’s bones, and of all uncleanness. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity” (Matt 23:25-28).

You see how their self-imposed rules did not correct the seat of man’s relatively few professed believers have managed to do. However, that was not enough, for it did not address the matter of inward corruption.

The seriousness of this offense is worthy of special notation. In dealing only with outward conduct and appearance, the Pharisees had embraced a religion that honored God with the mouth, yet maintained a distance from Him in the heart. In so doing their worship became vain, as they laid aside the commandment of God. Jesus said it this way. “Well did Isaiah prophesy of you hypocrites, as it is written: ‘This people honors Me with their lips, But their heart is far from Me. And in vain they worship Me, Teaching as doctrines the commandments of men.’ For laying aside the commandment of God, you hold the tradition of men; the washing of pitchers and cups, and many other such things you do. He said to them, ‘All too well you reject the commandment come to the knowledge of the truth” (2 Tim 3:7). It is a most serious circumstance. The Spirit will now develop this more fully, showing that sin remains dominant wherever the righteousness of God is not found. He will show that the spirit of the Law went far beyond mere appearance. Sin CANNOT be subdued by Law, nor can righteousness be attained by disciplines invented by men.

DO YOU STEAL?

“You who preach that a man should not steal, do you steal?” It appears there is an allusion to the fiftieth Psalm. “But to the wicked God says: ‘What right have you to declare My statutes, Or take My covenant in your mouth, seeing you hate instruction and cast My words behind you? When you saw a thief, you consented with him’”^{2NKJV}(50:16-18). Thus, the person who condones the thief partakes in his sin. But there is more to this than that.

The command of God forbids ALL stealing, or theft. Some stealing takes place by stealth, where unlawful gain is realized by deception. Thus, “extortion” is soundly condemned, with the promise those who practice it will be excluded from the kingdom of God (1 Cor 6:10). The Pharisees practiced this form of stealing. Of them, Jesus said, “Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows’ houses” (Matt 23:14). It might astound you to know how much of this sort of thing goes on in the Christian community.

Peter warned of teachers who were actually thieves, exploiting people for personal advantage. “By covetousness they will exploit you with deceptive words” (2 Pet 2:3). Jude said of them, “For they have gone in the way of Cain, have run greedily in the error of Balaam for profit” (Jude 11).

Souls of Men

The Scriptures also speak of thieves who barter with the souls of men. They actually traffic in people, enslaving them to their foolish philosophies. Speaking of Babylon the great, the false church perpetrated by Satan, the Spirit says the following. “And the merchants of the earth will weep and mourn over her, for no one buys their merchandise anymore: merchandise of gold and silver, precious stones and pearls, fine linen and purple, silk and scarlet, every kind of citron wood, every kind of object of ivory, every kind of object of most precious wood, bronze, iron, and marble; and cinnamon and incense, fragrant oil and frankincense, wine and oil, fine flour and wheat, cattle and sheep, horses and chariots, AND BODIES AND SOULS OF MEN” (Rev 18:11-13).

Here two forms of slavery are

described: bodily and spiritual. We are familiar with the former, when men were made slaves to other men. Many are not as familiar with the latter, when the souls of men are shackled to the traditions and manners of men.

The souls of men belong to God, and God alone. Thus it is written, “All souls are mind” (Ezek 18:4). God alone is the “Father of spirits” (Heb 12:9). To barter in the institutional arena with the souls of men is unspeakably wicked. You should know that religious men have made great names for themselves and fattened their coffers at the expense of “the souls of men.” They were thieves!

Again, the Pharisees surface as an example of this kind of activity. “Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves” (Matt 23:15). The word of God refers to such individuals as “menstealers,” or “kidnappers” (1 Tim 1:10). There is far more of this kind of activity in the religious world than one might think.

Robbing God

There is another form of stealing that is particularly reprehensible. It is stealing from God—robbing Him of what belongs to Him. Through Malachi, God upbraided the children of Israel for this very sin. “Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation” (Mal 3:8). Some will object that tithing has nothing whatsoever to do with us. But that is a human assessment, not a Divine one. Anyone imagining that robbing God no longer occurs is not thinking properly.

The point of our text is the person’s religion actually permitted, and even encouraged, these things. That is how corrupt man is by nature. If he does not have a righteousness from God, he will actually seek to justify his wickedness in his religion. This is done while preaching the Law, as though it did not apply to him.

DO YOU COMMIT ADULTERY?

“You who say, ‘Do not commit adultery,’ do you commit adultery?”^{2NKJV} It is enough to mention that a high degree of immorality exists among those who declare the Word of God. Explanations have been offered for this, but none of them are acceptable. The reason for lapses into immorality among preachers and teachers is that they have NOT obtained a righteousness from God. Thus, seeking to establish their own righteousness, they fell prey to the sin that was within their own members.

Spiritual Adultery

There is another form of adultery that is altogether too common in the churches. It is friendship with the world—obtaining worldly manners, and joining in affinity with it. James soundly condemns this in his Epistle. “Where do wars and fights come from among you? Do they not come from your desires for pleasure that war in your members? You lust and do not have. You murder and covet and cannot obtain. You fight and war. Yet you do not have because you do not ask. You ask and do not receive, because you ask amiss, that you may spend it on your pleasures. Adulterers and adulteresses! Do you not know that friendship with the world is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God” (James 4:1-4).

Here is a most significant word, appropriate for our day. Professed believers were experiencing wars and fights among themselves. They had such strong desires for pleasure, that they caused trouble among the saints to satisfy them. Rather than denying worldly lusts, they cultured them, even at the expense of their own brethren. They fought among themselves. Their prayers were futile, for they only sought to satisfy their own quest for pleasure.

If ever there was a vivid picture of the Christian world, this is it. Divisions, wars, and tumults are altogether too common, as people seek their own interests above those of God. The average congregation has also battled through such things, where board meetings and congregational meetings erupted into red-faced arguments.

The Spirit traces these things back to their source. It is the result of friendship with the world! The people have prostituted their affections, giving them to the world instead of to the Lord. James frankly calls such “adulterers and adulteresses.” They have been unfaithful to God, and have thus become His enemy. That is not a suggestion, but is reality!

Lest we miss the point of our text, the Spirit is confirming the need for a righteousness from God. Without this righteousness, even those who preach and teach are powerless to subdue the expressions of the flesh. They may master outward refinement and culture, but their sinful natures will remain alive and well.

DO YOU ROB TEMPLES?

“You who abhor idols, do you rob temples?” The KJV reads, “thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou commit sacrilege?” The word “sacrilege” is a significant one. It comes from a word that means to “remove sacred property, or rob temples.” The idea is that one who professes to hate false religion, still seeks to profit from it.

Seen In Israel

When Israel overthrow heathen nations, they were always commanded to destroy their idols. None of them were to be kept for any reason. The words of the Law were particularly strong on this. “You shall burn the carved images of their gods with fire; you shall not covet the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it

To attempt to place the jewel of redemption in a setting of the world’s wisdom is to rob the temple of idols. It is to defile the temple of God. It is something that nullifies the power of the Gospel and makes the cross of Christ of “none effect.”

for yourselves, lest you be snared by it; for it is an abomination to the LORD your God. Nor shall you bring an abomination into your house, lest you be doomed to destruction like it. You shall utterly detest it and utterly abhor it, for it is an accursed thing”^{NKJV} (Deut 7:25-26). What God had cursed could not be desired or kept by the people of God.

You may remember that Achan brought a curse upon all of Israel for coveting and taking “the accursed thing.” The result of his deed is thus described, “and the anger of the LORD was kindled against the children of Israel” (Josh 7:1). This was a form of sacrilege—defiling the people and things of God by bringing what God has cursed into their presence.

The Perception of Paul

Himself possessing the righteousness of God, Paul was particularly sensitive about this matter. For example, he knew the Lord had rejected the wisdom of this world, declaring it to be foolishness. Thus it is written, “For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain” (1 Cor 3:19-20).

But it is not enough to merely say this. His understanding of this moved Paul to refuse to seek to gain from what God had condemned. That is why he wrote, “For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect” (1 Cor 1:17). And again, “And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified” (1 Cor 2:1-2). And again, “And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man’s wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power: that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God” (1 Cor 2:4-5).

Not A Small Matter

Do not think this is a small matter. To attempt to place the jewel of redemption in a setting of the world’s wisdom is to rob the temple of idols. It is to defile the temple of God. It is something that nullifies the power of the Gospel and makes the cross of Christ of “none effect.” Peter said, “For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ” (2 Pet 1:16).

There is a phenomenal amount of this kind of thing in the Christian world. Whether it is in the area of motivation, organization, presentation, or professed scholarship, the manners of the world are being employed to promote the Gospel and make disciples. It is not acceptable! The realm God has rejected is not a well from which professed believers may draw!

Sacrilegious Offerings

Sacrilege also takes place when defiled and unacceptable offerings are presented to God. Again, Israel provides us with a concrete example of such sacrifices. Their offerings, because of their deficiency, actually incensed the Lord. “And when you offer the blind as a sacrifice, Is it not evil? And when you offer the lame and sick, Is it not evil? Offer it then to your governor! Would he be pleased with you? Would he accept you favorably? Says the LORD of hosts . . . But cursed be the deceiver Who has in his flock a male, And takes a vow, But sacrifices to the Lord what is blemished; For I am a great King, says the LORD of hosts, and My name is to be feared among the nations”^{NKJV} (Mal 1:8,14).

Today, it is exceedingly difficult to find a congregation, or even a person, that is offering their very best to the Lord. Every Lord’s day, people gather to offer to God the dregs of their intellect, emotion, and will. They have expended their energies in worldly pursuits, and now offer God what is left.

In keeping with its marriage with the world, the professed church structures its program to accommodate such pretension.

The average gathering of believers does not require much from them, but is convenient for the flesh. It is a more serious matter than some think.

Profaning the Holy through the temple. He was acutely aware that what had been given to God was not to be used for ordinary purposes. It was sacrilege.

In our day, this frame of mind is Integral to this text is the fact that a lack of the righteousness of God shuts men up to inconsistent religion. The flesh will not allow a person or a group who refuses God’s righteousness to be spiritually consistent.

Jesus soundly rebuked those who defiled God’s temple by driving them out of it. The incident is most arresting. “So they came to Jerusalem. Then Jesus went into the temple and began to drive out those who bought and sold in the temple, and overturned the tables of the money changers and the seats of those who sold doves. And He would not allow anyone to carry wares through the temple. Then He taught, saying to them, Is it not written, ‘My house shall be called a house of prayer for all nations’? But you have made it a ‘den of thieves’” (Matt 11:15-17).

Notice, Jesus did not even allow people to carry wares, or useful equipment, through the temple. That would be like forbidding people to carry their shopping bags or cooking utensils almost unknown. A consciousness of God, together with a commitment to purity, is not at all common. People have been lulled to sleep by counterfeit religion, not aware that their religious offerings actually anger God. They are guilty of sacrilege. Were this single perception to be grasped by the modern church, it would violently interrupt its entire program.

Shut up to Inconsistency

Integral to this text is the fact that a lack of the righteousness of God shuts men up to inconsistent religion. The flesh will not allow a person or a group who refuses God’s righteousness to be spiritually consistent. Flesh is not capable of pleasing God, and those who remain in its power are also incapable of pleasing Him. In fact, they will only anger Him. We must have God’s righteousness.

BOASTING IN THE LAW

“²³You who make your boast in the law, do you dishonor God through breaking the law?” Remember, the Kingdom of God ONLY allows for boasting, or glorying, in the Lord. As it is written, “But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord” (2 Cor 10:17). Salvation is so structured as to exclude all other boasting. “God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: [in order] That no flesh should glory in his presence. But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption: [in order] That, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord” (1 Cor 1:27-31).

Here the nature of the flesh is again confirmed. Although the Jews were given every possible fleshly advantage, yet they gloried in the Law instead of the Lord who gave it. That is the nature of the flesh, in which “no good thing” can be found (Rom 7:18). That simply is what it does.

BOASTING IN THE LAW

The Jews did not boast in the content of the Law, or that it was the Law of God. Rather, they boasted in their possession of it, as though having it made them acceptable with God. Jeremiah said it this way, “How can you say, ‘We are wise, and the law of the LORD is with us’” (Jer 8:8). Jesus said it this way, “Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life” (John 5:40).

The Jews boasted that they had a Law from God, and other nations did not. They had scribes who were expert in the text of Scripture itself. They were familiar with the Law, and could talk about it, even enforcing it upon others.

In a sense, they had made an idol out of the Law, admitting to its value, yet not letting it bring them to conviction and Christ. It is much like the way they viewed the brazen serpent, through which many were healed in the plague of fiery, or poisonous, serpents. When Hezekiah became king, he took the idols out of the land. At that time, we learn how the Israelites had viewed the brazen serpent. “He removed the high places and broke the sacred pillars, cut down the wooden image and broke in pieces the bronze serpent that Moses had made; for until those days the children of Israel burned incense to it, and called it Nehushtan” ^{NKJV} (2 Kings 18:4). When one does not possess the righteousness of God, there is a proneness to this sort of conduct.

For the Jews, sin had so dulled their senses that they made no correlation between a holy Law and holy conduct. They thought it was sufficient to possess the truth without loving and obeying it.

This type of mentality is not as uncommon as some may think. Although it has degenerated from boasting in the Law, or Word of God, the spirit of such boasting is found in sectarianism. It is not unusual to hear people boast of their religious heritage, how they were raised, and the tenets to which they hold. We are not the sons of a religious movement, but of God Almighty. No doctrinal position has sanctified us, and no institution has reconciled us to God. No church father died for us. If any man glory, let him glory in the Lord! No other glorying is allowed.

GOD IS DISHONORED WHEN HIS LAW IS BROKEN

“ . . . through breaking the law dishonorest thou God?” This is not asking if they were dishonoring God. The sense of the text is, “After making your boast in the Law of God, how can you dishonor God by breaking it?” It is an appeal to the human conscience, to awaken it from the slumber induced by pride in appearance, imagining that it gave some sort of eternal advantage.

Having the truth is of no advantage to those who “do not obey the truth” (Rom 2:9). To have a working knowledge of the good message of salvation is of no value to those who “obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ” (2 Thess 1:8). On a more evident level, a people who preach unity, yet do not practice it, are a discredit to God. A group that teaches holiness holds no advantage if they themselves are not holy. Those who preach salvation in a most precise and procedural manner bring

It is not unusual to hear people boast of their religious heritage, how they were raised, and the tenets to which they hold. We are not the sons of a religious movement, but of God Almighty.

no glory to God if they themselves are not in fellowship with Him.

Not only do men need a righteousness from God, they dishonor Him by their disobedience. As evident as this may appear, Satan has been unusually successful in obscuring this to many.

Take, for example, a doctrine that teaches people are spiritually secure, even though they are morally deficient. A host of passages may be cited to confirm this is the case, convincing people that once their name is written in the Lamb’s book of life, it can never be blotted out. Just as the Jews “boasted” in the Law and their national status, these people “boast” in their supposed salvation, and their assumed status as Christians. But God is “dishonored” by their sin, regardless of what they imagine their status to be.

But let us pursue this matter of “dishonor,” for the pretended theologian may imagine it to be of no consequence. The Spirit acknowledges that, in a larger sense, God’s “house” has dishonorable ones within it. Yet, they are not acceptable people, but those through whom God works, like Pharaoh of old.

There are two passages that deal with this Kingdom reality.

Romans 9:21-22

The first is Romans 9:21-22. “Does not the potter have power over the clay, from the same lump to make one vessel for honor and another for dishonor? What if God, wanting to show His wrath and to make His power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath prepared for destruction.” The premier example of this is found in Pharaoh, raised up by God to show His power, and declare His name throughout the whole earth (vs 9:17-20).

There is a technical, yet vital, point being made here. First, those who insist on being disobedient and walking in their own way, are still under the government of God. He will use their wickedness for His own purpose. Ultimately, their self-will does not serve themselves, but God. God will be honored through them, but they themselves will be destroyed. Sin will never bring an advantage to the sinner!

The vessel of dishonor is depicted as objecting to Divine judgment. Hearing that God’s will is served even in the disobedience of the wicked, the recalcitrant replies, “Why does He still find fault? For who has resisted His will?” (9:19). It is as though one like Pharaoh said, “If God has gotten honor for Himself through me, why am I condemned. I could not stop His will, but only became a part of it.” But such a reply is soundly rebuffed by the Lord. “But indeed, O man, who are you to reply against God? Will the thing formed say to him who formed it, ‘hy have you made me like this?’ Does not the potter have power over the clay, from the same lump to make one vessel for honor and another for dishonor?” ^{NKJV} (9:20-21). God did not make Pharaoh unrighteous—he was that way by nature, just as surely as were the Israelites. Both were from “the same lump.” Yet, God orchestrated the affairs of both Pharaoh and Israel to bring glory to Himself, causing their deeds to bring honor to Him.

Had Pharaoh sought the Lord, or called upon His name, or repented, he would have been received. The same word given to wicked Cain, applied to him: “If you do well, will you not be accepted?” (Gen 4:7). But when men do NOT well, they are NOT accepted, even though God will ultimately be glorified, even through them. Thus it is written, “For we are to God the fragrance of Christ among those who are being saved and among those who are perishing. To the one we are the aroma of death leading to death, and to the other the aroma of life leading to life. And who is sufficient for these things?”^{NKJV} (2 Cor 2:15-16).

Like A Great Net

It is in this sense that the Kingdom of God is like a great net, cast into the sea of humanity. “Again, the kingdom of heaven is like a dragnet that was cast into the sea and gathered some of every kind, which, when it was full, they drew to shore; and they sat down and gathered the good into vessels, but threw the bad away. So it will be at the end of the age. The angels will come forth, separate the wicked from among the just, and cast them into the furnace of fire. There will be wailing and gnashing of teeth”^{NKJV} (Matt 13:46-50).

Notice, both the wicked and the just were within the net—under Divine control. Ultimately, they served God’s purpose, not their own. This is one of the ways in which God “works all things together for our good” (Rom 8:28).

For professed believers to concoct doctrines that excuse wickedness, or make it appear as though it were inconsequential, is inexcusable. Those who insist on sinning will still be used for God’s ultimate glory, but it will be at the expense of their own salvation.

2 Timothy 2:20-21

The Spirit informs us that within the professed body of Christ, there are people to be avoided. They largely consist of false teachers, who allow for the dominance of flesh. John the beloved said of such people in his day, “They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would have continued with us; but they went out that they might be made manifest, that none of them were of us” (1 John 2:19).

Paul referred to such individuals as “vessels of dishonor,” affirming they were to be avoided by men, even though they were used by God—used for ignoble purposes. “But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and silver, but also of wood and clay, some for honor and some for dishonor. Therefore if anyone cleanses himself from the latter, he will be a vessel for honor, sanctified and useful for the Master, prepared for every good work.”

Paul gives two examples of vessels of “dishonor” in this passage. They are

If men continue in sin, it is because they are dominated by the flesh, not by faith in Christ. Further, “they that are in the flesh cannot please God” (Rom 8:8). They dishonor God in their sin, and God will not honor them for it.

“Hymenaeus and Philetus,” whose teaching was like deadly cancer to the church. They taught “that the resurrection is already past,” and consequently “overthrew the faith of some” (vs 17-18). Their wickedness, however, did not overthrow the purpose of God. “Nevertheless the solid foundation of God stands, having this seal: ‘The Lord knows those who are His,’ and, ‘Let everyone who names the name of Christ depart from iniquity’” (v 19).

The “eternal purpose” of God is not overthrown by the wicked. Their own wickedness, however, will exclude them from all of its benefits. Their destruction will not be diverted even if they accompanied with, and went out from, the Apostles themselves, like those of John’s day. Even though they are influential teachers in the church, like Hymenaeus and Philetus, they will not escape.

Not A Diversion

All of this is NOT a diversion from our subject. I have shown that dishonoring God is NOT something allowed among His children. Furthermore, only His remission and the conferment of His righteousness can remove such dishonor. There is no advantage to having the truth of God if men still dishonor God. In fact, salvation delivers men from lives that dishonor the Lord. His own righteousness demanded such a resolution.

GOD IS NOT UNRIGHTEOUS

I must pursue this subject further. The Spirit is confirming our absolute need of the righteousness of God. He is showing us that no amount of external advantage can qualify us for Divine acceptance. Even when God separates a people for Himself, showers upon them unparalleled favors, gives them His own holy Law, and subdues their enemies before Him—those benefits cannot change their nature. In giving all of those blessings, the Lord only confirmed the sinfulness of the people. They needed a righteousness from God.

Galatians 2:17-19

This truth, however, is not easily appropriated. Men continue to imagine they are sanctified by having the truth instead of walking in it (3 John 3). Therefore, the Spirit reasons with us. “But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, is Christ therefore a minister of sin? Certainly not! For if I build again those things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor. For I through the law died to the law that I might live to God”^{NKJV} (Gal 2:17-19).

The point of this passage is that Christ cannot foster sin. Sin never is the result of fellowship with Christ! Jesus never leads a person to dishonor God. Jesus came to “destroy the works of the devil” (1 John 3:8), not to allow them to spring up in His people. Men may find it reasonable to explain sin, but God does not. He has already explained sin, and it needs no further explanation. It flows from what we are by nature, not what we are by grace. If men continue in sin, it is because they are dominated by the flesh, not by faith in Christ. Further, “they that are in the flesh cannot please God” (Rom 8:8). They dishonor God in their sin, and God will not honor them for it.

Under the Law, sin broke forth, awakened by the Law that was contrary to defiled human nature. Thus it is written, “I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died. And the commandment, which was to bring life, I found to bring death. For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it killed me” (Rom 7:8-11).

Rather than the Law giving those possessing it a reason to boast, it brought out how defiled their nature was. Sin had put man at variance with God. He was “alienated” from God, an “enemy” of God, and unable, in his own power, to please Him. To boast, therefore, in having the Law, was the height of absurdity.

While the Law stimulated sin, however, the righteousness of God does not. The grace of God does not yield the results found in the Law. It will never encourage or condone sin—never! Further, where God is dishonored, no association with grace can be professed. It is the flesh that has produced the dishonor, and remission and reconciliation must be sought diligently. Personally dishonoring God and causing others to dishonor Him exclude people from Divine acceptance.

This all confirms the need for a righteousness from God. All boasting that is not in God is wrong. It cannot be justified, and must be abandoned. If the Jews could not boast in the God-given law, how foolish it must appear in heaven for Gentiles to boast in their religious heritage! I realize this is common, but it is strictly forbidden by both the Word and nature of the Living God.

In salvation, men are extricated from the flesh, or their natural condition, not made more firm in it. The Jews were, so to speak, the best of all “flesh,” and yet they needed a righteousness from God. Their ONLY distinction was what the Lord had done to and for them. And yet, with all of that, they were still unrighteous. Until a righteousness from God is received, men will only bring dishonor to God. The Gospel, under the convincing power of the Spirit, will confirm that to tender hearts.

THE NAME OF GOD BLASPHEMED BECAUSE OF THOSE IDENTIFIED WITH HIM

“For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles because of you, as it is written.” Here is a tragic circumstance—God’s name defamed because of those identified with Him! The Jews, who were custodians of the revelation of God, actually brought dishonor to Him among the heathen. Isaiah referred to this condition. “Now therefore, what have I here, saith the LORD, that my people is taken away for nought? they that rule over them make them to howl, saith the LORD; and My name continually every day is blasphemed” (Isa 52:5).

The idea of this passage is that Israel was oppressed by the Assyrians and Chaldeans. Yet these hostile nations had no earthly claim on Israel. They were only used of God to punish His people for their wickedness. Still, the heathen blasphemed God every day because of the Jews—because of the weakness and reproach their own sin had brought upon them. Had the Israelites been righteous, the Assyrians and Chaldeans would not have conquered them, and God’s name would not have been blasphemed, despised, or cursed.

Ezekiel also mentions the matter of God’s name being dishonored among the heathen because of Israel. In my judgment, this is the specific passage to which our text refers. “When they came to the nations, wherever they went, they profaned My holy name; when they said of

The name of God was “blasphemed” as the heathen boasted that their gods had overcome the God of the Hebrews, who had parted the Red Sea. They concluded because God did not rescue His people He was too weak to do so. The heathen were prone to think this way,

When the name of God is blasphemed because of those wearing His name, it is because of their unbelief, addiction to sin, and their failure to appropriate the righteousness of God. It will do no good to spout religious slogans and doctrinal positions. If the flesh dominates the people, it is because they have NOT received the righteousness of God.

them, ‘These are the people of the LORD, and yet they have gone out of His land.’ But I had concern for My holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the nations wherever they went. Therefore say to the house of Israel, Thus says the Lord GOD: ‘I do not do this for your sake, O house of Israel, but for My holy name’s sake, which you have profaned among the nations wherever you went’” (Ezek 36:20-22). Think: profaning God’s name! The very words cause the soul to shudder.

whether the Jews were unfaithful or not. This was the challenge Pharaoh hurled into the face of Moses. “Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, neither will I let Israel go” (Ex 5:2). When wicked Sennacherib wrote to Hezekiah, he said, “Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria. Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly: and shalt thou be delivered? Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed; as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of Eden which were in Thelasar? Where is the king of Hamath, and the king of Arpad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah?" (2 Kgs 19:10-13).

It should not surprise us, therefore, that the heathen speak reproachfully of the Living God. However, when it is done because of the misconduct of His people, that is quite another matter.

Before developing this further, I want to affirm this condition reveals a need for a righteousness from God. When the name of God is blasphemed because of those wearing His name, it is because of their unbelief, addiction to sin, and their failure to appropriate the righteousness of God. It will do no good to spout religious slogans and doctrinal positions. If the flesh dominates the people, it is because they have NOT received the righteousness of God. They are NOT living by faith. Their profession is inconsequential, and utterly without worth. These are strong assertions, to be sure, but I will show they are the truth.

A WORD FROM JESUS

Jesus spoke of offenses, or stumbling blocks, that would be cast before men. "Woe to the world because of offenses! For offenses must come, but woe to that man by whom the offense comes!" (Matt 18:7). Lest we think this to be a mild word, remember that all who cause offense will be removed from God's Kingdom. As it is written, "The Son of Man will send out His angels, and they will gather out of His kingdom all things that offend, and those who practice lawlessness"^{NKJV} (Matt 13:41). This is precisely why Jesus upbraided the scribes and Pharisees (Matt 23:13-28).

Immediately preceding this verse (Matt 18:7), Jesus spoke of those who cause even the youngest to be offended. "But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea" (Matt 18:6). That certainly confirms the gravity of the situation.

It is possible for a person, or even a group, to become a stumbling block—for their words and conduct to cause people to stumble when they hear of God or Christ. Solemnly, believers are told to see to it

As soon as we depend upon our own righteousnesses, which are as "filthy rags" (Isa 64:6), we subject the name of the Lord to shame. We should not balk at this, for Jesus has already told us, "I am the vine, you are the branches. He who abides in Me, and I in him, bears much fruit; for without Me you can do nothing" they do not place a "stumbling block" in their "brother's way" (Rom 14:13). Their liberty is not to become "become a stumbling block to those who are weak" (1 Cor 8:9).

Our text takes the matter even further, showing that the name of the Lord is often blasphemed among those who do not know Him BECAUSE of those professing to be His people. Suffice it to say, if the name of the Lord is reproached, it had better not be because of us! Because considerable attention is given to this matter in Scripture, it will be profitable to consider it.

YOUNGER WOMEN AND WIVES

Two admonitions are given to young wives and mothers to zealously avoid giving an occasion for outsiders to speak reproachfully of God and His word. "Therefore I desire that the younger widows marry, bear children, manage the house, give no opportunity to the adversary to speak reproachfully" (1 Tim 5:14). This solemn admonition is preceded by alerting younger widows of the liabilities of idleness. "And besides they learn to be idle, wandering about from house to house, and not only idle but also gossips and busybodies, saying things which they ought not" (v. 14). That condition would result in Christ's adversaries speaking reproachfully of Him, His word, and His people. With zeal, this is to be avoided.

The spirit also addresses women that are already married, admonishing the older and more mature women to assist the younger ones in God-honoring conduct. "That they [the older women] may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, To be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed" (Tit 2:4-5).

THOSE WITH MASTERS

After being joined to the Lord, some saints remained under the yoke of slavery. While the circumstance was certainly not ideal, those within it were to live and serve in an exemplary manner. "Let as many bondservants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honor, so that the name of God and His doctrine may not be blasphemed" (1 Tim 6:1). The enemies of God look for an occasion to speak reproachfully of God's Person and teaching. If those "under the yoke" of slavery are to zealously avoid causing this to happen, what of those who are free? It seems to me that an even greater responsibility is placed upon them. As it is written, "as free, yet not using liberty as a cloak for vice, but as bondservants of God" (1 Pet 2:16). And again, "For you, brethren, have been called to liberty; only do not use liberty as an opportunity for the flesh, but through love serve one another" (Gal 1:13).

DAVID'S EXPERIENCE

One of the great tragedies of Scripture is when David sinned with Bathsheba. Due to the mercy of God, David did recover from this terrible sin. As it is written, “David did what was right in the eyes of the LORD, and had not turned aside from anything that He commanded him all the days of his life, except in the matter of Uriah the Hittite” (1 Kgs 15:5). A word of caution ought to be given to those who feel at liberty to speak of the many sins of David. This is the word of the Spirit concerning him, and it is the height of foolishness to contradict it with some humanistic view of the man after God’s own heart.

Even though recovery was realized, yet David had caused the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme. Because of this, the child born out of that iniquity died. Here was God’s word to David. “However, because by this deed you have given great occasion to the enemies of the LORD to blaspheme, the child also who is born to you shall surely die” (2 Sam 12:14). The seriousness of causing the “enemies of the Lord” to blaspheme is evident.

How is it that such things can occur? It is not because of God’s righteousness, but because of our natural corruption. We need His righteousness! As soon as we depend upon our own righteousnesses, which are as “filthy rags” (Isa 64:6), we subject the name of the Lord to shame. We should not balk at this, for Jesus has already told us, “I am the vine, you are the branches. He who abides in Me, and I in him, bears much fruit; for without Me you can do nothing” (John 15:5).

Whether men like it or not, God is judged by what men see in His people. When we let our light shine, they will behold our “good works,” and glorify our Father in heaven (Matt 5:16).

DEMEANING THOUGHTS OF GOD

Demeaning thoughts of God ARE largely owing to the inconsistencies of those wearing His name. Who among us has not confronted irreverent views of caused by such. A considerable point of this is made in the book of Revelation, and is worthy of some comment.

In my judgment, we are living in the midst of spiritually perilous times. It is a time when a form of godliness is embraced, while its power is rejected. Not only is there a corruption in doctrine, but appetites are cultured for the things of this world. Legion is the name of those who have a worldly view of preaching, music, leadership, and evangelism. This type of religion was astounding for the Apostles to consider.

When John was given to see the great “harlot,” which is the false church, he marveled at its appearance and power. Here is the record. “Then one of the seven angels who had the seven bowls came and talked with me, saying to me, ‘Come, I will show you the judgment of the great harlot who sits on many waters, with whom the kings of the earth committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth were made drunk with the wine of her fornication.’ So he carried me away in the Spirit into the wilderness. And I saw a woman sitting on a scarlet beast which was full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. The woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet, and adorned with gold and precious stones and pearls, having in her hand a golden cup full of abominations and the filthiness of her fornication. And on her forehead a name was written: MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH. I saw the woman, drunk with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. And when I saw her, I marveled with great amazement” (Rev 17:1-6). There are several things here that are of particular significance.

1. The vision is of a woman.
2. The kings of the earth commit fornication with her.
3. The inhabitants of the earth are made drunk with the wine of her fornication.
4. She is carried along by associations with blasphemy.
5. The woman is arrayed with royal garments.
6. In her hand is a cup filled with abominations, which are directly related to her fornication.
7. Her name indicates her true character is not apparent.
8. She begets harlots.
9. She is the cause of the abominations in the earth.
10. She has advanced her cause at the expense of the blood of the saints and the martyrs of Jesus.

This is an arresting picture of the false church—Satan’s fabrication. That is why it is associated with fornication. She comes in the name of Christ, yet has chosen to commit spiritual fornication with the world. Both the rulers and the inhabitants of the earth are affected by her presence and manners. Boldly, this corrupt form of religion has even shed the blood of the saints of God in order to advance her own ways.

This form of Christianity was first advanced on a large scale by the Roman Catholic church. For many centuries, this was not acknowledged by its leaders. However, we have lived to see a significant admission of guilt by the Pope himself. On March 12, 2000, in a mild yet epochal confession Pope John Paul said, “We are asking pardon for the divisions among Christians, for the use of violence that some have committed in the service of truth, and for attitudes of mistrust and hostility assumed toward followers of other religions.”^{Victor L. Simpson, Associated Press}

Historians estimate that over 50,000,000 Protestants were slain by the Roman Church during those bloody years. But that is only the tip of the iceberg. She pioneered an alliance with the governments of this world, and helped to usher in State religion. Her strength was found in her form, or organization. Whether in its ceremonies, officials, or ornate cathedrals, appearance was vaulted above substance.

From this type of religion came a host of spiritual harlots. A heterogenous mixture of heaven and earth and flesh and Spirit was attempted. It survives to this day, and is unusually rampant in our time. This is form without power (2 Tim 3:5). It is a religion that allows for men to come in sheep's clothing, who are ravening wolves within (Matt 7:15).

Mother of the Earth's Abominations

At this point we can see a correlation with our text. The corrupt church is the mother of spiritual harlots promoting a coalition with the world under the guise of religion. But that is not all. She also is the mother of "the abominations of the earth," promoting corruption even among those who do not know the Lord. The world is actually worse because of polluted religion. The name of God is thus blasphemed in both word and conduct because of professed followers of Christ. It is too evident to deny.

This situation reveals a critical need for a righteousness from God! The Lord be blasphemed among the heathen because of it. There is no alternative to this indispensable righteousness. The Jews are an indisputable case in point. If they, after all of the unique benefits they

There is only one thing that can correct this condition. That is a righteousness from God. corruption of reference proceeded from corrupt people. Corrupt deeds can only come from a corrupt source. It is ever true, "Even so, every good tree bears good fruit, but a bad tree bears bad fruit. A good tree cannot bear bad fruit, nor can a bad tree bear good fruit" (Matt 7:17-18). The Lord has stated conditions that are impossible—they cannot happen!

There is only one thing that can correct this condition. That is a righteousness from God. Where this is not found, it is inevitable that corruption will received, were unable to avoid this circumstance, nothing more needs to be said to justify the Spirit's conclusion. Men need a righteousness from God! That is precisely why the Gospel announces it is available through Christ Jesus.

No other form of goodness or imagined intellectual superiority will be acknowledged by God. At some point, human efforts must be abandoned in favor of believing God. The condition of the modern church is proof enough that this is the case.

CONCLUSION

This text has been usually strong, as the nature of truth has been expounded. The Gospel has revealed a righteousness from God, and it is one that is required. The modern church has become so used to philosophical and psychological preaching, that it can scarcely bare to hear a firm word from God.

The Spirit has shown from their idolatry, deep immorality, and wicked expressions, that the Gentiles could not arrive at a righteousness of their own. He has confirmed that the testimony of nature could not awaken any purported goodness within man. Nor, indeed, could his wisdom retrieve him from the fall, change his nature, or make him righteous.

The well of human wisdom is not deep enough to produce life-giving water.

Those who draw from it will find it is a "broken cisterns that can hold no water" (Jer 2:13). Natural powers of analysis cannot bring men to the proper conclusions, or compel to act effectively upon what glimmers of truth they see, whether in nature or in Law. When left to himself, man descends into the bottomless pit of flesh. This is a hard truth for proud man to learn, but it must be learned.

Turning to the Jews, the Spirit wields His sword with unparalleled effectiveness. He shows that man has fallen so far that surrounding him with Divine benefits will not change his nature. As confirmed in the most privileged nation in the history of the world, heavenly gifts only served to establish man's need for a righteousness from God. Without grace, they availed nothing.

Given an elite status and a flawless Law, behold what happened. The Jews rested in form, and cared nothing for the substance. They became arrogant, as though they had achieved their status through their own efforts. They gave no heed to the festering eruptions of iniquity within them, and settled for a whitewashed appearance. Whether or not men argue about the possibility of avoiding such a condition, the fact is that it was NOT avoided.

It is true, there were holy men here and there who rose above their peers. Before the Son of God entered into this defiled world, the sons of men had some noble representatives. Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Joseph, Moses, and the holy Prophets, and John the Baptist stand as giants among the offspring of Adam. But not a single one of them would boast of their achievement! None of them, however, would claim a righteousness of their own making, or trace their success to their own wisdom. Faith made them superior! They all recognized their need of the Lord, righteousness, and Divine direction.

O, that men could see it! Apart from the righteousness of God, men are shut up to inconsistency. Worse than that, their supposed righteousness is summarily rejected by God. He will have none of it. They must be "made the righteousness of God" in Christ Jesus (2 Cor 5:21). That is something God does, not man!

Those who have some representation of truth, yet do not have the righteousness of God, will tend to think they are exclusive, sitting in judgment upon others. I have come from this type of heritage, and its fruits are too abundant to contest. Of all religious bodies, those who imagine themselves to be the exclusive people of God, or to have a monopoly upon the truth of God, are the worst. That is precisely why Jesus said to the pious chief priests and elders, "Verily I say unto you, That the publican and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you" (Matt 21:31).

When division, hatred, and lifelessness are spawned in a religious environment, it is because the righteousness of God has not been received. This is the message of our text.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 7

REAL CIRCUMCISION

2:25 For circumcision is indeed profitable if you keep the law; but if you are a breaker of the law, your circumcision has become uncircumcision. 26 Therefore, if an uncircumcised man keeps the righteous requirements of the law, will not his uncircumcision be counted as circumcision? 27 And will not the physically uncircumcised, if he fulfills the law, judge you who, even with your written code and circumcision, are a transgressor of the law? 28 For he is not a Jew who is one outwardly, nor is circumcision that which is outward in the flesh; 29 but he is a Jew who is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the Spirit, not in the letter; whose praise is not from men but from God.

(Romans 2:25-29^{NKJV})

INTRODUCTION

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. WHEN CIRCUMCISION IS UNPROFITABLE (2:25)
- II. RIGHTEOUSNESS IS THE POINT, NOT THE SIGN (2:26)
- III. EXTERNAL REQUIREMENTS DO NOT EXCLUDE THE NEED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS (2:27)
- IV. JUDGE NOT ACCORDING TO APPEARANCE (2:28)
- V. REAL IDENTITY (2:29)

The matter of receiving a righteousness from God, or being justified, is the most critical concern in Scripture. Nothing is more important than this. If God does not recognize us as righteous, there is no chance of being saved, for “the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God” (1 Cor 1:9).

The Spirit has already declared “the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men” (Rom 1:18). There is no possibility of this not taking place. The Divine nature will eventually break forth in consuming fury against everyone and everything contradictory to it. It is only “the longsuffering” and “goodness of God” that keeps this from occurring now. However, these marvelous qualities will not continue toward those who are ungodly—those who lack the righteousness of God.

RIGHTEOUSNESS IS ESSENTIAL

To further confirm this reality, the Spirit confronts those who imagine they can develop a righteousness on their own. “But we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we all do fade as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away” (Isa 64:6). If some protest, saying this only applied to the Jews, and not to everyone, all doubt is decimated by this word. “The LORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God. They are all gone aside, they are all together become filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one” (Psa 14:2-3; 53:2-3; Rom 3:10). Although men argue over this fact, it is actually beyond debate. This is a Divine assessment, and must be addressed if men are to be saved.

Even though the salvation of God is being accomplished with the extensive involvement the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, men are tempted to think little is required of them. Satan has succeeded in deluding them into believing God will graciously overlook their situation. Too, they also are convinced a minimal amount of input is required of them. To further complicate the matter, the absolute necessity of a total change in the character of the individual is seriously doubted among many wearing the name of Christ.

The Law confirmed God cannot be

"And these all, having obtained a good report through faith" (Heb 11:39).

THE MINISTRY OF CONDEMNATION

The Law confirmed God cannot be served seasonally, or in activities that are adjunct to life itself. This is precisely how the Israelites worshiped and served the Lord. This was not the heart and soul of their life, but an addition to it.

served seasonally, or in activities that are adjunct to life itself. This is precisely how the Israelites worshiped and served the Lord. This was not the heart and soul of their life, but an addition to it. Furthermore, it was a burdensome one to them. They saw no correlation between serving the Lord and life itself. That is why they said, *"You have said, 'It is vain to serve God; and what profit is it that we have kept His charge, and that we have walked in mourning before the LORD of hosts?'"*NASB (Mal 3:14).

While we may be tempted to chide the Israelites for their inconsistency, care must be taken NOT to miss the point being made by the Holy Spirit. It is simply this: men without the righteousness of God cannot live acceptably to God, because they are fundamentally unlike Him. The only change that can be made is through faith, which accounts for the unusual men and women prior to Jesus. Their superiority was not due to more hearty effort, or the greater discipline of their mind on their part. It was their faith that made them unique. As it is written,

The law was a ministry of condemnation. Yet, those under it tended to view it as the means to their justification. The third chapter of Second Corinthians provides a vivid picture of the Law and its relationship to our natural condition. Although "glorious," it was "the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones" (v. 7). It produced death, not life. For this reason, it was called "the ministration of condemnation" (v. 9), because it revealed the alienated condition of men.

Furthermore, the Law has no transforming power. It could not change the human condition, but only identify it. Concerning the forbidden tree, the Lord told Adam, "in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die" (Gen 2:17). Indeed, "by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned" (Rom 5:12). A chasm was thus created between man and God that was too vast to be bridged by human effort—any human effort, regardless of size or longevity. Only God is able to resolve this problem!

The Law was delivered to confirm this was the case. It was not given to remedy the situation, but to clarify, and even compound, it. Thus it is written, "Moreover the law entered that the offense might abound" (Rom 5:20). And again, "But sin, that it might appear sin, was producing death in me through what is good, so that sin through the commandment might become exceedingly sinful" NKJV (Rom 7:13). The nature of sin was not changed, or increased by the Law. Rather, its wickedness became more apparent.

If man could recover from sin on his own, the ministry of the Law would not have been necessary. Sin, in such a case, would not have been "exceedingly sinful," but merely a human weakness.

It is one of the ironies of humanity that in spite of this pointed ministry of the Law, those who choose it as a means to reach God become self-confident. They think nothing of putting their trust in their own abilities. It is no wonder Paul wrote, "For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it slew me" (Rom 7:11).

Because of these circumstances, the Spirit drives the point home of our need for a righteousness from God. He is going to reason with our hearts, showing there is no possible way to remain honest and avoid the conclusion that our own righteousness, under any and every circumstance, is unacceptable to God. In order to do this, HE will focus on the highest and most notable mark of the Old Covenant - circumcision.

WHEN CIRCUMCISION IS PROFITABLE

It is tragic that so very little is known of "circumcision" within the modern church. It was a most significant ordinance, acquainting men with tokens of a Divine covenant. In its various forms, the word "circumcise" is mentioned no less than fifty-three times in Scripture (Gen 17:11,12,13,14,23,24,25,26,27; 21:4; 34:15,21,22,24; Ex 4:26; 12:44,48; Lev 12:3; Deut 10:16; 30:6; Josh 5:2,3,4,5,7,8; 7:22,23; Jer 4:4; 9:25; Lk 1:59; 2:21; John 7:22; Acts 7:8; 10:45; 11:2; 15:1,5,24; 21:21; Rom 2:25,26,27,28,29; 3:1,30; 4:9,10,11,12; 15:8; 1 Cor 7:18,19; Gal 2:3,7,8,9,12; 5:2,3,6,11; 6:12,13; Eph 2:11; Phil 3:3,5; Col 2:11; 3:11; 4:11; Tit 1:10).

ASSOCIATED WITH ABRAHAM

Circumcision is first mentioned in relation to Abraham. When Abram was ninety-nine years of age, after Ishmael was born, the Lord appeared to him. At that time, the Lord said, "And I will make My covenant between Me and you, and will multiply you exceedingly" (Gen 17:2). This was in keeping with the Lord's promise to Abraham approximately three years earlier, and prior to the conception of Ishmael. "On the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying: 'To your descendants I have given this land, from the river of Egypt to the great river, the River Euphrates; the Kenites, the Kenezites, the Kadmonites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Rephaim, the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Girgashites, and the Jebusites” (Gen 15:18-21). The only covenant made with men prior to this was made with Noah (Gen 6:18; 9:9-17). The covenant with Abraham, however, differed significantly from that with Noah. That covenant established safety for Noah and his family during the flood. It also assured the world would never again be destroyed with a flood.

The covenant with Abraham, however, was one of blessing. At the time God made this covenant, he changed Abram’s name to Abraham. “No longer shall your name be called Abram, but your name shall be Abraham; for I have made you a father of many nations” (17:5). Having promised the land of Canaan to Abraham for “an everlasting possession,” the Lord said, “This is My covenant which you shall keep, between Me and you and your descendants after you: Every male child among you shall be circumcised; and you shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskins, and it shall be a sign of the covenant between Me and you” (17:10-11). The requirement applied to every male offspring of Abraham, of all generations, and to any foreigner among them as well (v 12).

The requirement was exacting, with no leniency at all. The covenant of God would be ratified in the flesh of Abraham’s progeny. “He who is born in your house and he who is bought with your money must be circumcised, and My covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant. And the uncircumcised male child, who is not circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin, that person shall be cut off from his people; he has broken My covenant” (v. 13-14).

The covenant was further defined as being through Isaac’s lineage, and not that of Ishmael. When Abraham suggested that the covenant might be fulfilled through Ishmael, the Lord said, “No, Sarah your wife shall bear you a son, and you shall call his name Isaac; I will establish My covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his descendants after him . . . But My covenant I will establish with Isaac, whom Sarah shall bear to you at this set time next year” (17:19,21).

In faith, Abraham obeyed the voice of the Lord. “Then Abraham circumcised his son Isaac when he was eight days old, as God had commanded him” (Gen 21:4). Stephen referred to this occasion in his eloquent defense of the faith. “Then He gave him the covenant of circumcision; and so Abraham begot Isaac and circumcised him on the eighth day” (Acts 7:8).

JUDAISTIC TROUBLERS

The early church was troubled with legalistic judaizers. There were those who insisted that circumcision was still incumbent upon all in covenant with God—even those in Jesus Christ. On one occasion “certain men came down from Judea and taught the brethren, ‘Unless you are circumcised according to the custom of Moses, you cannot be saved’” (Acts 15:1). To the unspiritual mind, it all seemed to make sense. After all, Jesus had given no indication that circumcision would be abrogated. The few words He said about it did not seem to indicate the ordinance would ever end (John 7:22-23).

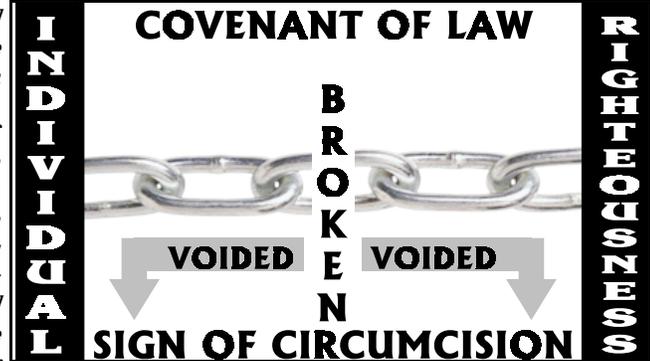

These law-binders could point to chapter and verse to confirm their insistence that all males be circumcised. There was no question about the wording of these texts. “He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant” (Gen 17:11).

The Galatians confronted false teachers who “compelled” them “to be circumcised” (Gal 6:12). These teachers, besides having corrupt hearts, did not know the nature of the new covenant.

Four hundred and fifty years after Abraham, Moses spoke of the necessity of a higher form of circumcision. “Therefore circumcise the foreskin of your heart, and be stiff-necked no longer” (Deut 10:16). Realizing they were incapable of doing this, he also foretold of the time when God would accomplish the circumcision of the heart. “And the LORD your God will circumcise your heart and the heart of your descendants, to love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul, that you may live” (Deut 30:6). A “better covenant,” “established upon better promises” was needed if men were to become truly righteous (Heb 8:6).

WHY SAY THESE THINGS?

I have taken the time to briefly review the background of circumcision because of the general ignorance concerning it. Also, considerable will be made of circumcision in this book. It

You may recall that Joseph and Mary also honored this covenant, circumcising Jesus when He was eight days old. “And when eight days were completed for the circumcision of the Child, His name was called JESUS, the name given by the angel before He was conceived in the womb” (Lk 2:21). That took place about 2,000 years after the circumcision of Isaac.

A SIGN AND SEAL OF THE COVENANT

In delineating the truth of justification by faith, Paul brings up Abrahamic circumcision. Because we will cover it extensively in the fourth chapter, it will suffice to only mention it here. In Genesis, the Lord said circumcision was the covenant of God “in your flesh.” Referring to the same truth, Paul wrote, “And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had while still uncircumcised” (Rom 4:11). That sign was the proof of the covenant. It was known to the possessor, but was hidden from the view of others.

therefore behooves us to have a working knowledge of it. Briefly stated, it was an external sign of a Divine covenant.

A BREAKER OF THE LAW

The Spirit now confronts the legalist with an arresting consideration. “For circumcision is indeed profitable if you keep the law; but if you are a breaker of the law, your circumcision has become uncircumcision” (2:25). Those who imagined that possessing the sign and the seal was all there was to it were simply wrong. Conforming to outward requirements was never intended to be a basis of confidence before God—not even in Abraham. It is never right to put faith in “the sign and the seal” rather than in the God of the covenant.

Even under the First Covenant, circumcision brought no personal advantage apart from obedience to the law. “For circumcision is indeed profitable if you keep the law.” Remember, the subject of discussion is being righteous before God. Under the Law, Divine acceptance was granted upon the basis of DOING, not being circumcised. Thus it was written, “For Moses writes about the righteousness which is of the law, ‘The man who DOES those things shall live by them’” (Rom 10:5). Note, righteousness is here equated with life. This is spiritual life, or being recognized by, and in fellowship, with the Lord.

Righteousness and the Law

Righteousness, or spiritual life, was not promised because men were circumcised, but ONLY if they did precisely what the Law said. Hear it again from the words of Moses. “Ye shall therefore keep my statutes, and my judgments: which if a man DO, he shall live in them: I am the LORD” (Lev 18:5). Permit me to call Nehemiah to the witness stand. “ . . . yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, (which if a man DO, he shall live in them)” (Neh 9:29). Hear Ezekiel the prophet affirm the same thing. “And I gave them my statutes, and showed them my judgments, which if a man DO, he shall even live in them” (Ezek 20:11). Hear the Lord Jesus Himself as He spoke to a man inquiring what he should DO to inherit eternal life. After telling him to keep the commandments, Jesus “said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this DO, and thou shalt live” (Lk 10:28). Again, the Spirit says to the Galatians, who were retrogressing to Law for justification, “And the law is not of faith: but, The man that DOETH them shall live in them” (Gal 3:12).

Circumcision Did not Negate the Requirement for Perfect Obedience

Circumcision did not take the place of DOING to obtain life, or righteousness. Remember, the Old Covenant offered righteousness strictly upon the basis of perfect compliance with its demands. Under it circumcision was a sign that the individual was within that covenant. If, however, that Law was broken, circumcision was invalidated.

The books of Moses are filled with the names of those who were severely punished, and even died, because they broke the law. Their circumcision was not sufficient to exempt them from Divine judgment. Nadab and Abihu (Lev 10:1-3), Korah and his cohorts (Num 16:19-32), and over 600,000 who refused to obey, and thus fell in the wilderness (Num 14:26-34). Who can forget Saul being stripped of his kingship (1 Sam 16:1,14), or Samson losing his strength (Judges 16:20). All of these people were circumcised, but it was of no avail when they became obstinate and disobeyed the Lord.

When it came to the matter of righteousness (which is the subject of discussion), the Jew’s disobedience invalidated their circumcision.

Inclusion in the Old Covenant, which was confirmed by circumcision, required complete obedience to the Law. Where this did not occur, no confidence could be placed in circumcision. Life and acceptance were not offered because the people had been circumcised. Rather, they were circumcised because they were chosen and blessed by God. To boast, therefore, in the “sign and the seal” brought no glory to God.

WHY BRING THIS UP?

This is not a mere discourse on circumcision. The Spirit is addressing the Jews who thought themselves worthy to judge others simply because they were a chosen people. They trusted in their possession of the Law, and boasted in the ordained seal of circumcision.

To state it more succinctly, they were trusting in what they had been given, rather than in the Giver. The Spirit is taking this boast away from them. He is confirming that our acceptance is strictly based upon faith, and that it alone can appropriate the righteousness of God.

WHEN ORDAINED SIGNS ARE NEGATED

The Jews were not the last persons to rely on signs for confidence. Many still imagine they can take the place of faith, which alone can appropriate the righteousness of God (Rom 3:22,26; 4:5; Phil 3:9). It is vital to understand the principle proclaimed in this text.

There is extensive teaching on this matter in the Apostolic writings. Yet, it is generally ignored by the masses, in favor of some external and visible evidence of imagined Divine approval.

Not of Works

When it comes to the appropriation of righteousness, the cause is not human achievement. Strict adherence to the Law, for example, will NEVER result in justification. “Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin” (Rom 3:20). The “deeds” demanded by the Law had to be perfect, with not the slightest deviation from the Divine requirement.

The appropriation of grace is absolutely essential. Yet, works cannot take hold of grace. Only faith can seize the grace of God. “For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast” (Eph 2:8-9).

The salvation and calling of God were not induced by our works, but by His own determined objective. They were driven by His grace, not our accomplishments. “Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began” (2 Tim, 1:9).

Our experience of the kindness and tender love of God was not His response to our own works. Salvation came through MERCY, not recognition of our attainments. “But when the kindness and the love of God our Savior toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, through the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit”^{NKJV} (Tit 3:4-5).

Men will remonstrate at this declaration, saying we are not saved by faith alone, but by works (James 2:24). But James is not speaking of obtaining justification, or righteousness, but of confirming its presence. Faith works, and consistently so—but it is never the result of work. When we become “partakers of the Divine nature” (2 Pet 1:4), that nature works within us “both to will and to do” (Phil 2:13). But it is not conferred upon us because of our works. Men are not righteous because they live for God, but live for God because they are righteous.

Allow me to be even more simplistic. Men are not born again because they are good, but are good because they are born again—and only good men can do good works. To put it in the words of our blessed Lord, “Either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by his fruit” (Matt 12:33).

The reason for this arrangement should be obvious. A religion that places confidence in human achievement or benefits conferred by God Himself, has no need for Christ. In such a case, there is really no need for an Intercessor in heaven, or a powerful Holy Spirit within. The point in all such religion is what men can and ought to do, NOT what the Lord has done.

The Old Covenant was precisely that kind of covenant. It relied upon the people, promising life to those who DID what the Law demanded. Such a covenant was “weak through the flesh” (Rom 8:3), not bringing righteousness to men. The New Covenant is certainly not another covenant of the same order. It is a different kind of covenant, with a superior foundation and better promises.

Trusting in Evidences

There is a proneness in men to base their faith on evidence, rather than in the Living God. In some circles, this is even thought to be commendable. But it is not. You may recall that Thomas once said, “Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.” Eight days later, when Jesus again appeared to His disciples, Thomas was also present. Confronted with the evidence of a real risen Savior, Thomas cried out, “My Lord and my God.” Jesus then pronounced a blessing—BUT NOT UPON THOMAS. “Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: BLESSED are they that have NOT seen, and YET HAVE BELIEVED” (John 20:25-29).

Lest we miss the point, circumcision was the evidence—the sign of the covenant. It could not gain access to God for those who had transgressed the covenant. Disobedience reduced the circumcised person to the same condemnation leveled against the Gentiles.

TRUSTING IN ORDINANCES

Just as the Jews, under the First Covenant, were prone to trust in ordinances, particularly circumcision, so those in Christ are tempted to trust in the ordinances delivered to them. The Jews, you may recall, made an idol out of the brazen serpent, burning incense to it (2 Kings 18:4). The brazen serpent was given by God, and was the means through which healing was brought to disobedient Israelites. Yet, it was never intended to take the place of God. So it is with blessed ordinances that have been given through Christ to us. They are from God, and are not to be despised or rejected. Yet, they are not intended to take the place of the Lord, or become the objects of confidence.

Baptism Into Christ

Our baptism into Christ is one of the great occasions of life. It is the point at which we are identified with the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ (Rom 6:3-6). This is the one thing Peter “commanded” the household of Cornelius to do (Acts 10:48). There is never a question about the necessity or benefits of baptism in Scripture. Like Jewish circumcision, it is, of itself, always viewed in a favorable manner.

However, our baptism is neither the objective or foundation of our faith. As indispensable as it is, it cannot make up for a lack of faith. The commandment is, “He that believes and is baptized shall be saved” (Mark 16:16). Unless it is coupled with faith, baptism brings no advantage whatsoever to the individual.

Let it be clear, God does not, nor do we, recognize any individual who refuses to be baptized. If the Pharisees were judged for not submitting to John’s baptism (Lk 7:30), what can be said of those who do not submit to one ordained by Jesus? But woe be to the person who trusts in his baptism rather than in the Christ into whom he was baptized! Baptism is the means, not the objective, even as with all other acts of obedience. It is not to be despised, nor is it to be vaunted to the most prominent place.

Partaking of the Lord’s Supper

Here is another ordinance put into place by the Lord Jesus Himself. Like baptism, it relates to His vicarious death, and is to be held in the highest regard. Jesus said, “Do this in remembrance of me” (Lk 22:19). “ALL” of His disciples are to partake of it (Matt 26:27). His disciples are to examine themselves and “eat of that bread, and drink of that cup” (1 Cor 11:28). This is not, therefore, an ordinance to be trifled with, as though it were inconsequential.

The Corinthian’s failure to properly partake of this supper led to the visitation of Divine judgment upon them (1 Cor 11:27-31).

But let no person imagine that eating at the Lord’s Table exempts one from the necessity of having the righteousness of God. There is no magic in this table which allows corruption to remain in the hearts of those partaking of it. A church that faithfully partakes of this table is not necessarily commended of God, as seen in the case of Corinth. Nor, indeed, is it to be treated as though it could be forgotten or approached with casualness. Participation in it, however, is not to be the source of our confidence.

Assembling Together

Early in the history of the church, people began to develop a “manner” of forsaking the assembling of the saints. Thus the admonition is given, “Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching” (Heb 10:25). Assemblies should increase, and the exhortations to not forsake them, “so much more,” as we see the day approaching. “The day” has been viewed in a variety of ways, and all of them have some merit. Among them is the day our Lord returns, the time of judgment upon Jerusalem, the day of judgment, and the first day of the week itself. However you may choose to view it, gathering together is not to be despised.

However, if men rely upon the attendance of the assembly to take the place of personal righteousness, they have sinned, just as surely as those who relied upon circumcision. There is nothing about the assembly of the righteous that compensates for a lack of faith, or a failure to appropriate the righteousness of God.

None of this diminishes the importance of these ordinances—any more than our text lessened the place of circumcision under the Old Covenant. Under the Law, it was not possible to have a more significant seal in the flesh than circumcision. It was so vital that those accepted by God were called “the circumcision,” and those who were not were called “the uncircumcision” (Rom 3:30; 4:9; 15:8; Eph 2:11).

But when it comes to the matter of ultimate Divine acceptance, “Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God” (1 Cor 7:19). At some point, the individual must be brought into harmony with the Law of God, not being at variance with it. As it is written, “For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit” (Rom 8:3-4). This occurs when men are given the righteousness of God. We will now see that this is directly related to being born again, or receiving a new nature. The argument is weighty, showing that a person’s nature, or character, is the real point with God.

That takes precedence over the “sign” of the covenant, although it does not obviate the “sign” or “seal” of any given covenant. The possession of righteousness is the fundamental thing. Without it, nothing else is of value.

WHEN THE SIGN IS VOIDED

Because of the strength of this text, I must reaffirm it. For the Jew, when God’s law was broken, circumcision lost its significance. To state it another way, when men do not have the righteousness of God, it makes no difference what ordained “seal” they possess, they are NOT accepted by God.

Does This Not Produce Hopelessness?

The sophist will object that this removes hope from all people. How can we account for the acceptance of Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Joseph, Moses, and David? The Spirit shouts back to us that they were accepted because of their “FAITH.” In fact, that is the point of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. The word “circumcision” is not mentioned a single time in that text, even though most of those cited were Jews.

Apart from faith, all is hopeless. That is the point of our text, for faith alone can appropriate the righteousness of God. That is why Paul pressed “to be found in Him, not having my own righteousness, which is from the law, but that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is FROM GOD BY FAITH” (Phil 3:9).

Some object, saying “works” are part of salvation. Indeed, they are—but not the foundational part. They are not what supports the tree, nor are they the primary evidence of Divine grace. Works—valid works—are the fruit, and not the root. They are what we are recreated for, not why we were recreated. As it is written, “For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them” (Eph 2:10)! They are the evidence of righteousness, and not the cause of it. The one who “does righteousness” IS righteous (1 John 3:7). In the case of holy works, righteousness is the cause, not the effect. Further more, the means through which righteousness is conferred is faith. This sharply contrasts with the Law, which conferred righteousness upon the basis of doing.

RIGHTEOUSNESS IS THE POINT, NOT THE SIGN

“²⁶ Therefore, if an uncircumcised man keeps the righteous requirements of the law, will not his uncircumcision be counted as circumcision?”

In this verse, the Spirit tears down two walls that have plagued the church. The first is sectarianism. This has led people to trust in positions, creeds, and ordinances, removing their faith from God. As a result, they have sat in judgment upon other people who have not subscribed to their traditions. The second is self confidence. This leads the individual to rely upon surface evidences, while lacking the real righteousness of God. Remember, the Spirit is establishing our need for the righteousness of God. This is a righteousness that can only be experienced by faith. Therefore, it escapes the sectarian and the self confident.

CIRCUMCISION INFERIOR TO THE LAW ITSELF

Under the First Covenant, or the Law, the Law itself was the point, not its attending ordinances. Do not imagine this means the ordinances were inconsequential or of no significance. God forbid!

The Example of Moses

To confirm that the Spirit is not demeaning circumcision under the Law, but rather refusing to allow men to trust in it, let us consider Moses. There is a very brief account given of this great man of God that confirms the importance of circumcision. The Lord had just told Moses to go to obstinate Pharaoh and give him a most grievous message. “So I said to you, ‘Let My son go, that he may serve Me’; but you have refused to let him go. Behold, I will kill your son, your first-born.”^{NASB} On the way, the Lord met Moses, and “sought to kill him.” The reason for this intent, we find, was that Moses had failed to circumcise the son he had through Zipporah, daughter of “the priest of Midian.” It appeared as though Moses was totally insensitive of the situation, but his wife was not. The record reads, “Then Zipporah took a flint and cut off her son’s foreskin and threw it at Moses’ feet, and she said, ‘You are indeed a bridegroom of blood to me.’ So He let him alone. At that time she said, ‘You are a bridegroom of blood’-- because of the circumcision” (Ex 4:24-26).

I give this example to remove any temptation to think of circumcision as optional among the Jews.

Stipulations of the Law

The Law also spoke clearly on this matter, making circumcision incumbent for every man child in any Jewish house, be he bond or free. “And when a stranger dwells with you and wants to keep the Passover to the LORD, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as a native of the land. For no uncircumcised person shall eat it” (Ex 12:48).

that were born in the wilderness by the way as they came forth out of Egypt, them they had not circumcised” (Josh 5:2-7). The Lord’s response to their action is noteworthy. “This day have I rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off you” (Josh 5:9). Circumcision was certainly not an optional or insignificant ordinance!

The Law Was Superior

Our text confirms the superiority of the Law to circumcision. “If those who are not circumcised keep the law’s requirements, will they not be regarded as though they were circumcised?”^{NIV}

I understand this to be a hypothetical statement. The Spirit is reasoning with us, showing that the Law was superior to circumcision, and was the reason for its existence. Although circumcision was strictly required by the Law, keeping the Law had greater weight than being circumcised. A Gentile who kept the Law, even though uncircumcised, was far superior to the Jew who was circumcised, yet disobeyed the Law. That was a hard pill for the Judaizers to swallow!

The point is that keeping the Law was the intent of making a covenant with Israel, not a mere fleshly distinction. They were brought into covenant with God in order that they might walk in His statutes and judgments. If, then, an uncircumcised Gentile was found walking in those judgments, the objective of God was being served in him, even though he did not have the sign and seal of the covenant in his flesh.

Let me emphasize that this is a spiritual form of reasoning. The Spirit is not suggesting that such a person exists, for he has already declared the Gentile world guilty of sin. He is showing us the Divine manner of thinking. God does NOT look on the outward appearance, but on the heart. As it is written, “for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart” (1 Sam 16:7). Faith reckons on God’s consideration, ignoring that of man.

Remember, the Spirit is establishing our need for the righteousness of God. This is a righteousness that can only be experienced by faith. Therefore, it escapes the sectarian and the self confident.

Joshua Circumcises the Men

To further show the importance of circumcision, Joshua addressed the matter when the children of Israel arrived at Jericho. BEFORE they took the city, there was something that had to be done. The record speaks for itself. “At that time the LORD said unto Joshua, Make thee sharp knives, and circumcise again the children of Israel the second time. And Joshua made him sharp knives, and circumcised the children of Israel at the hill of the foreskins. And this is the cause why Joshua did circumcise: All the people that came out of Egypt, that were males, even all the men of war, died in the wilderness by the way, after they came out of Egypt. Now all the people that came out were circumcised: but all the people

Let there be no mistake about this, God prefers, and will ONLY accept, the individual who is righteous. That is why the Gospel reveals “the righteousness of God.” There is no other way to be received by Him.

The Example of Cornelius

Although not a thorough example of our text, the Gentile Cornelius reveals the truth of it. He was not a Jew, but was a military man, “a centurion of what was called the Italian Regiment.” It is said of this man, “He and all his family were devout and God-fearing; he gave generously to those in need and prayed to God regularly”^{NIV} (Acts 10:1-2). The angel of the Lord appeared to him announcing, “Your prayers and your alms have come up for a memorial before God”^{NKJV} (Acts 10:4). He then directed Cornelius to send for Simon Peter, who would tell him “words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved” (Acts 11:14).

How is it that God honored this man’s gifts and prayers? He was not a Jew—not among the covenanted people. Later, when with Cornelius, Peter confessed, “Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with Him” (Acts 10:34-35). His acceptance did not obviate the need for Christ, or “words” instructing him in the matter of salvation. However, God did honor him by opening the door of salvation to him.

My Own Experience

For many years I have noticed that many, classed as “sectarians” by my brethren, have more godly traits than their critics. While in the grip of a sectarian manner of thought, I considered myself to have embraced the true New Testament way. It was not due to any unwavering faith I possessed, or a strong hope or full assurance. I had none of those things. I rested in a church pattern, a proceduralized approach to salvation, and the observance of God-ordained ordinances. The matters in which I rested were not wrong. In fact, they were right, and fully supported by the Word of God.

Yet, I was repeatedly confronted with a most disconcerting circumstance. When my heart was hungry for the things of God, or I yearned for deep spiritual fellowship, I could not find it among my brethren. Their respect for and knowledge of the Word were seriously deficient. The full assurance of faith and a strong hope could hardly be found among them. The good things that were historically proclaimed among the people had nearly passed into oblivion.

I found myself attracted to people who had an obvious love for the truth, yet who lacked a fuller understanding of the Word. They seemed to have a heart for the things of God. They practiced things with which I was not comfortable, yet I was endeared to their spirit. They were more holy than the people with whom I was identified. They seemed more acquainted with the spirit of the Scripture, and were easier to instruct.

For many years this was a source of confusion to me. I felt I was doing wrong in extending the right hand of fellowship to those who were seriously wrong in some of their perceptions. But my heart and conscience would not let me forget the tenderness of their hearts, their love for the truth, and their fervency to serve the Lord. Some of these people opened new vistas of thought to me. Others were sources of great encouragement in the good fight of faith.

Since those struggles associated with my early years in Christ, I have found a great liberty in the belief of the truth. I still am not able to condone error, nor do I want to become able to do so. But I can acknowledge the superiority of an individual who has an appetite for the truth, yet lacks knowledge of it, over a person who spouts pious platitudes about the truth, yet has no yearning for it.

MAN’S PROPENSITY TO TRUST IN EXTERNALS

There is a strong propensity in men to trust in external things. By its very nature “flesh” seeks to ignore “the righteous requirements of the law,” settling only for “an appearance of wisdom” (Col 2:23), or a “form of godliness” (2 Tim 3:5). This was the plight of the church in Laodicea who said, “I am rich, have become wealthy, and have need of nothing.” Yet, in the Divine assessment, that church was “wretched, miserable, poor, blind, and naked” (Rev 3:17). They were not the last church who was not what they appeared to be.

The Word of God warns us about glorying in appearance—religious appearance. We read of those who “boast in appearance and not in heart” (2 Cor 5:12). The Galatians were warned of teachers who “desire to make a fair show in the flesh” (Gal 6:12). Jesus Himself commanded, “Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment” (John 7:24).

When this view of values is brought into the church, great damage is done. If the Jews, who had ordained appearances, were forbidden to glory in them, what may be said of the fabricated appearances concocted by the Gentile church?

The things that commend men to God are not seen as commendable by the world—even the religious world. A single example will suffice. “But in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labours, in watchings, in fastings; by pureness, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true; as unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed; as sorrowful, yet alway rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things” (2 Cor 6:4-10).

That is a vivid description of righteousness, or spiritual life, and how it appears in the world. Let me remind you that righteousness is, in our text, being equated with spiritual life.

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF THE LAW

“Therefore if the uncircumcision keep the righteousness of the law . . . ” More modern translations read “the righteous requirements of the law.”^{NKJV, NASB, NRSV} The idea is that the ordinances of the Law defined righteousness. Those living up to them were, therefore, righteous. It made no difference whether they were Jew or Gentile.

The “righteousness of the law” is consistently contrasted with the righteousness that comes from faith. Again, it is written, “For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them” (Rom 10:6). There is a slight difference in the meanings of Romans 2:26 and 10:5. In the first, “the requirements of the law” are depicted as the means through which men become righteous. In the latter, “righteousness” is the condition pronounced by the law upon the perfectly obedient person.

While the Law was a covenant made with Israel, it was indiscriminating in its offer. If “the man” who did what the Law demanded was not a Jew, the promise still applied to him. If he did not, the condemnation of the law also applied.

The Jews, therefore, had no right to boast in their possession of the Law, or the sign and seal of circumcision. Neither the “words of the covenant” nor the “sign of the covenant” had altered their unrighteous state. They too stood in need of a righteousness from God. It is ever true, “the law is not made for a righteous person, but for the lawless and insubordinate” (1 Tim 1:9). The boastful Jew was oblivious to this because of hardness of heart.

Alas, this is infinitely more than a history lesson! It unveils a human tendency that is to be mortified.

EXTERNAL REQUIREMENTS DO NOT EXCLUDE THE NEED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS

“²⁷ And will not the physically uncircumcised, if he fulfills the law, judge you who, even with your written code and circumcision, are a transgressor of the law?”

With convincing relentlessness, the Holy Spirit continues to drive home to our hearts that external advantages are not spiritual ones. They do not bring the people closer to God, or give them the edge when judged by God. This particular line of reasoning is not suggesting that those with no revelation had actually measured up to Divine requirements. It is a hypothetical argument, looking at the matter as though the Jews were actually right in boasting of their superiority. The outcome of such thinking is devastating.

HYPOTHETICAL REASONING

This kind of reasoning (hypothetical) concedes an assumption for the sake of argument. This form of reasoning tests the validity of a pattern of thought that is actually false. One such case is also found in the parable of the pounds. One recipient took what was given to him, and over which he was an appointed steward, and “put it away in a napkin,” or handkerchief. When confronted by the master, he excused his slothfulness by saying he was afraid of the owner. “For I feared you, because you are an austere man. You collect what you did not deposit, and reap what you did not sow” (Lk 19:21-22). The owner soundly rebuked the man saying, “Out of your own mouth I will judge you, you wicked servant. You knew that I was an austere man, collecting what I did not deposit and reaping what I did not sow. Why then did you not put my money in the bank, that at my coming I might have collected it with interest?” (Lk 19:22-23).

The “wicked servant” sought to justify his slothfulness by appealing to his wicked servant’s assessment of the Master was right, he should have worked harder than the others.

Here is a fulfillment of Christ’s solemn warning. “Do not judge, or you too will be judged. For in the same way you judge others, you will be judged, and with the measure you use, it will be measured to you” (Matt 7:1). In regard to our text, the Spirit is showing that people judged to be inferior by those holding only external benefits may very well be involved in the judgment their critics.

Those not favored with unusual benefits, yet whose faith and works exceeded their peers, will have a part in judging those who had special favors, yet lived no better than others.

totally wrong perception of the master. The master was NOT “austere” or harsh. Neither, indeed, did he reap where he had not sown. In fact, he had sown a “pound” to this very servant. However, judgment was meted out just as though what the man said was the truth, i.e., “Out of your own mouth I will judge you.” If the

Those not favored with unusual benefits, yet whose faith and works exceeded their peers, will have a part in judging those who had special favors, yet lived no better than others. This consideration is worthy of some exploration. The Scriptures do have considerable to say about this condition.

JUDGED BY PEOPLE WITH INFERIOR BENEFITS

There are several instances in Scripture where the subject of our text is confirmed.

Nineveh

Nineveh was an unusually wicked city, yet repented when told destruction was on the way. The message to which these people were exposed was straightforward: “Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown” (Jonah 3:4). There is no record of a summons to repentance, or a single word of hope that was held out. The message delivered to them by the word of the Lord would be considered by some to be a negative one.

The response of the people of Nineveh is one of the great occasions of history. “So the people of Nineveh believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them” (Jonah 3:5). A decree came from the king that was honored by the entire city. “Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste anything; do not let them eat, or drink water. But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily to God; yes, let every one turn from his evil way and from the violence that is in his hands. Who can tell if God will turn and relent, and turn away from His fierce anger, so that we may not perish?” (John 3:7-9). There have been few such occurrences in history, and none so significant as the repentance of Nineveh itself. It was not a Jewish city, and had no resident prophet or law from God.

Of this city, Jesus said, “The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonah is here” (Matt 12:41). They did not have the Law, yet turned from their wicked ways. Thus, as our text proclaims, Jesus declared they would rise up with the generation that heard Jesus, and soundly condemn it. And why so? Because they received less, yet did more! They repented at the declaration of a curse. What will be done to those who have not repented at the hearing of the Gospel of Christ, God’s power unto salvation?

Queen of Sheba

There is another remarkable incident in Scripture that serves to open this text to us. It is that of the Queen of Sheba, from the southern tip of Arabia. It is written, “Now when the queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon concerning the name of the LORD, she came to test him with hard questions”^{NKJV} She came to Jerusalem “with a very great caravan--with camels carrying spices, large quantities of gold, and precious stones--she came to Solomon and talked with him about all that she had on her mind.”^{NIV} She was not disappointed, for “Solomon answered all her questions; there was nothing so difficult for the king that he could not explain it to her.”^{NKJV}

The response of the Queen is one of the most articulate and perceptive

They did not have the Law, yet turned from their wicked ways. Thus, as our text proclaims, Jesus declared they would rise up with the generation that heard Jesus, and soundly condemn it. And why so? Because they received less, yet did more! They repented at the declaration of a curse.

responses ever uttered by a Gentile. “It was a true report which I heard in my own land about your words and your wisdom. However I did not believe the words until I came and saw with my own eyes; and indeed the half was not told me. Your wisdom and prosperity exceed the fame of which I heard. Happy are your men and happy are these your servants, who stand continually before you and hear your wisdom! Blessed be the LORD your God, who delighted in you, setting you on the throne of Israel! Because the LORD has loved Israel forever, therefore He made you king, to do justice and righteousness”^{NKJV} (1 Kgs 10:1-7). A matchless response, indeed!

Jesus spoke of this Queen, who came from a great distance to hear the wisdom of Solomon. Like the men of Nineveh, she also would play a prominent role in the day of judgment. “The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here” (Matt 12:42).

And what is the wisdom of Solomon to compare with that of Christ, “in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” (Col 2:3). She will verily stand up and condemn those blessed with far more than she had, yet who did comparatively nothing with it.

Some Others

There are others worthy of mention, concerning which time allows but a few remarks. Rahab the harlot, Gentile occupant of Jericho, believed the report concerning the Jews and their God, and hid the spies. She was blessed by being spared and found her place in the very genealogy of Jesus (Josh 2:1-2; 6:23-25; Matt 1:5).

Ruth, of the Moabites, who were forbidden to enter into the congregation of the Lord (Deut 23:3), chose the people of God over her own. The result, she became one of the great women of Scripture, was the grandmother of David, and was also in Christ’s genealogy (Ruth 4:13-17; Matt 1:5).

There was also the Syrophenician Woman, a Greek, who besought Jesus to cast a demon out of her daughter. Even though the Lord appeared to ignore her, and even discourage her by saying it was not proper to give the children’s bread to dogs, yet she pressed in for the blessing. “Yes, Lord: yet the dogs under the table eat of the children’s crumbs.” To my knowledge, she is the only one to whom, these words were said. “For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter” (Mark 7:26-29).

There was also a Centurion who besought Jesus to come and heal his dear servant, who was at the point of death. When Jesus said “I will come and heal him,” the centurion’s faith rose up. “Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed. For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it." And what will be the response of our Lord to this Gentile? Here is the only recorded occasion where Jesus marveled at someone's faith. "Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. And I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour" (Matt 8:5-13).

In all of these cases, those with fewer benefits excelled those who had received much more. They proved to be better stewards of the less, that others were of the more. But their excellence was not the end of the matter. As our text says, "And will not he who is physically uncircumcised, if he keeps the Law, will he not judge you who though having the letter of the Law and circumcision are a transgressor of the Law?"^{NASB} Those who have received much, yet done little with it, will face those who did much with less.

Every person needs a righteousness from God. There is no theological persuasion that pushes one beyond this need. There is no Divine ordinance that removes this necessity. From the first to the last of our lives, the righteousness of God is needed. Those who have sensed this, seeking to please the Lord, and yet were ignorant of the Word that so states this need, will judge those who, with Bible in hand, go about to establish their own righteousness.

I cannot emphasize the importance of this text too much. We are living in a day, and among a people, where this is scarcely proclaimed or known.

JUDGE NOT ACCORDING TO APPEARANCE

²⁸ For he is not a Jew who is one outwardly, nor is circumcision that which is outward in the flesh." Here the Spirit comes to grips with the real nature of human identity with God. It is not in the flesh, but in the [human] spirit. He is going to take the ultimate external evidence and show that it is not sufficient proof of Divine acceptance. In Christ, the religion of the flesh has been exchanged for the religion of the spirit.

This text is not saying there are no longer "Jews," or that such an external distinction no longer exists. The absurdity of such a postulate is seen throughout this book. He is speaking to Jews. Paul carried a great burden for these people, his kinsmen according to the flesh (9:1-3). He categorically states God has not cast away His people Israel (11:1). The Spirit affirms there is yet a remnant among them, according to the election of grace (11:5). Only "some of the branches" were broken off, leaving the tree and the root still, in tact (11:17-21). His covenant to take away their sins is still in place (11:26-27). They are still "beloved for the father's (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob) sake (11:28). The prospect of them receiving mercy remains (11:31).

THE OUTWARD JEW

What IS being affirmed here is that God's acceptance of the individual has never been based upon the flesh, or external matters. Faith has ALWAYS been the criterion by which Divine acceptance was realized. Those approved by God were always people of faith (Heb 11:2,6,39). At this point, we must resist the temptation to launch out upon the sea of speculation, seeking to determine who was saved and who was lost under the Old Covenant. That is not the purpose of this text, and it must not be ours.

The point here is that earthly lineage does not equate to spiritual lineage. Even though men could trace their roots back to Abraham himself, that did not make them true children of Abraham.

In the Divine economy, there was a race within a race—true Jews within the Jewish people. This will be developed at length in the eleventh chapter. The point here is that earthly lineage does not equate to spiritual lineage. Even though men could trace their roots back to Abraham himself, that did not make them true children of Abraham. Appearance is not the vehicle of Divine intent. It is too small to contain heavenly abundance.

The Example of Ishmael

Take the example of Ishmael. Abraham was his father, and he was circumcised (Gen 17:23). Yet, he was not a child of promise, or a true Jew. It is written, "Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise. But as then he that was born after the flesh (Ishmael) persecuted him that was born after the Spirit (Isaac), even so it is now. Nevertheless what saith the scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman. So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free" (Gal 4:28-31). The promise of God came through Isaac, not Ishmael, though both were offsprings of Abraham (Gen 21:12; Rom 9:7; Heb 11:18).

The Example of Esau

Here is a case even more pronounced than that of Ishmael. Ishmael did have a different mother than Isaac, although they had the same father. But notice the case with Esau. He and his brother were twins, with the same mother and the same father. Both could trace their family roots back to Abraham, but both were not true children of Abraham, or real Jews. As it is written, "And not only this; but when Rebecca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac; (For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth;) It was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger. As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated" (Rom 9:10-13). In this case, Jacob was a Jew within the Jews, and Esau was not.

Remember, the ONLY nation God has ever recognized as a whole is the one He created. Yet, even within that nation, only those who believed were His.

The real Jew is the one whose inner man is in fellowship with God, who is living by faith and walking in the Spirit. It is the person who is in Christ, who sprang from that nation, yet became the progenitor of a new race.

CIRCUMCISION IN THE FLESH

As Valuable as circumcision in the flesh may appear, it is no longer the mark of distinction with God. It was a type of real circumcision, but was not itself the

When the Spirit declares the ultimate fleshly people, and the ultimate external mark, did not make people accepted with God, He denounces all fleshly distinctions.

Satan has been aggressive to distort the understanding of men on this point. It further appears that he has been unusually successful in his efforts. Countless professing Christians trust in their religious heritage just as the Jews trusted in theirs. From Catholic to Protestant men boast of their religious roots, thinking that is what makes them acceptable to God. They hold to the correct doctrines like Ephesus, but they are not holding to the Lord of glory by faith. This is not to be construed to mean that doctrine is inconsequential, or that no good things can be found in religious heritage. It IS to be understood, however, that our faith and confidence are not to be placed in these things. Such misplaced trust will cost men their souls.

When the Spirit declares the ultimate fleshly people, and the ultimate external mark, did not make people accepted with God, He denounces all fleshly distinctions.

real circumcision. It belonged to the order of flesh and blood, which cannot enter into the kingdom of God (1 Cor 15:50). The flesh is the weakest part of our constitution, and therefore cannot be the place of spiritual identity. As one has said, "The true mark of distinction is not in the weak body, soon to be laid in the grave."^{Joseph Beet}

WHY IS THIS POINT MADE

The Spirit is making this point because of the proneness of men to trust in the flesh and external manifestations. This tendency did not end with the Jews, but continues in the Gentile church. The Spirit does not take up every instance or possibility of men trusting in the flesh, but goes to the ultimate fleshly distinction—the Jewish people and the sign of circumcision. Just as the Law was the ultimate moral code, so Jewish distinctions were the ultimate in fleshly glory. They stand for all glory in flesh.

Still others find their confidence in experiences in the flesh. These cover such things as viewing baptism as a mere outward sign, with no regard to its accompanying inner birth. Again, the sophist will see this as a denigration of baptism—but this is not at all the case. The value of our baptism is directly related to our faith. It is, after all, the one who "believes and is baptized" that will be saved (Mk 16:16).

An additional corruption of faith is found in those who place great confidence in evidences that accompany the reception of the Holy Spirit. They equate external evidences with the Spirit Himself, imagining they could never be fabricated or falsified. They trust in them, and vaunt them above faith and even Christ Himself. This is not to be taken as a rejection of all external evidences. Rather, our faith is not to lie in such things. If the ultimate sign in the flesh, circumcision, did not prove a person was of God, you may rest assured no fleshly sensation or experience can do so.

THE FLESH IS NOT THE REALM OF CONFIRMATION

The flesh, because of its rejection by God, is not, and cannot be, the area of Divine confirmation. If flesh and blood cannot enter the Kingdom of God, and He has rejected all fleshly distinctions, how is it that men imagine great spiritual confirmations are made in the flesh? If "they that are in the flesh cannot please God" (Rom 8:8), why would God place the sign of Divine acceptance there? Would that not pull people back into the flesh from which grace delivered them?

Jesus said, "The flesh profits nothing" (John 6:63). But this is not true if that is the place where Divine acceptance is confirmed. Paul confessed, "I know that in me, that is in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing" (Rom 7:18). Again, this could not be true if the superior blessings of God were realized in and confirmed by fleshly experiences.

I am careful to say that this is not a diatribe against all experiences in the body. That such things do exist, and that many of them are legitimate, cannot be denied. But they are NOT what makes us the children of God, nor are the proof that we are the sons of God. They are tangential, and are not to be placed in the same category as faith. Experience are the tributary, not the river.

Men tend to treat experiences in extreme manners. Either they make them primary, or assign no value to them at all. Both approaches are wrong. It is never right to exalt something that occurs in the body. Neither, indeed, is it appropriate to lead people to believe there are no outward benefits in salvation.

The Gospel helps us to place the exclamation point after the promises, and receive the benefits with which God loads us "daily" (Psa 68:19). However, grace will not allow us to trust in the benefits, or rely upon them to identify our acceptance with God. Honest hearts know such things can be removed from us. They are not guaranteed to us during our brief tenure in this world.

REAL IDENTITY

Here is one of the most definitive texts of scripture. It lays the axe to the root of the tree of flesh, and unveils the true nature of life in Christ. Remember, this is a delineation of the need for, and characteristics of, the righteousness of God. It is a view of salvation, being in Christ, or being born again. This text will confirm that the essential change made in men is within. The character is changed, motives transformed, and everything becomes new. This is a view of the “new creation” (2 Cor 5:17).

The distinction that is now proclaimed is not found in nature, or the natural state of men. It cannot be traced back to Adam, or a state experienced in natural birth. The Spirit has already confirmed that both Jew and Gentile stand in need of a righteousness from God. Neither of them are righteous by nature, and both are sinners by choice.

It is axiomatic that inward change can only be initiated by God. Under the old covenant, the Lord issues a challenge. The purpose of this challenge was to confirm men can only be changed by God. “Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no more stiffnecked . . . Circumcise yourselves to the LORD, and take away the foreskins of your heart, ye men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem . . . O Jerusalem, wash thine heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved . . . Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel?” (Deut 10:16; Jer 4:4,14; Ezek 18:31). How succinctly God stated the case through Jeremiah. “Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the leopard its spots? Then may you also do good who are accustomed to do evil” (Jer 13:23).

Men may philosophize about the freedom of the human will, and the inherent ability of men to better themselves. Such thoughts are all vain and pointless. If man was able to extricate himself from sin and create a new heart for himself, there would have been no need for Christ Jesus.

God placed man in His creation, and endowed him with His own nature. The creation continually testifies of the eternal power and Divinity of God. Man’s conscience prodded him, excusing and accusing him. A precise and holy law was given to him, defining sin, and providing remarkable incentives to be holy. But sin dominated the race anyway, and did so consistently and without a solitary exception, saving for the Lord Jesus Christ Himself. Moral and essential change must come from God, or it will not come.

It is axiomatic that inward change can only be initiated by God. Under the old covenant, the Lord issues a challenge. The purpose of this challenge was to confirm men can only be changed by God.

This principle is stated in Scripture. “Except the LORD build the house, they labor in vain that build it: except the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain” (Psa 127:1). The new birth is totally the work of the Lord. We are “begotten” by God (1 Pet 1:3; James 1:18). The birth is accomplished “not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God” (John 1:13). This does not mean men are not involved, but it is not in a causative or initiatory way. Their role is ancillary, not central.

Man can only change the outer man, and even then, he is severely limited. “Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?” (Matt 6:27). There is a challenger for the “worker.”

INWARD IDENTITY

True identity is found within, not in the flesh, bloodline, or lineage. For this reason, God does not look upon the appearance, but “on the heart” (1 Sam 16:7). He alone “knows the hearts of all the children of men” (1 Kgs 8:39). When the Jews affirmed “We are Abraham’s descendants,” Jesus acknowledged they were that in the flesh. “I know that you are Abraham’s descendants.” Yet, when they rejoined “Abraham is our faith,” Jesus replied, “If you were Abraham’s children, you would do the works of Abraham. But now you seek to kill Me, a Man who has told you the truth which I heard from God. Abraham did not do this”^{NASB} (John 8:33-40). They were NOT Jews inwardly.

When the Scriptures say “inwardly,” they speak of the spiritual part of man, where the Divine imagery is found. This is the “hidden man of the heart” (1 Pet 3:4), or the “inward parts” (Psa 51:6; Jer 31:33). If the individual is not identified with the Lord in that section, there is no saving identity at all.

To put it another way, if men are estranged from God in their thoughts, they are altogether estranged from Him. Even though they may honor Him with their “lips,” if their heart is “far from Him,” all of their worship is vain, and their religion pointless. When Jesus walked among men, He said of that generation, “This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men” (Matt 15:8-9). They were not Jews inwardly.

Why Does He Use the Word “Jew?”

Why does the Spirit refer to a true “Jew?” why not a Christian? That would seem more appropriate to many, some of which hold disdain for the word “Jew.” It is because He is contrasting appearance with reality, and the Jew is the only fleshly appearance God has ever honored. No other fleshly lineage as ever been held forth as superior. Even a physical people chosen and ordained by God hold no eternal advantage if they are not inwardly the people of God.

God's View Is the Only View

This is the Lord's assessment of the situation, and no other view is valid. It makes little difference how illustrious the historical heritage may be, if the individual is not reconciled to God and being conformed to the image of His Son, all claims to godliness are only pretentious.

The religious climate of our day should confirm to your heart what a serious matter is being unveiled in this text. It is exceedingly difficult to find a people possessing a preference for God and a living hope. Sectarian walls have been erected that have obscured the "Sun of righteousness" (Mal 4:2), constraining people to trust in their denominational names and doctrines like the Israelites did in the name "Jew," and in their possession of the Law of God.

But if God will not allow men to trust in a distinction He made, you may be sure He will condemn trust in distinctions He has not made.

Our association with God is "inwardly." Our thoughts, meditations, preferences, hates, and loves are the context in which Divine fellowship is realized. When God is not "in all their thoughts," it is because men are wicked, walk in pride, and seek not after God (Psa 10:4). Men are "alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them" (Eph 4:18).

Many of us have lamented over the lack of spiritual appetite in our generation. Churches are known for their concessions to the flesh. While the business, entertainment, and athletic world's increase their demands upon the time of people, the church is reducing its demands. Brevity and shallowness are in vogue more than ever, and entertainment and sundry distractions have filled the church-calendars. Vast bodies of people are quite content to spend less time hearing the Word of God than they in eating breakfast or lunch.

Is it all innocent, and no matter of concern? Indeed, it is not. It evidences that we are living in a time when the church will accept people who are not Jews "inwardly." However, God does not accept such people as His, and the time they spend in simulated worship is vain and pointless. Unless they acquire a spiritual appetite, there is not a shred of hope held out to them in the Word of God.

A CHANGE OF HEART

"... and circumcision is that of the heart..." The heart is the inmost part of man, just as the body is the outmost part. It is here, in the heart, where the essential change must be made. The prophets spoke of a time when men would receive a "new heart." "A new heart also will I give you... and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh" (Ezek 36:26). This is something for which David longed, yet it was not available for his generation. "Create in me a clean heart, O God" (Psa 51:10). A "clean heart" is a "new heart"—a special creation of God. Like other saints prior to the enthronement of Jesus, David was "not made perfect without us" (Heb 11:40).

The heart is the inmost part of man, just as the body is the outmost part. It is here, in the heart, where the essential change must be made.

The Stony Heart Removed

Note, there is a two fold action fulfilled in this promise. First, the stony heart is removed, and second a heart of flesh is given. Thus, obstinance and rebellion are removed, and submission and sensitivity are granted in their place. The removal of the stony heart commences when the Lord opens the heart so men can give heed, or respond, to the Word of God (Acts 16:14).

Where stony hearts remain, a most serious condition exists. Its presence negates any profession of identity with Christ. While we must take care not to be quick to judge men in this matter, we must not allow ourselves to excuse hard hearts that will not yield to the word of the Lord. Again, unless that condition is corrected, there is no hope for the person.

Dominated by Sin

The picture presented here is that of a heart that has been overgrown with sin. That mass of sin is called "the body of the sins of the flesh," or "the body of the flesh" (Col 2:11). It is a condition that renders the heart insensitive and calloused to God. Stephen described the state as being "uncircumcised in heart and ears" (Acts 7:51). Speaking through Moses, God charged that generation with having "uncircumcised hearts" (Lev 26:41). Jeremiah spoke of those who were "circumcised with the uncircumcised" (Jer 9:25). That is, although they were circumcised in the flesh, their hearts remained unchanged. Ezekiel spoke of those who were "uncircumcised in heart and uncircumcised in flesh" (Ezek 44:7,9).

This is a state that finds the individual dominated by sin. It is the ONLY alternative to being received in Christ Jesus. Without this circumcision of heart, profession counts for nothing, works are but filthy rags to be discarded, and the individual is an enemy of God. It is when the sinful nature rules the whole person, shutting out the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, and riveting the person hopelessly to a condemned world. It is appropriately described as being "being dead in your trespasses and the uncircumcision of your flesh," or sinful nature^{NIV} (Col 2:13).

Let there be no ambiguity on this matter, as though there were any hope at all for the person enslaved to sin and dominated by the flesh. Before coming into Christ, we were "the servants of sin" (Rom 6:16). Also, in that state, we possessed no righteousness at all, much less the righteousness of God. As it is written, “For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness” (Rom 6:20). Men live in sin because they are enslaved to it. As Jesus said, “Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin” (John 8:34).

In order to be saved, or receive a righteousness from God, the flesh must be cut away from the heart. This brings sensitivity to God and a love for the truth, which is the secret to overcoming sin. This procedure is what constitutes a “new heart.” It is a Divine operation in which the “flesh,” or sinful nature, is separated from our essential persons.

Performed by Christ

This marvelous work is accomplished by Jesus Christ, and is associated with our baptism into Him. It is called “the circumcision of Christ.” Baptism itself is not the circumcision, but the occasion during which it is performed. Colossians 2:11-12 declares this truth with great beauty and power. “In Him you were also circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, by putting off the body of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ, buried with Him in baptism, in which you also were raised with Him through faith in the working (operation^{KJV}) of God, who raised Him from the dead.”

In separating “the body of the sins of the flesh,” Christ removes its power and dominion over us. This results in the remission of sins, or the removal of personal guilt. It also clarifies our vision of, and sensitivity to, the Lord, produces a great love for His Word, and brings righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit (Rom 14:17).

In this circumcision, the mass of sin, or the principle of sin, is not obliterated, but separated from the part of us that is born again. The sixth chapter of Romans states it this way. “For if we have been united together in the likeness of His death, certainly we also shall be in the likeness of His resurrection, knowing this, that the body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves of sin. For he who has died has been freed from sin” (Rom 6:5-7).

Let me emphasize that “done away with,” or “destroyed,”^{KJV} does not mean the principle of sin is no longer existent, but that it is no longer part of our real persons. That is why we are exhorted, “Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof” (Rom 6:12). It has been cut away from us, yet remains in our earthen vessels. The seventh chapter of Romans will deal with the fierce war between the new heart and the circumcised flesh.

The new heart has a love for the truth and a hatred for sin. It longs for the courts of the Lord, and admits to being a stranger in the world. Unless these conditions exist, the person has not been born again, and is under the control of sin. In saying this, I do not mean to oversimplify the situation. There are numbers of God’s people who, because of faulty teaching, are not aware of the circumcision of the heart, or a new heart. They therefore interpret their struggle with sin as evidence they are not of God. However, when this truth is taught in power, those whom God has received in Christ will recognize the truth of the matter. They will see that their longing for purity and discontent with failures are evidence of a new heart. They are Jews indeed, and have received “the circumcision of Christ.”

A CHANGE OF SPIRIT

“... and circumcision is ... in the spirit, and not in the letter ...” The expression “in the spirit” is both objective and subjective. Subjectively, or from the standpoint of experience, it refers to the human spirit, or the expressive of man. Objectively, or from the view of its Source, it is the Holy Spirit who actually accomplishes the change. This is involved in being “born of the Spirit,” as Jesus said, “... that which is born of the Spirit is spirit ... so is every one that is born of the Spirit” (John 3:6,8).

Those circumcised in their spirit have a new disposition. It is described in second Corinthians in this way. “Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new” (5:17). In this marvelous new creation the objective of God is realized. “But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him. God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth” (John 4:23-24).

Those with new hearts and spirits worship God out of a sense of preference, and not because of the demands of the Law. Thus those in Christ are described in this manner. “For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh” (Phil 3:3). Because of the atoning death of our Lord Jesus, God is able to fulfill His promise, “I will put a new spirit within you ... a new spirit will I put within you” (Ezek 11:19; 36:26).

Not In The Letter

“... and circumcision is that which is of the heart, by the Spirit, not by the letter.”^{NASB} The “letter” is the written Word without a corresponding writing in the heart. It involves directing basically wayward people with rules and regulations. Until the Word of God is found within the heart of man, it remains in the “letter,” and is powerless for the individual.

A religion of the “letter” not only does not contribute to spiritual life, it actually kills those attempting to serve God in that manner. The Old Covenant was a word of the letter, alienating its constituents from God because they had no heart for the law. In a marvelous explanation of this circumstance, the Spirit says, “. . . who also made us sufficient as ministers of the new covenant, not of the letter but of the Spirit; for the letter kills, but the Spirit gives life. But if the ministry of death, written and engraved on stones, was glorious . . . For if the ministry of condemnation had glory, the ministry of righteousness exceeds much more in glory” (2 Cor 3:6-9).

When a good and holy Law comes from God, it condemns all whose nature is in conflict with that Law. Thus it becomes a letter that kills, a ministry of death, and a ministry of condemnation. The Law does not permit a person to try and be better, for all such efforts are vain. The heart and spirit of fallen men are so corrupt they cannot be salvaged. A new heart and a new spirit must be given. In Christ Jesus, praise the Lord, that is precisely what takes place.

This is an aspect of spiritual life that is not commonly known. The ignorance of this fact has spawned all sorts of erroneous doctrines and views. Legion is the name of those imagining their fundamental disagreement with God will be overlooked by Him. It will not. That is why He has provided such a full and glorious salvation. Because it was necessary for Him to remain just, as well as be the Justifier of the believer, He had to provide a way that would allow “the gift of righteousness” (Rom 5:17) to be given to men. Upon the basis of Christ’s vicarious offering, God could remove the heart of stone and grant a malleable heart of flesh to those believing on His Son. He could justly give them a new heart and a new spirit, thereby making their nature harmonious with His own. What a marvelous transaction!

THE NATURE OF THE NEW COVENANT

We cannot fail to mention the nature of the New Covenant, and how significantly it differs from the Old one. In the New Covenant, truth is internalized, becoming a part of the believer himself. The Spirit refers to this process in Jeremiah, and confirms it to be the covenant now being administered by Jesus in the book of Hebrews. “I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts . . . I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts . . . I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them” (Jer 31:33; Heb 8:10; 10:16).

Try as you may, you cannot trace these incredible accomplishments to men. They are a Divine work, and are therefore effective to accomplish His purpose. Faith enables us to be the recipient of this grand work, but the doing of it belongs to the Lord. As it is written, “Therefore lay aside all filthiness and overflow of wickedness, and receive with meekness the implanted word, which is able to save your souls”^{NKJV} (James 1:21). Let it be clear that the Word of God is not able to save the soul as long as it is not engrafted, or implanted in the inward man. But when it is joined to the human spirit, it obtains such a Divine power as is necessary to be loosed from the dominion of sin, and receive the righteousness of God by faith.

When a good and holy Law comes from God, it condemns all whose nature is in conflict with that Law. Thus it becomes a letter that kills, a ministry of death, and a ministry of condemnation. The Law does not permit a person to try and be better, for all such efforts are vain.

PRAISE FROM GOD

“ . . . whose praise is not from men but from God.” The word “whose” refers to the true Jew, whose heart and spirit have been circumcised by the Lord. Such will receive “praise from God.” God will honor those who have availed themselves of His grace, believed the record He has given of His Son, and received His righteousness.

Here again is a facet of redemptive truth that is not commonly known—at least not to any measurable degree. Religion that is nothing more than a “form of godliness” that “denies the power thereof” (2 Tim 3:5), knows nothing of receiving praise from God. It rather covets the praise of men, and is willing to make significant concessions to get it. If anyone is tempted to think in this manner, it is good to remember this word from the Apostle Paul. “For if I still pleased men, I would not be a bondservant of Christ”^{NKJV} (Gal 1:10).

Honor from God

Those who seek honor from men cannot believe in Christ. Such a quest depletes the soul, blinds the eyes, and hardens the heart. That is why Jesus said, “How can you believe, who receive honor from one another, and do not seek the honor that comes from the only God?” (John 5:44). In sharp contrast with those benighted souls, Jesus said of Himself, “I do not receive honor from men” (John 5:41). That was not His objective, and He did not alter a single word or work in order to receive such passing admiration. However, what will be the portion of those who fervently sought for the honor only God can give? How will they appear in the great day of judgment. There is no need for conjecture on this matter. The Lord has spoken. “To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life” (Rom 2:7).

Loving the Praise of Men

While Jesus walked among us, His presence was so powerful “many” of the “chief rulers” believed on Him. Notwithstanding, they had too high of a regard for the religious dignities of their day, and therefore did not confess Christ publicly. The comment of the Spirit on this occasion is arresting. It interprets similar incidents that arise in our day, when people are exposed to more truth than they are willing to admit. “. . . among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue; for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God” (John 12:42-43).

To be sure, those Pharisees will be held accountable for hindering others. As Jesus said to them, “for you neither go in yourselves, nor do you allow those who are entering to go in”^{2NKJV} (Matt 23:13). But those who chose to be applauded by men rather than God will not be excused either. In my judgment, there is too much of this “spirit of fear” in the churches.

The Father Will Honor Those Who Serve Jesus

Jesus promised that those who served Him would be honored by the Father Himself. Herein is a glorious promise, and it needs to be heard

God as an incentive for endurance and faithfulness. He knows that the opposition and unappreciation of men tend to wear upon the soul, causing discouragement. Further, Satan uses such occasions to tempt us to compromise, quit, or even deny the Lord. For this reason, a strong exhortation is issued to all who are laboring in the vineyard of the Lord. “Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord comes, who will both bring to light the hidden things of darkness and reveal the counsels of the hearts. Then each one’s praise will come from God”^{2NKJV} (1 Cor 4:5).

Lord as He cries out to that nation, “You only have I known of all the families of the earth” (Amos 3:2). They were “a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth” (Deut 7:6). Yet, that status could not effect a change within them.

Of those very people it is written, “Therefore the wrath of the LORD was kindled against His people, So that He abhorred His own inheritance. And He gave them into the hand of the Gentiles, And those who hated them ruled over them. Their enemies also oppressed them, And they were brought into subjection under their hand. Many times He delivered them; But they rebelled in their counsel, And were brought low for their iniquity” (Psa 106:40-43).

Thus all needs are met in the “new creation.” The needs of men are addressed, as well as those of God. Men needed a new nature so they could please the Lord. God needed man to be new so He could bless him.

Righteousness could not be brought to men by external benefits, special fleshly status, and a unique covenantal “sign” in the flesh. If flesh could ever offer an advantage, it would have done so for those people. But it did not! “The flesh profiteth nothing,” even when blessed, pampered, and exalted above other flesh.

frequently by those fighting the good fight of faith. “If anyone serves Me, him My Father will honor” (John 12:26). How the hearts of those in Christ yearn for the “Well done” of their Father! And it will surely come to pass.

ALL NEEDS ARE MET IN THE NEW CREATION

Thus all needs are met in the “new creation.” The needs of men are addressed, as well as those of God. Men needed a new nature so they could please the Lord. God needed man to be new so He could bless him. The blessing could NOT come through Adam. It had to come through Christ and a new creation.

Let it stand as it is written: “For with the heart one believes unto righteousness” (Rom 10:10). And why is this so? Because Jesus has satisfied God in His death, and is pleasing Him in His intercession (Isa 53:11-12). He has made it right and holy for God to confer His own righteousness upon the person who believes the record God has given of His Son (1 John 5:10-11). Indeed, we do have “so great salvation” (Heb 2:3). See to it that you do not “neglect it,” or be pulled into the broken cistern of trusting in the flesh. “Have faith in God!” (Mark 11:22). Make it your aim to appropriate the righteousness of God, and to do so at any cost! You will not regret it.

If it were not important for us to know of the praise of God, Jesus would not have spoken so clearly of it. He Himself was motivated by the joy held out to Him, the extent of which we are incapable of knowing. As it is written, “who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God” (Heb 12:2).

Hold Out for the Praise of God

The Spirit holds out the praise of

None of these needs could be met by the Law, or any other external means. Even when God chose a people, blessed them with unparalleled benefits, and provided them with marvelous incentives, yet they remained obstinate and disobedient. Never before nor since that ancient nation has there been a fleshly people so blessed of the Lord. Hear the

CONCLUSION

The passage we have considered is a foundational one. It introduces us to the nature of man, God, and the salvation He has provided. It has confirmed that there are no external advantages that can make men righteous—even God-conferred ones. Further, fleshly distinctions cannot compensate for the lack of God’s righteousness. The apex of such notabilities was found in Israel, and still they remained fundamentally sinful and in need of a righteousness from God.

There is another thing to be seen here that is of special significance. Abraham, the father of those who believe (Rom :1,12; James 2:21), was the “friend of God” (James 2:23). He towered above others, and remains a giant among men until this day. Yet, he could not pass righteousness to his posterity. Although a whole nation was blessed because of him, yet that very nation still stood in need of a Savior, and a righteousness from God.

If this is the case with Abraham, whom God identified as “the father of us all,” what can be said of the “church fathers,” or “restoration fathers,” or some other cluster of godly men? How is it that anyone would think their religious heritage made them acceptable before God, or gave them the edge over other peoples? The same may be said of religious movements, of groups of churches claiming some sort of uniqueness before God.

I come from a background that placed a significant emphasis on recent religious history, and particular movements that had embraced some facet or facets of the truth. In such an environment, little, if any, emphasis was ever placed on a righteousness from God. Correct procedures, patterns, and external observance seemed to lull people into spiritual sleep. It is not that the people were particularly sinful. Many of them were commendable in many ways.

However, it is the nature of an outward emphasis to produce a spiritually lethargic people. It did in Israel, and it still does.

There is no advantage in precision—God-ordained precision—if men are still at variance with God in their hearts. If men do not have the righteousness of God, revealed through the Gospel, it makes no difference what else they may have.

There looms on the horizon of time a coming day, when the secrets of men will be judged by Jesus Christ (Rom 2:16). At that time, we will see clearly that those who sought first the kingdom of God AND HIS RIGHTEOUSNESS will have the advantage over all others. There will be people whose candlestick was removed, even though they held to all of the right doctrines, and opposed the ones that were wrong (Rev 2:4). There will also be those who have done “many wonderful works,” prophesying in Christ’s name, and even casting out demons. Yet, Jesus will say to them that He “never knew” them, commanding them to depart from His presence (Matt 7:22).

It is imperative that professed believers take seriously the appropriation of the “righteousness of God.” This is not something that is achieved automatically. It comes “by faith” – it is a righteousness “which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is from God by faith” (Phil 3:9). The believer must fight to maintain his faith (1 Tim 6:12). Faith must be nourished, fed, and bolstered by the Word of God (1 Tim 4:6; Jude 20; Col 2:7). If this is not done, righteousness will not stay with us. That is precisely why the Galatians were warned, “You have become estranged from Christ, you who attempt to be justified by law; you have fallen from grace. For we through the Spirit eagerly wait for the hope of righteousness by faith” (Gal 5:4-5). That price is too great to pay!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 8

GOD'S JUDGMENT IS JUST

^{3:1} What advantage then has the Jew, or what is the profit of circumcision? ² Much in every way! Chiefly because to them were committed the oracles of God. ³ For what if some did not believe? Will their unbelief make the faithfulness of God without effect? ⁴ Certainly not! Indeed, let God be true but every man a liar. As it is written: "That You may be justified in Your words, And may overcome when You are judged." ⁵ But if our unrighteousness demonstrates the righteousness of God, what shall we say? Is God unjust who inflicts wrath? (I speak as a man.) ⁶ Certainly not! For then how will God judge the world? ⁷ For if the truth of God has increased through my lie to His glory, why am I also still judged as a sinner? ⁸ And why not say, "Let us do evil that good may come"?; as we are slanderously reported and as some affirm that we say. Their condemnation is just.

INTRODUCTION

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. IS THEIR JEWISH ADVANTAGE? (3:1-2)
- II. SOME DID NOT BELIEVE (3:3)
- III. LET GOD BE TRUE (3:4)
- IV. OUR UNRIGHTEOUSNESS DEMONSTRATES GOD'S RIGHTEOUSNESS (3:5-6)
- V. TRUTH INCREASED THROUGH A LIE (3:7)
- VI. A FALSE CHARGE (3:8)

The Kingdom of God is characterized by unique thought patterns. They are not after the manner of this world, and even appear foolish in the eyes of men. God has made a comparison between His thoughts and ways and those of men—men in their best fleshly state. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. For My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways, saith the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts" (Isa 55:7-9). This is a universal indictment.

The "unrighteous man" is anyone without the righteousness of God. With great power, the Spirit is convincing us that no offspring of Adam possesses that righteousness by nature. Nor, indeed, have any of them achieved that righteousness through their own efforts. There are no exceptions to this. The ONLY Man who has ever lived to whom, righteousness was NOT imputed, was the Lord Jesus Christ – and He was NOT a son of Adam, but the "Seed" of the woman (Gen 3:15; Gal 4:4). To every other person judged to be righteous, that righteousness was a "gift," not an achievement. It came from God, not from human effort.

In order to comprehend the things of God, there must be an abandonment of the "natural" way of thinking. The things of God simply cannot be comprehended on that level. As it is written, "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (1 Cor 2:14). That is why the apostles spoke in spiritual words, expressing spiritual thoughts in words employed by the Holy Spirit. "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned"^{NASB} (1 Cor 2:13).

The passage before us employs this Kingdom method in an obvious way. The passage makes no sense whatsoever to the natural mind, and thus is corrupted by many. It is too high for any one who is not in Christ Jesus.

Here we find a form of spiritual reasoning that is most powerful. He is going to show us that no human conduct can alter the Person of God. God will not become unrighteous because man is unrighteous. Nor, indeed, is He righteous because of man's response to Him. He is always just and righteous in His judgments. Man, regardless of his activity, only accentuates God's righteousness.

Ponder the questions that will be addressed in this passage. They will be answered in the wisdom of God.

- ▶ What advantage has the Jew?
- ▶ What is the profit of circumcision?

- ▶ What if some did not believe?
- ▶ Will their unbelief make the faithfulness of God without effect?
- ▶ If our unrighteousness demonstrates the righteousness of God, what shall we say?
- ▶ Is God unjust, who inflicts wrath?
- ▶ If the truth of God has increased through my lie to his glory, why am I also still judged as a sinner?
- ▶ Why not say, "Let us do evil, that good may come?"

To actually deal with these interrogations is strange to the flesh, or "the natural man." However, they introduce a form of spiritual reasoning that is essential to a valid understanding. These questions are all provoked what the Lord affirms, and are answered upon that basis of that affirmation.

Circumstance is not the proper environment for godly deliberation. We must guard against such imaginations.

These questions are based upon certain realities: (1) The Jew, (2) circumcision, (3) some did not believe, (4) the faithfulness of God, (5) our unrighteousness, (6) the righteousness of God, (7) God inflicts wrath, (8) the truth of God increases. None of these can be changed by mere human activity. They are all conditions we must confront. All of them are very real, and are not mere hypotheses, or human suppositions.

In this section the Spirit answers the objections that will be raised to what has been said to this point. These are objections presented from a Jewish point of view. In answering them, however, the Spirit not only speaks to Jews, but to all. He will confirm that God is absolutely righteous in all of His judgments. All who disagree with Him are, by virtue of their disagreement, unrighteous.

IS THERE A JEWISH ADVANTAGE?

3:1 What advantage then has the Jew, or what is the profit of circumcision? 2 Much in every way! Chiefly because to them were committed the oracles of God. The NIV reads, "What advantage, then, is there in being a Jew, or what value is there in circumcision?"

Here we come into sharp conflict with circumcision both came from the Lord. They were Divine distinctions among men, originated by the Lord of glory. What thoughtful person is willing to affirm there is no advantage to being chosen by God and granted a sign of His covenant in their flesh?

Our thinking must be brought into accord with the Lord, else the Scripture will yield no benefit to us. When man's

He does not ask what advantage the rich man has, for riches give man no advantage. Neither is the wisdom of men the point from which godly reasoning proceeds. Do not miss the power of this reasoning! The Spirit does not ask us if kings of the earth have an advantage, or those who are expert in some field of earthly endeavor. He asks what advantage the Jew has, for Jews alone can trace their national origin to the Living God.

With great care, the Spirit approaches this subject. He does not ask what advantage the philosopher has, for God has repudiated the philosophies of men. He does not ask what advantage the rich man has, for riches give man no advantage. Neither is the wisdom of men the point from which godly reasoning proceeds.

And when it comes to something men have done, the question is "What is the profit of circumcision?" He does not ask about the profit of earthly organizations, expert business acumen, or other areas of human accomplishment. All of man's righteousness, or very best achievements, are as filthy rags before God (Isa 64:6). The question is "What is the profit of circumcision?"—an ordinance of God.

much of the theology of our time. Many with whom I have had contact would not answer this interrogation as the Spirit does. They would emphatically declare that there was no advantage to being a Jew, or having the seal of circumcision. But they are wrong—seriously wrong. In their position they have maligned God, who chose and led the Jews, giving them the Law and the prophets as well. The distinction of being a Jew, and the uniqueness of the sign and seal of theology does not allow the hearty embrace of the expressions of Scripture, it is to be discarded as chaff. It is not true, and hence is not profitable, but detrimental to our faith.

THE HIGHEST FLESHLY ADVANTAGE

With great care, the Spirit approaches this subject. He does not ask what advantage the philosopher has, for God has repudiated the philosophies of men.

Particularly for the Jew, the Lord is now going to confirm they are inexcusable before God. They had no righteousness of their own—even when given remarkable advantages. If there is any question about the impotence of the "natural man," the Spirit will now lay the axe to the tree of human reasoning. He is going to prove flesh did not improve itself, even when given advantages from God. Men may argue about whether it was possible for them to become righteous or not, but the fact is no one did.

“MUCH EVERY WAY”

Nearly every major translation reads the same way (a rare phenomenon of itself): “Much every way,” or “Much in every way” (KJV, NKJV, RSV, NRSV, NIV). The NASB reads, “Great in every respect.” “Much every way” means, however you look at it, there ARE advantages to being a Jew and being circumcised. Robertson says of this verse, “So it means the overplus of the Jew is much from every angle.” Word Studies

The facts that “all have sinned,” and that “there is none righteous” do not mean no one has had an advantage, or received special favors. Rather, sin had taken such a toll upon the human spirit, that no amount of fleshly benefit could correct the situation. It is essential that this is perceived to some degree, else the necessity of sending Christ into the world will not be perceived or appreciated.

This is precisely why Jesus is NOT preached in much contemporary religion. It is because the need for Him is not perceived. Men continue to cling to the notion that some goodness remains in fallen man. They overestimate the strength and freedom of the human will, and thus relegate Christ into the background. This is a sin of the greatest magnitude.

THE JEW’S CHIEF ADVANTAGE

No matter how you look at the subject, the Jew’s had the advantage over all others. However, there was a “chief” advantage that towered over all of the others. “Chiefly because to them were committed the oracles of God.”

The Oracles

The word “oracles” means the sayings, message, or utterances of God. The word also carries the connotation of brevity, in the sense of being introductory. These beginning communications from God included everything from the words uttered at Mount Sinai to the promises of a coming Savior. The literal meaning of the word is “Divine communications.” A paraphrase of this verse could read, “Chiefly because to them were committed the very words of God.” That is the idea being communicated.

Notice, the Spirit does not say “Scriptures,” although that is, in fact, how the Word of God was given to them. He does not view the Word from an academic viewpoint, i.e., writing, but from the standpoint of its origin. Keep in mind that the Jews had been in possession of God’s Word for over 1,500 years. It had been copied hundreds, perhaps thousands, of times, and translated into other languages. Yet, the Spirit refers to “the oracles of God,” just as though that Word had been freshly spoken.

This is precisely how the Scriptures

This is precisely how the Scriptures are to be viewed. They are not to be regarded as the writings of mere men, or copies of the original, or a book that has been handed down through the generations. When we limit our view of Scripture to being the writings of men, we dull the edge of the Spirit’s sword.

are to be viewed. They are not to be regarded as the writings of mere men, or copies of the original, or a book that has been handed down through the generations. When we limit our view of Scripture to being the writings of men, we dull the edge of the Spirit’s sword. While there is nothing particularly wrong about referring to what Moses said, Isaiah said, Paul said, etc., that is not the most noble view of God’s word. These are all men God used, and their words are to be viewed as God’s word to men – “the oracles of God.”

At the time of this writing, the Jews had only scrolls and books, and none of them were original. Yet, the advantage of the Jew (current advantage) consisted in possessing the very communications of God. I do not wish to labor this point, but draw attention to it because of the approach made to the Scriptures by much modern theology. They are approached with a degree of criticism and skepticism that is related to unbelief.

The Spirit never provides men with the option of determining which portion of Scripture is valid and which is not. With a consistency that never varies, the Scriptures are treated just as though in them we were hearing God speak out of heaven. They are “the oracles of God.”

The Advantage

The thought that God confined His communications to the Jews is a staggering consideration. He entrusted His Word with the people He had called and cultured. It was to their advantage to know what the Lord had said. Here, in the Word of God, the mind and will of God are contained. Through it, men come into some acquaintance with God, how He thinks, and what He is doing. That is an advantage! The Jews were the keepers of the only sacred books the world had seen. No other writing was given “by inspiration of God” (2 Tim 3:16).

This means it is a disadvantage to be ignorant of what God has said. That is particularly true when it is willing ignorance—i.e., having the Word, but not being acquainted with it. In our time, there is an unprecedented ignorance of the Word of God within the professed church. As a rule, its leaders are abysmally uninformed concerning the Scriptures. They choose to be specialists in other things. Such men, however notable they may appear, bring only disadvantage to the saints of God.

The Point

Lest we miss the point of our text, even the undeniable advantage of having the oracles of God yields no satisfactory results unless hearing is mingled with faith. This is the point being made, that in spite of every advantage, the Jew still stood in need of a righteousness from God.

As a people, they did not rise above others in this respect. As it is written, “For indeed the gospel was preached to us as well as to them; but the word which they heard did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in those who heard it” (Heb 4:2).

While the possession of “the oracles of God” are a distinct advantage, and is not to be despised or questioned, it is not the ultimate advantage. That is why Jesus said to the Scripture experts of His day, “You search the Scriptures, for in them you think you have eternal life; and these are they which testify of Me. But you are not willing to come to Me that you may have life” (John 5:39-40). The chief advantage of the Law and the Prophets is found in persuading men they have no righteousness of our own, and desperately need a Savior. Those brought to such a conclusion have profited from the Scriptures. They have, by those Scriptures, been made “wise unto salvation” (2 Tim 3:15). That is the ultimate of advantage.

SOME DID NOT BELIEVE

We now come to a section of unusually strong spiritual reasoning. It will become apparent to you that this is not an example of human philosophy. Nor does it conform to the rules of human logic. This very passage has been used to promote some “damnable heresies” (2 Pet 2:1) that lead men to believe God will take them to heaven even though they choose to live in sin. It is to our advantage to know the truth that is being expounded in this remarkable text.

“SOME OF THEM”

The manner in which this statement is made takes hold of our minds. “What if SOME did not believe?” This same form of reasoning is found in the eleventh chapter, and in First Corinthians. “And if SOME of the branches be broken off. . .” (Rom 11:17). “Neither be ye idolaters, as were SOME of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. Neither let us commit fornication, as SOME of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand. Neither let us tempt Christ, as SOME of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents. Neither murmur ye, as SOME of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer” (1 Cor 10:7-10). Hebrews 3:16 says, “For SOME, when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by

Moses.”

In all of these references, those who believed were in the minority, and those who fell were the vast majority. From the standpoint of numbers, those who did not believe were “many.” Thus, in First Corinthians 7:5, the Spirit refers to the of the spies (Num 14:1-6). But this was not the end of the matter. When a report was made to “all the children of Israel,” the people chose to believe the faithless spies, rejecting the testimony of Joshua and Caleb. As a result, the unbelievers were all excluded from the promised land. God only allowed Joshua and Caleb to enter, and the “little ones” who had not yet come of age (Num 14:30-33).

The “footmen,” or fighting men, of Israel numbered 600,000 (Ex 12:37; Num 11:21). If we just considered that number, excluding the women, the percentage of unbelievers was 99.9999666%. The percentage of those believing was .000033%. A statistician would consider “some” believed, but the Lord of glory says

“some did NOT believe.” The heavenly equation, therefore, might be stated in this manner. 600,000 less 2 equals “some.”

I once explained this to one of my daughters this way. Those who do not believe are counted as nothing. They are “not a people” (Deut 32:21; 1 Pet 2:10). Those who do believe counted for one. Therefore we read, “There was A MAN in the land of Uz, whose name was Job” (Job 1:1). Thus, in the case of Israel in the wilderness, 599,998 times zero equals zero, while two times one equals two. Joshua and Caleb were fully recognized by the Lord, while the rest are described as

THE REASONING OF THE FLESH

For what if some did not believe? Will their unbelief make the faithfulness of God without effect?

But if our unrighteousness demonstrates the righteousness of God, what shall we say? Is God unjust who inflicts wrath?

FLESH

For if the truth of God has increased through my lie to His glory, why am I also still judged as a sinner?

And why not say, "Let us do evil that good may come"?

SEEKING TO JUSTIFY SIN

very same group of people as “many.” “But with MANY of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness.” Other versions accent the proportionate aspect of the numbers: “MOST of them” (NKJV, NASB, NIV).

In this text “some” reflects a Divine perspective. While those who did not believe were actually the majority, they were outweighed by those who DID believe. Take, for example, Joshua and Caleb. When Israel spied out the promised land as a prelude to entering it, these men were two of the twelve spies sent out. They were the only two who believed the land was given to them by God—one sixth

“some” who “did not believe.”

Those having a propensity to numbers should consider how God counts people. We do not have any idea of the number of people who perished in the flood, but we know exactly how many were saved—eight (1 Pet 3:20). We also have no idea how many people perished in Sodom and Gomorrah, but we do know how many escaped out of it—three (Gen 19:30).

SOME BELIEVED

The point of our text is that there were believers. Everyone did not reject God’s testimony. Among the chosen people great men stood out. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Aaron, Joshua, Caleb, David, the Prophets, etc. The presence of these believers, though the numeric minority, confirmed how wicked the unbelievers were. It also shows that God always receives those who believe His Word and trust in Him.

The failure of men to believe is NOT owing to any deficiency or lack of clarity in “the oracles of God.” That is why unbelief is consistently condemned in Scripture, regardless of where it is found. While I can only speak for myself, I am alarmed at the unbelief that is found in the professed church. It is in such staggering proportions that it is mind-boggling. The Word of God is questioned, and often challenged, by the very people who claim identity with Christ. It is a matter of deep concern.

UNBELIEF DOES NOT NULLIFY GOD’S FAITHFULNESS

“What then? If some did not believe, their unbelief will not nullify the faithfulness of God, will it?”^{NASB} Here is a most powerful form of reasoning. Does the fact, for example, that the unbelieving Jews fell in the wilderness mean that God proved unfaithful to them? Was His promise to them voided by their unbelief? The Spirit will take up this identical argument in regards to the Jews’ rejection of Christ in the eleventh chapter. It is, therefore, a pivotal point of consideration, and to be given serious thought.

First, only those who disbelieved fell in the wilderness. God brought Israel into Canaan, just as He promised. He had never committed Himself to bring the unbelieving and faithless into the land of promise. Their unbelief did not void the promise of a coming Messiah, or invalidate one word of His “oracles.” In a blast of fury, God did not make an end of believers, nor did He call back His promises of a Savior and a New Covenant. He held to His revealed purpose, even though “some” were excluded because of His mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on those who do not know God, and on those who do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. These shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His power” (2 Thess 1:7-9). Is there a soul so naive as to think such people never believed, or had never escaped the pollution of the world? Remember, these are words spoken to the church, and that for a reason.

The failure of men to believe is NOT owing to any deficiency or lack of clarity in “the oracles of God.” That is why unbelief is consistently condemned in Scripture, regardless of where it is found.

It is possible to come out of Egypt, yet never get into Canaan. It is also possible to get out of Sodom, yet be destroyed in route to safety, like Lot’s wife. Jesus admonished us to “remember” her (Lk 17:32). It is possible for God to make a man a king, then reject him for his disobedience (1 Sam 16:1).

In all of these cases, and more, God did not withdraw His promises. He did not adopt a new purpose, abandoning the one He had revealed. The unbelief of men did not cause Him to be unfaithful. The “eternal purpose” (Eph 3:11) moved along, and those who believed continued to be blessed.

There are those who hold that God will take professed believers to heaven, even though they stumble on in the darkness. These false prophets say that God made a commitment to such people, and will not withdraw from it, even though they prove faithless. However, their reasoning is flawed to the core. First, God has made no commitment for good to anyone who does not walk by faith. In fact, He affirms, “Now the just shall live by faith; But if anyone draws back, My soul has no pleasure in him. But we are not of those who draw back to perdition, but of those who believe to the saving of the soul”^{NKJV} (Heb 10:38-39).

God has made some commitments concerning those who do not believe, who are disobedient, and who do not know Him. “. . . he who does not believe will be condemned” (Mk 16:16). “. . . when the Lord Jesus is revealed from heaven with

God Is Faithful to His Character

God not only is faithful to His Word, He is also faithful to His character. He “cannot deny Himself” (2 Tim 2:13), or act in contradiction of His Person. He cannot overlook a believer, and He cannot countenance an unbeliever. He cannot promise something He will not do.

Again, a strong argument will be made of this in the eleventh chapter. There the Spirit will confirm that Israel has not been abandoned. There present state is only “until the fulness of the Gentiles” (Rom 11:25). That is the Word of the Lord, and it makes little difference what men may think of it. Those who affirm God has thoroughly cast away His people Israel, have not told the truth. What is even more, they have represented God as going back on His covenant with them, and being unfaithful to His Word. The teaching of such men must not be allowed among believers.

The ONLY Jews rejected by God are those who do not believe. The Gospel is still the power of God to them “first” (Rom 1:16). On Pentecost every single Jew who believed, receiving the Word gladly and being baptized, were added to the church (Acts 2:41). This acceptance prevails to this day, confirming that God is faithful. If God does not reject a person because they are a Jew, then he has not summarily rejected the nation. If “glory, honor, and peace” will be given “to everyone who works what is good, to the Jew first . . .” (Rom 2:10), then God has not written off the Jews. They are still recognized and offered salvation.

Let none imagine, however, that this makes the slightest provision for the acceptance of those who refuse to believe. Their unbelief will not make the faithfulness of God to His own word and character void. They WILL be rejected because of their unbelief. If this is not so, then the Lord has not spoken truth concerning the destiny of unbelievers.

Further, and for purposes of clarification, nothing in God’s word suggests that an unbeliever never was a believer, or that a believer can never become an unbeliever. Those are suppositions created by men. Jesus spoke of those “who believe for a while and in time of temptation fall away” (Lk 8:13).

The Spirit also exhorts believers, “Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God” (Heb 3:12). It is folly, therefore, to affirm such a condition cannot occur. In fact, such a thought quenches and grieves the Spirit of God

Our text reminds us that God has pledged certain reactions to both believing and not believing. Because there is no unfaithfulness with God, it is not possible for an unfaithful person to be blessed, or a faithful person to be cursed. Either of those would require God to deny Himself, and He is incapable of doing that. God is ever faithful!

LET GOD BE TRUE!

“Certainly not! Indeed, let God be true but every man a liar. As it is written: ‘That You may be justified in Your words, And may overcome when You are judged.’” The question has been posed, “For what if some did not believe? shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect?” The answer is emphatic. “Certainly not!” The KJV version reads, “God forbid!” Although not accurate etymologically, “God forbid” projects the spirit of the text—namely that such a statement will not be allowed by God, as the rest of the verse attests. Other versions read, “By no means,”^{RSV} emphasizing there is no provision for such a conclusion to be entertained. The NASB reads, “May it never be,” reflecting the response of faith which is repulsed by such a thought. The NIV reads, “Not at all,” which highlights the absurdity of the thought that God could be unfaithful.

This verse must not be viewed through an academic set of glasses, as though it were merely a rhetorical argument. The character of God and the salvation of men hang in the balance. If God is unfaithful, how can He be trusted? And, if men can be unbelieving and still be saved, precisely what is the point of salvation? If God can receive people fundamentally unlike Himself, why is there a need for a Savior at all? What, then, is the purpose of the atonement? And what sense is there to reconciliation?

The whole point is that God “cannot deny Himself.” He cannot accept sinners into His fellowship and remain righteous. He would, in such a case, have to abandon His prerogatives of judgment. The very thought of such things is repugnant to the righteous.

LET GOD BE TRUE

This expression does not suggest that man has any role whatsoever in God being, or remaining, true. Rather, it poses a conflict between the perception of men and the declaration of God. The exhortation is to reject any suggestion made ineffective by the lack of believing on the part of man. The person rejecting God’s Word will pay the penalty for doing so, but will not deprive the Word of its effectiveness, or God of His faithfulness. The blasphemy of men, and their rejection of the Word of God are like weightless notes on the balance of eternity. God remains faithful in all of His promises and affirmations.

The Example of Esther

We have an example of the faithfulness of God in the book of Esther. Although God Himself is not mentioned in this book, yet His providence and power are clearly seen in it. When the Jews were threatened by wicked Haman, Esther’s uncle, Mordecai, informed Esther of the plot. He charged Esther “that she should go in unto the king, to make supplication unto him, and to make request before him for her people.” Although she was the Queen, she was fearful to go before the king. She thus informed Mordecai of her reasoning. “All the king’s servants, and the people of the king’s provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into the inner court, who is not called, there is one law of his to put him to death, except such to whom the king shall hold out the golden sceptre, that he may live: but I have not been called to come in unto the king these

We are not to allow our minds to entertain the imagination that God’s Word is voided or made ineffective by the lack of believing on the part of man.

that the Word of God is not precisely the truth. To approach the Word of God with any element of doubt reproaches God.

Permit me to be more specific. We are not to allow our minds to entertain the imagination that God’s Word is voided or thirty days.”

Being strong in faith, Mordecai refused to accept this answer. Knowing that God was faithful, he boldly sent word back to Queen Esther. “Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king’s house, more than all the Jews. For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, THEN SHALL THERE ENLARGEMENT AND DELIVERANCE ARISE TO THE JEWS FROM ANOTHER PLACE; but thou and thy father’s house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?” (Esther 4:5-14). Mordecai knew God was faithful to His promises!

This type of faith let’s “God be true,” bringing benefit and protection to the believer. However, notice that if Esther refused to be the means through which God worked, she herself would pay the due penalty: “but you and your father’s house will perish.” Thus the Lord would react to unbelief precisely as He said He would, as well as He would to belief.

The Mind of the Flesh

It should not surprise you that the fleshly mind balks at letting “God be true.” If some word of God is not preferred, or jars against preconceived notions, the carnal mind is quick to find a way that justifies rejecting the word. Perhaps it is an historical position, a distorted view of Scripture itself, or some contextual consideration. Some imagine they can get rid of the Word by an appeal to etymological considerations, or some position that sees a particular word as no longer relevant. Indeed, unbelief is creative in its attempts to avoid letting “God be true.”

It is for our good that we are admonished to confront such tendencies militantly, throwing them down with our strong weaponry (2 Cor 10:4-5). Any view that neutralizes Divine commitments, or presents God as retracting His promises, is from the devil. Unless cast down in faith, embracing it will prove to be the undoing of the soul.

As we will see, every person will eventually confront God, and every syllable uttered by God will be found true. Wherever men have contradicted God, or refused to let Him be true, a strict accounting will be given. Men must be quick to come away from false views, and embrace the Word of God as it stands.

GETTING TO THE POINT

With God-glorifying precision, the Holy Spirit is showing that the judgment rendered upon the Jews did not negate God’s pledge to them. The promise made to Abraham would be carried out, even though “some” of them would fall through unbelief. The Spirit will provide an extensive exposition of this in chapters nine through eleven.

I am fully aware that I am in a geographical area where this is emphatically denied. But those who contend the Jews have been totally abandoned are wrong—seriously wrong. Our text is reasoning against such vanity of thought, showing that God has not recalled His promises to the ancient people, even though a considerable number of them have been cut off.

It should not surprise you that the fleshly mind balks at letting “God be true.” If some word of God is not preferred, or jars against preconceived notions, the carnal mind is quick to find a way that justifies rejecting the word.

AND EVERY MAN A LIAR

See the strength with which the Spirit speaks. He makes no allowance whatsoever for a conflict between the words of men and the words of God. He does not appeal to interpretations, laws of hermeneutics, and contextual considerations. He takes us back to the thus saith the Lord, and soundly condemns all who are at variance with it.

Not only are we to let “God be true,” but we are also obliged to let all who contradict Him be liars. Their supposed credentials are not honored in heaven.

The NASB reads, “Rather, let God be found true, though every man be found a liar.” If believing God means I must discount everything every man has said, then let it be so! If believing God means I must relinquish the doctrines of men, then let it be so! If it means I must no longer listen to certain teachings, then I will listen to them no more! If it involves withdrawing from some people, then do it.

This is not a call to be factious, for that is a work of the flesh. However, there are teachings and religious bodies who make it exceedingly difficult to believe God. Some views of God make it nearly impossible to let “God be true.” They cast a mantle of doubt upon the Word of God, and cause people to trust in men rather than in the living God. It should not surprise you that some people actually give very little of their own persons to God. They are depending on their church, or their position, to carry them safely through the judgment. But it will not happen!

It is true, our text is a hypothetical presentation. He is not suggesting that every man is a liar, for there are those who “speak the truth in love” (Eph 4:15). There are faithful ministers “as the Lord gave to every man” (1 Cor 3:5). There are those who “speak the truth in Christ” (1 Tim 2:7). The point of this text, however, is that every believer be resolute in his determination to believe God. Whatever the repercussions of letting God be true, even if it is accepting every contradicting person to be a liar, let it be so! Since we will face Gof, let Him be true!

GOD WILL OVERCOME

“. . . as it is written, That thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mightest overcome when thou art judged.” This statement is taken from Psalm 51:4. “Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight: that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest.”

Here is an expression of true repentance.

David's Repentance

This was David's penitential Psalm when convicted of his sin against Uriah. He had contradicted God in his conduct, then complicated it with a command concerning Bathsheba's husband, Uriah. God said, "Thou shalt not commit adultery" (Ex 20:14), yet David did. God said, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife" (Ex 20:17), yet David did. The Lord said, "Thou shalt not kill" (Ex 20:13), yet David sent Uriah into the heat of the battle, making his death certain. God said, "Thou shalt not steal" (Ex 20:15), yet David stole Uriah's wife.

Will God let this matter go unchallenged? Indeed, He will not. In a subtle way, God had been judged. His Word had been ignored, as though it was unjust and could be broken with impunity. You already know the account. God sent the prophet Nathan to David to confront him with his sin. The result was that David repented, eventually writing the 51st Psalm (2 Sam 12:7-20).

David was willing to "Let God be true, and every man a liar." In the end, he came to his senses. His faith compelled him to seek for God to be justified in "ALL of His sayings." He did not seek to justify himself, but brought his will into harmony with that of his Lord. He took hold of this immovable and irrevocable truth: "GOD IS TRUE!" When clothed in his right mind, the man after God's own heart did not question that God was right. He therefore brought his will into alignment with that of his Lord.

But allow me to take this matter a little further. God had made a promise to David, that He would raise up from the fruit of his own body, a King to sit upon his throne (2 Sam 7:12). This was BEFORE David's transgression with Bathsheba, and against Uriah. Did David's unfaithfulness negate that promise? Indeed, it did not, even though it cost David great sorrow and affliction. How well it is stated in the 132nd Psalm. "The LORD hath sworn in truth unto David; He will not turn from it; Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne."

David was eventually brought back to the Lord and His commitment. In so doing, he justified God, showing Him to be faithful, and himself unfaithful. The variance between him and God was settled this side of the veil.

THE EXAMPLE OF ABRAHAM

The promises and commitments of God are not in harmony with the mind of the flesh. In fact, they sharply conflict with it. Abraham is a case in point. We will see that he also justified God, accounting that He was true.

When God promised Abraham he would be a father of many nations, it contradicted all natural laws. Indeed, it was something that was impossible from

DID NOT CONSIDER HIS OWN BODY, already dead (since he was about a hundred years old), AND THE DEADNESS OF SARAH'S WOMB. He DID NOT WAVER at the promise of God through unbelief, but was STRENGTHENED IN FAITH, giving glory to God, and being FULLY CONVINCED that what He had promised He was also able to perform. And therefore 'it was accounted to him for righteousness'" ^{NKJV} (Rom 4:17-22). Our faith Abraham "let God be true."

The text continues that this was not written for Abraham's sake alone, "but also for us. It shall be imputed to us who believe in Him who raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead, who was delivered up because of our offenses, and was raised because of our justification" (4:24-25).

WHEN GOD IS JUSTIFIED

The thought of God being justified is not a strange one. There is a word said about those who were baptized by John, that touches on this subject. "And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John. But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him" ^{NKJV} (Lk 7:29-30). In submitting to John's baptism, the people were letting God be true, and every man a liar.

Abraham was old—even past the age of begetting children. His wife Sarah was barren, and could not bear children. How would Abraham react to the promise of God? Would he let God be true?

the standpoint of the flesh. Abraham was old—even past the age of begetting children. His wife Sarah was barren, and could not bear children. How would Abraham react to the promise of God? Would he let God be true?

The Word of God speaks clearly on this point, bringing great honor to God, and revealing the superiority of faith. "(As it is written, 'I have made you a father of many nations') in the presence of Him whom HE BELIEVED; God, who gives life to the dead and calls those things which do not exist as though they did; who, CONTRARY TO HOPE, IN HOPE BELIEVED, so that he became the father of many nations, according to what was spoken, 'So shall your descendants be.' And NOT BEING WEAK IN FAITH, he

The Pharisees and lawyers, however, in not being baptized by John, rejected "God's purpose" for them, thereby judging the Lord. For whatever reason, when they rejected God's counsel, they proved they were liars. What is more, if they did not resolve this conflict before they left this world, it will be brought up once again on the day of judgment.

PERILOUS TIMES

One of the perils of our times is the popularity of questioning God and judging His Word. Also, some theologies rob the people of a sense of God's greatness, teaching them to rely upon their own abilities, and affirming that God no longer intervenes in the affairs of men. Such thoughts evidence unbelief.

All of this is done under the false guise of superior wisdom, and understanding. The fruit such approaches to Scripture have yielded confirms the source from whence they came. It has reproached God, neutralized the effect of the truth, and weakened His people.

God's word always corresponds with reality. It is never philosophical in nature, but declarative of the real situation. His Word is always spoken with the panorama of all things (past present, and future) in mind. It also strictly conforms with His eternal purpose, which never varies.

THE DAY

There is an appointed day in which the Lord will judge "the secrets of men by Jesus Christ" (Rom 2:16). In that day every variant thought will be exposed. God will be shown to be true before an assembled universe, and no one will dispute the case. Those who are bold enough to judge God now, will themselves be judged by Him. As well, the very word they have refused to accept will judge them. As Jesus said, "He who rejects Me, and does not receive My words, has that which judges him; the word that I have spoken will judge him in the last day"^{NKJV} (John 12:48).

The thought of men judging God is fearful to consider—but that is precisely what takes place when they do not embrace His word. Those who declare they are angry or upset with God because of their lot in life have judged Him! Those who balk at His commandments, not obeying the Lord, have judged Him! Those who refuse to preach the message He has given of His Son have judged Him! But in the end, God will overcome.

In the "great and notable day of the Lord," all words and thoughts that contradicted the Word of God will be brought to light. It will be made clear that God was judged unfit to be believed by the transgressors. There will be no suitable defense for contradicting the Lord, or refusing to receive what He said and did without doubting. Before an assembled universe, it will become apparent that "God is true." Everything from false gospels to misplaced emphases will be some erroneously conclude. He has not denied the Divine origin of the Jews, nor the advantages and favors granted to them. He HAS confirmed that sin so dominated them, they could not change their condition, even when they were given such marvelous advantages. They too needed a righteousness God. The worth of these advantages is not diminished by their failure to take hold of dashed to the ground as the truth of God is lifted high.

A due consideration of these realities will change the way men refer to the Word of God. It will alter the way they preach, and what they emphasize. That, of course, is why these things are written.

Hear the words again, and stand in awe of our God. "That You may be justified in Your words, And may overcome when You are judged."^{NKJV} That speaks of ultimate confrontation—one that cannot be avoided!

THE SPIRIT GUARDS AGAINST FALSE CONCLUSIONS

In this passage, the Holy spirit carefully guards against false conclusions. The indictment of the Jews is not to be construed as proof that God has abandoned His covenant with them, as them by faith.

SOMETHING PRACTICAL

There is a very wonderful practical truth to be seen here. Even though the Law has pronounced us guilty and condemned us, yet a recovery from our helpless condition can be realized. God has promised those who call upon His name will be saved (Joel 2:32; Acts 2:21; Rom 10:13). God is justified in that saying every time someone calls upon His name, believing His Gospel, and yielding to His will. It makes no difference how deeply a person may have sinned, or how dull the sensitivity of the heart may have grown. If that person will hear what the Spirit is saying, God will hear from heaven, deliver the individual, and receive praise from his mouth (Psa 50:15). Thus, even in this world, God will be justified in His sayings. Every believer is proof of that, which brings great joy to the heart.

IF UNRIGHTEOUSNESS DEMONSTRATES GOD'S RIGHTEOUSNESS

"But if our unrighteousness demonstrates the righteousness of God, what shall we say? Is God unjust who inflicts wrath? (I speak as a man.) ⁶ Certainly not! For then how will God judge the world?" Here is a lofty form of spiritual reasoning. God is the heart of the reasoning, and His purpose is its direction and focus.

What is "our unrighteousness?" It is more than wicked deeds, or immorality, as ordinarily perceived. It is being unlike God in both thought and deed.

It includes unbelief. “For what if some did not believe?” (3:5). An unbelieving heart is an “evil heart of unbelief” (Heb 3:12). Unbelief is the preeminent sin of which the Spirit convicts men. As it is written, “And when He has come, He will convict the world of sin . . . because they do not believe in Me” (John 16:8-9). A failure to embrace the Gospel, or to trust in the Lord with all of the heart, is unrighteous, and cannot be overlooked by the Lord. As a rule, however, I have found the modern church does not regard unbelief in this manner.

It also includes the ungodliness that characterized the Gentile world, a general state of moral decline. “Who knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them” (1:32). Lives that are basically self-indulgent are unrighteous lives. When the will of God is exchanged for self-will, the individual is proved to be unrighteous, and worthy of condemnation.

There is also the personal sin committed by David, which stands for all personal acts of unrighteousness. “That thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mightest overcome when thou art judged” (3:4; Psa 51:4). While the nature of sin remains the same, some sin works itself out in reprehensible human conduct. Some of the infamous sins of Scripture include the following.

- (1) Adam and Eve eating the forbidden fruit.
- (2) Cain murdering Abel.
- (3) The attempt to build the tower of Babel.
- (4) Ishmael mocking Isaac.
- (5) Esau despising his birthright.
- (6) The selling of Joseph by his brethren.
- (7) The murmuring of Israel.
- (8) The refusal of Israel to go into Canaan.
- (9) The rebellion of Korah.
- (10) The betrayal of Jesus by Judas.

“Our unrighteousness” is any aspect of life that is at variance with the Lord. Unbelief is at the core of unrighteousness. A state of spiritual deterioration is found in all unrighteousness. Unrighteousness also erupts in specific acts that dishonor “darkened” (Rom 1:21). No matter how you culture and discipline the mind of the natural man, God has “destroyed the wisdom of the wise,” and reduced the “understanding of the prudent” to “nothing” (1 Cor 1:19).

Men have modified the heinousness of sin and transgression by giving it other names: sickness, addiction, life style, chemical dependence, inherited tendencies, family curses, alcoholism, homosexuality, mistakes, etc. By employing these fallacious terms, sin is not seen as worthy of punishment.

Thus, when Paul speaks “as a man,” he is showing us the absurdity of human reasoning. He is putting forth a argument that flesh presents to justify its involvement in sin. Here is how flesh reasons. If God forgives sin, and if my exoneration from sin glorifies God, then why should I be concerned about sin? If God is honored by remitting my sin, why is sin so bad?

This Is How Flesh Reasons

Particularly when exposed to the Gospel of Christ, this IS how the flesh reasons. Because fleshly reasoning has been dignified by shallow religion does not remove this proclivity. Whether men acknowledge it or not, the reason for continuance in sin is because it is not viewed as a serious and perilous condition. If sin were viewed by men as seriously as it is by God, religious counselors would be out of business over night! Sinners would flee for refuge to Jesus, to procure remission and cleansing from sin, thereby receiving grace to say “NO” to ungodliness and worldly lusts (Heb 6:18; Tit 2:12), and power to live by faith.

God and bring judgment on the individual. Speaking of this latter view, the Spirit says, “Therefore lay aside all filthiness and overflow (“superfluity”^{KJV}) of wickedness . . .” (James 1:21).

Thus, “our unrighteousness” covers the entire spectrum of sin. It cannot be perceived by simply comparing ourselves with others, or confining ourselves to certain immoral acts.

I SPEAK AS A MAN

Here Paul acknowledges that he is not putting forth a valid argument, but showing the fleshly perspective of things. Through the Spirit, he is going to show the absurdity of such reasoning. Apart from Jesus Christ, it is ever true of man, “For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts” (Isa 55:8-9). As to the thoughts of unregenerate man, God Himself speaks. “The LORD knoweth the thoughts of man, that they are vanity” (Psa 94:11). When men fell into sin, and the Divine image was marred within them, they “became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was

Men have modified the heinousness of sin and transgression by giving it other names: sickness, addiction, life style, chemical dependence, inherited tendencies, family curses, alcoholism, homosexuality, mistakes, etc. By employing these fallacious terms, sin is not seen as worthy of punishment. Rather, they produce a sort of sympathy for the transgressor, as though they had been victimized against their will. But all such reasoning is “as a man.” It is NOT an expression of “the mind of the Lord,” but is in militant opposition to it.

The strong wording of this text dashes this kind of reasoning to the ground. It is a form of reasoning that is “as a man,” not as a Jew! It represents the way flesh thinks, and unless abandoned in favor of “the mind of Christ,” will bring the judgment of God upon the individual.

PUTTING A HANDLE ON THE TEXT

The wording of the text significantly differs from the manner in which religious people are accustomed to talk. Much of that difference is owing to the deviate manner of their thinking. Notwithstanding, some clarification of the reading of the text will prove helpful.

Here is how the text reads in various versions. “But if our unrighteousness commend the righteousness of God, what shall we say?”^{KJV} “But if our wickedness serves to show the justice of God, what shall we say?”^{RSV} “But if our unrighteousness brings out God’s righteousness more clearly, what shall we say?”^{NIV} “But if our injustice serves to confirm the justice of God, what should we say?”

First, the Spirit is handling an objection presumed to be offered by ungodly men. The argument He is addressing might be stated this way. “If the righteousness provided by God through Christ, has been accented by the grievous nature of our sin, why should God punish men for their sins?” To put it another way, “If God is glorified by imputing His righteousness to sinners, is it not unrighteous for Him to punish sinners?”

The Spirit is unveiling the real manner in which flesh reasons. A refusal to accept the righteousness of God, and an insistence upon continuing in sin, are excused upon the supposition that God is love, and is longsuffering toward man’s waywardness. In due time, it is thought, God will help me change.

DOES OUR UNRIGHTEOUSNESS CONFIRM GOD’S RIGHTEOUSNESS?

In a sense, our unrighteousness does confirm the righteousness of God—but not in the way that flesh reasons. The very word “UNrighteousness” declares there is a standard that is contradicted by the sinner. There is an Image from which man has fallen, and concerning which he comes short (Rom 3:23). In this sense, therefore, the righteousness of God is confirmed by our unrighteousness, i.e., by the stark contrast of human nature with the Divine nature.

From another view, the fact that God raises us from death in trespasses and sins demonstrates His marvelous righteousness. He is thus proclaimed to be “just and the Justifier of him that believes in Jesus” (Rom 3:25). He is NOT unrighteous to accept those who come to Him through the Son, because of the thorough atonement accomplished in His death. God is glorified by the transformation of sinners!

When the wrath of God comes against sinners, is it wrong? Was it wrong for Him to judge Cain? Is there a soul who is willing to affirm it was wrong for God to disrupt the building of the tower of Babel? Was it wrong to drive the wicked inhabitants out of Canaan, giving their land to Israel?

But this is not the view being addressed in our text. The question is one posed by the flesh, seeking to justify involvement in sin. We know this by the extension of the question. “Is God unrighteous who taketh vengeance? (I speak as a man)”

IS THERE UNRIGHTEOUSNESS WITH GOD?

When the wrath of God comes against sinners, is it wrong? Was it wrong for Him to judge Cain? Is there a soul who is willing to affirm it was wrong for God to disrupt the building of the tower of Babel? Was it wrong to drive the wicked inhabitants out of Canaan, giving their land to Israel? Because God sent Israel into the seventy year Babylonian captivity, can He be charged with being unrighteous, inconsiderate, or forgetful of His promises? When Roman legions destroyed Jerusalem, leveling the Temple and ravaging the Jews, was God being unrighteous?

If God is glorified in showing mercy, why did He not forgive them, and lavish His love upon them? This is how the flesh reasons. It seeks to divert the attention away from its own recalcitrance and wickedness to God Himself. The flesh seeks to justify the sinner IN his sin, rather than seeking justification FROM it.

Although flesh does not reason in these precise words, the Spirit identifies its real mode of thought. He does not give credit to the flesh, or allow it to express itself in its own words. The truth of the matter is that those refusing to receive God’s righteousness see no real need for it. They are content with their own manner of life. When God punishes them because of their ways, they impute unrighteousness to God, saying He was not fair, or was inconsiderate, or did not understand the real situation. Like Jonah, they become angry with God, even thinking they are right in doing so (Jonah 4:4,9).

This is the root of men become angry or upset with God. They are seeking to justify themselves, and are doing so at the expense of God. It is not an innocent reaction, but a blasphemous one, contradicting every aspect of faith.

Men are not to presume upon the grace of God, or imagine that God will be good to them just because they are His “offspring” (Acts 17:28-29). They must not allow themselves to think sin will be ignored by God, or left unpunished. The goodness of God by no means justifies involvement in sin. The forgiveness of God is no reason to suppose He does not hate it, or will not punish those who continue in sin. God’s goodness leads to repentance, not to transgression!

HOW SHALL GOD JUDGE THE WORLD?

“God forbid: for then how shall God judge the world?” Here is an arresting consideration. If God is not right in punishing the wicked, how could He then judge the world? The day of judgment itself would then prove to be an act of unrighteousness—in fact, the ultimate act of unrighteousness.

If men are not personally responsible for their sin, how can God judge them for their sin? If sin is only a helpless technicality addressed and overthrown by grace, what reason is there to judge the world at all? How can God judge the world if it is not personally at fault?

It should not surprise us that the judgment of God is a most unpopular subject in the contemporary church. Many young believers have never heard it proclaimed. The organized church has been inoculated with spurious theology, and no longer thinks of the day when “God will judge the world in righteousness by that Man” (Acts 17:31).

The Day of Judgment Is Necessary

The very term “judgment” implies that sin must be condemned, and righteousness extolled. If these two things were not essential, judgment would be a farce. Remember, early in this book we were told, “For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men” (Rom 1:18).

I want to labor the point of this reality. It is not possible for ungodliness and unrighteousness to escape the wrath of God! It should not surprise you that this is not generally believed. If it was, sin would be quickly and energetically abandoned! If men doubt this is the case, let them consider the Son of God Himself. When the sins of the world were placed upon Him (Isa 53:6), He endured the wrath and cursing of the Almighty. The localization of all sin in the body of Christ (1 Pet 2:24), required that sin be “condemned in the flesh” of the One who bore them (Rom 8:3). Thus, the Son was “made a curse for us” (Gal 3:13).

The only way to advantage from His vicarious death is to be born again, have our sins remitted, and receive the righteousness of God. The Lord has revealed that He will ultimately confront the ungodly, holding them strictly accountable for their refusal of His righteousness. Men may excuse their sin in this world, but they will not be able to do so on the day of judgment. Be sure, your sins will find you out!

God will uncover the “secrets of men,” exposing their hearts. As it is written, “God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel” (Rom 2:16). The Lord “will make manifest the counsels of the hearts” for all to see (1 Cor 4:5). When standing before “the judgment seat of Christ,” before whom we “must all appear,” every single person will “receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad” (2 Cor 5:10). For those who have done “evil,” He will show they deliberated rejected His righteousness in preference of their sin.

How often do professed gospels affirm that reality? In some circles, preaching has been so saturated with academia that it is devoid of any power. Men are exposed to mere religious lectures, or the spouting of theological novelties. However, this is not how holy men preach! After declaring the appointed appearance of all men before Christ’s judgment seat, the apostle said this. “Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men” (2 Cor 5:11). He knew nothing of professed seeker-friendly services and palatable religious orations. He knew the day of judgment was coming closer, and that not one whit of tolerance toward sin would occur at that time. If sin is not hated and renounced in this world, it will be the cause of condemnation on the day of judgment.

After declaring the appointed appearance of all men before Christ’s judgment seat, the apostle said this. “Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men” (2 Cor 5:11). He knew nothing of professed seeker-friendly services and palatable religious orations.

The Lord Will Help Us

Hearing this, some may despair, thinking themselves unequal to the challenge of being godly. However, praise God, our liabilities are covered in the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. How glorious are the words of promise. “Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and for ever. Amen” (Jude 24-25). Faith not only produces a fervent desire to continue in the Lord, it also lays hold of the Power that can keep us from falling. God is able to do this, even though you are not able of yourself.

Sin is falling morally. It is stumbling because we are walking in darkness. It is never considered a light matter, or something that is easily resolved. When we possess the righteousness of God, however, He “keeps us from falling.” Just as surely as the disciples arrived on the other side of a temporarily stormy sea (Matt 14:22-34), so you will arrive safely in glory if you live by faith.

The condition of the trusting one goes beyond being kept from falling. That is only the prelude to what is coming. God is fully capable of presenting us “faultless” in the blazing light of His glory. On that day, when His glory exposes everything fully, and nothing is hidden, God is able to present His people as “faultless,” unflawed, perfect, and unblemished. The weakest part of them, their flesh-and-blood-bodies, will be forever gone, and they will be clothed with immortality. If that seems too aggressive, God is still “able” to do it.

As if that were not enough, the Lord is also “able” to present us before His presence “with exceeding joy.” No fear, no trepidation or trembling, only a swelling and grateful joy! Such rejoicing will bring great glory to the God, whose workmanship we are (Eph 2:10).

BEING SAVED BY HOPE

Before concluding this section, a word should be said about the powerful effects of hope. While flesh tries to justify its involvement in sin, hope forbids such an attempt. This is why it is written, “For we are saved by hope.” Hope, which is faith in its forward posture, never attempts an explanation for sin. Rather, it makes sin repulsive, and drives the believer to prepare for the day of judgment. Scripture says it this way. “Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew Him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is.

And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure” (1 John 3:1-3).

Hope knows that God is righteous in judging the world. It knows that sin is unreasonable, and cannot be excused. It is convinced that the wrath of God will come against sin in all of its forms. For this reason, purity of heart, mind, and body, are sought with zeal. Such purity, praise the Lord, is attainable because of the death and exaltation of the Lord Jesus Christ. We can be cleansed daily (1 John 1:7,9; 2:1).

We acknowledge we are “not yet perfect,” and that we still stand in need of a Savior and Intercessor. We joyfully confess that we need the grace of God. With great delight and thankfulness, we admit our need of the Holy Spirit, and constant access to the throne of grace. But we will not excuse our sin, minimize it, explain it, or attempt to cling to it. We long to be where it cannot enter.

TRUTH INCREASED THROUGH A LIE

“For if the truth of God has increased through my lie to His glory, why am I also still judged as a sinner?” Here is another argument presented by the flesh. This is not the statement of sound theological thought, as some imagine, but an expression of the foolishness of the flesh. It is an attempt to justify sin and avoid the inevitability of Divine judgment.

Other versions read, “For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie unto His glory; why yet am I also judged as a sinner?”^{KJV} “But if through my falsehood God’s truthfulness abounds to His glory, why am I still being condemned as a sinner?”^{RSV} “But if through my lie the truth of God abounded to His glory, why am I also still being judged as a sinner?”^{NASB} “Someone might argue, ‘If my falsehood enhances God’s truthfulness and so increases His glory, why am I still condemned as a sinner?’”^{NIV} “But, some might still argue, ‘how can God judge and condemn me as a sinner if my dishonesty highlights His truthfulness and brings him more glory?’”^{NLT}

Let it be clear, this is not an intellectual form of reasoning, as though these very words coursed through the mind of the sinner. This is more an intuitive way of reasoning than a cognitive one. The Holy Spirit is putting in words an imagination that is entertained by the carnal mind. It is a form of spiritual interpretation, or unveiling the secrets of the heart,.

The foundation of this pseudo-reasoning is the affirmation that God will overcome when He is judged. “Indeed, let God be true but every man a liar. As it is written: ‘That You may be justified in Your words, And may overcome when You are judged’”^{NKJV} (3:4). The righteous man will reason like David did, confessing and forsaking his sin. He will plead with the sweet psalmist, “Have mercy upon me, O God . . . Blot out my transgressions. . . Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity, And cleanse me from my sin . . . Purge me with hyssop . . . Make me hear joy and gladness . . . Hide Your face from my sins, And blot out all my iniquities. . . Create in me a clean heart, O God, And renew a steadfast spirit within me . . . Do not cast me away from Your presence, And do not take Your Holy Spirit from me . . . Restore to me the joy of Your salvation, And uphold me by Your generous Spirit” (Psa 51:1-12).

Thus the penitent sinner makes no attempt to explain his sin, or excuse his transgression. Rather, by God’s grace, he brings his thinking into accord with the Lord. Cleansing and recovery are earnestly sought.

Thus the penitent sinner makes no attempt to explain his sin, or excuse his transgression. Rather, by God’s grace, he brings his thinking into accord with the Lord. Cleansing and recovery are earnestly sought.

The mind of the flesh, however, does not think in this fashion. It seeks to justify itself so aggressively that it does not hesitate to impute unrighteousness to God. Here is the corrupted reasoning of the mind of the flesh. If, when I sin, the truth of God becomes more prominent by way of contrast, and if God is glorified the more by that contrast, how can it be just for me to be punished? If my sin has only served to prove that God is righteous, how I can disciplined or condemned for contributing to His glory? The seriousness of such a notion cannot be overstated!

TWO NOTABLE EXAMPLES

There is a fundamental flaw in this reasoning. The underlying thought is that God receiving glory automatically accrues to the benefit of those through whom the glory came. But this is not true! Take, for example, the case of Pharaoh. He was raised up in order that God might receive glory through him. As it is written, “For the Scripture says to Pharaoh, ‘For this very purpose I have raised you up, that I may show My power in you, and that My name may be declared in all the earth’”^{NKJV} (Rom 9:17). The declaration of the name of the Lord throughout the whole earth, however, brought no advantage whatsoever to Pharaoh! He was not rewarded for contributing to God's glory. The reason for this condition is quite simple. He himself had no desire to glorify God. In fact, his will had to be crushed, and his purpose overthrown for God to receive glory. No such person will be rewarded by the Living God!

A similar observation could be made concerning Judas Iscariot. Through him, God was also glorified. His betrayal, energized by Satan himself, was impotent to overturn the purpose of God. Rather, it actually became the means through which salvation was wrought out for us. But Judas received no credit for this, for that was not his aim. He willingly made place for Satan, and sought to obtain gain through his diabolical deed.

"MY LIE"

Here the Spirit refers to man's sin and transgression as a "lie"—a corruption of the truth, diametrically opposed to it, and devoid of any reality. A lie is the antithesis of the truth—directly opposite to it. In its essence, sin is a lie—a delusion from the wicked one. Presenting itself as an advantage, it brings a curse instead upon those who choose to indulge in it.

The First Sin of Humanity

How pointedly this is illustrated in the first sin of humanity. Although strictly charged by God NOT to eat of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, Eve indulged in a conversation with the devil about the matter. Following her indulgence of Satan's reasoning, she drew some conclusions. "And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat" (Gen 3:6).

Her perceptions were not true. What she concluded was a lie! The tree was not good for food! God had already defined what was pleasant to the eye and good for food. "And out of the ground the LORD God made every tree grow that is pleasant to the sight and good for food." In addition to these, were the "tree of life" and "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil" (Gen 2:9). After being deceived by the devil, however, Eve concluded that the forbidden tree was also pleasant to the eye and good for food. In addition, she imagined it was "to be desired to make one wise." None of those things were true. Therefore, when the fruit was eaten, both Adam and Eve lived out a lie.

Human nature was polluted immediately. Degeneracy was not a slow and lengthy process, but yielded remarkable results right away. As soon as the guilty pair were confronted with God,

Here the Spirit refers to man's sin and transgression as a "lie" – a corruption of the truth, diametrically opposed to it, and devoid of any reality. A lie is the antithesis of the truth—directly opposite to it. In its essence, sin is a lie—a delusion from the wicked one.

the corruption of their spirit surfaced. When God called out to Adam, he did answer. However, he did not acknowledge his transgression at the first. Instead he answered, "I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself." The Lord then pointedly asked Adam, "Who told you that you were naked? Have you eaten from the tree of which I commanded you that you should not eat?"

Adam did not fall on his knees in deep contrition of heart, but immediately sought to excuse the matter. "The woman whom You gave to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I ate." Facing the woman, the Lord asked, "What is this you have done?" Instantly, Eve presented what appeared to be a plausible answer for her reprehensible conduct. "The serpent deceived me, and I ate" (Gen 3:10-13). Technically, both of them told the truth. Eve did give Adam of the tree, and Satan did deceive the woman. Notwithstanding, this did not excuse their conduct. Thus they were judged, and sin and death entered the world.

To this very day, men have retained this propensity to excuse their sin. But sin is a lie, and thus cannot be excused. Justification does not come to us by fanciful explanations, but through "faith in His blood" (Rom 3:25).

The psychiatrists, regardless of their self-professed value, are wrong in seeking an explanation for deviate conduct. People sin because they have believed a lie. In so doing, they have judged God, considering the testimony of His creation, their own conscience, and His Law to be worthless. No person will be rewarded by God for having to be overruled. When God is glorified by the subduing of a person, that individual will not be honored for providing such an occasion.

ERRONEOUS REASONING

There is a form of erroneous reasoning that is prevalent in some circles. It views God receiving glory through a person as the ultimate goal and benefit. There is an element of truth to the perception. Namely, that God will be glorified in everyone, whether they are saved or lost. No reproach will be brought upon the Lord when people are cast into the lake of fire (Rev 20:15). There will be no word spoken against the Lord and His Christ when the words are spoken, "I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity" (Matt 7:23). Thus it is written, "For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ, in them that are saved, AND in them that perish: To the one we are the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?" (2 Cor 2:15-16). All men will, in the end, be cause for God to receive glory and honor.

Is the chief end of man to glorify God, as some affirm? There is a tone of truth in the statement, but it comes short of God's revelation of the purpose for man. God has spoken more specifically on this subject, leaving not doubt about it.

Made for Dominion

In the beginning, the Lord stated the reason for creating mankind. “Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth” (Gen 1:26). Later, the Psalmist elaborated on this intent, expanding our understanding of it. “Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet” (Psa 8:6). After the exaltation of Christ, the Holy spirit took the matter even further. “For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak. But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honour, and didst set him over the works of thy hands: Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. (Heb 2:5-8a).

In elaborating on this, the Spirit says this objective has not yet been realized. “But now we see not yet all things put under him” (Heb 2:8b). However, as a pledge of the coming dominion, He declared, “But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man” (Heb 2:9). All things were made for Him (2:10), and those who are in Him will be “joint heirs” with Him (Rom 8:17). The time will come when the saints will “possess the kingdom,” receiving the dominion for which man was made (Dan 7:18,22,27). The chief purpose for man, from this perspective, is to have eventual dominion. In Christ, he is being cultured for that marvelous and extensive reign.

Seeking the Lord

From another view, man’s chief purpose is to seek the Lord, endeavoring to find Him and come into fellowship with Him. This objective is clearly stated by Paul in his exposition of God’s purpose for humanity. “From one man He made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth; and He determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live. God did this so that men would seek Him and perhaps reach out for Him and find Him, though He is not far from each one of us”^{NIV} (Acts 17:26-27).

James confirmed this to be the purpose for man when he said, “After this I will return And will rebuild the tabernacle of David, which has fallen down; I will rebuild its ruins, And I will set it up; So that the rest of mankind may seek the LORD, Even all the Gentiles who are called by My name, Says the LORD who does all these things”^{NKJV} (Acts 15:16-17).

From still another view, the appointed purpose for man is to be conformed to the image of God’s Son, Jesus Christ. With unusual power, this is affirmed in Romans 8:29-30.

Conformity to the Image of Christ

From still another view, the appointed purpose for man is to be conformed to the image of God’s Son, Jesus Christ. With unusual power, this is affirmed in Romans 8:29-30. “For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them he also glorified.”^{KJV}

The formation of Christ in us (Gal

4:19) is the appointed objective for man. Where this does not happen, God will still be glorified, but no benefit will be given to the individual lacking that conformity to Christ’s image. Here, in this world, the aim is for Christ to “dwell in our hearts by faith.” In strict accord with this objective, we are “strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man,” in order that this might be fulfilled (Eph 3:16-17). If this does not happen, God will still be glorified through those not conformed to Christ’s image. However, they themselves will be thrust from the presence of the Lord and the glory of His power.

WHY SAY SUCH THINGS?

It is necessary to say these things because of the great apostasy in which we are living. Men have been deluded into thinking they can be wed to the cursed order, living out a lie, and still be saved in the end. They imagine that God is somehow glorified BY them in this situation. They view salvation as a sort of safety net that protects us from hitting the bottom, so to speak.

I have frequently heard men say, “The only difference between the saved and the lost is that the saved are forgiven sinners.” They imagine that “accepting Christ” is an end of itself. But that is not the case. The Spirit says, “But as many as received him, to them gave He power TO BECOME THE SONS OF GOD, even to them that believe on his name: Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God”

(John 1:12-13). Becoming the sons of God involves being cultured for appointed dominion. It moves one into the realm where conformity to the image of Christ, and partaking of the Divine nature (2 Pet 1:4) can become realities. It includes a continual seeking for the Lord, to know Him and fellowship with Him in His sufferings, as well as His glory (Phil 3:7-14).

Losing Salvation??

Still others affirm that once in Christ, it is impossible to miss heaven. Once sins are forgiven, it is thought, the person can never again be overcome by sin. Again, there is a flavor of truth in the view, but very slight.

First, the doctrine assumes that we have received the whole of salvation, which is not the case at all. If our salvation is “ready to be revealed in the conformed to the image of His Son. It includes running, fighting, wrestling, looking, and standing.

What would compel a person, any person, to conclude that it would be unjust for God to reject a person who people think in this manner, and why such doctrines have been contrived. It is because that is the way flesh thinks! It is because men imagine that God is glorified by saving people who do not want to be saved. Somehow the natural man reasons that if everything turns out for God’s glory, everyone should really be saved.

Were not Adam and Eve expelled from the very garden into which God placed them? Did not many who were safely delivered from Egypt fail to arrive in Canaan? Even though Lot’s wife got out of Sodom, did she arrive in a place of safety? Did the man who received a real talent from a real master, and was given a real stewardship, have it taken from him? And was he not cast into outer darkness? The answer to all of these questions is too obvious to say more.

And if God will save a person who continues to live a lie, even though he professes to know Christ, what rule of thought would prohibit us from thinking all sinners would not be saved?

SINNERS WILL BE JUDGED AS SINNERS

The flesh reasons, “Why am I also still judged as a sinner?” The question is a fundamentally dishonest one. If Jesus came into the world “to save sinners” (1 Tim 1:15), precisely what distinguishes a saved person from an unsaved one? Ultimately, it is faith. But faith is “the victory that overcomes the world” (1 John 5:4-5). Those who live in sin are not living by faith. Were it possible to live by faith and still remain in sin, faith would be proved to be impotent.

last time” (1 Pet 1:5), the whole of it is not yet possessed. If Jesus is going to “appear the second time” “for salvation,” then more is yet to be possessed than we presently have (Heb 9:28). Even our adoption is not yet complete. We have, it is true, received “the Spirit of adoption” (Rom 8:15), but there is more to be experienced. As it is written, “we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body” (Rom 8:23).

chose to live in sin? If such a person once made a profession of faith, would God be unjust in condemning them for their unbelief? What is the rationale behind this contemptible teaching? What would lead a person to the conclusion that the glory and honor of God would be advanced, and the disobedient saved, in spite of the fact they walked in darkness?

Were not Adam and Eve expelled from the very garden into which God placed them? Did not many who were safely delivered from Egypt fail to arrive in Canaan? Even though Lot’s wife got out of Sodom, did she arrive in a place of safety? Did the man who received a real talent from a real master, and was given a real stewardship, have it taken from him? And was he not cast into outer darkness? The answer to all of these questions is too obvious to say more, and our conclusions are equally apparent.

Men will be judged as sinners when that is, in fact, what they are. They will not be able to justify their sin, for a Propitiation has been provided for it. They cannot claim a right to salvation because God received glory upon them, for they have “crucified the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame” (Heb 6:6).

Jesus is “bringing many sons to glory,” but they are not yet there (Heb 2:10). Israel did not come into Canaan as soon as they left Egypt, and neither do we enter into heaven as soon as we are forgiven our sins. There is a wilderness journey from here to glory, and we are not to assume it will be completed FOR us. God will complete the work by working IN US “both to will and to do of His own good pleasure” (Phil 2:13). That involves being

But I will wax bold and tell you WHY

In the end, a righteousness from God must be possessed, and it can only be obtained by faith. God will allow no excuse for involvement in sin. He has made righteousness available.

A FALSE CHARGE

“And why not say, “Let us do evil that good may come”?; as we are slanderously reported and as some affirm that we say. Their condemnation is just.”

Again, I want to emphasize that this is not a literal statement made by the mouths of all sinners. It is a corrupt manner of reasoning, and is being exposed by the Spirit because it is not evident.

Here the Apostle deals with the response of wicked men to his teaching of God’s grace. With great power, the Spirit spoke through Him of the grace of God, affirming that salvation is unequivocally “by grace through faith” (Eph 2:8). Confirming the superiority of grace, it is affirmed, “Moreover the law entered, that the offence might abound. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound” (Rom 5:20). Sin, in this case, became an occasion for the reception of God’s grace.

Though sin had ravished us, taking us down to the depths, the grace of God retrieved us, raising us into “heavenly places” (Eph 2:6). Even though “we ourselves were also once foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving various lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful and hating one another. But when the kindness and the love of God our Savior toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, through the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit, whom He poured out on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior, that having been justified by His grace we should become heirs according to the hope of eternal life”^{2NKJV} (Tit 3:3-7).

Grace outweighed sin. The more sin there was, the more grace was received. That is a marvelous circumstance. One would think it impossible to corrupt such wonderful teaching. But flesh manages to corrupt it anyway, as is characteristic of it.

The charge brought against Paul was leveled by the Jews, not the Gentiles. They thought that because Paul repudiated the Law as a means to righteousness (Rom 10:4), he actually was encouraging sin in his doctrine. This line of thinking is still held by many people in the Christian community. Paul addresses this matter later, in the sixth chapter. There he shows how foolish the notion is. “What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? Certainly not! How shall we who died to sin live any longer in it?” (Rom 6:1-2). Again he says, “What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid” (Rom 6:15). Something overlooked by the legalist is that grace makes sin unreasonable and detestable. In the experience of “the true grace of God” (1 Pet 5:12), men are effectively taught to “deny ungodliness and worldly lusts,” not indulge them (Tit 2:12).

Jude spoke of “ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ” (Jude 4). They used grace to cover up their own preference for sin, and justify their transgressions.

WHY THE VIEW IS WRONG

While sin necessitates the grace of God, it does not produce or create it. Grace does not come to men because of sin, but because of Divine love and interest in men. Thus, grace is not automatically received when men sin. Sinners must first hear the good news of the Gospel and embrace it by faith, else grace cannot be against me; but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive” (Gen 50:20). In this case, God overturned the wicked counsel of Joseph’s brothers in order to bring Joseph good. He was not blessed because they did evil. Were it not for the intervention of God, nothing good would have come from Joseph’s hateful treatment by his brothers. Their intent was an evil tree from which no good fruit could come.

Similarly, God overturned the apparently superior counsel of Ahithophel, co-conspirator with wicked Absalom (2 Sam 25:31-34).

Slanderosly Reported

Good doctrine can be distorted by the enemies of God. Thus men took the glorious message of the grace of God, and said Paul was encouraging people to sin, so they could receive even more grace. One might wonder precisely why this charge was made against the Apostle. That wonderment is largely owing to the general absence of such teaching in our time. Allow me to briefly mention some of the pivotal teachings of the Apostle who labored more abundantly than they all. These are taken from the book of Romans, and are only representative.

Grace outweighed sin. The more sin there was, the more grace was received. That is a marvelous circumstance. One would think it impossible to corrupt such wonderful teaching. But flesh manages to corrupt it anyway, as is characteristic of it.

received. God is not disposed to lavish His grace upon men simply because they have sinned. Were that the case, He would be obliged to pour it upon everyone.

Sin is an evil tree than cannot produce good fruit. As Jesus said, “Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire” (Matt 7:17-19). It is not possible for good, of itself, to spring out of evil—for grace to be given simply because it is needed.

The sophist will object, pointing to Joseph, for example, who was blessed of God in grievous circumstances. Following the revelation of himself to his brothers, he said, “But as for you, ye thought evil

- ☞ That a message is God’s power to salvation, not human achievement (1:16).
- ☞ None are righteous of themselves (3:10).
- ☞ The righteousness of God has been revealed without the Law (3:21).
- ☞ That there are some people to whom the Lord will not impute sin (4:6-8).
- ☞ That justification comes before the evidence of it, and righteousness is realized before the assurance of it (4:9-11).
- ☞ Righteousness is imputed upon the basis of faith in Christ (4:22-24).
- ☞ The gift of grace abounds to the many by Jesus Christ (5:15).
- ☞ The obedience of One is the basis for many being made righteous (5:19).
- ☞ Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound (5:20).

- ☞ We have become dead to the Law through the body of Christ (7:4).
- ☞ There is no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus (8:1).
- ☞ God's predestined purpose is based upon His foreknowledge (8:29a).
- ☞ God has predetermined that those predestinated will be conformed to the image of His Son (8:29b).
- ☞ Nothing is able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus (8:38-39).
- ☞ That grace and works cannot be mingled as a basis for salvation (11:6).

It should be evident to you that these are not common teachings in our day. Yet, they are at the very heart of the Gospel and sound doctrine. They admittedly are abrasive to the flesh, provoking it to speak against them, as though they granted a license for men to sin. All such affirmations are slanderous. There is no truth to them.

Those who preach these truths are often charged with being antinomians – without Law. The person laboring under a system of Law cannot believe that the grace of God is as effective as His commandments. Thus they refrain from teaching grace, viewing it as inferior to the demands of Law.

The power of the new creation

Those who minimize grace, or make no mention of it at all, fail to see the power and nature of the new creature. They continue to cling to the notion that men, provided with the right information and incentives, can extricate themselves from sin. They are really not convinced men need a righteousness from God.

When a person is born again, he is rendered capable of willingly fulfilling the righteousness outlined by the Law. He has been freed “from the law of sin and death” (Rom 8:2). While the remnants of the old nature remain in him (Rom 7:14-25), that is not the preeminent part of his person. He is primarily a “new creation.” Old things have passed away, and all things have become new (2 Cor 5:17). The essential person has been changed.

Rather than the grace of God

introducing a lenient attitude toward sin, it actually is a more powerful and demanding principle than Law. The person receiving the grace of God works harder, goes further, and is more fervent for God than any person under the Law. You have only to compare the rigorous life of Paul AFTER he tasted the grace of God in truth, with his life under the Law.

Thus Paul is not hesitant to speak against those who twisted the Gospel he preached. They were guilty of slander, as well as unbelief.

The End Does not Justify the Means

There is a secondary application of this text. Doing evil that good may abound may also apply to using ungodly means to

If any one is prone to think we are dealing with inconsequential matters, or mere theological technicalities, the Spirit says of the slanderers, “Their condemnation is just.” The KJV reads, “whose damnation is just.” The NIV reads, “Their condemnation is deserved.”

This is obviously a harsh denunciation, and richly deserving. To take the means appointed by God to deliver men from sin, and make it the occasion for continuing in sin, is a most grievous transgression. Any justification of sin is wrong, but to present God as approving or overlooking it will cause condemnation to come upon the person.

One additional thought on this: we are achieve, what is conceived to be, godly purposes. The modern church often employs questionable means to accomplish what it thinks is a good purpose. It is not uncommon for larger churches to use professional fund raisers, for example, to garner sufficient funds for a new building.

Those who minimize grace, or make no mention of it at all, fail to see the power and nature of the new creature. They continue to cling to the notion that men, provided with the right information and incentives, can extricate themselves from sin. They are really not convinced men need a righteousness from God.

Others will go to the professions of the world to correct the moral behavior of their members. It is quite common to have profession counselors on the church staff whose only credentials are their degree in psychology. Additionally, some religious groups hire secular motivators to provoke zeal in their leaders.

Only godly means should be used to achieve godly purposes. If we are going to run the race to glory, it must be run “lawfully,” or in strict harmony with the Lord of glory (2 Tim 2:5). As simplistic as that may sound, it is still not clear to many people.

THEIR CONDEMNATION IS JUST never put at a disadvantage by saying it the way God says it. In fact, the disadvantage comes when we do not use “words which the Holy Spirit teaches” (1 Cor 2:13). If the Scriptures say “God imputes righteousness apart from works” (Rom 4:6), that is the way we will say it. We have no regard whatsoever concerning those who imagine this gives a license to sin. It is their responsibility to conform their thoughts to God’s Word. It is never in order for us to avoid speaking in Scriptural words to avoid offending the unlearned, or even the wicked. If men will be condemned for refusing to receive the truth of God, we had better not seek to modify that truth, or to make it more palatable for them. If God’s judgment of them is just, we sin grievously if we seek to please them, or reduce the Gospel in order to appeal to them. It is not uncommon to hear people buttress their theological affirmations with statistics, language studies, non-Biblical historical occurrences, and even psychological principles. Such approaches betray the presence of the “mind of the flesh.”

CONCLUSION

We have been exposed to some very powerful reasoning in the Spirit. You sense that Paul had no fear of opposing ideas, or those who refused to accept the Gospel he preached. His confidence was in the Lord, and his heart and mind were dominated with the truth of the Gospel. One of the great travesties of our time is the exaltation of the world's wisdom, and earthly disciplines of learning. Academia has been exalted to the throne of human thought. Men representing themselves as ministers of the Gospel, or laborers in the vineyard of the Lord, often rely on these things in their ministries.

It is not uncommon to hear people buttress their theological affirmations with statistics, language studies, non-Biblical historical occurrences, and even psychological principles. For example, I have often heard people base their teaching of responsibilities upon the alleged differences between the male and female brain, or emotional makeup. These are not innocent departures. They reveal an affinity with the world that will lead people away from God.

Lest you think this has nothing to do with this passage, allow me to draw some things to your attention. Did you notice the total absence of such reasoning in our text? The only appeal is made to the truth of God. Those who are not in agreement with it are soundly denounced. There is no appeal to human logic, or any form of human science. Everything is based upon the Gospel of Christ, and the Divine assessment of humanity. When false reasoning is thrown down, the appeal is made to what God has revealed.

Let us also learn from this never to seek to justify or explain sin. God has already told us why men sin. It is because they are sinful—because they have fallen, and are ruled by the wicked one. The answer to sin is a Savior, not a method, not a discipline, not a law. If men are going to be righteous before God, they must “be made the righteousness of God” in Christ (2 Cor 5:21).

This passage of Scripture has successfully answered every argument against receiving the righteousness of God. If men introduce other arguments, they are simply facets of the ones dealt with in this text. Every objection to imputed righteousness has been answered. Every one who imagines they have no need for righteousness has been put to silence. The notional strength and wisdom of the natural man has been violently thrown down. There is no recourse open to man other than believing the Gospel and receiving the righteousness of God.

Lesson Number 9

THE UNIVERSALITY OF SIN

^{3:9} What then? Are we better than they? Not at all. For we have previously charged both Jews and Greeks that they are all under sin. ¹⁰ As it is written: "There is none righteous, no, not one; ¹¹ There is none who understands; There is none who seeks after God. ¹² They have all turned aside; They have together become unprofitable; There is none who does good, no, not one." ¹³ "Their throat is an open tomb; With their tongues they have practiced deceit"; "The poison of asps is under their lips"; ¹⁴ "Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness." ¹⁵ "Their feet are swift to shed blood; ¹⁶ Destruction and misery are in their ways; ¹⁷ And the way of peace they have not known." ¹⁸ "There is no fear of God before their eyes." ¹⁹ Now we know that whatever the law says, it says to those who are under the law, that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God. ²⁰ Therefore by the deeds of the law no flesh will be justified in His sight, for by the law is the knowledge of sin. (Romans 3:9-20^{NKJV}) that the provision of all external advantages does not enable man to become righteous. Time will not produce a righteous man, not will information from heaven itself.

If men are prone to philosophize on this matter, the Spirit will now show us that there is not a single righteous man upon earth—not a one that sought the Lord, or achieved goodness. This is a Divine assessment of our race. It deals with the root of our problem, which is sin. It confirms that sin has defiled the entirety of the natural man, and the totality of humanity.

Men have chosen to so systematize theology that truth has been robbed of its power. Thus, human expressions like "total depravity" and "free will" are debated among men, and sharp divisions formed between those who have embraced the name of the Lord.

The Spirit does not approach the subject of sinfulness and the need for righteousness in that manner. Rather, He shows us the universal result of sin. He does not speak of man's capability, but of his lack of achievement. The fact of universal guilt is proclaimed, not general ability. The Scripture will show that universal guilt confirms spiritual impotence. Men may affirm that the will is free, and that man is capable of recovering himself. However, such

Because of the great difficulty involved in convincing men of their need of the righteousness of God, the Spirit argues the point extensively. He has proved that man left to himself cannot become righteous. He has also confirmed affirmations are not made by the Lord. He will show that Divine intervention is an absolute requirement. The need of a Savior, grace, and deliverance is declared. A righteousness from God is also set before us as a necessity. There has never been an age or a people that was above these requirements.

From the very moment sin entered into the world, the need for a Redeemer and a righteousness from God also entered. Adam and Eve, having committed a single transgression, needed a Savior just as much as those in our century. It is the nature of sin that demands a Savior and a righteousness from God, not the amount of it.

A NEW GENERATION

The text before us will confirm that everything traced back to Adam is defiled. In fact, the order of Adam has been rejected, totally and without exception. If a Savior is given, He cannot come from Adam's lineage. If an individual is accepted by God, it cannot be in Adam, it must be in another. Because humanity is contaminated at its source (Adam), it is necessary that a "Second Man" man appear, from whom a new "generation" can be developed.

Jesus is that "Second Man," and the "Last Adam" as well (1 Cor 15:45,47). In Him, and as regarding acceptance, Adam's lineage is brought to a conclusion. From Adam to Jesus, the lineage was through the flesh (Lk 3:23-38). But Jesus "was taken away. And who can speak of His descendants? For He was cut off from the land of the living"^{NIV} (Isa 53:8). Abraham had fleshly offspring, but Jesus did not! This was the very Scripture that intrigued the Ethiopian eunuch. "In His humiliation His judgment was taken away: and who shall declare His generation? for His life is taken from the earth"(Acts 8:33). The idea is that His life was "taken" before He could have any offspring.

Still, one of the designated names of

From the very moment sin entered into the world, the need for a Redeemer and a righteousness from God also entered. Adam and Eve, having committed a single transgression, needed a Savior just as much as those in our century.

Jesus is "Everlasting Father" (Isa 9:6). Through Him, God is begetting another race, pure and righteous. From the fleshly point of view, He appears barren—without progeny. But this is not the case at all. He is the One of whom Isaiah prophesied. "Sing, O barren, You who have not borne! Break forth into singing, and cry aloud, You who have not labored with child! For more are the children of the desolate Than the children of the married woman," says the LORD. Enlarge the place of your tent, And let them stretch out the curtains of your dwellings; Do not spare; Lengthen your cords, And strengthen your stakes. For you shall expand to the right and to the left, And your descendants will inherit the nations, And make the desolate cities inhabited" (Isa 54:1-3). These shouts of praise immediately follow the Messianic prophecy of the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah.

This is fundamental doctrine, and will be developed at length in the fifth chapter. It is why the new birth is essential to seeing and entering the Kingdom of God (John 3:3-7). It is the foundation that supports the necessity of becoming a new creation (2 Cor 5:17). It is why God has "begotten us again" to a living hope (1 Pet 1:3).

THE REASON FOR THIS SECTION

This section of Romans is one of the strongest denunciations of humanity that is found in Scripture. Taken from Psalm 14:1-3, and other prophetic expressions, the universal guilt of humanity is firmly corroborated.

The establishment of this truth is necessary to confirm that all men stand in need of a righteousness from God—the righteousness that is announced in the Gospel of Christ (1:16-17). Technically, the passage is not merely to convince men of sin, but of the condition into which sin has thrust them. Through it, the Spirit will show that God is just in rejecting the totality of Adam's race—"all flesh." It will also accentuate His marvelous grace in providing a new Progenitor in Jesus.

DOES ADVANTAGE MAKE BETTER?

8:9 What then? Are we better than they? Not at all. For we have previously charged both Jews and Greeks that they are all under sin." The Spirit returns to looking at things from a Jewish point of view. He now shows that even though distinct advantages were given to the Jews, yet they actually did no better than the Gentiles. The "we" of this text are the Jews, and the "they" are the Gentiles. He has stated the Jews have received "much" unquestionable advantage "every way" (3:1-2). Their primary benefit was the "oracles of God," placed as a stewardship into their hands. They were furnished with a precise delineation of sin, and rich promises that should have provided adequate incentive for becoming righteous, were that remotely possible.

But their advantages did not cause truth and righteousness to spring up in them. To the contrary, they were found with the same nature and sinful expressions as the Gentiles, who did not receive the "oracles of God."

ADVANTAGES DO NOT MAKE BETTER

There is a fundamental truth to be learned here. Advantages do not, of themselves, make men better—even when they are received from God Almighty. In nature, or in Adam, there are only varying degrees of corruption, not righteousness. Men cannot be changed from the outside. They cannot be renewed by Law, Divine advantages, environment, or self discipline. Being at Sinai and hearing the voice of the Lord does not make sinners better. Receiving the Law at the disposition of angels does not make a person better. If one is provided the details of when and how to approach God, those details do not make the person better. This is, indeed, a most difficult thing for “flesh” to face.

If the Jews were not better for advantages given to them by God Himself, who is the person who will imagine that men are made better today by a religious heritage dating back to the fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, or eighteenth centuries? If I have the writings of all of the church fathers, will it give me the advantage? Indeed, if I am not born again, any advantages I may have will yield no fruit. If I am not in Christ Jesus, there is no advantage that can make me better in the eyes of the Lord.

The strength of this argument must not elude us! Remember the remarkable benefits given to the Jews. To them “belongs the adoption as sons and the glory and the covenants and the giving of the Law and the temple service and the promises, whose are the fathers, and from whom is the Christ according to the flesh, who is over all, God blessed forever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5). God took them unto Himself, devoted His love toward them, and separated them from the rest of the world. He revealed Himself to them alone. His holy Law was given exclusively to them, as well as a revealed procedure by which they could approach Him. His rich and glorious promises were given to them, and the fathers Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, belonged to them. Even the Lord Jesus Christ came from them, according to the flesh.

How is it possible to receive any more external advantage? What is a mere religious movement compared to that? How does an ancient manuscript, or some archaeological discovery compare with those advantages? What of a studied discipline or rule of logic? Such things are not worthy of the smallest comparison to the benefits extended to the Jews.

Yet, there are still professed Christians among us to boast of having advantages in their creed, or the movement with which they are identified. Some imagine their expertise in language gives them the real edge, or that their mind is their chief asset. But all of these things are but puffs of smoke in the arena of life. The question is whether or not these things have made them better!

If the Jews were not better for advantages given to them by God Himself, who is the person who will imagine that men are made better today by a religious heritage dating back to the fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, or eighteenth centuries?

A Brief Digression

While much good has come from various religious movements, they have not managed to change sinners into righteous people. I am affiliated with a movement that possesses many noble advantages. They point to the Scriptures, declaring they are thoroughly adequate. With tenacity, they refuse to bear the names of men, saying the name of Jesus is enough. They declare there is no need for a creed if we have Jesus, and that we should restore things as they were in the “New Testament church.” They say they are seeking the unity of all believers in Jesus alone. All of these things are good. Those who adopt such views are surely at an advantage.

But their advantage has not made them any better. They have as many divisions among themselves as others, and even many more. Immorality has not been purged from their ranks, and they are not noted for being any more godly than others. Their youth go astray like others. They are plagued with a “form of godliness that denies the power thereof.” As a group, their position has not transformed them. It has not liberated them from the dominion of sin, nor has it brought to their generally ranks a hunger and a thirst for righteousness.

This movement holds no uniqueness in this regard. The same may be said of any religious movement, however hallowed it may be. Whatever advantages are found in such things, they have not wrought a transformation in the people. They still need a righteousness from God like everyone else.

Do not view me too harshly for saying these things, for this is precisely the point being made in this passage! God looks at results, not positions. It makes no difference what position is held, or what advantage is given, if the person is not made righteous, it is of no avail at all.

ARE WE BETTER THAN THEY?

Let the Jews speak for everyone who has an advantage. Did their advantage make them better? “No, in no wise,” or “Not at all!” If you were to judge the matter externally, you might come to a different conclusion. At certain times, idolatry was not in the ranks of Jewry. They did have the Temple, God-ordained sacrifices, and a revealed approach to God. They appeared to live on a more acceptable level than many of the heathen. But that was only appearance, and we are not to judge according to appearance (John 7:24).

In their hearts, or at the core of their being, they were no better! Law did not make them better. Worship did not make them better. Sacrifice did not make them better. Observing the feasts did not make them better. Circumcision did not make them better!

Beyond all question, this is one of the most difficult lessons to be learned by humanity. Men continue to think they are made “better” by external experiences and privileges. However, it is only when the “stony heart” is removed, and we receive a "heart of flesh," that we become "better" (Ezek 11:19; 36:26).

This is not to deny the validity or reality of external experiences and privileges. It is to affirm that they do not change the character of man, or bring the righteousness of God to him.

THEY ARE ALL UNDER SIN

" . . . for we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin." The expression "under sin" means under the power and guilt of sin-dominated by sin. No part of man is excluded from this domination. The sentence of condemnation has been passed upon all men. As it is written, "Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation" (Rom 5:18).

The proof of reference is found in the first chapters of Romans. There we are summoned into the Divine courtroom. The charge leveled against all humanity is that all are guilty of sin, and stand in need of a righteousness from God. With powerful proofs, the Spirit has convinced us that no person is excluded from the charge. Not only is humanity under sin, they are "held" there until the Lord releases them. It is the Law that held us in that state. As it is written, "But now we have been delivered from the law, having died to what we were HELD BY" (Rom 7:4a).

It will be helpful to briefly rehearse the strong arguments that have been given to prove men are all under sin.

- ⊗ God has shown His eternal power and Deity to men in the creation. In that creation, these things are "clearly seen." Yet men did not glorify Him as God, neither were thankful (1:19-21).
- ⊗ In the very midst of the creation, clearly made by an all powerful God, men began to degenerate, becoming vain in their imaginations (1:22-23).
- ⊗ Men became idolaters, changing the glory of God into images made like men, birds, beasts, and creeping things (1:23).
- ⊗ When delivered over to their own hearts, men rapidly degenerated into corruption, dishonoring their own bodies (1:24).

- ⊗ Men changed the truth of God into a lie, worshiping what was made rather than the One who made it (1:25).
- ⊗ When God gave them over to their own desires, both men and women resorted to unnatural conduct, becoming sodomites (1:26-27).

was universal. It was not isolated to a section of the world or to a certain people.

There is resounding proof that men need a righteousness from God! No one is acceptable in Adam, or in nature. Nature, or flesh, is a totally "evil" or corrupt tree. It is not capable of bringing forth good fruit to God. How appropriate are the words of Jesus. "Either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by his fruit" (Matt 12:33). He further elaborated, "Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire" (Matt 7:16-19).

The Spirit has shown us an unbecoming display of "evil fruit." The list is impressive and unquestionable wicked (1:19-2:24).

01. Unthankful.
02. Vain imaginations.
03. Changed the glory of God.
04. Dishonored their own bodies.
05. Changed the truth of God into a lie.
06. Sodomy.
07. Reprobate mind.
08. Fornication.
09. Wickedness.
10. Covetousness.
11. Maliciousness.
12. Full of envy.
13. Murder.
14. Debate.
15. Deceit.
16. Malignity.
17. Whisperers.
18. Backbiters
19. Haters of God.
20. Despitiful.
21. Proud.
22. Boasters.
23. Inventors of evil things.
24. Disobedient to parents
25. Without understanding.
26. Covenant breakers.
27. Without natural affection.
28. Implacable.

The expression "under sin" means under the power and guilt of sin-dominated by sin. No part of man is excluded from this domination. The sentence of condemnation has been passed upon all men.

- ⊗ Because they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God delivered them to their own appetites. As a result, men were "filled with all unrighteousness" (1:29-31).
- ⊗ Even though they experienced the judgment of God, men continued to prefer sin, and the company of those who also sinned (1:32).
- ⊗ The Jews, having received the holy Law of God, did "the same" things as the Gentiles which received not the Law (2:1-5).
- ⊗ The Gentiles unanimously violated their own conscience, excusing their sin (2:14-15).
- ⊗ The Jews knew the will of God, and approved of the Law, acknowledging it was right, yet continued to sin, just as the Gentiles (2:17-25).
- ⊗ The Gentiles received every possible advantage apart from direct revelation. (1) The testimony of nature, and (2) The testimony of their conscience. Yet they continued to sin.
- ⊗ The Jews received all the advantages the Gentiles had, plus the Law and circumcision. They too continued to sin.

The Divine assessment: "they are ALL under sin!" The human will was not able to correct the situation. No amount of intelligence, creativity, or productivity could turn the heart away from sin, or cause it to hate iniquity. The situation

- 29. Unmerciful.
- 30. Finding pleasure in sinners.
- 31. Glorifying in being called a "Jew."
- 32. Trusting in the Law.
- 33. Causing blasphemy of God's name.

How is it that the presence of such things was universal, with no place or person excluded? Because the tree was corrupt! Human nature was defiled! Men may argue about whether or not the corruption was total, but Jesus will shout at our hearts that a good tree cannot produce such results. Only a bad tree can do that. The tree MUST be made good, or ONLY bad fruit will be produced.

What is more, only God can "make the tree good." The Lord has already revealed that "Every tree that does not bear good fruit is cut down and thrown into the fire"^{NKJV} (Matt 7:19). Men do need a righteousness from God! None are excluded from this need, for "all have sinned and come short" of God's glory.

THERE IS NONE!

"⁴⁰ As it is written: 'There is none righteous, no, not one;'¹¹ There is none who understands; There is none who seeks after God.¹² They have all turned aside; They have together become unprofitable; There is none who does good, no, not one.'"*

Because of the importance of this matter, the Spirit now appeals to the Scripture to support everything that has been said. He does this to confirm that we are not dealing with a unique circumstance. The universality of sin is not something that has occurred in recent centuries. It has existed from the very moment Adam and Eve ate from the forbidden tree. Observation and reasoning are valid in determining the truth of sins dominion over mankind. However, understanding must ultimately be anchored in the Word of God by which we live (Matt 4:4; Lk 4:4). God has spoken concerning the centrality of His Word. "For You have magnified Your word above all Your name"^{NKJV} (Psa 138:2). It is fitting, therefore, that the reality of man's sinfulness be confirmed by Scripture.

NONE RIGHTEOUS

"There is none righteous, no, not one." The Spirit gives the sense of the Scripture rather than a direct quotation. This is a summation of what will follow. The state of unrighteousness is pronounced upon humanity in the fourteenth Psalm. "The LORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God. They are all gone aside, they are all together become filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one" (Psa 14:2-3). Solomon also said, "For there is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not" (Eccl 7:20).

In the following verses, the lack of righteousness will be expounded. The traits that are enumerated are fruits or effects of unrighteousness. There are no exceptions to the declaration, "no, not

The lack of understanding, or knowing God, is a condition from which men must be saved. The nations that are without God are said to not know Him (1 Thess 4:5). What is more, when the Lord Jesus comes again, He will come "In flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God" one." The Lord "looked from heaven," and did not find a single person who had not been defiled, or who was not sinning.

"Righteousness" is a condition enabling the individual to stand before God faultless and uncondemned. It is a state of "no condemnation," where the person is approved by God. After searching the entirety of Adam's race, the Lord could find no such person—"no not one."Men need a righteousness from God!

NONE WHO UNDERSTAND

"There is none who understands." The understanding that is lacking is "spiritual understanding," or the knowledge of God. The fourteenth Psalm declares that God looked "to see if there were any that did understand," concluding that there was none (14:2). The fifty-third Psalm gives the same conclusion (53:2). Of the most privileged people in the world, the Lord said, "For My people are foolish, They have not known Me. They are silly children, And they have no understanding. They are wise to do evil, But to do good they have no knowledge" (Jer 4:22). This lack of knowledge is what brings destruction upon the people (Hos 4:6). There can be no spirituality apart from this knowledge.

From another viewpoint, those who lack "understanding" are characterized by a fundamental ignorance of God. Although this is not generally considered to be a serious condition, the lack of the knowledge of God constitutes a state of lostness and alienation. This it is written, "This I say, therefore, and testify in the Lord, that you should no longer walk as the rest of the Gentiles walk, in the futility of their mind, having their understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God, because of the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart" (Eph 4:17-18). Alienation from God is, then, caused by an ignorance of Him—or by having "no understanding." The gravity of such a condition can scarcely be overstated. Describing the situation in another way, Colossians 1:21 reads, "And you, who once were alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now He has reconciled."

In this text, "wicked works" are seen as the result of not knowing God—not understanding Him.

The lack of understanding, or knowing God, is a condition from which men must be saved. The nations that are without God are said to not know Him (1 Thess 4:5). What is more, when the Lord Jesus comes again, He will come "In flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God" (2 Thess 1:8).

Men need a righteousness from God!

God Wants to be Understood

Behind this declaration is the truth that God WANTS to be known and understood. He has structured the entire universe to make portions of His Person known (Rom 1:19-20). He has determined when and where all peoples are placed in order that they might seek and find Him (Acts 17:26-27).

This aspect of God was revealed through Jeremiah in a most wonderful way. "Thus says the LORD: 'Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, Let not the mighty man glory in his might, Nor let the rich man glory in his riches; But let him who glories glory in this, THAT HE UNDERSTANDS AND KNOWS ME, That I am the LORD, exercising lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness in the earth. For in these I delight,' says the LORD"^{NKJV} (Jer 9:23-24). Not only in irreligious men, but in religious ones, there is an undeniable tendency to glory in human wisdom, might, and riches. All of this is vanity. Only those who understand and know the Lord have grounds for boasting—and then, it is not of themselves (Eph 2:8).

Knowing God IS Eternal Life

The importance of knowing and understanding the Lord is confirmed by its association with eternal life. Jesus prayed, "Father, the hour has come. Glorify Your Son, that Your Son also may glorify You, as You have given Him authority over all flesh, that He should give eternal life to as many as You have given Him. And this is eternal life, that they may know You, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom You have sent"^{NKJV} (John 17:2-3).

Through John the beloved, the Spirit declares this to be one of the primary ministries of the Lord Jesus: i.e., coming to know and understand God. "And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life" (1

There would be no need to give us such an understanding if there was any way for us to possess it on our own. But we did NOT have such understanding, as our text states. In fact, it took the ministry of the Lord from heaven for us to obtain it.

There would be no need to give us such an understanding if there was any way for us to possess it on our own. But we did NOT have such understanding, as our text states. In fact, it took the ministry of the Lord from heaven for us to obtain it.

I want to emphasize that a universal Savior postulates a universal need. If there was a solitary individual in the world who knew God through natural abilities, Christ would not have come. Apart from His coming into the world, offering a satisfactory atonement, and ascending to the right hand of God to be the Author and Finisher of our faith, there was simply no possible way of coming to know or understand God. Sin created a gulf between God and man that man himself could not span.

If Adam, with only a signal transgression, could not remain in the presence of God, what of his progeny, whose imaginations are ONLY evil from their youth? God is greatly to be praised for not leaving us in this situation. It is His desire for us to know Him that has driven the completion of a great salvation.

NONE WHO SEEKS GOD

"There is none who seeks after God." Although I have already stated this, it bears repetition. God has ordered the affairs of men in a most precise way, in order that they might "seek the Lord." "From one single principle [man] He not only created the whole human race so that they could occupy the entire earth, but He decreed the times and limits of their habitation. And He did this so that they might seek the Deity and, by feeling their way towards Him, succeed in finding Him; and indeed He is not far from any of us" ^{New Jerusalem Bible} (Acts 17:26-27).

In addition to strategically placing all peoples in both time and area, He placed them in His own creation, which declared His glory in every corner of the earth (Psa 19:1-4; Rom 1:19-20). If any vestige of moral ability remained in man, these advantages should have compelled him to seek the Lord UNTIL he found Him. After all, He "is not far from every one of us." However, even given all of these advantages, "none" could be found that sought after God.

Such notables as Enoch, Noah, Abraham, and David were all visited by the Lord PRIOR to an effective quest for Him. Our text is precise in every sense of the word, and perfectly describes the entire race of Adam apart from Christ. Men need a righteousness from God!

ALL HAVE TURNED ASIDE

"They have all turned aside." With absolute consistency, apart from Divine intervention, "ALL" men turned aside from the revelation that was given to them, whether from nature, conscience, or Law. Every aspect of man's nature was defiled by sin. He became ungodlike—"none righteous." His mind was corrupted—"none that understands." The will was polluted—"none who seeks after God." Now we see the contamination of his works—"all turned aside." Man has become thoroughly corrupted.

Just as Adam and Eve turned from the commandment given to them, so all men, by nature, have turned from every common appeal. The KJV reads, “They have all gone out of the way,” emphasizing that the departure has ALREADY taken place. By nature, they have elected the “broad road” that leads to destruction. They have heard the harmonious voice of nature, and have “turned aside.” They have felt the stinging goad of the conscience, and have “gone out of the way.” They have heard the thundering words of the Law and “have turned every one to his own way” (Isa 53:6). This is not a mere liability, but is a cosmopolitan condition!

The Psalmist said of this situation, “Every one of them is gone back” (Psa 53:3). Other versions read “fallen away” RSV, NRSV. This involves more than leaving an appointed path. It includes the idea of retrogression, or going backward. Apart from Jesus Christ, the entire human race is in a state of regression, plummeting downward, further and further from God. That is the meaning of the phrase, “all have sinned and COME SHORT of the glory of God” (Rom 3:23).

By nature, men have “turned away” from God’s appointment for them, which is to “seek the Lord.” Even in their religion, they have “come short,” gravitating to idolatry or other forms of lifeless religion. Settle it in your heart that this is not a description of the worst of our race, but of the whole of it.

Nowhere is the corruption of men more clearly seen than in their will! Turning aside was a choice—a deliberate choice. Men willed to NOT seek the Lord. They willed to choose their own way. While I do not wish to make a big issue out of this here, it is interesting that men have chosen to vaunt the human will. This is done in spite of the fact that it is the very thing that has placed man at a distance from God. It was so in the Garden, and it is so today. Men need a righteousness from God!

ALL HAVE BECOME UNPROFITABLE
“They have together become unprofitable.” The NASB reads, “They have become USELESS.” The NIV and

NRSV read, “They have become WORTHLESS.” For whatever it is worth, the Greek word used here is ἡρειώθησαν, which means totally wrong, depraved, and morally worthless. Barclay-Newman Greek Dictionary Strong’s Dictionary defines it as unprofitable, useless, and unserviceable. The Basic Bible English version reads, “there is no profit in any of them.” John Gill, an insightful preacher who lived in the 1700’s, said this of the passage before us: “ . . . for so men being corrupted by sin, are of no use, service, and advantage to God, to men, or to themselves, but on the contrary, nauseous to God . . . and hurtful to themselves and others.” Gill’s Commentary on Romans In his commentary, Barnes says of this verse, “This word in Hebrew means to become ‘putrid’ and ‘offensive,’ like fruit that is spoiled. In Arabic, it is applied to ‘milk’ that becomes sour. Applied to moral subjects, it means to become corrupt and useless. They are of no value in regard to works of righteousness.”

This involves more than leaving an appointed path. It includes the idea of retrogression, or going backward. Apart from Jesus Christ, the entire human race is in a state of regression, plummeting downward, further and further from God.

While I do not ordinarily share the writings of others on these texts, I did want to show that students of Scripture have been consistent in their perception of this passage. I am not espousing something that is strange, or newly developed. While my own view was not formed by these men, I have found general agreement among those of honest heart on this matter.

Sin has rendered humanity useless to God. The whole of the Adamic order has been rejected by Him, thereby necessitating the new birth. That is something that can ONLY be effected by God. He begets us through the Gospel because of Christ’s sufficient death, “once for all.” In our new birth, we become qualified to receive God’s righteousness. Then, and only then, can we be profitably used by God and live in anticipation of the glory to come.

If sin has made “all unprofitable,” then all need a righteousness from God!

NONE WHO DOES GOOD
“There is none who does good, no, not one.” The blistering assessment of humanity continues, gaining strength. The Spirit is considering men apart from Christ, unforgiven and unregenerated. In that state, there is no one that “does good, no, not one.” By “good,” the Spirit means “good” in the eyes of the Lord, which is the only real “good.” Because the natural man is not good, nothing that he does is good. All of his works are tainted with his defiled nature, rendering them unacceptable to God. Rather than doing good, the Lord says of fallen man, “They are corrupt, and have done abominable iniquity; There is none who does good” †NKJV (Psa 53:1). By nature, all of man’s “righteousnesses are as filthy rags,” to be discarded because they are defiled (Isa 64:6). As it is written, “ . . . but to those who are defiled and unbelieving nothing is pure; but even their mind and conscience are defiled” (Tit 1:15).

To “do good” is to conduct ourselves in harmony with God, who alone is good. As Jesus said to the rich young ruler, “Why do you call Me good? No one is good but One, that is, God” (Matt 19:17). In this statement, Jesus was not saying He Himself was not good. He is altogether good. However, the young man who asked concerning eternal life did not see Jesus as the Son of God, but only as a “teacher.”

NONE RIGHTEOUS! NOT ONE!
Thus, the Divine assessment of humanity is being confirmed. There really is “none righteous, no not one.” Apart from identity with Jesus, no one, to a person, understands God or is seeking after Him. Everyone is in a state of regression, having chosen to turn away from the Lord. Of themselves, no one is useful to God, as they all have become worthless. As God counts things, no one is doing good—no not one. At some point, our hearts must be brought into agreement with this Divine assessment.

If that seems too strong, it is only because of spiritual blindness and hardness of heart. This is a matter of revelation, and it is to be received. It confirms that God was right in providing a righteousness for man, for man had none of his own. It also substantiates the absolute need for that righteousness, and the worthiness of condemnation to all who reject it.

One of the appalling effects of cold theology is that it robs the heart of these things, leading people to imagine there is some vestige of good in man, even though God says there is not. Man does not do good because he is NOT good. He does not seek God because he does not want God.

He does not understand, because he is alienated in his mind. He is unprofitable because sin has utterly defiled him.

As though this were not enough, the Spirit will take the matter even further. He will confirm to us that our defilement is not a surface matter, but reaches into every heart of our persons. Regardless what aspect of man who consider, he is corrupt from beginning to end.

INCAPABLE OF GOOD EXPRESSION

⁴³ ‘Their throat is an open tomb; With their tongues they have practiced deceit’; ‘The poison of asps is under their lips’; ¹⁴ ‘Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness.’ Again, an appeal is made to the Scriptures. Sin has not made men lazy, it has made them corrupt. Their expressions reflect their condition. While there are varying degrees of wicked expressions, they all possess the same characteristics. Apart from regeneration, there is an obnoxiousness about all human expression. Although it may not appear to be the case to mortals, that is the way is really is. Remember, this is God’s assessment of men who do not have His righteousness—all of them.

THEIR THROATS IS AN OPEN TOMB

The quotation is taken from Psalm 5:9. What a vivid picture! An open tomb is one in which a rotting corpse lies. It emits a noxious odor that repels all who are near to it. Knowing this is the case, tombs and graves are always covered well in order to hide the corruption within them. But men do not do the same with their corrupt natures. Their throats become a passage for the expression of spiritual death—dead views. The odor of alienation is upon them, and they are tainted with aloofness from God.

A sensitive heart detects this condition and is offended by it. Some of these defiling expressions come in the name of scholarship, social interests, and psychological profiles. But they all have this in common. They are emitting from the tomb of nature, defiling everything they touch. When men attempt to dignify them by assigning sincerity to the speakers, they are trying to throw a new suit of clothes upon a dead corpse.

THEIR TONGUES PRACTICE DECEIT

The tongue of the unregenerate conflicts with the Word of the Lord, and thus is said to “practice deceit.” When it comes to actual utterance, anything and everything spoken in contradiction of the truth of God is a lie. The Word of the Lord is, “let God be true, but every man a liar” (Rom 3:4).

saith the LORD. Take ye heed every one of his neighbor, and trust ye not in any brother: for every brother will utterly supplant, and every neighbor will walk with slanders. And they will deceive every one his neighbor, and will not speak the truth: they have taught their tongue to speak lies, and weary themselves to commit iniquity” (Jer 9:3-4).

Sin has made man basically self-centered. Therefore, he speaks with his own interests being primary. When that occurs—and it always does in the natural man—the tongue practices deceit, clouding the truth, and turning attention to human opinion. There are differing measures of this tendency, but they all come under the canopy of “deceit.” Deceit seeks to substantiate human views and justify men in their conduct. It is the opposite of having speech “alway with grace, seasoned with salt,” that it might edify and minister grace to the hearer (Col 4:6; Eph 4:29).

Let it be clear, if men do not receive a righteous from God, this is the kind of speaking that will come from them. It may be socially cultured and politically correct, but it will be deceitful!

obnoxiousness about all human expression. Although it may not appear to be the case to mortals, that is the way is really is. Remember, this is God’s assessment of men who do not have His righteousness—all of them.

POISON UNDER THEIR LIPS

The reference is to an expression found in Psalm 140:3. “They have sharpened their tongues like a serpent; adders’ poison is under their lips.” The idea is that their lips are harmful and infectious, spewing forth poison and contamination among the sons of men. Such were the words of Hymenaeus and Philetus, which “spread like cancer.”^{NKJV} (2 Tim 2:17). These were also the kind of words the unbelieving spies spoke to Israel, convincing them they could not possess the promised land as God commanded them. It is said of their words, “We be not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we. And they brought up an evil report of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land, through which we have gone to search it, is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof; and all the people that we saw in it are men of a great stature. And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak, which come of the giants: and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight. And all the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried; and the people wept that night” (Num 13:31-14:1). The poison of asps was under their lips, infecting the minds of the people.

Through Jeremiah, the Lord indicted His people for speaking corruptly. “And they bend their tongues like their bow for lies: but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth; for they proceed from evil to evil, and they know not me,

Very little time will pass until the truth of this text is confirmed to your heart. You will be subjected to poisonous words that must be expelled from your mind, lest your own thoughts become corrupt. Men sorely stand in need of a righteousness from God.

MOUTHS FILLED WITH CURSING AND BITTERNESS

Again, an appeal is made to the Word of the Lord. “His mouth is full of cursing and deceit and fraud: under his tongue is mischief and vanity” (Psa 10:7). Again, it is written, “For the sin of their mouth and the words of their lips let them even be taken in their pride: and for cursing and lying which they speak” (Psa 59:12). James said of believers who were following the “old man” instead of the “new man,” “Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing” (James 3:10).

The cursing of reference is the cursing of God: blaspheming His holy name, and speaking against His judgments. In the mind of the speaker, such diatribes may not be considered to be against God, but they are. It is much like Israel murmuring against Moses. “And the people murmured against Moses, saying, What shall we drink?” (Ex 15:24). “And the whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness: And the children of Israel said unto them, Would to God we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, to kill this whole assembly with hunger” (Ex 16:2). “And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore is this that thou hast brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst?” (Ex 17:3).

A religion that allows for the expression of the flesh kills the soul. If human nature is fallen, it must not be given respect or ascendancy among the people of God. Fleshly credentials are not to be honored as though they came from God. Natural abilities are not to be viewed as though they were the superior ones. Our acquaintance with one another is not to be “after the flesh”

None of this was innocent. That is why the people were judged for speaking as they did. Their mouths were “filled with cursing and bitterness” because they did not perceive their condition as being advantageous. In our day, such speaking is dignified by people saying they are angry with God, and God is able to deal with such anger. But this is a foolish imagination. There is not so much as a speck of truth in it. Solemnly we are told, “Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer” (1 Cor 10:10). Outbursts of cursing and bitterness are signs of depravity, not mere misunderstanding.

EXPRESSIONS OF THE FLESH

Because of the elevation of human knowledge and rights, even religious men have come to believe they have a right to express their opinion about the truth of God. In recent months, I have heard serious misrepresentations of the truth of God dignified by saying every one has a right to their opinion. Let it be clear to all of us. When God has spoken, the only right man has to believe and heartily embrace that truth.

What we are reading about is the nature of “the flesh,” or “the natural man.” There is nothing good or salvageable about the flesh. In it, there is “no good thing” (Rom 7:18). Jesus said, “the flesh profiteth nothing” (John 6:63). If those in Christ give heed to their flesh, rather than crucifying it, it will react precisely as our text has indicated. You should be sufficiently acquainted with your own nature to know this is the case. The part of us that is traced back to Adam is called our “members that are upon the earth.” They are to be “mortified,” or put to death, not given expression (Col 3:5). In fact, “those who are Christ’s HAVE crucified the flesh with its passions and desires”^{NKJV} (Gal 5:24).

Fleshly Religion

A religion that allows for the expression of the flesh kills the soul. If human nature is fallen, it must not be given respect or ascendancy among the people of God. Fleshly credentials are not to be honored as though they came from God. Natural abilities are not to be viewed as though they were the superior ones. Our acquaintance with one another is not to be “after the flesh” (2 Cor 5:16). Worldly views, fads, and preferences, are to have no place among the people of God.

In Christ, we die to the fleshly order, and are therefore urged to separate from it. The Colossians were exhorted on this very matter. “Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances, (Touch not; taste not; handle not; Which all are to perish with the using;) after the commandments and doctrines of men? Which things have indeed a show of wisdom in will worship, and humility, and neglecting of the body; not in any honor to the satisfying of the flesh” (Col 2:20-23). The absolute corruption of the flesh forbids the formation of religion around it. The truest form of religion is not found in external disciplines and the regimentation of the body. Rather, it is found in “righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit” (Rom 14:17). These are spiritual expressions, not fleshly ones.

THE ULTIMATE FLESHLY EXPRESSIONS

Flesh becomes more prominent as it is exposed to the glory of God. This is seen in the reaction of the world to Jesus. In particular, in the reaction of the Jews. If we doubt the depravity of the flesh, let us behold how it conducts itself toward God “manifest in the flesh.”

The passage we have just reviewed speaks of speech, words, or verbal expressions. Ponder how those in the flesh spoke to Jesus. “Now the Pharisees, who were lovers of money, also heard all these things, and they derided Him” ^{NKJV} (Lk 16:14). “Then the Jews answered and said to Him, ‘Do we not say rightly that You are a Samaritan and have a demon?’” (John 8:48). “And at once some of the scribes said within themselves, ‘This Man blasphemes!’” (Matt 9:3). “And the people stood looking on. But even the rulers with them sneered, saying, ‘He saved others; let Him save Himself if He is the Christ, the chosen of God.’ The soldiers also mocked Him, coming and offering Him sour wine, and saying, ‘If You are the King of the Jews, save Yourself” (Lk 23:35-37). “They answered and said to him (Pilate), ‘If He were not an evildoer, we would not have delivered Him up to you” (John 18:30).

What constrained these people to speak so derisively of the Lord of glory?

Their throats were certainly an open tomb, and the poison of asps was under their lips. They spoke in the energy of the flesh. That is the manner in which flesh speaks. In the presence of the Lord, their flesh erupted because it could not abide the Savior. It spoke heartlessly, and with defamation, insult, and injury.

Not Merely A Law

The incentive for avoiding the dominancy of the flesh is not mere Law. It is rather a matter of survival. It is clearly stated, and is to be heartily embraced, “For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live” (Rom 8:13). Take that word seriously, for your soul is in the balance. If we follow the dictates of the flesh, we will find it erupting in our manners, just as described in our text. Such conduct is evidence of spiritual death, and is to be resolved with swift dispatch. The “great salvation” God has provided precisely addresses this situation. Through it, men are extricated from a hopeless situation, and granted a righteousness that God approves.

SELF SEEKING

“¹⁵ Their feet are swift to shed blood; ¹⁶ Destruction and misery are in their ways; ¹⁷ And the way of peace they have not known.” Once again, I want to emphasize that the Spirit is describing the nature of the flesh.

While its expressions may take various forms, and be characterized by differing levels of wickedness, yet they all proceed from the same defiled well. Because people imagine these things are not in them by nature, is no proof they are absent. They are resident in the flesh, and will remain so. Scripture says it this way, “Mortify therefore YOUR MEMBERS which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry: For which things’ sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience: In the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them. But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds”

Once again, I want to emphasize that the Spirit is describing the nature of the flesh. While its expressions may take various forms, and be characterized by differing levels of wickedness, yet they all proceed from the same defiled well.

(Col 3:5-9).

It is not possible to “put off” something you do not possess. The things that are mentioned are said to be in our “members”. The NIV reads, “whatever belongs to your earthly nature.” The NASB reads, “members of your earthly body.” All of these things are resident in the part of us that is traced back to Adam. The potential to express them is resident in every person remaining in the body. The fact that we are in Christ has not removed them from our earthly nature. They were not washed away when we were baptized into Christ. Even when we are “risen with Christ,” they seek for expression. Therefore, they are to be “put off,” “mortified,” and “denied.”

When this truth registers upon the conscience, a major thrust forward has taken place.

In the first part of this passage, the sins of the heart are emphasized: “None that understand,” “none that seeks God,” going “out of the way,” and becoming “unprofitable.” The second part deals with sins of the mouth. The throat is an “open tomb,” tongues “use deceit,” “poison” is “under the lips,” and the mouth is “full of cursing and bitterness.”

Now we come to sins of action, when men will go to any means to justify themselves and gratify their own desires. Again, this is the unchangeable nature of the flesh.

FEET SWIFT TO SHED BLOOD

The reference is to Proverbs 1:16. “For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood.” The sixth chapter of Proverbs lists seven things that God hates, which are an abomination to Him. Among them is “An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief” (v 18). Isaiah speaks even more directly to the matter. “Their feet run to evil, and they make haste to shed innocent blood” (Isa 59:7). Again, this is the manner of the flesh. It will go to any length to justify itself—even to the shedding of blood.

Here the taking of innocent life is done creatively and with dispatch. Their “feet run to evil” swiftly, and “make haste to shed blood.” Given enough liberty, this IS what the flesh will do! Isaiah’s reference to this trait was given during the reign of Manasseh, during which so much innocent blood was shed.

How frequently this tendency has surfaced in our race. Cain’s feet were swift to shed blood when his brother’s sacrifice was accepted by God, and his own was not (Gen 4:8). Lamech lamented that he had killed a man because he was wounded by him (Gen 4:23). In an outbreak of rage, Simeon and Levi killed men who had defiled their sister (Gen 34:25). Heartlessly, Pharaoh ordered the death of newborn Jewish males because he thought they were becoming too numerous (Ex 1:16). Ahab and Jezebel had Naboth killed because they wanted his vineyard (1 Kgs 21:7-10). Athaliah, mother of Ahaziah, had all the royal heirs killed (2 Kgs 11:1). Herod commanded that “all the children” under two years of age be killed, because he was threatened by the birth of Jesus (Matt 2:16).

There is no extent to which flesh will go to seek its own gain. The ultimate murder, of course, was that of the Lord Jesus Christ. Well did Stephen say of the corrupt religious leaders of his day, “Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers” (Acts 7:52). Their feet were “swift to shed blood.”

When believers are among the unregenerate, there is a certain destruction and misery that are experienced. The spirit is eroded and often torn down as the flesh sets itself against the redeemed soul.

And what can be said of our own time, when more than a million abortions occur annually in our own country? And for what reason? For self interests! See, this is the nature of flesh. Those who choose to live in the flesh are descending into a moral arena that is a bottomless pit! The senseless mass killings that have exploded in the last few years are nothing more than fleshly eruptions. Those who committed these dastardly crimes refused the truth and salvation of God. Because of this, their flesh soon gained dominancy over them.

DESTRUCTION AND MISERY IN THEIR WAYS

This is also taken from Isaiah 59:7. This describes a dreadful tendency in the flesh that leaves a path of destruction. Given expression, the flesh tears down what is good, and leaves misery in its wake. Whether it is holocaust of Pharaoh, Herod, or Hitler, those dominated by nature think nothing of making others miserable, whether by insults, plundering, or physical harm.

It is a glad day when a person comes into Christ and experiences the circumcision of the body of the sins of the flesh (Col 2:11-12). The words of the prophet Isaiah are then fulfilled. “Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise.” (Isa 60:18). While flesh tears down, the renewed spirit builds up and edifies.

When believers are among the unregenerate, there is a certain destruction and misery that are experienced. The spirit is eroded and often torn down as the flesh sets itself against the redeemed soul. It is no marvel that Jesus “ofttimes resorted” to Gethsemane with His disciples for spiritual renewal (John 18:2).

THE WAY OF PEACE NOT KNOWN

Peace is a fruit of the Spirit, but is completely unknown by the flesh. As the Lord has said, “There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked” (Isa 57:21). Specifically, the reference is to Isaiah 59:8. “The way of peace they know not.”

If men are to find peace, it must come in and through Jesus Christ. It cannot come through the flesh, or from Adam’s resources. When the “Dayspring from on high” visited us, it was in order to “To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace” (Lk 1:79).

Notice, the text says “THE WAY of peace they have not known.” By nature, men do not know HOW to obtain or come into peace. This is particularly true of “peace with God,” which is realized in Christ Jesus (Rom 5:1). This “way of peace” is beyond the reach of flesh. It cannot be discovered through mental disciplines or much study.

Those outside of Christ—all of them—have no peace of mind, and do not know how to obtain it. Their conscience is not at peace, and no amount of religious activity can procure it for them. Sin has robbed all men! Although peace is aggressively sought by men, outside of Christ they always come short of it. They do not know “the way of peace,” and thus stumble in moral and spiritual darkness.

There should be no doubt of the need for a righteousness from God. All of the things that have been mentioned are the direct result of LACKING the righteousness of God. They are the consequence of transgression.

NO FEAR

⁴⁸ “There is no fear of God before their eyes.” On one occasion, sensitive Abraham observed of the realm of Abimelech, “Surely the fear of God is not in this place” (Gen 20:11). Indeed, there are places where such an absence is very apparent. However, our text says that in a state of nature, this condition is ALWAYS present. The quotation is taken from Psalm 36:1, where David observed of the wicked, “There is no fear of God

Lord, here is the answer. “There is no fear of God before their eyes.” It is not that they DO NOT think of their ways in association with God. Rather, it is because they do not WILL to think in this manner. It is not in them to do so.

By saying the fear of God is “not before their eyes,” the Spirit means it is not evident to them, and is not perceived as necessary. Like Balaam, they stumble cannot do so. Because fear is not “before their eyes,” we must place it before them with strong spiritual arguments and solid Scriptural statements. In so doing, we call for the Holy Spirit to come in convicting power. Working through the “sword of the Spirit,” He has been commissioned to “convict the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment” (John 16:8-11). If it were not true that “there is no fear of God before their eyes,” the ministry of conviction would not be necessary.

Some have taken upon themselves to teach men to fear God through various forms of thought. The Word of God points out the futility of such an effort. Of wayward Israel He said, “Forasmuch as this people draw near Me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor Me, but have removed their heart far from Me, and their fear toward Me is taught by the precept of men” (Isa 29:13). The utter uselessness of such an approach is found in the incapacity of the fallen, or fleshly, nature. It has no ability to fear God. That is why it does not do so. By nature, men do NOT think of God, or consider His ways. That is why His fear is not before their eyes, or the focus of their attention. That is why they do not seek Him, and why they continue to sin. They are in the grip of nature.

By saying the fear of God is “not before their eyes,” the Spirit means it is not evident to them, and is not perceived as necessary. Like Balaam, they stumble on in their own ways, oblivious to the destruction that looms before them.

before his eyes.” This is the kind of fear that is wholesome, provoking men to “to hate evil: pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the froward mouth” (Prov 8:13). Such fear compels those possessing it to “depart from evil” (Prov 16:6).

on in their own ways, oblivious to the destruction that looms before them.

One might ponder, “How, then, can we ‘save with fear’ those who are out of the way (Jude 23)? First, we do not do so by appealing to earthly reasoning. We already know their minds do not think in this manner. Telling them of the natural consequences of sin, like disease and sorrow, will have no lasting effect. Flesh not only does not think in that way, it

But such fear is not in men by nature, confirming they do need a righteousness from God. If you are ever prone to wonder why men continue in their sin and rebellion, not turning to the

THE MINISTRY OF THE LAW

⁴⁹ “Now we know that whatever the law says, it says to those who are under the law, that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God.”

Having proved that all men stand in need of a righteousness from God, the Spirit now turns to the Divinely appointed means of persuading men of that truth. He particularly addresses this to the Jews, although not exclusively to them, because they made their boast in possessing the Law. However, there is a strong tendency in the flesh to trust in Law. It has no objection to following a rigorous routine, just as long as death to the desires of the flesh is not required.

The truth of the matter is that all men are far worse by nature than they think. The extent of the fall of humanity is far greater than flesh thinks, or wants to think. A disposition remains in man that leads him to think more highly of himself than he ought to think. The Lord has made provision to convince him of the depth of his sin.

We will now address things that cannot be learned from nature. While the things that are made testify to the “eternal power and Deity” of God, they cannot convince the soul of sin. That is a work reserved for a more proficient minister.

WHAT IS “THE LAW”?

The word “Law” does not refer to any law of nature, or of civil authorities. This is “the Law” that was “given by Moses” (John 1:17). It is summarized in the Ten Commandments, which were “the words of the covenant” given to Israel (Ex 34:28). “The Law” also included the elaborations of the Ten Commandments, together with its blessings and curses.

Although the Law was given to Israel as a covenant (Rom 9:4), its ministry was not limited to them, as this text will affirm. It served a higher purpose than that of a covenant to Israel.

There is a strain of theology that affirms the Law has been totally abrogated—much like being erased. This particular persuasion presents God as repromulgating certain of the ten commandments, which are perceived as relevant to life in Christ. Our text will show this is not the case. The Law has been terminated as a means to righteousness, as taught in Romans 10:4. It has not, however, been obliterated.

THE LAW DOES SPEAK

Here the Law is pictured as though it were a person, speaking to humanity. There is a message that it is delivering—an essential message. There is a certain tone to the Law that can be discerned by the sensitive heart. It speaks, and to certain people.

If the Law had been abrogated, or annulled, it would speak no longer. There are, however, certain people who still need to hear the testimony of the Law.

THOSE UNDER THE LAW

Whatever the Law says, it says to those who are under its dominion, and are responsible to it. While this was primarily the Jews, it was not only the Jews. One particular reason for this dissertation was the tendency of the Jews to apply the Law to everyone but themselves.

What follows is common knowledge—something that is evident: “we know.” The law is not speculative, nor does it deal with vain philosophies. It brings an essential message.

The Galatian brethren were Gentiles, and yet the Law is said to be their schoolmaster to bring them to Christ (Gal 3:24-25). Before they were in Christ, they were responsible to the Law, even though it was not given as a covenant to them.

Notice, the text does not say “whatever the Law SAID,” but “whatever the Law SAYS.” Its ministry is still going on. In the strictest sense of the Word, those “under the Law” are those whose conduct is wayward—who must be held in check because of the dominance of sin. From this vantage point the Spirit says, “Knowing this: that the law is not made for a righteous person, but for the lawless and insubordinate, for the ungodly and for sinners, for the unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers, for fornicators, for sodomites, for kidnappers, for liars, for perjurers, and if there is any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine, according to the glorious gospel of the blessed God which was committed to my trust” (1 Tim 1:9-11). Unless lawless people only existed among the Jews, therefore, the work of the Law was not confined to them.

Notice that this perspective of the Law is “according to the glorious Gospel of the blessed God.” More precisely, the passage reads, “and for whatever else is contrary to the sound doctrine that conforms to the glorious gospel of the blessed God, which he entrusted to me.”^{NIV} The idea is that the Law speaks to those whose lives contradict the truth of the Gospel, which came 1,500 years after the Law was given. The Law, therefore, is still at work.

EVERY MOUTH STOPPED

The assignment given to the Law is to silence the boastful and alibiing mouths of all men. It is to convince them that they are guilty before God and without excuse. When this occurs, men will emulate Job, who said, “Behold, I am vile; What shall I answer You? I lay my hand over my mouth” (Job 40:4). The Law speaks with strong tones to all men, “Hold thy peace, lay thine hand upon thy mouth” (Judges 18:19).

God has decreed that “no flesh will glory in His presence” (1 Cor 1:29). That will ultimately be the case when we all “appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad” (2 Cor 5:10; Rom 14:10). At that time, every mouth will be silenced before the Lord of glory. Like the man with no wedding garment, transgressors will be “speechless” (Matt 22:12).

However, the law begins that ministry now, in this world. With powerful arguments, it convinces men they have sinned and come short of the glory of God. It removes their excuses and explanations from their minds, proving they have willingly and repeatedly broken God’s Law.

Paul provides a vivid portrayal of the Law's ministry. In the seven chapter of Romans, he recounts his former persuasion that he was righteous of himself. Before being in Christ, the "motions of sin," or "sinful passions" were at work "in our members, to bring forth death" (Rom 7:5). That was the fact of the case, yet Paul confesses this knowledge had escaped him. Outwardly, Paul, formerly Saul of Tarsus, was impeccably righteous. According to his own testimony, "concerning the righteousness which is in the law," he was "blameless" (Phil 3:6). Even when he was persecuting the church, he thought he was doing what was right. Living in all good conscience, he said, "I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth" (Acts 23:1; 26:9).

Now the Law enters. It comes to "stop" Paul's mouth. Here is his testimony. "I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet. But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. For without the law sin was dead. For I was alive without the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died. And the commandment, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death. For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it slew me" (Rom 7:7-11). Once it came home to Paul's heart that sin was an inward matter, "sin,

Let it be clear that the "guilt" of reference did not begin when the Law came home in power. The Law convinces the sinner that he is already guilty, and that his guilt was a matter of corrupted choice.

seizing the opportunity afforded by the commandment, produced in me every kind of covetous desire. For apart from law, sin is dead."^{NIV} The sinful nature was there all along, but was hidden under the facade of religious flesh. But when the commandment broke through to his conscience, his flesh rose up in rebellion, filling his mind with "coveting of every kind."^{NASB}

The Law was not wicked in doing this, but brought out that wickedness was in Saul of Tarsus. Effectively, it stopped his mouth, and brought him to Jesus for cleansing, renewal, and commissioning. That is the ministry of the Law.

ALL THE WORLD BECOMES GUILTY

Here the Spirit devastates the notion that the Law was ONLY for the Jew. The text reads, "and all the world may become guilty before God." The NASB, NIV, NRSV, and RSV read "become," or "held accountable to God." In my judgment, this is a very weak rendering of the text. The word translated "guilty" comes from ὑπόδικος, which means liable to punishment. In this case "accountable" carries the idea of "condemned already," and not that of a trial set forth to establish guilt.

The guilt is "before God," not merely in the conscience. Such a sentence requires the need of a Savior, and of a just acquittal upon the basis of another.

Thus, the soul is prepared for a Redeemer, having been convinced of its need for One. What a marvelous work has been assigned to the Law, and how faithfully it does its work.

KNOWLEDGE OF SIN, NOT JUSTIFICATION

²⁰ Therefore by the deeds of the law no flesh will be justified in His sight, for by the law is the knowledge of sin. With spiritual skill, and under the powerful influence of the Holy Spirit, the Apostle has shown the absolute need of a righteousness from God. He has left no stone unturned, devastating every argument against the need for righteousness. His words are like those mentioned by Solomon in Ecclesiastes 12:11. "The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies, which are given from one shepherd." Indeed they are! Who has not felt the weight of these powerful arguments. Have they not confirmed our need of a Savior and the righteousness of God? Now, the Spirit will draw some further conclusions, showing us that we cannot seek justification by the Law. It was given to make all the world "guilty before God," not to enable them to become righteous by keeping a set of commandments. In fact, men had no propensity or ability to keep God's commandments, until they were reconciled by the death of God's Son.

THE DEEDS OF THE LAW

Precisely what are "the deeds of the Law?" The "deeds of the law" and the "works of the Law" are the same thing. They are the "deeds prescribed by the law."^{NRSV} The NIV reads, "Therefore no one will be declared righteous in His sight by observing the law." And why is this so? Is not the Law good, and holy, and just? Is it not right to do the law? To fulfill the demands of the Law? Did not the Law promise life to those who kept it? As it is written, "For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them" (Rom 10:5; Lev 18:5; Gal 3:12)? How is it, then, that man cannot be justified, or made righteous, by fulfilling the deeds of the Law?

The key here is the word "Therefore." The previous verses (1:19-3:18) have declared and proved that all are guilty of sin. Human nature has been so corrupted, that it cannot do what God requires in the Law. Therefore, rather than applauding men for their good deeds, the Law condemns them for their sin. The demands of the law upon a sinner are much like the demands of a marathon race upon a person in the intensive care unit of a hospital. They extend beyond the ability of fallen man. Blessed day when that truth comes home to the heart.

Jesus revealed another aspect of this to His disciples. He posed a hypothetical situation, confirming how far men had fallen from the glory of God. “But which of you, having a slave plowing or tending sheep, will say to him when he has come in from the field, ‘Come immediately and sit down to eat’? But will he not say to him, ‘Prepare something for me to eat, and properly clothe yourself and serve me until I have eaten and drunk; and afterward you will eat and drink’? He does not thank the slave because he did the things which were commanded, does he? So you too, when you do all the things which are commanded you, say, ‘We are unworthy slaves; we have done only that which we ought to have done’” (Lk 17:7-20).

The Lord knows that no mortal has ever done everything God commanded to be done. Yet, He poses this situation to make a point. There is no merit before God for simply doing what you have been told to do. That is an obligation for which no reward is due—particularly eternal life. Thus, should we imagine that we have actually done “ALL the things which were commanded” us, we would still be required to say. “We are unworthy slaves; we have done only that which we ought to have done.” By the deeds of the Law no flesh will be justified. The Law deals ONLY with obligations. It does not address men as those who have been freed to move into the presence of the Lord, but as those who are enslaved to sin, requiring sacrifices and offerings for sin.

NOT JUSTIFIED IN HIS SIGHT

While men may tend to overstate their own accomplishments in this world, they will not be able to stand before God and boast. No person will be “justified in the sight of God” because of what they have done! If the Lord Jesus were removed from the scenario, there would not be a solitary soul inducted into the tabernacle of the Most High.

Later in Romans, the Spirit takes up this argument again, pointing to Abraham, who is the “father of us all” (Rom 4:16). “What shall we say then that Abraham our father, as pertaining to the flesh, hath found? For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory; BUT NOT BEFORE GOD. For what saith the scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness” (Rom 4:1-3).

There is a solid reason for this situation. Men have been universally convicted of sin. There is no one who is righteous, understands, seeks God, or does good. That is the Divine assessment, and is beyond all controversy. In that context, the very notion of being justified by the deeds of the Law becomes absurd. These two things—To be justified by the works of the Law, and to be guilty of sin—cannot be blended together. They are an admixture. If man is guilty, as our text affirms, then he CANNOT be justified by his own doing. It is his doing that condemns him, and therefore it cannot justify him. That is the argument of our text.

THE KNOWLEDGE OF SIN

One might suppose that, given this situation, the Law is useless. God forbid! Rather than being impractical and without value, it brings “the knowledge of sin.” Those who view the Scriptures as a manual of conduct do well to consider this verse. This passage has taught us that human conduct is not the issue. That is because every man is convicted of unacceptable conduct—“all have sinned.” The issue is being righteous before God, and the Spirit has shown us that, by nature, every mortal is without that righteousness. “There is none righteous, no not one.”

The Law puts a handle, so to speak, upon sin. It identifies it for us, so we can perceive it and be persuaded of its dominance over us by nature. Its primary work is not to show us what sin is so that we can avoid it, but to convince us we have committed it! It identifies deviate demeanor.

In identifying sin, the Law strips man of any hope of saving himself. It powerfully convinces the individual that the heart is “deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked” (Jer 17:9). Thanks be unto God for deliverance from the condemning Law! It offered us no strength and no newness of life. It only pointed at is and said, “GUILTY!” O, the bitter goad of a conscience that experiences the bludgeon of the Law! It is a precious deliverance when confidence floods the heart instead of condemnation.

While men may tend to overstate their own accomplishments in this world, they will not be able to stand before God and boast. No person will be “justified in the sight of God” because of what they have done! If the Lord Jesus were removed from the scenario, there would not be a solitary soul inducted into the tabernacle of the Most High.

The Law stopped our mouths, not allowing us to boast before God. But the Savior of mankind has stopped the mouth of the Law, not allowing it to condemn those who have died and been raised with Him. Blessed, indeed, is the soul who knows these things! “Let the redeemed of the LORD say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy.” (Psa 107:2). After you have let the Law do its work, then let the comforting Spirit do His work in you as well!

CONCLUSION

There are few areas of thought that are as productive as the one with which we are dealing. As a rule, the people of God have been deprived of the type of reasoning that has been presented in these chapters. The universal need for righteousness, when seen, is a great equalizer among the sons of men. It removes boasting, and uncovers a well of thanksgiving for the Lord Jesus Christ.

For some time, I have sensed the general dulness of professed Christians concerning these things. There appears to be a preoccupation with religious organization, career building, and other things related to these twin monsters.

Associated with these conditions is an unacceptable level of spiritual understanding and a deplorable lack of confidence toward God. The Lord Jesus is somewhere in the background of religious thought, and the power of godliness is denied more than any of us wish to admit. There is also an alarming level of immorality and spiritual ignorance in the professed church. Scriptural illiteracy is also at a totally unacceptable level.

What is the cause of these things? I am going to lay the responsibility for these conditions at the feet of church leaders. The very things that are so strongly espoused in the book of Romans are hardly known by the masses. They are not being declared, but have been supplanted by other matters deemed more practical. The results have been devastating. Far too many believers are admittedly not ready to meet the Lord.

The answer to this situation is a return to the powerful proclamation of the Gospel of Christ. In it the righteousness of God is revealed “from faith to faith,” which is why it is “the power of God unto salvation.” Let there also be a return to the strong presentation of the universal need for the righteousness of God. Such preaching will move men away from reliance in the flesh.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 10

RIGHTEOUSNESS THROUGH FAITH

^{3:21} But now the righteousness of God apart from the law is revealed, being witnessed by the Law and the Prophets, ²² even the righteousness of God, through faith in Jesus Christ, to all and on all who believe. For there is no difference; ²³ for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God, ²⁴ being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, ²⁵ whom God set forth as a propitiation by His blood, through faith, to demonstrate His righteousness, because in His forbearance God had passed over the sins that were previously committed, ²⁶ to demonstrate at the present time His righteousness, that He might be just and the justifier of the one who has faith in Jesus. (Romans 3:21-26^{NKJV})

INTRODUCTION

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. RIGHTEOUSNESS APART FROM THE LAW (3:21)
- II. RIGHTEOUSNESS THROUGH FAITH (3:22a)
- III. THERE IS NO DIFFERENCE (3:22b)
- IV. A PROPITIATION SET FORTH (3:25)
- V. R I G H T E O U S N E S S DEMONSTRATED (3:26)

With great power, the Spirit has established the universal guilt of sin. Without the Law, yet with the powerful testimony of both creation and conscience, the Gentile world lived in sin. They failed to seek the Lord as they were appointed and positioned to do, creating idols, and refusing to be thankful. The Jews also were subjected to the unwavering and consistent testimony of creation. Additionally, they also received the more extensive testimony of the Law. Nature did not identify sin: the Law did. Nature pronounced neither blessing nor cursing: the Law did. Nature presented no intelligent shadows or types that declared a coming Redeemer: the Law did. Yet, the Jews also were dominated by sin, often falling into precisely the same sins as the Gentiles, who had neither Law nor promise. All have sinned!

As if this were not enough, the testimony of God Himself is brought before us. Assessing the totality of humanity with an omniscient eye He concludes, "There is none righteous, no, not one: There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one" (3:10-12).

All of this is intended to remove all hope in the flesh. Every person will eventually confront the Creator. Nothing that was resident in Adam can prepare us for that inevitability. Time has confirmed this to be the case. The outlining of moral responsibilities has also proved inadequate for the required preparation. Whatever may be said of the human intellect, it is not equal to this task. However precious the human will may be, it is not capable of making a decision on its own that will enable one to pass Divine scrutiny. Human emotion, upon which so much human activity is built, cannot equip us to stand before the Lord of glory. Intellect, will, and emotion are impotent to change our condition. They cannot remove a single transgression, make us clean, or induce a vivifying hope within us. However unpalatable this may be to men, it is nevertheless true. The totality of the Gentile world confirms the condition, as well as the total history of the Jews. We need a righteousness from God. We cannot do without it, for we cannot develop one of our own.

The means through which God's righteousness is received is a central doctrine of Scripture, by Given O. Blakely

YOU MUST BE BORN AGAIN

This entire section of Scripture is an exposition of Jesus' poignant words, "You MUST be born again" (John 3:7). The delineation of the dominance of sin over both Gentile and Jew confirms, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh" (John 3:6). The fact that "there is none righteous, no not one" substantiates "the flesh profits nothing" (John 6:63).

The entirety of the Adamic order has been repudiated by God. Even the totality of the natural order has been "made subject to vanity," or subjected to mortality (Rom 8:20). Whatever gains its effectiveness from natural resources is powerless to bring a person one inch closer to God. Such things, regardless of their acclaimed superiority, have no effect whatsoever in altering the will, removing sin, or making the conscience pure.

Having said this, I am compelled to observe that a considerable amount of religious expertise relies completely upon natural resources—"the natural man" (1 Cor 2:14). Organization has no power to purge the conscience from dead works. Scholarship cannot enhance fellowship with God. Language expertise cannot liberate the soul from the dominion of sin. The accreditation of the most prestigious university in the world cannot write one's name in heaven. As simplistic as that may appear, the religious structure of our Western culture has managed to obscure the reality of these things.

Organization has no power to purge the conscience from dead works. Scholarship cannot enhance fellowship with God. Language expertise cannot liberate the soul from the dominion of sin. The accreditation of the most prestigious university in the world cannot write one's name in heaven.

It is not necessary for difficult and oppressive circumstances to be the means of recognizing the poverty of the flesh.

The Word of God can convince us that in our flesh "dwells no good thing" (Rom 7:18).

WHY IS IT NECESSARY TO SAY THIS?

At some point, the heart must be brought to trust in the Word of the Lord.—particularly its assessment of the human race. The reason for this is straightforward. MEN WILL NOT RECEIVE A RIGHTEOUSNESS FROM GOD UNTIL THEY ARE CONVINCED THEY HAVE NONE OF THEIR OWN.

One of the grievous transgressions of sectarianism is the attempt to codify morality and systematize salvation. Without going into the particulars of this circumstance, it is enough to observe WHY men engage in such efforts. It is because they either do not possess the righteousness of God, or lack the confidence that they do. An ignorance of the righteousness of God (Rom 10:3) compels the unlearned to seek a righteousness of their own. This is the mother of legalism, and is a blight upon the body of Christ.

If a fundamental ignorance of the righteousness of God for men did not exist, the passage we are considering would not be necessary. It has been given to us to clarify what the devil has obscured, and to lift us into the realm of blessing.

RIGHTEOUSNESS APART FROM THE LAW

3:21* But now the righteousness of God apart from the law is revealed, being witnessed by the Law and the Prophets. Having seen the fruitlessness of all human endeavors to become righteous, the Spirit will now reveal to us the Divine initiative. He will show us what the Lord has done about our situation. Its absolute effectiveness and availability will be proclaimed with great spiritual power. Here is something every soul needs to comprehend.

BUT NOW

Here is a joyful transition from the condemnation of the Law to the good news of the Gospel. The provision of a righteousness from God is not an afterthought, or a Divine reaction to an unexpected turn of events. Since what is now revealed transcends what was experienced at the first by Adam, it should be evident it was purposed before him. Things did not begin with Adam, but with Divine purpose.

In His redemptive capacity, Jesus "was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you" (1 Pet 1:20). He is truly "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev 13:8). That being the case, Adam was not the ultimate man, but only "the first man" (1 Cor 15:45,47). Through him, God's "eternal purpose" was initiated upon the earth. That purpose included the predetermination that those foreknown by God would be

The means through which God's righteousness is received is a central doctrine of Scripture, by Given O. Blakely

“conformed to the image of His Son” (Rom 8:29). This conformation involved the subject of our text: the “righteousness of God.”

A Purpose for History

From an earthly perspective, it looked as though history was virtually ungoverned, with no real purpose being served. But this was not the case at all. In the digression of man, there was an increasing confirmation of his fundamental sinfulness. Both time and covenant proved this was true.

Avoiding Pointless Philosophy

We must zealously avoid developing crystallized philosophies about this matter, or posing questions that are not posed in Scripture. Some, for example, spend endless hours contemplating whether or not God knew man would sin. Based upon speculation, these contemplators then question why God did not stop man from sinning, or if there was a race before man . . . etc., etc. These are all profitless cogitations.

There Is A Purpose to History

This section of Romans is teaching us how to reason about the origin and history of man. God made man to seek and find Him, and positioned him in both time and place to encourage that quest. Both time and circumstance have confirmed this quest could not be done independently of God. There is not a segment of His creation, whether personal or impersonal, that can correctly function without Him. Blessed is the person who sees and embraces this truth. Such an one is well on the way to experiencing the good and acceptable, and perfect will of God.

“But”

The word “BUT” introduces a contrasting thought—in particular one that declares a Divine working as compared to a human one. The words “but God” occur forty-three times in Scripture (Gen 20:3; 31:7; 45:8; 48:21; 50:20; Ex 13:18; 21:13; Judges 15:19; 1 Sam 23:14; 1 Chron 28:3; Psa 49:15; 64:7; 68:21; 73:26; 75:7; Prov 21:12; Isa 17:13; Jonah 4:7; Mark 12:7; Luke 5:21; 12:20; 16:15; Acts 7:9; 10:28; 13:30; Rom 5:8; 6:17; 1 Cor 1:27; 2:10; 3:6,7; 6:13; 7:15; 10:13; 12:24; 15:38; Gal 3:18,20; 6:14; Eph 2:4; Phil 2:27). In all of these cases, the intervention of God turned the tide. The phrase “but the Lord” occurs fifty times in Scripture, and consistently conveys the same truth (Gen 39:21; Ex 10:20,27; Deut 1:45; 2:21; 3:26; 4:20; 7:23; 9:19; 23:5; 28:65; 1 Sam 1:5; 7:10; 16:7; 2 Sam 22:19; 1 Kings 19:11,12; 17:36,39; 1 Chron 16:26; 2 Chron 6:8; Psa 9:7; 18:18; 34:19; 37:17; 94:22; 96:5; 118:13; Prov 16:2,9; 17:3; 21:2; Isa 5:16; 60:2,19; Jer 1:7; 10:10; 16:15; 20:11; 23:8; 36:26; Hos 8:13; Joel 3:16; Jonah 1:4; Hab 2:20; Acts 9:15; 1 Cor 7:10; 2 Thess 3:3).

“BUT NOW” = After 2,500 years of moral and spiritual futility among the Gentiles, and after 1,500 years of moral and spiritual futility among the Jews under the Law. The testimony of nature, the witness of the conscience, and the attestation of the Law left man unchanged.

I have taken the time to list these references for a purpose. It is not a mere academic exercise, or a word study. Rather, it is intended to confirm there is a certain accent throughout Scripture. Needed change is always introduced by God, and never by man. When, therefore, we read “but now,” we are not reading of the progression of man, or the result of some mythical evolutionary process. Man continued to digress until God did something about it. He continued to be basically unrighteous until God intervened. Man was incapable of fulfilling his appointed purpose until the God of heaven undertook on the behalf of humanity with wisdom and power.

From another perspective “BUT NOW” means since Jesus has died, raised again, and is seated at the right hand of God. “NOW” is the time when the world has been reconciled to God (2 Cor 5:18), sin has been expiated (Heb 9:26), and the devil destroyed (Heb 2:14). As it is written, “For He says: ‘In an acceptable time I have heard you, And in the day of salvation I have helped you.’ Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, NOW is the day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2). This is a new day, a new time, the period for which men have longed since first they heard of a Savior and His great deliverance. “NOW” we have received the atonement (Rom 5:11). “NOW” we are made free from sin (Rom 6:22). “NOW” we are delivered from the condemning law (Rom 7:6). “NOW” there is no condemnation (Rom 8:1). “NOW” in Christ Jesus we who were afar have been made near (Eph 2:13). “NOW” we are no more foreigners and strangers, but fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God (Eph 2:19). “NOW” God is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that works in us (Eph 3:20).

Our need was assessed according to the past. Our benefit is declared in accord with the present time: the time when Christ “is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them” (Heb 7:25).

After allotting 4,000 years for humanity to correct itself, not a single righteous person was found. In fact, men made no real effort to correct their condition, for there was not one who sought the Lord, or did good independently of Divine influence. No champion arose from “the sons of Adam” (Deut 32:8) to rescue mankind. “BUT NOW” that Jesus has put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, and is seated on the right hand of the majesty in the heavens, a wonderful announcement is made.

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD

Having established that all persons are unrighteous by nature, and impotent to change their state, the Spirit now returns to the subject introduced in the first chapter. “For I am not ashamed of the gospel: it is the power of God for salvation to every one who has faith, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. For in it the righteousness of God is revealed through faith for faith; as it is written, ‘He who through faith is righteous shall live’”^{RSV} (Rom 1:16-17).

Connecting the Thought

The extensive reasoning to which we have just been exposed (1:18 through 3:20) is a parenthetical thought. It confirmed the need for a righteousness from God. Whatever men may think of the capacity of the human will, or the strength of human resolve, four thousand years of accumulated history confirmed no one obeyed the testimony of nature, the law of the conscience, or the Law of God, as given through Moses. Righteousness, therefore, must be made known by God. It will not come by further exposure to nature, for that has already proved inadequate. It will not come by elevating the conscience of men, for it has already been shown that men, by nature, pay no heed to their conscience. The revelation will not come by means of the Law, for its administration produced no righteous person. Now we return to a consideration of the righteousness itself.

Revealed In the Gospel

This is the “righteousness” that is revealed, or declared, in the Gospel (Rom 1:16-17). Where this righteousness is not announced, the Gospel has not been preached, for it is revealed in, or by means of, the Gospel of Christ. Wherever men have attempted to preach the Gospel with “wisdom of words” or “enticing words of man’s wisdom,” this righteousness has been obscured (1 Cor 1:17; 2:4). Such preaching empties the cross of its power. As it is written, “For Christ did not send me to baptize, but to preach the gospel--not with words of human wisdom, lest the cross of Christ be emptied of its power”^{NIV} (1 Cor 1:17). In every case, and with no exception, “another Gospel” (2 Cor 11:4; Gal 1:6) successfully obscures the revelation of “the righteousness of God.”

This is “the righteousness which is from God by faith”^{NKJV} (Phil 3:9). It is not developed, it is “revealed.” It is not the result of our works, but comes “through faith.” It does not contribute to human boasting, but leads “to faith”--deeper and increasing faith (Rom 1:17).

God’s Own Righteousness

This is God’s own righteousness—His own character, or Divine nature. It is a “gift” that is given to us because of Christ, through Christ, and by faith (Rom 5:17). The realization, or participation in, this righteousness is the work of God. Thus it is written, “For He [God] hath made Him [Jesus Christ] to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him [Jesus Christ]” (2 Cor 5:21). This is a staggering consideration! Other versions read, “that we might become the righteousness of God in Him”^{NASB} . . . “that in him we might become the righteousness of God.”^{NIV}

Note, the proclamation is not that we will start doing what is righteous, but that we will become “the righteousness of God.” The doing of true righteousness now becomes the evidence of a righteousness already possessed. As it is written, “he that doeth righteousness IS

This is the “righteousness” that is revealed, or declared, in the Gospel (Rom 1:16-17). Where this righteousness is not announced, the Gospel has not been preached, for it is revealed in, or by means of, the Gospel of Christ. Wherever men have attempted to preach the Gospel with “wisdom of words” or “enticing words of man’s wisdom,” this righteousness has been obscured righteous, even as he is righteous” (1 John 3:7). And, to dispel all doubt, those who “become the righteousness of God” will, as they live by faith, “do” righteousness.

Becoming “the righteousness of God” is what makes us God’s “workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works” (Eph 2:10). It is what makes the new birth a NEW birth, separating us from the fleshly order. While the presence of the Holy Spirit confirms we are “the sons of God” (Gal 4:6), being “made the righteousness of God” is what changes our nature. In that experience, and through the promises of the Gospel, we become “partakers of the Divine nature” (2 Pet 1:4).

Elaborating on the Righteousness

It should not surprise us that the Christian community is sharply divided on the precise nature of this righteousness. I will list a few of these views because of the pivotal nature of this passage. Also, very little is said these days about this passage on “the righteousness of God.”

- ▶ Origen (185-254 B.C.) understood this to be God’s attribute of justice.
- ▶ Chrysostom (347-407 B.C.) Felt it referred to Divine clemency, or His mercifulness to forgive.
- ▶ John Campbell (1800-1872 B.C.) said it consisted in man’s conformity to the declared will of God.
- ▶ Macknight taught the righteousness of God signified the righteousness belonging to faith itself.
- ▶ Bishop Newcomb translated the phrase “the righteousness of God” as “God’s method of justification.”
- ▶ Tholuck said of this verse, “The Gospel makes known a way to the perfect fulfillment of the law which is required by God.”
- ▶ Stuart explains “the righteousness of God” is “the justification God bestows.”^{Taken from Haldane’s Commentary on Romans}

Righteousness and Justification

It is necessary to understand that “righteousness” and “justification” are not synonymous. While they come from the same root word, they do not mean the same thing. “Righteousness”* is a state of unblemished character. “Justification” is the means by which this character is imparted to men.

In my judgment, we must avoid the notion that God makes men righteous by giving them the ability to keep His Law.

While the righteousness of the Law IS fulfilled in those who are righteous, it is fulfilled by their walk in the Spirit. As it is written, “That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit” (Rom 8:4). In this case, character is not the result of the fulfillment of the Law, but the fulfillment is a result of character. While this may appear to be a fine distinction, it is a necessary one. Prior to this, the book of Romans has affirmed that man’s doing has been his undoing. Salvation does not rest upon man’s doing, but upon God’s doing. That is why HIS RIGHTEOUSNESS is given to us, rather than a law demanding that we develop our own.

Righteousness is the result of Divine creation, not human doing. Isaiah prophesied of this day of salvation, “You heavens above, rain down righteousness; let the clouds shower it down. Let the earth open wide, let salvation spring up, let righteousness grow with it; I, the LORD, have created it”^{NIV} (Isa 45:8). In confirmation of this, our state in Christ is described by the Spirit in these words. “Put on the new self, which in the likeness of God has been created in righteousness and holiness of the truth”^{NASB} (Eph 4:24).

The “new man” is nothing less than the result of God’s “gift of righteousness.” That nature, is described in this manner: “the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him” (Col 3:10). Believers are admonished to “put on” the new man.

We are apprized that this new nature, or the part of us that is “born of God,” is not capable of sin. Nor, indeed, can Satan touch this part of us. “Whoever has been born of God does not sin, for His seed remains in him; and he cannot sin, because he has been born of God” (1 John 3:8). And again, “We know that whoever is born of God does not sin; but he who has been born of God keeps himself, and the wicked one does not touch him” (1 John 5:18). That nature is “the righteousness of God”—the Divine nature, given to us because of Christ and through our faith.

To “put on the new man” is to live by faith and walk in the Spirit. It is to provide a spiritual climate in which the Lord can work and Satan cannot. Putting on the “new man” involves living in agreement with the Divine nature of which we are made “partakers.” We will do what is right if this is done.

if men are to learn of and experience “the righteousness of God,” they must be delivered from the notion that they can become righteous by doing. The emphasis must be placed upon believing, otherwise righteousness is beyond our reach. This does not eliminate doing, but rather makes doing possible, for without the righteousness of God, it is not possible to do the will of God.

APART FROM THE LAW

This righteousness is made known “apart from,” or separate from, the Law. While the Law of Moses, given as a covenant to Israel, is the particular focus, this word applies to any law. The only righteousness God will receive is NOT made known through, or facilitated by, the principle of law. How poignantly the Spirit says it. “I do not nullify the grace of God; for if righteousness comes through the Law, then Christ died needlessly”^{NASB} (Gal 2:21). Those, therefore, who seek to produce righteousness by adherence to a moral code or by means of a routine or procedure, have nullified God’s grace for themselves. They have embraced a religion that has no need for Jesus, and thrust the righteousness of God from themselves.

This does not mean the Law itself is unrighteous. Rather, it confirms the Law holds up a standard that natural man cannot attain. It is IMPOSSIBLE for man to become righteous because of what he does, or by means of law—any law. Thus it is written, “Is the law then against the promises of God? Certainly not! For if there had been a law given which could have given life, truly righteousness would have been by the law” (Gal 3:21). The way out of sin is not through law, commandment, or procedure of any kind. If a God-given law could not retrieve men from the fall and enable them to be righteous, there is no law that can do so.

Thus “the righteousness of God” is revealed to us “without the law,”^{KJV} or “apart from the law.” There is a good reason for this. Righteousness is appropriated by faith, and the Law has nothing whatsoever to do with faith. As it is written, “The law is not based on faith; on the contrary, ‘The man who does these things will live by them’”^{NIV} (Gal 3:12). Nowhere does the Law require faith, or give a promise to those who will believe. Law operates on a different principle. It is based upon DOING, not believing. “The man who does these things will live by them” (Rom 10:5).

Thus, if men are to learn of and experience “the righteousness of God,” they must be delivered from the notion that they can become righteous by doing. The emphasis must be placed upon believing, otherwise righteousness is beyond our reach. This does not eliminate doing, but rather makes doing possible, for without the righteousness of God, it is not possible to do the will of God.

IS REVEALED

Because this righteousness comes from God, it is said to be “revealed,” or “manifested.”^{KJV} The word used here (manifested or revealed) means something that already exists is made known, or becomes apparent. This does not speak of something that develops, and then appears by virtue of its growth. Rather, it is something already developed that is opened up to the understanding of men. Further, until it is revealed, it is not possible to know of it. By its very nature, the thing to be revealed is hidden from human understanding. No amount of mental discipline or diligent search will discover it. It a thing cannot be known by human effort, revelation is not necessary.

For example, men of extraordinarily disciplined minds may study the complexities of nature, yet they will NEVER come upon “the righteousness of God.” Nature does not testify of God’s righteousness, but of His “eternal power and Godhead.” Those possessing astute powers of reason may probe the moral requirements of God, yet they will not discover a righteousness that can be given to men. This is a provision that must be revealed. The good news is that it has been made known through the Gospel of Christ. It is not made known through something that is seen, like creation. It is not revealed through requirements, like the Law. Rather, it is manifested through a message of Divine accomplishment and provision.

WITNESSED BY THE LAW AND PROPHETS

Other versions read, “to which the Law and the Prophets testify,”^{NIV} “attested by the law and the prophets,”^{NRSV} and “although the law and the prophets bear witness to it.”^{RSV} The matter to which both the Law and the Prophets witnessed was a righteousness from God. Neither of them declared that it was present, but that it was coming.

The witness of the Law and the Prophets was twofold. First, they confirmed that men needed a righteousness from God. Second, they foretold by types and prophecies that such a righteousness would be provided by God.

The Law: Righteousness Needed

The Law held before men the requirements of God. The Ten Commandments were precisely that: “commandments.” They were neither suggestions nor goals. The Law placed before men a means to life: “You shall therefore keep My statutes and My judgments, which if a man does, he shall live by them: I am the LORD”^{NKJV} (Lev 18:5). To “live” before God equates to being accepted by, and united to, Him. Those who took the Law seriously became acutely aware of their own unrighteousness, and of the absolute essentiality of righteousness before God. It whetted the appetite of sensitive hearts for that righteousness.

In the sacrificial system, outlined in the book of Leviticus, a witness to the righteousness of God was also seen. The need for the shedding of blood, cleansing, and atonement set before men the need for a means to approach God. A sense of the necessity of cleansing was developed, as well as the need for God being approached with the utmost sobriety (Heb 5:1; 8:3; 9:9,23; 10:1-11; 10:11).

Law discovers sin, defining it and convicting of it. But it cannot produce a righteousness that finds the sinner free from sin and able to stand confidently before the Lord. When it comes to the revelation of the righteousness of God, we must come higher than Law can bring us.

The ministry of the High Priest declared the need for the ongoing provision of Divine satisfaction. A righteousness from God, while once conferred, would require the presence of an active representative before the Living God. That representative must be selected by God, and accomplish the work of God. All of this is fulfilled by the Lord Jesus Christ (Heb 2:17; 3:1; 4:14-16; 5:5-10; 6:20; 7:26; 8:1-3; 9:7-25; 10:21; 13:11).

The Prophets: Righteousness Foretold

The righteousness announced in the Gospel was witnessed to by the holy prophets. They spoke of a time of acceptability, and of a change in character.

As a prophet, Moses spoke of a time when men would be changed. “And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live” (Deut 30:6). This circumcision is experienced in Christ Jesus, and is a view of being granted “the righteousness of God” (Col 2:11-12).

Ezekiel witnessed to this righteousness as the removal of the heart of stone, and the granting of a heart of flesh. “A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh” (Ezek 36:26).

Isaiah proclaimed this righteousness as the experience of liberty and change. “Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert” (Isa 35:5-6).

Jeremiah said it was experienced by the Lord Himself becoming our righteousness. “In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS” (Jer 23:6; 33:16).

Malachi declared the righteousness from the standpoint of its Origin, declaring it would result in renewal and release. “But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall” (Mal 4:2).

Because none were righteous, “no not one,” exceeding great and precious promises were held out to men, giving them hope of a better day. Under the administration of the Lord Jesus, and because of His accomplishments, these promises are now realized by faith. This is why Paul said, “Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come: that Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should show light unto the people, and to the Gentiles” (Acts 26:22-23). He devoted himself to the proclamation of the Gospel, in which all that Moses and the Prophets promised was revealed. There were not theological novelties in his preaching, and there ought not be in ours. The summation of that revelation is the conferment of the righteousness of God upon men. What a marvelous announcement!

RIGHTEOUSNESS THROUGH FAITH

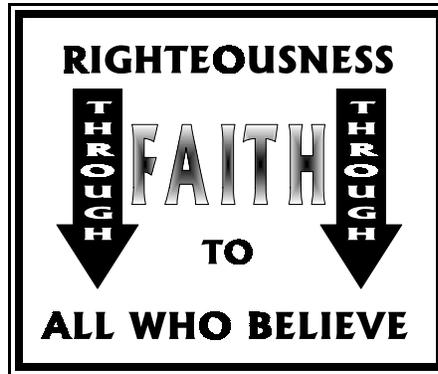

“22a Even the righteousness of God, through faith in Jesus Christ, to all and on all who believe.” The Spirit now elaborates on the righteousness that is revealed through the Gospel, and was witnessed to by the Law and the Prophets. This is the chief benefit flowing from the Gospel, and was the primary light displayed through both the Law and the Prophets. Without this righteousness, there would have been no purpose for the Law. The Prophets would also have served no lasting purpose were they not to have pointed forward to this singular experience.

EVEN THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD

Notice what care is taken by the Holy Spirit. He leaves no room for any man-developed righteousness. There is no place for a righteousness proceeding from the Law. There is only one acceptable righteousness, and that is the righteousness BELONGING TO God Himself. While the righteousness comes FROM God, that is not the point of this expression. The ownership of the righteousness is the point. It is God’s righteousness.

Having confirmed that God has found none that were righteous, He now turns from the vanity of men to the effectiveness of God. There are two sides to the coin of salvation. (1) The removal of transgression, and (2) The receiving of righteousness from God. The emphasis is placed upon the latter. The remission of sins is in order to the reception of the righteousness of God, for that righteousness cannot be imparted where sin remains dominant.

There are times when salvation is viewed from the lower side of the coin—the remission of sin. “In whom we have redemption through His blood, even the forgiveness of sins” (Col 1:14). “And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses” (Acts 13:39). “To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins” (Acts 10:43). This is, indeed, a marvelous accomplishment, and well ought the children of the Lord live in continual praise for it.

The remission of sin, however, would serve no lasting purpose if we were not given the righteousness of God. If only our sins were forgiven, and no righteousness received, we would be like the swept and garnished house of which Jesus spoke. “When an unclean spirit goes out of a man, he goes through dry places, seeking rest, and finds none. Then he says, ‘I will return to my house from which I came.’ And when he comes, he finds it empty, swept, and put in order. Then he goes and takes with him seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter and dwell there; and the last state of that man is worse than the first”^{NKJV} (Matt 12:43-45). Many a professed believer is like that house. They have been cleansed, and everything has been rearranged. Yet, there is nothing of substance in them. They are not growing in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ (2 Pet 3:18). Nor, indeed, are they drawing near to the Lord with a true heart, having their conscience purged from dead works, and their bodies washed with pure water (Heb 10:22).

This condition is largely owing to the lack of preaching concerning the righteousness of God. Neither its necessity nor availability is known by many believers. When they read the Scriptures, they read them like a manual of conduct, or a road map giving directions. They do not see the announcements or proclamations of the Scriptures. They are blinded to the types and shadows set forth in the Law, and the marvelous prophecies of the day of salvation in the Prophets. To them, righteousness is nothing more than a standard of conduct, dealing mostly with external matters, and human disciplines. It is a tragic circumstance!

Let none imagine that the word of God has nothing to say about our conduct, or about subduing sinful inclinations resident in the “flesh,” or sinful nature. But that is not the EMPHASIS of the “Apostles’ doctrine.”

A Superior Gift

When it comes to what we receive from God, there is a gift that stands out above all others. It is greater than food, clothing, and shelter. It transcends financial provisions, health of body, and domestic blessing. It is “the gift of righteousness” (Rom 5:17). The remission of sin is the necessary preparation for receiving this righteousness. The gift of the Spirit is essential to its maintenance.

But the righteousness itself is the point. Those who possess it are accepted by God.

A Brief Elaboration

I must labor this point. God is righteous in saving us, but that is not the point of phrase “the righteousness of God.” It is not that He is simply having mercy upon us. To dwell with the Lord forever, men must be like Him. A transformation must take place in them that makes them harmonious with the God who “made” them. Those at variance with the Lord will not be received by Him.

Although little is said of this in our day, this is a fundamental thread of reasoning throughout the Scriptures. From one perspective, the reason for condemnation is dissonance, or conflict, between God and man. That conflict exists in both thoughts and ways (Isa 55:8-9). It is confirmed in the ignorance of God that characterizes all who are not in Christ (Eph 4:18). It is declared in the universal indictment of humanity, “and come short of the glory of God” (Rom 3:23). Unless a reconciliation is effected, and men are brought into accord with God, there is no hope of salvation.

This is why “the righteousness of God” must be more than a mere doctrinal point, or a commentary on the Person of God. It is something that MUST be experienced, possessed, and resident in us.

THROUGH FAITH IN JESUS CHRIST

Having established the need for having “the righteousness of God,” the Spirit now addresses the means through which it is received. How is it that the righteousness of God can be received? At this point, men have often chose to argue about the matter rather than declare the Gospel. The Spirit will not present alternative views of the subject, but will simply affirm the means.

The reception of this righteousness is unequivocally “through faith in Jesus Christ.” The KJV reads, “which is by faith of Jesus Christ.” By this, the faith Jesus had is not intended, but the faith He authors (Heb 12:2). Again, there is no point to arguing about this, it is “given” unto us “to believe” (Phil 1:29).

The reception of faith is not a one time experience. For example, Paul told the Ephesian saints he had heard of their “faith in the Lord Jesus” (Eph 1:15). Yet, in his benediction to them he said, “Peace to the brethren, and love WITH FAITH, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ” (Eph 6:23). In my judgment, there is a great need for such a blessing in the church of our time.

“Faith” is the possession, and “believe” is the expression of that faith. From another aspect, faith is the ability to believe—to be convinced and assured of the truth of Jesus Christ.

The preeminent focus of faith is the Lord Jesus Christ Himself. In fact, the summation of God’s Word is represented as “the record that God gave of his Son,”^{KJV} or “the witness that God has borne concerning His Son”^{NASB} (1 John 5:10). The primary testimony of God does not concern the direction of human conduct, but the Person of His Son. No individual will spiritually advance until his attention is placed upon the Son of God, the very heart of Divine witness.

Faith in Christ is a persuasion that He is precisely Who God has declared Him to be. HE is the Savior of the world (1 John 4:14). HE is the One who is bringing us to God (1 Pet 3:18). HE has reconciled us to God (2 Cor 5:18). HE has destroyed the devil (Heb 2:14). HE has plundered principalities and powers (Col 2:15). HE is the head of all things for the church (Eph 1:22-23). HE is presently mediating the New Covenant (Heb 12:24). HE is interceding for us at this time (Heb 7:25). HE will come and receive us to Himself, that where He is, there we be also (John 14:3). These are not mere points of doctrine, but realities to be embraced by the heart.

Faith involves persuasion and confidence. As it is written, “Now faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen”^{NASB} (Heb 11:1). Faith is convinced that what God has “promised, He was able also to perform” (Rom 4:21). It embraces the declaration of the Gospel with both hands.

This perfectly accords with the rest of Scripture. The focus of real faith is Christ Himself. Thus Paul answered the question “What must I do to be saved?” with these words: “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house” (Acts 16:31). God is proclaimed as the Justifier of “the one who has faith in Jesus” (Rom 3:26). Justification is pointedly said NOT to be by the works of the Law but “by faith in Jesus Christ” (Gal 2:16). The promise of God is realized “by faith in Jesus Christ” (Gal 3:22). As we approach the Lord, boldness and access are realized “through faith in Him” (Eph 3:12). Paul articulated the appointed quest of all believers. It was to be “found in Him, not having my own righteousness, which is from the law, but that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is from God by faith” (Phil 3:9).

All of this may appear rather elementary, but it is not. Great stress is placed upon faith in Jesus Christ because men are easily diverted from this central matter. It is altogether too common for men to accent WHAT is believed rather than WHO is believed.

Called into Christ’s Fellowship

“Faith in Jesus Christ” earnestly seeks to appropriate what He has been appointed to give. It longs to be with Him, know Him, and fellowship with Him. God has not called us into the fellowship of a denomination or train of thought. Rather, He has “called into the fellowship of His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord” (1 Cor 1:9).

Let it be clear, no salvational benefits will be realized apart from companionship with Jesus! Those who are aloof from Jesus are, by that very circumstance, excluded from His blessings. Satan has deluded people into thinking they can push Jesus Christ to the background of their lives and still be approved of God. Men have even succumbed to demonic doctrines that justify such a conclusion. But these are all imaginations to be cast down with our mighty spiritual weaponry (2 Cor 10:5-6). Faith in Christ cannot be part-time, occasional, or seasonal. If it is not the dominating principle of life, it will soon be

“To all”

This phrase emphasizes the imputation, or conferment, of righteousness upon the believer. This will be developed at length in the fourth chapter. It accents that righteousness is a gift, and not an achievement.

“On all”

This expression coincides with the prophecy of Isaiah. “For He has clothed me with the garments of salvation, He has covered me with the robe of righteousness” (Isa 61:10). The 132nd Psalm reads, “Let Your priests be

It would be interesting to hear that question answered by denominational devotees. The answer, of course, will confirm to us the substance of Philip’s preaching. The eunuch answered, “I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God” (Acts 8:36-37). That is the believing of reference in our text.

What About Obedience?

The disciple of Law is not content with the promise of righteousness upon the basis of faith in Christ, or believing. Such imagine that faith must have obedience added to it. But this is not the case at all. Obedience is inherent in faith. Where obedience is not found, faith is not present! It is by faith that we obey, for obedience is neither possible nor recognized apart from faith.

The disciple of Law is not content with the promise of righteousness upon the basis of faith in Christ, or believing. Such imagine that faith must have obedience added to it. But this is not the case at all. Obedience is inherent in faith. Where obedience is not found, faith is not present!

Is it not written “By faith Abraham . . . obeyed” (Heb 11:8). Abel offered his sacrifice “by faith” (Heb 11:4). Noah prepared the ark “by faith” (Heb 11:7). Moses kept the Passover “by faith” (Heb 11:28). Israel passed through the Red Sea “by faith” (Heb 11:29). Faith is the engine of obedience, and the only guarantee that it will be heartfelt and effective.

dashed upon the rocks of carnality.

TO ALL AND ON ALL

²² The righteousness of God . . . unto all and upon all them.” Other versions read “for all who believe,”^{RISV} “for all those who believe,”^{NASB} and “to all who believe.”^{NIV} I prefer the KJV, NKJV, Webster, Douay-Rheims, Revised Webster, and Young’s Literal translations: “to all and upon (on) all.” Such notable commentators as Barnes, Calvin, Gill, Haldane, Hodge, Jamieson Fausset and Brown, John Wesley, and others also receive these words. Of itself, this does not authenticate the text. I only share it to confirm this is not a strange view, and those who accept it are not theological renegades.

The strongest argument for the words “to and on,” or “to and upon” are not the manuscripts from which they were translated. Nor, indeed, do we bow at the shrine of the scribes and textual experts as though their research was infallible. These words are in perfect harmony with the remainder of Scripture, and in no wise do violence to the truth. There is no need for them to be discarded. Neither faith nor scholarship demands their removal. Thus I choose to retain and believe them.

clothed with righteousness, And let Your saints shout for joy.” The idea is that, while in this world, we are covered with this righteousness.

WHO BELIEVE

The nominal church does not place much emphasis upon faith, or believing God. Generally, the issue is “what” men believe. Significant divisions exist among professed believers over the particular points of doctrine that are embraced. I do not deny that some of this can be justified. But this is NOT the focus of our text, nor of the Scriptures themselves.

Here believing is not mental assent, or even an activity of the mind. Believing is accomplished in the essential nature of man—his heart. Thus it is written, “For with the heart one believes unto righteousness” (Rom 10:10). More of the Divine image is in the heart than the mind. The heart can more powerfully motivate the individual than the mind.

When the Ethiopian eunuch interrupted Philip by asking, “See, here is water. What hinders me from being baptized?”, the answer was clear and in strict harmony with our text. “If you believe with all your heart, you may.”

Those who believe in Christ Jesus will do what He says. Our text, however, is not focusing on that aspect of spiritual life. It is going to the heart of the matter, showing what makes men acceptable with God. Faith moves us into the domain of acceptance. It opens the door of heaven to us, and becomes the enablement of obedience. In that, we are to rejoice.

Without faith, it is not possible to please God (Heb 11:6). All effort, in such a case, will be futile, and will yield no acceptable results. If, on the other hand, men will believe in Jesus, and live by faith, they will become pleasing to God and productive in His Kingdom. As elementary as that may appear, it is something that is constantly affirmed in Scripture.

Faith is never taken for granted by the Holy Spirit. We are urged to fight the good fight of faith, and examine ourselves to see whether we be in the faith. We are also to see to it that an evil heart of unbelief does not rise in us.

THERE IS NO DIFFERENCE

^{22b} For there is no difference,²³ for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God,²⁴ being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. With spiritual mastery, the Apostle now shows the heavenly logic behind our justification. This is not thinking after the manner of men, nor will it be accepted by those who are dominated by the carnal mind. The reasoning here declared, makes sense only to faith. Only those who are believing in the Lord Jesus Christ will find this to be a joyful sound.

FOR . . .

The word "for" is a rhetorical one. It introduces a reason for the circumstance just described—namely the righteousness of God being conferred on all who believe. The RSV and NRSV versions read, "since." We might use the word "because," or the expression, "in view of this." It will become clear in this text that the ONLY real distinction among men is the possession of the righteousness of God. Apart from that, real distinctions cannot be found.

THERE IS NO DIFFERENCE

^{22b} . . . there is no difference." The Spirit reaffirms the reality stated in verse nine. "For we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin." From the positive view, the text explains why the righteousness of God is "unto all and upon all them that believe." This same truth is reaffirmed in the tenth chapter. "For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek" (10:12).

By saying "there is no difference," the Spirit is confirming there is no other way of obtaining the righteousness of God, other than through faith. There is no cause resident within men that can justify God imputing His righteousness to them.

Herein is found a great cause for confidence in the believer. The righteousness of God raises the most lowly sinner to acceptance with God. There is no cause to lament because of a supposed lack of gifts, or to boast because of seeming successes.

By nature, no person can rise above Adam, through which sin entered into the world Rom 5:12). In fact, were Adam to appear in our generation in his fallen state, he would be vastly superior in every way to the whole world of humanity. There has been a marked degeneracy in men from every aspect, spiritual, moral, and physical.

There may be differences in the abilities men possess, or their dispositions. Their possessions, education, or attainments may appear to be different. But all of those distinctions are on a lower level, having nothing whatsoever to do with Divine acceptance. Nor, indeed, do they provide for the acquisition of righteousness by differing means. Fundamentally, and at the very heart of the human circumstance, "there is no difference," either in the need for of the means of acquiring "the righteousness of God."

SINNED AND FALL SHORT

²³ . . . for all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God." The text goes beyond a mere philosophical statement. Two incontrovertible facts are stated. They confirm there is "no difference" among men. They also corroborate the intrinsic need men have for "the righteousness of God."

"Have sinned"

The condition of humanity can be traced back to Adam, but all guilt is not resident in him. As it is written, "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned" (Rom 5:12). From one perspective, that sin was a matter of choice. From another, it was the expression of a fallen nature. If this were not the case, some would NOT have sinned. However, no such person can be found. In all ages, and in all places, "all have sinned." Whether with Law or without Law, "all have sinned." Whether within the framework of a covenant or apart from one, "all have sinned." If there is a mortal anywhere who affirms I "have not sinned," he makes God a liar and His word is not in him (1 John 1:10).

By "sinned" the Spirit means lived in contradiction of the nature of God. It is true that "sin is the transgression of the law" (1 John 3:4). However, even before the Law "sin was in the world" (Rom 5:13). It is quite true that "sin is not imputed when there is no law" (5:13b), but it still exists, and is a reality that must be addressed. All men have conducted themselves unlike God. They have all rejected preliminary Divine overtures, whether in nature or in Law. Their corrupt nature has expressed itself, confirming that of themselves they are not righteous.

Care must be taken not to assume this means all sin is alike. That is not the case, as is emphatically stated in the first chapter (1:23-31). There is such a thing as a "greater sin" (John 19:11), and "exceedingly wicked" sin (Gen 13:13). However, even though there are differences in the degree of sin, there "is no difference" in the fact of sin, or the need for righteousness.

"Fall short"

The means through which God's righteousness is received is a central doctrine of Scripture, by Given O. Blakely

Not only is man guilty of sinning in the past (“have sinned”), he is in the processing of falling, or coming short, of the glory of God. When compared with God, “all” come short of His glory. Though bearing His image, man is flawed at the core. He needs God’s glory and righteousness. The words “come short” or “fall short” come from a single Greek word. It is ὀστεροῦνται, and means “be behind, fail, destitute of, and fail to be a partaker of, or fail to reach.” The idea is not that man has some Divine glory, but not the measure intended. Neither does it mean he has some righteousness, but not quite enough.

The lack of Divine glory in the natural man can be seen in Isaiah’s response to seeing the glory of God. In one grand moment, the prophet saw “the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple.” In that moment a keen sense of his own lack registered upon his spirit. In desperation he cried out, “Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts” (Isa 6:1-5). No one had to tell Isaiah he “come short of the glory of God.” He sensed the vast chasm between himself and the Living God—and he was a mighty Prophet!

There is a serious need in our day for an awareness of the glory of God. It has been so shrouded by organized religion that men scarcely know there is such a thing. It is for this reason that men are not pressing into the Kingdom, seizing it, as it was, by violence (Matt 5 1:12; Luke 16:16).

Proof of Universal Guilt?

Generally, Romans 3:23 is used to establish the universal guilt of sin. Indeed, that is the postulate behind the text, but that is not its purpose. The Spirit has already “proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin” (3:9). The purpose of this text is to show WHY the righteousness of God is “unto all and upon all them that believe.” It confirms why there are not multiple ways to obtain the righteousness of God.

BEING JUSTIFIED FREELY

^{24a} . . . being justified freely.” The Spirit now declares what is involved in becoming “the righteousness of God” (2 Cor 5:21), or receiving the righteousness of God by faith.

“Being”

The condition to be described is not a goal, but a present possession. It is a state of “being.” The NIV reads “ARE justified.” The NRSV accents it even more: “they are NOW justified.” Our text, then, concerns the present state of believers. The value of knowing this cannot be overstated.

In order for God to dwell with man, sins must be remitted, or cancelled out. Too, without the presence of the Holy Spirit, a life pleasing to God is impossible. Again, both of these occur when men are justified.

“Justified”

To be “justified” is to be made righteous by Another. The words “being justified,” or “are now justified” come from a single Greek word, δικαιούμενοι. This single word contains more than any single English word. That is largely why the Spirit is expounding it. Linguistically, the word means “to be put into a right relationship with God, acquitted, declared or treated as righteous.”^{Barclay-Newman} This is not the work of men, but of God Himself. The reason compelling God to do so is not the submission of man, but the obedience of Christ. As it is written, “by one Man’s obedience many will be made righteous” (Rom 5:19).

“Being justified” involves two requirements. (1) Deliverance from the guilt and power of sin, and (2) Procuring the righteousness of God. This perspective is developed several places in the Apostolic doctrine.

power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son” (Col 1:13). The “power of darkness” is the realm in which there is no difference. It maintains such a hold upon men, they must be “delivered” from it. “The kingdom of God’s dear Son” is the domain in which Divine acceptance and victory are realized. Men must be transferred by Another into this Kingdom. They are impotent to do it themselves. Justification involves both of these Divine works.

“Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord” (Acts 3:19). It is not possible to experience Divine acceptance while our sins remain associated with us. They must be blotted out from before the Lord. The “times of refreshing” are the experience of Divine sustenance and blessing. When men are justified, both of these are gloriously accomplished.

“Repent, and let every one of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit” (Acts 2:38). In order for God to dwell with man, sins must be remitted, or cancelled out. Too, without the presence of the Holy Spirit, a life pleasing to God is impossible. Again, both of these occur when men are justified.

“To open their eyes, in order to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins and an inheritance among those who are sanctified by faith in Me” (Acts 26:18). A transition must take place from the realm of darkness and ignorance to that of light and illumination. Sins must be forgiven, and an inheritance among the people of God obtained. If these do not take place, there is no hope of salvation. Praise the Lord, both are accomplished when we are “justified.”

Being justified is like coming out of Egypt and entering Canaan. It is being raised from death in trespasses and sins to sit with Christ in heavenly places (Eph

2:6). What God cannot abide is removed, and what He wants to give is received.

“Freely”

The word “freely” is rich with meaning. It carries the idea of gratuitously, or without human cause. It also carries the idea of “without cost, as a free gift.” It also means undeservedly, or without [human] reason.

This is the ONLY way righteousness can be given to men, for “all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.” It is not a reward for doing good, for “there is none that doeth good, no not one” (3:12).

The prophet Isaiah foretold of the nature of justification. “Ho! Everyone who thirsts, Come to the waters; And you who have no money, Come, buy and eat. Yes, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price”^{NKJV} (Isa 55:1). In justification, what will be our inheritance in glory is tasted in this world in a first fruits sense. Jesus has promised, “I will give of the fountain of the water of life freely to him who thirsts” (Rev 21:6). That begins now, in justification, when we are made righteous.

BY HIS GRACE

“^{24b} . . . by His grace.” Here “grace” is contrasted with “works.” As it is written elsewhere, “And if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace. But if it is of works, it is no longer grace; otherwise work is no longer work” (Rom 11:6). Either righteousness is a reward for doing what is good, or it is a gift from God. Our text confirms the latter: it is a gift from God, given apart from human merit or accomplishment.

While men do enter into the matter, their part is neither foundational nor causal. In our salvation, God is motivated by himself-by His own Nature. The impetus behind our salvation is not human need or a human quest, but the inclination of God Himself.

Favor

“Grace” is an exceedingly large word. It includes the idea of favor, regard, or blessing. This is expressed in the words, “But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord” (Gen 6:8).

Divine Pleasure

“Grace” also includes the idea of pleasure; i.e., that God takes pleasure in justifying men. The whole plan of salvation is “according to the good pleasure of His will” (Eph 1:5). This is the “good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself” (Eph 1:9). There is a telling expression of this facet of grace in the Thessalonian Epistle. “Therefore we also pray always for you that our God would count you worthy of this calling, and fulfill all the good pleasure of His goodness and the work of faith with power, that the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and you in Him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ” (2 Thess 1:11-12).

“Redemption” is a key word in Scripture. It speaks of liberation procured by the payment of a ransom. Outside of Christ men are “sold under sin” (Rom 7:14). The bondage was so extensive that a large price was required to set us free.

Abundance

“Grace” carries the thought of liberality, abundance, and copiousness. Thus those in Christ Jesus are said to receive “abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness” (Rom 5:17). One of the great expressions of this truth is found in First Timothy 1:14. “And the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.”

Purpose

“Grace” also includes the thought of Divine purpose or objective. Grace carries the idea of producing something, or completing a Divine purpose. Thus we are called “according to His purpose” (Rom 8:28). A grand statement of this facet of grace is found in the book of Second Timothy. “Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began” (1:9).

Concluding Thoughts on Grace

Thus, when we are said to be “justified freely by His grace,” we are to understand the following.

1. To be justified is an evidence of God’s favor and blessing. It is the highest token of Divine regard in this world.
2. We are to understand that God takes pleasure in justifying us, or giving us His righteousness. When we seek first His righteousness we are not infringing on forbidden territory.
3. Because grace is abundant, righteousness is also abundant. We did not receive a mere token of righteousness, but the righteousness of God Himself.
4. Divine objectives are being fulfilled in our justification. When we are made righteous, it is not only for our own satisfaction, although that is surely realized. This is the purpose for which Jesus was commissioned to bring us to God for fellowship and participation.

THROUGH THE REDEMPTION THAT IS IN CHRIST JESUS

“^{24c} . . . through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus.” Salvation, in a sense, is very technical, addressing and including all Divine requirements. We are not simply pronounced righteous, but made righteous “through the redemption that came by Christ Jesus.”^{NIV}

“Redemption” is a key word in Scripture. It speaks of liberation procured by the payment of a ransom. Outside of Christ men are “sold under sin” (Rom 7:14). The bondage was so extensive that a large price was required to set us free. After four thousand consecutive years of human history, it was apparent a Redeemer could not come from the lineage of Adam. As the forty-ninth Psalm so poignantly says it, “No man can redeem the life of another or give to God a ransom for him-- the ransom for a life is costly, no payment is ever enough”^{NIV} (v 7-8).

Developed Under the Law

The idea of redemption was not borrowed from heathen cultures, as some sophists suggest. It is a concept belonging to and developed by the God of heaven. The first glimpse of it is afforded in the making of coats, or garments, of skin for Adam and Eve (Gen 3:21). So far as we know, however, that was not attended with an explanation. At the very best, the understanding of Adam and Eve would have been very sparse on the matter of redemption. It is clear that Abel also had some idea of redemption, as he “brought of the firstlings of his flock and of their fat portions”^{NASB} (Gen 4:4). The text indicates either a multiplicity of firstlings in a single sacrifice, or a firstling offered during multiple occasions. Yet, little was known of the extent of redemption. It remained for that concept to be developed under the Law.

The law contains twenty-nine references to “redeem” (Ex 6:6; 13:13,15; 34:20; Lev 25:25,26,29,32,48,49; 27:13,15; 19,20,27,31; Num 18:15,16,17), four to “redemption” (Lev 25:24,51,52; Num 3:49), and twenty-three to “redeemed” (Ex 15:13; 21:8; Lev 19:20; 25:30,31,48,54; 27:20; 27,28,29,33; Num 3:46,48,49,51; 18:16; Deut 7:8; 9:26; 13:5; 15:15; 21:8;24:18).

God redeemed Israel from Egypt (Ex 6:6). When the first born were offered to God, certain required redemption. “But every firstborn of a donkey you shall redeem with a lamb; and if you will not redeem it, then you shall break its neck. And all the firstborn of man among your sons you shall redeem” (Ex 13:13; 34:20). The redemption was to be made “with lamb”—the offering of an innocent life. With great care, the necessity of redeeming what was offered to the Lord was repeated (Lev 27:26-27; Num 18:15-16). Redemption was also offered for land

An elaborate procedure was also instituted for redeeming a person whose debt was too great to be paid by the debtor (Lev 25:47-55). Houses were redeemed (Lev 27:15). Fields were redeemed (Lev 27:19-20). Even provision for redeeming tithes were placed into effect (Lev 27:30-31). A woman sold into slavery could be redeemed (Ex 21:8).

An acute awareness was developed that anything given to God had to be redeemed. The redemption cost was not insignificant, and required the commitment of the one paying it.

This was a redemption from pointless religious life. Since Jesus has died, there is no excuse for remaining in lifeless religion. Nor, indeed, is it necessary to remain under the grip of any pointless or aimless living. As long as men do so, God cannot confer His righteousness upon them.

All of this was a shadow of the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. In Him a price was paid—a ransom—for lost humanity. It was not paid simply to release those bound to sin, but to present them to God, for they had all been defiled and rendered unsuitable by sin.

The Proclamation

The proclamation of the Gospel is that a satisfactory redemption has been paid by Jesus. It has been presented to God Himself, to Whom the price was due. Some have imagined that the price was paid to the devil who held us captive, but that is absurd. Our release from enslavement did not depend upon Satan’s consent, but upon Divine power.

Redeemed from the Curse of the Law

This redemption is glorious in its ramifications. Christ has “redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree: that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith” (Gal 3:13-14). God could not receive us while His own Law condemned us. Therefore, the exacting penalty of the Law fell upon Christ. In this redemption, the Law could no longer condemn us, thereby enabling us to receive the promise of the Spirit.

Redeemed from Pointless Living

As long as men were enslaved to pointless living—particularly religious life—God could not confer His righteousness upon them. The redemption, therefore, had to address this dilemma. Praise God, Christ’s redemption was effective in this matter. “Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot” (1 Pet 1:18-19).

This was a redemption from pointless religious life. Since Jesus has died, there is no excuse for remaining in lifeless religion. Nor, indeed, is it necessary to remain under the grip of any pointless or aimless living. As long as men do so, God cannot confer His righteousness upon them.

Redeemed from the Hand of the Enemy

As long as men remain under the power of “the enemy,” the devil (Matt 13:39), God cannot grant them His righteousness. They must be redeemed from His power. Thank God, Jesus has accomplished this. “And he saved them from the hand of him that hated them, and redeemed them from the hand of the enemy” (Psa 106:10). And again, “Let the redeemed of the LORD say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy; and gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the south” (Psa 107:2-3). Satan cannot hold those who receive this redemption.

The Forgiveness of Sins

This redemption includes the forgiveness of sins, thereby allowing us to come into the presence of the Lord for fellowship and blessing. “In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace” (Eph 1:7). And again, “In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins” (Col 1:14).

Redemption Includes the Future

This redemption is so large that the future is also included in it. Our bodies, for example, are embraced in Christ’s redemption. “Ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory” (Eph 1:14). This is also mentioned in the eighth chapter of Romans. “And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body” (verse 23).

That coming day is called “the day of redemption,” and we are not to grieve the Spirit of God Who has sealed us unto that day (Eph 4:30). At that time, everything purchased by Jesus will be brought pure and holy into the presence of the Lord—including our bodies.

Eternal Redemption

We should know that a redemption that justifies God conferring His righteousness upon us is exceeding large. That is why it is called an “eternal redemption” (Heb 9:12). It is a redemption that has brought thorough satisfaction to God. It will also bring a rich satisfaction to those who receive it.

Summation

The righteousness which we so sorely required is now conferred upon us by God Himself. It is His own righteousness, and He desires to bestow it upon us. It will be an adequate and thorough covering that will compensate for the effects sin has had upon us. It will be granted to us liberally and without reservation upon the basis of our faith in Jesus Christ. Our Father vouchsafes it to us because of Jesus. He has satisfied the Father’s demands, and pleased Him by the manner and zeal in which they were accomplished. In every way, God is “well pleased” with Jesus.

A PROPITIATION SET FORTH

“²⁵ Whom God set forth as a propitiation by His blood, through faith, to demonstrate His righteousness, because in His forbearance God had passed over the sins that were previously committed.”

You should be able to discern that Paul is preaching the Gospel to the Roman brethren, and to us as well. This is not a proclamation of what men should do, but of what God has done. It is an announcement of “the wonderful works of God,” as first declared on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:11). Men must never allow their theology to take them beyond the “joyful sound” of the Gospel (Psa 89:15). Our closeness to the Lord is measured by our sensitivity to the Gospel of His Son. Our spiritual status is determined by our belief of the record God has given of His Son (1 John 5:10-11). That is why such an extensive argument is being presented.

God is not simply looking for people to do what He commands, but for those who can see what He has done. Once the Lord is seen for what He is, and what He has done is comprehended, thankful obedience will flow like rivers of living water from the belly of the believer. However, when the Gospel of Christ becomes obscure, an inevitable retrogression will occur. It may be a cultured retrogression, or one seeking strict adherence to the Law, but it will thrust the person from the presence of God. In my persuasion, the knowledge of this situation is extremely rare.

However, when the Gospel of Christ becomes obscure, an inevitable retrogression will occur. It may be a cultured retrogression, or one seeking strict adherence to the Law, but it will thrust the person from the presence of God.

WHOM GOD HAS SET FORTH

“^{25a} Whom God set forth . . . ” This is a strong statement. The NASB reads, “Whom God displayed publically.” Other versions read “God presented Him”^{NIV}. “Whom God put forward”^{NRSV}.

This involves the public appearance of Jesus “in the fulness of time” (Gal 4:4). He grew up among the very people He came to save. When He “increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men” (Lk 2:52) it was before men. His ministry was public, as He went throughout cities and synagogues preaching the Kingdom of God.

But of particular emphasis is the death of Christ, wherein a covering for sin was provided. When standing before Felix, Paul made a point of the public nature of Christ’s suffering and death. “Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come: that Christ should suffer, and that He should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should show light unto the people, and to the Gentiles . . . For the king knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely: for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner" (Acts 26:22-26).

God has "set forth," or "displayed publically" His Son in at least two ways. First, His death was public, with both Jews and Gentiles being privy to it. The leaders and common people among the Jews participated in Christ's death, together with "both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles" (Acts 4:27). In His death, GOD was displaying Him to the world, and a memorable sight it was!

Second, God has "set forth" or "presented" Him in the Gospel. The Good News is preeminently the presentation of Christ Jesus. It is God placing Him before the people, calling upon them to perceive His love in Christ (1 John 3:16), and avail themselves of the effects of His death.

The presentation of the blood of Christ was not public, being made in heaven, in the holiest place (Heb 9:1-12). But the sacrifice itself was public, beheld by the entire universe of personalities. Angelic hosts, as well as the hosts of darkness beheld the atoning death of Christ. Men beheld the spectacle, including Jesus' disciples, His enemies, and the indifferent as well. In all of this, God was setting Jesus before the eyes of the people, calling upon them to behold the effects of their own sin, as well as the Divine remedy.

AS A PROPITIATION BY HIS BLOOD

^{25b} . . . as a propitiation by His blood . . . " God has presented Jesus "as a propitiation." This is a term rooted in the types of the Law. The word highlights the serious of sin and the nature of God. The focus of the word is the MEANS by which sins are forgiven. They cannot simply be spoken away, nor can God turn His face from them and conduct Himself as though they did not exist. Those who imagine God can countenance sin, or is tolerant of it, are simply mistaken. They speak what they desire, not what is the truth.

This word, in its varied forms, occurs four times in the Apostle's doctrine. Our text is its first mentioning. Two variations of the word are found in First John. "And He is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world . . . Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins" (2:2; 4:10). The precise word of our text also occurs in Hebrews, where it is applied to an article of Tabernacle furniture. "And over it the cherubims of glory shadowing the mercyseat (atonement cover^{NIV}); of which we cannot

To propitiate means to cover the sinner from the wrath of God. The Spirit has already declared, "the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men" (Rom 1:18). That wrath will surely be unleashed in all of its fury in "that great and notable day of the Lord" now speak particularly" (9:5).

Academically, the word "propitiation" means "relating to an appeasing or expiating, having placating or expiating force."^{Strong's} Strong's wisely says of the word, "Used of the cover of the ark of the covenant in the holy of holies, which was sprinkled with the blood of the expiatory victim on the day of atonement (this rite signifying that the life of the people, the loss of which they had merited by their sins, was offered to God in the blood as the life of the victim, and that God by this ceremony was appeased and their sins expiated); hence the lid of expiation, the propitiatory."^{Strong's Definitions} The text in Hebrews unfolds for us the true meaning of the word "propitiation."

The Mercy Seat

The construction of the "mercy seat" (Heb 9:5), is outlined in Exodus 25:17-22. It was an elaborate piece of furniture, being the lid covering the ark of the covenant. It was made of pure gold, showing unusual worth. Two cherubim of gold, hammered out of solid gold, were on the both ends of the mercy seat. Their wings were stretched out, covering the mercy seat. They were facing each other, and were looking down at the mercy seat. There, above the mercy seat, God met with the representative of the people. He spoke from between the cherubim "about everything which" that He gave "in commandment to the children of Israel."

On the "day of atonement," incense was to be placed on the alter before the veil that separated the holy place from the most holy place. The intent was "that the cloud of incense may cover the mercy seat that is on the Testimony, lest he die" (Lev 16:13). The blood of the sin offering of a bull was to be sprinkled "on the mercy seat on the east side," and "before the mercy seat." Also, the blood of "the goat of the sin offering, which is for the people" was to be sprinkled "on the mercy seat and before the mercy seat" (Lev 16:14-15). All of this typified the atoning death of Christ, which is being declared in our text.

To propitiate means to cover the sinner from the wrath of God. The Spirit has already declared, "the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men" (Rom 1:18). That wrath will surely be unleashed in all of its fury in "that great and notable day of the Lord" (Acts 2:20). Earlier, in the second chapter, it is identified as "the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God" (2:5). There is a time when the shattering message will be sounded, "For the great day of His wrath is come" (Rev 6:17).

I realize it is not fashionable to speak of God's wrath in these days. Indeed, some younger disciples have never heard the subject delineated. However, one of the primary aspects of Jesus is that He has "delivered is from the wrath to come" (2 Thess 1:10).

It is only through Christ that we "shall be saved from wrath" (Rom 5:9). Those who are not in Christ, who have not availed themselves of the "propitiation," are "by nature the children of wrath" in every sense of the word (Eph 2:3). The "wrath of God" will come upon "the children of disobedience" (Col 3:6).

God has set forth Jesus as a "propitiation," or covering, in the time when His wrath is going to be revealed from heaven. No other safety will be found in that day. Those who have shunned the One God has publically presented will cry in vain to the mountains and rocks, "Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb" (Rev 6:16). But shelter will only be afforded to those who are covered by Christ Jesus.

The Blood of Christ

Just as the blood of the sacrifices of old was placed upon the mercy seat, so the blood of Christ is the only valid appeal to the mercy of God. The KJV reads that Jesus is set forth as a propitiation "through faith in his blood." Although some rather learned arguments are presented for rejecting the phrase "faith in His blood," I choose to retain the words as they stand. I have found I am not alone in this, for great scholars and men of faith have seen fit to do the same. Nothing in the text, context, or the Gospel itself demands a rejection of them.

I take it that the phrase "faith in the blood" expresses the same idea expressed in Hebrews 9:14. "How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" It is at the point where we are convinced of the effectiveness of Christ's blood that our conscience is cleansed from defilement, and we are shielded from the wrath of God.

We are "made nigh" to God "by the blood of Christ" (Eph 2:13). We were "redeemed" from the ravages of sin by it (1 Pet 1:19). Through it we have bold confidence to enter into the holiest of all, heaven itself (Heb 10:19). His blood "cleanses us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

And why is all of this so? Because the sacrifice of Christ's life has met every requirement for our acceptance by God. His wrath cannot fall on those who are availing themselves of the death of His Son. It is no wonder that God so carefully structured how men thought about blood under the Law. Thus it is written, "For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul" (Lev 17:11).

the sacrifice of Christ's life has met every requirement for our acceptance by God. His wrath cannot fall on those who are availing themselves of the death of His Son.

HIS RIGHTEOUSNESS DEMONSTRATED

^{25d} . . . to demonstrate His righteousness . . ." The details of our redemption are marvelous to consider. God has publically set forth Jesus as a remedy and covering for sin in order to "demonstrate," or "declare," His own righteousness. Although God owes us no explanation for what He does, yet He has condescended to confirm His uprightness in delivering up His Son for our offenses. Elihu was only partially right when he said to Job, "for He giveth not account of any of his matters" (Job 33:13). Since those spiritually primitive times, God has revealed more of Himself. We now know that God has explained a great deal about Himself and what He has done. The text before us is a case in point.

THE FORBEARANCE OF GOD

" . . . because in His forbearance God had passed over the sins that were previously committed." The Spirit opens to us precisely what Divine activity has been shown to be righteous. It is His forbearance with sins committed before the setting forth of Jesus.

To the sophist, or surface-thinker, this is not a great point, and little is made of it in our day. But it is a significant point with God, and we do well to look into it. Why was God so intolerant with the angels that sinned, yet so seemingly tolerant of men who continued to sin? "God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment" (2 Pet 2:4). Yet, God endured sinful man for 4,000 long years before placing His Propitiation before them.

Some might point to the flood as evidence of God's intolerance with sin. And that is, indeed, something to be pondered. However, even then, God's longsuffering waited while the ark was being prepared—a period lasting well over one century (1 Pet 3:20). There was also Sodom and Gomorrah, who were destroyed in an unparalleled pouring out of fire and brimstone from heaven (Gen 19:24; Lk 17:29). But these were the exceptions, not the norm.

Many students of Scripture have stumbled over the sins of the ancients, speaking of them as though they were rebellious, hard-hearted, and weak and vacillating as themselves. Legion is the name of those who speak of Abraham lying, Jacob being a deceiver, and David being an adulterer. But this is not how God spoke of those men, even though they committed sins that were an offense to God and a reproach to His love for them. For the patriarchs, however, sin was not the rule, and precious few transgressions are recorded against them. Actually, it is a source of amazement that they lived so notably with so little truth being revealed to them.

Our text unveils why more is not said of their sins—only enough to confirm they too stood in need of a Savior. God did “forbear” or “pass over” the sins “previously committed,” and He freely declares that He did. The NIV reads, “He had left the sins committed beforehand unpunished.” Of course, those who insist that the God of the old Testament differs from the God of the New Testament must deal with this reality. Such false teachers portray our Lord as a God of wrath during the time before Christ, and One of love after Christ. But they would have a difficult time convincing Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, David, and others of their sophistry.

God “passed over” the sins committed before in prospect of the atoning death of Christ Jesus, His only begotten Son. That death was sufficient to reach backward as well as forward. As it is written, “And for this reason He is the Mediator of the new covenant, by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions under the first covenant, that those who are called may receive the promise of the eternal inheritance” (Heb 9:15).

God was righteous in His forbearance, knowing that His Son would take away the sin of the world (John 1:29). That sin, whether committed before Law, during the Law, or in “the end of the world,” was addressed by the propitiating death of Christ. However, lest we presume upon the nature of God, we are to understand it was His “forbearance” that “passed over” them, not indifference.

Now that Christ’s blood has been shed and presented in the heavenly realms, God is no longer forbearing of sin. This is precisely the point Paul made to the Athenian philosophers, and it needs to be made to the philosophers of our time. “Truly, these times of ignorance God overlooked, but now commands all men everywhere to repent, because He has appointed a day on which He will judge the world in righteousness by the Man whom He has ordained. He has given assurance of this to all by raising Him from the dead” (Acts 17:30-31).

Another practical view of this text confirms that God has been gentle with all of us, not allowing His wrath to break out upon us until we availed ourselves of the atonement, or reconciliation. Truly, “the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance” (Rom 2:4). Again, it is written, “The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance” (2 Pet 3:9).

Notwithstanding, and lest men become complacent in their sin, “the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up” (2 Pet 3:9). In view of that certainty, “what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness” (2 Pet 3:10).

God was proved to be righteous in passing over the sins of the ancients. He will also be proved righteous in condemning those who have rejected His Son, whom He has publically set forth as a propitiation for sin. God’s dealing with men is exacting in every way.

RIGHTEOUSNESS DEMONSTRATED

²⁶ To demonstrate at the present time His righteousness, that He might be just and the justifier of the one who has faith in Jesus. Our salvation MUST be right! God cannot save men at the expense of His own integrity. That would bring no honor to Him, nor could it rescue us from our bondage. There is a shallowness in many views of redemption that is uncomely for those who embrace them, and reproachful to the God they claim has saved them. Many, swept up in the tide of delusion, present God as saving people who have no real thirst for righteousness, are not engaged in a quest for heaven, and are spotted by this world. Our text will confirm this to be a serious misrepresentation of God.

DEMONSTRATION AT THE PRESENT TIME

Not only has God been proved righteous in His forbearance of those who sinned prior to Jesus, there is something to be known of Him “at the present time.” This phrase, “at the present time,” denotes this “day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2). The demonstration, or declaration, has been going on since Jesus sent the Holy Spirit upon His people on the day of Pentecost. The KJV version says He is “declaring,” while the RSV and NRSV say He is proving something.

The truth being communicated is that God is righteous. The Gospel reveals “the righteousness of God” for men. However, through it God’s own personal righteousness is also affirmed. The point of this is not simply that God is upright, but that He is righteous in saving men. The salvation of God is so precise, and so thoroughly addresses every aspect of God, that none can successfully protest it. That is the point of a challenge that will be hurled at the doubter in the eighth chapter. “Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God’s elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us” (Rom 8:33-34).

God has not simply saved men by Divine decree, oblivious of His own character and word. He has taken care to save us in a righteous manner. How else could salvation be the cause of glory being brought to Him? Those who boast of salvation being according to God’s sovereignty have only told part of the story. It is consistently represented as being according to His mercy and grace, and that is what brings Christ Jesus into the picture. Christ’s death has allowed God to be righteous in extricating men from sin, rather than punishing them for it. How wonderful are the works of God!

JUST AND THE JUSTIFIER

“ . . . that He might be just, and the Justifier . . . ” Other versions read, “so as to be just and the One who justifies.”^{NIV} “That He Himself is righteous and that He justifies.”^{NRSV} “That He might Himself be upright, and give righteousness.”^{BBE} “He is entirely fair and just in this present time when He declares sinners to be right in His sight.”^{NLT}

As indicated, the idea is that God is RIGHT in removing the sin of sinners, and making the unrighteous righteous! All of the Divine attributes have joined together in our salvation. As it is written, “Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other” (Psa 85:10). Prior to Jesus, mercy and truth could not meet together. Mercy cried out for pardon, while truth demanded condemnation. Righteousness and peace could not kiss in holy embrace before the death of Jesus. Righteousness required that sin be punished. Peace longed for reconciliation. All of these traits were resident in God, yet could not work harmoniously for man’s salvation without an atoning death—a “propitiation.” Longsuffering stepped into the forefront, agreeing, as it were, to manage the dilemma until the Redeemer came. Mercy delighted in the arrangement, and truth was satisfied to wait. Peace found joy in the arrangement, and righteousness was content to wait until the “Sun of righteousness” arose with healing in His wings.

Thus, from beginning to end, God is declared to be righteous. He was righteous in passing over sin in anticipation of the atonement. He is righteous in delivering men from sin. And He will be righteous in the condemnation of those who refuse to be reconciled to Him.

This, then, is the full scope of righteousness revealed through the Gospel. God Himself is shown to be right in the conferment of righteousness upon men who are, of themselves, unworthy. O, how this message needs to be heralded!

OF THE ONE WHO HAS FAITH IN JESUS

God will not save everyone, even though He “desires all men to be saved or (1 Tim 1:19), are not said to be justified. For such to be the case, God would have to deny Himself, for He has represented Himself as having no pleasure in such people (Heb 10:38-39).

While men debate whether it is possible to be lost once you are saved, the Scriptures declare that God is righteous in justifying the person who is believing in Jesus. Speculating about whether or not a person can fall out of favor with God is foolish. Adam and Eve experienced the favor of God, and also His disfavor. It is possible for “an evil heart of unbelief” to and to come to the knowledge of the truth” (1 Tim 2:4). Men will not be saved by mandate, but by faith. They will not be saved in groups, but “the one who has faith in Jesus” will be justified, or pronounced righteous.

It is not the one who “has believed,” but the one who “has faith,” or IS believing, that is justified by God. God has nowhere committed Himself to justify those who “believe for a while” (Lk 8:13), “cast off their first faith” (1 Tim 5:12), or do not “fight the good fight of faith” (1 Tim 6:12). Those who “deny the faith” (1 Tim 5:8), make “shipwreck” of the faith, enter into those who are appropriately called “brethren” (Heb 3:12).

But for those who will persist in believing in Jesus, availing themselves of His Person and ministry, God will surely “keep them from falling,” at last presenting them “faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy” (Jude 24). God is greatly to be praised for remaining righteous in our salvation. God be praised that it is RIGHT for Him to confer righteousness upon those believing in Jesus! Now, make it your business to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ!

CONCLUSION

THE HEART OF THE GOSPEL

This text has opened the very heart of the Gospel of Christ. It has revealed what God has done about our sinful condition, and how He has done it righteously, and with the utmost regard for His own integrity. It is not only that men be made righteous, but that God remain righteous in the doing of it. I do not believe this is generally known in the Christian community—at least not much is being said about it. Many people who profess to have heard the Gospel have never heard these things.

MAN IS IMPOTENT TO CHANGE

We have also seen the utter impotence of man to change his moral and spiritual condition before God. God must change him, or he will not be changed. God must make him righteous, or he will never be righteous.

JESUS IS NECESSARY

The necessity of the Lord Jesus has also been declared with power. Not only did we need a Savior, God the Father needed One upon Whom He could lay the sins of the world. He needed to punish sin. He could not ignore it. His nature would not allow Him to do so.

BEYOND IMAGINATION

I do not believe there is a created

The means through which God’s righteousness is received is a central doctrine of Scripture, by Given O. Blakely intelligence capable of imagining how God would save sinners. Had He not revealed this to us, even though its truth was couched in types and shadows under the Law, no man is capable of imagining it. Even after it has been revealed, multitudes of professed believers find it difficult to believe. That is how great the salvation is that is in Christ Jesus. It is appropriate that we are warned, "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation" (Heb 2:3). The answer to that question should be obvious to you.

APART FROM THE LAW

Those with a penchant for law must be brought to see this righteousness is made known and conferred independently of Law. The Law and the Prophets witnessed to it, but could not bring it to pass. Sin has so blighted our race that we are incapable of pleasing God apart from faith in Christ Jesus. Were this not the case, there would be no need for Jesus, or for God to confer His righteousness upon us. It is imperative that men see this, and cease to depend upon Law for approval.

BE ENCOURAGED

I encourage to you to believe in Jesus—to trust in His atoning death, and the effectiveness of His blood. Do not take for granted that you have advanced sufficiently in this area. Jesus has accomplished more than we presently comprehend. He has brought salvation within your reach. His work has satisfied God, and there is no reason why it cannot satisfy you. God will honor you with righteousness if you will honor His Son. He is faithful to do this!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 11

BOASTING IS EXCLUDED

^{3:27} Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? Of works? No, but by the law of faith. ²⁸ Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith apart from the deeds of the law. ²⁹ Or is He the God of the Jews only? Is He not also the God of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also, ³⁰ since there is one God who will justify the circumcised by faith and the uncircumcised through faith. ³¹ Do we then make void the law through faith? Certainly not! On the contrary, we establish the law. (Romans 3:27-31^{NKJV})

The Spirit has presented penetrating proof of man's need for a righteousness from God. Not only does he utterly lack one of his own, he is absolutely incapable of developing one. Sin, having entered the world through Adam, has so infected mankind, that outside of the Lord's intervention, there is no hope of surviving the day of judgment.

Because Christ's death has touched the heart of God, a grand message of deliverance is now brought to all the world. It is the Gospel of Christ, characterized as "the power of God unto salvation." Regardless of the objections of religious sophists, this Gospel is essential for the completion of the work God has begun in us. At no point does the believer move beyond his need to hear the good news of Christ Jesus. Those who imagine that personal, domestic, and social concerns are of more importance to the believer than the Gospel have only confirmed their ignorance.

Spiritual life cannot be initiated or maintained independently of the Gospel. The reason for this should be apparent. We still must contend with the carnal nature, even though it has been circumcised from us by Jesus (Col 2:11-12). As long as that condition exists, the Gospel must be declared and expounded. Commensurate with the neglect of the Gospel, the flesh begins to gain strength, and will soon draw men away from the very God they once embraced through Christ Jesus.

Early in the history of the church, men were drawn aside into vain jangling over the law and the meaning of words. As soon as that circumstance arose, the church began to lose its power, experience division, and hold back the truth of God. Humanly developed theologies took the place of the Gospel, as men were vaunted above the Most High God.

Throughout this book, we will find the most precisely defined theology in the world is the Gospel of Christ. In that Gospel God Himself is revealed, as well as the nature of man. What man needs is defined, and the provision of it by God is announced. Apart from the Gospel, neither man nor God can be fully comprehended. Furthermore, it is only to the degree that the Gospel is believed and embraced that understanding becomes valid. If the Gospel is not comprehended, God cannot be known. If it is not believed, a distorted view of man will also result.

I am aware that these are bold assertions, yet they need to be made. When men treat the church as though it were central, majoring on its form, patterns, and organization, a serious departure from the Gospel has occurred. Those who choose to emphasize other matters related to man have been swept up in the same departure.

Men are not at liberty to choose an emphasis differing from God's stress. Throughout the Scriptures, from beginning to end, the Lord has placed the accent upon Jesus. The destiny of all men hinges upon the Son of God. All authority in heaven and earth has been given to Him, and He alone is charged with bringing many sons to glory (Heb 2:10). All of this is resident in the Gospel of Christ, and must not be withheld from men.

RIGHTLY DIVIDING THE WORD

From early times, men have been prone to systematize the things of God. Thinking this enables men to more readily take hold of them, all sorts of regimented thought is being purveyed in the name of Christ. Each denomination has its line of reasoning that enables them to remain distinct from other believers. These systems of thought are often equated with the Word of God itself.

Teachers of the Word are solemnly told to "rightly divide the word of truth," handling it properly (2 Tim 2:15). They are to apportion it with an interest in convicting sinners and edifying saints. They are not to give meat to babies or milk to men. They are not purveyors of information, but ambassadors of Jesus. Their message is not that of a church or denominational line of reasoning, but of Jesus Himself.

In the dispensing of the Word, the Gospel is the melody—the prominent part. It is portrayed in the tabernacle service and sacrificial system of the Law. It was prophesied by the Prophets, announced by Jesus, and expounded by the Apostles. The Gospel of Christ is prominent in every Epistle. It is the foundation for spiritual reasoning and the basis for godly appeals. It makes sin unreasonable and that Gospel. This is what made Paul such an effective laborer in the Kingdom. He ministered with a lively sense of the truth of the Gospel upon his spirit.

All of the Epistles are actually a preaching and exposition of the Gospel of Christ. No Gospel or Epistle is written in memory of a mere man. Nor, indeed, are any of them addressed exclusively to alien righteousness sensible.

In this world, the proclamation of the Gospel is sandwiched between two great events. (1) The entrance of sin into the world. (2) Man's ultimate confrontation of God and Jesus themselves. As soon as sin entered, the Gospel was announced in embryo (Gen 3:15). And, only the Gospel of Christ prepares men to stand before God. No amount of human discipline or learning can accomplish that preparation independently of the Gospel. A sparse Gospel results in a feeble hope. Spiritual advance requires hearing the Gospel.

REASONING ON THE FACTS

In the first chapter of this marvelous Epistle, Paul referred to himself as one who served God "with my spirit in the gospel of his Son" (1:9). The Gospel is a framework in which acceptable service, or worship, is rendered to God. While it is true that Paul majored on preaching this Gospel, He also enveloped his own conscience with a lively sense of the reality and implications of sinners. That singular circumstance is arresting to ponder. It confirms that men must hear the Gospel throughout their lives in order to proper advance in the kingdom of God.

The Gospel produces a lively sense of our need of a righteousness from God. It also keeps us apprized that such a righteousness can be had through faith. Nothing is as effective in these matters as hearing the Gospel of God's Son. That is precisely why it is the theme of inspired writing. The testimony of Jesus is, as it is written, "the spirit of prophecy" (Rev 19:10).

Our text will now proclaim the inferences of the doctrine of man's sinfulness and need of a righteousness from God. An inference, in this case, is an inspired conclusion. It is a spiritual deduction. It is not a human opinion, but a Divine revelation. Once, however, the Gospel is heartily embraced, these inferences become apparent, and are accepted by the believer. They become a motive for acceptable behavior.

THE EXCLUSION OF BOASTING

^{3:27a} Where is boasting then? It is excluded. There is an undeniable tendency in flesh to rob God of His glory. From assuming too much of self (Gal 6:3) to trusting in horses and chariots (Psa 20:7), the proneness to live as though there were no God is found throughout humanity. With great power, the first three chapters of Romans have thrown down such reasoning. The universal dominance of sin has confirmed the fall of man and his need of a righteousness from God. This is not, however, apparent to all.

Divine sensitivity to the boasting of humanity is plainly declared in Scripture. Although there is a marked tendency in men to boast in their achievements, God will not allow it! One of the marks of fallen humanity is that they became “boastful” (Rom 1:30). It is the tongue, noted for its wickedness, that “makes great boasts”^{NIV} (James 3:5). As James would say, “All such boasting is evil” (James 4:16). The only valid boasting is boasting “in the Lord” (2 Cor 10:17).

Let us hear the conclusion of the matter. “For it is by grace you have been saved, through faith--and this not from yourselves, it is the gift of God--not by works, so that no one can boast”^{NIV} (Eph 2:9-10). Salvation is designed so that it excludes boasting--glorying in human achievement. Wherever this practice exists, at the best, salvation has been neglected, and at the worst, it is not present! It makes little difference what claims are made.

Boasting in something other than the Lord is altogether too common in the professed church. The Gospel, however, does not allow for such boasting. The Gospel announces that “God has chosen the foolish things of the world to put to shame the wise, and God has chosen the weak things of the world to put to shame the things which are mighty; and the base things of the world and the things which are despised God has chosen, and the things which are not, to bring to nothing the things that are, THAT NO FLESH SHOULD GLORY IN HIS PRESENCE”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 1:27-29). That is another way of saying boasting “is excluded.”

Where Is Boasting?

Other versions read, “Then what becomes of our boasting?”^{NASB} “So what Glorying in such things as wisdom, might, and riches involves trusting in them, as well as taking credit for the development of them. Life is lived relying upon these things instead of upon the Lord. Though popular, this is a condition that grieves the Lord.

becomes of our boasts?”^{NJB} “Can we boast, then?”^{NLT}

What is “boasting?” And why is it “excluded,” or not allowed. The word “boast” means to glory or rejoice in something. In our text, such boasting is in human achievement or accomplishment. Boasting springs from a frame of mind that supposes Divine requirements have been fulfilled by mere human effort. It presupposes the dominance of self, and takes no account of Divine working.

The Rich Young Ruler

An example of such boasting is found in the rich young ruler’s response to Christ’s word to “keep the commandments” (Matt 19:17). The young man replied, “All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?” That was boasting, and it is not allowed. He had not been as complete in his obedience as he supposed, for “all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.” Although Jesus was attracted to this young man, loving him, yet He faced him with a requirement flesh could not keep. “One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, take up the cross, and follow me” (Mk 10:21).

The Pharisee Who Prayed with Himself

Jesus once spoke a parable “to some who trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others.” It provides an excellent example of boasting. “Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess” (Luke 18:9-12).

All such boasting is “excluded.” There is no place for it in the Kingdom of God. If men have actually done the will of God, “it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure” (Phil 2:13). It is His power that is at work in us (Eph 3:20). Jesus once said, “The words that I speak to you I do not speak on My own authority; but the Father who dwells in Me does the works” (John 14:10). If this was true of Him, how much more is it true of those who are in Him. Boasting is excluded!

A Divine Mandate

The matter of boasting in anything other than God is strictly forbidden. The Spirit declared this through Jeremiah in very clear words. “Thus saith the LORD, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches: but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the LORD” (Jer 9:23-24). Glorying in such things as wisdom, might, and riches involves trusting in them, as well as taking credit for the development of them. Life is lived relying upon these things instead of upon the Lord. Though popular, this is a condition that grieves the Lord.

Glory Not In Man

Another form of boasting is glorying in man. This is altogether too common in our day. The Word of the Lord speaks with remarkable clarity to this subject. “Therefore let no man glory [same word as “boast”] in men. For all things are yours; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours; and ye are Christ’s; and Christ is God’s”(1 Cor 3:21-23). If God gives us “all things,” how foolish to boast in them instead of the God who gave them! Such boasting betrays spiritual blindness, and must be repented of with dispatch.

CONCLUDING THOUGHTS

It is ironic that “true religion” should make people humble, compelling them to keep unspotted from the world, and visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction (James 1:27). Yet, it has become the ground for fleshly boasting throughout the world. Men glory in their religious achievements, creeds, and heritage, isolating themselves from other believers, and claiming uniqueness upon the basis of these things.

But when it comes to the matter of acceptance with God, and the appropriation of his righteousness, boasting is excluded. It is NOT allowed. There is no place for it, no quadrant of the Kingdom where it is in order.

The blessing is to the “poor in spirit,” who are in possession of the Kingdom of heaven (Matt 5:3). That stands in stark contrast with boasting, which is “excluded.”

THE BASIS FOR ITS EXCLUSION

“^{27b} By what law? Of works? No, but by the law of faith.” The Spirit is not content to merely state the reality. He will expound it to us, in order that we may grasp it with our hearts and minds. It is never enough to simply learn to repeat the truth, although that is imperative. It is also essential to love and perceive it. It is the perception of the truth that enables us to love and obey it.

What law, or principle, dictates the exclusion of boasting? The words of our text are easy enough to grasp with the intellect. “Where then is boasting? It is excluded. By what kind of law? Of works? No, but by a law of faith” (Rom 3:27). That is not a difficult sentence to diagram, nor are the words hard to research.

EVERY REALM HAS LAWS

Every realm has inviolable laws; principles that cannot be contradicted. The domain of our earth has general laws. There are varying laws in the firmament, and in the depths of the sea. These are all laws that have nothing whatsoever to do with the human will. They stand firm, and cannot be shaken. These are not moral laws, to be kept or broken, but laws that cannot be broken. They, like the Word of God, stand in tact, and cannot be altered or changed (John 10:35). Neither can they be ignored with impunity.

The laws we will now address are in the spiritual domain. They too cannot be altered by men.

DIFFERENT REALMS, DIFFERENT LAWS

In the natural realm, for example, we have the law of gravity. When you deal with matter, or substance, this law dominates. It will not serve you unless you honor it. It will harm you if you ignore it. When anything of weight is thrown into the air, it will eventually come down!

It is never enough to simply learn to repeat the truth, although that is imperative. It is also essential to love and perceive it. It is the perception of the truth that enables us to love and obey it.

When you spin something at a high rate of speed, unattached things will be forced to the outside. That is the law of centrifugal force. Water, wind, fire--they all function according to inviolable laws, or principles. If you expect these forces to serve you, those laws must be respected. Certain laws must be honored in all valid sciences, i.e., chemistry, physics, biology, etc.

A SUPERIOR LAW

Boasting has been excluded on the basis of a law--a superior law! Hear the text again. “Where then is boasting? It is excluded. By what kind of law? Of works? No, but by a law of faith.” Notice that two contrary laws are mentioned, “works” and “faith.” It is significant that these are contrasted. There are whole bodies of theology that have attempted to put them together in a way not intended by God.

There is a sense in which “faith” and “works” are brought together. There is the “work of faith” (1 Thess 1:3; 2 Thess 1:11). In that case, however, faith itself is the “work.” James also spoke of “works” being the indispensable evidence of faith (James 2:14-26).

However, when it comes to being extricated from bondage to sin and receiving God’s righteousness, “faith” and “works” are opposing laws. They are contrasted with one another in our text. Additionally, Romans 9:31-32 puts them in opposition to each other. “Israel, pursuing the law of righteousness, has not attained to the law of righteousness. Why? Because they did not seek it by faith, but as it were, by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumblingstone.” Galatians 2:16 presents the same contrast. “Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." Galatians 3:2,5 also contrasts faith and works. "This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? . . . He therefore that ministereth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?"

Our text brings us into a higher realm. We cannot shun the reality of the contrast determined by the Holy Spirit.

THE CAUSE OF JUSTIFICATION

This text addresses the cause of our justification--why God gives us His righteousness. He does not give it to us upon the basis of our works, but because of faith. NOT works, but faith.

THE LAW OF WORKS

What is the law "of works?" In the words of Scripture, it is this: "The man who does these things will live by them" (Rom 10:5, NASB). In the words of Levitical law, "Keep my decrees and laws, for the man who obeys them will live by them. I am the LORD" (Lev 18:5). This is the law, or principle, upon which the majority of professed Christendom appears to operate. Discipline, achievement, accountability, responsibility--these are all bywords under "the law of works."

The Law commanded works, not faith (Gal 3:12)! It offered life for doing, not believing.

Even if the individual could achieve a good degree of success under this "law," he still could not stand faultless before the Lord. Paul cites Abraham as an example of this truth. "If, in fact, Abraham was justified by works, he had something to boast about--but not before God" (Rom 4:2). God will not be beholden to men for their deeds! It is not that He refuses to recognize flawless obedience, it is that there is no such thing! And even if this condition did exist, it is not enough to constitute one "righteous" in the sense of our text. In the words of Jesus, "So you that he had kept the commandments "from his youth up" (Matt 19:20). This was only an imagination, but he thought it was right. The Pharisee bragged about his achievements in a supposed prayer to God. "God, I thank you that I am not like other men--robbers, evildoers, adulterers--or even like this tax collector. I fast twice a week and give a tenth of all I get" (Luke 18:11-12).

See, the law of works did not exclude boasting, it encouraged it! It is human nature [another word for fallen nature] to Works open the door for boasting, they do not close it! The rich young ruler boasted that he had kept the commandments "from his youth up" (Matt 19:20). This was only an imagination, but he thought it was right. The Pharisee bragged about his achievements in a supposed prayer to God.

also, when you have done everything you were told to do, should say, 'We are unworthy servants; we have only done our duty'" (Luke 17:10, NIV). The fact that men had to be told, or commanded, to do it proves they are unrighteous!

But our text says boasting is "excluded." It is not excluded by the law of works. If, in fact, a person did all he was commanded to do, he would boast. Works open the door for boasting, they do not close it! The rich young ruler boasted boast in supposed achievement.

That is the "pride of life" that belongs to the worldly order, and is not of God (1 John 2:15-17). Boasting has more to do with "confidence in the flesh" (Phil 3:3) than merely bragging externally. It is a condition of soul that finds the individual resting in, and depending upon, the "natural man." Such a condition does not require faith, the Lord Jesus, or the empowering presence of the Holy Spirit. That is why it is so sinful.

THE LAW OF FAITH

THE LAW OF FAITH IS DIFFERENT

The "law of faith" differs significantly from the "law of works." It will not allow such boasting. It is as though faith had its own law, which refuses to place meritorious value on any works wrought by men. Hear Paul express this law. "But by the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I labored more abundantly than they all:

yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me" (1 Cor 15:10). Although he was a prodigious laborer, Paul refused to give credit to himself. He traced his accomplishments back to the grace of God, not self-effort.

Here was a man of remarkable discipline and spiritual achievement. There is not a believer in history that does not acknowledge Paul excelled the rest of our race. Yet when he spoke of his life, he spoke of "the law of faith," not the "law of works." "I have been crucified with Christ and I no longer live, but Christ lives in me. The life I live in the body, I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me" (Gal 2:20).

Faith achieves in men what God desires. It acknowledges sin, trusts in Christ Jesus, and receives God's righteousness. It is superior to every other expression or response of men! Believing God (not merely believing there is a God) always produces a "good report" (Heb 11:2). No one is ever put at a disadvantage for believing God. Nor, indeed, is it possible to gain any true advantage while not believing God.

FAITH IS GREATER THAN REASON

Reason is a marvelous faculty possessed by mankind. It sets humanity apart from the rest of creation. Made in the image of God, man can think, ponder, plan, and choose. He has a capacity to understand or comprehend.

However, reason cannot find God, or discern Him as He wants to be discerned. Zophar was correct in his observation, even though he applied it wrongly to Job: "Can you discover the depths of God? Can you discover the limits of the Almighty?" (Job 11:7). Solomon confirmed the observation. "Man will not find out the work which God has done from the beginning even to the end" (Eccl 3:11). And again "Man cannot discover the work which has been done under the sun. Even though man should seek laboriously, he will not discover; and though the wise man should say, 'I know,' he cannot discover"^{NASB} (Eccl' 8:17). And that was God's work "under the sun," to say nothing of His infinitely greater redemptive work in His Son!

Time would fail us to elaborate on the inferiority of reason. Apart from Christ, and at its natural apex, it is "foolishness with God" (1 Cor 3:19). With all of man's purported wisdom and learning, it is still true-- "No eye has seen, no ear has heard, no mind has conceived what God has prepared for those who love him" (1 Cor 2:9). But this is not the case with faith!

The Example of Abraham

When there is no earthly reason for believing, faith can still lay hold of the promises of God. The law of faith is transcendent to the limited law of reason. That is why it is said of our father Abraham, "Against all hope [with no natural reason for hope], Abraham in hope believed and so became the father of many nations, just as it had been said to him, 'So shall your offspring be.' Without weakening in his faith, he faced the fact that his body was as good as dead--since he was about a hundred years old--and that Sarah's womb was also dead. Yet he did not waver through unbelief regarding the promise of God, but was strengthened in his faith and gave glory to God" (Rom 4:18-20, NIV).

Mere human reason would have pointed to the age of Abraham and concluded the promise was not possible. It would have pondered the womb of Sarah and determined that what was promised could not come to pass.

Abraham did not resort to reason, but to faith! The law of faith does not require evidence, but a promise! It can rise higher than reason, see more than the naked eye, and reach further than logic! It rests in God, not in the attestation of the senses, or the confirmation of human logic.

The truth of the matter is that most of us must carry difficult burdens--burdens we had rather not experience. But this is no handicap to faith, and thus is no real impairment to you!

Faith is willing to risk everything on the Word of the Lord! It sees the superiority of God to apparently impossible circumstances. It may not look possible for a nation to walk through the Red Sea, but if God tells them to do it, they can (Ex 14:15-16)! It may not look reasonable for rivers of water to come out of a wilderness rock, but if God says they will, the people can prepare to drink (Ex 17:6)! It may violate the rules of astronomy and reason to think the sun can stand still, but if God tells Joshua to command it to happen, he will proceed (Josh 10:12-13). Faith sees the word and will of God as supreme.

Faith is superior to reason! In its presence logic shrinks and swivels! This is because faith rests in God and His unquestionable power! Those who shine the light upon the human capacity to reason do us no service! It was human reason that brought our race down (Gen 3:6)! It was reason that led Israel to fear taking the promised land (Num 13:31-33). From the human point of view, it was reason that provoked the high priest and Jewish leaders to demand Christ's crucifixion (John 11:49-50).

This does not mean faith is unreasonable--God forbid! It does mean that faith lifts us to a higher plain of reason--one that is related more to Deity than humanity. The "law of faith" is superior to reason, however, in every way. It brings great advantage and blessing.

FAITH IS SUPERIOR TO EMOTION

Human emotion is not to be trusted. It is something that can be a blessing or a curse. It can move David to leap and dance in praise to God (2 Sam 6:14). It can also constrain Esau to sell his birthright for a single meal (Heb 12:16). Emotion is more soulish than spiritual. It is a slave that must be governed by a higher principle.

Faith towers over emotion, or human feelings. When Abraham obediently goes to offer Isaac, his emotion is tempted by a probing question from Isaac. "Behold, the fire and the wood, but where is the lamb for the burnt offering?" (Gen 22:7). How the question must have wrenched the soul of the patriarch. It was a temptation to draw back from obeying the word of the Lord. He had been told to offer Isaac, and the command had not been modified by an allusion to a lamb God would provide. Abraham does not crumble under the oppression of emotion. Faith, superior to emotion, rose to the occasion. "God will provide for Himself the lamb for the burnt offering, my son" (Gen 22:8).

The truth of the matter is that most of us must carry difficult burdens--burdens we had rather not experience. But this is no handicap to faith, and thus is no real impairment to you! You are always better for believing.

Faith is superior to emotion! Think of the three Hebrew children, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, whose Hebrew names were Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. They were commanded to serve the gods of Nebuchadnezzar, and bow before a golden image he had made (Dan 3:14). When they refused, the earthly sovereign spoke clearly to them. “If ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace; and who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?” (Dan 3:15). Here was a test emotion could not pass! Fear stood like a ravaging lion to devour these young men. But faith rose like a mighty champion, superior to emotion. Hear these young men as faith constrained them to respond. “O Nebuchadnezzar, we do not need to defend ourselves before you in this matter. If we are thrown into the blazing furnace, the God we serve is able to save us from it, and he will rescue us from your hand, O king. But even if he does not, we want you to know, O king, that we will not serve your gods or worship the image of gold you have set up” (Dan 3:16b-18, NIV).

Faith is superior to emotion! It can motivate in a way not possible to emotion. It is important to underscore the danger of a religion that is anchored in emotion. That is the type of religion that thrusts people into spiritual jeopardy. Beware of any religious emphasis that leaves you feeling good, but unable to trust the Lord!

FAITH TRANSCENDS EXPERIENCE

Experience is wonderful when it comes from faith in God. It is good when David slays Goliath, Elijah slays the prophets of Baal, and Elisha raises a boy from the dead. By faith remarkable things were experienced by believers of old, who “conquered kingdoms, performed acts of righteousness, obtained promises, shut the mouths of lions, quenched the power of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, from weakness were made strong, became mighty in war, put foreign armies to flight. Women received back their dead by resurrection” (Heb 11:33-35, NASB).

Faith, however, is not confined to the arena of experience. It can function triumphantly when there are no favorable experiences. Do you doubt the truth of this? Hear the Word of the Lord. “Others were tortured, not accepting their release, in order that they might obtain a better resurrection; and others experienced mockings and scourgings, yes, also chains and imprisonment. They were stoned, they were sawn in two, they were tempted, they were put to death with the sword; they went about in sheepskins, in Faith is superior to emotion! It can motivate in a way not possible to emotion. It is important to underscore the danger of a religion that is anchored in emotion. goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, ill-treated (men of whom the world was not worthy), wandering in deserts and mountains and caves and holes in the ground. And all these, having gained approval through their faith, did not receive what was promised, because God had provided something better for us, so that apart from us they should not be made perfect” (Heb 11:36-40, NASB).

And what of these noble souls who did not participate in the miraculous--who left this world as though they were defeated? They gained God’s approval through their faith! Today, they stand amidst the great cloud of witnesses that surround us, attesting to the superiority of faith (Heb 12:1). “Run,” they cry! “Run!” Do not give up the race because you are not experiencing deliverance! You can refuse deliverance, and still go to be with the Lord. You can be an outcast, with nothing apparently working in your favor, and still receive the crown of life!

We do not desire a life of hardship for anyone. We fervently desire that the faithful may “prosper and be in good health, just as your soul prospers” (3 John 2). But, if this does not happen, it does not mean you are not “more than a conqueror!” (Rom 8:37). By faith, you can “boast about” your “weaknesses, that the power of Christ may dwell in” you (2 Cor 12:9, NASB). Faith cries out to languishing experience, “Therefore I am well content with weaknesses, with insults, with distresses, with persecutions, with difficulties, for Christ’s sake; for when I am weak, then I am strong” (2 Cor 12:10).

If, dear child of God, you have been cast down because of your experience, come up higher! Faith is superior, and it will make you superior, to experience. Suffice it to say, a religion that unduly elevates experience is a most dangerous one. Such an approach obscures faith, so sorely needed to overcome the world.

FAITH IS EFFECTIVE

The “law of faith” leads to Kingdom effectiveness! It is not a law that fails us, but one that sustains and strengthens us. It is a law honored in heaven, and effective upon earth. We cannot leave this subject without drawing attention to the remarkable effectiveness of faith. If you are in Christ, you possess comforting evidence of that effectiveness. Ponder these realities, and be refreshed.

Hearts Cleansed by Faith

Knowledge of the acceptance of the Gentiles was an epoch in the history of the church. Once convinced of this display of Divine grace, Peter announced, “and He made no distinction between us and them, cleansing their hearts by faith” (Acts 15:9, NASB). And what is a cleansed heart? It is one that in which guilt has been removed. It occurs when the “conscience” is “purged from dead works” (Heb 9:14). A cleansed heart is one that realizes Divine acceptance, having been made pure.

Can this be accomplished by the law of works? Can the conscience be favorably effected by a faithless deed? Indeed not.

Judas could find no solace, even though he returned the bloody money he had received for betraying Jesus (Matt 27:4-5)! Esau could not placate his conscience by seeking the inheritance he had forfeited, with bitter tears (Heb 12:17). The Lord is not satisfied with “thousands of rams, in ten thousand rivers of oil,” or the presentation of “my first-born for my rebellious acts,” or “the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul” (Micah 6:7). Such works, as noble as they may appear, will not please God--and they can bring no cleansing to you! Only faith can cleanse the heart, making it pure before God, and confidently clean to you! The “law of faith” is the superior law!

Faith Sanctifies the Individual

There is not much said about sanctification in the churches today. Often, those who do speak of it corrupt its meaning in the minds of their hearers. Sanctification is one of the principle aspects of God’s great salvation. God has made Jesus to become our “sanctification” (1 Cor 1:30). Without “sanctification,” an absolute essentiality, “no one will see the Lord” (Heb 12:14).

The word “sanctification” speaks of holiness, acceptance, and purity. It is a word denoting consecration to God through Christ and by the Spirit. This is what gives Divine utility to the believer--what enables him to be used by God, and to work together with Him (1 Cor 3:9).

How is the individual sanctified? How do we become holy and pure, and thus usable to God. It is not by the law of works! It is not possible to work your way into a position where God can use you! As remarkable as human discipline may appear, it is not adequate for this assignment!

The Word of the Lord is clear on this subject. Christ’s commission to Saul of Tarsus revealed the truth on this matter. Jesus appointed him “to open their eyes so that they may turn from darkness to light and from the dominion of Satan to God, in order that they may receive forgiveness of sins and an inheritance among those who have been sanctified by faith in Me” (Acts 26:18). See, your faith is what qualifies you for service in the vineyard of the Lord! That is the dominating credential God requires!

The Righteous Live By Faith

How is spiritual life sustained? Many believe it is by routine, discipline, and solid habits. Whole religious systems have been placed into effect that teach this. They are all wrong! Life with God is not sustained by habit! It is not maintained by a disciplined routine. This does not mean we disdain routine. It does mean routine is not equal to the requirements of spiritual life.

And, what does it mean to “live”--for the righteous to “live.” It means more than to merely exist. This is being “alive to God” (Rom 6:11). It is being joyfully sensitive to Him, and desirous to be in His presence. It means we are hearing Him who is “speaking from heaven” (Heb 12:25). Such “life” enables us to be “led by the Spirit” (Rom 8:14). Those who are spiritually alive are more conscious of heaven than earth, and of God than men. They live “by every Word of God” (Matt 4:4), and are noted for drawing near to God (Heb 10:22).

How is this life sustained. Do we live by what we do? By the routines we follow? God has spoken on this matter, so there is no need for conjecture. “For in it [the Gospel] the righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith; as it is written, “BUT THE RIGHTEOUS man SHALL LIVE BY FAITH” (Rom 1:17, NASB). How frequently this truth is affirmed! “. . . the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me, and delivered Himself up for me” (Gal 2:20). “Now that no one is justified by the Law before God is evident; for, “THE RIGHTEOUS MAN SHALL LIVE BY FAITH”” (Gal 3:11). “BUT MY RIGHTEOUS ONE SHALL LIVE BY FAITH; AND IF HE SHRINKS BACK, MY SOUL HAS NO PLEASURE IN HIM” (Heb 10:38).

Faith is what keeps the child of God alive and sensitive to God! This is what puts heaven in our eye, and confidence in our heart! Faith substantizes the truth of the Gospel to our hearts. It convinces us that God is for us, and not against us. It persuades us that Christ died for us and lives for us. Faith assures us we are accepted by God through Christ Jesus, even though we have sinned and come short of the glory of God.

In spite of this obvious truth, faith is rarely the emphasis of the contemporary church. Much of what is done in the name of Christ does not require faith. You can do such things without trusting in the Lord with all of your heart. You really do not have to depend upon the Lord to fulfill sectarian requirements. But if you want to live toward God--to be nourished and strengthened by His Presence--faith, and faith alone, is required!

Faith Justifies the Individual

The legalist does not talk much about justification. Words like that are not found in his corrupted vocabulary. But this word is in the Divine nomenclature, and is central in patterns of heavenly thought. Because we have already touched upon this subject, a few observations will suffice.

In the matter of justification, Scripture sets faith in juxtaposition to law. You are either justified because of what you do, or because of your faith. This is foundational to our understanding of salvation. Your faith enables you to join in the affirmation of the Spirit. “For we maintain that a man is justified by faith apart from works of the Law” (Rom 3:28).

This is not a mere creedal statement, to be embraced without discerning the case. Here is something you can know, and of which you can be fully persuaded. “Nevertheless knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the Law but through faith in Christ Jesus, even we have believed in Christ Jesus, that we may be justified by faith in Christ, and not by the works of the Law; since by the works of the Law shall no flesh be justified” (Gal 2:16). We offer no apologies for the strength of this confession. If it does not mesh with preconceived notions of salvation, then throw away the preconceived notions. Truth never opposes itself. It is, however, set in firm opposition to what is NOT true!

This is Something Evident

We are dealing with something that is “evident,” or obvious to the pure in heart. “Now that no one is justified by the Law before God is evident; for, THE RIGHTEOUS MAN SHALL LIVE BY FAITH” (Gal 3:11). Once you have “tasted of the Lord,” it is clear that Law--any law--cannot clear your record before God. It is not possible for a sinner to remove his own sin, or for works to undo what we have done! Faith makes that evident to us! It is true that many professed teachers do not see this. It is not “evident” to them. Their failure to perceive this central matter disqualifies them from being a teacher of God’s people. Until this truth is seen, they occupy the “room of the unlearned” (1 Cor 14:16, KJV).

A Remarkable Commentary

Paul provides a remarkable commentary on the effectiveness of faith in justification. He shows us the Gentiles, who had no Law, and thus no works of the law. Gentiles who have been received by God experienced righteousness independently of the Law. Here is Paul’s reasoning. “What shall we say then? That Gentiles, who did not pursue righteousness, attained righteousness, even the righteousness which is by faith; but Israel, pursuing a law of righteousness, did not arrive at that law. Why? Because they did not pursue it by faith, but as though it were by works. They stumbled over the stumbling stone” (Rom 9:30-32).

Israel, in covenant with God, zealously sought to appropriate righteousness, or a state of justification, by means of Law. They did NOT receive righteousness! They did NOT arrive at a righteousness that resulted from law-keeping, or measuring up! Their efforts caused them to “stumble” over Jesus, Who brought salvation. Attempts to appropriate justification by means of Law inevitably leads to a rejection of Christ!

Notice the power of Paul’s argument. The Gentiles found righteousness even though they were appropriates justification. “Therefore having been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ” (Rom 5:1).

AVOIDING ERRONEOUS CONCLUSIONS

Let none conclude that the Law is evil or sinful. It serves an appointed purpose, but that purpose is NOT justification! By convincing us of the unacceptability of our works, the Law brings us to Christ. That is simply another way of saying it convinces us we need a Savior. We are not wise enough nor strong enough to save ourselves! Even when we are told what to do, our incapacity to please God clings to us like a giant weight. Let the Scripture state the case for us. It does it so very well.

“But the Scripture has shut up all men under sin, that the promise by faith in Jesus Christ might be given to those who believe. But before faith came, we were kept in custody under the law, being shut up to the faith which was later to be revealed. Therefore the Law has become our tutor to lead us to Christ, that we may be justified by faith” (Gal 3:2-24, NASB).

Imprisoned in Sin

Do not miss it! Apart from Christ, we were “shut up,” or imprisoned in, sin! We cannot work our way out, with Law or without it! Before faith “came” to us, we were under the Law. Dominated by it, we actually could not believe! We were “locked up until faith should be revealed” (NIV). Through the Gospel of Christ--not the Law--God “opened the door of faith” to us (Acts 14:27). We were thus justified by believing news rather than fulfilling requirements! The Law, with all of its demands, offered us no help. There is not a particle of grace in Law.

There are no remedies in Law, or means to recovery. Once broken, the seal of “condemnation” is placed upon us. Only faith can remove that seal! And, when “there is therefore now no condemnation,” all fleshly boasting is excluded by “the law of faith.” It is NOT pursuing it! The Jews did not find righteousness, even though they WERE pursuing it! The Gentiles were constrained by the message of a conferred righteousness--the Gospel (Rom 1:16-17). The Jews were constrained by a Law that demanded righteousness! You see, the Gospel has saving power, the Law does not! The Gospel offers something you can obtain, the Law does not! The Gospel offers salvation to those who will believe, the Law does not! It never did, nor was it ever intended to do so.

Our peace with God has come because we have believed the “record God gave of His Son” (1 John 5:10-11). The Law of faith, having excluded all boasting, impossible to boast in the flesh and believe at the same time. Such boasting and faith are mutually exclusive. Where fleshly boasting is found, faith is not present, and where faith is present, boasting in the flesh is excluded.

THE CONCLUSION OF FAITH

²⁸ Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith apart from the deeds of the law. The words “we conclude” not only introduce a deductive statement, they put forth an official tenet of apostolic doctrine. Other presented with the facts in the case. The Gentiles have sinned without the Law, and the Jews have sinned with it. No one has managed to live flawlessly, and no one has met the Divinely appointed objective of seeking and finding God. All have which believeth in Jesus” (3:24-26).

Settle it in your heart, if salvation is dependent upon the works of men, this is what they must do. They must get a Savior from heaven and bring Him down to die. Then, after he has died, they must raise Him from the dead. This reasoning assumes they realize their need of a Savior in the first place, which no man has ever concluded on his own.

Faith can and must take hold of those realities. The grace comes from God. The redemption price was paid by Christ Jesus. God Himself presented the covering for sin. Christ’s blood is what satisfied God and enabled Him to be both the Just and the Justifier of the one believing in Jesus. God’s righteousness is the driving force behind the remission of sins. All of those are independent of man. His works have nothing whatsoever to do with their accomplishment. Not a single mote of weight or a gram of power can be added to them by any mortal. They stand independently of men, yet must be appropriated by them.

versions accentuate this perspective: i.e., “We maintain that,”^{NASB} “we hold that.”^{RSV} This is a conclusion driven by faith and energized by the Holy Spirit. It is not an opinion, and is not subject to change or update. A spiritual conclusion is to reasoning what the pillars Jachin and Boaz were to Solomon’s temple (2 Chron 3:15-17). This “conclusion” is the result of comprehending what has been said before. It is an explanation of why a righteousness from God is announced in the Gospel, rather than demanded by the Law. This “conclusion” also affirms there is no other way to be justified.

sinned, and all come short of the glory of God.

The point being driven home by the Holy Spirit is this: Human guilt and powerlessness cannot be resolved by any form of discipline or law keeping. Men cannot be trained to be righteous. There is no routine that can rid them of their sin or bring God’s righteousness to them. Once sin is committed, no remedy can be found within the natural realm.

FAITH REQUIRES A COMPLETED WORK

While faith does “come by hearing,” it also requires a completed work. It must rest upon something that has already been accomplished. It cannot repose upon something that is yet to be developed: i.e., I have faith I can do it.

The Proclamation

The accomplished work has already been declared. It is the substance that faith must grasp. “Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him

Only Faith is Capable

If men could not keep the Law of God, who is the fool that will imagine man is capable of attaining these things by his own power and ingenuity? If ten commandments were beyond the reach of man’s natural powers, does any one imagine redemption, propitiation, and justification are within their reach?

Let us imagine for a moment that the redemption that is in Christ Jesus could be appropriated independently of faith. Man would be required to bring a Savior down from heaven, and bring Him back from the dead once He died. This is precisely the reasoning found in the tenth chapter of Romans. It is a manner of thought that is forbidden. “Do not say in your heart, ‘Who will ascend into heaven?’ (that is, to bring Christ down from above) or, ‘Who will descend into the abyss?’ (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead)” (Rom 10:6-7). Settle it in your heart, if salvation is dependent upon the works of men, this is what they must do. They must get a Savior from heaven and bring Him down to die. Then, after he has died, they must raise Him from the dead. This reasoning assumes they realize their need of a Savior in the first place, which no man has ever concluded on his own.

The imputation of the righteousness of God by faith excludes all boasting in the flesh, by Given O. Blakely

The conclusion, therefore, is incontestable. “A man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.” God will not be pleased with anything short of faith in Christ! The Prophet said it in these words, “Will the LORD be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?” (Micah 6:7). Micah continued to show what God desired from men. “He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?” (v 8). Those three things, as confirmed by both Moses and the Prophets, required a change of nature.

Even though animal sacrifices were commanded by God and offered according to the Law, yet they brought Him no pleasure. As it is written, “In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure” (Heb 10:6; Psa 40:6). They did not effect a change in men, but let them with a defiled and condemning conscience. Thus it is written, “For the Law, since it has only a shadow of the good things to come and not the very form of things, can never by the same sacrifices year by year, which they offer continually, make perfect those who draw near. Otherwise, would they not have ceased to be offered, because the worshippers, having once been cleansed, would no longer have had consciousness of sins? But in those sacrifices there is a reminder of sins year by year. For it is impossible for the blood of bulls and goats to take away sins”^{NASB} (Heb 10:1-4).

Why Bring This Up?

It might appear all of this has little to do with our text. Permit me to elaborate on the necessity of this reasoning.

Under the Law, the greatest work took place on the day of atonement. In that prescribed routine was the loftiest involvement of the high priest. Precision and order marked every facet of that sacrifice. It was offered at a particular time and in a particular place. Appointed priestly vestments were put on. Specific animals were used, and step-by-step procedures fulfilled (Lev 16). Yet, in that extensive procedure, sin was not removed and the conscience was not purged, “For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.”

How, then, could any person hope to remove his sin and realize a cleansed conscience by doing his best not to murder, steal, or lie? If the loftiest work of the Law did not one whit to justify men, what would lead anyone to believe any work of Law—any obedience rendered in the energy of the flesh—could accomplish justification? The basis for justification

If the loftiest work of the Law did not one whit to justify men, what would lead anyone to believe any work of Law—any obedience rendered in the energy of the flesh—could accomplish justification? The basis for justification cannot reside in the one being justified.

cannot reside in the one being justified.

JUSTIFIED BY FAITH

“Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.” Other versions read as follows. “We reckon therefore that a man is justified by faith apart from the works of the law.”^{ASV} “For we maintain that a man is justified by faith apart from observing the law.”^{NIV} “For we hold that a person is justified by faith apart from works prescribed by the law.”^{NRSV}

Our text is speaking of the GROUND of our justification: the foundation upon which it rests. It is faith “apart from the works of the Law.” The professed church has divided over this issue. One segment of the church argues that faith is combined with works as the basis for justification. The other contends that faith itself is the ground for justification, without works.

First, the Spirit has no regard for the contentions of men. He is placing before us the reason for our justification, and it is apart from the “works of the Law.” Further, “works of the Law” and “obedience” are, to my knowledge, nowhere said to be synonymous. Later, the Spirit will make this affirmation, “But to one who without works trusts him who justifies the ungodly, such faith is reckoned as righteousness”^{NRSV} (Rom 4:5).

A Type of Justification

A type, or picture, of justification is seen in the Lord’s directions for rearing up an altar of stone on which to make sacrifices. “And if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it” (Ex 20:25). The fact that a person may have been a skilled craftsman had nothing whatsoever to do with the case. If man’s “tool” was put to the altar, it would become polluted, or defiled.

Man’s works, however disciplined and precise they may be, cannot become the basis for justification. Neither, indeed, can our faith be placed in them. God will not save us because of “works of righteousness which we have done” (Tit 3:5). Emphatically we are told salvation is “Not of works, lest any man should boast” (Eph 2:9). God has saved us and called us “not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began” (2 Tim 1:9).

When affirming the existence of a “remnant according to the election of grace,” the Spirit makes a poignant statement that is of relevance to this discussion. “And if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace. But if it is of works, it is no longer grace; otherwise work is no longer work” (Rom 11:6).

When it comes to the BASIS of justification, faith and works cannot mix. We cannot trust in Christ and in our own accomplishments. The foundation has already been laid, and it will not mingle with any other. “For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ” (1 Cor 3:11). Faith takes hold of the foundation!

James and Works

It is unfortunate that men have chosen to argue about Scripture rather than believe it. One of the chief sources of contention in Christendom surrounds James’ teaching on works and that of Paul. The teachers are different, but only because they are dealing with different matters. It will be to our advantage to briefly consider some of James’ remarks. They were given by the inspiration of God, and are not to be ignored.

While Paul declared the BASIS of salvation, James dealt with the EVIDENCE of it. Both affirmed that FAITH was the means of appropriating it. In providing an example of justification, Paul affirmed, “Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness” (Rom 4:3). James makes precisely the same point. “Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness” (James 2:23).

James was dealing with those having an empty profession. He referred to them as “adulterers and adulteresses,” who, because of their friendship with the world, had become the enemies of God (James 4:4). The question with James was not HOW men become righteous before God, but how they PROVE to others that such has occurred. “Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: show me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works” (2:18).

James, the brother of our Lord (Gal 1:19), sternly rebukes those who affirm faith, yet lack the evidence of it. He will not allow men to imagine they have faith if they are lacking works. “Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone” (James 2:17). “But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?” (2:20).

When James says, “Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only” (2:24), he is not declaring the doctrine of justification. Rather, he is uprooting the notion that justification can occur without a fundamental change taking place in the one who is justified. His view is one which reasons from effect back to cause. In that view, he makes no allowance for an unproductive faith.

When Paul dealt with the same subject as James, he also made no allowance for the absence of works. “Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God” (1 Cor 7:19). “For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them” (Eph 2:10). “Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works” (Tit 2:14). But this is never set forth as the basis, or foundation, of our justification, or the ground of Divine acceptance.

Righteousness Imputed Without Works

The imputation of righteousness is expressly said to be “without works.” Because I will be dealing with this passage in a later lesson, I will only quote it here. “Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works, Saying, Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin” (Rom 4:6-8). Works grow from the tree of justification, but are never its root.

Those who seek righteousness through the “works of the Law” will stumble over the Stumblingstone, rather than be founded upon it (Rom 9:32).

If a person chooses to seek justification through works, all the works of the Law must be fulfilled. “For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them. But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, The just shall live by faith” (Gal 3:10-11). In this case, “life” equates to being justified, or living in the favor of God. If justification depends upon your work, you must do it all!

WHY FAITH JUSTIFIES

Faith justifies because it receives “the record that God gave of his Son” (1 John 5:10-11). Sin had to be taken away before you could be freed from its dominion (Heb 9:26). The devil had to be destroyed before you could be released from his hold (Heb 2:14). God had to be satisfied before you could be received (Isa 53:11). Principalities and powers had to be plundered before you could be free from their oppression (Col 2:15). The handwriting of ordinances that was against us had to be fully satisfied before you could be loosed from the Law’s condemnation (Col 2:14).

No amount of work on your part could accomplish these things. Jesus, and Jesus alone, fulfilled them all. Faith receives what Jesus has done, and is ready to act upon it. That is why it justifies. Faith never balks at a word from God. It always depends on God being faithful, and it is always honored by God. Without it, it is impossible to please God.

THE GOD OF ALL WHO BELIEVE

“²⁹ Or is He the God of the Jews only? Is He not also the God of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also.” If men could be justified by “the works of the Law,” then only the Jews would be justified. As a covenant, the Law pertained only to them, and to them alone (Rom 9:4). As a moral code, or Law, it was given “that every mouth might be stopped, and all the world become guilty before God” (Rom 3:19). The Law, therefore, was never intended to be a means of justification, or becoming right before God. Yet, if justification is by works, this could not be the case.

A Legalistic View

While this may appear relatively apparent to us, it was revolutionary for the Jews—even those who believed. A strict legalist could support the notion that the Jews alone could expect salvation. Jesus Himself said, “Salvation is of the Jews” (John 4:22). When Jesus first sent out the twelve, He said to them, “Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel” (Matt 10:5-6). To a Syrophenician woman He said, “I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel” (Matt 15:24).

The Household of Cornelius

Nearly ten years after the day of Pentecost, the Gentiles remained largely neglected by the church—even by the Apostles and elders. The acceptance of Cornelius upon the basis of his faith proved to be an epoch to Peter, chief spokesman for the Twelve. It was at that time that he said before the Gentile Cornelius, “Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him” (Acts 10:34-35). This was a hallmark event.

The Ministry of Paul and Barnabas

Later, when the conversion of Cornelius’ household was reported to the brethren in Jerusalem, they “glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life” (Acts 11:18). About seven years later, when Paul and Barnabas related how the Gentiles had been converted through their ministry, they “rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles” (Acts 14:27). This represented a major breakthrough in understanding as well as Divine accomplishment.

To this day, there remains considerable confusion among professed believers concerning the Jews and the Gentiles. Some are convinced the Jews have been written off, with no Divine committal to their recovery. Others believe the Gentiles have a separate Gospel, preached by Paul, and that it has nothing whatsoever to do with the Jews. Still others look forward to a period of time after a rapture, when the Jews will be brought to the Lord by means of another Gospel.

All of these notions are dashed to the ground by the affirmation set before us. “Is He the God of the Jews only? is He not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also.” “Ah,” says the sophist, “but God is not the God of the Jews at all. That is something that occurred in the past.” However, that is not true. If He is “not the God of the Jews only,” then it remains that He is still the “God of the Jews.” Once again, in justification, Gentiles are perceived as partaking of something belonging first to the Jews. The Gospel is to “the Jew first, and ALSO to the Greek,” or Gentiles (Rom 1:16). Tribulation and anguish is promised to every soul that “does evil, of the Jew first, and ALSO of the Gentile” (Rom 2:9). Glory, honor, and peace are also promised to “to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first, and ALSO to the Gentile” (Rom 2:10). There are “vessels of mercy” whom God has prepared for His glory, “not of the Jews only, but ALSO of the Gentiles?” (Rom 9:24).

The glory of the acceptance of the Gentiles has been largely obscured by the institutional church. It is one of the great occurrences in history, and is not to be treated lightly. It is consistently viewed as an unusual token of Divine favor.

Righteousness, the Common Need of All

Throughout a considerable percentage of history, there was a Divinely imposed distinction among men—Jew and Gentile. This difference dominated God’s dealings with men for over 1,500 years. Because of this, those without faith tended to regard God as a “respecter of persons,” thinking that the Jews as superior to others.

However, our text has shown us that when it came to NEED, all men were considered the same. They ALL need a righteousness from God. When it comes to the matter of guilt, they are also all the same: “ALL have sinned and come short of the glory of God.”

There will not be a separate Gospel for the Jews or the Gentiles, because their need is no different. A single Savior died for them all. One Lord conquered their foe. One Propitiation is offered for a means to Divine mercy. One Man reconciled them to God. God will NOT accept the Jews on one basis, and the Gentiles on another. That would dishonor Jesus, and bring reproach to God.

The righteousness that is declared, therefore, belongs no more to the Jew than to the Gentiles. And, arrogant Gentiles must know they have no more right to it than the Jews.

SAME GOD?

When the Spirit uses the expressions “God of the Jews” and “God of the Gentiles,” He is referring to the Lord in His redemptive capacity, not the creative one. While it is true that both owe their origin to God, that is not the point of the text. It is their acceptance by God that is the point, not their origin.

The phraseology speaks of a mutual and intimate relationship between God and the people. Thus the prophet Jeremiah said, “And ye shall be my people, and I will be your God” (Jer 30:22). The Prophet further said this relationship would be the result of a new heart. “And I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God” (Jer 24:7).

One of the marks of the New Covenant is that God “will be their God, and they shall be my people” (Jer 31:33; Heb 8:10). Ezekiel spoke of the same association (Ezek 11:20; 36:28). This is the most profound of all relationships.

In the ninth chapter, the Spirit will again make a point of this. “Even us, whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles? As he saith also in Osee (Hosea), I will call them my people, which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved. And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there shall they be called the children of the living God” (9:24-26).

That speaks of a redemptive relationship in which sin has been expiated, and the individual made acceptable in Christ Jesus. Such receive a righteousness from God upon the basis of their faith.

ONE BASIS FOR JUSTIFICATION

“³⁰ . . . since there is one God who will justify the circumcised by faith and the uncircumcised through faith.” Here again the means through which we are justified is declared. It should be apparent that this can easily escape us. Indeed, there is a great neglect found among preachers and teachers in affirming justification by faith. I know of people who have spent their life in “church,” and have never heard a solid proclamation of this truth. “Works,” in some form, are almost the universal emphasis of the professed church. Most religious specialists are professed experts of some kind of human “work.” God’s messengers, on the other hand are experts in the Gospel—in the announcement of a righteousness from God.

RELIGIOUS SPECIALISTS

Among men, there is really only one problem—sinning and coming short of the glory of God. There is also only one remedy—a righteousness from God. The perception of these circumstances is essential to a truly effective ministry for Christ Jesus.

The outbreak of religious specialists during the past two decades has cast a cloud of dust in the eyes of the people. Multitudes are being led to believe their primary difficulties and advantages are found in their age category. Thus we have specialists in children, youth, young adult, middle aged, old aged, etc. Men speak of the X-generation and the Boomer-generation just as though they were Divinely revealed categories. But they are not. To classify people according to

WHEN they were born is more related to heathenism than to Christ Jesus. To teach people that primary distinctions are traced to thinking with the left side of the brain or the right side of it, smacks of a godless analyst, not a godly one.

When it comes to groups of people in the flesh, God has only two classifications: “circumcised” and “uncircumcised,” or “Jew” and “Gentile.” By using these some point, those who speak for the Lord have to get down to that situation, else the Gospel will really have no relevance.

NOT A NATIONAL GOD

God is not a national God, whereas idols often are. No group of fleshly people owns God, or can claim exclusive identity with Him. He is truly “the God of all flesh” (Jer 32:27). He is He who “from one man he made every nation of men” (Acts 17:26). The entire race can repeat in unison, “Have we not all one Father? hath not one God created us?” (Mal 2:10). The ONLY unique identity God holds among men is toward those who are in Christ Jesus. Only they have a unparalleled relationship with Him.

Notice this is traced to God’s oneness: “Seeing it is ONE God.” Some, stumbling over this language, assume there is only one Person involved. Thus, the Father, Son, and the Holy Spirit are viewed as one Person doing three different things. However, this is a purely humanistic view of God, and is to be rejected as a total misrepresentation of the case. The whole of our salvation postulates three personalities in the Godhead. Each one is Divine, and each has a special work to do. The Father purposes, the Son executes, and the Spirit applies. The Son fulfilled the will of the Father, and the Spirit fulfills the will of the Son. There is no need to go further into this matter, as the whole of Apostolic doctrine is an elaboration of these things.

BY FAITH AND THROUGH FAITH

“Seeing it is one God, which shall terms, the Spirit emphasizes that one was a covenanted people (“circumcised”), and the other an uncovenanted people (“uncircumcised”).

He declares there “is no difference” in the matter of their need—they “come short of the glory of God.” He also affirms there is “no difference” in the matter of their past—“all have sinned.” Neither group has yielded a righteous man, one that sought God, or one that was good. justify the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith." All major translations use the words "by" and "through." The two words have slightly different meanings. "By," means "out of faith." "Through" means "by means of the faith." I understand there to be no essential difference in the words. The idea is that righteousness is given to us through the vehicle of faith—that is, God gives it to the believer. From the pragmatic viewpoint, righteousness is experienced through faith—that is, it is received because of faith.

The reasoning of the verse appears to be as follows. One God will justify the covenanted Jews by faith, and the uncovenanted Gentiles through the same faith. Peter would call it "like precious faith," or "a faith of the same kind as ours" NASB (2 Pet 1:1).

There is a common dilemma among men, and a common answer. It comes from a single God, and through a single means—faith.

Observing the unusual emphasis the Spirit is placing on the matter of being justified by faith, or receiving a righteousness from God through faith, I am compelled to ask why this is not preached with greater frequency and urgency. In many circles with which I am familiar, the subject of righteousness by faith is rarely, if ever, mentioned.

This line of reasoning will continue through the first verse of the fifth chapter. It should be obvious to you that this is a pivotal teaching. It should be equally apparent that it can easily escape us—thus the extended teaching.

A BRIEF REVIEW

The words justify, justified, justifieth, justification, and righteousness are key words in Romans.

1. "Justify" (3:30). Mentioned with faith.
2. "Justified" (2:13; 3:4,20,24,28; 4:2; 5:1; 8:30). Mentioned twice with "faith," once with "grace," once with Christ's blood.
3. "Justification" (4:25; 5:16,18). Mentioned once with Christ's resurrection, and twice with God's "free gift."
4. "Justifier" (3:25). Mentioned with believing.
5. "Justifieth" (4:5; 8:33). Mentioned once with faith, and once with God's doing.

6. "Righteous" (2:5; 3:10; 5:7,19). Mentioned once with the obedience of Christ.

6. "Righteousness" (1:17; 2:26; 3:5,21,22, 25,26; 4:3,5,6,9,11,13,22; 5:1,17,18,21; 6:13,16,18,19,20; 8:4,10; 9:28,30,31; 10:3, 4,5,6,10; 14:17). Mentioned three times with God's revelation, seven times with faith, six times with believing, four times with imputation, twice with God's gift, once with grace, twice with the Holy Spirit.

Those holy associations should provoke us to a deeper inquiry into the matter of righteousness. This is particularly true when you consider the words of the Lord Jesus. "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness . . ." (Matt 6:33).

Our hearts should also be persuaded this righteousness comes to us by faith. When it comes to "works," it is Christ's achievement that is the foundation of our acceptance. God honors what Jesus has done, and has exalted Him to His right hand because of His work, giving Him all power in heaven and in earth. No discerning soul will deny this is the case, but find great pleasure in its truth.

DO WE MAKE VOID THE LAW?

^{31a} Do we then make void the law through faith? Certainly not!

The strength of this line of reasoning is confirmed in nearly every major translation. "Do we then make the law of none effect through faith" ^{ASV} "Do we then nullify the Law through faith?" ^{NASB} "Do we then overthrow the law by this faith?" ^{NRSV} "Law then do we make useless through the faith?" ^{Young's Literal} "Well then, if we emphasize faith, does this mean that we can forget about the law?" ^{NLT} "Are we saying that the Law has been made pointless by faith?" ^{NJB}

When justification by faith is taught, do interfere with obedience to God's moral requirements? Do the commandments of God suddenly become useless and pointless? Is it true, as some affirm, that insisting we are justified by faith cause people to become antinomian, or without law? Does it encourage loose living and the neglect of ones soul?

Flesh is anxious to get rid of the Law, because it detests the commands of God. Therefore, it seeks to treat grace as though it offered a license to sin, and removed any danger of falling from grace. Legion is the name of those who espouse such heresy. Further, countless numbers of people practice this heresy, even though they formally deny it. Who is able to number the people who willingly and constantly live in contradiction of the Law of God, claiming their preliminary obedience to the Gospel, or their identity with a religious institution as enough reason for God to receive them.

This was a constant charge brought against both Jesus and Paul—namely, that they had no regard for the Law. The scribes and Pharisees and many of the people tried to pit the Law against Jesus (John 8:5; 12:34). As for Paul, he was slanderously reported to have taught, "Let us do good that evil may come" (Rom 3:8). Others charged him with persuading men to "worship God contrary to the law" (Acts 18:13).

The tendency to view grace and faith as a license to sin continues to this day. Those who emphasize being justified by faith (what few there appear to be) are viewed as preaching a deficient Gospel, and not taking due regard of the book of James. But these are false charges, and are the result of spiritual blindness.

If the Gospel of Christ reveals a righteousness from God (1:17), what manner of reasoning would conclude that the declaration of that Gospel fomented sin? That is an utter absurdity!

Has God erased the Law, as some affirm, only to repromulgate some of the commandments that are perceived as compulsory under the New Covenant? Is that what Jesus came to do?

CAME NOT TO DESTROY

Jesus forbade us to think of Him as nullifying or destroying the Law or the Prophets. “Do not think that I came to abolish [destroy^{KJV}] the Law or the Prophets; I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill”^{NASB} (Matt 5:17). If “the knowledge of sin” comes through the Law (Rom 3:20), it is absurd to think Jesus came to destroy it.

ENDED AS A MEANS TO RIGHTEOUSNESS

The weakness of the Law was not all law—for any approach to righteousness that depends upon man. This is precisely the point made in Galatians 3:21. “Is the Law then contrary to the promises of God? May it never be! For if a law had been given which was able to impart life, then righteousness would indeed have been based on law.”^{NASB}

But life cannot be imparted by means of law—even if the law is from God, and is “holy, and just, and good” (Rom 7:12). Apart from faith, all doing is nothing more than “dead works,” to be discarded in favor of faith, which alone can appropriate the righteousness of God.

With remarkable precision, the Spirit reminds us, “And all our righteousnesses (not unrighteousnesses) are like filthy rags” (Isa 64:6). No amount of doing can get rid of that condition.

avoiding such a conclusion. The NASB states the situation more clearly. “Having canceled out the certificate of debt consisting of decrees against us and which was hostile to us.” The Law was removed in its condemning capacity; that is, it can no longer condemn those who are in Christ Jesus.

The “ordinances,” in this case, were not the commandments of God, but the ceremonies contained in the Law. These ceremonies were an acknowledgment of guilt, and were given to the ancient people because of guilt. But now, Christ Jesus has cancelled the debt, having removed our sins from us as far as the East is from the West (Psa 103:12).

THE LAW OF COMMANDMENTS CONTAINED IN ORDINANCES

The same truth—namely the cancellation of the debt sin incurred—is taught in the book of Ephesians. “Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances” (Eph 2:15). Again, the Spirit carefully states the case., He does not say the commandments themselves were abolished, but “the commandments contained in ordinances.”

But life cannot be imparted by means of law—even if the law is from God, and is “holy, and just, and good” (Rom 7:12). Apart from faith, all doing is nothing more than “dead works,” to be discarded in favor of faith, which alone can appropriate the righteousness of God.

due to any deficiency in it. Rather, it was weak “through the flesh” of men (Rom 8:3). It offered life to men, but its demands exceeding their ability: “Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them” (Gal 3:10). The Law was not an appropriate means to obtain righteousness, and thus it was ended in that capacity—or in a covenantal capacity. Thus it is written, “For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes”^{NKJV} (Rom 10:4).

In this capacity, the Law stands for

BLOTTING OUT THE HANDWRITING OF ORDINANCES

The death of Christ is related to the cancellation of the indebtedness created by our infractions of the Law. Scripture states it this way. “Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross” (Col 2:14).

Some have supposed this was a destruction of the Law itself. However, the Spirit carefully states the case,

This phrase refers to the same thing mentioned in the ninth chapter of Hebrews. There the Spirit refers to the Old Covenant as one “Which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation” (9:10). These were the “commandments contained in ordinances,” imposed upon the people as an acknowledgment of guilt. This is not a reference to the abolishment of the Ten Commandments. Both the Ephesian and Colossian texts refer to the Law in its covenantal aspects, not its moral requirements.

WE ESTABLISH THE LAW

^{31b} “On the contrary, we establish the law.” Such a statement could not be made if Christ’s death had abrogated, or nullified, the Law of God. By establishing the Law, we acknowledge that its assessment of us was correct. We had broken the Law, and thus stood guilty before the Lord. Our mouths were stopped by the Law, and we had to acknowledge our personal guilt.

If this were not the case, there would be no need for Christ at all. Christ coming into the world and laying down His life confirms the truth of the Law. When we embrace His death by faith, we also acknowledge the truth of the Law’s condemnation. Because of the Law, we fled to Christ for refuge, to hold on the hope set before us (Heb 6:18).

THE MORAL LAW

By moral law, I mean the commandments by which sin was defined, and through which the knowledge of sin was cultured. Faith establishes the Law by enabling us to fulfill its demands.

This is done in a twofold sense. First, our hearts are brought into accord with the Law. This is the result of God writing His Laws upon our hearts and putting them into our minds (Heb 8:10; 10:16). With our minds, we ourselves “serve the Law of God” (Rom 7:25).

There is another sense in which we “establish the Law.” With sin being removed, the Law written on our hearts, and a new nature given to us, we actually do from the heart what the Law demands—and we do it out of preference. Here is how the Scripture states this marvelous reality. “For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit” (Rom 8:3-4).

THE CEREMONIAL LAW

By “ceremonial law,” I mean the routines established under the First Covenant, to address the matter of sin and uncleanness. By faith, we also establish the truth of those routines by embracing their antitype, Christ Jesus. By taking hold of the “Lamb of God,” we realize the fulfillment of all those types, establishing their truth and relevance.

What is more, by embracing the One they prefigured, we acknowledge they are no longer binding upon men. Just as John the Baptist concluded his introductory work when Jesus came, so the ceremonial ordinances under the Law concluded their work when the real Sacrifice, determined before the foundation of the world, was offered. There was no further need for them, yet they continue to speak to us.

THE SABBATH DAY COMMANDMENT

A word should be said about the Sabbath commandment. The presence of the fourth commandment is what gave rise to the development of a theology that affirmed the complete abrogation of the Law. This, men supposed, would refute those who affirm the Sabbath day is still binding on the people of God.

First, the matter of the Sabbath day is addressed directly in the fourth chapter of Hebrews. “For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world. For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And God did rest the seventh day from all his works. And in this place again, If they shall enter into my rest. Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief” (Heb 4:3-6).

Israel did not enter into the rest of God the true Sabbath. This contradicts the doctrine of the Sabbatarians who affirm the seventh day is the proper day of worship. (Many of them affirm that honoring the first day of the week is a Satanic innovation.) If this were the case, Israel would have entered into the sabbath-rest of God, though imperfectly, because they did honor the Sabbath day.

However, it is here declared they did not enter the “rest” God associated with the seventh day! If the cessation of creative labor on the seventh day is the “rest” to which our text refers, we cast are upon the horns of a dilemma. The Lord said Israel did not enter His rest, yet they did keep the Sabbath day holy, as He commanded (though with much inconsistency). God declared, “They (the unbelievers) shall never enter My rest!”

The point is not merely that they did not enter, but that they “could not” enter! It was no longer offered to them! It was not accessible to them. However, the seventh day was offered to them—yea, it was commanded they keep it, and do so in a holy manner. The most diligent Sabbath keepers in Israel, however, did not enter into God’s real Sabbath rest! That is a matter of revelation.

The Lord is not speaking of a ritual, but of a condition. He is not referring to a procedure, but to a culmination. It is more than interesting that in Hebrews 3:11,18, and 4:1,3,5,10, and 11, the word “rest” is translated from the Greek word κατάπαυσις, which means ceasing from ones work or activity . . . rest. However, in the ninth verse, another word is used.

“There remains therefore a Sabbath rest for the people of God” (NASB, NIV, NRSV). The word used here is σαββατισμός, which means a spiritual rest, a rest. This is a use of the word from which the word “Sabbath” comes, and is the only place in the New Covenant writings where it is found. Notice, it is yet to be inhabited, not observed! It is something into which we “enter,” not something we keep.

Two Kinds of Rest

Here, there are at least two kinds of “rest” to be considered. First, a rest from toil and exertion. In this case, “rest” for the weary. This was foreshadowed by the seventh day Sabbath. In that day, there was to be a cessation of normal activity, and provision made for rest and contemplation. This cannot, of course, be applied to God Almighty. There is no need for God to “rest,” in this sense of the word. Creating the world did not fatigue the Lord!

The other kind of rest is a conclusion--a "rest" because something is completed. This is the "rest" God is said to have had. Both rests pertain to man, but only the latter applies to the Lord. For God, the Sabbath-rest marked the conclusion of the creation of the heavens and the earth. For Israel, the Sabbath-rest marked the conclusion of a week, and the preparation for further toil.

For those in Christ, the Sabbath-rest marks the conclusion of their orientation for glory, when they shall be "conformed to the Image of God's Son" (Rom 8:29), glorified and ready to embark on an eternal reign with the Son of God. That rest "remains" to be enjoyed by the people of God. Now, they enjoy a "rest" from their own labors as a basis for entrance into glory. They now savor

The Fourth Commandment

The Ten Commandments are a reflection of the image of God. They are good, and holy, and just, as Romans 7 declares. But they are not the basis for determining whether a person is righteous or not. That is determined by personal faith in Jesus Christ (Rom 4:13; Phil 3:9). As for the Sabbath day, Israel, who received the commandment, never really entered into God's rest, or sabbath.

There is a greater rest that was typified by the Law's Sabbath day, but never fulfilled by it. That is the rest of faith, and is discussed at length in the fourth chapter of Hebrews, as I have shown.

A parallel is made between the fourth commandment Sabbath and the rest of faith. The Sabbath day was bound upon Israel because their hearts were hard. They would have forgotten God altogether if He did not demand they remember Him on that day, dedicating it exclusively to Him.

In Christ, however, our nature is changed, so that we actually know and delight in knowing the Lord. Now every day becomes a Sabbath so far as sanctifying the Lord in our memory. This does not mean keeping the Sabbath is wrong. Nor, indeed, does it mean we are to demand that everyone keep it. Colossians 2:16 forbids us to judge one another on this matter. The recollection of God as the Creator of the universe is wonderful. Intimate fellowship with Him by faith is more wonderful. That is why Scripture affirms, "We which believe do enter into rest" (Heb 4:3). This is a higher and more extensive rest which overshadows, but does not obliterate, the former Sabbath.

Not Right to Demand Sabbath Keeping

It is never right to demand that everyone keep the Sabbath day—even though no individual is condemned for choosing to do so. Colossians 2:16 forbids us to judge one another on this matter. The recollection of God as the Creator of the universe is wonderful--but it is certainly not the highest or most glorifying view of our God. Intimate fellowship with Him by faith is more wonderful.

This is a foundational teaching. The Old Covenant put the entire responsibility in the hands of man. Believing or faith are not mentioned a single time in all of the Law—including all of the commandments, all of the directions, and all of the Levitical law. It was a system of doing.

The Sabbath day commandment has not been obviated by a different commandment, but by a greater rest. It is something like the light of the sun removing the light of the moon. That "rest" is nothing less than satisfaction with the atoning death of Christ. When we enter into that "rest," we cease depending on our own accomplishments, resting, as it were, from them.

The New Covenant Is Different

When comparing the New and Old covenants, our approach must be correct. The New Covenant is a different kind of covenant, not at all like the Old Covenant. God said it this way, "I will make a new covenant. . . It will not be like the covenant I made with their forefathers when I took them by the hand to lead them out of Egypt" (Heb 8:8-9, NIV). The latter part of that chapter confirms this is the covenant Jesus is presently mediating. It is not a covenant of DOING, like the Old Covenant was. In fact, the Spirit makes this parallel in commenting on the nature of the New Covenant. "Moses describes in this way the righteousness that is by the law: The man who does these things will live by them. But the righteousness that is by faith says: Do not say in your heart, Who will ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down) or Who will descend into the deep? (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead). But what does it say? The word is near you; it is in your mouth and in your heart, that is, the word of faith we are proclaiming: That if you confess with your mouth, Jesus is Lord, and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you will be saved. For it is with your heart that you believe and are justified, and it is with your mouth that you confess and are saved" (Rom 10:5-10).

This is a foundational teaching. The Old Covenant put the entire responsibility in the hands of man. Believing or faith are not mentioned a single time in all of the Law—including all of the commandments, all of the directions, and all of the Levitical law. It was a system of doing—the doing of men.

In the New Covenant, God does the foundational work, then calls upon us to believe it. He then accepts us upon the basis of our faith, and works with us to fulfill His will (Phil 2:12-13). The entire New Covenant is summarized in a few words. Jeremiah foretold it in Jeremiah 31:31-34. The Spirit later gave it again in Hebrews 8:8-13. It is again summarized in Hebrews 10:16-17. In all of these references what the Lord does is the total emphasis. There are no “Ifs,” and there are no commands.

If you will read those texts, you will find the following affirmations. (1) God will put His laws into the mind. (2) He will write his laws on the heart. (3) He will be God to the people. (4) The people will be His people. (5) Every one in the covenant will know Him, or be familiar and in love with Him. (6) He will not remember their sins any more.

All of those things are promises—promises to be believed. They can only be possessed in Christ. Further, our faith will compel us to do anything and everything He commands us. Other scriptures that affirm the nature of the New Covenant, and how radically it differs from the Old Covenant are as follows. Jeremiah 32:39-40; Ezekiel 11:19-20; 36:26-27; 2 Corinthians 5:17-21; Ephesians 2:10.

The First Day of the Week

The “First day of the week” is frequently mentioned in Scripture, and always with a note of approval. This is specifically said to be the time when Jesus rose from the dead. “Now when He rose early on the first day of the week . . .” (Mark 16:9). This is also the day on which Jesus, following His resurrection, first appeared to His disciples. “Then, the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled, for fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood in the midst, and said to them, ‘Peace be with you’” (John 20:19). It is also the day on which He appeared the second time to His disciples. John refers to it as eight days following the first appearance, which would put it on the first day of the week. “And after eight days His disciples were again inside, and Thomas with them. Jesus came, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, ‘Peace to you!’” (John 20:26).

In addition, the day of Pentecost occurred on the first day of the week. This feast took place 50 days after the high Sabbath of the paschal week (Lev 23:15-16). The Sabbath from which the on setting aside special monies for the poor saints in Jerusalem, Paul specified that it be done on “the first day of the week” (1 Cor 16:2). As the church progressed, from Ignatius (A.D. 30-107) onwards, we “have a complete chain of evidence that The Lord’s Day became the regular Christian name for the first day of the week.”

Suffice it to say, there is solid ground for perceiving as “the Lord’s Day” the first day of the week. This was the day on which natural light was created (Gen 1:3-5). It was the day on which Christ count was made occurred the day after Jesus was crucified, and was the reason why His body was taken down from the cross (John 19:31; Mark 15:42).

This is not simply another day! The events that took place on the first day of the week are conducive to godly recollections that sanctify the soul. It outshines the Sabbath day, having been blessed with greater occurrences.

It was also the Sabbath honored by the women who came to anoint Jesus’ body (Mark 16:1; Luke 23:54-56). Fifty days from that Sabbath day was the first day of the week--the Day of Pentecost, on which the Spirit was poured forth.

We are categorically told that the early disciples came together to break bread “on the first day of the week” (Acts 20:7). When instructing the Corinthians Jesus arose from the dead (Mark 16:9). His two recorded appearances to His disciples occurred on this day (John 20:19,26). The day of Pentecost took place on this day (Lev 23:15-16), and the early church is said to have gathered together on the “first day of the week” (Acts 20:7; 1 Cor 16:2).

This is not simply another day! The events that took place on the first day of the week are conducive to godly recollections that sanctify the soul. It outshines the Sabbath day, having been blessed with greater occurrences. God did greater things on this day.

CONCLUSION

We have dealt with the very heart of sound doctrine: how the righteousness of God is appropriated. With great power, the Holy Spirit has persuaded us of the need of a righteousness from God. He has announced that “the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men” (1:18).

There is only one way to avoid being consumed by that wrath, and that is to be clothed with the righteousness of God. This is not merely a technical point, but a requirement driven by God’s own nature.

Only the Son of God could fulfill the demands of the Law and the purpose of God. Only He could remove sin, destroy the devil, and reconcile us to God. For this reason, God has set Jesus before the world as a propitiation for sin—a means of obtaining His mercy.

When we believe the record God has given of His Son, Jesus takes hold of us, and our faith takes hold of Him. It is then that God imputes His very own righteousness to us, thereby lifting us above the condemnation of the Law. Because of our faith, God receives us.

The “law of faith,” by which God’s righteousness is appropriated will not allow men to boast, as though their salvation was the result of their own doing. The Law of faith “excludes” boasting, moving us to glory in the Lord. We glory in God through Jesus Christ, having no confidence in the flesh.

The religious climate in which we find ourselves makes it exceedingly difficult to take hold of these things. Yet, we must exert ourselves to do so, asking the Lord to help our unbelief. Christ has brought God’s righteousness within the reach of faith. Praise Him for that, and extend yourself to appropriate it.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 12

ABRAHAM, JUSTIFIED BY FAITH

4:1 What then shall we say that Abraham our father has found according to the flesh? ² For if Abraham was justified by works, he has something to boast about, but not before God. ³ For what does the Scripture say? 'Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness.' ⁴ Now to him who works, the wages are not counted as grace but as debt. (Romans 4:1-4^{NKJV})

INTRODUCTION

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. WHAT SHALL WE SAY? (4:1a)
- II. ABRAHAM OUR FATHER (4:1b)
- III. THE CONCEPT OF FINDING (4:1c)
- IV. IF ABRAHAM WERE JUSTIFIED BY WORKS (4:2)
- V. WHAT DOES THE SCRIPTURE SAY? (4:3)
- VI. ABRAHAM BELIEVED GOD (4:4a)
- VII. FAITH COUNTED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS (4:4b)
- VIII. GRACE VERSUS DEBT (4:4c)

In Scripture, extensive reasoning is always associated with foundational teaching. This is remarkably consistent throughout the Word of God, setting it apart from all other words. The Spirit never deals with trivia, and is never known to provide humorous anecdotes for life. Levity and light-heartedness cannot be found in Scripture. This does not mean such things are of themselves sinful, unless they are colored by baseness. Triviality, froth, levity, and jesting, however, are never presented as the means to edification. They appeal more to the flesh, and are soulish in nature. For this reason, they are never to be exalted, or given prominence in things pertaining to life and godliness.

Because men "live by every word of God" (Lk 4:4), matters unrelated to spiritual life are totally absent in Scripture. This is particularly true of the Apostolic writings, when insightful proclamation is brought to its apex.

In the text before us, the Spirit begins to probe into the matter of men being given the righteousness of God. He is going to confirm to our hearts the reasonableness of righteousness coming to us as a gift, and not a reward. Because this is difficult for men to grasp, the Spirit will reason with us extensively about the matter. This confirms the importance of the theme.

THE DANGER OF A RELIGION BASED UPON EMOTION

It is in order to make a few comments about the danger of an emotional-based religion. This is required by the nature of the times in which we live, particularly in the Western world.

Throughout church history men have arisen who sought to build the souls of men upon the shifting foundation of emotion. Much of this has occurred because religion had become lifeless and sterile. Men developed an inordinate thirst for religious experiences rooted in the flesh, and thus sought them aggressively. It was not long until entire religious movements were based upon experience rather than faith. This is a great tragedy in the history of the church.

Legitimate Experience

Let it be clear, those who live by faith are brought into the realm of great and legitimate experience – but the experience is not an end of itself–i.e., it is not the real point. You can search the Scripture with great care, and you will never find the Lord calling upon men to seek an experience based in the flesh. The body is the weakest part of our constitution, and has not yet been redeemed (Rom 8:23). The greatest evidences, and the most lasting experiences are beyond the perimeter of the body.

A fleshly sensation, or a overpowering experience, however lofty, is never presented as worthy of a whole-hearted quest. I say these things with great care, not wanting to leave the impression that personal and exhilarating experiences are to be held in disdain, or repudiated as false. Anyone even casually acquainted with the word of God knows it is filled with the remarkable experiences of God’s people. But nowhere are we admonished to emulate those Divinely orchestrated experiences.

For example, we are urged to appropriate faith like Abraham, not become a father in old age as he did. Although becoming a father of many nations is not beyond possibility with God, that is not the point of this reasoning. Further, the various exploits accomplished through faith are not the point in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, but faith itself. Fleshly experience is NOT the highest form of blessing. It is possible to receive unprecedented benefits in the comes to the culturing of the soul, building up the renewed spirit, and orientating the individual for glory, we are raised to the realm of faith. In that domain—where men believe “with the heart” (Rom 10:10)—a kinship with Jesus is developed that cannot occur anywhere else. This is the realm of perception and understanding. It is were cognitive fellowship with God is realized, and the knowledge of God is developed.

This is precisely the point of our text. When the Spirit brings home to our hearts the indispensability of

However, when it comes to the culturing of the soul, building up the renewed spirit, and orientating the individual for glory, we are raised to the realm of faith. In that domain—where men believe “with the heart” (Rom 10:10)—a kinship with Jesus is developed that cannot occur anywhere else.

body and be unthankful (Lk 17:12-19) and unbelieving (Heb 3:19). God does not confirm the richness of the New Covenant in the flesh. To do such a thing contradicts the very nature of the New Covenant.

The Domain of Faith

This does not suggest that God does not work marvelous experiences in the bodies of His people. However, when it righteousness, and the means through which it is appropriated, He leads us to consider the faith, not the works, of Abraham. He will not leave us adrift on the sea of imagination, but anchor us in the safe haven of spiritual understanding. That is where Divine fellowship is realized, and where it grows and flourishes. It is where the indispensable knowledge of God is ministered, and acquaintance with the most High realized.

WHAT SHALL WE SAY . . . ”

^{4:1a} What then shall we say . . . ”

The Spirit will now reason with us concerning the preceding statements. Allow me to refresh your mind concerning those powerful affirmations.

1. The righteousness of God has been revealed “apart from the Law”(3:21).
2. Justification is given freely by grace and through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus (3:24).
3. God has publicly presented His Son as

- the Propitiation for sin (3:25a).
4. The Propitiation is appropriated through faith in His blood (3:25b).
5. The subject of proclamation is God’s own righteousness (3:26a).
6. God is declared to just, or righteous, in remitting sin and conferring His righteousness upon men (3:26b).
7. The remission of sins and the conferment of righteousness is to the person who has faith in Jesus (3:26c).
8. Faith makes no provision for boasting

- (3:27).
9. The individual is justified by faith without the deeds of the Law (3:28).
10. Faith does not make the Law void, but rather establishes it (3:31).

These are not mere points to be codified and memorized. They are pillars of sound spiritual thought and reasoning—pivotal utterances upon which sound conclusions are to be constructed. Thinking spiritually is much like building a solid edifice. It requires good materials and their proper correlation. Disjointed thought is always out of order in the heavenly kingdom.

GOING FURTHER

Spiritual life has a nature that is not commonly known. It has a forward posture that always finds the individual moving toward the Lord. It is never enough to simply acquiesce with, or assent to, the truth. We must become adept at drawing conclusions from it.

This is what I call “going further.” It is allowing the truth to dictate the WAY, from the Spirit into the flesh, and vice versa. But that is only an imagination.

If a person will martial their thoughts, casting down worldly considerations, the Spirit will cause the truth to be seen more clearly.

This is precisely what is taking place in our text. The Holy Spirit has elevated our thinking, bringing us into the heavenly realms. He has shown us the centrality of the Gospel, and glorious revelations it announces. He has established our need of a righteousness from God, and affirmed God is righteous and minds.

GOD DEMANDS A CONCLUSION

God demands that we come to a conclusion concerning His truth. “What shall we say?” He does not want us to remain in a state of indecision, something that is altogether too common in the church world. “What shall we say?” Is asking, “What is our response to these things?” “How does this truth impact upon our understanding? Our views? Our approach to righteousness?”

This phrase is mentioned seven times in the book of Romans (3:5; 4:1; 6:1; 7:7; 8:31; 9:14,30). It represents a Divine summons into the activity of meditation and contemplation. It is here that the real benefit of truth is realized. If truth only lies on the surface of our minds, never getting into our thoughts, it will not produce fruit within us. The blessings of righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit are wells springing up from within.

This rhetorical question—“What shall we say then?”—leaves the legalist behind. The person dominated by a law-mentality cannot probe into the truth, or draw water from the wells of salvation. Likewise, the person content to dwell on the surface of truth, satisfied with mere academic statements, is nonplused by the question. This is an interrogation that presumes interest—intense interest.

Here is a question that, to faith, has an obvious answer. Yet it must be expounded, for in it there are rich morsels to be had for the soul. Indeed, this is fertile soil for spiritual fruitage. As we are brought to ponder the appropriation of righteousness, we will be blessed.

True preaching does not leave bits and pieces of truth floating about in the mind. It does not simply add a few facts to an arsenal of information. The power of truth is unleashed in its affirmation. The realization of that power comes through contemplation and consequent understanding.

or manner, in which we think. Faith will move us to think in a godly way, bringing us to specific God-honoring conclusions. For some time, I have noted how swiftly men can forget the great declarations of Scripture. Some, after being exposed to the mind of God, can quickly degenerate into worldly thought. They leave the citadel of truth to slough about in the cesspool of things pertaining to life in the body. The truth does not seem to make much of an impression upon them. Such people imagine they can move quickly in meeting that need by grace through faith. But it is not enough simply to make that point. It must be fixed firmly in our thinking. True preaching does not leave bits and pieces of truth floating about in the mind. It does not simply add a few facts to an arsenal of information. The power of truth is unleashed in its affirmation. The realization of that power comes through contemplation and consequent understanding. Like a skillful Builder, the Spirit will now fasten the truth of justification by faith to our hearts

ABRAHAM OUR FATHER

^{4b} . . . that Abraham our father, pertaining to the flesh . . .” In Romans, this is the first of nine references of Abraham (4:3,9,12,13,16; 9:7; 11:1). It opens a line of reasoning that is foundational, and must be grasped by the human spirit. A word concerning Abraham will be helpful. He is a pivotal person in Scripture.

INTRODUCTION TO ABRAHAM

Abraham was first known as Abram, who was of the generations of Seth, whom Adam begat “in his own likeness, after his image” (Gen 5:3). This was a godly generation, as indicated by Eve’s statement concerning Seth. “For God has appointed another seed for me instead of Abel, whom Cain killed” (Gen 4:25). Adam was one hundred and thirty years old when Seth was born. With the birth of Seth’s first recorded son Enosh, “Then men began to call on the name of the LORD” (Gen 4:26). Within that generation, Terah lived seventy years and begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran. Haran died before his father Terah in his native land, Ur of the Chaldees. Nahor begat Lot, but Abram remained childless because Sarah was barren (Gen 11:26-29). The eleventh chapter of Genesis closes by saying, “And Terah took his son Abram and his grandson Lot, the son of Haran, and his daughter-in-law Sarai, his son Abram’s wife, and they went out with them from Ur of the Chaldeans to go to the land of Canaan; and they came to Haran and dwelt there. So the days of Terah were two hundred and five years, and Terah died in Haran”^{NKJV} (Gen 11:30-31).

God Calls Abram

At this point, God called Abram. The call was unparalleled. “Get out of your country, From your family And from your father’s house, To a land that I will show you. I will make you a great nation; I will bless you And make your name great; And you shall be a blessing. I will bless those who bless you, And I will curse him who curses you; And in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed”^{NKJV} (Gen 12:1-3).

Joshua later apprized the children of Israel that Terah had “served other gods” (Josh 24:2). We have no record of God revealing Himself to post-flood generations until Abram. Nevertheless, as soon as Abram was called, he “departed as the LORD had spoken to him, and Lot went with him.” He was seventy-five years old at the time (12:4). With dispatch he “took Sarai his wife and Lot his brother’s son, and all their possessions that they had gathered, and the people whom they had acquired in Haran, and they departed to go to the land of Canaan”^{NKJV} (12:5). Although it has become fashionable for ministers to criticize the patriarch for taking Lot and the people they had acquired, the Holy Spirit never does so.

God Appears to Abram

The first record of God “appearing” to anyone is found in Genesis 12:7. “Then the LORD appeared to Abram and said, ‘To your descendants I will give this land.’ And there he built an altar to the LORD, who had appeared to him.”^{NKJV} This was the first of at least four Divine appearances to Abraham (Gen 12:7; 17:1; 18:1). In each of these, God made certain commitments to Abraham. They were all of an epochal nature.

1. In the first appearance God said, “Unto thy seed will I give this land” (12:7).
2. The second appearance came in the form of a vision. At this time, the Lord said to Abram, “Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward.” At that time the Lord revealed Abram’s seed would be as multitudinous as stars of the heavens. This is the occasion when Abram “believed in the LORD; and He counted it to him for righteousness.” God also ratified His covenant with Abram over a sacrifice. He also unveiled the future to the patriarch. “Know certainly that your descendants will be strangers in a land that is not theirs, and will serve them, and they will afflict them four hundred years. And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions. Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete”^{NKJV} (Gen 15:1-16).

The first record of God “appearing” to anyone is found in Genesis 12:7. “Then the LORD appeared to Abram and said, ‘To your descendants I will give this land.’ And there he built an altar to the LORD, who had appeared to him.”NKJV This was the first of at least four Divine appearances to Abraham

3. “And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly. . . behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations”^{NKJV} (17:2-4). During this third appearance, Abram’s name was changed to “Abraham.” “Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God.”^{NKJV} The covenant of circumcision was also established with Abraham at this time. Sarai’s name also changed to Sarah. “And I will bless her and also give you a son by her; then I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of peoples shall be from her”^{NKJV} (17:1-16). This occurred twenty-five years after the Lord’s first appearance to Abraham. Then he was seventy-five, now he was one hundred years old (17:17).

4. The fourth appearance took place in the plains of Mamre. At this time it was confirmed that Sarah would bear a son. God also divulged to Abraham the appointed destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah (18:1-33).

The Defeat of Chedorlaomer

On one occasion, when Chedorlaomer and a confederacy of kings soundly defeated the surrounding nations, he took “all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their provisions, and went their way. They also took Lot, Abram’s brother’s son who dwelt in Sodom, and his goods, and departed.” When word of this reached Abraham, “he armed his three hundred and eighteen trained servants who were born in his own house, and went in pursuit as far as Dan. He divided his forces against them by night, and he and his servants attacked them and pursued them as far as Hobah, which is north of Damascus. So he brought back all the goods, and also brought back his brother Lot and his goods, as well as the women and the people” (Gen 14:14-16). When he returned from that battle, he was blessed by Melchizedech, one of the great types of our Lord Jesus Christ (Gen 14:18-20; Heb 7:1-10).

Apart from this occasion, Abraham's association with God is his only distinction.

The First Man Called a Prophet

Abraham is the first person in Scripture who is called "a prophet" (Gen 20:7). We know from Scripture that Enoch, who lived considerably before Abraham, "prophesied" (Jude 14). However, the Word first refers to Abraham as a prophet. I gather this is because of his close association with the coming Messiah.

The First Said to Believe

The word "believe," from the Hebrew word אמין/אמיא/h,w (a-man) is first mentioned in relation to Abraham. "And he believed in the LORD; and He counted it to him for righteousness" (Gen 15:6). In fact, in all of the book of Genesis, this word is used only three times. It is first used in Genesis 15:6 in reference to Abraham. It is also used in Genesis 42:20 in the account of Joseph dealing with his brother. There, the word is translated "verified." "But bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die." This presents an aspect of believing, or having faith, that is also confirmed in Hebrews 11:1: namely that of persuasion or verification. The last use of this word in the book of Genesis refers to Jacob, when his sons gave him the report that Joseph was alive. "And told him, saying, Joseph is yet alive, and he is governor over all the land of Egypt. And Jacob's heart fainted, for he believed them not" (Gen 45:26). Apart from these references "believing," in any of its varied forms, does not occur in the book of Genesis. This is true in every major translation of Scripture.

Genesis is the book of beginnings. While men of faith are said to have existed before Abraham (Abel–Heb 11:4, Enoch–Heb 11:5, and Noah–Heb 11:7), believing God is first related to Abraham.

So far as Scripture is concerned, Abraham is the very first person said to have "believed in the Lord."

WHY MENTION THESE THINGS?

Why take the time to introduce Abraham? There is a good reason for doing so. If you are familiar with the record of this patriarch, you are aware he is not known for exploits like David and Samson. He built no temple like Solomon, nor did he have an extensive kingdom like him. The things that distinguished Abraham are of no value when viewed according to the flesh.

This man is distinguished by Divine hold of justification.

OUR FATHER

"Abraham our father, as pertaining to the flesh . . ." Other versions read "Abraham, our forefather,"^{RSV,NASB,NIV} and "Abraham our ancestor."^{NRSV} The phrase "pertaining to," or "according to" "the flesh" has two possible meanings. First, it can mean from his personal viewpoint. It would be like saying, "What was Abraham's personal experience?" Second, "pertaining to the flesh" can refer to the word "father." In my judgment, this is the preferred meaning, as brought out by the other translations: "our forefather according to the flesh," and "our ancestor according to the flesh."

Genesis is the book of beginnings. While men of faith are said to have existed before Abraham (Abel–Heb 11:4, Enoch–Heb 11:5, and Noah–Heb 11:7), believing God is first related to Abraham. So far as Scripture is concerned, Abraham is the very first person said to have "believed in the Lord."

Primarily, this accents Abraham being the father of the Jewish nation, which sprang from him. God promised, "And I will make of thee a great nation" (Gen 12:2). And again, "And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth" (Gen 13:16). Once the Lord said, "Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation" (Gen 18:18). Zachariah recognized Abraham as the father of the Jewish nation (Lk 1:73), as well as Stephen (Acts 7:2), and the Lord Jesus Himself (John 8:56).

Not Limited to Israel

The fatherhood of Abraham is not limited to Israel. He is also a father to those "who also walk in the steps of the faith which our father Abraham," as stated in Romans 4:12. Verse sixteen of this chapter sums up the matter by saying Abraham "is the father of us all" – i.e., those who believe in Jesus.

In Christ Jesus, we become Abraham's "seed," or offspring, and are thus qualified to receive the promises made to him. This is expressly stated in Galatians 3:29. "And if you are Christ's, then you are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." This is an especially pungent thought. Verse sixteen of the third chapter of Galatians sets the stage for this statement. "Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He does not say, 'And to seeds,' as appearances and believing God. Aside from his defeat of Chedorlaomer and the five kings with him, we are at a loss to show anything great in the eyes of men accomplished by Abraham. His record is carefully set before us in such a manner as to leave us thinking about his faith. His background is not notable like of Moses. His childhood is not distinguished like that of king Josiah.

That is, indeed, the point of this text! Before God, faith distinguishes men, not works! Without faith, it is impossible to please God (Heb 11:6). This section of Romans will establish the superiority and indispensability of faith in the matter of salvation. There will be no justification without faith. It has a value of its own, and towers over all other benefits. Faith is the heart of spiritual life. It alone can take of many, but as of one, 'And to your Seed,' who is Christ.^{ⁿᵏᵏᵛ} After establishing the singularity of Abraham's "Seed," affirming it to be Christ, the Spirit declares that those in Christ are "Abraham's seed." They are, in fact, joint heirs with Christ (Rom 8:17).

It was in this sense that Jesus was identified with humanity. Rising into heavenly places, the Holy Spirit speaks of the incarnation of Christ in this manner. "For verily He took not on Him the nature of angels; but He took on Him the seed of Abraham" (Heb 2:16). The NKJV, and other contemporary versions, read, "For indeed He does not give aid to angels, but He does give aid to the seed of Abraham." Here Christ's birth is viewed from the standpoint of its effects. The benefits of His life, death, and intercession, are passed on to all who believe. That is a pivotal point of Scripture. Those believers are "the seed of Abraham." Others times, Christ's entrance into the world is declared in view of its purpose: "to save sinners" (1 Tim 1:15), or "to take away the sins of the world" (John 1:29).

There Is A Higher Genealogy

There is a higher form of human genealogy—i.e., "pertaining to the flesh." There is a pedigree that can be traced back to Abraham, making him our father.

To put it another way, there is a faith experienced today that is precisely like that found in Abraham. Thus, it is said of Abraham, "that he might be the father of all those who believe, though they are uncircumcised, that righteousness might be imputed to them also" (Rom 4:11). Whether Jew or Gentile, therefore, Abraham, is the father of those who believe on Christ Jesus. The type of faith that justifies is first seen in Abraham.

Faith is personal, but it is not unique to the individual. True faith is common among those possessing it, having the

When, therefore, we marvel at the faith of Abraham, let us not forget that this is the same faith we have in Christ Jesus. Abraham's faith was not extraordinary, leaving your faith to be ordinary. Faith itself is extraordinary, and all who possess it are extraordinarily blessed by God. In Scripture, believing is never considered ordinary. It is always blessed of God, and those who believe are declared to be accepted by God.

In declaring justification by faith, therefore, the Holy Spirit takes us back to Abraham. In Abraham, the kind of faith

In Christ Jesus, we become Abraham's "seed," or offspring, and are thus qualified to receive the promises made to him. This is expressly stated in Galatians 3:29. "And if you are Christ's, then you are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." This is an especially pungent thought.

same essential qualities. Paul referred to it as a "common faith," or "the faith we share"^{ⁿᵏᵏᵛ} (Tit 1:4). Peter called it "like precious faith," or "a faith of equal standing with ours"^{ⁿᵏᵏᵛ} (2 Pet 1:1). It is, in a very real sense, "the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all" (Rom 4:16).

that saves is first seen. The Spirit will show us that faith has connected us with Abraham, and with the promises made to him. It has made you unique, just as surely as it did Abraham. Faith always elevates the one possessing it, bring the blessing and commendation of God.

THE CONCEPT OF FINDING

"^{1c} "What shall we say then that Abraham our father . . . has found . . ." Other versions read, "What then shall we say that Abraham, our forefather, discovered in this matter?"^{ⁿᵏᵏᵛ} "What then are we to say was gained by Abraham . . ." ^{ⁿᵏᵏᵛ} "What were his experiences concerning this question of being saved by faith?" ^{ⁿᵏᵏᵛ} The word "found" is translated from the Greek word εὑρηκέναι. The word means to find after a deliberate search. It also is used to denote coming upon something for which a search was not made. The meaning here is "to experience for oneself, or obtain."^{Robertson} It is not an intellectual word, but a heart-word, speaking of taking hold of something, as compared with simply coming to know about it. The question can be stated this way. "What was Abraham's experience in this matter of justification?" Or, "What was realized by Abraham?" Or, "What did Abraham come to appropriate?" Stated yet another way, our text means "As a man, what advantage has Abraham obtained?" we will find it was not in any exploits he performed, or in any fleshly distinction. His advantage will be seen in what he found by believing.

REALITY THAT ALREADY EXISTS

Scriptural finding assumes the existence of the reality BEFORE it is actually found. This is particularly relevant in the consideration of appropriating the righteousness of God, or being justified. Righteousness, in this case, is not a condition that is developed, but one that is found. "Finding," in this case, equates to receiving, or appropriating from God.

Jesus portrayed the Kingdom of God, which is necessarily wed to God's righteousness (Matt 6:33), as something to be "found." It is like a treasure hidden by God within in a field, waiting to be "found" (Matt 13:44). It is also like a superior pearl of great price, to be "found" by the earnest inquirer (Matt 15:45-46). Everything we need for justification is already in place. It only needs to be received by faith. Further, faith, or believing in the Lord, always moves the individual to obey. Faith is never disobedient! Faith itself never draws back or withholds from God. Disobedience is always the offspring of unbelief.

A KEEN INTEREST

“Finding” also assumes a keen interest on the part of the finder. Once the heart is persuaded of the reality in question, it will engage in a fervent quest to obtain it. It is the peculiar prerogative of faith to compel earnest seeking on the part of the one possessing it. For this reason, an unqualified promise is given to all who seek. “Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened” (Matt 7:7-8). How the hungry soul needs that blessed promise!

It is axiomatic, or goes without saying, that once the heart is convinced of the promises of God, the individual will enter into a zealous effort to obtain them.

All reluctance to obey the Lord comes from a failure to believe Him.

This is precisely why Abraham “found” the blessing of the Lord. Once the Lord had revealed Himself to Abraham, the patriarch is noted for his involvement with and obedience to the Lord. Everything else about him is incidental to that fact. Remove the consideration of God and His righteousness and Abraham loses all distinction among men.

IF ABRAHAM WAS JUSTIFIED BY WORKS

“2 For if Abraham was justified by works, he has something to boast about, but not before God.” At this point we enter into a most controversial text of Scripture. The controversy, however, is not driven by the text itself, but by the traditions of men with which it conflicts. It is never wrong to say things precisely as God says them. Equally true, it is never right to adopt a theological position that does not allow the individual to accept God’s word as it stands. Men may say there is a requirement to blend the various texts of Scripture on a given subject. And, indeed, there are some matters in which this is true, such as morality and human response. But when it comes to the foundation upon which faith is built, there is no blending, or combining of thoughts.

There is a vast difference between developing the implications of the foundation, as James did, and the laying of the foundation itself. In our text, the foundation is being placed before us—the BASIS upon which Divine acceptance is realized. The implications of being upon that foundation will be expounded in chapters six, seven, and eight.

If one imagines there is a conflict between James and Paul, that imagination will be dissipated in those chapters. Paul affirms the necessity of obedience with a power that makes James’ reasoning sound almost elementary. This by no means denigrates James, who wrote as he was moved by the Holy Spirit. But James’ purpose was different. He was correcting hypocrites, showing how pointless their profession was. Paul is confirming the saints, unveiling the role and power of their faith.

Lest we miss the point, there does appear to be a conflict between James and Paul, even though such does not really exist. James says, “Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?” (James 2:21). Our text is going to dogmatically affirm that is NOT the case. James does not question that Abraham’s justification took place before the offering of Isaac. He refers to precisely the same passage as our text. “Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness” (James 2:23). His point is that faith compelled Abraham to obey, regardless of the largeness of the demand. The obedience of the patriarch confirmed his faith. Where obedience is not rendered faith is not real, but is feigned. “Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone . . . But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead? . . . For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also” (James 2:17,20,26). Faith without works is no more “faith” than a dead body is a person.

JUSTIFIED BY WORKS?

By saying “If Abraham was justified by works,” the Spirit is not suggesting the possibility of such a thing. In fact, He will overthrow such a notion by Divine affirmation and strong arguments.

“Works,” in this case, are not the response of faith. They are not the “good works” for which we have been created in Christ Jesus (Eph 2:10). Strictly speaking, they are not the “good works” for which faith makes us “zealous” (Tit 2:14), but those that are independent of faith.

These are “works” that precede Divine acceptance, or experiencing the conferment of righteousness. They are “works” that are thought to be the means of becoming righteous.

These are “works” proceeding from “the flesh,” whether moral or ceremonial (like those commanded under the Law). They are “works” resulting from a fleshly pedigree, human discipline, or any result of purely human ingenuity. They are “works” wrought without God, apart from Divine influence, and in the energy of the Adamic nature. They are the kind of “works” beheld in the remarkable achievements of Nebuchadnezzar. Remember his words? “Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty?” (Dan 4:33).

But the “works” of reference are not limited to tangible projects like cities and buildings. They also include wisdom, scholarship, and keen philosophy and reasoning. As it is written, “Where is the wise man? Where is the scholar? Where is the philosopher of this age? Has not God made foolish the wisdom of the world? For since in the wisdom of God the world through its wisdom did not know him, God was pleased through the foolishness of what was preached to save those who believe”^{NIV} (1 Cor 1:20-21).

There is no room before the Lord for any work or achievement of men that was wrought independently of Him. Rather, as Jesus said, “But whoever lives by the truth comes into the light, so that it may be seen plainly that what he has done has been done through God”^{NIV} (John 3:21). Such works will never be the basis for human boasting. That is precisely why our Lord said those who do them “come into the light,” acknowledging it is God who “works in us both to will and to do of His own good pleasure” (Phil 2:13).

A Reason for Self Confidence?

No man has reason for confidence in himself. However, let us suppose that Abraham was, in the sense of our text, “justified by works.” Which ones would be included? What is said of Abraham BEFORE God appeared unto him? What works had he accomplished, and what confidence could he have in such?

The Scriptural record is given in order to establish our faith and reveal to us the mind of the Lord. What does this record have to say about Abraham

BEFORE God confronted him?

1. Terah, who “served other gods,” was his father (Gen 11:26).
2. Nahor and Haran were his brothers, and Lot his nephew (Gen 11:27).
3. He took Sarai as his wife, who was barren (Gen 11:29-30).
4. He left Ur of the Chaldees with his father, his wife, and Lot, to go to the land of Canaan. God’s call to him came after this departure (Gen 12:1-4). Some have concluded it came before this, due to the wording of Genesis 12:1: i.e., “Now the Lord HAD said . . .” However, nothing in the text suggests this call came prior to him leaving Ur of the Chaldees with his father.

This is the sum total of our knowledge of Abraham prior to his call from God. It is evident there is nothing there in which Abraham could boast. God has revealed the life of this patriarch to make this abundantly evident to us.

The Lord will not allow us to think in this way—not even in a theoretical manner. “NOT before God!” If boasting is legitimate, it must be allowed before God. If it is not allowed before God, it cannot be lawful, for God always allows what is right before Him.

If Abraham was justified by works, he would have a basis for making a boast: “he has something to boast about.”^{NKJV} The truth of the matter, however, is that there is not a record of a single work done by Abraham before he was justified—not a single one! We know more about the life of obscure Cornelius before he was justified than we do of Abraham’s (Acts 10:1-2). Yet, Cornelius is not the father of us all, nor is his justification set before us as the supreme example. He is not our father, in any sense. Our father, according to the faith, is Abraham, and he is the revealed pattern of justification.

BUT NOT BEFORE GOD

The Holy Spirit is dogmatic on this point. Though glorying in ones own achievement may appear legitimate from every earthly vantage point, it is not allowed before God. The Lord will not allow us to think in this way—not even in a theoretical manner. “NOT before God!” If boasting is legitimate, it must be allowed before God. If it is not allowed before God, it cannot be lawful, for God always allows what is right before Him.

The Divine nature will not allow fallen beings to boast in His presence. Salvation, or being justified, is so ordered by the Lord as to exclude boasting. As it is written, “But God has chosen the foolish things of the world to put to shame the wise, and God has chosen the weak things of the world to put to shame the things which are mighty; and the base things of the world and the things which are despised God has chosen, and the things which are not, to bring to nothing the things that are, that no flesh should glory in His presence”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 1:27-30). It is not that such boasting is not advisable, but that it is impossible!

Legitimate boasting, or glorying, can only be “in the Lord.” We are saved in such a way as to shut us up to that alternative. “But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption: That, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord” (1 Cor 1:30-31). God will not allow men to glory in anything or anyone but Himself.

A religion that permits men to glory in their own works, whether it be an individual or a movement, is not from God. Neither, indeed, is a purported gospel from God if it leaves those embracing in it glorying in men or having confidence in the flesh.

A SUMMATION OF THE VERSE

With the foregoing comments in mind, this verse affirms that justification is NOT by works. The question posed does not suggest Abraham could have been justified by works—not even in the eyes of men. The answer, “But not before God,” applies to the whole of the sentence. Not just the part referring to glorying. The idea is that before God Abraham was NOT justified by works, and thus could being able to trace their religion to patriarchs of the past. John the Baptist said to Pharisees and Sadducees, “And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham” (Matt 3:9). Hear the Jews say to Jesus, “We be Abraham’s seed, and were never in

If God will not allow men to boast in tracing themselves back to Abraham, who was His “friend,” what will He say to those who glory in a Luther, Calvin, Wesley, Campbell, or even some lesser luminary? If it was vain and contemptible to boast in being a Jew, how much more is it abhorrent to glory in being a Reformationist, Restorationist, Adventist, or some other movement? We do not deny that many good things were given to the sons of men through these men and movements. However, they are not ground for boasting. It is what “the Lord hath wrought” that is the only ground for glorying (Isa 26:12). That is not simply a tenet of the faith. It is a truth that must be received and confessed by the people of God.

With the foregoing comments in mind, this verse affirms that justification is NOT by works. The question posed does not suggest Abraham could have been justified by works—not even in the eyes of men. The answer, “But not before God,” applies to the whole of the sentence. Not just the part referring to glorying. The idea is that before God Abraham was NOT justified by works, and thus could not glory before God in such.

not glory before God in such.

If there is a single trait of corrupt religion that is particularly reprehensible, it is its lack of glorying in the Lord. The Jews of old were not the last ones to glory in their heritage, and make a boast in bondage to any man” (John 8:33). Indeed, they were technically correct. As Jesus replied to them, “I know that ye are Abraham’s seed; but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you” (John 8:37). They had external credentials, but no inward ones.

The apprehension of this reality is what causes praise to issue forth from the saints of God. As it is written, “Therefore by Him let us continually offer the sacrifice of praise to God, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to His name” (Heb 13:15). There is no theological position that can produce such a sacrifice of praise.

WHAT DOES THE SCRIPTURE SAY?

“3 For what does the Scripture say? Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness.” In order to buttress his argument, the Apostle to the Gentiles appeals to the Scripture. He has reasoned with us, but will not leave us with reasoning alone. Sound reasoning must begin and end with Divine affirmation. Holy men of God through whom God gave us His Word (2 Pet 1:21) never fastened their thoughts with human illustrations, oratory, or other forms of human wisdom. They fastened their teaching with the nail of Scripture—a “thus saith the Lord.”

For many, the acid test of truth is whether or not it harmonizes with a preconceived theological position. For others, the touchstone is what they have been taught from their youth. For others, the measure is the fleshly ability of the speaker. However, there is no substitute for the Word of God.

When Israel was faced with the impressive words of spiritual mediums who claimed supernatural powers, they were told to resort to the Word. “And when they say to you, ‘Seek those who are mediums and wizards, who whisper and mutter,’ should not a people seek their God? Should they seek the dead on behalf of the living? To the law and to the testimony! If they do not speak according to this word, it is because there is no light in them” (Isa 8:19-20). This word is still true! If the message we hear, regardless of the speaker, is not “according to this Word,” it is because the speaker is in darkness.

You will find a remarkable consistency in this matter. David, the Prophets, John the Baptist, the Lord Jesus, the Apostles, and other Scriptural writers, ALWAYS spoke in harmony with the Scriptures. They cared nothing for being at variance with the traditions of men, but they consistently honored the Word of God. Thus our text asks, “For what does the Scripture say?”

SCRIPTURE SPEAKS

Because the Word of God is living and powerful, Scripture is said to “speak.” There are some who seek to distinguish between Scripture and the Word of God. Such positions reveal a level of ignorance that is altogether unacceptable.

The Word of God and Scripture

During the days of king Josiah, they discovered “the book of the law in the house of the Lord.” After due consideration of this wonderful discovery, the king commanded certain men to inquire of the Lord concerning the matter. In his decree he said, “because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book” (2 Chron 34:21). The Word and the book are thus equated.

Jesus also equated Scripture with the Word of God. “If He called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken” (John 10:35).

It should not be necessary to further establish this fact. We are called to consider the Scripture—what is written. Scripture “speaks” to us because it is vitalized by the Holy Spirit. Thus we read, “So the Scripture was fulfilled which says . . . And again another Scripture says . . . For the Scripture says to Pharaoh . . . For the Scripture says . . . Or do you not know what the Scripture says . . . Nevertheless what does the Scripture say? . . . For the Scripture says . . . Or do you think that the Scripture says in vain” (Mk 15:28; John 19:24,37; Rom 9:17; 10:11; 11:2; Gal 4:30; 1 Tim 5:18; James 4:5).

The point in all of these, and similar, texts is that the authority was in the Scripture itself. What was written carried all of the power of an utterance from heaven. Sixty-seven times, the New Testament Scriptures say “It is written” (Matt 2:5; 4:4,7,10; 11:10; 21:13; 26:24,31; Mk 1:2; 7:6; 9:13; 14:21,27; Lk 2:23; 3:4; 4:4,8; Lk 7:27; 10:26; 10:26; 19:46; 20:17; 22:37; 24:46; 6:31,45; 12:14; 15:25; Acts 1:20; 7:42; 15:15; 23:5; Rom 1:17; 2:24; 3:4,10; 4:17; 8:36; 9:13,33; 10:15; 11:8,26; 12:19; 14:11; 15:3,9,21; 1 Cor 1:19,31; 2:9; 3:19; 4:6; 9:9,10; 10:7; 14:21; 15:45,54; 2 Cor 4:13; ; 8:15; 9:9; Gal 3:10,13; 4:22; Heb 10:7; 1 Pet 1:16).

What is “written” is not open to question. It has sufficient power to repel the advances of Satan and thoroughly equip the saints. The “Scriptures” are the Divine repository by which the validation of every message purporting to be from God is to be tested. Those who test sayings by Scripture are acknowledged by heaven as being noble in that endeavor. As it is written of the Bereans, “These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so” (Acts 17:11).

The Scripture Must Have Integrity

All of this assumes the absolute integrity of the Scriptures. If they are not reliable, we are cast upon the sea of human opinion with neither sail nor oar.

All of this may seem very apparent—at least to faith. Thus some might consider it useless to make such a point. We are, however, living in a time when the integrity of Scripture is being questioned by those who claim identity portions, of Scripture, based upon human analysis. An inordinate value was placed upon original manuscripts, and men felt free to sit in judgment on what was written.

However innocent all of this may appear, it has resulted in a near disdain for the Word of God in many circles. With alarming confidence, any portion of Scripture that clashes with preconceived notions can be dismissed. Plausible explanations are offered, ranging from language considerations, to social customs with Christ Jesus.

In the middle of the eighteenth century, a movement began referred to as “the enlightenment,” or ‘the age of reason.’ It was a reaction against the powerful effects of the Reformation movement, which had exalted Divine reasoning above that of men. This movement was “committed to secular views based on reason or human understanding only, which they hoped would provide a basis for beneficial changes affecting every area of life and thought.”^{Grolliers Encyclopedia} It was not a godly movement, and “emphasized the right to self-expression and human fulfillment, the right to think freely and express one’s views publicly without censorship or fear of repression.”^{Grolliers}

The approach to Scripture was greatly impacted by this misnamed “age of reason.” Higher criticism was introduced during this time. This was an approach to Scripture that allowed men to accept or reject statements, and even and variant manuscript readings.

However you choose to approach the Scripture, it must leave you free to accept its statements without question or modification. If this is not done, the words “The Scripture says,” or the question, “what does the Scripture say?” carry no weight. To me, it is inconceivable that the massive and complex universe in which we reside could be maintained by the Word of Christ’s power (Heb 1:3), yet His Word has become distorted and untrustworthy. It is utterly foolish to imagine we can acknowledge we live in a world that is strictly maintained by Christ, yet cannot rely unquestionably upon His Word, by which we live.

When, therefore, we read “For what does the Scripture say?” let us prepare to accept it without question. Refuse to allow doubt to enter your thinking. Let us determine to shape out thinking by its affirmations. If we will believe it, Scripture will confirm the truth to us. Then we will gain confidence before God.

ABRAHAM BELIEVED GOD

Here is a most arresting statement. The “Scripture” says this in Genesis 15:6. This was the second time the Lord appeared to Abraham. On this occasion, “the word of the LORD came to Abram in a vision.” This occurred approximately twenty-five years after the Lord’s initial appearance to the patriarch (Gen 12). In the vision extensive revelation was given to Abraham—revelation that far exceeded the things made known in the Lord’s first appearance. In the beginning the Lord said, “I will make you a great nation; I will bless you And make your name great; And you shall be a blessing. I will bless those who bless you, And I will curse him who curses you; And in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed”(Gen 12:2-3). Now, twenty-five years later, much more is made known.

1. Abraham was told not to fear (Gen 15:1a)
2. God was Abraham’s “Shield” (15:1a).
3. God was Abraham’s “exceeding great Reward”(15:1b).
4. Abraham’s heir would come from his own body (15:4).
5. God would make his descendants as numerous as the stars of the heavens (15:5).
6. God revealed Abraham’s descendants would be in a strange land as servants for four hundred years (15:13).
7. God would judge the nation served by Abraham’s progeny (15:14a).
8. He revealed Abraham’s seed would come out of the foreign land “with great possessions”(15:14b).
9. Abraham would live long and be buried in a “good old age”(15:15).
10. In the fourth generation, Abraham’s descendants would return to Canaan (15:16a).
11. The Amorites, then in Canaan, would not yet be judged, because their “iniquity” was “not yet complete” (15:16b).
12. God made a covenant with Abraham, to give the land of Canaan to his descendants (15:18a).
13. The borders of the promised land were specified (15:18b).
14. Ten nations would be dispossessed of the promised land (15:19-21).

This was a remarkable revelation in both nature and extent. What would Abraham’s response be? At very beginning of the vision, Abraham confessed he remained childless, and had been given no heir. This appeared to contradict the promise. He had even asked God to let the steward of his household, Eliezer, be appointed as his heir (15:2-3).

God said this would not be the case. Abraham would have offspring—not one or a few, but a multitude that could not be numbered. The circumstance of the patriarch conflicted with this promise. Every facet of human wisdom rejected the possibility of such a thing. The whole course of nature could allow no such fulfillment.

What will Abraham do? Will he ask further questions? Will he shrink back in unbelief? Will he appeal to statistics and the laws of probability? Will he continue to bring up his childless condition, the barrenness of his wife, and even his older age? Will he think like the churchmen of our day?

Ponder for a moment the age in which Abraham lived. He did not have a Bible. He possessed no Scripture replete with faith-building examples, or Divine promises to nourish the soul. There were no kindred prophets who could substantiate the Word of the Lord. There were not a multiplicity of counselors on whom, he could rely. There is not a shred of human knowledge, wisdom, or example that can strengthen the promise of the Lord. The commitment of God went beyond the perimeter of human understanding, and higher than the range of man’s powers of reason.

Now comes the edifying proclamation. “And he believed in the LORD!” Faith was equal to the occasion. It could take hold of a word wholly unsupported by anything in this world or the natural man. The promise was too big for reason, but not for faith. It would have crushed emotion, yet caused faith to rise in a man to whom little had been revealed before.

Abraham did not require an orientation course. He did not have to learn to believe, or be tutored in trusting. “He believed in the Lord.” He reckoned on the Lord’s ability, not his own.

The Circumstances

A promise of this magnitude had never been given before. There were no prior works of God that could confirm the probability of nations coming from an old man with a barren wife. Prior to this, a righteous man had been murdered by a child of the devil. An entire world had been cursed, with only eight souls surviving. A global effort to build a tower that reached into heaven had been dashed to the ground in Divine judgment. A holy nation did not exist. An inspired book had not been written. There was no record of signs and wonders. Idolatry was prevalent—even in his own family.

In spite of all of this, Abraham “Believed in the Lord!” His faith reached up, and anchored itself in the God of heaven. God said it, Abraham believed it.

THE RELATION OF PROMISE TO FAITH

There is no record of anyone believing God until a promise was given. Our text refers to the very first record of such believing. Abraham did not decide what he wanted to do, then believe God for the fulfillment of it. There is altogether too much of this kind of thinking today. While it is true, “All things are possible him that believeth” (Mark 9:23), believing is never more possible than when God delivers a promise.

of lions” (Heb 11:33).

It is by means of God’s “exceeding great and precious promises” that we become “partakers of the Divine nature” (2 Pet 1:4). That very text is preceded by

The people of God need to hear the promises of God. It is essential that faith be nourished by Divine commitments! It is not enough to command people to believe, they must be given a promise to believe—a word from the Lord of glory! It is no wonder that faith is so sparse in our day. It is a time when the people of God are being served intellectual trivia, current events, and religious novelties.

Is it not written, “That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises” (Heb 6:12). And again, “By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son” (Heb 11:17). And again, “Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths a reminder that we have “obtained like precious faith” (2 Pet 1:1). That faith feeds upon the promises of God, just as surely as Abraham did.

wonder that faith is so sparse in our day. It is a time when the people of God are being served intellectual trivia, current events, and religious novelties. Faith shrivels in an environment like that! Trust cannot be nourished by demands, and “unfeigned faith” cannot rise under the sound of law.

HOW ABOUT YOU?

It is one thing to read about Abraham, it is quite another to become identified with him—to be his “seed.” Do you “believe God,” or “believe in God?” God has made certain commitments that pertain to you. You can respond to them in a way that fulfills the word of Jesus. “If ye were Abraham’s children, ye would do the works of Abraham” (John 8:39).

If you sense a beginning of faith in your soul, yet lack confidence, thinking you are unequal to the demands of faith, be encouraged to present your case to the Lord. “Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief” (Mark 9:24). Take Abraham as your example. He believed God and was blessed. You will be also. God always honors faith.

FAITH COUNTED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS

“³ For what does the Scripture say? ‘Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness.’” Other versions read, “Abraham believed God, and it was credited to him as righteousness,”^{NIV} “AND ABRAHAM BELIEVED GOD, AND IT WAS RECKONED TO HIM AS RIGHTEOUSNESS,”^{NASB} “And Abraham had faith in God, and it was put to his account as righteousness,”^{BBE} “Abraham believed God, so God declared him to be righteous.”^{NLT}

The word “accounted,” or credited, is a word of exchange. Literally, it means “to take an inventory, and give an estimate,” to “conclude,” “esteem,” or “impute.”^{Strong’s} It has the idea of sharing or crediting someone’s account, and to give an official evaluation of the thing reviewed. To “account to” or “credit” someone, is to take something belonging to another, and give it to one who has none of that commodity himself.

THE WEIGHT OF THE CONSIDERATION

This Text must not be viewed as a mere historical event, or as the statement of an official theological position. We have already been told that the Gospel announces a righteousness from God that is realized by faith (Rom 1:16-17). What is more, this righteousness is needed. In fact, no person can be received by God without possessing it.

To accentuate the human dilemma, the Gospel affirms “the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men” (Rom 1:18). This cannot be averted. It will happen! The only hope is to be moved out of the category of “unrighteous,” for it is not possible for the unrighteous to inherit the kingdom of God (1 Cor 6:9). These are circumstances that are cast in stone, so to speak, and cannot be changed. They involve the very character of God, who “cannot deny Himself” (2 Tim 2:13).

To further complicate the matter, lest any person imagine they have managed to achieve righteousness, it is written, “There is none righteous, no, not one: There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one” (Rom 3:10-12). This is man in his natural state, with nothing more than resources obtained from Adam. It is man in the unregenerated state—under the “power of darkness” from which he must be “delivered.” This is the person who has not been “translated” into the kingdom of God’s “dear Son” (Col 1:13). It is the one who has not been “washed,” “sanctified,” or “justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God” (1 Cor 6:10).

Within this category of people there is not one righteous person! All such people are “strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world” (Eph 2:12).

Given this context, the sensitive of heart become keenly interested when they hear about Abraham being reckoned righteous! Such a person knows righteousness is imperative, and that they are not capable of producing a righteousness of their own. To hear about a righteousness that is given is, therefore, a glad sound. Further, to hear that it is the very righteousness of God causes the heart to leap with joy.

NOT A MERE FORMALITY

The righteousness of reference is not ceremonial, or a mere formality. God did not simply CALL Abraham righteous, while he remained in an unrighteous condition. Although there are people who view righteousness in this manner, it is the height of absurdity to do so. God does not accept people by pretending they are righteous. His character will not allow such a thing. The righteousness reckoned to Abraham was real, and stood the test of Divine scrutiny. Even when the most exacting commands were given to Abraham, he obeyed without hesitation. His obedience was the result of having righteousness credited him.

WHAT IS THE “IT”?

What is the “it” that is mentioned? “Abraham believed God, and IT was counted unto him for righteousness.” The next verse will clarify that “it” is the faith Abraham possessed—the fact that he “believed God.” Thus we read, “his faith is accounted for righteousness” (4:5).

Herein is a marvelous thing! God regards faith as righteousness itself. Believing God outweighs all of our sins, and removes all of our guilt and uncleanness. That is why it is written, “and by Him everyone who believes is justified from all things from which you could not be justified by the law of Moses” (Acts 13:39). That is another way of saying “accounted righteous,” for being justified is the same as being made righteous.

Because this truth is expounded extensively in the next few verses, it will suffice to just touch upon it here. Reliance upon, or trust in, the Lord compensates to Abraham as righteousness.

God took inventory, so to speak, of Abraham. He evaluated him, scrutinizing his person with His omniscient eye. When He saw faith in Abraham, and took note that the patriarch believed Him, he wrote “righteous” upon Abraham’s person. That is what our text says, and that is what it means.

The dominating thing that Abraham did was believe God. That is what changed his status, and made him acceptable to God. The fact that he did not for the alienating consequences of sin. This is because faith is actually a greater accomplishment than all of the exploits of men. To believe God is not natural! To trust Him requires resources men do not have by nature. While men can intellectually assent to the fact of God, and conclude from His creation that He exists and is powerful, that is not sufficient to save the soul. If it is “the work of God that you believe in Him whom he sent” (John 6:29), believing cannot be a mere exercise of the intellect.

The Scriptures declare the grace of our Lord is “exceedingly abundant, with faith and love which are in Christ Jesus” (1 Tim 1:14). While believing God involves the human will, it involves more than the human will. Those who believe are said to have “believed through grace” (Acts 18:27). Faith is “obtained” (2 Pet 1:1), and it is “given” to us to believe (Phil 1:29). To be sure, whatever God gives must be received and acted upon. But it was faith itself—believing God—that was accounted stagger at God’s promise, and obeyed God’s commands, confirmed that he was, in fact, righteous. His faith had made him so, and his works proved that was true.

A FINAL WORD

One final word on this passage. The text of reference (Gen 15:6) is also mentioned in Galatians 3:6 and James 2:23. The fourth chapter of Romans reasons extensively on this passage, confirming its centrality in understanding the salvation of God. This is not a tangential doctrine, but a foundational one. It must move us to place a high value on believing God. If God regards believing Him so highly, what can be said of the person who regards believing as elementary, or a mere initial step in appropriating the salvation of God? Let it be clear that men cannot be blessed by God while placing a low priority on a response He honors above all other reactions to His word. That response is believing God—taking Him at his word, and moving out upon it.

GRACE VERSUS DEBT

“⁴ Now to him who works, the wages are not counted as grace but as debt.” Other versions read, “Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt,”^{KJV} “Now to the one who works, his wage is not reckoned as a favor, but as what is due,”^{NASB} “Now when a man works, his wages are not credited to him as a gift, but as an obligation,^{NIV} “When people work, their wages are not a gift. Workers earn what they receive,^{NLT} and “Now to one who works, wages are not reckoned as a gift but as something due.”^{NRSV} It should be apparent that this is a central consideration.

A FUNDAMENTAL CONSIDERATION

There is a fundamental consideration to be seen here. It is the background to this text. God will NOT be placed in debt to fallen men! This is affirmed in the eleventh chapter of Romans. “Who has ever given to God, that God should repay him? For from Him and through Him and to Him are all things. To Him be the glory forever! Amen”^{NIV} (11:35-36). The same truth was expressed by young Elihu, whose counsel God upheld: “If you are righteous, what do you give to Him, or what does He receive from your hand?”^{NIV} (Job 35:7). God Himself supported that word by saying to Job, “Who has a claim against Me that I must pay? Everything under heaven belongs to Me”^{NIV} (Job 41:11).

God does not honor what He does not initiate! If man renders back to God something he has not received from God, it simply is not acceptable. This is a major tenet of Scripture, and is at the root of the reasoning to which we are being exposed (Rom 4:1-4).

This is why man “must be born again” (John 3:3-7). It is ever true, “The flesh profiteth nothing” (John 6:63). If this were not the case, God would be obliged to recognize the goodness of the flesh. Those requiring deliverance cannot boast before the One delivering them.

Man, who comes “short of the glory of God,” cannot cause God to be indebted to him. If there is any legitimate difference among men, it is because of what the Lord has done. Thus it is written, “For who makes you differ from another? And what do you have that you did not receive? Now if you did indeed receive it, why do you boast as if you had not received it?” (1 Cor 4:7). That is why Paul, after acknowledging he had labored “more abundantly than they all,” said, “yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me” (1 Cor 15:10). He was glorying in the Lord. Salvation is arranged so as to allow only that kind of boasting.

HIM WHO WORKS

It is again vital to understand what the Spirit means by “him that worketh,” or “him who works.”^{NKJV} Work is here compared with faith. As a basis for becoming righteous, “work” is the antithesis of faith. In this sense, it is not the complement of faith, but its competitor.

“Work” is not to be equated with obedience, for obedience is integral to faith. In fact, Jesus is said to be “the Author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him” (Heb 5:9). In our text, the person who “works” has not yet entered into God’s rest. Such imagines that entrance into Divine favor depends upon human accomplishment. Scripture speaks on this wise. “For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his. Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief” (Heb 4:10-11). Entering into rest is here equated with salvation.

The idea of ceasing from our own works means refraining from reliance upon our own works. Once faith “comes” (Gal 3:25), however, the believer becomes a prodigious worker. That is because faith opens the channel, so to speak, for God to work in the individual. As it is written, “Now the God of peace . . . make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is wellpleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen” (Heb 13:20-21). Thus, the person who is justified does not cease to work any more than God ceased to work after creating the world and the fulness thereof. What ceases is an attempt to gain Divine favor by ones own work.

By devoting ourselves to believing, we are brought to rely upon Christ’s achievements for our acceptance.

The one “who works” does so in the energy of the flesh, and is quite satisfied with his work. Like the vain Pharisee, he thinks himself worthy of the commendation of God. “God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess” (Luke 18:11-12). Such a person imagines he deserves to be called righteous. However, as long as our works are imperfect (and all of them are), they cannot be the basis for the conferment of righteousness. You cannot receive a perfect righteousness upon the basis of imperfect works.

Here, “works” have to do with appropriating salvation, not walking in the will of the Lord, or laboring in His vineyard.

THE WAGES

If, in fact, we earn justification, then God cannot give it to us freely by His grace. God would then be obliged to give us wages. However, Scripture has already affirmed that God CANNOT be put into the position of a debtor to man. When it comes to “wages,” such do exist. “For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord”^{NKJV} (Rom 6:23). Eternal life can only be received as a gift!

It is to be understood that we are not deserving of the great salvation we have received. Every believer can confess with Jacob, “I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast showed unto thy servant” (Gen 32:10). If that is true of “the least of all” God’s mercies, what about the superior “gift of righteousness” (Rom 5:17)?

Abraham, the friend of God, once approached God in this manner. “Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, which am but dust and ashes” (Gen 18:27). If the “friend of God” spoke in this manner, how ought we to speak?

Recognizing the blessing of the Lord, David said, “Who am I, O Lord GOD? and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?” (2 Sam 7:18). If this could be said of the man after God owns heart, the sweet psalmist of Israel for whom, God built a house, what should we say?

Righteous Job stood before the Lord and said, “I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth thee. Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes” (Job 42:5-6). If a man described as “perfect and upright” said this of himself, what can we say of ourselves?

Whatever you have received from the Lord, beginning with your justification, it has been given to you because you have

Grace, like faith, is contrasted with works. As it is written, “And if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace. But if it is of works, it is no longer grace; otherwise work is no longer work” (Rom 11:6).

Whatever you have received from the Lord, beginning with your justification, it has been given to you because you have believed, not because you worked. It was a gift, not a payment! Good works proceed from faith, and are never the cause of it.

believed, not because you worked. It was a gift, not a payment! Good works proceed from faith, and are never the cause of it.

THE MARVEL OF GRACE

“Now to him who works, the wages are not counted as grace but as debt.” When it comes to the imputation of righteousness, grace is not an option, but a necessity. In the Divine economy, it is impossible to receive eternal benefits upon the basis of human accomplishment. Salvation in all of its aspects is “By grace through faith” (Eph 2:8).

In the text just quoted, as well as the one on which I am commenting, a reward for working removes the possibility of a gift for believing. Both cannot exist simultaneously. They are mutually exclusive.

Thus, the Spirit has reasoned with us concerning our father Abraham. He has made clear to us how he was made righteous, declaring that is precisely how we are made righteous. Now salvation is within our reach.

CONCLUSION

The Holy Spirit has opened a thread of reasoning to us that is not common in many church circles. It is not a mere novelty, but is the very foundation of spiritual understanding. The imputation of righteousness upon the basis of faith, and “without works,” is a reality settled in heaven. Although the book of Romans spends considerable time expounding this truth, its power is in its affirmation. Those who communicate in the name of the Lord must have these things at the center of their proclamations. Receiving the righteousness of God through faith is a foundation upon which obedience is realized. Confidence and assurance are also attained when this truth is perceived.

Where the proclamation of this text is not known and embraced, there can be no satisfactory advancement in the faith. At some point, the heart must be able to say, “I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep what I have committed to Him until that Day” (2 Tim 1:12). As long, however, as a person believes Divine acceptance is the result of our works, such a frame of mind will not be realized. The very nature of the heavenly kingdom forbids “the full assurance of understanding,” the “full assurance of hope,” and “the full assurance of faith” until the cause of our righteousness is known (Col 2:2; Heb 6:11; 10:22).

I am going to wax bold and say the absence of spiritual confidence is directly owing to a basic ignorance of the cause and nature of salvation. Further, that unfamiliarity is the result of failing to comprehend the Gospel of Christ. Where the Gospel is not the major thrust of preaching and teaching, faith cannot flourish. Faith, as it is written, “comes from what is heard, and what is heard comes by the preaching of Christ”^{RSV} (Rom 10:17). Nothing in the text suggests this is limited to an initial hearing of the Gospel, or the inceptive believing of the Gospel. That is precisely why Paul said to the Corinthians, “For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified” (1 Cor 2:2). Their faith had waned, and only the hearing of the Gospel can correct that condition.

The Epistles are actually expositions of the Gospel of Christ. In them, the implications of the Gospel are declared, and the Gospel itself is reaffirmed. All of this is designed to enable the saints of God to obtain boldness to come into the presence of God, knowing they are accepted in Christ Jesus. Mercy and grace to help in the time of need cannot be appropriated if we are afraid to come to the throne of grace. What is more, we cannot confidently approach God if we are not sure we are accepted by Him, and reckoned to be righteous.

Throughout this discourse, strong statements are made that cannot be controverted. The Spirit accents what IS, not what can be! A few of them will serve to confirm their unusual power.

1. The Gospel is God's power in order to salvation (Rom 1:16).
2. A righteousness from God is made known through the Gospel (1:17).
3. God's wrath is revealed against all ungodliness and unrighteousness (1:18).
4. Eternal life will be given to everyone who, by patiently continuing in well doing, seeks for glory, honor, and immortality (2:7).
5. Those who are contentious and do not obey the truth will experience Divine indignation and wrath (2:8).
6. No one is righteous of themselves (3:10).
7. No one understands God of themselves (3:11).

8. No one does good of themselves (3:12).
9. By the deeds of the Law, no flesh will be justified in God's sight (3:20).
10. The righteousness of God is through faith in Jesus to all who believe (3:22).
11. We are justified freely by God's grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus (3:24).
12. God has set forth Jesus as a covering, or propitiation, for sin (3:25).
13. God not only justifies sinners, but is proved righteous in doing so (3:26).
14. Boasting is excluded by the law, or principle, of faith (3:27).
15. The only valid conclusion is that we are justified by faith without the deeds of the Law (3:28).
16. In this way, believers establish, rather than make void, the Law of God (3:31).
17. Abraham believed God, and it was credited to him for righteousness (4:3).

All of these affirmations can be grasped by faith. None of them are mere possibilities. All of them are realities.

They bear no similarity to the approach of the Law. The Law identified what was wrong, and specified what was right. Men were then commanded to fulfill both without any deviation whatsoever. Perfect and consistent obedience would cause the doer to live. All others were cursed: "Cursed is everyone who does not continue in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them" (Gal 3:10).

Thus men are faced with two alternatives. (1) Fulfill all requirements of the Law in the energy of the flesh. (2). Believe God. Which course will you take? I exhort you to throw yourself into believing God. Ponder His exceeding great and precious promises, determining to believe them "without wavering." In so doing, you will be made righteous.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 13

DAVID DECLARES IMPUTED RIGHTEOUSNESS

4:5 But to him who does not work but believes on Him who justifies the ungodly, his faith is accounted for righteousness, ⁶just as David also describes the blessedness of the man to whom God imputes righteousness apart from works: ⁷Blessed are those whose lawless deeds are forgiven, And whose sins are covered; ⁸Blessed is the man to whom the LORD shall not impute sin." Romans 4:5-8, NKJV

INTRODUCTION

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. THE ONE WHO DOES NOT WORK (4:5a)
- II. BELIEVING ON HIM WHO JUSTIFIES (4:5b)
- III. WHEN FAITH IS COUNTED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS (4:5c)
- IV. THE BLESSEDNESS OF THE MAN (4:6)
- V. DEEDS FORGIVEN AND SINS COVERED (4:7)
- VI. WHEN GOD REFUSES TO IMPUTE SIN (4:8)

If men are going to have confidence before God, they must know He has accepted them. It is not possible to boldly approach the Lord, or stand confidently before His throne when doubtful about our relationship to Him. It only takes one real confrontation of the Almighty to cause vain religion to dissipate. Saul of Tarsus could not continue his mission of persecution after he encountered the living Christ! When God unveils the Lord Jesus, and He comes in all of His glory, those who fought against His people will not fight against Him. Instead they will "hide themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and say to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb: for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand" (Rev 6:15-17).

Knowing the sureness of the Lord's return in glory, and knowing that no character-change will be possible at that time, the Spirit strives now to convince men of sin, righteousness and judgment. By illuminating the preached Gospel, He persuades the tender of heart of their sin of unbelief. He brings them to see that Jesus is the only truly righteous One, for He has ascended to the Father. He brings them to see that Satan has already been judged, and is no longer worthy of the smallest measure of obedience (John 16:8-11). Men must cease to listen to him.

CONFIDENCE BEFORE GOD

Although institutional-centered religion places little on no emphasis upon confidence before God, this is the great thrust of Scripture. God is not glorified by timorous disciples who lack confidence. He has declared He will have no pleasure in the person who draws back from Him (Heb 10:39). If the salvation of God has made provision for the “full assurance of faith” (Heb 10:22), what possible reason can be adduced for failing to appropriate it? How is it that men would claim to have faith, yet lack the assurance it brings?

Right here an important observation is in order. Almost without exception, those with a propensity toward legalism are sadly lacking in confidence toward God. With all of their emphasis on precision and exactness, they have failed to appropriate something without which men are placed at a decided disadvantage. With spiritual candor and great power the Holy Spirit associates us with the Son only if we have confidence and hope. “But Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end” (Heb 3:6).

It is certainly not my aim to sit in judgment upon people’s profession. That is an area in which we are not licensed to operate. However, it is imperative that we take hold of this word of the Spirit!

Those in Christ are “added to the church” (Acts 2:47), and “joined to the Lord” (1 Cor 6:17). They are “baptized into Christ,” and “put on Christ” (Gal 3:27). God Himself has “delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of His dear Son” (Col 1:13). We have been made “partakers of Christ” (Heb 3:14), and, like Jesus, raised by “the glory of the Father” to “walk in newness of life” (Rom 6:4). Everyone in Christ is a “new creation” (2 Cor 5:17), has received the “earnest,” or pledge, of the Holy Spirit (2 Cor 1:22; 5:5; 1 Thess 4:8; 1 John 3:24; 4:13). All who are in Christ are not condemned (Rom 8:1), have “peace with God” (Rom 5:1), and have been made “free from the law of sins and death” (Rom 8:2). They are in a state from which no external power can separate them, whether “death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature” (Rom 8:38-39). God is working “all things together for their good” (Rom 8:28), continuing to “perform” the work begun in them “until the day of Jesus Christ” (Phil 1:6). The Father has not only put them into Christ, but has made Christ to be unto them “wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption” (1 Cor 1:30). All believers have access to the Father through the Spirit (Eph 2:18), and free access to needed grace (Eph 3:12).

Not Mere Technicalities

These things are not mere technicalities to be debated in schools of theology. Nor, indeed, are they intended to be a means of dividing the body of Almost without exception, those with a propensity toward legalism are sadly lacking in confidence toward God. With all of their emphasis on precision and exactness, they have failed to appropriate something without which men are placed at a decided disadvantage.

Christ into various systems of regimented thought. All of them are experiences—spiritual experiences. They are deeper and more profound than any bodily experiences. They have an impact upon the human spirit, and produce all manner of spiritual fruitage within.

It is inconceivable that such things could occur without those receiving them knowing it. If a woman healed of an issue of blood could know “what was done in her” (Mk 5:33), ought not deeper experiences of the soul and spirit also be known to the individual?

The truth of the matter is that all people brought into Christ had a profound knowledge that something great has occurred to them. Thus those who were converted on Pentecost continued “daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people” (Acts 2:46-47). When the city of Samaria had given heed to the word preached by Philip, it is written, “And there was great joy in that city” (Acts 8:8). Following his baptism, the Ethiopian eunuch “went on his way rejoicing,” without Philip or any fellow believer (Acts 8:39). After responding to the Gospel, the Philippian jailor brought Paul and Silas “into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house” (Acts 16:34).

This is a consistent pattern throughout Scripture. The conversion of the Ephesians is described in this manner. “Christ, in whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise” (Eph 1:13). It is said of the Thessalonians, “For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Spirit, and in much assurance” (1 Thess 1:5).

Why Say This?

There is a real need to say these things. No child of God begins with doubt and fear. That is simply not how the new birth is accomplished. Were that the case, joy would not attend conversion—but it does, and consistently so! The new convert may not be able perceive or explain the magnitude of salvation, but there is no question about its reality. That is why partaking of Christ is associated with “the BEGINNING of our confidence” (Heb 3:14), as well as “confidence and rejoicing” (Heb 6:11).

Lifeless religion has robbed people of this confidence. Without exception, as soon as the heart and mind are diverted to theological wrangling, ones status with God becomes unsure. Systematized theology too often robs the soul, taking joy and confidence from it, and replacing them with doubt and stern judgmentalism.

This Makes the Teaching Imperative

These unfortunate conditions are not unique to our time. Early in the history of the church, subverting teachers arose, injecting legalism and variant teachings. As a result, the souls of men became emaciated, confidence waned, and a distance began to form between the people and the Savior who had delivered them.

deliverance through Jesus. That is one of the resounding arguments for regular participation at the Lord's table.

WHAT THE SPIRIT IS DOING

In our text, the Holy Spirit is fortifying assurance and confidence. He is doing this because the rigors of the faith-life require the strong presence of assurance. The person who runs

They have missed the purpose of the words, and their miserable theology confirms this to be the case.

Our text is showing the BASIS of our acceptance by God, and the REASON for Jesus receiving us to the glory of God (Rom 15:7). This passage is not defining the various aspects of obedience, nor is it intended to outline every facet of our acceptance of Christ Jesus. The wording of the text should confirm to your heart that this is not the presentation of a facet of our salvation, but its foundation. We are dealing with the root of redemption, not its branches or fruit.

It is to be understood that God cannot be confidently approached where assurance is lacking. Nor, indeed, can Satan be effectively and consistently resisted where confidence lies wounded in the legal vestibule. The soul MUST be refurbished and strengthened with the knowledge of its acceptance in Christ Jesus!

In this matter, the Spirit will separate believing from working. It is folly to attempt to unite the two when dealing with the BASIS of our acceptance. While it is true that faith and works go together, it is not at the primary level, where we build upon the foundation. It is essential that we understand this critical distinction. Your confidence can never rest in what you have done, even when it is absolutely correct and has been driven by faith. Confidence, like faith, must reside in the Lord of glory Himself. The teaching of this passage is designed to produce that kind of confidence.

It is to be understood that God cannot be confidently approached where assurance is lacking. Nor, indeed, can Satan be effectively and consistently resisted where confidence lies wounded in the legal vestibule. The soul MUST be refurbished and strengthened with the knowledge of its acceptance in Christ Jesus! The redeemed must not allow themselves to get beyond the sound of the Gospel, or the recollection of their "uncertainly" is not likely to finish the race (1 Cor 9:26).

We will read some strong statements in our text. They are affirmations that have spawned debates among men—but that is not their purpose. Those who read these statements, then dash through the Word of God, combining them with other texts in order to build a convenient theological system, are in serious error.

THE ONE WHO DOES NOT WORK

^{4:5a} But to him who does not work... "The text means precisely what it says, and is consistently translated in every version. Worketh not, ^{KJV} "without works", ^{NRSV} "without working", ^{BBE} "is not working", ^{NLT} "not because of their work." ^{NLT} A literal translation would read "but not to him that works."

A FOUNDATIONAL AFFIRMATION

This is a statement of depth, not of breadth. If the breadth of salvation was the consideration, the Spirit may very well have reminded us that Jesus is the "Author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him" (Heb 5:9). Our text is affirming the basis of salvation, not its scope. If this was a view of the scope of salvation, mention might well have been made of how we have been "ordained" to walk in "good works" (Eph 2:10). Here is an expression of cause, not effect. The necessary effects of salvation include the holy life (Heb 12:14), crucifixion of the flesh (Gal 5:24), and fighting the good fight of faith (1 Tim 6:12).

Where "Works" Have No Place

There is an aspect of salvation in which "works" have no place. This is not true of the whole of salvation, but of its foundation, which is the point of this passage. We must refrain from any attempt to neutralize this text by showing the importance of obedience and righteous deeds. Those matters will be addressed with great power in chapters six through eight. In that section, the Spirit will make no provision whatsoever for the mind or works of the flesh.

If one fails to grasp the significance of the passage before us, the following teaching on sanctification will be too strong, and will cause the heart to faint. On the other hand, receiving the truth of this passage will fortify the soul with spiritual strength. It will put a solid rock under human effort, and provide an anchor for the soul.

Not Simply An Effort to be Good

The "works" of reference are not simply efforts to be good, as ordinarily conceived. This reference has strict regard to efforts to appropriate righteousness. God does not permit men to develop their own definitions of righteousness. In summation, the Law defined uprightness in this way. “Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets” (Matt 22:37-40).

As used in our text, “works” are the perfect fulfillment of a primary love for God, and a consequent love for our fellow man. “Works” include all of the ramifications of that “love.” That is why “love is the fulfilling of the law” (Rom 13:10).

Often, such works are called “the works of the law.” With remarkable consistency the Spirit informs us men cannot be justified by adhering to a code of Law—primarily God’s Law. “Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified” (Gal 2:16). The expression “works of the Law” refers to the moral code of the Law, not its ceremonies. It covers all of the consequences of loving God with all the heart, soul, mind, and strength, and loving our neighbor as ourselves. What is even more, all such works are accomplished in the energy of man, not through Divine working. As used in this text, “works,” refer to human activity apart from faith and independently of Divine influence.

The Spirit Elaborates

It is the nature of men to receive partial works as though they were sufficient. “Trying hard,” so to speak, is imagined to make the effort acceptable. But that is not the view of the Lord at all. The Law, which is the foundation for the “works” of our text, makes no allowance for failure. It does not impute conscientious effort to the individual as the fulfilling of the Law. This is a pivotal point in the passage before us. Here is what the Spirit says. “For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them” (Gal 3:10). The Law, therefore, will not exonerate the individual who fails in a single point of its requirements. Thus James says, “For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all” (James 2:10). Man cannot choose the works he thinks are necessary, and discard the ones thought to be unnecessary. If man is justified by works, he must do ALL of the work, not just a part of it.

“Works” By Any Definition

If righteousness cannot be attained by keeping God’s Law, how much less by fulfilling ones own definition. Technically, God’s Law stands for ALL law. As it is written, “For if a law had been given which was able to impart life, then righteousness would indeed have been based on law”^{NASB} (Gal 3:21). If it was possible for righteousness to be realized on the basis of Law, then that is precisely how it would have been granted. In such a case, there would have been no need for Christ, not need for faith, and no need for forgiveness!

No understanding person will affirm he deserves to be justified. When asked for a reason for the hope that is within him (1 Pet 3:15), the believer will always point heavenward. He will trace his salvation to God the Justifier. He will cite the death and resurrection of Christ as the basis and life-giving hope of salvation.

This is precisely the argument of the Spirit. He is showing us the utter absurdity of a Savior if man can save himself. It is preposterous to postulate the need of remitting the sins of a person who has achieved righteousness on his own. That should be apparent, and yet this truth eludes the person who insists on justification by law.

THE ONE WHO DOES NOT WORK

Who is the person “who does not work?” It is the person who refuses to rely upon his own work. This is the one who needs forgiveness, and knows that he does. Such an one does not hold his achievements before God, but calls on the name of the Lord, seeking mercy. Rather than boasting of what he has done, he acknowledges he has sinned and comes short of the glory of God, just as God has said (Rom 3:23).

The phrase “does not work” is not the same as “does not do anything.” It is not synonymous with being slothful or indolent. It does not mean faith is inactive. It DOES mean the individual does not present his works as a reason for justification. He does not rely on his own activity, but on the effective accomplishments of Christ Jesus. The truth of the matter is that no work of man can fulfill what is required to make God just in justifying the sinner. Who is the person who would dare to boast of such a thing?

No understanding person will affirm he deserves to be justified. When asked for a reason for the hope that is within him (1 Pet 3:15), the believer will always point heavenward. He will trace his salvation to God the Justifier. He will cite the death and resurrection of Christ as the basis and life-giving hope of salvation. The person who cannot confess such things is under the darkening shroud of spiritual ignorance and alienation from God. The Gospel must be powerfully presented to such individuals.

“Does not work” means we have not worked to come into Christ, but because we have been placed in Him (1 Cor 1:30). It means God has not been motivated to justify us because of what we have done, but because of what His only begotten Son has accomplished. Yes, faith has made us active, but that is not the foundation upon which a spiritual life is built. The “work” of reference is foundational work, not godly activity. It is the work declared in First Corinthians 3:11. “For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.” You cannot build upon what you have done. That is not an acceptable foundation. You can only build upon the foundation put into place by God Himself—Jesus Christ. All of that is involved in “does not work.”

We Need This declaration

What is more, faith needs declarations of this sort. Those who only put us in mind of our duty have taken the heart out of religion. Those who only set before us the danger of falling away enclose us with hopelessness. Faith must hear “what the Lord hath done” (Psa 126:2-3; Isa 41:20).

The great events of the day of Pentecost were set in motion by the powerful proclamation of “the wonderful works of God” (Acts 2:11). There is not apt to be much faith or obedience where this is not done. When we are emboldened to depend upon the Lord, our works will become more abundant, and will yield more fruit. When our trust in the Lord diminishes, our faith wanes, and our works become less numerous. A considerable amount of fruitlessness in the churches is directly owing to a lack of wholehearted trust in the Lord.

THE SPIRIT IS BOLSTERING OUR CONFIDENCE

Remember, the Spirit is bolstering the confidence of believers. He is giving them a reason to fight the good fight of faith (1 Tim 6:12), resist the devil (James 4:7), and go on their way rejoicing (Phil 4:4). This IS a word addressed to believers, not unbelievers, about WHY God has accepted them.

Some Examples

There are examples in Scripture of being justified “without works.” They will assist us in taking hold of this word without thinking we will contradict other words of the Spirit regarding works.

Peter Saved from the Deep

On one occasion, when the disciples were in the midst of a threatening storm, Jesus came to them “walking on the water.” When the disciples saw Jesus walking on the water, they were “troubled,” saying “It is a spirit.” Although they were experienced boatmen, they “cried out for fear.” Immediately Jesus called out to them saying, “Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid.” Knowing the implications of that utterance, Peter replied, “Lord, if it be Thou, bid me come unto Thee on the water.” The answer came back back into the boat, “the wind ceased” (Matt 14:24-32).

Who would imagine that Peter was saved because of his work? Did Peter depend upon his own activity, whether walking on or swimming in the water? Indeed not, he was saved “without works” in a very real and effective way.

Before Jesus lifted Peter out of the raging sea, Peter did something. He asked the Lord to bid him to come. He came down out of the boat. He walked on the water to go to Jesus. When he sank, he called out to the Lord. But who would dare to call them “works” by which Peter was saved from the stormy sea? In every way, Peter knew it was the Lord who saved him.

It is in this way that we are justified. We have been active in asking, seeking, and coming to the Lord. We were active in calling upon His name. But our faith was in none of those things. We did not rely on our activity, but on the Lord’s. Thus, in the sense of our text, we were justified “without works.”

The Woman with the Issue of Blood

En route to the house of Jairus, Jesus passed within the hearing of a woman who had been suffering from a bloody issue for twelve long years. A crowd of people thronged around Jesus, seeming to make Him inaccessible to the needy. Yet, this suffering woman started making her way toward Jesus, going through the crowd. She reasoned within herself, “If I may but touch His garment, I shall be whole.” The Scriptures tell us she made it to the Master, and touched “the border of His garment.” Instantly “the fountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague.” When the Savior confronted her, He informed her “Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague” (Mk 5:25-34).

Who will dare to imagine this woman would point to her own works to account for her healing? She did do something.

The great events of the day of Pentecost were set in motion by the powerful proclamation of “the wonderful works of God” (Acts 2:11). There is not apt to be much faith or obedience where this is not done. When we are emboldened to depend upon the Lord, our works will become more abundant, and will yield more fruit.

immediately, “Come.” Without delay, Peter came “down out of the ship,” and “he walked on the water, to go to Jesus.”

You remember the incident. In making his way to Jesus, the attention of Peter was diverted from the Master. When he “saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me.” Immediately, “Jesus stretched forth His hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?” Peter then accompanied Jesus on the water back to the ship. When they stepped

She heard Jesus was in her vicinity and determined to reach Him. He reasoned about His effectiveness, and inconvenienced herself to touch His clothes, convinced she would be healed as a result. All of that took intense effort, particularly for a woman weakened from such a disease.

But when Jesus accounted for her healing, He did not point to her effort, but to her faith. He did not commend her for expending energy to come through the crowd, but for her faith. According to our text, she was delivered from her plague “without works.” She knew everyone who touched Jesus’ clothes were not healed. It was not that touching the hem of Christ’s garment fulfilled a Divine demand, and thus was honored of God. It was her faith that was honored. That is precisely the sense of our text: “who does not work.”

The Healing of the Blind Man

On yet another occasion, Jesus confronted a man who was “blind from his birth.” His disciples took the occasion to ask about WHY such things happened. They could only think of sin producing such conditions, but Jesus announced this occasion was in order “that the works of God should be made manifest” in the blind man. Then Jesus “spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay, and said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam.”

We are simply told the blind man “went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.” When asked by professional religion men to account for his healing, he could only say, “A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.” Later, when Jesus again confronted him, we find the blind man did not even know Jesus was “the Son of God.” When Jesus told Him who He was, the blind man said, “Lord, I believe. And he worshiped Him” (John 9:1-38).

Here is an example of someone whom Jesus found. The man was not seeking Jesus, but found Him whom he sought not (Rom10:20). Do you suppose he would account for his marvelous healing upon the basis of his works? He DID do something. In obedience, he made his way to the pool of Siloam and washed the clay from his eyes. But that is not what healed him. He could have put clay on his own eyes, or had another put it there for him, and wash it off in Siloam. But he would not have come away seeing.

In the sense of our text, he was healed “without works.” He was not saved by a procedure, but by the interposition of the Son of God. Take Jesus out of the equation, and this man would have remained blind until the day he died!

CONCLUDING THOUGHTS

I find it deplorable that the religious climate is such as requires such lengthy explanations. Those who imagine that “he who does not work” excludes all activity on the part of men are simply foolish, and inexcusably so. Such a circumstance would be like Peter being lifted out of the stormy sea without calling. It would be like the woman with an issue of blood being healed without extending herself to come to Jesus. It would be like the blind man being healed while ignoring the word to go wash at the pool of Siloam.

However, if you were to ask Peter, the woman with the issue of blood, and the blind man why they were delivered, they would not point to what they did, but to what the Savior did! That, of course, is precisely the point made by the Spirit in each of the cases cited. The phrase “him who does not work” takes us down to the root of the matter. It is not a surface view, but one faith grasps. It will sustain the soul, buoying it up in tumult.

BELIEVING ON HIM WHO JUSTIFIES

^{4:5b} ... but believes on Him who justifies the ungodly . . . Here, believing is contrasted with working. The words are clear, and cannot be controverted: “But to him who does not work but believes on Him . . .”^{NIV} Whatever may be said of “works” (and the Spirit does have considerable to say about them), they are not the subject of this text. That means we are being given to see the foundation, or basis, upon which men are justified. Unlike James’ discourse on justification (James 2:17-26), Paul’s purpose is not to rebuke hypocrisy. Rather, He is expounding the righteousness that is announced by the Gospel (1:17).

THE PREMINENCE OF BELIEVING

It should be apparent from this verse that believing is a preminent activity, in a class by itself. It is the fountain from which all valid work springs forth. Remember, he has already cited Abraham as the premier example of justification by faith. The quality that set him apart was that he believed God.

What Is Believing?

It should be apparent from this verse that believing is a preminent activity, in a class by itself. It is the fountain from which all valid work springs forth.

Believing is not something that can be done perfunctorily, mechanically, or mindlessly. By its very nature, believing engages the essential nature of man, calling up more of his resources, and reaching deeper into his person. It will be profitable to briefly explore this pivotal word: “believe.”

From the viewpoint of language, believing involves the following.

- ▶ To be convinced, or persuaded, of the reality of something.
- ▶ To have confidence in someone or something that has been said.

- ▶ To commit, entrust, or trust, oneself to something or someone.

Believing is the active sense of faith. Thus our text refers to the person who “believes” as the one who has “faith.” When, therefore, we read “faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen” (Heb 11:1), we are brought to understand what is involved in “believing.” Believing is being so convinced of the reality of what is hoped for, that no effort is spared to obtain it. It is being dominated by the persuasion of unseen realities, beginning with the Living God and Jesus Christ, and extending to the hope that is held forth in the Gospel of Christ. Believing is faith in motion.

“Believing” is not a casual word. It involves infinitely more than intellectual assent, or admitting something is true. The person who believes steps out on what is believed, thereby appropriating the promise of God.

The believing person is always honored by God. This is evident from the promises that are made to the one who believes.

- ▶ “If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth” (Mark 9:23).
- ▶ “He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned” (Mark 16:16).
- ▶ “He that believeth on Him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God” (John 3:18).
- ▶ “He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him” (John 3:36).
- ▶ “I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst” (John 6:35).
- ▶ “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life” (John 6:47).

- ▶ “He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water” (John 7:38).
- ▶ “I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?” (John 11:25-26).
- ▶ “He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me” (John 12:44).
- ▶ “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father” (John 14:12).
- ▶ “For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek” (Rom 1:16).
- ▶ “For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that “Believing” is not a casual word. It involves infinitely more than intellectual assent, or admitting something is true. The person who believes steps out on what is believed, thereby appropriating the promise of God.

- believeth” (Rom 10:4).
- ▶ “Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded” (1 Pet 2:6).
- ▶ “Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?” (1 John 5:5).
- ▶ “He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son” (1 John 5:10).

We must not allow ourselves to think of believing in a shallow sense. If we have “believed through grace” (Acts 18:27), it cannot be a shallow thing.

WHAT ABOUT THE DEMONS?

One might object to this line of reasoning, saying that the demons believe. Indeed, the Scriptures do say this. “You believe that there is one God. You do well. Even the demons believe; and tremble!” (James 2:19). However, as is evident, this is not the believing that saves the soul. Demons are never said to believe on Christ, or to have faith. They believe “there is one God,” because they have dealings with Him. They have been personally confronted and cursed by God. Their believing is not driven by testimony, but by experience.

Those who believe only because they see, do not receive the blessing. This is confirmed by at least two notable texts. The first refers to the occasion when Thomas confronted the risen Christ. He had refused to believe until he saw. “Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe” (John 20:25). He had to have tangible evidence. The next time the disciples met together, Jesus appeared to them. He personally challenged Thomas, “Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing.” Thomas simply answered, “My Lord and my God.” The response of Jesus is most significant. “Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed” (John 20:25-29). Notice, He did not bless Thomas, but pronounced the blessing on those who believed without seeing.

The second event that confirms believing on the basis of seeing is not blessed, is the day of judgment itself. Just as the demons have confronted God, so all men will eventually encounter the Living God. There will be no question about His reality. There will be no resistance of His power. No charges will be leveled against Him by His creation. At that time “saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God” (Rom 14:11). In that day sinners will believe there is one God in the same sense that demons do, and it will do them no more good than it has the demons!

Men will also confront the reigning Son. At that time, there also will be no question about His reality or power. God will unveil the Son to all, showing Him to be “the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords” (1 Tim 6:15). When He does, the word will be fulfilled, “That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father” (Phil 2:10-11). When Jesus was upon earth, the demons knew who He was, and bowed before Him, confessing Him to be “the Son of God” (Matt 8:29) and the “Holy One of God” (Mk 1:24). They saw and believed, but it did not save them. Sinners will see and believe on the day of judgment, but it will NOT save them!

All things will not continue as they are now. Eventually, everyone will be convinced that God is precisely Who He declared Himself to be. All men will be fully persuaded that Jesus Christ is exactly who the Gospel affirmed Him to be. No one will doubt the existence of God in that day. No one will question the authority of Christ Jesus in that day. But that kind of persuasion will not save the soul! It is not the believing that is “to the saving of the soul” (Heb 10:39).

Thus, the demons, who do believe, are not an example of the believing that saves the soul. They have been faced with incontrovertible evidence, and tremble in the wake of it.

PERSUASION WITHOUT TANGIBLE EVIDENCE

The believing mentioned in our text (“but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly”) is founded upon the testimony of the Gospel, not tangible evidence. While this is unusually simplistic, it eludes the flesh. God has, in fact, withdrawn the primary evidence, which is Jesus Christ the Lord. He has moved Him beyond the reach of natural senses, and outside the realm of fleshly experience. Unless a person believes what God has said about Jesus, there is nothing else that will confirm the truth of the Gospel.

Allow me to elaborate again on this pivotal point. It is essential that we take hold of this with our hearts as well as our minds. Think of what God has affirmed concerning Jesus Christ.

Further, if God had not revealed these things, it is utterly impossible that any man could have concluded them. There is no form of human reasoning that could have looked at the physical evidence of Christ’s life and death and concluded these things happened.

- ▶ He is God’s “only begotten Son” (John 1:18).
- ▶ He was “in the form of God,” and on “equality” with God before coming into the world (Phil 2:6-8).
- ▶ The sins of the world were laid upon Him (Isa 53:6).
- ▶ He put away the sins of the world (Heb 9:26).
- ▶ He reconciled the world to God (2 Cor 5:18-20).
- ▶ He was made sin for us (2 Cor 5:21).
- ▶ He was made a curse for us (Gal 3:13).
- ▶ Through His death, He destroyed the devil (Heb 2:14).
- ▶ He made peace through the blood of His cross (Col 1:20).
- ▶ He blotted out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us (Col 2:14).
- ▶ He spoiled, or plundered, principalities and powers that once dominated the world (Col 2:15).

- ▶ The Son volunteered to come into the world and accomplish what God desired (Heb 10:5-9).
- ▶ God has exalted Jesus to His right hand, making angels, authorities, and powers subject to Him (1 Pet 3:22).
- ▶ Jesus is now bringing many sons to glory (Heb 2:10).
- ▶ He is now interceding for us (Heb 7:25).
- ▶ He is the Mediator of the New Covenant, administering its promised benefits to believers (Heb 12:24).

These are the matters with which the Gospel deals. None of them can be confirmed by tangible evidence. None of them can be demonstrated on a flesh-and-blood level. There are no archeological finds that can confirm their truth. There is no relic that can prove they are true. The ONLY evidence of their truth is the Word of God.

Further, if God had not revealed these things, it is utterly impossible that any man could have concluded them. There is no form of human reasoning that could have looked at the physical evidence of Christ’s life and death and concluded these things happened.

Believing, in the sense of our text, is a persuasion that does not require tangible evidence.

THE RELEVANCE OF THIS

This line of reasoning is germane to our text. God does not justify those who believe “there is one God,” but the one “who believes on Him.” This is NOT believing that Christ exists, but that He is precisely who God has represented Him to be. The Gospel is, in fact, a delineation of Christ Jesus. It is the “the record that God gave of His Son” (1 John 5:10). Other versions read, “the testimony that God has given of His Son,”^{NKJV} “the witness that God has borne concerning His Son,”^{NASB} and “the testimony God has given about his Son.”^{NIV}

Believing on HIM

To believe “on HIM” is to trust and depend upon the Christ of the Gospel. It involves focusing all of our dependence upon Him, making Him the focal person of our lives. Where this is not being done, men are not believing “on HIM.” Consider the dominance of Jesus Christ in the Scriptures—“HIM.” Jesus Himself affirmed the Scriptures “testified of” Him (John 5:39). He is the “spirit” or heart “of prophecy” (Rev 19:10). Let there be no mistake about this, where Jesus is not the most prominent Person, men have not believed on “HIM.”

Believing ON Him

Believing “ON Him” is quite different than believing there is a God, or even believing there is one God. In the sense of our text, believing “ON Him” is trusting in, or relying on, the Christ of the Gospel. By that, I mean the person depends upon Jesus being the ONLY one in whom God is “well pleased.” He shapes His life by the persuasion that only Jesus has dealt effectively with sin. He approaches life with a dominating conviction that everything is subject to Jesus, and that there is no promised blessing that cannot be received through Him.

Again, I want to emphasize that believing is embracing Jesus as God has represented Him. There is a marked tendency in men to fabricate a Savior of their own. One who will save their home, their marriage, their finances, their country, etc. While care must be taken not to discourage people from bringing their requests to the Lord, care must also be taken not to equate this with the Gospel. Such approaches are areas of possibility. The Gospel deals with guarantees.

Being More Specific

It may appear this has all missed the mark, for our text is speaking of believing on God—the One who justifies. Why, then, bring up believing on Christ Jesus?

Jesus has spoken to this issue. In summary, I will show that men cannot believe on God—the One who justifies the ungodly—apart from His Son. Here is something Jesus “cried out.” “He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on Him that sent me. And he that seeth me seeth Him that sent me” (John 12:44-45). Again, Jesus said, “He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth Him that sent me” (Matt 10:40; John 13:20).

In a very poignant statement, Jesus confirmed that God cannot be accessed apart from Himself. “I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me” (John 14:6). The God who justifies in inaccessible apart from His only begotten Son!

When the Gospel of Christ is replaced with a gospel of the church, or even a gospel of the Spirit, a great disservice has occurred. Jesus, and Jesus alone, has accomplished what God required to justify you.

Through Peter, the Holy Spirit affirms that we believe in God through Jesus Christ. “Who by Him do believe in God, that raised Him up from the dead, and gave Him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God” (1 Pet 1:21). Confirming the effective ministry of Jesus in this regard, Peter also wrote, “For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God” (1 Pet 1:18).

Looking at this matter from yet another perspective, John writes, “Whoever denies the Son does not have the Father; the one who confesses the Son has the Father also”^{NASB} (1 John 2:23). You must not allow the strength of this declaration to pass by you. Denying the Son is refusing Him in the capacity in which God presents Him. It involves more than denying He is the Son of God. It is a refusal to receive Him in that capacity. The very thought of NOT having the Father is startling to the sensitive soul. Let us not be deceived on this matter. No one will be saved who does not have the Father. Further, no one can have the Father independently of the confession of, and reliance on, the Son.

The Bottom Line

Believing on the God who justifies is realized by receiving Christ in the capacity presented in the Gospel. It simply is not possible to believe ON God apart from the Christ of the Gospel.

A TRAGEDY OF OUR TIME

When Jesus is not preached, salvation is pushed beyond the reach of the people. Dependency upon God, which is imperative to the maintenance of spiritual life, is not possible apart from believing on the Son. Further, believing on the Son is not possible unless the sound of the Gospel remains in our ears. Do not imagine that you can continue to believe on the Son without hearing the proclamation and exposition of the Gospel. Such a thought is a delusion, and leads to condemnation.

When the Gospel of Christ is replaced with a gospel of the church, or even a gospel of the Spirit, a great disservice has occurred. Jesus, and Jesus alone, has accomplished what God required to justify you. Your faith in God is directly proportionate to your acceptance of and reliance upon the Lord Jesus Christ.

Many believers are regularly subjected to a Christ-less gospel. The issues presented to them focus more on country and family than on God and Christ. It should not surprise us to find a lack of faith in such assemblies.

WHO JUSTIFIES THE UNGODLY

The Spirit carefully presents the means of appropriating righteousness. Believing that justifies is delineated with precision. We are to believe on “Him who justifies the ungodly!” Believing on God who created all things does not bring righteousness to men. The believing that saves is driven by an acute awareness of personal defilement and guilt—“the ungodly.” Where there is no sense of sin, there will be no belief in Christ or quest for God’s favor.

Who Are the “Ungodly”

What do you think of when you hear the word “ungodly”? Frequently, Scripture speaks of “ungodly men” (2 Sam 22:5; Psa 18:4; 2 Pet 3:7; Jude 4). Such men are never commended, never acceptable, and always under the curse of God.

King Jehosaphat was rebuked for helping “the ungodly” (2 Chron 19:2). The blessed person “walks not in the counsel of the ungodly” (Psa 1:1). “The ungodly” are like “chaff” that is driven from the presence of the Lord (Psa 1:4). They will not be able to stand in the judgment (Psa 1:5), and their way will “perish” (Psa 1:6). Those who were destroyed in the flood are referred to as “the world of the ungodly” (2 Pet 2:5). The challenge is hurled out to us, “And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?” (1 Pet 4:18).

Some may conclude from these texts that “the ungodly” are obviously base and reprehensible people. Others may see them as the morally depraved and indulgent—the dregs, so to speak, of society.

Etymologically, the word “ungodly” means destitute of a reverential awe of God, condemning God, impious, irreverent, or wicked.^{Strongs} That definition, however, contributes to the notion that “ungodly” refers to a sort of lower segment of humanity—that it is a term that compares men with other men. But that is not the case at all.

“The ungodly,” in this case, is everyone “without Christ” (Eph 2:12). It is everyone whose origin can only be traced back to Adam. “The ungodly,” are those mentioned previously in this Epistle. “For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God” (Rom 3:23).

Fundamentally, “ungodly” means not like God. It assesses men by comparing them with God Himself, not with one another. That condition—being unlike God—moves the sinner to think and act differently than God, which is the essence of impiety. Wherever this condition is found, the Gospel and salvation is needed.

This condition—being unlike God—is a most serious one. It required Divine intervention in order for God to even deal with it. Thus it is written, “For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly” (Rom 5:6). If Christ had not done this, God could not have corrected our condition.

We will find that at its root, salvation has to do with making us like God. This is accomplished by conforming us to the image of His Son, who is God’s “express image” (Rom 8:30; Heb 1:3). Justification involves taking people who are unlike God, and making them like Him through a process called “from glory unto glory”

We will find that at its root, salvation has to do with making us like God. This is accomplished by conforming us to the image of His Son, who is God’s “express image” (Rom 8:30; Heb 1:3). Justification involves taking people who are unlike God, and making them like Him through a process called “from glory unto glory” (2 Cor 3:18).

Being justified, or “saved,” is not a matter of simply living differently, or incorporating some new habits into our lives. It is not a change of routine, but a change of character. It is becoming like God, where our thoughts and ways are no longer at variance with Him (Isa 55:8-9). This is a transformation that results in a love of and preference for the truth. Everything becomes “new” for such a person, and “old things pass away” (2 Cor 5:17). In justification, there is a harmony between God and the justified one that is depicted as “peace” and “reconciliation” (Rom 5:1; Col 1:21).

Misrepresentations

I have been subjected to a remarkable amount of preaching and teaching that represented Christians as being at variance with God. The will of God is often presented as not really desired by the saints. Too often the statement of Divine requirements is followed with something like, “But that is not what we do,” or “We tend to go the other way,” or “Like the Israelites we want to do our own thing.”

You will find no such representations in Scripture. Retreating from God, preferring our own way, and being drawn to the world are consistently represented as “the flesh.” These are NOT a depiction of the new creation, but of the “old man” which is to be “put off” (Eph 4:22-24). Those who are in Christ are consistently addressed as those who are reconciled to God and capable of denying ungodliness. Where the matter of living correctly is addressed, believers are told, “Put on therefore, as the elect of God . . . For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light . . . As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby,” etc. (Col 3:12; Eph 5:8; 1 Pet 2:2). All of this assumes that those in Christ DO have the capacity to think like God and prefer what He says.

THE MATTER OF WORKS

When it comes to the “ungodly” being justified by God, who is the person willing to affirm men can work themselves into that blessing? Who will say they can become like God by working? How can men, through works, prevail upon God to justify them. It should be abundantly clear to our hearts that the “ungodly” cannot be justified, in the sense of our text, by works. It is our “works” that revealed our need for justification. They confirmed we were fundamentally unlike God in our ways and thoughts.

God is greatly to be praised for justifying “the ungodly.” Only He can fully exonerate them, clearing them of all guilt. Let us be thankful that such a blessing is obtained through “believing on Him that justifies the ungodly.” That is a good message with a joyful sound, bringing deliverance and Divine strength to the soul.

WHEN FAITH IS COUNTED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS

^{4:5c} . . . his faith is accounted for righteousness.” What a marvelous statement. Ponder the condition of the man as he stands before God. Through the Law, God acquainted men with a requirement scarcely known to men. “none shall appear before Me empty” (Ex 23:15). Again it is stated, “And none shall appear before me empty” (Ex 34:20). And again, “and they shall not appear before the LORD empty” (Deut 16:16). This principle is also declared in two of Christ’s parables: the talents and the pounds. In both, there was one man who had nothing to offer the master Both were called “wicked” servants, and were thrust from the presence of their Lord (Matt 25:26; Lk 19:22).

God has also defined the very best we do apart from Him – the very best, not the worst. “But we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we all do fade as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away” (Isa 64:6). Just as it was true of Israel, so it is with every man: “I will declare thy righteousness, and thy works; for they shall not profit thee” (Isa 57:12). When Joshua the high priest stood before God, his priestly vestments were nothing more than “filthy garments” (Zech 3:3). It is no wonder that Paul determined to be “found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law” (Phil 3:9).

It is in our interest to ponder how we will appear, and what we will possess, when we stand before the Lord of glory. It is true, “we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God” (Rom 14:10-12). God will look for righteousness—a righteousness that He can receive.

Right here our text obtains a beauty that is excelled only by that of the Lord Himself. Admittedly, we will have no works of our own to present to God. We know this is the case, for “there is none that doeth good, no, not one” (Rom 3:12). Without Jesus in the equation of life, there is no such thing as good. Even with Him in the equation, good is defined by His presence, not by our independent effort. His influence makes works “good.”

Imagine standing before the Lord NOW – for how He views us in this world will determine how He views us in the world to come. Everything is “naked and opened unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do” (Heb 4:13). Not only does He see what we possess, He also sees what we do NOT possess – and both are critical factors. To stand before Him having sin is not acceptable. To stand

That is the preeminent possession for which the Lord looks – FAITH. Where it is found, God always acknowledges and honors it. It is unquestionable evidence of the reception of His grace, which is packed full of both faith and love before Him without righteousness is also unacceptable.

We have an index to what the Lord is looking for in one of our Lord’s sayings. In His parable of the importunate widow, Jesus revealed the necessity of persistence in prayer. At the conclusion of that parable He said, “Nevertheless, when the Son of Man comes, will He really FIND FAITH on the earth?” ^{NKJV} (Lk 18:8). That is the preeminent possession for which the Lord looks – FAITH. Where it is found, God always acknowledges and honors it. It is unquestionable evidence of the reception of His grace, which is packed full of both faith and love (1 Tim 1:14).

The great men and women of this world, as confirmed by the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, were always distinguished by the faith.

FAITH ACCOUNTED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS

When God finds faith in a person, how does He react? What is His response? O, here is a message that must be seen. Here is a word that every poor sinner must hear: “his faith is counted for righteousness!” Other versions also confirm the strength of this statement. “His faith is reckoned as righteousness,” ^{NASB} “his faith is credited as righteousness,” ^{NIV} “his faith is put to his account as righteousness,” ^{BBE} “But people are declared righteous because of their faith.” ^{NLT} The Amplified Bible reads, “his faith is credited to him as righteousness—the standing acceptable to God.”

The person who believes is not thoroughly righteous. He still struggles with the “old man,” and experiences the downward pull of the flesh. He remains in an earthen vessel that cannot transport into the world to come. Yet, God receives the one who “believes in Him” just as though there were no flaw at all. How is this possible?

First, the declared objective of Jesus is to present to Himself “a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish” (Eph 5:27). Second, God is fully able to “present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy” (Jude 24).

But what of the interim? What about here and now? Must we live in doubt of our acceptance? Indeed not! Until the “redemption of the purchased possession” (Eph 1:14), our faith IS our righteousness. Our text is very specific on this point: “His faith is counted for (as) righteousness.” That is, God accepts “faith” as the fulfilling of the Law, and the meeting of His requirements. To put in another way, “faith” is the channel through which His own righteousness is imparted to us. It is like a covering “robe” that makes us beautiful in His sight (Isa 61:10).

The legalist, one who imagines righteousness comes through works, cannot receive this saying. It is too lofty for him, extending far beyond the reach of his finely tuned, yet stilted, mind. But for the person who knows what they are by nature, this is a glad sound! It moves such an one to capitalize on believing, knowing that thoughts, words, and deeds, are gloriously transformed by faith.

Believing is not a mere “step” in a salvation procedure. It is not something you do once, then move along to better and higher things. Believing is the heart of spiritual life. It is the breath of the church, which is the body of Christ.

The acceptance of this proclamation has done more to increase my personal confidence and assurance than any other thing. It has enhanced the beauty and worth of the Gospel. It has brought the greatness of salvation more within my reach. It has confirmed the inferiority of this world, and the superiority of the one to come. Thank God for this affirmation!

THE BLESSEDNESS OF THE MAN

“^{4:6} Just as David also describes the blessedness of the man to whom God imputes righteousness apart from works.” One of the undesirable traits of a law-approach to God is its de-emphasis of the Lord’s blessing. Those enslaved to law rarely speak of being blessed by God. By nature they are more interested in precision and form than in obtaining something from God. The thrust of their message is what is offered to God, not what is received from Him. Having once been snared by this emphasis myself, I know all too well of its effects upon the human spirit.

When a person begins to depend on his own works for Divine acceptance, a cloud of despair rises on the horizon of life. The soul seems to sense the inadequacy of independent human effort. By independent human effort, I mean working without a knowledge of grace and Divine acceptance. Before any real progress can be made in the light, an awareness of God’s blessing must register upon our spirits. Our text confirms this is the case.

To accentuate that God has ALWAYS taken faith as the preeminent thing, the Spirit takes us back to a saying of David, who was a man particularly close to God. Scripture refers to David as “a man after His own heart,” and “the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet psalmist of Israel” (1 Sam 13:14; 2 Sam 23:1). It should at once be apparent to us that David will be able to more perfectly articulate the purpose of God.

God does not refer us to some saying of Balaam, “who loved the wages of unrighteousness” (2 Pet 2:15). The Spirit does not cite a proverb of Solomon, or a saying of some worldly dignitary. Rather, He will refer us to someone who knew something of this truth, and through whom He could speak with precision.

Those enslaved to law rarely speak of being blessed by God. By nature they are more interested in precision and form than in obtaining something from God. The thrust of their message is what is offered to God, not what is received from Him.

BLESSED IS THE MAN!

The importance of being blessed cannot be overstated. Jacob, you will remember, refused to let the heavenly messenger go until he was “blessed” by him (Gen 32:26). Jabez, unknown but powerful man of God, once prayed, “Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that thine hand might be with me, and that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me!” It is written, “And God granted him that which he requested” (1 Chron 4:10).

God specializes in blessing. The creation was marked by blessing. “Of mankind it is said, “And God blessed them” (Gen 1:22,28; 5:2). God also “blessed the seventh day” (Gen 2:3). After the fall of man, we hear nothing about blessing until after the flood—around 1,600 years later. “And God blessed Noah and his sons” (Gen 9:1).

It was over two hundred years before the blessing of God was mentioned again. That occurred when the Lord called Abraham. “And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing; and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed” (Gen 12:2-3). From that time, references to the blessing of God were more frequent.

The culmination of blessing is associated with the Son of God. Of Him, it is written, “God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities” (Acts 3:26). Under the administration of Jesus, Divine blessing has become the standard, and is common in the household of faith.

The Man

The Spirit will now place a single individual before us. It will not be a specific person, like Abraham, Peter, or Paul. You can be this person! Further, the reference will not be to a single blessing, but to a state, or condition, of “blessedness.” It is a situation that continues, a bright and refreshing ray of glory in which the person can bask.

What Does It Mean to be Blessed?

“Blessing” speaks of advantage and joyful benefit. It speaks of a happy frame of mind that results from favorable circumstances. Blessing not only makes the person better, it also produces a joyful in the one being blessed. Solomon once said, “The blessing of the LORD, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it” (Prov 10:22). That condition is brought to its apex in Christ Jesus.

Lest we be tempted to degenerate into fleshly assessments, the Spirit is very specific about the blessed person. It is identified as “the man to whom God imputes righteousness apart from works.” To conditions are declared. (1) First, righteousness is “imputed,” reckoned to, or credited to. (2) Second, it is credited to the individual “apart from,” or independent of, the “works” of man.

Some people equate the ultimate blessing with health. When asked concerning their state, they will say, “At least I have my health.” During his trial, Job was not able to say that (Job 2:7). Neither, indeed, could Paul say this at the height of his prodigious ministry (2 Cor 12:7-10) Timothy was not able to make such a confession (1 Tim 5:23). Trophimus and Epaphroditus could make no such boast (2 Tim 4:20; Phil 2:25-27), nor could the mighty prophet Elisha (2 Kgs 13:14). We must be careful not to adopt sayings that are in conflict with the Word of God.

Others see the ultimate blessing as having a good and godly family. Thus, they say, “Well, at least I have my family, and that is the important thing.” Aaron could not make such a confession (Lev 10:1-2). Eli, who faithfully raised mighty Samuel, had sons described as “the sons of Belial” (1 Sam 2:12). Make no mistake about this, a family that is united in the Lord is a blessing – but it is not the ultimate blessing.

The consummate blessing is to be received by God even though we nothing can be found in us that merits such a benefit. To receive the impeccable righteousness of God “apart from works,” obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy” (1 Pet 2:9-10).

No form of religion is safe that allows a person to forget “the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged” (Isa 51:1). As soon as the heart becomes insensitive to justification, or the imparting of righteousness apart from works, a gigantic door is opened for the wicked one.

The consummate blessing is to be received by God even though we nothing can be found in us that merits such a benefit. To receive the impeccable righteousness of God “apart from works,” equips one for life, and prepares one for judgment. It is a blessed state indeed!

equips one for life, and prepares one for judgment. It is a blessed state indeed!

This is the blessedness of which David spoke when he confessed, “He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings” (Psa 40:2). It is what drove Paul to acknowledge, “And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry; who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious: but I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief” (1 Tim 1:12-13). The knowledge of this blessedness is expressed by the Spirit in these words, “But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light: which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not

Under such a circumstance, the heart is easily diverted, and commandments become burdensome, and heaven seems far away.

I am concerned about the growing absence of songs of thanksgiving about being accepted by God. I have longed been discontent with the lack of personal testimonies in gatherings of believers. It is not that the absence of such things are to be viewed as sin. No person should attempt to correct such a situation by some form of legislation, or weighing down the people with heavy burdens. The lack of heartfelt expressions betrays a condition for which God has provided a remedy. When once the “blessedness” of receiving the righteousness registers upon the human spirit, it at once stimulates the heart. The stammering tongue is enabled to speak, and the lame can then leap as a versatile deer (Isa 32:4; 35:6). The one who is so blessed, himself becomes a blessing.

DEEDS FORGIVEN AND SINS COVERED

“^{4:7} Blessed are those whose lawless deeds are forgiven, and whose sins are covered . . .” And what does kingly David say concerning the blessedness of the man to whom God imputes righteousness apart from works? The Spirit calls us to consider Psalm 32:1-2. “Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Blessed is the man unto whom the LORD imputeth not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile.” This is the same man who once cried out under the oppression of guilt, “Make me to hear joy and gladness; that the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice. Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities. Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me” (Psa 51:8-10).

There is something about knowing God sees our sin that strikes fear into the heart. Thus David acknowledged, “If thou, LORD, shouldest mark iniquities (kept a record of sins-NIV), O Lord, who shall stand? But there is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared” (Psa 130:3-4). That sins can be identified in our personal history cannot be denied: “All have sinned.” Equally true, none of us can say we have committed no sin since coming into Christ, for “If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in . . . we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us” (1 John 1:1,9).

The question is not whether or not we have sinned. We all have! The question is whether or not we “are forgiven!” It is whether or not our sins are “covered.”

Now, God’s forgiveness must be undergirded by a righteous cause. He cannot forgive us while forfeiting His own righteousness. That is the glory of the Gospel of Christ! It announces that in the Son, God has made full provision for Him to be righteous in justifying the ungodly. Hallelujah for that!

Our text declares a most marvelous reality. Remember, the Spirit is telling us what David has said about the blessedness of a man to whom God imputes righteousness “without works.” He then cites David’s statement concerning the remission of sins. He refers to such remission in two ways. First, it is “forgiveness,” and second, it is a “covering.”

FORGIVENESS

Because sin has credited indebtedness to God, those who are justified are said to be “forgiven.” Their debt has been paid in full by the Lord Jesus. That is why Jesus taught us to pray, “And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors” (Matt 6:12). He also accentuated this marvelous benefit when He spoke of God’s forgiveness as dissolving a great debt. “The lord of that servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt” (Matt 18:27).

Faith can teach a person to reason in such a manner as to produce joy and gladness. It says to the believer, “If my sins are gone, God has given me His righteousness.” With joy it enables the saved to shout, “If God cannot see my sin, then He has accepted me in the Son.”

COVERING

Sins that are “covered” are sins that cannot be seen by God. He does not consider them or associate them with the individual. This is the significance of the word “propitiation,” a word denoting a covering for sin (Rom 3:25; 1 John 2:2; 4:10). A vivid picture of this is seen in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. There, the noblest of our race are placed before us. Included are Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses’ parents, Moses, the Israelites, Rahab, Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah, David, Samuel, and the prophets.

There is not a solitary sin or deviation of any sort registered against these saints. Were you to trace their record through the Scriptures, you would find some of their sins recorded.

However, if you were granted a hearing with each one of them, not one of them would say they were without sin, or that they had no need of a Savior.

Why were not their sins mentioned in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews? Because they had lived in faith of the coming Redeemer. That Redeemer had come and removed their sins. He paid the debt they owed, and their record was cleared. Their iniquities were forgiven, and their sins were covered.

This is true of all who believe on Him who justifies the ungodly!

TRUTH THAT GLADDENS THE HEART

Now, here is a truth that brings great gladness to the heart. The individual whose iniquities are forgiven is the same person to whom God has imputed righteousness! The person whose sins are covered is the very one who has been made righteous “without works.”

It is not possible to be “forgiven” and remain unrighteous. Neither, indeed, is it possible to have your sins “covered” and not be righteous before God. Thus, the person who really knows they are forgiven, can also know they are righteous. The one who is convinced his sins are covered, can also be convinced God has received him.

Faith can teach a person to reason in such a manner as to produce joy and gladness. It says to the believer, “If my sins are gone, God has given me His righteousness.” With joy it enables the saved to shout, “If God cannot see my sin, then He has accepted me in the Son.”

When the heart acknowledges these things, and the mouth confesses them, a certain spiritual exhilaration is experienced. It enables the person to draw near to God “with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water” (Heb 10:22). It is then that you can “know you have eternal life” (1 John 5:13), and that God is working “all things together” for your good (Rom 8:28).

WHEN GOD REFUSES TO IMPUTE SIN

“^{4:8} Blessed is the man to whom the LORD shall not impute sin.” The importance of the truth before us is seen in its firm undergirding by the Holy Spirit. He does not merely make passing statements about this matter, but fastens it firmly in our conscience, thereby accentuating its significance.

The informed and sensitive person wants to know that God will not condemn him. He reasons, “How does God regard me now?” “Will God hear my prayers?” “How will He regard me in the day of judgment?” Such questions cannot be brushed aside as inconsequential by any serious-minded person.

Our text addresses this very matter. The Spirit uses what is called a Hebraism—another way of saying the same thing just declared. He will restate this affirmation: “Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered” (v 7). He will further define who this person is, and do so with great power.

The forgiven person, whose sins are covered, is not only the person to whom God has imputed righteousness without works, it is also the one whom God refuses to charge with sin! God “WILL NOT” credit sin to the account of that person! Hear the truth stated from several different versions. “Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin.”^{ASV} “BLESSSED IS THE MAN WHOSE SIN THE LORD WILL NOT TAKE INTO ACCOUNT.”^{NASB} “Blessed is the man whose sin the Lord will never count against him.”^{NIV} “Blessed is the one against whom the Lord will not reckon sin.”^{NRSV} “Happy is the man against whom no sin is recorded by the Lord.”^{BBE} “Yes, what joy for those whose sin is no longer counted against them by the Lord.”^{NLT} “How blessed are those to whom the Lord imputes no guilt.”^{NJB}

DOES SUCH A PERSON EXIST?

Doubt and fear both ask whether such a person even exists. But faith sees the truth that is declared. When Jesus tabernacled among men, He made sure He made this aspect of His person known. Even before He died, He had power to forgive sins—to cover them, removing them from association with the very ones who committed them.

On one occasion, four believing men brought a palsied man to Jesus for healing. Because they could not access Jesus the ordinary way, they broke up the roof of the house in which He was ministering, letting the man down into the midst of the people, before Jesus. When Jesus saw “their faith,” He immediately addressed the afflicted man. “Man, thy sins are forgiven thee.” When facing unbelieving critics, He affirmed, “the Son of man hath power upon earth to forgive sins” (Lk 5:18-24). How much more does He have that power now!

On another occasion, Jesus declared an abundance of sins could be remitted by Him. You will remember that woman who anointed Jesus feet with precious ointment, washed His feet with her tears, and wiped them with her hair. When He was confronted with hypocritical men He said, “Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little. And He said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven” (Lk 7:47-48). How much more can He forgive now that He is enthroned in glory!

Jesus also declared there were some people He would NOT condemn, even though they were worthy, from one perspective, of condemnation. Once Jesus’ critics brought Him a woman who had been taken in the very act of adultery. After challenging the condemning multitude, “He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her,” the accusers departed, leaving the woman alone with Jesus. When He asked her where her accusers were, and who it was that condemned her, the woman replied, “No man, LORD!” With voice of compassion and omnipotence, the Lord replied, “Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more” (John 8:3-11). How much more will He refuse to condemn those who have “received the atonement” (Rom 5:11).

NO CONDEMNATION

The person God refuses to credit with sin is the one who is not condemned. As it is written, “There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit” (Rom 8:1). “He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God” (John 3:36). The person against whom God will not charge sin is “not condemned.” Again, the person who is “not condemned” is the one to whom God WILL NOT impute sin.

This is a most blessed consideration! The devil seeks to condemn, delivers, God will not. Often fellow men condemn us, but God will not. In a powerful way, the Lord reasons with us on this matter. “Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God’s elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us” (Rom 8:33-34). No person can effectively charge a person with sin whom God has justified! No one can condemn the one who is trusting in Christ Jesus, who died, is risen, and is at the right hand of God interceding for us! To such people, God “WILL NOT impute sin.”

I cannot close this section without reminding you that in Christ your sins ARE forgiven. This is powerfully declared to us. “*And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses” (Col 2:13). Again, it is written, “*I write unto you, little children, because your sins” are forgiven you for his name’s sake” (1 John 2:12). Wonderful statements for the one who believes!

If you can receive this (and your faith will bring that enablement), if your sins are forgiven, God has given you His righteousness. It will effectively equip you to live for the glory of God without offending Him. It will make all of His commandments pleasant to consider and sweet to obey. You can know you are forgiven, and that God Himself WILL NOT charge you with sin! In that confidence you can approach God, resist the devil, and perfect holiness.

CONCLUSION

The passage we have considered is one of most weighty of all Scripture. There is sufficient truth compressed into it to feed the soul for many days to come. The apprehension of this text will shed light on all of Scripture. It will also illuminate life itself. The power of Satan will be neutralized when you believe this text. It will bring heaven closer to you, and put this present evil world further from you.

I challenge you to zealously avoid any trend of theological thought that makes no place for this passage, or relegates it into the background of your thinking.

Considerations that clarify this text, bringing it into the thought processes are good, and should be nurtured.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 14

ABRAHAM, JUSTIFIED BEFORE CIRCUMCISION

^{4:9} Does this blessedness then come upon the circumcised only, or upon the uncircumcised also? For we say that faith was accounted to Abraham for righteousness. ¹⁰ How then was it accounted? While he was circumcised, or uncircumcised? Not while circumcised, but while uncircumcised. ¹¹ And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had while still uncircumcised, that he might be the father of all those who believe, though they are uncircumcised, that righteousness might be imputed to them also, ¹² and the father of circumcision to those who not only are of the circumcision, but who also walk in the steps of the faith which our father Abraham had while still uncircumcised. Romans 4:9-12, NKJV

INTRODUCTION

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. THIS BLESSEDNESS (4:9a)
- II. WHAT WE SAY (4:9b)
- III. HOW WAS IT RECKONED (4:10)
- IV. A SEAL OF THE RIGHTEOUSNESS (4:11a)
- V. THE FATHER OF ALL WHO BELIEVE (4:11b)
- VI. RIGHTEOUSNESS IMPUTED UNTO THEM ALSO (4:11c)
- VII. WALKING IN THE STEPS OF THE FAITH (4:12)

In Scripture, the REASON for God's justification of "the ungodly" is no small point. From beginning to end, the whole matter of salvation hinges upon the grace and graciousness of the Living God. The various terms that are central in the proclamation of salvation emphasize this reality.

THE LANGUAGE

- ▶ The message that must be embraced by faith is called "Gospel," or "glad tidings" (Rom 1:16; Acts 13:32; Rom 10:15). It is not the proclamation of a Law, or the specification of requirements. It is the announcement of the "wonderful works of God" (Acts 2:11), the proclamation of what the Lord has done. What a joyous sound it has, and it is good to the tender of heart. "Unto you first God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities" (Acts 3:26).
- ▶ The means of accessing this great salvation also accentuate its nature. Faith is the appointed means of taking hold of the grace of God. Salvation is "by grace through faith" (Eph 2:8). This does not relegate obedience to an unimportant place. Rather, it makes obedience acceptable and effectual.

- ▶ Objectively, salvation is effected by a Savior, sent into the world by God Himself. This confirms the human condition was beyond any self-help procedure. The initiative that brought the Savior into the world belonged totally to God. He did not come by request, but because "God so loved the world" (John 3:16).

MAN'S SINFULNESS

With great power, the Spirit has shown the sinfulness of mankind. Whether with law or without it, sin dominated man. No righteous person could be found by the all-seeing God. He declared there was no one who sought God or did good (3:10-12). While men have chosen to debate over the condition of the “natural man,” there is no question in Scripture about that condition. By nature, all men are “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1). They are under the dominion of Satan, and are “by nature the children of wrath” (Eph 2:2-3). With no equivocation whatsoever those outside of Christ are described as “having no hope, and without God in the world” (Eph 2:12). Every one who is in Christ Jesus can identify their past as a time when they were “foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another” (Tit 3:3).

THE DESCRIPTION OF SINNERS

Sinners are described as “servants of sin” (Rom 6:17,20), “subject to bondage” (Heb 2:15), “ungodly” (Rom 5:6), “darkness” (Eph 5:8), “alienated and enemies” (Col 1:21), “children of disobedience” (Col 3:6), and “sheep going astray” (1 Pet 2:25). Out of Christ men are “lost” (Lk 19:10; 2 Cor 4:3), “condemned already” (John 3:18), and the wrath of God “abides” on them (John 3:36). They are so dominated by the devil that is it said of them, “the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them . . . lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them” (2 Cor 4:4). They had to be sought before they could be saved (Lk 19:10). They had to hear a message from another world before they could be saved (Rom 10:14-17). They had to be “delivered,” “raised,” “translated,” and “reconciled” (Col 1:13,20; Eph 2:6).

THERE SHOULD BE NO QUESTION

There should be no question among those in Christ Jesus about their natural condition or innate abilities. It should be abundantly evident to them that they were as paralyzed in the spirit as the impotent man was in the flesh (John 5:7). They were as blind in their spirit as Bartimaeus was in the flesh (Mark 10:46).

But, alas, these “evident” things have been obscured by the doctors of the Law, so that men think they are able to save themselves, or to be justified by their own works.

The Lord, because of His “great love, wherewith He loved us” (Eph 2:4), is not willing to leave men bantering back and forth about such critical matters. He sent His Holy Spirit to unveil the truth of the matter, and to empower holy men to proclaim it to the sons of men. That is what this section of Romans is all about.

This type of strong affirmation sharply conflicts with the academic approach to Scripture. It pounds flesh down where it belongs, and provides no option for another view of salvation. The Spirit gives heaven’s perspective, and does not even allow the flesh to speak on the matter.

Here, the Spirit is not showing us various views of salvation, then urging us to select the one that best suits our preconceived conceptions. That is what men do, but it is not what God does. One of the reasons this passage is so hotly contested among professed believers is the manner in which it is written. It leaves no room for opinion, no place for a variant view, and no hope to the one who objects to the message of the Gospel. This type of strong affirmation sharply conflicts with the academic approach to Scripture. It pounds flesh down where it belongs, and provides no option for another view of salvation. The Spirit gives heaven’s perspective, and does not even allow the flesh to speak on the matter.

THE POWER OF AFFIRMATION

Once again, I want to draw attention to the affirmations that are made in this book—particularly in the first four chapters. Remember, the power of the truth is in its affirmation. The passage we are presently reviewing is built upon the solid foundation of these firm and unwavering statements. Notice how each one of them is uncompromising, with no possibility of contradiction or negation.

- ▶ “The gospel of Christ: for it IS the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth” (1:16).
- ▶ “For therein IS the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it IS written, The just shall live by faith” (1:17).
- ▶ “For the wrath of God IS revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men” (1:18).
- ▶ Because that which may be known of God IS manifest in them; for God hath showed it unto them” (1:19).
- ▶ But we are sure that the judgment of God IS according to truth against them which commit such things” (2:2).
- ▶ “For there IS no respect of persons with God” (2:11).
- ▶ “There IS none righteous, no, not one” (3:10).
- ▶ “There IS none that understandeth, there IS none that seeketh after God” (3:11).
- ▶ “They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there IS none that doeth good, no, not one. Their throat IS an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps IS under their lips: whose mouth IS full of cursing and bitterness” (3:12-14).
- ▶ “There IS no fear of God before their eyes” (3:18).
- ▶ “But now the righteousness of God without the law IS manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; even the righteousness of God which IS by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there IS no difference: for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God; being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that IS in Christ Jesus” (3:21-24).

- ▶ “Where IS boasting then? It IS excluded. By what law? of works? Nay: but by the law of faith” (3:27).
- ▶ “Therefore we conclude that a man IS justified by faith without the deeds of the law” (3:28).
- ▶ “Now to him that worketh IS the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith IS counted for righteousness” (4:4-5).
- ▶ “Blessed IS the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin” (4:8).

realities upon which we “reckon,” or pillars upon which sound reasoning is based.

When we think upon the things of God, we must have a proper focus. With zeal, men must avoid reading the Scripture through a preconceived theological template. The Bible cannot be read through a Baptist mindset, a Christian Church perception, or a charismatic persuasion. It is not to be viewed through a Calvinistic or Armenian filter. Nor, indeed, are we to pass the Word of God through a liberal or conservative sieve. God does not give men the luxury of reading His Word as a reformationist or restorationist, a trinitarian or a Jesus-only, or a sabbatarian or a first-day-of-the-week advocate. The heart is to be subjected to the raw Word of God without an attempt to make it fit into a theological box.

18:27), it has unique qualities of its own. Faith “comes” to men (Rom 10:17; Gal 3:23), and is given to “every man” in Christ by “measure” (Rom 12:3). However, that faith is neither supported nor facilitated by natural abilities. It has a logic of its own, reasoning after a heavenly manner. It is in no way deficient, and never puts the child of God at a disadvantage, as does the world’s wisdom.

NOT A BY-PATH

All of this has not been an intellectual by-path, or an excursion into the wilderness-realm of philosophy. It is necessary to say these things because of the cancerous growth of human reasoning within the professed church. It is a condition with which the Spirit Himself contends in the passage before us.

The reason for this lengthy treatise is not the inability of faith. Neither, indeed, is it because the things proclaimed are inherently hard to believe. They are no more difficult to believe than the promises God made to Abraham! The reason for this extended comment on righteousness is that corruption had penetrated the thinking of professed believers. They had begun to imagine they were saved because of their own effort – or because they had been singled out by God – or because they had an ordained mark upon them.

With great power, the Spirit will reason with us in the heavenly places. He will set before us matters the flesh will not be able to accept. However, that should not concern us, for God cannot receive the “flesh.” Justification will not be explained from a scholarly point of view. It will not be viewed as a mere possibility, to be discussed and debated as though it were merely “some new thing” (Acts 17:21). Rather, the Spirit is speaking to our faith, putting the matter of salvation where it can be “believed.”

. The Bible cannot be read through a Baptist mindset, a Christian Church perception, or a charismatic persuasion. It is not to be viewed through a Calvinistic or Armenian filter.

The grammarian will at once argue that there is no original word for “IS”–that it reflects the grammatical construction of the sentence, not a specific word. And, indeed, that IS the case. However, we must not allow that technicality to rob us of the truth. The point is that the statements made are foundational, firm, and unwavering. They reflect a circumstance that exists, not a possible condition. They are the affirmation of unwavering realities to be grasped by faith.

BUILDING BLOCKS FOR REASON

All of these statements are like building blocks, and are to be strategically placed into our reasoning. These are

There are some who do not believe such a thing is possible. They are persuaded men cannot approach the Word of God without human bias. However, there is one thing of which they are willingly ignorant. It is the nature of faith.

FAITH IS ABLE

Faith can rise to the need to believe God. It does not need a precedent, visible confirmation, or historic attestation! Abraham can believe God without any of those things. He can embrace the Word of God without comparing it with the heathen background of his father or the customs and expertise of the Chaldeans.

Because faith is “obtained” from God (2 Pet 1:1), and comes to us by means of “the grace of God” (1 Tim 1:14; Acts

THIS BLESSEDNESS

“4:9a Does this blessedness then come upon the circumcised only, or upon the uncircumcised also?” And what is “this blessedness” or “this blessing?” First, this is a state or condition of benefit that is conferred, imputed, or reckoned--not achieved. This is particularly true of the imputation of righteousness. This very point is being made with unusual power. This precious facet of salvation has been viewed from different perspectives. Paul's salutation recognized the conferment of righteousness upon believers in Rome. Thus they are "beloved of God, called to be saints" (1:7). This comes under the broad canopy of "salvation," which is accomplished through the Gospel in which this very righteousness is revealed (1:16-17). It is becoming "a Jew inwardly" and experiencing "circumcision" in the "heart" and "spirit" (2:29). It is "being justified freely through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus" (3:22). It is the forgiveness of sin and the covering of iniquities (4:7). Thus believers are brought to the point where God "will not impute sin" to them. This is the state of blessedness to which our text refers.

In 1700, Isaac Watts wrote a song that declared "the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works."

THE GOSPEL STATED

"Vain are the hopes the sons of men

On their own works have built;
Their hearts by nature are unclean,
And all their actions guilt."

"Let Jew and Gentile stop their mouths
Without a murmuring word;
And the whole world of Adam stand Guilty before the Lord."

"In vain we ask God's righteous law
To justify us now:
Since to convince and to condemn,
Is all the law can do."

"Jesus, how glorious is Thy grace!
When in Thy name we trust.
Our faith receives a righteousness
That makes the sinner just."

Institutional religion robs men of the ability and compelling desire to express such things. It takes the joy out of salvation and surrounds the person with duty and lifeless regimentation. But when the soul is enthralled with the Gospel, and the blessedness of being a person to whom the Lord "will not impute sin," it can sing with Augustus L. Hillhouse.

"Bright heralds of the eternal Will,
Abroad His errands ye fulfill;
Or throned in floods of beamy day,
Symphonious in His presence play."

"Loud is the song, the heavenly plain
Is shaken with the choral strain;
And dying echoes floating far,
Draw music from each shining star."

"But I amid your choirs shall shine,
And all your knowledge shall be mine;
Ye on your harps must learn to hear,
A secret chord that mine will bear."

Methodist Episcopal Hymnal, 1878

There is a strain of religion in our country that leaves the individual without a solitary thought of God Almighty imputing righteousness without works, or refusing to impute sin to those in Christ Jesus.

I lament that the awareness of "blessedness" is not as common among believers as salvation provides. There is a strain of religion in our country that leaves the individual without a solitary thought of God Almighty imputing righteousness without works, or refusing to impute sin to those in Christ Jesus. The absence of these perspectives causes life to become a burden for those who are conscious of their own weaknesses and shortcomings.

True religion is one of "blessedness"—a personal awareness of what the Lord has done. This is "the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel"—the joyous benefit that is realized when that Gospel is believed (15:29). This is "the blessing of Abraham" that comes upon the Gentiles through Jesus Christ (Gal 3:14). This is the blessing that qualifies us to receive the Holy Spirit. As it is written,

"He redeemed us in order that the blessing given to Abraham might come to the Gentiles through Christ Jesus, so that by faith we might receive the promise of the Spirit"^{NIV} (Gal 3:14).

FOR THE CIRCUMCISION ONLY?

This is a particularly precious section for Gentiles—those who formerly were "without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world" (Eph 2:12). Does the blessedness of receiving a righteousness from God belong to the Jews alone? Or, is it for the Gentiles also?

Here, the Jews are called "circumcision," for that was the external sign of their identity with God. Their works certainly were not a sign of that fact, even though they had been given benefits exclusive to them (Rom 9:4-5). The Gentiles are called "uncircumcision," because they had nothing to commend them to God—not even an external sign in the flesh.

The Jews Received the Promise

The promise of being made righteous was given to the Jews. They alone received the promise, "In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS" (Jer 23:6). And again, "In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The LORD our righteousness" (Jer 33:16). They alone were told, "The LORD hath brought forth our righteousness: come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the LORD our God" (Jer 51:10).

The Jews alone had the proper form, the proper message, and the glorious promises. Is "this blessedness" only for them? Can those who are under the curse of the Almighty be blessed by Him? You might be surprised how many souls imagine this is not possible. Indeed, there are people who believe they can be a member of a church—even THE church—yet they are not persuaded God will NOT impute sin to them. There are others who have a fairly good idea about what they should be doing, yet they utterly lack any confidence that God will NOT hold their sin against them. For that very reason, sin tends to dominate them.

This IS a blessed condition that is not commonly realized. There is a great deficiency within the professed church on this very point: knowing “the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works.” Is it for the circumcision ONLY, “to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever” (Rom 9:4-5).

Let me put it another way. Is this blessedness for those who have met all of the external criteria—or, at least, are so perceived? In our parlance, is it only for the ones who have the correct pattern in their congregational structure? Is it for those alone who have mastered the step-by-step procedure for coming to Christ? Is that the basis for receiving “this blessedness?”

Do not take this to mean that God has no interest in the structure of His people, or how they behave themselves in the house of God, which is the church, the “pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15). Do not think that any required obedience can be ignored or treated as inconsequential when coming to Christ. But that is not the matter being expounded in this text. Circumcision was required also, and that without exception. Yet, as we will find, it was not the basis for the conferment of righteousness.

Our text will show us that faith procures the “blessedness” of reference. He has already proved it cannot be appropriated by “works,” for natural men are incapable of producing such works.

The spirit will now confirm to our hearts that “the righteousness of God” is conferred upon men independently of their background or their works. The Jew must abandon his trust in works, and come to Christ believing. The Gentiles must admit their helplessness, and also come to Christ believing. Both will receive righteousness upon the basis of their faith. Neither will receive it upon the basis of their works. This righteousness comes “by faith!”

WHAT WE SAY

^{4.9b} For we say that faith was accounted to Abraham for righteousness. The words “we say” are equivalent to “we teach,” or “we preach,” or “this is in our message.” Whatever others may have said about Abraham’s realization of righteousness, here is what the Holy Spirit moved men to say. “For we say that faith was reckoned to have heard much about Abraham. I have personally heard very little about his faith being reckoned, or credited, to him as righteousness. This simply not what was generally said about Abraham. Those who esteemed him made mention of him going to Canaan, having Isaac, and offering Isaac. But little was said about his faith. Some spoke more of Abraham “lying nothing of which he could boast—no works that he could hold before God as a basis for receiving the righteousness of God. He had to be “justified” like all of us. He was not a super man, but a believing man. His faith is what MADE the difference. His works are what REVEALED that difference.

FAITH AS RIGHTEOUSNESS

Although Abraham did not have a righteousness of his own, his faith was credited to him AS righteousness. That is, his faith was accounted, or considered, as his righteousness.

In this saying we see the greatness of faith. There is no adequate likeness of faith in nature. It transcends the ability of the flesh, taking hold of the Word of God without the imagined benefit of evidence. The “faith of Abraham” (4:16) confirms this is the case. Ponder the Divine utterances that Abraham believed, and around which he shaped his life.

- ▶ God would make of him a great nation and bless him (Gen 12:2a).
- ▶ God would make his name great, and

From the standpoint of nature, Abraham was no different than any other man. He too had “sinned and come short of the glory of God” (3:23). He had nothing of which he could boast—no works that he could hold before God as a basis for receiving the righteousness of God. He had to be “justified” like all of us. He was not a super man, but a believing man.

Abraham for righteousness.”^{KJV} “For we say, ‘FAITH WAS RECKONED TO ABRAHAM AS RIGHTEOUSNESS.’”^{NASB} “We have been saying that Abraham’s faith was credited to him as righteousness.”^{NIV}

During over fifty-five years of exposure to preaching and teaching, I about Sarah being his sister” than about Abraham believing God. However, when Paul said something about Abraham, he spoke in concert with the Lord of glory!

From the standpoint of nature, Abraham was no different than any other man. He too had “sinned and come short of the glory of God” (3:23). He had

- make him a blessing (12:2b).
- ▶ God would bless those who blessed Abraham (12:3a).
- ▶ God would curse those who cursed Abraham (12:3b).
- ▶ God would bless all the families of the earth through Abraham (12:3c).
- ▶ God promised to give Abraham the land of Canaan (12:7; 15:7).
- ▶ In his old age, when he was “as good as dead,” God promised Abraham he would beget seed (Gen 15:4).
- ▶ Abraham’s progeny would spend four hundred years in a land that was not theirs, suffering affliction (Gen 15:13).
- ▶ God would judge the nation afflicting Abraham’s yet unborn “seed” (15:14).
- ▶ In the fourth generation, Abraham’s seed would come out of bondage to possess the land promised to him (15:16).
- ▶ Abraham would be the father of many nations (Gen 17:1).
- ▶ Kings would come from the loins of Abraham (17:6).
- ▶ Abraham would have a child through his barren wife, Sarai (17:16a).
- ▶ Barren Sarai would become the mother of nations (17:16b).
- ▶ Kings of people would come forth from barren Sarai (17:16c).
- ▶ God commanded Abraham to offer his son, his only son, as a burnt offering—the one through whom all the promises would come (22:2-16).

Believing Contradicts Human Reasoning

In all of these matters, there was not one shred of visible evidence that could justify believing God. There were no historical events to confirm such things were possible. The Scriptures tell us how Abraham reasoned on these promises. It was a higher form of reasoning than known to the advanced civilization of the Chaldeans.

- ▶ Concerning begetting seed when he was incapable of doing so, and had a barren wife. “And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah’s womb: he staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God; And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform” (Rom 4:19-21).

- ▶ Concerning offering up Isaac through whom all of God’s promises to Abraham were would be fulfilled. “By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son. Of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called: accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure” (Hebrews 11:17-19).

Not only did Abraham believe God, he did so in contradiction of human wisdom. There is nothing in human reasoning that could justify believing the marvelous promises given to Abraham. It is essential to see this, for we are living in a time when too much value has been placed upon human logic.

Believing not only rises above the wisdom of this world, it is in stark contradiction of that wisdom. That is why is it said of Abraham, “(as it is written, ‘I have made you a father of many nations’) in the presence of Him whom he believed; God, who gives life to the dead and calls those things which do not exist as though they did; who, contrary to hope, in hope believed, so that he became the father of many nations, according to what was spoken, ‘So shall your descendants be’” (Rom 4:17-18).

The expression “in hope believed” means Abraham believed and expected, or anticipated, the fulfillment of the promise. Even though the promises were great, extending beyond human possibility, the patriarch did not “stagger” at them. He made no attempt to substantiate them by reconsidering his own body, or the inability of Sarah to have children.

Scripture tells us Abraham was “strong in faith, giving glory to God” (Rom 4:20). He did not “waver in unbelief,”^{NASB} but took hold of the Divine promises without hesitation. He did not test or examine the promise of God, but believed it. That was most remarkable from a human point of view. From heaven’s perspective, however, this is the nature of faith—to believe God! It needs nothing more than a Word from God.

The Gospel announces things more difficult to conceive than those promised to Abraham. They are even more contradictive of the wisdom of this world and the reasoning of men than the Lord’s commitments to Abraham. The remission of sins, new birth, and reigning with Christ are too great for man’s wisdom. Only faith can take hold of these things, not “staggering at the promise of God.”

It should be evident to us that believing God involves more than your own personal effort—although it surely does include that. Faith “comes” to you from God, for it is “given unto you to believe” (Phil 1:29). It is “obtained,” and is therefore “precious” (2 Pet 1:1). It comes “by hearing” (Rom 10:17), and is carried to us in the “grace of our Lord” (1 Tim 1:14). The more you are exposed to the Word of the Lord, the more apt you are to believe. The more prominent the Gospel of Christ is in your thinking, the more disposed you will be to believe. Abraham did not “believe God” because he heard others philosophizing about Him, but because he heard God Himself. He believed what God said, NOT what men interpreted God to have said.

If God places such a high value upon faith, how is it that men would not do the same? What would move anyone to minimize it, or imagine it to occupy a place on the periphery of life? Believing God actually results in Divine acceptance. Our righteousness flows from our believing, not from our works. To put it another way, it is righteous to believe and unrighteous not to believe.

THE SERIOUSNESS OF UNBELIEF

For this reason, UNBELIEF is the most prominent sin. It is the transgression from which all other sins proceed. Our blessed Lord spoke of the ministry of the Holy Spirit in this regard. His appointed role is to persuade men of the truth of the Gospel, and ready them for salvation. Here is how Jesus stated the case. “Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment: of sin, because they believe not on me; of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more; of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged” (John 16:7-11). The Spirit will reprove, or convict, the world of three realities. The NRSV reads, “He will prove the world wrong about sin and righteousness and judgment.” Notice these three cardinal points, and their relationship to the Gospel of Christ.

1. SIN: “. . . concerning sin, because they do not believe in Me.”^{NASB} The dominate (and, in a sense, only) sin is NOT believing in Jesus. That is, it is not believing the “record” or testimony “God has given of His Son” (1 John 5:10-11). To fail to believe what God has said about Jesus is tantamount to Abraham not believing God’s promises to him. Further, just as Abraham had absolutely no hope of an offspring or inheriting the land of Canaan apart from God, so those without Christ have been shut up to sin and vanity. The persuasion of this involves the intellect, but goes much deeper. That is why it requires the work of the Holy Spirit to bring it to pass. He does this through the Gospel.

2. RIGHTEOUSNESS: “. . . concerning righteousness, because I go to the Father, and you no longer behold Me.”^{NASB} The meaning here is twofold. First, the Spirit convinces men of the reality of righteousness, for men will not seek it if they are not persuaded of its actuality. Second, that righteousness is administered to men through the exalted Christ. That is one of the primary reasons He returned “to the Father” –to ensure others could follow. Again, this powerful work of the Spirit is accomplished through the Gospel.

3. JUDGMENT: “. . . concerning judgment, because the ruler of this world has been judged.”^{NASB} The judgment of reference is not the day of judgment, but the casting down of Satan, who no longer dwells where he can accuse the saints before God (Rev 12:10). This is another way of saying the ground for a charge against the people of God has been removed. Thus light has risen upon a cursed world, offering righteousness and hope. This conviction is also accomplished by the Spirit through the Gospel.

Among other things, this confirms the seriousness of unbelief. Abraham’s condition before God was CHANGED when he believed God. Until then, his condition was no different than the rest of the race. Believing God has never been dominant in the world. Those who have dared to take God at His word have always been in the minority. But they have never been without blessing.

WHAT SHOULD WE SAY?

When it comes to the conferment

Abraham’s condition before God was CHANGED when he believed God. Until then, his condition was no different than the rest of the race.

of righteousness, what should we say? It should be obvious that we should say what the Spirit says. “Faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness.” Let us take care not to adopt a view of Scripture that does not allow these words to come out of our mouths. Too, let us make no attempt to dilute them by trying to make them fit into some theological pattern of thought.

When it comes to the REASON Abraham was considered righteous by God, it was because he believed God. It is no different with you.

HOW WAS IT RECKONED?

^{4:10} How then was it accounted? While he was circumcised, or uncircumcised? Not while circumcised, but while uncircumcised. We now come to a most precise teaching. This is like new wine that cannot be poured into old wine skins of legalism. It is a fresh new cloth that cannot be sewn on to the old garment of Law. This is a foundational statement, and is therefore of the utmost importance. The Spirit is not providing us with the evidence of Abraham’s justification, as James did, but with the cause of it. He will confirm to our hearts that faith did what no work could do.

The question “How was it then accounted?” is a critical one. Other versions read, “How was it then reckoned?”^{KJV} “Under what circumstances was it credited?^{NIV} “Now how did this come about?”^{NJB} The NIV does capture the sense of the text. The question concerns the condition of Abraham at the time God accounted his faith to him as righteousness. The Spirit has already spoken of the blessedness of the man “unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works” (verse 6). He is now going to fully support that statement by citing the principal example of justification—our father Abraham.

THE COMMANDMENT OF CIRCUMCISION

When it comes to “works,” there is an premier activity God commanded of Abraham. It was circumcision.

The very first mention of circumcision in the Scriptures is related to Abraham. It involved an extensive commandment, and is recorded in the seventeenth chapter of Genesis. “This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man child among you shall be circumcised. And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you. And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every man child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed. He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant. And the uncircumcised man child whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant” (17:10-14). Notice the many facets of this command.

- ▶ It was God’s own covenant.
- ▶ It was to be kept by Abraham and his offspring after him.
- ▶ Every male child was to be circumcised.
- ▶ Circumcision was a token of the covenant God made with Abraham.
- ▶ It was to occur when the child was eight days old.
- ▶ All generations were included in the commandment.
- ▶ Those born in Abraham’s household, as well as all slaves, were also included.

- ▶ The uncircumcised male child was cut off from Abraham’s people.
- ▶ The one who was uncircumcised was guilty of breaking God’s covenant.

Circumcision, then, was not an optional matter. Remaining among the promised people was conditioned on the circumcision of the male children.

Remaining among the promised people was conditioned on the circumcision of the male children. Without fulfilling this Divine requirement, neither individuals nor their sacrifices were accepted.

Without fulfilling this Divine requirement, neither individuals nor their sacrifices were accepted. You simply could not be associated with Abraham, and specifically with the promises made to Abraham, without being circumcised.

Abraham himself was circumcised when he was ninety-nine years old. At the same time, Ishmael, who was thirteen years old, was also circumcised, together with “all the men of his house, born in the house or bought with money from a foreigner” (Gen 17:24-27). Later, when Israel was delivered from Egypt, they were reminded of this requirement (Ex 12:44-48). Part of the Levitical law referred to the circumcision of a male child on the eighth day (Lev 12:3). Before Israel invaded Jericho, the fulfillment of this requirement was necessary (Josh 5:2-7). John the Baptist was circumcised on the eighth day (Lk 1:59). The infant Jesus was circumcised the eighth day, in fulfillment of this commandment (Lk 2:21). Stephen referred to this command in his last sermon. “And he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day” (Acts 7:8).

I have taken the time to comment on circumcision because of the power of the argument we are considering. Circumcision was no small thing. It was not an inconsequential commandment, or something that was optional to the seed of Abraham. In fact, this single ordinance distinguished the Jews from all other people. After Abraham and prior to Christ’s enthronement, all men were separated into these two categories: circumcised and uncircumcised (Gen 17:14; Ex 12:48; Jer 9:25). A large commandment, indeed!

NOT IN CIRCUMCISION, BUT IN UNCIRCUMCISION!

Here the Spirit “speaks expressly.” The condition in which Abraham was found AT THE TIME he was pronounced righteous was “NOT in circumcision.” His justification, or being made righteous, occurred at least fourteen years before he or any member of his household was circumcised.

He was “accounted righteous” in Genesis 15:6, BEFORE God told Abraham Sarah would have the promised offspring, BEFORE Ishmael was born, and BEFORE he himself was circumcised. Ishmael, as you recall, was thirteen years old when Abraham was circumcised. Abraham was counted righteous before he was circumcised, and remained so for at least fourteen years! Circumcision, therefore, CANNOT be the cause of justification, or being made righteous.

The Jews considered themselves superior to others because they were circumcised in accordance with God’s covenant with Abraham. Thus, Gentiles were “called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands” (Eph 2:11).

There was an advantage to being circumcised! That advantage is stated in this way: “What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God” (Rom 3:1-2). That advantage, however, did not cause the circumcised to be righteous. Advantages are of no value unless they yield fruit! Adam and Eve had the advantage in the garden. Israel had the advantage in Canaan. The Jews had the advantage in Jerusalem. In every case, their advantage was not a guarantee.

As a “master of assemblies” (Eccl 12:11), Paul is fastening the truth of justification by faith in our understanding. He is showing there is no way for righteousness to come through the flesh, whether by sign or by work. From Abraham, and until Jesus, the ultimate “sign” was circumcision in the flesh. That was the ultimate work, and act of obedience. Yet, our text affirms

Abraham was righteous when he was yet UNcircumcised. This did not take place the day before he was circumcised, but a full fourteen years before that commanded event. This is the Spirit’s powerful confirmation that the man is blessed “to whom God imputes righteousness apart from works.”

A SEAL OF THE RIGHTEOUSNESS

“^{4:11a} And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had while still uncircumcised.” Circumcision is not ignored, as though it had no significance at all. It became the confirmation of the righteousness he already possessed. It is essential to hear how the Lord spoke of circumcision to Abraham. “This is My covenant which you shall keep, between Me and you and your descendants after you: Every male child among you shall be circumcised; and you shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskins, and it shall be a sign of the covenant between Me and you” ^{NKJV}(Gen 17:10). Notice, God’s covenant was ratified by the circumcision of the “male child.” Further, this was not done when the men had matured, but when the child was “eight days old,” before they could do any “work” (Gen 17:11).

GOD’S USE OF SIGNS

God used tokens and signs in His dealings with Israel. It is His manner to do so. The token, or sign, was primarily for the benefit of the one receiving it. It became the personal evidence of Divine acceptance. A few examples of this form of Divine provision will suffice.

Deliverance from Egypt

When Israel was delivered from Egypt, a visible sign was required to be on their houses. It was not an option, and anyone failing to meet this requirement would experience the “plague” and the “destruction” with which God would smite Egypt. A lamb of “the first year,” “without blemish” was to be taken from the flock of each family. The lamb was to be reserved until the fourteenth day of the month, then killed “in the evening.” With care, each family was to “take some of the blood and put it on the two doorposts and on the upper door post of the houses where they eat it.” They were then to eat the Passover meal “with haste, with their loins girded, their shoes on their feet, and their staves in their hands.” That very night, the Lord passed through Egypt, smiting the firstborn in the land, both of man and beast. Of the blood placed upon the doorposts of the house it is written,

God used tokens and signs in His dealings with Israel. It is His manner to do so. The token, or sign, was primarily for the benefit of the one receiving it. It became the personal evidence of Divine acceptance.

“Now the blood shall be a sign for you on the houses where you are. And when I see the blood, I will pass over you; and the plague shall not be on you to destroy you when I strike the land of Egypt” ^{NKJV}(Ex 12:1-13).

The Sabbath Days

The Lord’s Sabbaths were also a sign to the children of Israel. “Speak also to the children of Israel, saying: ‘Surely My Sabbaths you shall keep, for it is a sign between Me and you throughout your generations, that you may know that I am the LORD who sanctifies you” ^{NKJV}(Ex 31:13). Ezekiel refers to the same sign. “Moreover I also gave them My Sabbaths, to be a sign between them and Me, that they might know that I am the LORD who sanctifies them” ^{NKJV}(Ezek 20:12,20).

A Fearful Sign

All signs were not the same. On one occasion, when Korah and his rebels fomented an insurrection against Moses, the Lord assembled the people, giving them something to remember. It is written, “And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up together with Korah, when that company died, what time the fire devoured two hundred and fifty men: and they became a sign” (Num 26:10). Like a flagstaff, that occasion was fixed in the minds of Israel to discourage any further rebellion.

When Israel Came Into Canaan

When Israel at last crossed Jordan to enter Canaan, they were instructed to follow a very meticulous procedure. The ark of the covenant was to be taken over first. When the feet of the priests bearing the ark touched “the edge of the water,” the waters which came downstream stood still, and “rose up in a heap very far away” at the city of Adam. With the waters “cut off” the priests carrying the ark entered the river bed and “stood firm on dry ground in the midst of the Jordan; and all Israel crossed over on dry ground, until all the people had crossed completely over the Jordan.” After the people had safely crossed over, Joshua commanded twelve chosen men, one from each tribe, “Take for yourselves twelve stones from here, out of the midst of the Jordan, from the place where the priests’ feet stood firm. You shall carry them over with you and leave them in the lodging place where you lodge tonight.” Later Joshua “set up twelve stones in the midst of the Jordan, in the place where the feet of the priests who bore the ark of the covenant stood.”

We are told why this procedure was followed: “that this may be a sign among you when your children ask in time to come, saying, ‘What do these stones mean to you? Then you shall answer them that the waters of the Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the LORD; when it crossed over the Jordan, the waters of the Jordan were cut off. And these stones shall be for a memorial to the children of Israel forever” (Josh 3:13-4:9).

SIGNS COULD NOT BE IGNORED

In all of these cases, the “sign” was essential. To ignore the procedures associated with that sign would incur the curse of the Almighty. None of them were optional, and none could be ignored.

The Abrahamic sign of circumcision was the same. It was not optional. With great solemnity the Lord told Abraham, “And the uncircumcised man child whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant” (Gen 17:11). As we proceed in this text, it is necessary to say these things because of the tendency men have to view Divine stipulations as inconsequential. They are not! The fact that Abraham was justified by faith does not reduce God’s requirements for him to an unimportant or nonessential status. The very manner in which God spoke to Abraham confirms this to be the case.

Our text, however, is not establishing the necessity of obedience, but “the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works” (4:6). The Spirit is going deeper, to the bedrock foundation of salvation. The matter of obedience will be addressed later, and with great power.

The point to be seen is that faith must not rest in the “sign” of the covenant, but in the God of the covenant! That it is wrong for the Jew to trust in circumcision is confirmed by the words, “For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh” (Rom 2:28). Circumcision did not make Abraham righteous. It ratified a righteousness that he already possessed. That circumstance, however, did not allow Abraham to ignore circumcision. It DID mean he could not place his trust in it. Divinely appointed signs are evidence, but not the basis for faith.

THE MATTER OF BAPTISM

Endless debates have been spawned over the matter of baptism. It is important to note that no such arguments were ever posed in God’s Word. Our baptism is clearly related to spiritual circumcision, as confirmed by Colossians 2:11-12. “In Him [Christ] you were also circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, by putting off the body of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ, buried with Him in baptism, in which you also were raised with Him through faith in the working of God, who raised Him from the dead.”

In all of these cases, the “sign” was essential. To ignore the procedures associated with that sign would incur the curse of the Almighty. None of them were optional, and none could be ignored.

The essentiality and effectiveness of baptism is never questioned in the Word of God. The Spirit consistently speaks of it as a pivotal point in spiritual life. Associations are made with baptism that confirm its essentiality. Here are a few of them.

- ▶ Repentance (Acts 2:38).
- ▶ The remission of sins (Acts 2:38).
- ▶ The gift of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:38).
- ▶ Believing (Mark 16:16; Acts 8:12; 18:8).

- ▶ Salvation (Mark 16:16; 1 Peter 3:21).
- ▶ Being buried with Christ (Rom 6:4; Col 2:12).
- ▶ Being raised with Christ (Rom 6:4; Col 2:12).
- ▶ Being identified with Christ’s death (Rom 6:3).
- ▶ Becoming dead to sin (Rom 6:2-3).
- ▶ Becoming alive to God (Rom 6:3-11).
- ▶ The circumcision of Christ, in which the whole body of sin is cut away (Col 2:11-12).
- ▶ Faith in the operation, or working, of God (Col 2:12).
- ▶ Coming into Christ (Rom 6:3; Gal 3:27).
- ▶ Putting on Christ (Gal 3:27).
- ▶ A commandment (Acts 10:48).
- ▶ The confession of Christ (Acts 8:36-37).
- ▶ Gladly receiving the Word of God (Acts 2:41).
- ▶ Washing away our sins (Acts 22:16).
- ▶ Calling upon the name of the Lord (Acts 22:16).
- ▶ Coming into one body through the Spirit (1 Cor 12:13).
- ▶ Obtaining a good conscience (1 Pet 3:21).
- ▶ The Father, Son, and Holy Spirit (Matt 28:19).
- ▶ Believing that Jesus Christ is the Son of God (Acts 8:36-37).

Just as circumcision, and other ordained signs, there is no question about the necessity of baptism. One who argues that baptism is not necessary might as well attempt to tell Abraham that circumcision was not necessary, or that Israel did not really have to put the blood on the posts of the door. It makes just as much sense to tell Israel they did not have to honor the Sabbath days. To affirm that baptism has no bearing on our relationship to God is as absurd as saying circumcision was inconsequential to Abraham and his offspring. Such statements are unworthy of a child of God, and reflect an uncomely spirit.

However, when men begin to trust in their baptism, they have committed precisely the same sin as the Jews who trusted in circumcision. Faith must not be placed in the sign, but in the God of the sign. I come from a heritage that emphasizes baptism. Their insistence on its necessity is noteworthy, and not to be despised. However, they are not noted for their spirituality or holiness. Many of their people trust in their baptism, and are not noted for faith in God. This does not demean baptism, anymore than the Jew's reliance on circumcision demeaned that ordinance.

The Spirit affirms that Jews who trusted in circumcision were obliged to keep the whole Law, and that without flaw. "For circumcision is indeed profitable if you keep the law; but if you are a breaker of the law, your circumcision has become uncircumcision"^{NKJV} (Rom 2:25). This is addressed to those who had confidence in the flesh, being "called a Jew, and restest in the law, and makest thy boast of God" (Rom 2:17). Since their confidence resided in what they had done—including circumcision—they were obliged to be perfect doers, not partial ones.

While this may appear to be a rather technical point, it is precisely the one being made by the Spirit of God. God reckons people righteous because they believe. That is how it was with Abraham, and that is how it is with you! Although commanded to be circumcised, Abraham's faith was the basis of him being declared righteous.

In my judgment, this is precisely the point made by the Spirit in the third chapter of Galatians. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ" 3:26-27). It is not necessary to develop some theological formula allowing us to dissect this statement. It is enough to believe it. This is the same truth reflected in the great apologetic of Paul to the Jews. "And by Him everyone who believes is justified from all things from which you could not be justified by the law of Moses" (Acts 13:39).

A SEAL

Abraham's circumcision was also a "seal," or Divine signet, "of the righteousness that he had by faith while he was still uncircumcised."^{NIV} Abraham's circumcision was a pledge, or personal assurance, that he was righteous before God—not because he was circumcised, but because he believed "in the Lord." His circumcision pointed to what he had, and was intended to assure his heart of that possession.

It is important to remember this is Divine reasoning. This is not intended to be a line item in a finely tuned theological system, and must not be approached in that manner. Men often think there is a need to handle the Word of God in this fashion, but it is not always to their advantage to do so. Here a commanded activity is said to be a "seal," or stamp, of something possessed before the "seal" itself was received. The ensuing argument will confirm the necessity of viewing it in this manner.

Sealed with the Holy Spirit

Those in Christ are said to be "sealed" with the Holy Spirit. This is thrice declared. "Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts" (2 Cor 1:22). "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory" (Eph 1:13-14). "And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption" (Eph 4:30).

Concerning this matter, the Holy Spirit is said to have been sent into our

Abraham's circumcision was a pledge, or personal assurance, that he was righteous before God—not because he was circumcised, but because he believed "in the Lord."

hearts BECAUSE we are sons. In the fullness of the time, Jesus came into the world "to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father" (Gal 4:5-6). While this is not the only approach to our sonship, it is a vital one, and must not be ignored. Those who receive the power, or right, to "become the sons of God" are those who "believe on His (Christ's) name" (John 1:12). That is a foundational view of our relation to God, just as our text is a foundational view of Abraham's relation to God.

THE FATHER OF ALL WHO BELIEVE

^{4:11b} . . . that he might be the father of all those who believe, though they are uncircumcised." The Spirit reasons further with us on this matter. He says that Abraham was pronounced righteous before he was circumcised, in order that "he might be the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised." There cannot be one basis for justification for the Jews and another for the Gentiles. Their dilemma is the same, therefore the remedy must be the same. For that reason, the "father of all those who believe" must receive righteousness on a basis that is common to both Jew and Gentile. That basis is faith. If Abraham had been justified AFTER his circumcision, he could not have been the father of Gentile believers. He was justified, so to speak, in his "gentilehood."

We must be careful not to take this statement beyond its intended meaning.

The point being made is that national and fleshly distinctions—even those imposed by God Himself—do not make men better. They CANNOT be the basis for the conferment of righteousness. Abraham’s faith was counted to him for righteousness while he was yet uncircumcised IN ORDER THAT “he might be the father of all those who believe.”

GLORIOUS COMPLEXITY

Here we are able to perceive something of the depth to which men sank when sin entered into then world. To retrieve men was not a simplistic task, and ought never to be presented as it was.

First, there had to be a progenitor of those who live by faith. Our text is declaring that person to be Abraham. The faith that saves had to have a genesis in a person who would become both an example and a father of following believers.

Second, a law had to be given through which the knowledge of sin could be imparted. That Law would effectively stop every mouth, rendering the whole world guilty before God. The various ceremonies of the Law were vivid pictures of the coming means of salvation. They had no justifying or sanctifying power in themselves, but were only faint outlines of the coming Savior.

Third, there had to be a man, born of woman, who lived an impeccably holy life—without any moral taint. That man must, of His own volition, lay down His life for sinners. He must bear in His body the sins of the world upon the tree. He must defeat the devil, spoil principalities and powers, and triumph over death. He must then ascend into heaven, present His blood as an atonement for sin. Then, from a throne of absolute power and authority, He must bring many sons to glory through His righteous government and effective intercession.

Fourth, to facilitate this great salvation, a message must be declared that announces the expiation and makes known a righteousness from God.

Fifth, the Holy Spirit of God must convince the world of sin, righteousness, and judgment, unveiling the necessity and availability of a conquering Savior. Once sinners are convinced, they are born again “of the Spirit,” who remains with them to complete the work.

Salvation is not possible without any of these elements. What we have in our present text is the affirmation of the first requirement: a progenitor of the faithful. While he is very literally the father of “many nations,” including Jews (from Isaac) and Arabian nomads (from Ishmael), no nation is as significant as the spiritual nation of believers. In his great prophecy following the birth of John the Baptist, Zechariah referred to “our father Abraham” (Lk 1:73). In his great message to the recalcitrant Jews, Stephen referred to “our Father Abraham” (Acts 7:2). The Jews of Jesus’ day frequently referred to Abraham as “our father”

(Rom 3:10). If, therefore, men are to be righteous, they must be MADE righteous by another. Further, there must be a just basis for the conferment of that righteousness.

That basis is established as faith—believing God! In particular, it is believing the record, or testimony, God has given of His Son (1 John 5:10-11).

There is a consistent property in faith, whether it is in Abraham, Moses, David, Paul, or you. Faith does not stagger at the promises of God. It always does what God demands. It always moves the believer to conform his life to the expectations faith produces. That is one of the reasons God can count it to us for, or in the stead of, righteousness. Where these characteristics are not found, faith is not present. This, of course, is the whole point powerfully proclaimed by James (chap 2).

While he is very literally the father of “many nations,” including Jews (from Isaac) and Arabian nomads (from Ishmael), no nation is as significant as the spiritual nation of believers.

FAITH DOES NOT DEPEND ON RITES AND PRIVILEGES

One of the strong affirmations of our text is that faith does not require or depend upon rites and privileges. Abraham believed God and was counted righteous BEFORE the rite of circumcision of the privilege of national status. Faith did not require those things. That did not mean they were useless. It does mean faith can exist independently of them. If this was not the case, the Gentiles could not have faith, for they had neither rite nor privileges according to the flesh.

FAITH HAS MORAL POWER

Faith has moral power that Law cannot impart. It can move a person to obey when nothing else can—not even fear. Noah, for example, “moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house.” But it was only AFTER he had faith (Heb 11:7).

Think of our father Abraham, and of the effective constraining power of his faith. When he was called to a place he would afterward receive, he “obeyed, and he went out, not knowing whether he went” (Heb 11:8). By faith he “sojourned (John 8:39,53). But our text moves beyond the Jewish nation to the multitude of believers in Jesus Christ.

To Gentile Romans Paul refers to “Abraham our father” (4:1). Our text affirms he is the father of Gentiles, or the uncircumcision, who believe (4:12). Later it is declared he is “the father of us all” (4:16). Those who believe on Jesus are part of a spiritual lineage that goes back to Abraham, whether they are Jews or Gentiles.

RIGHTEOUSNESS MUST BE CONFERRED

Let it be clear that righteousness MUST be conferred, imputed, or credited. It cannot be the result of doing, or working. The Spirit has already confirmed “there is none righteous, no not one” in the land of promise,” without ever possessing a bit of it (Heb 11:9). Faith moved him to look “for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God” (Heb 11:10). Although he was “as good as dead,” faith gave Abraham the ability to beget progeny “so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable” (Heb 11:12).

Place a high priority upon faith, and do not despise it, or relegate it to a place of inferiority. God regards it so highly that those possessing it are counted righteous in His sight.

RIGHTEOUSNESS COMES FROM FAITH

Where there is no faith, righteousness cannot be possessed, and where righteousness is not possessed, there can be no salvation. In the imputation of righteousness, the inward man is so impacted that righteous expressions also come from the believer. The character of the individual is changed when righteousness is imputed to him.

It is essential that this be seen, for some have imagined that the presence of faith obviates the need for righteousness. This is not so. If, when righteousness is imputed to the person, he remains essentially unrighteous, God is not glorified. To put it another way, when God imputes “righteousness without works,” it is done in order that truly upright works may be realized. By moving the engine of religion from outward activity to an inward disposition, the standard of conduct is raised. It is not possible to be unholy or disobedient while in fellowship with God.

This is seen in our father Abraham. After Abraham had believed God, and it was imputed to him for righteousness, he was brought into union with the Lord. Of that union, God said, “For I have known him, in order that he may command his children and his household after him, that they keep the way of the LORD, to do righteousness and justice, that the LORD may bring to Abraham what He has spoken to him”^{2NKJV} (Gen 18:19). Apart from acceptance by and affiliation with the Living God, doing righteousness and justice is not possible. Therefore, God focused his attention upon Abraham in order that he might be righteous in his doing. He could not, however, do this unless Abraham was righteous in character. Further, only faith could cause that to occur.

Abraham’s righteousness prompted him to intercede for Sodom (Gen 18:24-32). It provoked him to circumcise Isaac on the eighth day, as God had commanded him earlier (Gen 21:4). It moved him to rise early in the morning to sacrifice Isaac, as God commanded him (Gen 22:3). His faith constrained him to seek a proper wife for Isaac (Gen 24:6-9). It moved him to sojourn “in the land of promise, as in a strange country,” living in tents while looking “for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God” (Heb 11:10). He was a godly man!

Faith, then, closes the gap between men and God in order that He might confer righteousness upon them. Because that blessedness involves the remission of sin, God may now dwell with the individual. In doing this, He is “just,” as well as the “justifier” of him that believes in Jesus (Rom 3:26).

A godly life is the result of Divine intimacy—of being called into the fellowship of God’s Son, Jesus Christ our Lord (1 Cor 1:9). This is involved in the statement of Ephesians 2:10. “For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand that we should walk in them.”^{2NKJV}

Faith, then, closes the gap between men and God in order that He might confer righteousness upon them. Because that blessedness involves the remission of sin, God may now dwell with the individual.

The grace of God effectively teaches us “that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ” (Tit 2:11-13). However, this teaching could NOT take place if you were not accepted and righteous in God’s eyes. Further, you could not be righteous if you did not have faith! Your practical righteousness was preceded by the imputation of God’s righteousness “without works.” It sprang from the righteousness credited to you. When your character changed, your life changed also.

RIGHTEOUSNESS IMPUTED TO THEM ALSO

“^{4:11c} . . . that righteousness might be imputed to them also.” This is a most powerful argument, devastating any notion that national heritage, family lineage, or religious tradition can be the basis for Divine acceptance. Mind you, the Jews boasted in their heritage, thinking that of itself it lifted them above all peoples. The Jews once said to Jesus, “We be Abraham’s seed, and were never in bondage to any man” and “Abraham is our father” (John 8:33,39). They imagined being able to trace their fleshly origin back to Abraham was sufficient.

ABRAHAM’S FAITH

However, Abraham was not received by God because of his flesh, but because of he “believed God.” His faith is what pushed him beyond his peers, bringing him into the realm of blessing. Apart from faith, he was like others.

He Looked Ahead

In a telling remark of the nature of Abraham’s faith, Jesus said of him, “Your father Abraham rejoiced to see My day, and he saw it and was glad” (John 8:56). The NIV reads, “Abraham rejoiced at the thought of seeing my day; he saw it and was glad.” That is, Abraham lived in the prospect of the Seed through whom the whole world would be blessed. This is a rare insight into “our father Abraham.” Although he was given relatively few particulars, this patriarch knew a day of great blessing and benefit was coming—the time, so to speak, of the Seed. He had no greater delight than this glorious prospect. Even while in Canaan, noted for its cultural superiority, his faith moved him to anticipate a greater time and a more perfect residence.

He Saw Christ’s Day

Now, Jesus says that Abraham “saw” His day “and was glad.” What does this mean, for elsewhere Jesus said, “For I tell you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them” (Lk 10:24).

First, Abraham did not see Christ’s day in all of its fulness, as those blessed to sit at his feet and hear His words. While in the flesh, he saw Christ’s day from a great distance, which accentuates the power of faith. But it seems to me there is more to this than that. The last record we have of Abraham pertains to his post-death existence. Enough is said to show us many things. The reference is found in the well known sixteenth chapter of Luke, in Christ’s account of a certain rich man and a poor beggar named Lazarus. Both men died in due time. The rich man, Jesus said, awoke in hell, and in much torment. Lazarus “was carried by the angels into Abraham’s bosom,” as though lovingly embraced by him (Lk 16:22-23).

Lazarus was being “comforted” by Abraham (Lk 16:25). And, how could a man who also died around two thousand years before bring solace to Lazarus? I suggest that it was because he had seen something. His understanding had been enlarged. Indulge me for a moment as I show the evidence of this.

Although he was given relatively few particulars, this patriarch knew a day of great blessing and benefit was coming—the time, so to speak, of the Seed. He had no greater delight than this glorious prospect.

Abraham made several observations to the condemned rich man that are of note.

- ▶ He knew the rich man had his good things in the world.
- ▶ He knew that man was now in torment.
- ▶ He knew Lazarus had experienced evil things in the world.
- ▶ He knew a great fixed gulf was between the departed blessed and cursed, which could not be crossed.
- ▶ He knew the people on earth had Moses and the Prophets, which came hundreds of years after he left the world.
- ▶ He knew if men did not receive God’s Word, they could not be convinced of its truth by one returning from the dead.

If these lesser things were known to Abraham on the other side, how much more should he have been aware of the “Seed” which he so fervently anticipated?

THE POINT OF THE DIVERSION

The point of this brief diversion is to confirm that Abraham’s faith made him unique, not his earthly status or religious achievement. He himself was changed by faith and the consequent imputation of righteousness. The anticipation of the blessing of the world eclipsed his own possession of the promised land. Is that not a marvelous consideration?

RIGHTEOUSNESS IMPUTED TO THEM ALSO

Abraham became the father of the faithful in order that righteousness might also be imputed to “them,” that is, those who believe. While Abraham is “the father of us all,” our righteousness cannot come from him. It must be personally imputed to us because of our personal faith. It is simply not enough to be associated with Abraham, who was among the greatest of our race.

One of the dreadful effects of sectarianism is the idea that being identified with a particular group brings the approval of God. Thus men banter back and forth about what makes the group unique, thereby guaranteeing it of the blessing of the Lord.

- ▶ For some, the whole matter is form or ritual. To go through the proper procedures is the fundamental thing. If the particular church has managed to preserve the more holy routines, participation in that church makes one acceptable to God.
- ▶ For others, the pattern of the church itself is the real issue. Does it have the proper offices, and does it observe the proper ordinances. Are its servants called by the proper names, and are the proper people holding its respective offices?
- ▶ Some conceive the creed, or official statement of beliefs, to be the primary thing. A precise statement of what is officially believed is perceived as outweighing everything else.
- ▶ Still others feel the outstanding matter is the day on which believers gather together. Some insist it is the Sabbath, or seventh day, while others contend it is the first day of the week. The Sabbatarians place a greater stress on this matter.
- ▶ Certain groups accent human experience—visible and audible experience. They state what they perceive to be the fundamental blessing, binding it upon all others. It generally has to do with people being overpowered by God. Such people seem to give no thought to the dreadful condition of a person who must be knocked down by God to be blessed.

► There are also those who make the attire and occupations of the believer the primary marks of distinction. They rally around their perception, and are actually known more for how they look than their affiliation with God.

This is only a sampling of the types of distinctions that presently exist among believers. There are varying degrees of dogmatism and tolerance in all of them, but they are all held to be critical issues.

Not to be Misunderstood

These observations are not to be construed as meaning these matters have no relevance at all, or that how we feel about them is of no consequence. It is not intended to be a sort of scoffing at something perceived to be ignorant and unlearned.

What I am endeavoring to show is the sharp conflict between these approaches and that of our text. Remember, we are at the foundation level, showing what brings men into true accord with the Living God, through Christ, and by the Spirit.

The argument is that being righteous in God's eyes IS the point! Nothing else makes any difference whatsoever if the individual is not righteous. Furthermore, no one can be righteous unless he is MADE righteous. As it is written, "For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous" (Rom 5:19). That can ONLY come through faith, for it is faith that is "counted as righteousness." The premier example of this has been given, and is being expounded. Abraham "believed in the LORD; and He counted it to him for righteousness" (Gen 15:6; Rom 4:3,9,22; Gal 3:6; James 2:23).

PERSONALLY APPROPRIATED

The righteousness of God must be personally appropriated. It cannot be realized by proxy! Abraham had to attain it personally, and so do his children. That is precisely the point of this text: "that righteousness might be imputed unto them also." And how is it that it will be imputed, or credited, to them? Is it because they are in the fleshly lineage of Abraham? Indeed not! When it comes to the progeny that receive righteousness, Abraham is "father of all them that believe."

Where faith is lacking, righteousness will not, and cannot, be found. There is no Divine acceptance where men do not believe God! "But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb 11:6). Jesus has declared, "he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:16).

MAKING THE MATTER PRACTICAL

I have a profound concern for the unacceptable level of faith that exists in the average church. In many congregations and Christian institutions there is a remarkable level of unbelief. One can hardly attend a class or an assembly where this it not made known. It is not at all strange for statements of Scripture to be challenged or questioned. People will often express alarm that God reacted in the manner described in Scripture. Such people are confounded that God "loved Jacob" and "hated Esau". Others marvel that David was a man after His own heart, or that Peter was so highly favored by Jesus. They cannot see that when a person believes God, he pleases God.

God promised Abraham something that was impossible from any human point of view. Abraham believed Him anyway! That is why God imputed righteousness to him. What can be said of the person unable to accept a seven-day creation, or a universal flood, or the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah? What of the one who says the Scriptures are not flawless, or that God cannot send anyone to hell?

What about the sinner who cannot believe his sins can be remitted? Or the pious hypocrite who does not think he has any sin? Ponder the person who is not devoted to the Lord, yet feels qualified to have a leading position among the saints. Consider the individual who sees no need to regularly ingest the Word of God, or fight the good fight of faith, or put on the whole armor of God, or resist the devil!

Do you imagine these are unusual circumstances? Churches throughout our country, and this very city, are filled with people holding these unbelieving persuasions. How can they hope to be accepted by God? Will their association with what is perceived to be the "right church" cover up their unbelief? Indeed, it will not!

GOD WANTS TO BLESS!

God wants to bless humanity! He has a desire to grant His righteousness to those created in His own image. Early in human history He divulged a gracious purpose that would bring this to pass. He showed it to Abraham, and Abraham believed him. In our father Abraham, God revealed what He would do for every soul who believed on Him. He made Abraham a distinguished man among men. In him the Lord revealed what happens when a person will believe Him, and what will occur when He imputes righteousness to that man.

To those who will "have faith in God," He will give righteousness. It is made known in the Gospel and confirmed in Abraham. It is for the Jew and the Gentile as seen in Abraham's righteousness. It was received while he was yet uncircumcised.

Abraham did not have a fine religious heritage. He had no works to present to God that would qualify him for acceptance. He did not have a good understanding of God. But when God spoke to Him, unveiling a blessing that transcended any earthly possibilities, Abraham "believed God." He did it BEFORE he was circumcised! He did it BEFORE he got to Canaan! He did it BEFORE Sarah could conceive or Isaac was born.

What possible reason can be presented for you not believing God? You have every reason to be convinced you

CAN believe God. God has gone on record on this matter, and He will not withdraw His word. Abraham's faith brought righteousness to him before he had the sign of acceptance. God did it this way to convince us righteousness will also be imputed to all who believe, whether they are Jew or Gentile. This is a word worthy of much proclamation. It brings a joy and peace to the soul that cannot be otherwise known.

WALKING IN THE STEPS OF THE FAITH

^{4:12} . . . and the father of circumcision to those who not only are of the circumcision, but who also walk in the steps of the faith which our father Abraham had while still uncircumcised. The precision with which the Holy Spirit speaks is a source of great edification. Notice how He approaches the fatherhood of Abraham. He will teach us the ramifications of being righteous before God. First, He points to our entrance into God's favor. "That he might be the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; that righteousness might be imputed unto them also" (v 11b). But He does not stop there. He now shows us that God's children continue to walk by faith. In fact, that is the secret to their strength. Abraham's children are not only described as those who believe, but also those "who also walk in the footsteps of the faith that our father Abraham had before he was circumcised."^{NIV}

There is a certain progress to faith that must be seen. While faith does have its genesis in our hearts, it must be retained. By that, I mean faith must impact the way we live. The faith must be "kept" in order for the intended benefit to be realized.

It may appear as though the Spirit is referring to two separate classes of people: i.e., "them that believe," and those "who walk in the footsteps of the faith." But this is not the case. These are two stages of spiritual life, not two categories of believers. One is the beginning of that life, the other its progression and culmination. Neither stage is taken for granted, and neither occurs automatically. Abraham had to exert effort to believe God initially. He also had to exert himself to continue to believe God. He was put to the test by both time and circumstance, both of which have proved more than some could bear. Again, this is seen in our father Abraham.

We have an inspired record of one hundred years of Abraham's life. God first appeared to him when he was seventy five years of age (Gen 12:1-4). One hundred years later, he died "in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people" (Gen 25:7-8). During that one hundred years Abraham's faith left footsteps to be followed. From the time God first appeared to him until the day he died, he was noted for his faith. His life was shaped around the promises of God, and his heart was riveted to God's revealed purpose. He lived in the blazing glory of Divine commitment.

- ▶ He left Ur by faith (Gen 12:4).
- ▶ He dwelt in Canaan by faith (Gen 12:6; Acts 7:4)
- ▶ During a famine, he sojourned in Egypt by faith (Gen 12:10-20)
- ▶ By faith he chose to dwell in Canaan following a dispute between his herdsmen and those of Lot (Gen 13:12).
- ▶ He prayed for Abimelech, resulting in his healing and the opening of the wombs of the women in his house (Gen 20:17).
- ▶ By faith he took up arms against Chedorlaomer and the kings that were with him, recovering his nephew Lot and their belongings (Gen 14:1-15).
- ▶ By faith he paid tithes of all the spoils of battle to Melchizedec, priest of the Most High God (Gen 14:18-20).
- ▶ Several years after God's initial appearance to him, Abraham was again visited by God. This time he was told his offspring would be as multitudinous as the stars of the heavens and the sand of the sea. He believed God, even though his own body was as good as dead, and Sarah was barren (Gen 15:1-6; Rom 4:19).
- ▶ God again appears to Abraham, giving him the covenant of circumcision. At ninety-years of age, and by faith, Abraham and all of the males of his household were circumcised (Gen 17:1-23).

- ▶ Heavenly messengers appear to Abraham, confirming that Sarah would have a son about that time next year. Abraham believed God (Gen 18:1-16).
- ▶ When the Lord divulged the eminent destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, by faith Abraham pled for any righteous that were in the cities (Gen 18:20-33).
- ▶ By faith he cast out Hagar and Ishmael, according to Sarah's word, as confirmed by the Lord (Gen 21:10-14).
- ▶ By faith Abraham went to sacrifice Isaac as God commanded him (Gen 22:1-15).
- ▶ By faith Abraham buried Sarah, confessing he was a stranger and a sojourner among those with whom they lived (Gen 23:3-19).
- ▶ By faith he provided a wife for Isaac, being mindful of his covenant with God (Gen 24).
- ▶ According to God's promise, Abraham died in peace, keeping the faith for a full one hundred years (Gen 15:15; 25:7-8).

There is a marvelous example of "the footsteps of faith." Here was a life that was lived in the dominating persuasion of the truth of God's promises.

IN DEFENSE OF ABRAHAM

Some sophists, who have the audacity to stand in criticism of Abraham, remind us that he twice said Sarah was his sister. These judges tell us he lied, and did so out of unbelief. I feel compelled to say a word in defense of our father Abraham.

First, I am more anxious to hear what Abraham has to say about them, than what they have to say about him!

The first occasion

The first occasion took place when Abraham and his household went down to Egypt during a grievous famine in Canaan. As they approached Egypt, Abraham (then Abram) said to Sarai, "Behold now, I know that thou art a fair woman to look upon: Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife: and they will kill me, but they will save thee alive. Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister: that it may be well with me for thy sake; and my soul shall live because of thee" (Gen 12:11-13).

When they came into Egypt, the princes of Pharaoh saw Sarai and told the king about her, "and the woman was taken into Pharaoh's house." We are told he treated Abram well for the sake of Sarai, and "Abram acquired sheep and cattle, male and female donkeys, menservants and maidservants, and camels."^{NIV} However, it did not go well for Pharaoh's house. It is written, "But the LORD inflicted serious diseases on Pharaoh and his household because of Abram's wife Sarai."^{NIV}

Upon discerning that Sarai was actually Abram's wife, the Pharaoh called for him saying, "What is this you have done to me? Why did you not tell me that she was your wife? Why did you say, 'She is my sister'? I might have taken her as my wife. Now therefore, here is your wife; take her and go your way" (Gen 12:13-20). Abram then went his way with all of his household, including Sarai and Lot.

While men have sat in judgment on Abraham for this occasion, it is more than interesting to observe that God sat in judgment on the household of Pharaoh. The Spirit speaks not one syllable of condemnation against Abraham.

While men have sat in judgment on Abraham for this occasion, it is more than interesting to observe that God sat in judgment on the household of Pharaoh. The Spirit speaks not one syllable of condemnation against Abraham.

The Second Occasion

The second occasion took place when Abraham was briefly residing in Gerar. Here they confronted Abimelech, king of Gerar. The Scriptures say, "And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, She is my sister: and Abimelech king of Gerar sent, and took Sarah." We are also told that Sarah said of Abraham, "he is my brother."

Things did not go well for Abimelech. Although a heathen, God came to him "in a dream by night." His words were enough to suddenly awaken any person of sound mind. "Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for she is a man's wife." The king, we are told, had not come near to her. He therefore pled with the Lord. "Lord, will You slay a righteous nation also? Did he not say to me, 'She is my sister'? And she, even she herself said, 'He is my brother.' In the integrity of my heart and innocence of my hands I have done this."^{NKJV}

In a dream, the Lord answered the objection of Abimelech, revealing that He had not allowed him to touch Sarah. "Yes, I know that you did this in the integrity of your heart. For I also withheld you from sinning against Me; therefore I did not let you touch her. Now therefore, restore the man's wife; for he is a prophet, and he will pray for you and you shall live. But if you do not restore her, know that you shall surely die, you and all who are yours." Notice how the Lord sided with Abraham, protected his wife, and told the king to have Abraham pray for him.

Early in the morning Abimelech confronted Abraham. "What have you done to us? How have I offended you, that you have brought on me and on my kingdom a great sin? You have done deeds to me that ought not to be done." Then Abimelech said to Abraham, 'What did you have in view, that you have done this thing?'" Abraham's answer was candid and without guile. "Because I thought, surely the fear of God is not in this place; and they will kill me on account of my wife. But indeed she is truly my sister. She is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife. And it came to pass, when God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said to her, 'This is your kindness that you should do for me: in every place, wherever we go, say of me, 'He is my brother.'"

Abimelech then gave Abraham gifts of sheep, oxen, men servants, women servants, and a thousand pieces of silver. It is then written, "So Abraham prayed unto God: and God healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his maidservants; and they bare children" (Gen 20:1-18).

I have taken the time to deal with these two events because of the seriousness of the charges leveled against Abraham, who is "the father of us all." His critics have displayed an abysmal ignorance of the Word of God and the servant of God. They overlook that Sarah was, indeed, Abraham's half-sister. They also judge Abraham through the eyes of a fuller revelation, not recognizing he had neither Bible nor a table of commandments from God. He was en route to the promised land, and passing through hostile lands.

While the Lord holds up Abraham as the "father of us all," they subject him to demeaning criticisms, attempting to bring him down to the level of mediocre disciples. In so doing, they have injected poison into the bloodstream of the church. Their words cause men to regard Abraham with less honor than God requires. As representatives of God, their role is to speak of Abraham as God has spoken. The other alternative is to say nothing at all.

LIVING BY FAITH

Walking in the steps of the faith of Abraham is living by faith. Early in this Epistle, we were reminded of this fact: "The just shall live by faith" (Rom 1:17). Since Jesus is the "Author and Finisher of our faith" (Heb 12:2), it is not enough to start believing. We must continue to do so.

It should be apparent to us that if our faith is credited to us for righteousness, if we are ever found without faith, we will possess no strange land, he did so by faith. These are "the steps of the faith which our father Abraham had."

This was not a different faith, but the faith he had "while still uncircumcised." It was the faith he "obtained" in Ur, and maintained until he died a hundred years later, when he "gave all that he had unto Isaac" (Gen 25:5).

There is a progression in faith that is essential to remaining righteous before God. Believers are solemnly warned, "Beware, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God" (Heb 3:12). Faith has "footsteps" that are always leading

Walking in the steps of the faith of Abraham is living by faith. Early in this Epistle, we were reminded of this fact: "The just shall live by faith" (Rom 1:17). Since Jesus is the "Author and Finisher of our faith" (Heb 12:2), it is not enough to start believing. We must continue to do so.

righteousness. Remember, "without faith, it is impossible to please God" (Heb 11:6). Abraham's faith in God continued during the twenty-five year wait for the promised seed. It waxed strong in a strange land as well as the land of promise, and in famine as well as in plenty. Even when there was no evidence that he could have a child, he believed! When faced with the barrenness of Sarah, he refused to consider it. His faith stood strong when the word of a cursed city was received, and it rose to the challenge of sacrificing Isaac. While he sojourned in land of promise as in a forward, moving closer to the goal, and further from the curse.

For those who walk in those footsteps, Abraham is their father. If you are in doubt as to how God regards such people, look to Abraham. He is your example and "father." Behold how highly God speaks of him! Consider what marvels he unveils to him! Ponder what is said of him AFTER he left this world!

There you have an index as to how God looks upon those who are willing to believe Him, regardless of circumstance.

CONCLUSION

The passage we have considered is a particularly important one. While it is devastating to institutional religion, it brings great consolation and hope to those who believe God. The imputation of righteousness is not a luxury, nor is it optional. This is the legal side of our salvation, while the remission of sin accents the compassionate side. But both sides are essential, and neither can be relegated to the position of unimportance.

A religion that leads people to imagine they are safe while their faith is weak, or even non-existence, is a delusion from the wicked one. The Jews rested in their external status, and are soundly rebuked by this section of Romans. Jewry, however, stood for the ultimate fleshly institution. It owed its origin, ordinances, and benefits, to the Lord of glory. They had done nothing to deserve this status, and everything to be worthy of it being withdrawn. If this is true of them, it is all the more true of Gentile religion.

You are never more right than when you believe in the Lord, moving out upon His word. You are never more wrong than you doubt Him, and do not move out upon His word. For the believer, that opens the door of hope, for it is never vain to trust the Lord. Faith will always be rewarded by the imputation of righteousness. It is what constrains the Lord to forgive sin, uphold the weak, and cause hope to abound in us through the power of the Holy Spirit.

In dealing with a text like this, I realize there is a certain risk of being misunderstood. This is particularly true among those with a propensity to legalism—a bondage under which I once labored. Some will consider an emphasis on faith to necessarily involve a minimization of obedience. However, it is quite to the contrary. When faith is emphasized, obedience becomes more of a reality. It is the “footsteps of faith” that leads us into all areas of obedience.

Faith that is no larger than a mustard seed will take you further than a mountain of rules and regulations. It will make obedience refreshing and joyful, and remove the grievousness from the commandments.

A people who insist on doctrinal precision, yet are sloppy in their lives and spiritual persuasions bring no glory to God. The church at Ephesus provides a sterling example of this (Rev 2:1-5). Jesus will open a great and effectual door to those who believe, even if their strength has been sapped by trial. He will, because they have kept the faith, cause their enemies to publically admit they are loved by Him, because they kept His word, and did not deny His name (Rev 3:8-9).

But for those souls or institutions that live in practical aloofness from God, there is no blessing to be had from Him. The “blessedness” of our text cannot be experienced apart from faith. The awareness of that condition will exercise an influence upon the soul that makes the individual equal to the difficulties and vicissitudes of life.

Now, be up and “walking in the footsteps of the faith of Abraham.” There are promises to be inherited, and blessings to be enjoyed. There is power to be realized, and fellowship to be experienced. God will credit your faith to you as righteousness, protect you, and speak highly of you. The example of Abraham proves that is the truth.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 15

GOD'S PROMISE REALIZED THROUGH FAITH

^{4:13} For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. ¹⁴ For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect: ¹⁵ Because the law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgression. ¹⁶ Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all, ¹⁷ (As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,) before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were. ¹⁸ Who against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be. ¹⁹ And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb: ²⁰ He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God; ²¹ And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform. ²² And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness. ²³ Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; ²⁴ But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; ²⁵ Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification. Rom 4:13-25, ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

The Spirit, speaking through the book of Romans, is establishing the necessity and effectiveness of a righteousness that comes from God by faith. Men are not to philosophize or speculate about righteousness. No one is righteous by nature. Indeed, no person can become so through the energy of the flesh or keeping a code of law. Furthermore, the wrath of God is revealed “against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men” (1:18). The initial revelation of that wrath took place when Jesus Christ died. While bearing our sins in His body on the tree, the Son was “cursed” and “forsaken” by God (Gal 3:13; Matt 27:46). The ultimate and final revelation of that wrath will take place when the Lord Jesus returns in all of His glory (2 Thess 1:8-9).

During this “day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2), a righteousness from God is offered to humanity through the message of the Gospel of Christ. That righteousness is appropriated by faith. This fundamental aspect of the Gospel has been almost totally obscured by institutional religion. The thrust of Christian labors is often thought to be recruitment, or the making of disciples. While there is an element of truth to this view, it has been greatly corrupted by those committed to building the institution. Once the truth of discipleship is known, the critical role of obtaining a righteousness from God becomes apparent. In confirmation of this, ponder our Lord's comments about being His disciple.

- ▶ “If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple” (Lk 14:26). No person can stand between the disciple and the Master. Personal earthly preferences cannot be allowed to compete with allegiance to the Savior.
- ▶ “And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple” (Lk 14:27). Those who do not embrace the repercussions of following Jesus will not be received by Him. The world will become crucified to the real disciple, and he to the world.
- ▶ “So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple” (Lk 14:33). Personal possessions must not be allowed the prominent place in the disciple’s life. Everything must be left to follow Him. This is a matter of the heart, not a mere external procedure.
- ▶ “If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it” (Lk 9:23-24). Bearing the cross, or willingly embracing the rejection of the world and its hardships resulting from faith, must be done on a daily basis. An attempt to retain ones own life in this world will result in its sure loss.

When “making disciples” is viewed from this outlook, a whole different perspective is seen. Attempts to make the Gospel palatable to alienated hearts will be seen as foolish and reproachful to Christ. Efforts to obtain mere numbers will also be seen as vain and out of harmony with the will of the Lord.

THE POINT

There is a significant point to these observations. They are not to be seen as a mere diatribe against institutional fanatics. The point is simply this. Unless a person is a real disciple of Jesus, according to His own criterion, the righteousness of God is not perceived as necessary. It may be viewed as interesting, but never as essential. The alarming lack of interest in this subject is indication of the failure of men to become followers of Jesus. They have not put everyone else, and their own life as well, in subservience to Jesus, and thus think nothing of obtaining a righteousness from God. They have not taken up their cross daily, and thus do not have a dominating conscience of their standing before God. They have not forsaken everything, and therefore have no sense of their critical need of a righteousness from God.

The first three chapters of Romans address the need of following Christ and forsaking everything else. It accomplishes this by confirming the vanity and futility of all effort and relationships apart from Christ and a solid faith in Him. We only obtain significance before God, and are accepted of Him, when we are righteous. That righteousness can only come from Him through faith—faith that has come by hearing the powerful Gospel of Christ.

WHAT IS BEFORE US

Now the Spirit will show the relationship between a righteousness from God, the promise of God, and faith. He will trace the conferment of righteousness back to the promise of God. He will also confirm that only faith can take hold of the promise of God, which cannot be perceived or realized until the promise is believed. There is an interrelationship between the three that is most edifying. Promise, faith, and righteous are a threefold cord that cannot be easily broken (Eccl 4:12).

NOT THROUGH THE LAW

“^{4:13} For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.” Here is an expression that is pregnant with meaning. There is a threefold accent here that must be seen. First, the purpose of God. Second, Divine activity. Third, the individual realization of blessing. By “the purpose of God,” I mean what the Lord intended to do, independent of man’s worthiness or desire. By “Divine activity,” I mean God was on the initiative to fulfill His intention, declaring a promise that reflected His purpose, and which He fully intended to bring to pass. By “the individual realization of the blessing,” I am pointing out this is not merely a theoretical overview of possibilities. It is not a theological tenet, to be debated by men.

This is a summary view of salvation—what God has all along intended for His children. It began with Abraham, but was not proposed to end with him. What was experienced by our father Abraham was an introduction of both the reality and surety of what God determined for all He “foreknew” (Rom 8:29-30).

AN OVERVIEW

This is a most remarkable overview of the intricacies of God’s “great salvation.” Three key factors are cited: “righteousness,” “the promise,” and “faith.” All three have their origin in God Himself. The righteousness is “from God” (Phil 3:9). The promise was given by God (Heb 6:13). The “faith” was obtained from Him (2 Pet 1:1). From the higher view, Deity is the common factor in all of these things. From the lower perspective, they are all directed toward humanity.

The promise of God and the righteousness from God are both apprehended by faith. Further, the promise of God relates specifically to the righteousness that comes from Him through faith. It is apparent that all boasting is excluded by this arrangement.

This is not a commentary on something exclusive to Abraham. Nor, indeed, does it refer to God's dealings with the Jews alone. This is an inspired explanation of how God accomplished His desire for humanity, who had sinned and come short of His glory. From any view but that of heaven, the situation is an impossible one. Yet, infinite wisdom and relentless love brought it to pass. All of this was done without God forfeiting or ignoring a single facet of His character. It was also accomplished within the circumference of the human will. No one has ever, or can ever, receive a righteousness from God that does not want it.

THE PROMISE

What is "the promise?" This is the Divine commitment to Abraham, given at different times with varying degrees of elaboration. The first expression of it is found in Genesis 12:2-3. "I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing . . . in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."

The fifteenth and seventeenth chapters of Genesis refer to this blessing as a "covenant" God made with Abraham (Gen 15:18; 17:2-21). This confirmed the determination of God to fulfill His good pleasure.

In the twenty-second chapter of Genesis, God again affirmed His intention: "in blessing I will bless thee . . . and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed" (vs 17-18).

The "promise," therefore, was God's commitment to bless "all nations."

The relevance of this to us is confirmed in the third chapter of Galatians, where the covenant God made with Abraham is declared to be the New Covenant which we enjoy in Christ Jesus. "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect" (3:16-17). The ultimate offspring of Abraham was the Lord Jesus Christ, in Whom the promised blessing is realized.

Furthermore, the New Covenant is, in fact, the first, or original, covenant, as this text declares. The Law, never intended to be a means of justification, "was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made" (Gal 3:19). All of this emphasizes that God's intention was never to merely direct humanity. It has always been to bless them. In order for that to take place, however, He gave the Law to tutor men concerning their absolute need of a Savior and a righteousness from God.

From any view but that of heaven, the situation is an impossible one. Yet, infinite wisdom and relentless love brought it to pass. All of this was done without God forfeiting or ignoring a single facet of His character. It was also accomplished within the circumference of the human will.

THE HEIR OF THE WORLD

What an intriguing expression: "that he should be heir of the world." If you are ever tempted to think of salvation as something small and inconsequential, ponder the promise that Abraham would be "heir of the world!" Other versions read, "that the earth would be his heritage,"^{BBE} "to give the whole earth to Abraham,"^{NLT} "should inherit the world."^{NJB}

The Genesis record of God's promise to Abraham does not speak of him being an "heir of the world." There we read the following expressions: "in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed" (12:3), "in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed" (22:18). The specific land promised to Abraham was Canaan

(Gen 17:8). The boundaries of the land were even specified (Gen 15:18-21). How is it, then, that the Spirit introduces the thought of Abraham being an "heir of the world."

The Fulness of the Promise

The Spirit is viewing the full extent of the promise to be realized through Christ Jesus. That dimension was so large it could not be expressed in spiritually primitive times. Men must be reconciled to God and indwelt by the Holy Spirit to comprehend the fulness of the promise made to Abraham.

The Psalmist expressed the promise more fully. ". . . but those that wait upon the LORD, they shall inherit the earth. . . But the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace . . . For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth" (Psa 37:9,11,22).

The Lord Jesus also referred to this blessing. "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt 5:5).

In the book of Hebrews, the Spirit takes the matter even further. "It is not to angels that he has subjected the world to come, about which we are speaking. But there is a place where someone has testified: 'What is man that you are mindful of him, the son of man that you care for him? You made him a little lower than the angels; you crowned him with glory and honor and put everything under his feet.' In putting everything under him, God left nothing that is not subject to him. Yet at present we do not see everything subject to him."

Until that complete blessing, we “see” the Lord Jesus, the glorified and consummate Man, crowned with glory and honor, superintending the whole world. He is God’s pledge of the time when the “seed of Abraham” will assume the government of the whole world.

If we doubt this will be the case, the Lord spoke through Daniel of this very blessing. “Then the sovereignty, power and greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven will be handed over to the saints, the people of the Most High . . .”^{NIV} (Dan 7:27).

Ultimate Objective

The term “heir of the world,” therefore, views the promise from the viewpoint of God’s ultimate objective. He has determined to gather everything together into one perfectly harmonious whole. There is a Divine purpose, designed in Christ, “to be put into effect when the times will have reached their fulfillment--to bring all things in heaven and on earth together under one head, even Christ”^{NIV} (Eph 1:9-10). At that time, the promise that Abraham, including “his seed,” would be “heir of the world” will be fulfilled.

Other inspired expressions that speak of this glorious fulfillment are as follows. “If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him . . .” (2 Tim 2:12). “To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in My throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with My Father in his throne” (Rev 3:21). “And he that overcometh, and keepeth My works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of My Father” (Rev 2:26-27). “. . . and they shall reign for ever and ever” (Rev 22:5).

Oh, the wonder of the salvation that is “in Christ Jesus with eternal glory” (2 Tim 2:10). Believers must discipline their souls and minds not to think of salvation only in regards to the resolution of earthly circumstances, or the experience of Divine blessing while we remain “in the body.” Much of contemporary Christianity is on this basis. For that reason, it is highly restrictive to the soul, hampering the human spirit, and hiding the good things of God. At some point our souls must soar higher than this world, and consider things yet to come. God has made promise concerning inheriting the whole world.

HIS SEED

God’s dealings with Abraham always include his “seed,” or descendants. “. . . My covenant between Me and thee and thy seed after thee” (Gen 17:7), “thou, and thy seed . . . you and thy seed after thee” (17:9-10).

In an introductory way, Abraham was promised the whole world. In the most precise way, the Lord Jesus, his “Seed,” is the appointed “Heir of all things.” In the inclusive sense, and because we are “accepted in the Beloved” (Eph 1:6), we are also Abraham’s “seed, and heirs according to the promise.”

In the New Covenant, Abraham is not considered independently of his offspring. Ultimately, Abraham’s “Seed” was Christ Jesus. As it is written, “Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy Seed, which is Christ” (Gal 3:16). Thus, in the most complete sense, the Lord Jesus Christ is the One “appointed Heir of all things” (Heb 1:2).

Lest some be tempted to think this circumstance removes the subject at hand from us, the Spirit affirms that our identity with Christ constitutes us Abraham’s seed also. “And if ye be Christ’s, then are ye Abraham’s seed, and heirs according to the promise” (Gal 3:29). Thus those who are in Christ Jesus are also said to inherit all things. As it is written, “He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son” (Rev 21:7).

A Brief Summary

In an introductory way, Abraham was promised the whole world. In the most precise way, the Lord Jesus, his “Seed,” is the appointed “Heir of all things.” In the inclusive sense, and because we are “accepted in the Beloved” (Eph 1:6), we are also Abraham’s “seed, and heirs according to the promise.” The text, therefore, is most relevant to us.

NOT THROUGH THE LAW

The Spirit is showing us the contradiction of Law to faith in the matter of appropriating righteousness. The promise of Abraham becoming an “heir of the world” was not given upon the basis of law-keeping. In fact, the Law was not given until four hundred and thirty years AFTER the promise was made. The promise of heirship was not a reward for keeping the Law.

Applying Old Covenant Promises

The Law promised unparalleled prosperity to the one who was flawlessly obedient to its demands. The blessings would even “overtake” the people, if they hearkened to the voice of the Lord. “Blessed shalt thou be in the city, and blessed shalt thou be in the field. Blessed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep. Blessed shall be thy basket and thy store. Blessed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out” (Deut 28:2-6).

Some today are saying these promises apply to those in Christ Jesus. Their reason if such were promised under the Old Covenant, how much more are they applicable under the New and better covenant. But their reasoning is flawed. First, the promises were based upon keeping the Law, not upon faith. Second, they had to do with this world, not the world that is to come. Third, God has provided “some better thing” for those who are in Christ Jesus (Heb 11:40).

What is blessing in the city and in the field compared to being an “heir of the world?” Who is willing to compare the blessing of the fruit of our body, the ground, and flocks of animals with being an “heir of the world?” What person will turn his attention to the basket and the storehouse being blessed when God speaks of being “an heir of the world?” And who will settle for being blessed in coming in and going out when they can be “an heir of the world?” Such thinking is too small for those who have been reconciled to God. We can have higher thoughts.

Not only were these blessings

Not only is the promise of being an “heir of the world” not brought about by keeping the Law, it is not even in harmony with the principle of the Law. The Law postulates waywardness in man. It was given to convince of sin, and stop the boasting mouth. The Law presented moral challenges men could not meet. It provided a sacrificial system to address the imperfection of men. It did not speak of entering heaven, eternal life, or being reconciled to God. It provided no cleansing for the conscience, power for living, or Savior from sin.

FAITH > RIGHTEOUSNESS > HEIR

thought. Its professed experts are masters of little things. Nearly the whole tenor of modern religion not only encourages minuscule thinking, but actually discourages deep thinking and extensive meditation. This is seen in the songs they sing, programs they promote, and the men they exalt.

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF FAITH

How is that Abraham became qualified to be “an heir of the world?” It was because he was righteous, for only a righteous person can inherit the world. This righteousness, however, was not developed by Abraham. Rather, it was “imputed” to him upon the basis of his faith. He possessed the righteousness by imputation because he “believed God.”

Some might object that Abraham was NOT qualified to be “heir of the world,” but was totally unworthy of such a magnanimous blessing. From an earthly perspective, this is true. But there is another view—the TRUE one. Our text states the case clearly. He WAS qualified because he WAS righteous. Further, he WAS because he believed God! That is how the New Covenant works. Those who believe on Christ are counted righteous, and those who are counted righteous are made heirs.

In my judgment, the contemporary church is afflicted with the virus of small thought. Its professed experts are masters of little things. Nearly the whole tenor of modern religion not only encourages minuscule thinking, but actually discourages deep thinking and extensive meditation.

contingent upon the DOING of men, they also assumed enmity all around. They assumed the need for replenishment and the presence of death and corruption. Remove these factors, and they have no significance whatsoever.

Being an “heir of the world” assumes the removal of all hostile forces and the presence of perfect peace. There is no need for flocks to increase, or to store up food for the time of need.

Not Through the Law

Therefore, a promise of this magnitude—becoming “an heir of the world”—could not be realized through the Law. If men did not have their storehouse blessed through Law, how could they ever hope to inherit the whole world? You cannot earn the remission of your sins—the entry point of Divine acceptance. It should be apparent you cannot earn the world as your reward—the consummation of Divine acceptance.

In my judgment, the contemporary church is afflicted with the virus of small

This all may appear rather technical and inconsequential, but we must not allow ourselves to think in such a shallow manner. If God could not make Abraham an “heir” without him being righteous, then we should certainly regard righteousness as being of the utmost importance. Also, if men cannot be “made righteous” (Rom 5:19) apart from faith, then a high priority must be placed upon believing God.

Because this subject will be developed at length in the succeeding passage, we will proceed to the next verse.

THE LAW VOIDS FAITH

“¹⁴ For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect: ¹⁵ Because the law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgression.” This is an unusually strong affirmation. Think of these statements: “faith is made void” and “the promise made of none effect.” The meaning is that BECAUSE faith is made void, the promise CANNOT be fulfilled. Arresting words, indeed!

Other versions read, “faith is made void and the promise is nullified,”^{NASB}

“faith has no value and the promise is worthless,”^{NIV} “faith is useless. And in that case, the promise is also meaningless,”^{NLT} and “faith is worthless and the promise is without force.”^{NJB}

What is it that voids faith, making it useless? And how can a promise given by the Almighty God lose its effectiveness and become meaningless? Some would contend that neither things is possible. The Spirit affirms there is a condition that introduces both things into human experience. It is a tragedy that any person would embrace a theology that made the acceptance of these things unlikely, if not impossible.

If the inheritance is obtained through “the law,” or by a system of law-keeping, faith “has no value.” Because of that condition, the promise of God is “meaningless,” for there is no way for it to be realized.

The Law is Not of Faith

The Spirit is making a particularly weighty point. I fear it is little known, if recognized at all, in the church-circles with which I am most familiar. The Law is actually contrary to faith, and does not even allow for its entrance, to say nothing of its maintenance. This is not a mere human conjecture, but a Divine affirmation. “And the law is not of faith: but, The man that doeth them shall live in them” (Gal 3:12).

The Law did not depend upon believing, but on DOING. Faith was not required to do the Law. That is the meaning of the Galatians text. Other versions accentuate this reality. “The law is not based on faith; on the contrary, ‘The man who does these things will live by them,’^{NIV} ‘But the law does not rest on faith; on the contrary, ‘Whoever does the works of the law will live by them.’^{NRSV} ‘The law is not on the principle of faith; but, He that shall have done these things shall live by them.’^{DARBY} ‘The Law is based not on faith but on the principle, whoever complies with it will find life in it.’^{NJB}

The Law did not require faith in God or the anticipation of the Son of God. There was no commandment to believe God, and no promise given to those who did believe God.

Those who were under the Law were given no advantage in believing. This is confirmed by their rejection of the Savior of the world, Who came to them (John 1:11). Even when the thundering of the Law was still ringing in their ears, the Israelites were noted for unbelief, not faith. They perceived the voice of the Lord (which can be believed, as seen in our father Abraham) as the source of death, not life. Thus they requested of Moses, “Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die” (Ex 20:19).

The Law has nothing whatsoever to do with man as a believer, but deals with him exclusively as a doer.

Faith Cannot Function Under Law

Because the Law “is not of faith,” and offers no sustenance for it, faith cannot function under the Law. As soon as the soul depends upon the Law, and consequently upon ones own doing, faith is voided or nullified.

The Spirit addresses this matter in Galatians also. Each time the attempt to appropriate righteousness through the Law is mentioned, extraordinarily hard words are used. “I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain” (Gal 2:21). “Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace” (Gal 5:4). Thus we have the effects of trying to be justified under Law powerfully stated.

- ▶ Faith is made void and useless.
- ▶ The promise of God is without force and meaningless.
- ▶ Christ is dead in vain.
- ▶ Christ is become of no effect.
- ▶ Men are thus fallen from grace.

I ask you, is it possible for a more dreadful condition to be contemplated? Why is it that men continue to seek justification by means of the Law? Why do they approach salvation as though it were the result of adherence to a moral code? It is because they imagine they have more power than they really do. They have not perceived the invincibility of sin apart from faith. But God will have none of their reasoning. The Law cannot produce a righteous man, and no amount of human reasoning can change that fact.

THE LAW WORKS WRATH

However, the Law is not powerless. There is something it does, and very effectively. The “law works wrath,” or “brings about wrath.”^{NASB} The very moment a person begins to think righteousness can be produced by keeping the Law, the wrath of God “comes.”

The Law cannot bring grace to the soul, and how sorely grace is needed! But it is too heavy for Law to carry, and does not fit into the system of Law. One person has said, “It is indeed the nature of every law to afford the opportunity of transgression.”^{ROBERT HALDANE} No law makes provision for the exercise of mercy. It is inherent in law to demand perfect obedience. That is why is “works wrath.”

For a moment, let us ponder how the law works upon the conscience of men who seek justification from it. The more the Law tells what we ought and ought not to do, the more the sinful nature rises to prominence. As it is written, “But sin, seizing the opportunity afforded by the commandment, produced in me every kind of covetous desire. For apart from law, sin is dead. Once I was alive apart from law; but when the commandment came, sin sprang to life and I died. I found that the very commandment that was intended to bring life actually brought death ^{NIV} (Rom 7:8-11).

With a specificity than is unparalleled, Paul confessed, "But in order that sin might be recognized as sin, it produced death in me through what was good, so that through the commandment sin might become utterly sinful" ^{NIV} (Rom 7:13).

When the Law entered, it brought no faith and produced no hope. Rather, it is written, "The law was added so that the

In such a case, the Lord does not look for a reason to save, but for a perfect and unwavering obedience. When it is not found, His wrath is focused upon the transgressor, for God has no other alternative.

Legal Systems

I must draw some conclusions from these weighty considerations. Too much theology does not reason upon the truth, drawing from it intended implications.

If the things that have been affirmed are true, then the greatest disservice anyone could bring to the sons of men is a system of Law for justification. When rule-keeping is introduced as the work within the stricture of Law, for faith cannot survive there. You see, then, what a serious condition has been set before us.

NO LAW, NO TRANSGRESSION

Here is a statement virtually unknown in some circles. "Where no law is, there is no transgression." The next chapter will affirm essentially the same thing. "For until the law sin was in the world: but sin is not imputed when there is no law" (Rom 5:13).

This statement is made in support of the affirmation, "The Law works wrath." It is as though the Spirit said, "Where law is, there must be transgression, and only where there is no law is it possible for there to be no transgression." The very existence of the Law confirms the guilt of humanity. It substantiates the propensity all men have to sin, which only needs an occasion to rise to the surface.

Thus it is written, the Law "was added because of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made" (Gal 3:19). There was a limitation placed on the administration of the Law: "until the Seed to whom the promise referred had come." ^{NIV} Because of this circumstance, "the promise" could not be based upon Law, which was intended to be a temporary arrangement. It could only exist where sin and the sin nature was present. The inheritance, however, looked beyond the temporal realm, to the eternal order, when the promise of being an "heir of the world" would be fulfilled.

The "promise" is founded upon the removal of sin. To put it another way, the forgiveness of sin, the covering of iniquities, and the refusal of God to impute sin (4:6-8). As will be further substantiated in the next chapter, our standing before God is founded upon the absence of sin, not its presence. Law, on the other hand, is based upon the presence of sin, and the need to make it known.

It may be argued that the New Covenant still acknowledges the presence of sin. After all, provision is made for forgiveness (1 John 1:7,9) and an

First, faith cannot exist under such a system. That is why legalists are virtually void of Divine power. The "exceeding greatness" of God's power is exclusively toward those "who believe" (Eph 1:19). Thus law-binders are thrown into a serious quandary. They cannot become righteous because they do not have faith. And, they cannot have faith because they are under the Law.

trespass might increase ^{NIV} (Rom 5:20).

See, then, the associations of the Law, and let them "sink down into your ears." Add these to the effects of the Law enumerated under the heading, "Faith Cannot Function Under the Law."

- ▶ Sin seized an opportunity through the commandment of the Law.
- ▶ Working through the Law, sin produces every kind of sin within the individual.
- ▶ When the commandment came, sin sprang to life and men died.
- ▶ The commandment that offered life through doing, actually generated death.
- ▶ The Law produced death.
- ▶ It caused the trespass to increase.

More specifically, the "wrath" mentioned is the judgment of God. The Law does not awaken the compassion of God, but His appraisal of the individual.

way of appropriating righteousness drastic consequences take place.

First, faith cannot exist under such a system. That is why legalists are virtually void of Divine power. The "exceeding greatness" of God's power is exclusively toward those "who believe" (Eph 1:19). Thus law-binders are thrown into a serious quandary. They cannot become righteous because they do not have faith. And, they cannot have faith because they are under the Law.

Second, any professed faith they are thought to possess is useless. Their empty intellectualism cannot reach into heaven, or take hold of the effectiveness of Christ's death. Thus, for them, Christ died in vain.

Third, their insistence on being justified by Law puts them outside the circumference of grace. Grace cannot “Advocate” (1 John 2:1). Indeed, this is true. However, this is a temporary arrangement until we are delivered from “the body of this death” (Rom 4:25; Phil 4:20-21). In “the world to come,” every vestige of sin will be removed, and we will no longer contend with a recalcitrant nature. There will be no need for conviction or remission, for sin will not exist in any form. Then the saying will be brought to its fulfillment: “Where there is no law, there is no transgression.”

This is precisely why the promise was given to Abraham before the Law, and was not based upon the Law. The purpose of God is “eternal” (Eph 3:11). The promise regards an “eternal inheritance” (Heb 9:15) and “eternal life” (1 John 2:25). The realization of such a marvelous promise, therefore, cannot be on the basis of Law, for Law works wrath, not blessing. Further, the need for Law accents the need for something being received from God through grace. Law proves the impotence of men to measure up to the Divine standard on their own.

BY FAITH THAT IT MIGHT BE BY GRACE

“¹⁶ Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all, ¹⁷ (As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,) before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were.”

The reasoning of this section of Romans is so powerful, one wonders why the Christian world has not embraced it with heart and mind. Instead, it has become a battle ground for renegade theologians. Among other things, this confirms the utter corruption of “the carnal mind,” which is “enmity against God” (Rom 8:7). You can educate such a mind, even culturing it with religious discipline, but it still cannot receive the things of God. It is ever true, “But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Cor 2:14).

IT IS OF FAITH

The “it” that depends upon faith is “the promise,” or more particularly, the consummation of the promise. The NIV reads, “Therefore, the promise comes by faith.” The “therefore” refers to the impossibility of such a promise being realized through the Law, which “works wrath.” The Revised version says the fulfillment of the promise “depends on faith.” The NLT reads, “So that’s why faith is the key!”

The clear implication is that apart from faith, it is not possible for this promise to be realized. The promise of being an “heir of the world” will never come because we have fulfilled the demands of a law. It will only come when we believe the One who made the promise.

You should also see in this passage the applicability of “the promise” to all who are in Christ Jesus. This promise is for all the seed, not Abraham alone. Let no soul think of barely making it to glory, or having a “cabin in the corner of glory land.” Christ has ushered in an era where souls become “heirs of the world.” If you think in terms of such largeness, it will situation can only be accomplished by the love of God. Apart from that, there is not one shred of hope for humanity.

Works cannot take hold of grace, for the law stands between the one working for salvation and the grace that is required. If one insists upon depending upon self-effort to gain the promise of God, then Law alone can administrate such an attempt. The Law cannot lift us. It can only point out where we are, and the utter hopelessness of our condition.

How different is the grace of God. It

Let no soul think of barely making it to glory, or having a “cabin in the corner of glory land.” Christ has ushered in an era where souls become “heirs of the world.” If you think in terms of such largeness, it will help to overthrow any trust in works. The promise is so extensive that it will not fit into the restricted bag of works.

help to overthrow any trust in works. The promise is so extensive that it will not fit into the restricted bag of works. You simply will not be able to think of being an “heir of the world” within the context of duty. But faith is well able to hold such greatness.

THAT IT MIGHT BE BY GRACE

Here we learn more of the nature of our Lord. Salvation MUST come by grace. It will not and cannot come by any other means. If Divine favor is not the spring from which life comes, it will not come. The Spirit has already proved that Jew and Gentile are alike under the dominion of sin. The extrication of men from this is “through grace” that we believe, which is itself a most marvelous accomplishment (Acts 18:27). Tracing salvation back to its ultimate cause, the Spirit affirms, “by grace ye are saved,” and “For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God” (Eph 2:5,8). There simply is no other way for sinners to be saved. God’s grace, favor, and mercy are the only root from which the salvation of sinners can sprout. It is the only well from which the water of life can be drawn.

And here is the marvel of it all: only faith can take hold of grace. The realization of the promise of being an “heir of the world” comes through faith so that it CAN be by grace. Further, it must be “by grace,” for there is no other way for guilty sinners to be received by God. The grace of God “brings salvation” (Tit 2:11), but only those who have faith can receive it.

In this text, grace is contrasted with works. The Spirit has already affirmed “There is none who does good, no, not one” (3:12). Jesus Himself declared, “No one is good but One, that is, God” (Matt 19:17). Therefore, human goodness, or morality, cannot be the basis for salvation. This is the meaning of the Spirit’s words in Romans 11:6. “And if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace. But if it is of works, it is no longer grace; otherwise work is no longer work.”^{NKJV} In confirmation of this circumstance, our text says “the promise” is appropriated by faith in order that God’s grace can deliver it in all of its fullness.

TO THE END

Over and above the personal realization of “the promise,” there is a Divine intention to be accomplished. The commitment is fulfilled by grace “in order that the promise may be certain to all the descendants, not only to those who are of the Law, but also to those who are of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all.”^{NASB} The wording of the text may appear strange to some. Why doesn’t the Spirit say “not only those who are Jews, but also those who are Gentiles?” Since Abraham is “the father of us all,” whether Jew or Gentile, why contrast those “who are of the Law” with “those who are of the faith of Abraham?”

Those who “are of the Law” are the Jews. They were tutored by the Law, which was their “Schoolmaster,” to bring them to Christ. Faith “came” to them releasing them from the Law (Gal 3:24-25). While their faith made them children of Abraham, believing Gentiles actually had more in common with Abraham than the Jews. Abraham “believed God” without the Law, and before his circumcision. “The faith of Abraham,” refers to this condition—believing God without being under the Law.

Only grace could bring those with the Law and those without it together. Only grace could make the promise of being heirs of the world secure to all the spiritual offspring of Abraham; i.e., both Jew and Gentile.

The Divine interest in “all the seed” receiving the promise is noteworthy. Many of the Jews felt this was not possible—that the Gentiles could not be accepted in their uncircumcised state. Thus some of the Jews aggressively taught, “Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved” (Acts 15:1). Conversely, many Gentiles of our time are dubious about those who are “of the Law” being saved, feeling they have been altogether cut off. There is a remnant in both categories, and God has established the means of becoming righteous so that both are ensured of their promises were made. Works cannot unite us with him, for he was declared righteous BEFORE he worked. In him God first revealed this principle: “God imputes righteousness apart from works” (4:6).

Although I have mentioned this before, I am compelled to do so once more time. Salvation is not as simplistic as some have imagined. Although it is not so complicated it is difficult to appropriate, its involvements are marked by Divine complexity. Your salvation involves Abraham and the Jews as well as yourself and the Gentiles. Throughout the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, there is unfailing consideration of Abraham and the promises made to him. It contains Divinely appointed procedures that ensure that “all the descendants” of Abraham may take hold of the promise. It should be obvious that “the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God” are intricately woven throughout the fabric of this “great salvation.”

In this text, grace is contrasted with works. The Spirit has already affirmed “There is none who does good, no, not one” (3:12). Jesus Himself declared, “No one is good but One, that is, God” (Matt 19:17). Therefore, human goodness, or morality, cannot be the basis for salvation.

A FATHER OF MANY NATIONS

The Lord is ever mindful of His promise that Abraham would be the “father of many nations” (Gen 17:4,5).

Originally, the Lord said to Abraham, “And I will make of thee a great nation” (Gen 12:2). From the standpoint of the flesh, there was another great nation Abraham also fathered through Ishmael. After Hagar and Ishmael had been expelled from Abraham’s house, the angel of the Lord told Hagar, “Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for I will make him a great nation” (Gen 21:18). At least twelve nations sprang from Ishmael (Gen 25:13).

The most significant nations springing from Abraham, however, were spiritual. Although it did not seem apparent at the time God first made the promise to Abraham, that promise would be extended to the Gentiles, many of whom would be grafted into the Jewish tree springing from the root of Abraham (Rom 11:17). The vastness of Abraham’s seed cannot be numbered (Rev 7:9) participation in the promise.

Faith is the factor that secures the promise for “all the seed.” As soon, therefore, as men begin to make “works” their emphasis, they at once deprive some of the “seed” of the intended blessing. By so doing, they become competitors with God rather than participants in His purpose.

Faith unites us with Abraham, “who is the father of us all,” and to whom the

Our text declares that Abraham being “the father of many nations” is realized by the promise being conferred by grace through faith. It is for all who believe. Or, as our text states it, “Therefore, the promise comes by faith, so that it may be by grace.”^{NIV} Believing, or possessing faith, connects us with Abraham. Consequently, it also brings to us the promise made to Abraham, that he would be “the heir of the world.”

BEFORE GOD

Abraham’s fatherhood is not to be considered after the flesh, even though many peoples sprang from him. His fatherhood is primarily “before God,” not men. The first phrase of verse seventeen is a parenthetical expression: “(As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations),” confirming that Abraham’s fatherhood is based upon the promise of God. When this explanatory phrase is removed, the verses reads this way: “who is the father of us all before Him whom he believed.” Other versions read, “who is the father of us all . . . in the presence of Him whom he believed,”^{NKJV} “who is the father of us all . . . in the sight of Him whom he believed,”^{NASB} “He is our father in the sight of God.”^{NIV}

This is another way of saying Abraham is the spiritual father of those who believe on Jesus. This destroys any confidence in the flesh, so that the Jews could not boast in tracing their lineage back to Abraham—something they were prone to do (Matt 3:9; John 8:39,53).

Strange Reasoning?

This line of reasoning may appear strange to some. It is rarely heard in our time, yet is a vital aspect of viewing our acceptance in Christ. The idea is that in Abraham we behold the manner in which men are justified, or become righteous before God. There is where we can obtain a clearer picture of the cause of righteousness. When we ponder whether or not we are righteous before God, we must look to Abraham. He “believed God, and it was imputed to him for righteousness.” It is no different with you. Do you believe God? Have you embraced the record He has given of His Son? Then He has given you righteousness. The blessedness David described applies to you. “Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin” (Rom 4:6-8).

GOD QUICKENS THE DEAD

BEFORE Abraham had offspring, God called him a “a father of many nations.” This was not an analysis of nations already in existence. Such appraisals belong to men, but not to God! The great God of heaven “gives life to the dead . . .” This was corroborated in the person of Abraham. When Isaac was conceived, “he considered not his own body now dead” from the standpoint of reproduction (Rom 4:19). Indeed, as the Spirit says in Hebrews, “Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in creation, and there are aspects of the new order in which He also does this. The offspring of Abraham are a case in point. That is why it says of God, “and calleth those things which be not as though they were” (17b). This language does not mean God speaks as though they were in existence even though they are not. Rather, it means it brings them into existence from nothing. Other versions read, “and calls into being that which does not exist,”^{NASB} “and calls into existence the things that do not exist,”^{NRSV} “and who brings into existence what didn’t exist before,”^{NLT} “and calls into existence what does not yet exist.”^{NLT}

It is as though God rejuvenated Abraham and Sarah in their old age, enabling them to do the impossible. That rejuvenation did not come from medical wisdom, or any other form of worldly knowledge. By His mighty word, Abraham became capable of bearing children, and Sarah was no longer barren. God called these conditions into existence.

The Way God Speaks

This text also emphasizes that God spoke to Abraham in view of what He Himself (the living God) would do. He did not address Abraham from the natural point of view, but from the standpoint of what He would do. This is involved in a very wonderful expression concerning God’s foreknowledge. “Known to God from eternity are all His works”^{NKJV} (Acts 15:18).

The purposes of God do not revolve around what men will do, but what He will do. In our text, God addressed Abraham from the prospect of His own mighty work. He has never represented Himself as determining the future upon the basis of He foresees men will do.

A Source of Confusion

This manner of Divine speaking has been a source of confusion to many. When God speaks of us, He often does it in view of what He will yet do—not in view of the present circumstances. When He calls us “sons,” “saints,” “heirs,” “kings,” multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable” (Heb 11:12).

Look what God has done with such a man! The record is intended not only to explain the origin of true righteousness, but to spawn hope and trust in the hearts of those desiring to be found in God’s good favor.

Look what God has done with such a man! The record is intended not only to explain the origin of true righteousness, but to spawn hope and trust in the hearts of those desiring to be found in God’s good favor.

Because this subject is further developed in the next verses, I will reserve further comments for that section.

CALLING THINGS WHICH ARE NOT AS THOUGH THEY WERE

God does not work things into existence, as men must do. He simply calls them into existence, determining they will come to pass. He did this in the first “priests,” and other such things, He does so in prospect of what we will eventually be. We are all of these things now, but in an introductory manner. Just as Abraham begetting Isaac was only the beginning of God’s intended purpose, so our present status is but the “firstfruits” of the greater work that is yet to come.

The church has been seriously divided over the nature of salvation. Some have represented the purpose of God as already fulfilled completely, with little, or nothing, more to be done. However, just as Abraham’s fatherhood was not complete with the birth of Isaac, so our new birth is not complete with what we presently enjoy. God is going to do much more with us, both in this world, and in the ages to come. He will yet “finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness” (Rom 9:28). He will “perform it until the day of Jesus Christ” (Phil 1:6).

Faith can enable us to speak in concert with God, looking forward with confidence to what the Lord will yet do. With certitude we can say, “We shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is.” Yet, faith will not allow us to become complacent, supposing there is such safety in our state that we may become idle. As soon as the professed follower of Jesus becomes idle, removing his hand from the plow, and ceasing to fight the good fight of faith, he is in the grip of unbelief. By its very nature, such a process is subtle. It is brought on when the soul becomes insensitive and lethargic, feeling at home in the world. This causes sleep to come over the soul.

God still “calls into being that which does not exist.”^{NASB} Blessed is the person who trusts in Him to do so. It should be evident that this is seen most clearly in God imputing righteousness to the one who dares to believe what He has said of His Son. Such a person will realize the bliss of sins forgiven, and the joy of being “made righteous” by a just and holy God.

RISING ABOVE THE REASONING OF MEN

“¹⁸ Who against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be.” There is a sharp conflict between the wisdom and power of God and the wisdom of men. This dissonance is so pronounced that faith must rise above the natural order to take hold of the promise of God. As long as men think within the context of this world, they will not be able to receive the promises of God. Although reasonable in the Spirit, Divine commitments are totally unreasonable to the flesh. This is clearly seen in the case of Abraham.

AGAINST HOPE

Herein is a remarkable expression: “Who against hope believed in hope.” Here, two hopes are set before us, and they are antithetical to one another. To take hold of one requires that you let go of the other. Other versions read, “who, contrary to hope, in hope believed,”^{NKJV}

“In hope against hope he believed,”^{NASB} “Against all hope, Abraham in hope believed,”^{NIV} “Hoping against hope, he believed,”^{NRSV} “Abraham believed him . . . even though such a promise seemed utterly impossible!”^{NLT} “Though there seemed no hope, he hoped and believed.”^{NJB}

Here is an aspect of “the good fight of faith” – “against hope.” For something to be “against hope” means it is beyond anything man can conceive or nature can produce. There was no natural law or principle that could make Abraham a “father of many nations.” If that was going to happen, it must come from God, and God alone. There was no visible or rational grounds for hoping the promise of God would be fulfilled. If God did not make it come to pass, calling into existence things that not yet existed, it simply would not happen.

Our father Abraham went beyond the sphere of natural abilities, and believed what God had promised. He did so in contradiction of all earthly hope or possibilities. This is the ONLY way he could become the father of many nations. As it is written, “that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be.”

AN OBSERVATION

There is a strain of theology in our world that greatly concerns me. Having been subjected to it, and even embracing it for a while, I know of its debilitating effects. It is a theology that relies upon human wisdom and earthly analysis. It is built upon the logic of men and visible appearance. It produces people who never look for any supernatural working. Such always think within the confines of nature, looking to principles of logic, historical confirmations, and supposed precedents. It teaches people to live on the lower plain of sight and sound, with no regard to a God that calls into being things that do not yet exist. It relies upon language expertise, philosophical hypotheses, and historical analysis.

What value would such things have been to Abraham. What if he had approached the promise of God with such a frame of mind. He had no historical example that could confirm God’s promise. There was no form of earthly reasoning that would support the belief of that promise. In fact, to believe it, he had to proceed in contradiction of such things. "Hoping against hope, he believed."

Our father Abraham went beyond the sphere of natural abilities, and believed what God had promised. He did so in contradiction of all earthly hope or possibilities. This is the ONLY way he could become the father of many nations.

There is a great need for this kind of faith today! In fact, no other kind of faith is acceptable with God. If Abraham is the "father of all who believe," then his faith is the only faith God will receive. Those who base their faith upon historical proofs and evidences really have no faith at all. If what they say is true, and I hope it is not, then they are not related to Abraham. In such a case, they are not justified, have no righteousness, and have "no hope, and [are] without God in the world" (Eph 2:12).

If this seems too strong, consider that this is precisely the point the Spirit is making in this text. He is showing us how men receive a righteousness from God. In so doing, He is pulling down cherished walls of thought that have rendered the church impotent. God will have no pretension in His kingdom. If men do not come to Him like our father Abraham, then they cannot be received. His faith is really the only acceptable faith!

NOT WEAK IN FAITH

"¹⁹ And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb." The Spirit now details the manner in which Abraham responded to the promise of God. He reveals how someone "weak in faith" would reason, which is a very charitable view. By saying "not weak in faith," the Spirit is not saying such a faith is acceptable. Rather, He is as assuming the desire of such to believe God and trust that His promises will be fulfilled in them. He therefore reasons with them in such a manner as will encourage a strong faith.

NOT WEAK IN FAITH

If "faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen" (Heb 11:1), then being "weak in faith" is not being convinced of the reality of such things, and having little or no assurance they can be experienced.

A person who is "weak in faith" falls backward when God utters great promises. The commitments of God are too heavy for "weak" faith to carry, and so they overwhelm the individual. Such a person is not to be considered a reject. Rather, believers are admonished, "Him that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations" (Rom 14:1). Such an one is not beyond hope, but requires some patience from men and work from God. This type of individual is considered unusual in Scripture—a departure from the norm. In our day, those who are NOT weak in the faith have become unusual.

HE CONSIDERED NOT

At once the critic of Scripture will point out that Abraham DID think about his own body and the deadness of Sarah's womb. Is it not written, "Then Abraham fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall

We can measure the degree of our faith by the amount of consideration we give to earthly circumstances. Those who think in terms of statistics, historical precedent, and natural reasoning are, at best, "weak in faith." This simply is not how faith reasons.

Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?" And Abraham said unto God, O that Ishmael might live before thee! (Gen 17:17-18). Does this not contradict the statement, "he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb"? Indeed, it does not!

This was not the final consideration of Abraham. God answered the thought Abraham had in his heart. "Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac:"

and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him. And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation. But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year" (Gen 17:19-21).

Immediately, Abraham's faith rose to prominence, overthrowing the first thought he had. When such faith arises, God has no regard for any previous thoughts. They were "fiery darts" hurled at Abraham by the wicked one, and quenched with the shield of faith.

The Reasoning of Faith

Now, the reasoning of faith becomes the only reasoning. Contrary notions have been cast down and trampled under the feet of faith. Never again is there a record of Abraham struggling with such a thought. That very day, in expectation of the fulfillment of the promise, Abraham circumcised himself, Ishmael, and all that were in his house (Gen 17:23-27).

Faith Measured

We can measure the degree of our faith by the amount of consideration we give to earthly circumstances. Those who think in terms of statistics, historical precedent, and natural reasoning are, at best, "weak in faith." This simply is not how faith reasons. There is such an alarming degree of this kind of thinking in the contemporary church that it is mind-boggling. Saints must make war against these bastions of faulty thought.

Because of this, purely earthly forms of wisdom have risen to prominence in the church. These include psychiatry, strategists, fund-raisers, motivators, administrators, educators, etc. Whatever place there may be for some of these approaches (and their placed are all open to question), it is certainly not one of prominence.

A Point of Concern

Due to the preeminence of these things, men cannot think of beginning a work for God without consulting the statistician or strategist. Large projects are thought to require fund raisers. Successful preachers and teachers of the Word are imagined to be obtainable only through an approved educational process. But all of these approaches leave little or no room for God. They do not require faith, and do not have God at their center. It is difficult for me to believe they are honorable before the Lord.

STRONG, NOT STAGGERING

“²⁰ *He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God;*²¹ And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform.”²² And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.” Here the Spirit shows the opposite of being “weak in faith.” What is here declared is not the description of a super man, but the man who receives a righteousness from God.

STAGGERED NOT

Although the promise given to Abraham transcended the highest reasoning of flesh, yet it did not cause Abraham to “stagger,” or “waver.”^{NASB} The word “stagger” is a strong word. Coming from the Greek word διεκρίθη, it means to doubt, hesitate, or waver. It means to lose ones spiritual balance, so that the promise cannot be grasped. It involves drawing back from the promise, as though it was too good to be true—an impossibility.

“Staggering” involves applying human reasoning to the matter—judging according to the flesh. In fact, the root of the Greek word means evaluate, discern, distinguish. In this case, it is doing so “according to appearance,” something strictly forbidden by Jesus (John 7:24).

The reason why men “stagger,” drawing back from the promise of God, is “unbelief.” Those who believe God do not draw back from His promises, or resort to human reasoning to explain or refute them. Those who demand explanations and proofs for the promises of God are staggering at His word.

STRONG IN FAITH

But Abraham did NOT “stagger at the promise of God through unbelief.” Rather than God’s promise causing unbelief to rise, it caused faith to grow greater in strength. Several versions accentuate this wonderful truth: “but was strengthened in faith,”^{NKJV,NIV} “but grew strong in faith,”^{NASB} “but he grew strong in his faith.”^{NRSV}

If it is true that man “lives by every word of God” (Lk 4:4), we should expect faith to increase when subjected to that word. The Word of God caused Abraham to trust the Lord more fully, more extensively, more consistently. His faith was fueled by the promise, and fortified by God’s commitment.

promises of God.

GIVING GLORY TO GOD

There is much talk these days about giving glory to God. For some people, this is limited to a song of purported praise, or giving thanks publically. There is certainly nothing wrong with either of these. In fact, we would rejoice to see more of that done. The greatest glory is brought to the Lord, however, when His people are “strong in faith,” or growing in faith. It is no wonder Paul rejoiced in the condition of the Thessalonians. He said of them, “We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is fitting, because your faith grows exceedingly, and the love of every one of you all abounds

To make sure faith does not grow strong, deprive the people of the Word of the Lord—particularly His promises. Do not tell them what God has determined, or the destiny He has planned for His children. Only speak to them of duty, and continually hold threats before their faces. Draw your words from the cistern of flesh, and appeal to the wisdom of this world. It will not be long until faith will become weak, and the people draw back from, God.

Faith only grows when it hears the toward each other” (2 Thess 1:3). Not content to let the Thessalonians remain in a static condition, Paul prayed for them. “Therefore we also pray always for you that our God would count you worthy of this calling, and fulfill all the good pleasure of His goodness and the work of faith with power” (2 Thess 1:11). That is the kind of faith that brings great glory to God. It does so in the earth, and among angelic hosts in heaven. God never fails to honor such faith – never!

Giving glory to God involves drawing attention to His Person and work—and both are involved in faith becoming strong. Faith does not grow strong by default. Nor, indeed, can it flourish in a static or traditional environment. A person, for example, that insists on remaining in an environment where faith is never fed and nourished, will not become “strong in faith.” Such a person will be content to embrace a historical position, or mouth some pious platitudes that have been handed down through the organization. In contrast, God spoke to Abraham. Abraham listened and believed. Consequently his faith grew strong, and God was glorified.

It starts with an all-powerful God, reasoning that whatever He says He is fully able to perform.

There is certainly room for more of this kind of reasoning in our time. It will not come, of course, until the promises of God become the focus of our attention. As long as men contrive their own projects, then ponder whether or not God can or will assist them, remnants of doubt will linger in their minds. But when they consider what God has promised, faith will awaken and begin to be strong. It is, after all, by God’s “exceeding great and precious promises” that we become “partakers of the Divine nature” (2 Pet 1:4). Among the things inherent in that but because he was “fully convinced that what He had promised He was also able to perform.”²³^{NKJV} Neither, indeed, did he have a lengthy exposure to many workings and words from the Lord. Compared to what we have heard through Christ, the words to Him were introductory and few. Yet his faith took hold of them, sensing the truth David would write more than nine hundred years later. “The words of the LORD are pure words: as silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times” (Psa 12:6).

And how does God react to such faith? “This is why it was credited to him as righteousness.”²⁴^{NIV} That is, the solid persuasion of Abraham that God was able to do what He promises was itself the reason God credited his faith to him as righteousness.

It is one thing to be convinced of the truth of God’s existence. That is good, and not to be despised. But such a persuasion does not bring God’s righteousness to us. Neither, indeed, is it enough to believe the Bible is true, although it is surely imperative that we do so. The faith that brings righteousness involves a full and dominating persuasion. In our case, that is being “fully persuaded” that Jesus Christ is precisely what God has declared Him to be, and that He is fully capable of bringing us to glory. Where that kind of faith is not present, men will not experience the righteousness of God. Until they depend upon Christ, relying upon His death, resurrection, and present life, they remain unrighteous. But where they dare to believe, they will be “made righteous.”

While that may appear inordinately strong, the following verses will substantiate that is exactly what the Spirit is affirming. He will make much of Christ, and how God has presented Him. Real faith will embrace it, and do so “without wavering,” or “staggering,” which is the only response that is acceptable to God.

Faith does not grow strong by default. Nor, indeed, can it flourish in a static or traditional environment. A person, for example, that insists on remaining in an environment where faith is never fed and nourished, will not become “strong in faith.”

FULLY PERSUADED

Faith can bring full persuasion to the heart, so there is no room for doubt to enter. Believing God influenced the way Abraham thought. As he embraced the promise by faith, he became “fully convinced that God was able to do what he had promised.”²⁵^{RSV}

The meaning of the text is this. Abraham did not take the promise of God and sift it through human reason, testing to see if God was able to do what He said. He was unwilling to think of the promise of God in terms of probability or impossibility. Instead, faith governed his thinking, causing him to be “fully persuaded,” or “fully assured,”²⁶^{NASB} God was able to do what He promised. He did not think so much of the thing that was promised as the One who made the promise. That is how faith reasons.

experience is a solid persuasion of the ability of God to do what He promises.

THEREFORE . . .

“And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.” I do not cease to marvel at the dogmatic manner in which the Spirit makes this point. He will not let it go. You sense the Spirit knows this line of thinking runs counter to everything that is natural in men.

The faith that brings God’s righteousness to us is not mere intellectual assent. It is not a persuasion that comes from studying purported evidence that the Bible is true, and then formally acknowledging its truth. That sort of thing is altogether too common in our day, but it is not acceptable before God. Abraham did not believe God because he took a course in apologetics, him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; ²⁵ Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification.”

NOT JUST A HISTORY LESSON

Here is one of the hallmark texts of Scripture. It proves the philosophy (for want of a better term) of Scripture. It also identifies the scope of salvation, and the centrality of God the Father. Here Scripture is lifted above the boundaries of history, and made relevant to our time. Among other things, it confirms that in the Divine economy history is relevant only if it impacts upon the present. It is not enough to merely know what happened in the past. In particular, the account of Abraham is not given to merely inform us of this great man—“the friend of God.” It is not a promotion of hero-worship.

NOT WRITTEN FOR HIS SAKE ALONE

Keep in mind, the writing to which the Spirit refers was, at the time Romans was written, approximately 1,500 years old. The book of Genesis was written somewhere in the mid-1400’s B.C. The book of Romans was written around 57 A.D. Jesus referred to the writing of Moses (Matt 8:4; 19:7-8; Mk 10:3-5; 12:26; Lk 20:37; John 7:23). When Jesus revealed Himself to the two on the road to Emmaus, He referred to Moses’ writing (Lk 24:27). Paul also referred to Moses’ writings (Rom 9:15; 10:5; 2 Cor 3:15; Heb 7:15).

There is absolutely no question about the validity of Moses’ writings, even though they originated well over a millennia before. They had been copied by hand, and even translated into another language. Yet, none of this is mentioned. The integrity of Scripture is assumed.

I mention these things because of the effects of higher criticism in our time. Men have allowed purported scholars to question the precision of Scripture. While it may all seem quite innocent, it has yielded an environment in which unbelief can and does flourish. No such approach is ever taken to the word of God in Scripture. There is no reference to original manuscripts, copies of Scripture, sloppy scribes, human interpolations, etc. If the Word of God is going to have its intended influence upon us, we must rid ourselves of any tendency to doubt its integrity. With absolute consistency, “the Scripture” is always presented as absolutely accurate and trustworthy.

Not for His Sake

The record of righteousness being imputed to Abraham is not intended to merely provide information on him. It is a principle of Scripture that persons are mentioned within the context of redemption. It is ever true, “For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope” (Rom 15:4).

There is an intrinsic danger in approaching Scripture as mere history. We are to learn from the examples found therein, for they are strategically placed in Scripture. Through the various personalities mentioned in Scripture God reveals facets of His Person and purpose. This includes Adam, Cain, Abel, Enoch, Noah, Moses, Pharaoh, David, and Nebuchadnezzar. In all of them we learn something of God that pertains to our salvation. They are all relevant to us.

There is an intrinsic danger in approaching Scripture as mere history. We are to learn from the examples found therein, for they are strategically placed in Scripture. Through the various personalities mentioned in Scripture God reveals facets of His Person and purpose.

In the case of Abraham, the record of him being accounted righteous is not written to acquaint us with him, or to show how God uniquely favored him.

BUT FOR US ALSO

Whatever we think of this account, we must not allow our thoughts to stop with Abraham. In our thinking, we must bridge the gap of time between Abraham, and ourselves. He is “the farther of us all.” The subject with which the Spirit is dealing is NOT unique to Abraham. He was a pioneer of things to come TO US. In him we see something that we are presently experiencing.

This should enhance our appreciation of Abraham. No person perceptive of the role of Abraham in God’s eternal purpose will stand in criticism of him. His name is not to be subjected to reproach or shame. The dominant thing we are to recall about Abraham is this: His faith was “imputed to him for righteousness.”

It is with some degree of shame and contrition of heart that I acknowledge there were years in my own ministry where this truth was hidden from me. I also admit that I have been part of a movement that has made very little, if anything, of Abraham’s faith being credited to him for righteousness. By God’s grace, I intend to “revenge my disobedience” in this matter.

If the record of Abraham being accounted righteous is written for our sake, then we must make much of it. If our view of the salvation and Word of God does not require the consideration of “our father Abraham,” it cannot be right. Such a view is distorted, and will eventually lead to erroneous conclusions and misdirected conduct.

The history recorded in Scripture contributes to the development and proclamation of sound doctrine. This is so because God’s dealings with men were dictated by His character, not their persons. Those dealings represent a certain consistency in our Lord that must be seen in order for faith to grow.

An Additional Thought

One additional thought on this passage is in order. Among self-professed scholars, there is a frequent reference to “the author’s intended meaning” in Scripture. This “meaning” is thought to be at the root of Scripture, bringing out its true meaning. But what of the text we are considering? What of Moses’ record of Abraham’s faith being accounted to him for righteousness? Do you suppose that Moses’ “intended meaning” was to establish that this righteousness was also for succeeding generations? If so, he certainly gave no indication of such a personal intent—in any of his writings. His word was God’s word.

The Scripture must be viewed as primarily the Word of God. It is HIS meaning that is to be uncovered, whether the holy man moved to write the words knew it or not. While this may appear to be a small and inconsequential point, it will significantly impact HOW we read and comprehend Scripture. If we read it as a message from one of our peers—a fellow man—we will not derive the nourishment intended by it. But if we receive it “not as the word of men, as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe” (1 Thess 2:13), it will nourish our souls.

TO WHOM IT SHALL BE IMPUTED

Herein is a wonderful thing. Those who imagine the first thirty-nine books of the Bible have little or no relevance to us, must take this passage into consideration. Here, what happened to Abraham is said to also happen to us. We obtain righteousness in the same way as our father Abraham, by having our faith accounted to us “as righteousness.”

It is not that Abraham’s faith is reckoned to us for righteousness, but the faith we possess is the basis of our righteousness.

The “IT” that is imputed to us is our faith. Thus the RSV reads, “That is why his faith was reckoned to him as righteousness.” It is no wonder such faith is called “precious” (2 Pet 1:1). Whatever brings the righteousness of God to us is a most inestimable treasure!

When the Spirit says “shall be imputed,” He is not referring meaning from our time forward—or the time of the writing of the book of Romans forward. Instead, He is speaking of Abraham being accounted righteous upon the basis of his faith. The Lord not only did this for Abraham’s sake, but in prospect of Abraham’s offspring, who would also believe God. The expression views Abraham as the first of a vast spiritual generation, of which believers in our day are blessed to be part.

IF WE BELIEVE ON HIM

Notice the precision in this text. It is not simply believing that God exists, or believing in Him in disassociation from the Lord Jesus Christ. “But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, IF we believe on Him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead.”

Abraham relied upon God bringing Isaac and a multiplicity of offspring into the world from nothing. We believe upon God as bringing Jesus back from the dead, and exalting Him to His right hand in the heavens. In Abraham’s case, the effectiveness of Christ’s death and resurrection. It takes in the abandonment of all confidence in the flesh, and a wholehearted embrace of the Gospel.

Keep in mind, the type of faith being described is “the faith of Abraham,” not that of mere intellectual consent or agreement. In involves not staggering at impossible would occur in the future. In our case, it occurred in the past. In both cases, only God could bring the matter to pass.

We learn from this that our salvation hinges upon the resurrection of Christ. His death is validated by His resurrection (Rom 1:4). This is poignantly stated in Romans 10:10: “if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved.”^{NKJV} Peter also made this association. *“Who by Him [Jesus] do believe in God, that raised Him up from the dead, and gave Him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God” (1 Pet 1:21).

What Does it Mean to Believe on Him?

To “believe on Him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead,” is to lean the whole weight of our soul upon God, depending on Him to make us acceptable in His sight. It is to trust Him in the capacity of the Father of Jesus—the One who sent the Savior into the world, delivered Him up, raised Him from the dead, and exalted Him to His own right hand. It is to be “fully persuaded” this is sufficient to make God both just and the Justifier of the one who believes on Jesus.

Believing on God involves the persuasion of the truth of His record of Jesus. It also includes a reliance on the the promise of God, but being strong in faith. It includes not considering fleshly oppositions, or arguments that contradict the truth of God. Wherever this kind of faith is not found, no faith can be found.

The twenty-fifth verse is one of the most precise statements of Christ’s work in all of Scripture. It compresses a great body of redemptive truth into a single sentence—something that could only be accomplished through the Holy Spirit. While this was something perceived by the Apostle, it is also something to which He was illuminated by the Spirit. There is no possible way for this statement to be concluded by observing Christ’s death. An historical perspective, or an analysis of words cannot yield this knowledge. It is something that must be revealed. “Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification.” Let us ponder the greatness of this expression. Here is food for faith.

DELIVERED FOR OUR OFFENCES

This is something that GOD did, not man. It is quite true that Judas betrayed the Son of man (Mk 14:41). It is also true that the people “delivered” Him to Pilate (Matt 27:18). Pilate also “delivered Him to be crucified” (Matt 27:26). It is written, “the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him” (Lk 24:20). But this is not the “delivered” of reference! It is NOT what men did to Jesus that brought salvation within our reach, but what the Father did to Him!

The people did not “deliver Him” for the offences, or transgressions, of humanity. That is something God did. If God the Father had not “delivered Him,” the powers of darkness and all of humanity would have been impotent to harm a single hair of His head.

The Lamb of God was “stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.” It is God who “wounded” the Son “for our transgressions.” It is the Father who “bruised” Him “for our iniquities.” The “chastisement of our peace” was laid upon Him by God the Father. The “stripes” by which we “are healed” are not those inflicted by men, but those inflicted by the Father, who “made Him to be sin,” causing Him to be made a “curse” for us (2 Cor 5:21; Gal 3:13). It was the Lord who “laid on Him the iniquity of us all” (Isa 53:4-6).

Viewing Christ’s Death Properly

This is why the Apostles do not make much of the fleshly sufferings of Jesus during His trial and on the cross. It is not that the agonies were not terrible beyond description. Nor, indeed, are we to avoid a consideration of them. However, we are not saved by what men did to Jesus. They were, to be sure, Christ’s “murderers,” as Stephen said (Acts 7:52). The Jews did “kill” Jesus, as Peter charged (Acts 3:15). Yet, as God’s “Lamb,” He was offered up by God for fallen humanity, “delivered for our offenses.” How vividly Peter declared this as illuminated by the Holy Spirit. “Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain” (Acts 2:23).

Our Offenses

The phrase “for our offenses” is a significant one. It means that God made Jesus responsible for sin in its totality, exacting the penalty for sin from His “only begotten Son.” Jesus was NOT a martyr, but a sacrifice—and there is a great difference between the two. A martyr is slain by His enemies. As a sacrifice, Jesus was delivered up by God because of our transgressions.

It is necessary to emphasize that God placed sin in its aggregate upon the Son. Sin was dealt with in mass, or in its totality. This is why Jesus is referred to as “the Lamb of God which taketh away the SIN of the world” (John 1:29). Jesus is also said to have entered the world to “put away SIN by the sacrifice of Himself” (Heb 9:26). God “condemned SIN in the flesh” of His Son (Rom 8:3). Jesus was made “to be SIN for us” (2 Cor 5:21). All of these emphasize sin in its entirety.

In order to make the matter more personal to us, Christ’s atonement is also associated with “sins.” This assists us to consider our Lord’s death from a very individualistic viewpoint. Thus, we are told Jesus was “manifested to take away our SINS” (1 John 3:5). He “died for our SINS” (1 Cor 15:3), and “gave Himself for our SINS” (Gal 1:4). He also bore “our SINS in His body on the tree” (1 Pet 2:24). God sent His Son into the world “to be the propitiation for our SINS” (1 John 4:10).

It is the nature of sin that makes it so terrible. It is offensive to God, and attempts to overthrow His power and authority. Therefore, the word “offenses” is not a casual word. When we think of sin, transgression, iniquity, and the likes, our soul should shudder because of what Christ had to suffer.

Thus Jesus being “delivered for our offenses” is seen to be completely effective, dealing with all sin. It is also perceived as intensely personal, promoting thanksgiving and obedience—“our sins.”

The Heinousness of Sin

Among other things, this reveals the heinousness of sin, that required such a death. If the sin of Adam and Eve could cause death to be passed over the entirety of the human race, what was involved in the sins of the whole world being placed upon Christ? It is awesome to consider!

If men are ever tempted to minimize sin, they are to consider what Jesus was required to do in order for their sin to be removed. Whether we are talking about the sin of Adam and Eve, the incredibly wicked reign of Manasseh, or the fierce opposition of Paul to the church, it all required the death of Jesus.

It is the nature of sin that makes it so terrible. It is offensive to God, and attempts to overthrow His power and authority. Therefore, the word “offenses” is not a casual word. When we think of sin, transgression, iniquity, and the likes, our soul should shudder because of what Christ had to suffer. A person who takes sin casually, easily explaining it away, is an ungodly person, and is crucifying the Son of God afresh, putting Him to an open shame.

The Nature of God

This also reveals the nature of God, who cannot overlook sin as though it were trite and excusable. In showing His glory to Moses, God revealed His absolute intolerance with sin: “. . . and that will by no means clear the guilty” (Ex 34:7). He confirmed the same through Nahum: “and [I] will not at all acquit the wicked” (Nah 1:3).

It is further said of God, “You hate all workers of iniquity” (Psa 5:5). This explodes the popular saying, God hates sin but loves the sinner. God makes no such distinction in this statement. Of the Son the Father said, “Your throne, O God, is forever and ever; A scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Your kingdom. You love righteousness and hate wickedness” (Psa 45:7; Heb 1:9).

If sin required God to “deliver up” His sinless Son, let no person make any attempt to explain their sin, or to justify their involvement in it.

The Indebtedness of Man

The delivering up of Jesus for “our offenses” has removed all obligation to the flesh. No person owes anything to the flesh. Our indebtedness is now to our Lord and Savior. Thus it is written, “Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh” (Rom 8:12). Because we have been “bought with a price,” we are to “glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God’s” (1 Cor 6:19-20).

No longer can we live according to the dictates of our lower and sinful nature. The time we spent in the flesh is sufficient. No more time is to be given to it. Thus it is written, “For the time already past is sufficient for you to have carried out the desire of the Gentiles, having pursued a course of sensuality, lusts, drunkenness, carousals, drinking parties and abominable idolatries”^{NASB} (1 Pet 4:3).

RAISED FOR OUR JUSTIFICATION

Because men do not speak often of

Once again, it should be noted that salvation is often approached with unbecoming simplicity, as if it is no small thing for a person to be justified. Anything, however, that requires the death of the spotless Son of God, and His return from the regions of the dead, is any thing but simplistic.

justification, they speak little of Christ’s resurrection. But this is not the case with the Holy Spirit. The matter of Christ’s resurrection is pivotal throughout Scripture, and particularly in the matter of our justification.

Once again, it should be noted that salvation is often approached with unbecoming simplicity, as if it is no small thing for a person to be justified. Anything, however, that requires the death of the spotless Son of God, and His return from the regions of the dead, is any thing but simplistic.

In the fifth chapter, the Spirit will remind us we are “now justified by His blood” (5:9). By this He means the death of Christ was the point at which God judged sin. The forfeiture of Christ’s life made it just for God to forgive sinners.

Repeatedly, we are told justification is “by faith” (Rom 3:28; 5:1; Gal 2:16; 3:24). That is, faith is the means through which we appropriate justification.

Romans 3:24 affirms we are “justified freely by His grace.” In our justification the will and favor of God are poured out upon us because of His abundant grace.

First Corinthians 6:11 says we are “justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.” Our acquittal from sin is on the behalf of Christ, and is applied by the Spirit of God.

We are also said to be “justified by Christ” (Gal 2:17). Jesus Himself enters into the process, mediating the benefits of the Covenant to us.

How is it the Spirit here says Jesus was “raised for our justification?” Does justification really involve all of these things? Indeed, it does! It is no small thing for a guilty sinner to be freed from culpability and be made righteous before God. Our hearts should stand in wonder at it. Any approach to Scripture than minimizes the greatness of salvation should be abandoned with haste.

First, we could not have been justified if Jesus had not risen from the dead. His resurrection confirmed that our sins had been removed. It should be apparent to us that the “work” required for our salvation was not completed at Calvary. Before Jesus committed His spirit to God the Father, He said, “It is finished!” (John 19:30). What did He mean? He meant that the sacrifice was finished—that the work God gave Him to do on the earth was completed. Even before He went to the cross, Jesus told the Father, “I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do” (John 17:4). In this case, all of the preparations required for His sacrifice were completed. As well, He had faithfully kept those given to Him by the Father.

In His resurrection, Jesus came back from the battle with the powers of darkness, having plundered them in His cross (Col 2:15). In His resurrection He left the promised mortal bruise upon the head of the old serpent, sealing his doom.

His resurrection was also the gate through which Jesus entered into the heavenly sanctuary, where His blood was presented, “having obtained eternal redemption for us” (Heb 9:15). Now men are justified from heaven, where the risen Christ is ministering—in “the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man” (Heb 8:20).

Without the resurrection of Christ, “your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins” (1 Cor 15:17). If Jesus is not risen, we have no message to deliver, and all preaching is vain and pointless (1 Cor 15:14). But if Jesus is risen from the dead—and He assuredly is—then our preaching is not vain, our faith is not vain, and we are not still in our sins. “He was raised for our justification!”

It is no wonder that the Spirit speaks of our salvation with such a triumphant note. “Who is he who condemns? It is Christ who died, and furthermore is also risen, who is even at the right hand of God, who also makes intercession for us”^{NKJV} (Rom 8:34). He truly was “raised for our justification,” i.e., that we might experience being “made righteous.” Until Jesus returned from the dead, the righteousness of God could not be conferred upon the sons of men. But Jews has been “delivered up,” and “is risen indeed” (Lk 24:34), and thus the promised justification has become a reality in “all who believe.”

CONCLUSION

This passage has revealed the nature of the faith that saves. It is the sort of faith that Abraham had, who is “the father of us all.” It does not stagger at the promise of God, but is strong. It does not take into account

The Promises of God are Always Appropriated by Faith, Never by Law—by Given O. Blakely impossibilities that flesh poses, or consider circumstances that contradict what God has pledged to do. Saving faith, if I may use that term, is “fully persuaded that what God has promised, He is able to perform.”

THE GREAT REVELATION

This is the faith Abraham possessed in primitive times, before the Law, and well before any significant elaborations on the New Covenant, as in the book of Jeremiah (31:31-34). If anything, in this “day of salvation,” faith is larger under Jesus. There is a greater degree of trust because of the fuller revelation of the One on whom faith moves us to rely. The greater extent of the revelation of Divine intent causes faith to abound even more.

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE SAVED

This text has also more clearly shown to us what it means to be saved. There is a certain shallowness to the common approach taken to salvation that is uncomely for saints, and reproachful to Jesus. While salvation, or the deliverance of God, involves extrication from sin, it also involves translation into the kingdom of God’s dear Son. What we have received is infinitely greater than what was taken from us.

We have received a righteousness from God that qualifies us to be heirs of the world. Our real inheritance is the world to come, not this one. One of the great restrictions of a Law system is that one cannot think big enough to give honor to God. Since the Law is not of faith, it cannot produce a longing to inherit the whole world. But faith produces that longing, and strengthens one to live in joyful anticipation of it. There is a tremendous penalty—perhaps even an eternal one—to be paid for minuscule thinking about God’s great salvation.

TENDENCIES THAT LIMIT

The tendency to relate salvation only with the remission of sin is not commendable. There is a blessedness that finds God unwilling to impute sin to those who believe. But there is also an imputation of His own righteousness to those who have faith. The possession of faith—the kind of faith Abraham had—brings to us a righteousness that will stand in the courts of heaven.

THE LAW AND FAITH

There is also the incompatibility of faith with a system of Law. Here is a point that thoroughly destroys the legalistic approach to God. “If they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect.” Faith cannot function under Law, and the promise is completely ineffective within a system of law. A person lives by faith, or he cannot live at all before God. He cannot live by doing, or by works. The promise is either given to those who believe, or it cannot be given at all.

THE GRACE OF GOD

The grace of God is also integral to salvation. Grace brings salvation to us, or we do not receive it at all. What is more, only faith can appropriate grace. No amount of doing, however arduous, can cause the grace of God to be poured out upon us. We also see this in Abraham.

REQUIRED WORKS

Our salvation required two great works which were absolutely beyond any human capabilities. Jesus had to be delivered by God for our offenses. He also had to be raised again for our justification. If either of these had not occurred, we could not have been justified. God Himself had to accomplish them both, thereby confirming they were in strict concert with His will, and brought satisfaction to His heart. This aspect of faith is affirmed with unusual power in the tenth chapter of Romans. “But the righteousness that is by faith says: ‘Do not say in your heart, Who will ascend into heaven?’ (that is, to bring Christ down) or ‘Who will descend into the deep?’ (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead). But what does it say? ‘The word is near you; it is in your mouth and in your heart,’ that is, the word of faith we are proclaiming: That if you confess with your mouth, ‘Jesus is Lord,’ and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you will be saved. For it is with your heart that you believe and are justified, and it is with your mouth that you confess and are saved. As the Scripture says, ‘Anyone who trusts in him will never be put to shame’”^{NIV} (10:6-11).

If salvation were by OUR works, we would be required to bring Christ down from heaven that He might die. Then, we would have to go down into the abode of the dead, and bring Him back. Under no circumstances can the death and resurrection of Christ be eliminated. They are an absolute requirement. Since neither of them could be instigated by our power, it should be evident that they are works of God. The point of the text just quoted is that the Gospel apprizes us of them both. If we will believe and acknowledge them, we will be saved. The message is near to us—within the grasp of faith.

FULL PERSUASION

Only faith can cause us to be “fully persuaded,” without a tinge of debilitating doubt. Because faith fastens on the good word of God, and because it sees God as the preeminent, it is convinced God is able to perform what He has promised.

Here is something the wisdom of men in all of its facets cannot accomplish. It cannot touch the heart, or cause confidence and assurance to surround the conscience. Equally true, those who labor under the Law are deprived of these indispensable qualities. Both the wisdom of men and enslavement to Law produce fear and doubt. They are not able to move out upon the promises of God, but regard them from a purely intellectual point of view.

God is greatly to be praised for such a marvelous salvation. He is also to be glorified by the kind of faith that perceives and rejoices in these realities. Make it your aim to testify of these things, for they are not commonly known. But everywhere there is a tender heart, it will be warmed and satisfied with the greatness of this message. Faith and hope will grow strong when hearing this word.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 16

THE TRIUMPHANT NATURE OF FAITH

5:1-5 Therefore, having been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, ² through whom also we have access by faith into this grace in which we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God. ³ And not only that, but we also glory in tribulations, knowing that tribulation produces perseverance; ⁴ and perseverance, character; and character, hope. ⁵ Now hope does not disappoint, because the love of God has been poured out in our hearts by the Holy Spirit who was given to us. Rom 5:1-5, NKJV

INTRODUCTION

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. WE HAVE PEACE WITH GOD (5:1)
- II. ACCESS INTO GRACE BY FAITH (5:2a)
- III. REJOICING IN HOPE OF THE GLORY OF GOD (5:2b)
- IV. GLORYING IN TRIBULATION (5:3a)
- V. TRIBULATION PRODUCES PERSEVERANCE (5:3b)
- VI. PERSEVERANCE PRODUCES CHARACTER (5:4a)
- VII. CHARACTER PRODUCES HOPE (5:4b)
- VIII. HOPE DOES NOT DISAPPOINT (5:5a)
- IX. THE LOVE OF GOD IS Poured INTO OUR HEARTS (5:5b)

With great power, the Spirit has affirmed that when righteousness is sought through law, “faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect” (4:14). This being the case, those under the Law are left in a perpetual state of agitation, for without faith it is not only impossible to please God, there can also be no quietness within. As we will see, this is a critical point. The impact of doctrine upon the individual tells more of its association with the truth than the words which contain the doctrine. By “words which contain the doctrine,” I do not mean Scripture, but the representations of Scripture given by men.

GOD’S DOCTRINE IS EFFECTIVE

When proclaimed and received doctrines do not yield the results described in Scripture, they are false. The doctrine of God, when received, always produces the effects promised by God. This is the proclamation of the Lord Himself. “My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distill as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass” (Deut 32:2). Isaiah also confirms this marvelous reality. “For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it” (Isa 55:10-11).

These utterances reach their highest fulfillment in the Gospel of Jesus Christ. God's "doctrine" and "speech" are at their highest level in the words of the Gospel. The "word of the Gospel" (Acts 15:7) waters more, causes more, and gives more than any other word from God. It has provided a more complete expression of His Person, and contains more of His power. It is a more complete message, and accomplishes more than any other Divine utterance.

All of this is by Divine intention. It does not suggest that other words from God lack power, or that they are in any way deficient or unnecessary. However, now that Christ has put away sin and plundered the forces of darkness—now that He is exalted to the right hand of God, and been given all power in heaven and earth, God is free to speak more extensively concerning His purpose. In the Gospel, He declares more of Himself than ever before. He unfolds more of His intentions than He has before. He promises more that ever was offered under the Law. All of this is a remarkable commentary on the effectiveness of Christ's atoning death, confirming resurrection, and presence in heaven.

EFFECTIVE UPON EARTH

Christ's death, resurrection, enthronement, and present intercession, are also effective upon the earth. That effectiveness, as we will see, is realized by faith among the sons of men.

Experience

Much of the religion of our day is merely philosophical. It has little or no practical element to it. Some even object to any presentation of the Gospel that includes the subjective, or experiential, point of view. However, it is absurd to think of a salvation that is not experienced, or a Gospel that has no word relating to human experience. After all, sin and alienation are experienced, and produce a host of other experiences. The devastating wake of sin has produced trouble, sorrow, pain, death, sickness, disquietude within, and hopelessness. It introduced a defiled conscience, hatred, foolishness, deception, and evil desires.

What would constrain any person to imagine God would present a salvation that did not reach as far as transgression? Is it not written, "But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound" (Rom 5:20). If sin infected our whole person, much more will salvation bring wholeness to us.

Valid Experience

Our text will deal with the very core of spiritual experience. The Holy Spirit will not even mention many things that are emphasized by religious sectarians. Some have chosen to accentuate spiritual experiences that are not stressed by the Holy Spirit—experiences that are nowhere

We owe no allegiance to any teaching that is not a MAIN POINT of the Apostolic doctrine. Such teachings will inevitably distort our understanding, cause confusion in our minds, and create division among the people of God.

bound upon the saints of God.

It is not my purpose to question the validity of these experiences, or the integrity of those who stress them. However, I do intend to emphasize with all of my being the approach to experience taken by the Spirit of God. We owe no allegiance to any teaching that is not a MAIN POINT of the Apostolic doctrine. Such teachings will inevitably distort our understanding, cause confusion in our minds, and create division among the people of God.

I am going to take the liberty of mentioning some experiences that are valid, yet are inappropriate as an emphasis. They are experiences that are not common in all the household of faith. They are also never emphasized by the Spirit. Men are never condemned for lacking them, and never applauded by God for having them. I do this with great caution, realizing I will be misunderstood by some. Yet these things must be said for the sake of those of tender heart. Keep in mind, I am not denying the reality of these experiences, or stating those who claim them are lying. I AM saying, the Spirit does NOT emphasize them, or bind them upon the children of God. In fact, He does not even mention some of them, thus making them purely a creation of men. I AM saying they are not a suitable basis for the unity of God's people, or an acceptable foundation for dividing them. I AM saying God has not made an issue of such things among His saints, and men are entirely out of order in doing so.

The "second blessing," the baptism of the Spirit, speaking in other tongues, healing the sick, dreams and visions, being slain in the Spirit, holy laughter, animal sounds, etc. These are only representative of a host of emphases men have espoused. If you are unfamiliar with them, it is of no consequence. There are people who evaluate the whole of their identity with God upon the basis of these things. With no hesitancy whatsoever, I affirm this is totally wrong. It not only cannot be substantiated by God's Word, it is in stark contradiction of it.

RELATING THIS TO OUR TEXT

Our text will deal with the heart of Kingdom experience. It will deal with the powerful effects of faith and consequent justification. These are at the core of what occurs to believers, and is common among them. Not only that, this is a declaration of Divine intention. It tells us where God is going with salvation, and what He has purposed to take place through it. These are things we are to expect in ALL believers.

Where these things are lacking, one of two conditions exists. Either the individual has not believed the Gospel, or, because of spiritual infancy, these things have not yet been seen. Our text assumes the latter, as it is addressed to those who are in Christ Jesus.

SOME CONCLUDING THOUGHTS

Once again, I want to emphasize the nature of this text. I do so because it is at variance with so much of the religion of our time. When the Holy Spirit determined to show us the effects of our identity with God, these are the things He chose to open up to us. He holds before us Divine priorities as made known in the experience of those who believe. If these things have no relevance to us, we ourselves are alienated from God. There can be no reconciliation to God where disinterest exists in things pertaining to that reconciliation.

The subjects now placed before us reflect the purpose of God for His people. They announce to us the Divine intention behind Christ's death. They show us what to look for in our own persons, and where to place our emphasis. Here are things on which we must unite, and where division is not permitted.

These are matters concerning which no human opinion is of any value whatsoever. None of these things are optional, or may be viewed as unnecessary or irrelevant. There is a solid foundation under every proclamation. All of this will be readily apparent to every humble and contrite heart.

WE HAVE PEACE WITH GOD

“^{5:1} Therefore, having been justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.” We will not come to the effects of the righteousness that comes by faith. Let me again emphasize the importance of this righteousness. While some men banter over the name by which we are called, or the day on which we gather, or some particular experience in the body, the Lord sets His righteousness before us. He does not take for granted that we have it, but affirms it is realized through our faith. It does not come by means of a law, or through a procedure. If we do not have this righteousness, it makes no difference whatsoever what else we may claim to have. All such claims are worthless.

HAVING BEEN JUSTIFIED

Believers are apprized they are already justified because of their faith: i.e., “having been justified.” Other versions read, “being justified,” ^{KJV} “since we have been justified,” ^{NIV} and “since we are justified.” ^{RSV} It is BECAUSE we ARE justified, that the benefits now expounded are realized. They do not belong to us because of what we have done, but because of what we ARE. That is not an incidental observation! God cannot and will not bless an unchanged person. We must be made acceptable before we can experience the benefits of the covenant.

This is a critical matter with God. Multitudes of professed believers, unaware of this truth, are trying to gain Divine acceptance. Not persuaded the Lord has received them, they labor under the bludgeon of law, trying to measure up to their perception of an approved state. It is a most difficult way to live, as they themselves will acknowledge. But our text says we are already “justified,” already accepted and standing in the favor of God.

Justification has been mentioned six times to this point. Under the law, “the doers of the law shall be justified” (2:13). By the deeds of the law, “there shall no flesh be justified” in the sight of God (3:20). We are “justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus” (3:24). The conclusion is that “a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law” (3:28). If Abraham was “justified by works, he has not know yourselves, that Jesus Christ is in you?; unless indeed you are disqualified” ^{NKJV} (2 Cor 13:5). The personal persuasion of faith is a kingdom asset without which we cannot make any progress. Further, the awareness of our faith is the way we have of knowing we have been justified, and are in a state of Divine acceptance.

Knowledgeable Expressions

There is no substitute for the knowledge of personal justification—of being confident of our standing with the Living God. Ponder some of Scriptural expressions of this confidence.

The personal persuasion of faith is a kingdom asset without which we cannot make any progress. Further, the awareness of our faith is the way we have of knowing we have been justified, and are in a state of Divine acceptance.

“... for I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep what I have committed to Him until that Day” (2 Tim 1:12).

“For you had compassion on me in my chains, and joyfully accepted the plundering of your goods, knowing that you have a better and an enduring possession for yourselves in heaven” (Heb 10:34).

“For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord” (Rom 8:38-39).

*something to boast about, but not before God ^{NKJV} (4:2). Jesus “was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification” (4:25).

It is apparent that the BASIS of our justification is outside of ourselves and independent of our own works. The MEANS of appropriating that justification is our faith. Therefore, all who have faith ARE justified, and all who do not remain in a state of alienation. It is no wonder we are admonished, “Examine yourselves as to whether you are in the faith. Test yourselves. Do you

Just as surely as the individual can be convinced of personal alienation from God and the need for justification, so a settled persuasion of reconciliation and justification can be realized. The doctrine—“having been justified”—can be apprehended by faith, and the heart fully convinced of its reality. In fact, the teaching of this passage assumes this to be true. That is the strength of the passage. Where assurance of justification is lacking, the words that follow will have no comforting effect upon the soul.

This must not be approached as though it were a cold and lifeless doctrine. This is not a point upon which official positions are to be developed. It is not to be approached in the spirit of the scribes, and Pharisees, and lawyers. This relates to obtaining the righteousness of God, not maintaining a theologically acceptable position—and there is a vast difference between the two.

Much of my earlier life in the faith was spent trying to maintain a correct theological position, without regard to my own standing with God. I can testify with authority to the unprofitableness of such an emphasis. Knowing you are justified does not allow the individual to maintain erroneous views of Scripture. Faith will never settle for a lie, a distortion, or a misplaced emphasis. As soon as men do this, they are no longer walking by faith.

PEACE WITH GOD

Note the firmness of the text. We HAVE BEEN justified, and “we HAVE peace with God.” These are possessions, not mere positions! It is essential to our victory over the world that we know how we stand with God more than where we stand with men.

The Spirit now shows us the effect of justification upon our persons. It is legal, but not merely legal. It is recognized in heaven, but not only in heaven. There is a blessed fruit yielded by the tree of justification that is both essential and enjoyable. It is “peace with God.”

The Spirit now shows us the effect of justification upon our persons. It is legal, but not merely legal. It is recognized in heaven, but not only in heaven. There is a blessed fruit yielded by the tree of justification that is both essential and enjoyable. It is “peace with God.”

The prophets spoke of an era that would be characterized by quietness within the soul. “For thus says the Lord GOD, the Holy One of Israel: ‘In returning and rest you shall be saved; In quietness and confidence shall be your strength’” (Isa 30:15). Again, it is written, “The work of righteousness will be peace. And the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever” (Isa 32:15). Both of these verses are written in the form of a hebraism. That is a type of Hebrew poetry in which the same truth is stated two different ways.

This way of Divine communication is particularly evident in the Psalms and Proverbs, as well as throughout the Prophets. Thus, Isaiah 30:15 equates “rest” with “quietness and confidence,” while Isaiah 32:15 parallels “peace” with “quietness and assurance.” Elihu well said of this kind of peace, “When He giveth quietness, who then can make trouble?” (Job 34:29).

“PEACE,” therefore, not only means there is no longer a war between the individual and God, but that there is an acute sense of safety and tranquility. This kind of peace is expressed by the Psalmist in a most practical way., “I will both lie down in peace, and sleep; For You alone, O LORD, make me dwell in safety” (Psa 4:8). The awareness of being at peace with God has wide-sweeping ramifications. It yields the fruit of assurance, confidence, and boldness, to name a few.

No Peace Under the law

The peace in our text is realized through the purging of the conscience—the removal of a sense of guilt and defilement. This marvelous benefit could not be realized under the Law, for there was no justification under that covenant.

One of the passages that most precisely conveys this thought is found in the tenth chapter of Hebrews. It perfectly parallels the passage now before us. The Spirit recalls to our minds the highest and most lofty occasion under the Law: the day of atonement. Year after year, sacrifices were made that had no satisfactory impact on those for whom they were made. “*For the law, having a shadow of the good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with these same sacrifices, which they offer continually year by year, make those who approach perfect” (Heb 10:1). Elaborating upon this failure, the Spirit clarifies the meaning of “perfect.” He is not speaking of moral perfection, but of the perfection, or cleansing, of the conscience. “*For then would they not have ceased to be offered? For the worshipers, once purified, would have had no more consciousness of sins” (Heb 10:2).

Under the Law a sacrifice was made according to Divine commandment. It was offered in a manner specified, in the place He ordained, and by the individual He designated. It was the kind of sacrifice He demanded. The sacrifice itself was a work of man, and was not attended by faith in the ones for whom the sacrifice was made. Although the Divinely specified order was followed, the “worshipers” were not “cleansed,” that is to say, their sins were not removed from them. The reason for this failure is declared: “For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and goats could take away sins” (Heb 10:4). As a result, the ones who were coming near to God according to the Law only remembered their sins, with their conscience remaining defiled. This condition is described in the words, “But in those sacrifices there is a reminder of sins every year” (Heb 10:3). They had no “peace with God.”

We HAVE Peace with God

How different the condition of those who are in Christ Jesus! Because they have been justified by faith, they HAVE peace with God. There is no enmity between them and God. Their conscience is no longer defiled with the taint of guilt. Although they remain in the domain of trouble and toil, yet they themselves experience confidence and assurance.

They have quietness in their soul, knowing that God is working all things together for their ultimate good (Rom 8:28). Their “peace” is not a mere formality, but something that is experienced in their hearts.

This kind of tranquility of soul cannot be obtained by arduous activity. You cannot work to obtain it. It is the fruit of faith, for we are justified “by faith.” Mark it well, where men find it difficult to believe God, they will be unduly troubled by the circumstances, and life in general.

The Pharisee who stood and “prayed with himself” sited his works as a basis for being heard by God. “God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess” (Lk 18:11-12). He was not praying before God, but before men, with an acute consciousness of those about him, not the One above him. That is why Jesus said he “prayed with himself.” He was oblivious of God, and thus spoke as though he had confidence.

Peace with God is not after the Pharisaic manner! It is peace BEFORE God, as well as with God. It is being confident when we are in the presence of God, as well as our enemies. Those who have “peace with God” can come boldly, or confidently, into the presence of God. In fact, they are exhorted to do so. “Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh; and having an high priest over the house of God; Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water” (Heb 10:19-22).

“Peace with God,” therefore, refers to a state of mind and heart that is in tune with ultimate reality. There is a quietness that settles over the soul because we know we are “justified” before God, washed clean, and made suitable to stand in His presence. That awareness spills over into every aspect of life. We are not afraid of our enemies, and we are not afraid to let our requests be made known unto God. We are not afraid to face God, and we are not afraid to face man! Life does not cause us to fear, nor does death. If we appear before the tribunals of men, we will not be moved, nor does the thought of appearing before the throne of God cause us to be shaken. The person with peace knows the things that are present cannot separate him from the love of God, nor can the things that are to come. All of that is in “peace with God.”

This means peace will assist us in knowing the proper direction to take, decisions to make, and how to react. We decide in favor of “peace with God.” Whatever disrupts our fellowship with God, and our persuasion of acceptance, is to be avoided.

This is a peace that can dominate, or rule, the heart. In fact, this is what it WILL do if we will permit it do so. Thus we are admonished, “And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to which also you were called in one body; and be thankful” (Col 3:15). Every major translation says the same thing: “RULE in your hearts.” The word “rule” means to govern or arbitrate—literally, to be an umpire. We would say, preside over your hearts, or control and direct them. This means peace will assist us in knowing the proper direction to take, decisions to make, and how to react. We decide in favor of “peace with God.” Whatever disrupts our fellowship with God, and our persuasion of acceptance, is to be avoided. No matter how long you have been in Christ Jesus, you will be amazed at how consistently peace will lead you.

Remember, this is something those who are justified HAVE, not something they SHOULD have! Those who do not possess peace either are not justified before God, or are not aware that they are. In our time, many fall into the latter category. Because they have heard so little of the Gospel of Christ, they can scarcely imagine they are “accepted in the Beloved” (Eph 1:6). But they are, and that is one reason for the presence of this marvelously comforting text.

THROUGH OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST

The basis of this boldness and confidence, aspects of peace, is not that God is our Friend, but that Christ is our Savior and High Priest! No person, regardless of seeming spiritual progress, is familiar enough with God to come before Him apart from Christ. Whatever you may think of your reconciliation, or the covering of your sins, you CANNOT come before God without coming through Jesus. Perhaps the four living creatures (Rev 4:6-9) can stand before the throne of God independently (although that is doubtful), but you cannot!

Our peace is “through the Lord Jesus Christ” because His sacrifice, and His sacrifice alone, enabled God to justify us. Our exoneration from sin MUST be right. If a valid dissenting voice can be heard from heaven, earth, or hell, our justification cannot be right. If any personality can justly raise an accusation against those whom God has justified, then they have not been justified at all! If our salvation is not right, it is not real! If God is not just in acquitting us, we have not been acquitted! That is why it is written, “being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God set forth as a propitiation by His blood, through faith, to demonstrate His righteousness, because in His forbearance God had passed over the sins that were previously committed, to demonstrate at the present time His righteousness, that He might be just and the justifier of the one who has faith in Jesus”^{NKJV} (Rom 3:24-26).

All of this may seem quite needless to say, but it is really most needful to say. That is why the Spirit has said it! Many treat salvation as though it were a mere Divine technicality, with no regard for the righteousness of God, or maintaining His integrity and holiness throughout the entirety of salvation. It is the complete disregard for this aspect of our salvation that has moved men to imagine they are locked into Christ rather than “accepted” and “received” in Him.

Those who espouse a salvation that allows for sin and a lack of fellowship with God have thrown Jesus aside, as though

His necessity ended at the cross. But He is as necessary now as when you “first believed.” The more fellowship you have with Christ (1 Cor 1:9), the greater the peace you possess. This is the ordained means through which progress is realized.

Should that fellowship diminish, and there is no need for this to occur, peace will also decrease. When this happens, temptation gains strength, resisting the devil is more difficult, and God is not as present as before. One cannot be comfortable before God and comfortable with sin at the same time. Light cannot have fellowship under any conditions. There should be no need to comment on the effects such conditions will yield.

ACCESS INTO GRACE BY FAITH

“2a . . . through whom also we have access by faith into this grace in which we stand . . .” The Spirit continues to elaborate on the effects of our justification by faith. These are very practical, or utilitarian, benefits, and relate to daily living and spiritual progress. All of these require righteousness and faith. Furthermore, neither of these possessions can be maintained in isolation of the other. Where there is no righteousness, there is no faith. And, where there is no faith, there can be no righteousness. It is necessary to affirm this because men insist upon separating the two. It is not possible to possess God’s righteousness if there is no trust in Him, or unreserved acceptance of His promises. Any approach that allows for Divine acceptance without the presence of faith, is simply not true.

For purposes of clarification, faith is not defined by men, but by God. The manner of faith has been seen in Abraham, who did not consider contradicting fleshly circumstances, and was persuaded God was able to do what He promised. That is the faith that saves, and no other faith is recognized by God. The words that follow are built upon these foundational Kingdom realities: righteousness and faith.

THROUGH WHOM

The Spirit will not allow us to forget the necessity of the Son. His presence at the right hand of God, and His intercessory and mediatorial work, are imperative to our continued acceptance. We come into Divine favor through Jesus, and that favor is maintained through Jesus. If the communication between the individual and Jesus is not clear, the benefits that accrue from Christ’s death, resurrection, and consequent enthronement will not be realized. Our salvation from wrath depends upon our relationship to Jesus (Rom 5:9). Being more than a conqueror depends upon our identity with Him (Rom 8:39). We cannot even believe in God apart from Christ. As it is written, “who through Him believe in God, who raised Him from the dead

There is a carnal religious structure that leads men to think they are safe in a creedal view rather than in a vibrant Divine fellowship. But such a view is only a delusion, fostered by the wicked one to keep men from entering into rest.

and gave Him glory, so that your faith and hope are in God”^{NKJV} (1 Pet 1:21).

This aspect of our salvation cannot be overemphasized. It has nearly been obliterated by the sectarian emphases of our day. Those with no real knowledge of grace depend upon their own efforts to bring them to glory. Those who entertain a corrupted view of God’s grace view themselves as already there, with no regard to the jeopardy of their surroundings. In both cases, fellowship with Christ is neglected, even though we have been called into that vibrant and life-sustaining activity (1 Cor 1:9). The “communion of the Holy Spirit” (2 Cor 13:14), and being “taught by” Jesus (Eph 4:20-21) are not viewed as essential by many, and are thus ignored.

This text will not only affirm the reality of such things, but will show them to be absolutely essential.

WE HAVE ACCESS

Those who are justified by faith and have peace with God, also have “access” to the heavenly realms. This is an “access” that is needed. It is not a mere luxury, or option that can be disregarded.

The very concept of “access” suggests something outside of the domain of flesh and blood. It speaks of a legal admission into an area unlawful for others. The word “access” means privilege of entrance. At once you should see that salvation involves a continuous experience—“access.” Faith is not only required to take you out of Egypt, it is required to bring you into Canaan.

Not only is faith necessary for Isaac to be born, it is also essential for him to be offered up to God.

In churches with whom I have been affiliated, there is a marked absence of the concept of “access.” There is, of course, that blessed remnant that has taken hold of these things. But they have done so in spite of the institution, and not because of it. There is a carnal religious structure that leads men to think they are safe in a creedal view rather than in a vibrant Divine fellowship. But such a view is only a delusion, fostered by the wicked one to keep men from entering into rest. It leads men away from God and salvation.

Notice how the responsibility falls upon men, even though the blessing comes from God. He does not say we are guaranteed the promised benefit, but that we have “ACCESS” to it. It is obtainable, but we must enter into the appointed area to obtain it. This does not mean the realization of the benefit is totally dependent upon our effort. Here is the view declared in Scripture. First, God has, through Christ, brought the blessing close to us. Second, in Jesus, He has raised us up and made us sit together with Him in the heavenly places (Eph 2:6). But there is a small distance that yet remains to be traversed by us. It is small when compared to the distance that once existed between us and the essential benefit. From the standpoint of diligence and faithfulness, however, it is challenging enough to engage all of our ransomed powers. All of this makes perfect sense to faith, but absolutely no sense to the flesh.

Him (Jesus Christ) we have obtained access to this grace.^{NRSV} The idea is that Christ has personally brought us into this realm through our faith. The New Living Translation reads this way: “Because of our faith, Christ has brought us into this place of highest privilege.”

dominion over our lives (Rom 6:14), and it is “by the grace of God” that we maintain our manner of life in this world (2 Cor 1:12). It is called “THIS grace” because it is the very grace by which we were justified, and in which we are to remain.

IN WHICH WE STAND

We are not passive in this declared benefit. God has put us into Christ! From another perspective, He has raised us up and made us sit together with Christ in heavenly realms. From the standpoint of our text, He has given us access to “this grace wherein we stand.” The NIV reads, “in which we NOW stand.” This is the only realm in which Divine requirements can be fulfilled. Here is where we grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ (2 Pet 3:18). This is the domain where the flesh is crucified (Gal 5:24), the old man put off, and the new man put on (Eph 4:22-24).

God’s people are required to get into the area where needed spiritual resources can be obtained. This is one of the reasons why God’s people must insist upon a wholesome spiritual environment, where the soul can be cultured, and heavenly realities obtained.

God’s people are required to get into the area where needed spiritual resources can be obtained. This is one of the reasons why God’s people must insist upon a wholesome spiritual environment, where the soul can be cultured, and heavenly realities obtained. Religious fads and imagined worship that is “in vogue,” are a great hindrance to this requirement. They belong more to this world than the world to come, which never has to update its heavenly manners.

The words “this grace” parallels with the “heavenly places” of Ephesians 2:6. The Ephesian text emphasizes the realm to which we have come, and our text emphasizes the benefit to be found there. The idea of the text is that justification has resulted in the believer being put where the required blessings can be obtained. These are the “all spiritual blessings” referenced in Ephesians 1:3. The placement is described in First Corinthians 1:30. “But by His doing you are in Christ Jesus, who became to us wisdom from God, and righteousness and sanctification, and redemption.”^{NASB} Referring to the same glorious reality, Ephesians says, “But God . . . made us alive together with Christ . . . and raised us up with Him, and seated us with Him in the heavenly places, in Christ Jesus” (Eph 2:4-6). All of this refers to the “access” our text affirms is possessed by those who are justified by faith.

Here is where we are “taught by God” (1 Thess 4:9), the “whole armor of God” is put on (Eph 6:10-18), and steadfastness and constancy are realized (1 Cor 15:58).

A Place of Benefit

Blessing and benefit are here. An acute consciousness of the Lord and His Christ are maintained here. Covenant blessings are experienced here. The “grace wherein we stand” is the realm where we are “filled with all joy and peace in believing” (Rom 5:13). It is where prayer is answered, and we are “changed from glory unto glory” (2 Cor 3:18). In this sacred place we “obtain mercy and find grace to help, in the time of need” (Heb 4:16). Here vision is clarified and an anchor for the soul is realized.

As a matter of observation, a religion that must continually be updated does not reflect the eternal order, but the temporal one. While creativity and innovation are certainly not wrong of themselves, when they are applied to such things as worship, prayer, preaching, and other staple kingdom activities, a door is opened that will let more in than godly people desire. One only has to behold the effect of current religious trends to confirm this is the case. None of them, I emphasis NONE of them, has made God more accessible, or the blessing of God more obtainable. Such benefits are consistently realized by faith, not procedure.

INTO THIS GRACE

The phraseology used by the Spirit is critical to our understanding. “Through

The words “THIS GRACE” are like a nail upon which our advantage continually hangs. Apart from this “grace” there is no advantage whatsoever. Initially, we are “justified freely by his grace” (Rom 3:24). “Everlasting consolation and good hope” are also realized by God’s grace (2 Thess 2:16). It is “under grace” that sin loses its

Other References to this Realm

Standing in grace is another view of abiding in Christ (John 15:1-8). It also is the same as remaining in Christ’s love (John 15:10), and “continuing in the Son and in the Father” (1 John 2:24). This is walking in the light (1 John 1:7), living by faith (Heb 10:38), and walking in the Spirit (Gal 5:25).

Our text addresses the same thing from a different perspective. All of the views place the responsibility for maintaining the position in which they have been placed squarely upon the believer. To be sure, God will underwrite the task, guaranteeing our efforts are not in vain. But if anyone thinks abiding or standing can be achieved with no effort on the part of the individual, the evil one has deceived them. It makes just as much sense for Jesus to have laid down His life without any effort, as for you to lay down your's without exertion.

Involvement Is Required

Salvation makes no provision for passive involvement—a sort of spiritual automation that allows for the benefits procured by Christ to pass to the recipient without their involvement. Multitudes of professed Christians appear to be living as though this was not true. Their persons are not involved in what they call salvation. They are spiritually emaciated, and appear to think little or nothing of it. They imagine their connection with the institution is sufficient—but it is not.

STANDING

The very posture of “standing” assumes a hostile environment, enemies, and the possibility of debilitating weakness. Standing means nothing if there is no resistance, no tendency to fail, or no opponents to face.

“Standing” not only assumes militant surroundings, it also implies boldness, courage, and freedom from fear and a withdrawing spirit.

“Standing” cannot be accomplished on the feet of human works, but within the framework of God’s grace. That is precisely why we are given free access to the grace of God, that we might be “able to stand” (Eph 6:11). Apart from this grace, “standing” is not possible. Those, therefore, who hear and know little or nothing about the grace of God are at a decided disadvantage—and it is greater than they dare to imagine.

A divided house, for example, “cannot stand” (Mk 3:24). There are some who are weak, whom God must “make” to stand (Rom 14:4), but that is not a lifetime guarantee. At some point, the believer must become “strong in the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ” (2 Tim 2:1), and “in the power of His might” (Eph 6:10). Our faith must “stand” (1 Cor 2:5). We ourselves are to “stand fast in the faith,” continuing to trust in the lord (1 Cor 16:13). We are admonished to “stand fast in the liberty” for which Christ has freed us (Gal 5:1). There is standing to be done “against the wiles of the devil” (Eph 6:11), and standing “in the evil day,” under focused and intense onslaughts by Satan (Eph 6:13). We are to think in terms of standing “perfect and complete in all the will of God” (Col 4:12).

And how is all of this to be accomplished? How will we be able to fulfill such lofty requirements? Our text tells us.

Because we have believed on His Son, according to His own record, God has lavished His favor upon us. In Christ, He has placed us in the realm where His loving favor dominates, and where it is not restrained. Our responsibility is to remain there.

DIVINE FAVOR

It is in grace that we are enabled to “stand.” Peter put it this way, “this is the true grace of God wherein ye stand” (1 Pet 5:12). The grace of God speaks of His love and favor, His preference and attraction. When someone is in the grace of God, they are in His favor, and receive His benefits. Thus “Noah found GRACE in the eyes of the Lord” (Gen 6:8).

Because we have believed on His Son, according to His own record, God has lavished His favor upon us. In Christ, He has placed us in the realm where His loving favor dominates, and where it is not restrained. Our responsibility is to remain there, not succumbing to the devil’s attempts to lure us away from the sacred citadel of Divine favor.

Adam and Eve were once in God’s favor, and then were drawn away from it (Gen 3:24). Israel experienced the love and preference of the Living God, then moved Him to abhor them (Psa 106:40). King Saul was chosen and favored of God to be king, then so conducted his life that God “repented” He had “set up Saul to be king” (1 Sam 15:11).

Stern Admonitions

Men are not to take for granted they will remain in God’s favor. Solemnly saints are told, “Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? are we stronger than he?” (1 Cor 10:22). Believers are told they “should not lust after evil things” (1 Cor 10:6), neither be “idolaters” (10:7). We are admonished to not “commit fornication” (10:8), or “tempt Christ” (10:9), or “murmur” (10:10).

Those in Christ are warned, “Beware, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God” (Heb 3:12), and take every measure to avoid being “hardened through the deceitfulness of sin” (Heb 3:13). They are told to “harden not” their hearts, as Israel did in the day they provoked God to anger (Heb 3:15). Those in Christ are exhorted, “quench not the Spirit,” and “grieve not the Spirit” (1 Thee 5:19; Eph 4:30).

Why are such warnings issued? What purpose do they serve if we are standing in the grace of God? They are given because of the necessity of remaining in God’s grace. The same God who delivered us can be provoked to anger—by the very people He once delivered. If you are naive enough to doubt that, let king Saul and the Israelites speak to your heart. Their record is written “for our admonition,” not our information! If we imagine God cannot be provoked by His own creation, and thrust them from the very realm in which He placed them, then we must seriously consider Adam and Eve.

Spiritual stability can only be realized within the circumference of God’s favor. That favor can only be realized through faith, for salvation is “by grace through faith” from beginning to end (Eph 2:8). Remember, “without faith, it is impossible to please God” (Heb 11:6). It makes no difference whether you have received the initial promise like Abraham, or are asked to offer up what God has given you, like Abraham offering Isaac—faith is imperative. Heaven does not take your faith for granted, but puts it to the test, that it might appear to honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus (1 Pet 1:7). Why would men take it for granted? It is only because Satan tempts them to do so.

Be sure, the faith that saved you can ensure that you are kept. We are, after all, “kept by the power of God through faith” (1 Pet 1:5). God is pleased with everyone who is believing, regardless of their past. Equally true, God is displeased with everyone who is not believing, regardless of their past. There is absolute consistency in these things.

Let every believer see to it that they remain where God has placed them. Your faith will ensure this happens, for faith is always honored by God, and never overlooked by Him. It is never vain or disappointed to trust God! How marvelous to begin in a place where we can, by the grace of God, remain; to be placed in a realm where we can abide!

REJOICING IN HOPE OF THE GLORY OF GOD

“^{2b} . . . and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.” What powerful effects are wrought in our justification! Not only are iniquities forgiven and sins covered, we are placed in a realm where spiritual firmness and solidity are realized.

Presence behind the veil, where the Forerunner has entered for us, even Jesus”^{NKJV} (Heb 6:19b).

desert of oppression, deep pit of near-despair, and the storms of persecution., The evil one has nothing in his arsenal that can dent the helmet of “the hope of salvation” (1 Thess 5:8).

Anticipation

While in this blessed domain a new kind of rejoicing is experienced. It has no parallel in the world, and is so lofty the flesh is incapable of imagining it. This is a joy that is common to all believers—to everyone who has been made to sit with Christ Jesus in heavenly places. It is not an impulsive joy, but springs from faith. The Spirit refers to this as “joy of faith,” or “joy in the faith”^{NASB} (Phil 1:25). Because it is “of faith,” joy can increase and abound. It is exhilarating, but is not exhilaration. It is emotional, but not emotionalism.

It buoys up the soul, enabling the child of God to make progress under pressing and difficult circumstances. This hope can survive the desert of oppression, deep pit of near-despair, and the storms of persecution., The evil one has nothing in his arsenal that can dent the helmet of “the hope of salvation”

Here is something for which holy men prayed. Paul, for example, did not discontinue praying for the saints of God. He prayed God would give them “the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him, the eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that you may know what is the hope of His calling” (Eph 1:17-18). This was no passing notion, for through the Spirit the Apostle saw the necessity of such illumination.

One of the great spiritual contradictions of our time is the development of mega-churches with pygmy hope—large religious institutions with little or no awareness at all of the glory that is to come. It is reflected in the brevity of their gatherings, the shallowness of their preaching, and their lack of spiritual appetite. This is not intended to be a mere diatribe against legitimate and God-honoring growth. It IS intended to point out that it is serious to lack the critical aspects of life in Christ.

REJOICING IN HOPE

This is a rational joy, proceeding from the awareness faith brings of the hope set before us. You have, after all, been called in “one hope of your calling” (Eph 4:4). That “hope” is personal, yet differs nothing from the hope of all other believers. There is a single hope, common to all believers, yet intensely personal.

By its very nature, this “hope” involves a lively awareness of the exalted Christ, and “the heavenly places” into which we have been raised. It is also accompanied by a solid persuasion that we too will be there soon, with our Lord and in possession of an “eternal inheritance” (Heb 9:15). Where these elements are missing, the believer is wholly inadequate, and can expect little or no victory.

Powerful and Essential

This vibrant hope, or expectation of glory, is “as cold waters to a thirsty soul” (Prov 25:25). It buoys up the soul, enabling the child of God to make progress under pressing and difficult circumstances. This hope can survive the

Rejoicing

This hope is frequently related to rejoicing. Romans 12:12 admonishes believers to “rejoice in hope.” Hebrews 3:6 goes so far as to say we are Christ’s household only “IF we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm to the end.”^{NKJV} Indeed, that is an arresting consideration! Referring to this confident joy, Hebrews 3:14 also makes a firm statement. “For we have become

Steadfast and Sure

It should at once be obvious that “hope” is something firm and steadfast, for men cannot be set to rejoicing in something that is not sure. In fact, this hope is described as “an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast” (Heb 6:19a). Unlike anchors employed on the seas of earth, this anchor is secured upward, within the heavenly realms—“the partakers of Christ IF we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast to the end. ^{NKJV}

Romans 15:13 also shows the association of joy with hope. “Now may the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that you may abound in hope by the power of the Holy Spirit. ^{NKJV} Here we see an abounding hope requires “all joy and peace in believing,” which is only possible through the ministry of the Holy Spirit.

Those in Christ are to be continually reminded of the hope set before them. Their minds are to be challenged and comforted by the proclamation of their determined conformity to the image of the Son (Rom 8:29-30). If they are told of their duty, they should be told twice as much of their inheritance. If they are corrected, they should be given exceeding great and precious promises to provide a joyful incentive to shape up. We have the example of the Son of God Himself, who moved flawed churches to correct their condition by holding lofty and joyful promises before them (Rev 2:7,11,17,26; 3:5,12,21).

Having come from a background where a great deal of emphasis was placed on being the right church, or the “New Testament church,” I can tell you I never heard any emphasis remotely similar to these. In fact, if I had not read the texts for myself, I would have had no idea they were even in the Bible!

OF THE GLORY OF GOD

Here is a marvelous thing! Notice the reality with which Kingdom hope is associated: “we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.” This is a dominating hope that swells and rises above the pandemonium of this world. Other versions read as follows: “we exult in hope of the glory of God,” ^{NASB} “we boast in our hope of sharing the glory of God,” ^{NRSV} “we confidently and joyfully look forward to sharing God’s glory.” ^{NLT}

We do not rejoice in the hope of only seeing God’s glory, but of SHARING in it—participating in it. Every person that has dwelt upon the earth will see God’s glory. There is nothing unique about that. As it is written, “And the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it” (Isa 40:5). All, indeed, will “see it together,” but all will not “share” in it!

What Does It Mean?

What does it mean to rejoice in hope of sharing the glory of God? This is the “glory of God” as it will be revealed in the sons of God. The whole creation is waiting for this unveiling, as well as we ourselves. As it is written, “For the creation was subjected to futility, not of its own will, but because of Him who subjected it, in hope that the creation itself also will be set free from its slavery to corruption into the freedom of the glory of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groans and suffers the pains of childbirth together until now. And not only this, but also we ourselves, having the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting eagerly for our adoption as sons, the redemption of our body” ^{NASB} (Rom 8:19-23).

According to God’s eternal purpose, everything is moving toward an appointed end, or conclusion. The entire natural order is sensitive to this crowning culmination. However, the most pronounced longing is found within those who have been justified by faith. They have been given more insight into the appointed terminus of all things, and are eagerly awaiting it.

The “glory of God” will override all other glories, moving them into oblivion. No competing glory will be able to survive the Lord Jesus returning in His glory, the glory of the Father, and that of the holy angels. The natural order, which has several times been shaken by God drawing near, will burst into flame at the appearing of His glory (2 Pet 3:10-12). This glory will be unveiled in the Person of Christ, who is “the express image of God” (Heb 1:3), and the “fulness” of His Person (Col 1:19; 2:9).

The saints are rejoicing in the hope of the glory of God, because when His glory is seen, their’s will be seen also. As it is written, “When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory” (Col 3:4). No more dissimilarities will be seen in the saved, but they will “bear the image of the heavenly” (1 Cor 15:49). No more struggle! No more frustration! No more cry of wretchedness! The glory of God will end all such things!

In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, all things presently competing with the glory of God will be gone, dissolved in the wake of a greater glory—a revealed glory. Satan will be banished.

In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, all things presently competing with the glory of God will be gone, dissolved in the wake of a greater glory—a revealed glory. Satan will be banished. Principalities and powers will be thrown down in every quarter of the universe.

Principalities and powers will be thrown down in every quarter of the universe. The blazing glory of God will be seen for what it really is—dominating, invincible, and forever more. All other glories will be seen for what they are: subservient, powerless, and only for a time! It is no wonder faith moves us to “rejoice in hope of the glory of God!”

We must not fail, however, to see the relation of this glorying to justification by faith. When the righteousness of God is imputed to us, it produces these effects. This is the “effect of righteousness” (Isa 32:17)—what we experience as a result of possessing the righteousness of God.

No child of God can do without “rejoicing in hope of the glory of God.” This is not a luxury, but a necessity, else it would not be integral to God’s great salvation. If you desire this kind of joy., your mind must become enthralled with the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. It will not be found in your circumstances or in your attainments, however good they may appear to be. When you can see this truth concerning the righteousness of God being given to you, and rejoicing will be kindled. What is more, the salvation of God is calculated to help you see it.

GLORYING IN TRIBULATION

“^{3a} And not only that, but we also glory in tribulations . . .” Just as justification is wide in scope and profound in depth, so are its effects. When faith is counted to men for righteousness, no small accomplishment has taken place. This involves a Divine pronouncement, to be sure, but it also is the “work of God.” Just as the natural creation was filled with all manner of life and activity, so is the new creation pervaded by all kinds of fruit and expression. Already we have been told of “peace with God,” free “access” into the grace in which we stand, and “rejoicing in hope of the glory of God.” Already, we have heard of benefits far surpassing any advantages before Christ. Yet, there is more.

NOT ONLY SO

Life in Christ is the “not only so” life, or the “more than that”^{RSV} blessing. As we will see, living by faith addresses every facet of life, both pleasant and unpleasant.

Thus far, the benefits affirmed have been pleasing: peace with God, access to grace, and rejoicing in hope. The Spirit now lingers on the matter of rejoicing. It is not limited to the contemplation of our future glory. Justification enables us to deal with the present, even when it is most grievous. When we talk about salvation, we are not philosophizing, or dealing in mystical speculation and mortal opinion. A religion that leaves one in the realm of philosophy brings no advantage to the individual. Our experience in this world must be touched by what we believe, and this is precisely what faith does.

GLORYING IN TRIBULATIONS

The suffering of godly people has long been a mystery to those without faith—and even to some who have faith. Here is a part of life in Christ that is conveniently ignored by the religious opportunist. Some who choose to deal with it seek their personal advantage rather than that of the suffering saint.

There are even professional high-paid careers that are wholly occupied with helping the troubled. While I do not deny that some good has come from these efforts, they are far inferior to the benefits of being justified by faith.

What Is Tribulation

Here is an extremely strong word that every person senses is laden with difficult things. Etymologically,

Here a fresh aspect of tribulations is seen. They are an appointment! They come by Divine direction, and are governed by the purpose of God, not the shifting circumstances of life. Properly seen, tribulation, or affliction, is one of the manners in which God works with us, conforming us to the image of His Son.

“tribulation” comes from θλίψω, which means affliction, anguish, trouble, persecution, burdened, and afflicted. It involves being pressed together with hardship, experiencing oppression, being distressed, and placed in straits—between two hard places.

Elsewhere, Paul uses this precise word to testify to the hardships brought on by faith. He shows the wide variety of “trouble.” “But in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions (θλίψεων), in necessities, in distresses, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults [riots], in labors, in watchings, in fastings” (2 Cor 6:4-5).

These “tribulations,” or “afflictions,” are not to move the believer from the joy of salvation, but to bring solidity and stability. Thus we are exhorted, “That no man should be moved [shaken from the foundations] by these afflictions (θλίψεων): for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto” (1 Thess 3:3).

A Fresh Aspect Seen

Here a fresh aspect of tribulations is seen. They are an appointment! They come by Divine direction, and are governed by the purpose of God, not the shifting circumstances of life. Properly seen, tribulation, or affliction, is one of the manners in which God works with us, conforming us to the image of His Son. In this experience, the Holy Spirit is actually changing us from one stage of glory to another. Moving us further from the world and closer to the Lord.

Tribulation is similar to a threshing process, where the chaff is separated from the wheat. It is like a smelting process, where impurities are removed from the righteous. Of itself, tribulation, anguish, and trouble, are anything but pleasant. Yet the believer is enabled by grace to derive the best from the circumstance, seeing more clearly, and becoming more confident.

The Devil's Confusion

I do not know if the devil is continually confused, but should not be surprised if this is the case. If God is never confused, and the devil is the precise antithesis of God, it seems reasonable that he is continually confused and bewildered at the responses of the saints. We know from the book of Job that Satan thinks the righteous will be moved away from God by trouble and hardship. Here was Satan's reasoning. “But put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, and he will curse thee to thy face . . . Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life. But put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face”

(Job 1:11 ; 2:4-5).

Because of his thorough wickedness, the devil is unable to learn, or to be taught. Thus he continues to think men can be moved away from God by trouble and difficulty. Wherever he is given leave by the Sovereign God, he brings hardship upon the saints, whether a thorn, a storm, a beating, or despair. He thinks if life is miserable for the saints, they will deny the Lord and go back to their old ways. That is his intent behind trouble, tribulation, anguish, and distress. However, his view is the wrong view, and is to be thrown down to the ground.

A Heavenly View

Our text is a heavenly view of trouble, an inspired perspective. It declares the manner in which FAITH perceives tribulation. It announces how justification equips the believer to face the most grievous hardship.

Unbelief causes both heart and lips to murmur and complain when difficulty hems men in on every side. How vividly this was seen in Israel and their wilderness wanderings (Ex 15:24; 16:2; 17:3; Num 14:2; 16:41). Their trouble brought out their unbelief. For the one living by faith, it brings out their trust and reliance upon the Lord. Trouble, then, is a most accurate test that will determine whether the person is really walking by faith.

Glorying

We not only rejoice in hope of the glory of God, but “we also glory in tribulations.” Other versions read, “rejoice in our sufferings,”^{RSV} “exult in our tribulations,”^{NASB} “boast in our sufferings,”^{NRSV} “have joy in our troubles.”^{BBE} Capturing the aspect of admonition in the text, the NLT reads, “We can rejoice, too, when we run into problems and trials.”

Glorying is confident joy and insightful boasting. It comes from spiritual insight and understanding that sees beyond the trouble into the purpose and love of God. Glorying recognizes the temporality of trouble and the eternity of salvation. It comprehends that sifting is occurring in tribulation, and rejoices in the prospect of the outcome. Unlike the swine, the eyes of the elect are not turned downward. Rather, they are looking upward, a stance that enables rejoicing to take place IN trouble or tribulation.

Glorying in tribulation is the opposite of murmuring when trouble comes. Such glorying delights the Lord, frustrates the devil, and strengthens the saints. It brings the aid of heavenly powers and overcomes evil powers.

Let it be clear, the glorying, or rejoicing, is not in the tribulations themselves, but in the effects wrought by them. When it is known they come by appointment, are strictly measured so they will not overcome us, and will yield a harvest of good things, men may glory in tribulations.

Let it be clear, the glorying, or rejoicing, is not in the tribulations themselves, but in the effects wrought by them. When it is known they come by appointment, are strictly measured so they will not overcome us, and will yield a harvest of good things, men may glory in tribulations.

It must be remembered that the way to the crown is by the way of the cross. Believers must be told this, else life will become too burdensome to them. That is why holy men were noted for “strengthening the souls of the disciples, exhorting them to continue in the faith, and saying, ‘We must through many tribulations enter the kingdom of God’” (Acts 14:22). The godly therefore reason, “If I am suffering many tribulations, I am in the process of entering God’s kingdom. I am coming closer to the inheritance and further from the curse. These sufferings of mine prove I am on the way that leads to life, and therefore I will rejoice.”

When is it that God ministers comfort and consolation to us? When do we experience the rich solace that strengthens the heart, firms up our hope, and causes peace to flow like a river into us? Is it not in tribulation? As it is written, “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and God of all comfort, who comforts us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort those who are in any trouble, with the comfort with which we ourselves are comforted by God. For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also abounds through Christ”^{NKJV} (2 Cor 1:4-5).

Only If Need Be

There is a sweetness in considering various aspects of our trials. One of the most precious is this: our trials are only experienced as necessary. Thus it is written, “In this you greatly rejoice, though now for a little while, if need be, you have been grieved by various trials, that the genuineness of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perishes, though it is tested by fire, may be found to praise, honor, and glory at the revelation of Jesus Christ”^{NKJV} (1 Pet 1:6-7). Our tribulations are brief, and always with purpose. They only come to us if they are needed – needed to refine our faith, which is tested by fiery trial. Properly received, our tribulations will enable our faith to be found “to praise, honor, and glory at the revelation of Jesus Christ.” It is no wonder that we “glory in tribulations!” By grace, we are privy to both their purpose and outcome.

The Strength of Divine Love

The love of Christ for us is so intent and unrelenting that we cannot be separated from it by “tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword” (Rom 8:35). The love of God in Christ Jesus is so strong toward us that “neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us” from it (Rom 8:39).

But this is no lifeless dogma. It is no spiritually impoverished and impractical creed. This is the truth, and is confirmed to the heart in the experience of tribulation, distress, persecution, famine, nakedness, peril, sword, and other hard aspects of life. This is the knowledge that enables us to “glory in tribulations also.”

We exult in the confirmation of sonship that they bring. We joy in the rich consolation that is ministered to us in the midst of them. We leap for joy at the anticipation of being finally relieved of them all. We spiritually boast in the accomplishments of our Lord through them. Through them He is removing our dross, readying us for glory, conforming us to His image, and confirming the sufficiency of His grace. There is a Divine work being accomplished in all of your tribulations and difficulties! It is He that is working within you (Phil 2:13).

TRIBULATION PRODUCES PERSEVERANCE

*“^{3b} . . . knowing that tribulation produces perseverance . . . ”*There is a level of knowledge that can only be experienced by faith. It is a product of justification, and a proof of Divine favor. This knowledge is not theoretical, academic, or hypothetical. It is the kind of knowledge that yields both confidence and joy, as well as peace and strength.

There is a blight upon the church that can only be removed by special “eye salve.” I refer to it as an academic blight that exalts the scribes rather than the Savior, and gives honor to the lawyers rather than the Lawgiver. It is a malignant infection that puts more stress on the mind than the heart, and makes little or no room for faith. This approach to learning is completely incapable of producing the kind of knowledge declared in our text. This condition exists because such erudition cannot reach the heart, effect the conscience, or open the heavens. While there may be place for it, it is an extremely small place, nothing to be compared with the “large room” into which God places us by faith (Psa 31:8). In order to think in concert with our text, you must be set in a “large place” (Psa 118:5), where restrictive walls of flesh no longer exist.

INTUITIVE, YET COGNITIVE

This knowledge is both intuitive and cognitive, which circumstance is indeed most marvelous.

Intuitive

By “intuitive,” I mean instinctive—a knowledge that is inherent in the new creation. There is a sense in which it is not learned, but received. Just as the brute creation possesses certain instincts from birth, so the new creation has a certain kind of knowledge from its genesis. This is the kind of knowledge described in a marvelous aspect of the New Covenant. “I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts . . . I will put my laws into their hearts,

This is something God Himself does. It is not a learning process as ordinarily conceived. It is the nature of the “new man” to know certain things—to sense their truth, and be able to move out upon them. This is another way of saying, “for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest” and in their minds will I write them” (Heb 8:10; 10:16).

This is something God Himself does. It is not a learning process as ordinarily conceived. It is the nature of the “new man” to know certain things—to sense their truth, and be able to move out upon them. This is another way of saying, “for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest” (Heb 8:11).

Those who are born again sense the truth of our text, even before they have heard it. By this, I mean it will not sound strange to them the very first time they hear it. The sound of the words, which is essential, will confirm what they already sense in their hearts.

Cognitive

By “cognitive,” I mean knowledge that comes from intellectual awareness and judgment. It is knowledge reflected in thought and perception. It is learned through both teaching and experience, and is an area of growth. In the Kingdom of God, cognitive knowledge always is in strict agreement with intuitive knowledge, and vice versa. To put it another way, the laws written upon and put within our hearts and minds are in strict agreement with the Scriptures, which have been written by inspired and holy men of God. What the new creation senses by its very nature, is confirmed by “every word of God.” Conversely, every word of God will be readily acknowledged to be the truth by all those with a love for the truth, which is inherent in the “new man.”

All of this is not an intellectual bypath, intended to introduce confusion to the believer. It rather shows to us why “knowing” is given such a high priority in the New Covenant. Unlike mere erudition, this knowledge produces a rich confidence that enables the child of God to stand in the midst of a raging storm and tumultuous waves.

Not Applicable in Nature

Young men or women can memorize certain mathematical tables and theorems, yet totally lack any confidence to employ them for building a large structure or resolving a challenging problem. But if you could write those tables and theorems on their hearts, then they would make sense to them when they heard them, and they could use them productively. Their confidence would move them into action as though they had worked with them for many years. That is the known power of confidence.

In nature, this scenario is not possible. But this is not the case in grace. Not only is this possible, it is integral to the New Covenant.

Let me be as precise as I can on this matter, for it is a critical aspect of understanding living by faith. When we read words like “we know . . .” or “knowing that . . .” it is assumed the individual has been born again. It is assumed that the words may be new, but will not be strange. They will not offend or confuse the hearer, but will be confirming and uplifting. The very process of edification assumes there has been a change in the individual. In that change, the heart is infinitely more advanced than the mind. It possesses a greater sensitivity and understanding than the mind. Yet, until the mind is blessed with confirming knowledge, the experience of the believer will be limited, and his experiential involvement with Christ abridged. Expression will tend to be clumsy, and spiritual naivete will cause unnecessary stumbling and error.

Some Illustrations

Some illustrations of this will suffice to confirm what I have said. The following are things “we know.” For many genuine believers, they are totally new intellectually, yet they are not strange, abrasive, or hard to receive. You do not want to miss how marvelous this is.

“And WE KNOW that all things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are the called according to His purpose . . . For WE KNOW that if our earthly house, this tent, is destroyed, we have a building from God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens . . . Beloved, now we are children of God; and it has not yet been revealed what we shall be, but WE KNOW that when He is revealed, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is . . . WE KNOW that we have passed from death to life, because we love the brethren. He who does not love his brother abides in death . . . WE KNOW that we are of God, and the whole world lies under the sway of the wicked one . . . And WE KNOW that the Son of God has come and has given us an understanding, that we may know Him who is true; and we are in Him who is true, in His Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God and eternal life” (Rom 8:28; 2 Cor 5:1; 1 John 3:2,14; 5:19,20).

There are many believers who know these things in their hearts, but are cognitively unaware of them. They have been written into their minds in this way: their minds are now able to receive and delight in these affirmation. They are written in their hearts in this sense: they recognize their truth and are capable of relying upon them without fear or doubt.

The Reason for this Diversion

Perseverance is consistency, dependability, and faithfulness. It is continuing in the race when it makes no sense to the flesh to do so. It is refusing to quit. It is remaining strong. It is looking up when nothing but black clouds are hovering over us.

There is a reason for this brief diversion. The text before us affirms things that will stagger the natural mind, but rejoice the new heart. The person whose mind is renewed, and is devoted to serving the Law of God (Rom 7:25) will immediately see the truth of them. Such an one will relate what is said to life, and find it brings a comforting clarity and understanding that nature in all of its refinements cannot produce. The Spirit will now take us into high places that will suffocate the flesh, but bring refreshing vitality to the spirit.

TRIBULATION PRODUCES PERSEVERANCE

Here is a statement flesh cannot receive. It sees tribulation as producing nothing of value, but only sorrow and grief. The KJV reads, “tribulation worketh patience.” Other versions read, “suffering produces endurance,” ^{RSV} “tribulation brings about perseverance,” ^{NASB} “trouble gives us the power of waiting,” ^{BBE} “hardship develops perseverance,” ^{NJB} and “problems and trials . . . help us learn to endure.” ^{NLT}

Tribulation is productive because it has a purpose. Trouble is not mere happenstance or fate. The difficulties that you have faced are not circumstances of chance. Something is taking place in them—something that is necessary and good. When you are in tribulation, you are in a productive mode, where very real and essential kingdom qualities are being fashioned. In your trouble, something is being given to you—something from God. Something is being developed in you—something by God. You are being helped along to another stage of glory by your afflictions! Can you believe that?

What Is Perseverance, or Patience?

The older word “patience” means continuing to run under hardship. It is continuing to row in the midst of a storm. It is still trusting when all of experience seems to contradict the promise. Patience, or perseverance, involves waiting on the Lord. It is looking to the Lord while we run, and expecting the fulfillment of His Word. Patience is Abraham continuing to believe God for Isaac twenty-five years after the promise. It is Abraham taking Isaac to the mountain to sacrifice him to God, even though he was the only one through the promise of God would be realized. It is Sarah receiving strength to conceive against all the laws of nature.

Patience is Samson waiting for a chance to take hold of the pillars. It is David faithfully keeping a few sheep until the challenge of Goliath. It is Moses keeping the sheep of Jethro in the desert. It is Joshua and Caleb remaining faithful until they got to the promised land. Perseverance is Paul writing from prison, listening for the Lord during a ship-breaking storm, and getting up after he was stoned.

Perseverance is consistency, dependability, and faithfulness. It is continuing in the race when it makes no sense to the flesh to do so. It is refusing to quit. It is remaining strong. It is looking up when nothing but black clouds are hovering over us. It is looking for food in a famine, expecting water to come out of a rock, and preparing a meal for three when there is only enough for one last meal for two. Perseverance is singing at midnight when your feet are in the stocks. It is shaking a serpent that has bitten you into the fire, and continuing with what you were doing.

Most Clearly Seen in Christ

This virtue is seen most clearly in our Lord Jesus Christ. Perseverance is praying when your sweat is like great drops of blood falling down to the ground. It is admitting you are the Son of God before those who mock you, and finding a

We are not speaking of some Kingdom novelty that can be received or neglected with no lasting results. Perseverance is something that is necessary, required, mandatory, and imperative. There is no salvation without this—no promise of life that excludes it.

Eternal life will be given only to those “who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality” (Rom 2:7). The rich endures to the end shall be saved” (Matt 24:13). Ponder the exhortation of Paul. “You therefore must endure hardship as a good soldier of Jesus Christ” (2 Tim 2:3). Let there be no lingering doubt in your mind concerning the essentiality of enduring, persevering, and having patience unto the end!

How Does It Come?

And how is such endurance realized? How is perseverance developed in the people of God? It is through tribulation, trouble, affliction, and persecution! All of these produce a vehement desire to get out of this world and into the next! Faith responds to difficulty by shouting, “I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep what I have committed to Him until that Day”^{NKJV} (2 Tim 1:12b).

During tribulation it may not seem as though you are making any progress. Your tears may blind your eyes, and your sorrows weigh down your heart. But in your trouble the Spirit is changing you to another stage of glory. As you live by faith, you are becoming more determined to obtain the prize. The crown of glory is looming larger, and the promised inheritance is becoming more precious. The world is receding into the background, and a “better country” is coming more into view. Your flesh is growing weaker, and your spirit is growing stronger, being renewed day by day! If you are in Christ, you too “know” this to be true.

We are not speaking of some Kingdom novelty that can be received or neglected with no lasting results. Perseverance is something that is necessary, required, mandatory, and imperative. There is no salvation without this—no promise of life that excludes it.

person to save when on the cross of cursing. Perseverance is setting your face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem and die for the sins of the world, even when your own disciples try and dissuade you from doing so. Perseverance is carrying your own cross, taking care of your mother when you are dying, and considering the joy set before you when you are being made sin and cursed by your own Father.

Absolutely Essential promises of God are only inherited through “through faith and patience” (Heb 6:12). It is ever true that we “have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise” (Heb 10:36). With stern yet gentle words we are admonished to “run with endurance the race that is set before us”^{NKJV} (Heb 12:1).

If you are ever tempted to quit, or be less aggressive to obtain the inheritance, think of the words of Jesus. “But he who

PERSEVERANCE PRODUCES CHARACTER

“^{As} and perseverance, character . . .” The KJV reads, “and patience [worketh] experience.” The ASV reads, “steadfastness [produces] approvedness.” Taking the words to their full etymological meaning, the NLT reads, “endurance develops strength of character in us,” and the NJB reads, “perseverance develops a tested character.” The word “character,” or “experience,” comes from the Greek word δοκιμήν, which means “having the quality of having stood the test: matured or proven character.” It also stands for “the experience of testing, and the proof of genuine evidence.”

The word “experience,” is used in the KJV, Websters, Duoay-Rheims, Darby’s, Basic Bible English, and Young’s Literal Translation. It emphasizes the PROCESS by which true character, or worth, is established. The word “character,” used in the NKJV, RSV, NASB, NIV, NIB, NLT, and NJB stresses the result of the process, which is proven character. Both translations are technically and spiritually correct.

Thus, we understand this verse to mean, through the testing and consequent continuance in well doing, true character is developed. To put it another way, by enduring the tests through which we are caused to pass, our profession is validated, and we are proved to be real disciples.

SPIRITUAL CHARACTER

Character is moral excellence—the ability to make the right choices when faced with competing influences, and remain faithful when one must suffer to do so. Some people, like the unfaithful spies of Israel, are so intimidated by opposition that they shrink back in fear (Num 13:31-33). In their cases, the circumstances proved they did NOT have faith. The identical circumstances confirmed that Joshua and Caleb DID have faith (Num 14:6-9; 14:30,38).

An untried person, if there be such a thing, is not to be placed in areas of kingdom responsibility. Such do not have the confidence and assurance that comes from passing through the floods and fires of Divine testing. That is precisely why the people of God are not to led by novices (1 Tim 3:6).

The experience, or development of character, is beautifully stated by the Apostle Paul. In harmony with our text, he shows that tribulation proved the worth of the faith he possessed. "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed" (2 Cor 4:8-9). What he experienced was tribulation. What did NOT happen proved his character.

In our text, Paul speaks of trials differently than James. On the surface, they seem to contradict one another. Paul says patience, or endurance, produces a tried character. James says the opposite: "the trying of your faith worketh patience" (James 1:3). But there is no contradiction between the two. James is speaking of the testing itself, while Paul is referring to the outcome of the testing. Our text is saying, true character has been developed in the fire of trial. It is the conclusion of the process. James is saying, the fire of trial comes upon us so that our character may be proved true. The process has an appointed purpose.

This is precisely the affirmation of James, who pronounces a blessing on the enduring, or persevering, one. "Blessed is the man who endures temptation; for when he has been approved, he will receive the crown of life which the Lord has promised to those who love Him"^{NKJV} (James 1:12).

The truth of the matter is that God places men in circumstances that will bring out what is really in them. For those who live by faith, the result will always be good! It simply is not possible to live by faith and walk in the Spirit, then succumb to the trial.

The Corinthian Dilemma

There was a certain kind of testing to which the Corinthian church was subjected. False teachers came among them, spouting such heresies as can scarcely be imagined. Some said there was no resurrection of the dead (1 Cor 15:12). Others doubted that Paul was even an Apostle (1 Cor 9:1-3). Still others declared they were followers of Paul, Apollos, and Cephas (1 Cor 1:1:12; 3:4). There was even contemptible conduct around the table of the Lord (1 Cor 11:20-22). It was a sorrowful situation.

And how will the Spirit speak of those circumstances? What will He say of the heretical teaching and conduct that had arisen in their assembly? Here is His assessment. "For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you" (1 Cor 11:19). The NIV reads, "No doubt there have to be differences among you to show which of you have God's approval." The NRSV reads, "Indeed, there have to be factions among you, for only so will it become clear who among you are genuine." What revelation trouble brings!

There you have a reason for church squabbles, dissension, factions, and false doctrine. These are provings from God—provings that "must needs be"—to put the profession of men to the test. The Lord thus puts men into the fire to see the real worth of their faith. This is a circumstance to be recognized.

When such tests are over, those who have been justified by faith, and are living by faith will always pass the trial. They will always end up on the other side of the raging sea. Their faith will be proved genuine by the blast of the fiery furnace and the ferocity of the testing waves. Even during their trials, they who wait upon the Lord will be able to mount up with wings like eagles, run and not be wear, walk and not faint! (Isa 40:31)

In the Scriptural sense of the word, "experience" is not having something unique happen to you. It is not being struck down by the Spirit, or engaging in some activity that is considered euphoric or exhilarating. Real experience is going in the dungeon like Joseph, and passing the test. It is entering the lion's den like Daniel, and talking to the king in the morning. It is going into to a raging inferno, like the three Hebrew children, and only losing your bonds. That is real "experience."

Experience is young David facing the giant and seasoned warrior Goliath, and leaving the battle field with the sword of a decapitated enemy. It is Noah finishing the ark, entering it, and coming out after the flood had ravaged the world. That is real experience!

Experience that is Known

fears” (Psa 34:4). With joy, the one who lives by faith acknowledges, “This poor man cried out, and the LORD heard him, And saved him out of all his troubles” (Psa 34:6). The faith of such a person is not true because he passed through the trial. Rather, he passed through the trial because his faith was true.

Faith tells the person this, and thus causes him to become more steadfast after the trial than he was before. Through a storm, advancement is made—against the wind, and in spite of the weakness of the tried sailor! The trial, therefore, becomes a confirmation of the work God has already done within the believer.

The words of Jesus are appropriate at this point, revealing the nature of the Kingdom. “We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen” (John 3:11). So it is with all the saved, who are proved true through trial. They can now speak authoritatively. For faith, that is a rich consolation, indeed!

CHARACTER PRODUCES HOPE

“^{4b} . . . and character, hope.” For the second time in this short passage, the Spirit brings “hope” before us. He first affirmed that, being justified by faith and having access into grace through Jesus Christ, we stand and “rejoice in hope of the glory of God” (5:1-2). Hope is like a precious gem, held by the setting faith upon the ring of justification, and garnished with the precious stones of access and rejoicing. The whole of the beautiful arrangement glows with the grace of God, and is steadfast and sure.

What marvelous associations have been made with this “one hope” of our calling (Eph 4:4)! Justification, faith, peace, access, standing firm, rejoicing, and the glory of God! What an excellent commentary on the richness of hope, and the sustaining power it brings to the believer! These are matters relating to receiving a righteousness from God.

WHAT IS HOPE?

As I have already indicated, hope is a confident and joyful expectation of the future. It is faith in its forward posture. Just as faith reaches backward to the atoning death of Christ and obtains the benefits related to it, so faith reaches forward to the consummation of all things. It is convinced of the promised advantages related to the return of the Lord.

There is nothing ambiguous or uncertain about hope. It brings a certitude to the soul that can only be realized by faith. That certitude is referred to as “the full assurance of hope,” and is to be maintained until the grand conclusion of all things. As it is written, “And we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end: that ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises” (Heb 6:11-12). The idea is that of being fully convinced of the promises of God. It is understood they are considered valuable—“exceeding great and precious” (2 Pet 1:4), and that the trusting one is not willing to forfeit them.

A hope like this (and none other is acceptable) places a high value on “the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 1:13). It can be held only by the one who is not at home in this world—the person who has believed God and received a righteousness from Him.

Every person who is born again has this hope. It is not possible to come into Christ and be void of it. Here is how the Spirit states the fact. “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to His abundant mercy has begotten us again to a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that does not fade away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith for salvation ready to be revealed in the last time”^{NKJV} (1 Pet 1:3-5). Both the NIV and NRSV reads that God “has given us new birth into a living hope.” The NASB reads, “has caused us to be born again to a living hope.”

The new birth, therefore, has put us into this living hope. It so sensitizes us to the eternal realm that we want to be with the Lord. This hope is necessary if we are to last through our tenure in this world and obtain the inheritance that is reserved for us in heaven. The hope also ministers a solid conviction to our hearts that God will keep us by His own power and through our faith in Christ.

The Rarity of Scriptural Hope

It is a matter of deep concern to me that such a hope appears rare indeed in our time—at least among those of the common Christian community. One rarely hears any illusion to the world to come, or being with Christ, to say nothing of having it dominate the conversation. I have personally spoken to hundreds of believers who confess to never having heard a message dealing with such realities. Such things ought not to be.

THE COMPLICATING FACTOR

Although we are born again into a living hope, there is a complicating factor. We are also occupying a hostile realm that militates against that hope. That hope must be maintained, else it will fade away. It must be nourished, for it must be strong to survive being in “this present evil world” (Gal 1:4).

When we are begotten to a living hope, it is not wound up like an automatic toy, so that it runs without our personal involvement until the day of the Lord. Viewing the condition of many believers, it appears as though some are convinced this is the case. Our salvation depends upon hope. It must be present with us at all times. Is it not written, “For we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it”^{NKJV} (Rom 8:24-25). There really is no such thing as salvation without hope, and our hearts should be repulsed by the very will get them through the wilderness! The more they are tested, the more their hope will grow. After forty years, when Caleb arrived in Canaan at the age of eighty-five, he said this to captain Joshua. “And now, behold, the LORD has kept me alive, as He said, these forty-five years, ever since the LORD spoke this word to Moses while Israel wandered in the wilderness; and now, here I am this day, eighty-five years old. As yet I am as strong this day as on the day that Moses sent me; just as my strength was then, so now is my strength for war, both for going out and for coming in. Now therefore, give me this mountain of which the LORD spoke in that day; for

The recollection of our deliverances causes hope to grow. The furnaces and fires through which we have come have served to ignite our hope and cause it to grow and flourish. God has not only delivered us, He IS delivering us. He not only IS delivering us, He will yet deliver us. As it is written, “Who delivered us from so great a death, and does deliver us; in whom we trust that He will still deliver us”^{NKJV} (2 Cor 1:10).

THIS WE KNOW

Now this is something that we “KNOW.” We only have to consider how far we have come by God’s grace to feel the freshness of renewed hope. This is something common to every child of God: “experience produces hope.” The more our character is refined and matured, the stronger hope becomes.

The recollection of our deliverances causes hope to grow. The furnaces and fires through which we have come have served to ignite our hope and cause it to grow and flourish. God has not only delivered us, He IS delivering us. He not only IS delivering us, He will yet deliver us.

God’s people should make much of rehearsing the righteous acts of the Lord. Hope is refreshed when you “Go home to your friends, and tell them what great things the Lord has done for you, and how He has had compassion on you” (Mark 5:19). When kingdom laborers report “all that God had done with them” (Acts 14:27), hope awakens within the believers.

notion that is possible. When we see timorous and halting believers who are unsure of glory, and unpersuaded of their position in the Son, our hearts and minds should leap into action. Such poor souls stand in need of nourishment, strengthening, and edification, else they will not be equal to the challenges of life.

you heard in that day how the Anakim were there, and that the cities were great and fortified. It may be that the LORD will be with me, and I shall be able to drive them out as the LORD said” (Josh 14:10-12). What kept that man through the prime of his life, from forty-five to eighty-five? Why did he not ask to be entered into a Israelite version of a rest home? Why did he still want the land of the giants—a exceeding great mountain filled with fortified cities? Why did this man think he could drive out the enemy and possess the land for which he longed forty years earlier?

The various trials through which you have passed are tutors. They have confirmed God’s faithfulness to you, and that is fuel for hope. Take hold of this truth, and doubt it not. “Experience worketh hope.”

How can hope be sustained? What provision is there in God’s great salvation that will ensure hope becomes strong? How can it increase and become more dominant in our hearts and minds? Our text has the answer.

EXPERIENCE PRODUCES HOPE

Kingdom experience, or the development of spiritual character, produces hope. Hope is fashioned when we survive the fire and flood of testing! Joshua and Caleb’s longing for Canaan

It was hope! His hope had grown during the wilderness wanderings, not diminished! It had become more robust through the plagues and chastening of the camp, and the challenges of the enemy. His “experience” had produced hope!

Born in 1697, and confessing his faith in Christ in 1716, John Gill said this of hope. “Hope is a gift of God’s grace, and is implanted in regeneration, but abounds, increases, and becomes more strong and lively by experience of the love, grace, mercy, power, and faithfulness of God.”

That is an observation birthed in, and confirmed by, experience with God—experience in the furnace and flood. It is common among all who live by faith, and it is exceeding precious.

HOPE DOES NOT DISAPPOINT

“⁵ Now hope does not disappoint . . . ” There is a hope that is disappointed—a hope that cannot be fully realized. Solomon well said, “When a wicked man dies, his expectation will perish, And the hope of the unjust perishes” (Prov 11:7). Again he wrote, “The hope of the righteous will be gladness, But the expectation of the wicked will perish” (Prov 10:28). By this he meant the longings of the wicked will never be satisfied. Their hope is all in vain, and, because of that, what they expect cannot be realized.

But it is not so with the righteous—with those whose faith has passed the test! Their hope is actually a pledge or guarantee of what is to come! Their hope has been spawned by their new birth, and is no imagination of the mind. It has grown in their tribulations.

THE DIVINE MANNER

It is God's manner to first whet the appetite for the blessing before bringing it to pass. Before He gave Adam a wife, He first produced circumstances that would move Adam to want a wife. Before He brought Israel out of Egypt, He first produced an environment that made them want to come out. Before He gave them Canaan, He worked to develop in them a longing for a land of their own.

Before we inherit the ultimate blessing, God moves us through various tests and provings of our faith. He does so to produce a profound longing for His promises within us. He has no mind to cast us down, but to cause us to hope in His word. When we yield to that intent, glorying in our tribulations, knowing they are "working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" (2 Cor 4:17), our hope will come to pass! We will realize what we long for, praise the Lord!

As with Abraham, faith convinces us "that what He had promised He was also able to perform" (Rom 4:21). Hope vaults us into the mode of expectancy, for it is guaranteed by God Himself. "HOPE DOES NOT DISAPPOINT!"

How often have you been disappointed with fleshly expectations? Things simply did not turn out as you desired—and your desires were even good and wholesome. Your employment, your home, your church, or even your spouse or your children, fell short of what you had hoped. Did not such things break your heart? Perhaps you did receive grace to overcome the circumstances. God might even have brought some spark of good from it all, as a reward to your faith. But in the end, things were not as you expected or desired.

NO DISAPPOINTMENT IN HOPE!

In Christ, you have entered another order—one where hope is not frustrated and deep desires to not go ungratified! Child of God, you must believe this, for it is the truth! "Hope does not disappoint us" ^{NIV}—not the hope to which God has begotten you!

Before we inherit the ultimate blessing, God moves us through various tests and provings of our faith. He does so to produce a profound longing for His promises within us. He has no mind to cast us down, but to cause us to hope in His word.

The Lord can speak to your heart the very words He once spoke to Israel. They are even more true in Christ Jesus. "But Israel shall be saved by the LORD With an everlasting salvation; You shall not be ashamed or disgraced Forever and ever. For thus says the LORD, Who created the heavens, Who is God, Who formed the earth and made it, Who has established it, Who did not create it in vain, Who formed it to be inhabited: 'I am the LORD, and there is no other. I have not spoken in secret, In a dark place of the earth; I did not say to the seed of Jacob, Seek Me in vain'; I, the LORD, speak righteousness, I declare things that are right" (Isa 45:17-19).

When God promises an "eternal inheritance," He declares "things that are right!" Not only are they "right," but because He has created all things and you with purpose, He is fully capable of bringing His promises to pass. He has not asked us to seek His face in vain, or without solid expectation! If He did not say to the seed of Jacob, "Seek Me in vain," how much less has He said so to those who are in the Son!

Every one possessing the "one hope" can, in their measure, say with Paul, "according to my earnest expectation and hope that in nothing I shall be ashamed" ^{NKJV} (Phil 1:20). The hope we have received is "good hope," and comes through the grace of God, who has promised to fulfill his word to us. That is involved in the expression "everlasting consolation and good hope" (2 Thess 2:16). It is another way of saying it is not possible for those who have the hope not to realize its fulfillment.

Because of His commitment to those who trust in Him, God, "determining to show more abundantly to the heirs of promise the immutability of His counsel, confirmed it by an oath, that by two immutable things, in which it is impossible for God to lie, we might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold of the hope set before us" ^{NKJV} (Heb 6:17-18).

HOPE REQUIRES AFFIRMATION

Who is able to measure the terrible effects of obscuring this hope, or not speaking of it, or calling it into question? What of those poor souls who rarely have the hope set before them to ponder, contemplate, and embrace more fully? What massive deterioration of soul begins in those who are only told of earthly things, and continually confronted with issues that have no Scriptural foundation?

If we are saved by hope, and if God orders our lives so as to augment and strengthen hope, what favor has any done for us by accentuating the here and the now? Those who are bent on making us look at things of the earth have hurt us, they have not helped us. It makes no difference how noble they may appear, or how friendly and concerned they seem to be. If their words and manners do not assist us to look up, and "set out hope in God" (Psa 78:7), they are really our enemies, not our friends.

But those precious souls who sharpen our countenance with their heavenly considerations and manners, and who speak to us of "the hope set us" (Heb 6:18), are the dearest of all friends. They will lend us aid in getting through our difficulties. They will help us to reach our "desired haven" (Psa 107:30). Count them a dear treasure!

Take hold of this word, and doubt it not: “Hope maketh not ashamed!” ^{KJV} Hear it again. “Now hope does not disappoint” ^{NKJV} Let’s the words sink down into your ears. “And hope does not disappoint us.” ^{NIV} Refresh your soul with it. “And this expectation will not disappoint us.” ^{NLT}

This is the hope of “ever being with the Lord” (1 Thess 4:17). It is the confident expectation of being “like Him” when we see Him as He is (1 John 3:2). It involves finishing the race (Heb 12:1-2; 2 Tim 4:7), obtaining the prize (1 Cor 9:24), and hearing the words “Well done, good and faithful servant” (Matt 25:23). This “hope” speaks of being “absent from the body, and present with the Lord” (2 Cor 5:8). It shouts to us of entering into our house that is in heaven, fashioned by God Himself (2 Cor 5:1-5). It holds before us the prospect of sitting with Jesus in His throne (Rev 3:21), reigning with Him (2 Tim 2:12), and being a “joint heir” with Him (Rom 8:17).

Those in possession of such a hope “will not be ashamed!” There will not be a single element of disappointment when they come to the end of their earthly journey! They will not be disappointed in life, and they will not be disappointed in death. When they are raised from the dead, they will not be ashamed, and when they stand before the throne of Christ, they will not be ashamed. When they are given their inheritance, and receive their reward, they will not be dissatisfied. When they hear Christ’s assessment and confession of them not one note of dissatisfaction will be heard.

You can believe this with all of your heart, with nothing doubting. Hope does not in any way disappoint! It never produces a bad crop, never crushes the heart, never caused shame and disgrace.

THE LOVE OF GOD POURED IN OUR HEARTS

“^{5b} . . . because the love of God has been poured out in our hearts by the Holy Spirit who was given to us.”

These are not empty words: “Hope maketh not ashamed.” They are not heavenly oratory which, like words from men, color the truth so as to make it more palatable. These words clarify the truth, making it more sure to our hearts. For this reason, the Spirit elaborates on the subject, showing us WHY hope does not disappoint or make us ashamed.

LOVE POURED OUT

Here is the glorious reason. “The love of God has been shed abroad in our hearts.” ^{KJV} Like a mighty torrent, the Holy Spirit has poured God’s love into our hearts. What a remarkable picture of God’s grace! I suppose that some think God cannot “pour” His love into our hearts. That certainly is not a common way of speaking. Then again, this is not a common thing that happens! We should not expect extraordinary blessings to come in ordinary ways!

The expression “shed abroad,” or “poured out,” comes from a single Greek word: ἐκκέχυται. This is not a casual word, but an unusually strong one. On the negative side, murder is described by this word as the shedding of blood (Matt 23:35). On the positive side, the coming of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost was said to be Jesus “shedding forth,” or “pouring out” the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:33).

This word denotes an abundance, full experience, and rich satisfaction. It is being given over completely to something, devoted to it, and filled up with it.

Religious men have been able to heavenly places to those who are seated in heavenly places.

This love is not OUR love for God, but God’s love for us! It is Like a mighty torrent, the Holy Spirit has poured God’s love into our hearts. What a remarkable picture of God’s grace! I suppose that some think God cannot “pour” His love into our hearts. That certainly is not a common way of speaking. Then again, this is not a common thing that happens! We should not expect extraordinary blessings to come in ordinary ways!

capitalize and even institutionalize being “filled with the Spirit.” Such doctrines have been introduced in connection with this condition (Eph 5:18) as stagger the sensitive heart. But who has ever been able to capitalize being filled with the love of God? What institution or pattern of theological thought has ever sought to exploit that idea? This is too lofty for flesh—it cannot even corrupt the idea! To have the love of God shed forth, or copiously poured out into our hearts is a most arresting consideration. There is nothing in the flesh that can assign any value to it, or move men to desire it, or anything like it. It cannot be related to a fleshly experience or soulish sensation. It defies carnal explanation, or even fabrication. The expression, “the love of God has been poured out in our hearts” is a heavenly one that soars high above the natural man. It is uttered from the

GOD’S love, not our love! Thus, the NIV reads, “God has poured out His love into our hearts.”

Two things should be evident to us in this declaration. First, God’s love for us is so “great” it can be poured out in abundance. In fact, it is called “great,” or exceedingly large. “But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, even when we were dead in trespasses, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved)” ^{NKJV} (Eph 2:4-5). Second, in Christ we receive new hearts that are capable of receiving an abundance from God. Just as you cannot pour out an abundance into a small and restricted vessel, so a circumscribed and hard heart cannot receive the abundance of God’s love. It must be made new and enlarged.

This love was not poured out into our hearts by an impersonal means. God's own Holy Spirit poured His love into our hearts. That is one of His indispensable ministries. He brings to us an enlarged awareness of the love God has for us. This is not an empty emotional passion, or a flickering desire for our betterment. This is a strong preference for us. It reflects a willingness to save us, lead us, strengthen

When this love is poured out into our hearts, we become acutely aware of His affection and desire for us. This awareness compels us, thrusting us into a live of personal sacrifice and anticipation. Only the Holy Spirit is capable of pouring this love into us. It is not a love that can be learned academically, or apprehended through logical processes. It is a work only from heaven, but from within. The Holy Spirit does not merely fall upon us, bringing fleshly sensations, erratic behavior, and unintelligible utterances. He is "given to us" (1 Cor 2:12; 2 Cor 1:22; 5:5; 1 Thess 4:8; 1 John 3:24; 4:13). This is not an experience, but a Person—and there is a vast difference between the two. It involves experience, to be sure, but the pinnacle of the blessing is the Person of the Holy Spirit!

When this love is poured out into our hearts, we become acutely aware of His affection and desire for us. This awareness compels us, thrusting us into a live of personal sacrifice and anticipation. Only the Holy Spirit is capable of pouring this love into us.

And what does the Spirit come to do? What does this text declare His work to be in regards to our subject? Why is it that hope is not associated with shame. How is it that those who possess the hope purify themselves, even as He is pure (1 John 3:3)? It is not because of moral compulsion, or a set of rules, or threats of condemnation. All of these do play a role in spiritual life, but not the primary one. None of them are sufficient to induce consistent and indefatigable effort.

us, and bring us spotless into His presence with exceeding joy. This is a sacrificial love, a considerate love, a beneficial love.

God can do through the Holy Spirit—and He does it for every one of His children!

It is only to the degree that we perceive the love of God that hope springs eternal within! If there is doubt concerning God's love for us, there will be no joyful expectation of the future. Examine yourself and see if this is not the truth. When you see the extent of God's love for you, you will withhold nothing from Him. In return, He will so clarify your future glory, that no price will be too great to pay, and no suffering too long or painful to endure. All of this is intensely personal and gratifying. That, dear child of God, is how the Kingdom of God works, and it is all for your advantage.

In the world, it is possible to be loved by someone who brings us no advantage, and may even bring harm to us. It is also possible to be legitimately loved by someone who cannot effectively communicate that love to us. But God is not restricted in this manner. His love is right, holy, and beneficial. It brings good things to us, for God desires to do us good. Once He said it to Israel, even more He says it to those in His Son. "For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, says the LORD, thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you a future and a hope" ^{NKJV} (Jer 29:11). The Lord is, indeed, abundant in goodness!

Because the Holy Spirit knows and searches "the deep things of God" (1 Cor 2:10), He is a capable Administrator of this love. As He pours God's love into our hearts, we become aware of "the things God has prepared for those who love Him" (1 Cor 2:9-10). The rich promises of God begin to shine with eternal glory, the Word is more satisfying, and Jesus becomes more precious. All of this because we have seen something of the greatness of God's love for us.

THE SPIRIT IS GIVEN TO US

God is careful to remind us of what we have received in Christ. The love of God is not poured out into our hearts

CONCLUSION

We have perused a text of great magnitude, and have not been able to do it justice. My purpose has been to set forth the truth in such a manner as will provoke both thought and effort. This passage has placed before us the sure effects of being made righteous. While righteousness is imputed to us "without works," it is neither impersonal nor ineffective. Rich fruit is to found on the tree of justification. The tranquility of peace with God is realized. With that peace comes refreshment from the presence of the Lord rather than intimidation. Fear flies away, and a certain tranquility of soul is experienced in the very presence of the Lord.

There also comes a realization that we have access to the grace we so sorely need, and that God is forward to give it to us. We can confidently approach the throne of grace to "obtain mercy and find grace in the time of need" (Heb 4:16). Our petitions will not be denied, but will be joyfully received and honored by the God who is thoroughly satisfied with the Person and accomplishments of His Son. So we come to Him, expectantly, and with great confidence. We can come as often as we desire, stay as long as we want, and obtain as much as we seek. It is coming into the presence of the Lord and obtaining grace that enables us to stand against all the wiles of the devil, and in all manner of trials.

Receiving the "gift of righteousness," and accessing the grace of God wherein we stand, we are set to rejoicing in anticipation of beholding the glory of God, and being ourselves glorified. This is no small accomplishment, for once we were in the grip of the fear of death. Now, however, it holds no dread for us. The future is now bright with promise.

While we await the return of our Lord and our consequent glorification, life is seen in a entirely new perspective. Now our tribulations are seen as an appointed means to an end. They are the door that opens to endurance, perseverance, and spiritual constancy. As life brings stress and burdens to us, our spiritual muscles are strengthened. Our wills become more determined, and we resolve to obtain the prize at any cost.

There is another glorious accomplishment of which we become aware. As we gain more experience in the faith-life, coming through more trials, and overcoming more enemies, hope is becoming stronger. It now speaks more clearly to our hearts. It is more difficult for circumstances to obscure the future, which is shining brighter and brighter. Heaven is now eclipsing earth, and the afflictions through which we are passing are offset by "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" (2 Cor 4:17).

In the stillness of the trying night, hope can be heard to whisper to us: "You will not be disappointed!" From heaven the shout can be heard over the din of battle: "You will not be ashamed for trusting in Christ and looking forward to the glory!"

And when the "old serpent" tries to convince us this is all of our own doing, the Holy Spirit witnesses to our spirit, "It is I who has poured out the love of your God into your heart. I have assisted you to see His great love, and it is because of this that you are not overcome. I have been given to you to ensure you comprehend the love of God, and at last receive your reward."

Now tell me, child of God, is that not a worthy salvation Does it not bring honor and glory to God to so perceive it? Isa there any reason for your expectation to be weak? And it is all the truth!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 17

THE VICARIOUS ATONEMENT

5:6 For when we were still without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly. ⁷ For scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet perhaps for a good man someone would even dare to die. ⁸ But God demonstrates His own love toward us, in that while we were still sinners, Christ died for us. ⁹ Much more then, having now been justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him. ¹⁰ For if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God through the death of His Son, much more, having been reconciled, we shall be saved by His life. ¹¹ And not only that, but we also rejoice in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have now received the reconciliation.

Rom 5:6-11 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

There have been many significant deaths in history. The first violent death was that of a righteous man, Abel. His blood cried out for vengeance to God from the ground (Gen 4:10-11). "All flesh," with the exception of "eight souls," died in the Noachic flood (Gen 7:21; 1 Pet 3:20). There was the unique death of Moses, whose spirit was taken from him at the peak of his strength, and whom God Himself buried (Deut 34:1-6). Although death was common, these were uncommon deaths from which much can be learned. The death of Christ, however, is the most profound and thorough death ever experienced.

The most significant and meaningful death of all time is that of the Lord Jesus Christ. No death was, or can be, like His. He died in the prime of life, around 33-34 years of age. His death was a miracle of itself, for no man took it from Him, and He did not die under the curse passed in the garden of Eden, for He had no sin. His death was necessary, and yet it was voluntary. In it He was cursed, but man was blessed. Although God sent Jesus into the world, and was with Him throughout His life, He forsook Him in His death. His death was required by God for the sins of the world, and not His own. He was appointed to death, but unlike men, the appointment was before the foundation of the world (Rev 13:8). There surely is no death like that of the Lord Jesus Christ!

Because of the purpose of His death, it had to be voluntary. If, in fact, He did not "lay down" His life, He could not have died, for He was "without sin" (Heb 4:15). Therefore, the Father gave Him a commandment to lay down His life, and take it up again (John 10:17-18). In strict and unwavering obedience, He volunteered, "Lo, I come to do Thy will, O God" (Heb 10:9). The death of Christ was unique from every consideration.

Much of the contemporary talk about Christ's death is wholly without substance. It does not have the incense of Divine good pleasure upon it, and is sorely lacking in Scriptural perspective. Men compare God giving the life of His Son, with the possibility of men offering their sons. Staggering at such a consideration, they lose a sense of the real nature of Christ's death, looking upon it from a human, rather than a Divine, point of view. When flesh considers the death of Christ, it never gets at the truth. The flesh is not capable of perceiving the death of Christ correctly and with everlasting benefit. It will view His death from a sentimental point of view, a medical perspective, or some other human outlook. Such views always lack benefit.

The death of Christ must be seen correctly for its intended benefits to be realized. Here is a vast reservoir of grace for every humble and contrite heart. Here is a death profound enough to engage our hearts and minds in both time and eternity. In Christ's death, Divine objectives were realized that could not have been accomplished in any other way.

Things were achieved in Christ's death that are so marvelous, only the Holy Spirit can open them to our understanding. Here is an event that is remembered every Lord's day by those who sit at the Lord's table. In this death there is substance for the soul, encouragement for the heart, and considerations for the mind. We learn something about God Himself here, as well as receiving more profound insights into the nature of the Son. When we ponder the death of Christ, we begin to see the enormity of sin, the magnitude of grace, and the profound desire of God to rescue His creatures from the fall.

SALVATION IS NOT SIMPLISTIC

While I have already made mention of this, I must again elaborate upon it. Salvation is not simplistic. The holy nature of God would not permit Him to simply take sinful man back to himself. He could not ignore sin, and treat it as though it had not occurred. In the death of Christ not only were the needs of men satisfied, but the requirements of God were also addressed. What was required by fallen men, and demanded by a holy God, could only be accomplished through infinite wisdom. After four thousand years, not only had mankind utterly failed to correct their condition, there had been absolutely no progress in that area. Moral and spiritual decline continued uninterrupted from man's expulsion the garden. The only favorable change that occurred in men followed a divine initiative. But more than this, no one knew what could be done about the human condition. No man and group of men could suggest a proposal for the reclamation of sinners. The plan, and the execution of the plan, had to come from God—the offended Party.

The significance of the death of Christ is seen against the backdrop of the sacrifices made under the Law. There God acquainted men with a substitutionary, or vicarious, sacrifice. The idea of "atonement" and "reconciliation" through blood was introduced. Apart from these types and shadows, the death of Christ is not seen as precisely as possible.

Much preaching about Christ's death is from a sympathetic and fleshly viewpoint. Men are prone to compare God giving His Son for us to the impact of an earthly father giving up his son. Others present the death Christ in such a manner as to lead men to view it as though Christ was a mere martyr. I am careful to say these conclusions are not always preached. Rather, men are left thinking in this way because they have not heard the Scriptural representation of Christ's death. It is seen more as emotionally staggering than spiritually profound.

This passage will show that Christ's death was not a mere favor, but a Divinely required substitution. His death was vicarious, and could not be avoided without all men perishing. It was endured by Christ in the place of, and for the benefit of, fallen humanity.

WHEN WE WERE WITHOUT STRENGTH

"^{5:6} For when we were still without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly." The spirit will now develop the necessity of Christ's death, and the benefits that have accrued from it. He will also confirm to our hearts that if our natural condition was satisfactorily addressed by His death, there should be no doubts about God finishing the work in those who have been justified by that death.

STILL WITHOUT STRENGTH

With spiritual skill, the inspired Apostle has already laid the groundwork for the expression "without strength." This is not a casual word, depicting a condition that was mild. Some versions tend to lead to that conclusion by translating the words "still weak" (RSV, NRSV), "yet weak" (ASV), "were weak" (Darby), and "still ailing" (Young's Literal). While "weak" may be an acceptable word from the etymological viewpoint, it is altogether unacceptable because of the ordinary understanding of the word—"not strong enough." But that is not the meaning of the Spirit here. He is not saying men were simply deficient in strength, but that they had NONE.

The idea here is that of utter helplessness, or having NO strength at all. It is not that some strength existed, but not enough to accomplish salvation. It is that NO strength was found in humanity at all. Thus other versions more precisely translate the phrase “still powerless,”^{NIV} “still helpless,”^{NASB} “powerless,”^{NIB} “utterly helpless,”^{NLT}.

This was a continuing condition, unchanged by time, the testimony of creation, the human conscience, or the Law of God. Thus we read, “YET without strength,”^{KJV} “STILL without strength,”^{NKJV} “STILL helpless,”^{NASB} and “STILL powerless”^{NIV}. The perspective developed by this expression is as follows.

- ▶ Adam and Eve lost their strength when they sinned, and men still have no strength.
- ▶ Men saw the testimony of creation, speaking of God’s eternal power and Godhead, and they are still without strength.
- ▶ Even though men heard the testimony of their conscience, which bore the testimony of holy Law, they still have no strength.
- ▶ Although the Law of God precisely defined sin, and gave sufficient incentives to prompt men to obey it, they still have no strength.
- ▶ After four thousand years of Divine longsuffering, humanity remained totally void of spiritual strength.
- ▶ There was not a single person who had the strength to change his moral and spiritual condition.

Thus, the Divine analysis of humanity is justified, and seen to be totally true: “There is none righteous, no, not one: there is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one” (3:10-12). Over and again, the Spirit will drive home the truth of these words, confirming the nature and need of a righteousness from God.

Men may argue about the aptitude of unreconciled men. God says they are “WITHOUT strength.” The intellectual prowess of men may be exalted, but God declares they are “WITHOUT strength.” Purported scholars may speak eloquently about man’s free will, and how he can make some progress, but God says he is “WITHOUT strength.” Men are not hypothetically “WITHOUT strength,” they are totally void of it. They are power LESS and hope LESS.

If the God of heaven did not undertake to save humanity by His own mighty hand, there would not have been a single acceptable individual in the history of the world! If it were not for the death and resurrection of Jesus, Abel, Enoch, Noah, and Abraham would not have been saved. In fact, there could have been no faith in the world apart from “the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world” (Rev 13:8). The promise of an appointed Savior was the soil from which faith sprang. The atoning death of Christ was as necessary for Adam and Eve as for Saul of Tarsus and you!

If the God of heaven did not undertake to save humanity by His own mighty hand, there would not have been a single acceptable individual in the history of the world! If it were not for the death and resurrection of Jesus, Abel, Enoch, Noah, and Abraham would not have been saved.

“Without strength” confirms there was a continued degeneration in human nature. The very words “without strength” imply a downward trend, and a certain deterioration. All of this underscores the necessity of the Son of God. His appointment as our Representative, humbling Himself to come into the cursed realm, laying down His life, and taking it up again was a Divine necessity. This is true because we were “without strength.”

In summary, “without strength” confirms there was nothing in us that recommended us to God, or proved us worthy of His praise. It also substantiates we were unable to correct that condition.

IN DUE TIME

This is a significant expression: “in due time.” It is a word of expectancy and purpose. Other versions read “at just the right time,”^{NIB} “according to the time,”^{DARBY} and “at the appointed time”^{NJB}. The death of Christ was accomplished in a timely manner. It occurred at the appointed time. If it has taken place prematurely, its benefits would have been beyond the reach of humanity. If it had been too late in time, it would have been pointless. In order for Jesus to fulfill the will of God, He had to come into the world and accomplish the Father’s will at the appointed time—a precise time for which adequate preparation had been made.

The Scriptures make much of this critical aspect of our salvation.

▶ “Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel” (Mk 1:14-15). The NIV reads, “The time has come.” The juncture in time had come when the purpose of God was to be fulfilled, and it was on schedule.

▶ “*Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience; which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation” (Heb 9:9-10). “Reformation” refers to the real new order—the time of the New Covenant. During this era, and under the administration of Jesus, God is reshaping men, conforming them to the image of His Son. He is orienting them for glory—the eternal ages. This, the Spirit affirms, is related to a specific time, designated and purposed by God.

▶ “But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons” (Gal 4:4-5). The phrase “the fulness of the time” confirms that throughout history things progressed toward the introduction of the Son of God. When the appointed time came, He entered unto the world, “made of a woman, made under the Law.”

▶ “For then must He often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself” (Heb 9:26). The “time” of Christ’s sacrifice is here seen as a line of demarcation. It introduced the closing age of this world, and the final era of history. Other versions read, “the end of all ages,”^{NKJV,NIV} “the consummation of all ages,”^{NASB} “the end of the age.”^{RSV} “the end of the old order,”^{BBE} “the full end of the ages,”^{NLT} and “the end of the last age.”^{NJB} The “end of the world,” in this case, is an era, and not a point in time. Jesus appeared the first time at the times,”^{DARBY} “these final days,”^{NLT} and “the final point of time.”^{NJB}

The Significance of “due time”

The “due time” was the appointed time. It was also the appropriate time. In His infinite wisdom, God did not send His Son into the world until sufficient time had been allowed for the following.

- ▶ Confirm the testimony of nature was not sufficient to recover humanity.
- ▶ Substantiate the insufficiency of the conscience to correct the human condition.
- ▶ Establish the Law was weak through the flesh, and not adequate as a means to salvation.
- ▶ Verify there was none who was righteous, sought God, or did good.
- ▶ Prove the absolute need for a Savior.
- ▶ Allow for the development of a sense of spiritual need under the tutelage of the Law.
- ▶ Develop a special people through whom the Savior would come, and within which He would be properly raised.
- ▶ Culture a special land, “His land,” in which the sacrifice would be made.
- ▶ Allow for the development of the a been met.

In this world, God’s appointments are always related to time—to a specific juncture in history. Noah entered into the ark on the “selfsame day” designated by the Lord (Gen 7:13). Israel came out of Egypt on the “selfsame day” appointed by God (Ex 12:41). Isaac was born to Sarah at a “set time” in a specific “year” (Gen 17:21; 18:14). Daniel spoke of times that were “appointed” by God (Dan 8:19; 11:27,29,35). Jesus told His disciples both “times” and “seasons” were in the power of God (Acts 1:7).

The devil was not able to stop the Savior from entering into the world, even though he was the first one to be told about it (Gen 3:15). The slaying of Abel, the barrenness of holy women in the Messianic lineage, the slaughter of the infants by Pharaoh, and the killing of babies two years and under by Herod, could not thwart the entrance of the Deliverer from heaven. He came at the precisely appointed time. Everything was ready, and the world was prepared.

What Does This Mean?

This truth is not something to tantalize the intellect. It is a message for the heart. The fact that Jesus came into the world in “due time” means He is effective. His salvation is accessible. His grace is obtainable. His mercy can be received. His grace is within our reach. Because He came in “due time,” what He brings can be realized. Remission can be acquired, and His fellowship can be enjoyed. His sacrifice is effective, and His intercession is sure. Whoever believes on Him “will not be ashamed!”

The devil was not able to stop the Savior from entering into the world, even though he was the first one to be told about it (Gen 3:15). The slaying of Abel, the barrenness of holy women in the Messianic lineage, the slaughter of the infants by Pharaoh, and the killing of babies two years and under by Herod, could not thwart the entrance of the Deliverer from heaven.

beginning of that era. He will appear “the second time” (Heb 9:28) at its close. The duration of this period is “the day of salvation.”

▶ “Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you, who by Him do believe in God, that raised Him up from the dead, and gave Him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God” (1 Pet 1:20-21). Once again, the Spirit relates the revelation of the Son of God with the close of the ages, or the end of time. Other versions read “the end times,”^{ASV} “the end of proper concept of God through the Law and the Prophets.

- ▶ Confirm the sinfulness of humanity, and its irreversible downward bent.
- ▶ Culture a longing for a Savior as defined and promised by God Himself.
- ▶ Demonstrate that neither time nor circumstance can abort the purpose of Almighty God.
- ▶ Show that the human condition could not be corrected apart from Divine intervention.

If Jesus had come into the world before “the fulness of time,” or the “due time,” these requirements would not have

CHRIST

The Spirit is careful to use proper words—words that convey the truth in all of its power. He does not say “Jesus” died in “due time.” Nor, indeed, does He say “the Son of man” died in “due time.” To be sure, it was the Person of “Jesus” who died. It was also the “Son of man” who died. His death, however, obtained its effectiveness because He was “the Christ”—the appointed and anointed One of God—the “chosen of God” (1 Pet 2:4). The word “Christ” means Anointed One, or Messiah. It refers to one appointed to fulfill a specific task. In this case, it was the reconciliation of the world to God, with all that was entailed in that awesome commission (2 Cor 5:18-20).

Jesus is the “anointed” One declared by the prophet Isaiah (Isa 61:1-4), confirmed by Christ’s own words (Lk 4:18-19), and declared by the Apostles (Heb 1:9).

It would have done no good for a Savior to die for us who was not appointed. Also, if the one appointed did not die, our state would have remained unchanged.

Although this is generally known among believers – i.e., that Jesus is the one chosen by God – it is not something to be taken for granted. We must often be reminded of this reality, for it causes our faith to become more deeply rooted in the Lord. It also moves us away from knowing Jesus “after the flesh” (2 Cor 5:16).

God has “anointed” Jesus above all others (Heb 1:9). He was, indeed, “foreordained before the foundation of the world” (1 Pet 1:20), being the Lamb “slain from the foundation of the world” (Rev 13:8). Although He volunteered to offer the required sacrifice, He did not take the honor upon Himself, but was “called of God” (Heb 5:3-4). It was the Father who gave Jesus the commandment to “lay down” His life and “take it up” again (John 10:17-18). It is He who sent the Son into the world (1 John 4:14), and “gave” Him to be the propitiation for our sins (John 3:16; Rom 3:25; 1 John 4:10).

It is this circumstance that makes Jesus “the Christ.” It also puts salvation and all of its benefits within our reach. It confirms the strong desire of God to save us, and His commitment to accomplish what neither man nor Law could do. You may recall the good confession of Peter included Jesus being “the Christ.” Here is how God revealed the Son to Peter. “Thou art THE CHRIST of the living God” (Matt 16:17-18).

THE UNGODLY

“ . . . Christ died for the UNGODLY.” The very word “ungodly” jars the soul. It is a strong word, speaking of a condition that is obviously not to be desired, yet in which all were found. This is how “WE” are described.

Notice the manner in which this word is given to us. First, the Spirit refers to an event that occurred when “WE” were “without strength.” Now He affirms Christ died for the “UNGODLY.” “We,” then, were “ungodly,” else there would be no point to the declaration. Further, being “without strength” confirmed that we were “ungodly,” otherwise Christ’s death would have no relevance and application to us. The word “ungodly,” therefore, is used to further describe the condition of “without strength.” There is no person out of Christ to whom “ungodly” does not apply. It stands for the entire human race. Fix it in your mind, if Christ’s death was not for everyone, it was for no

It would have done no good for a Savior to die for us who was not appointed. Also, if the one appointed did not die, our state would have remained unchanged.

one. A vicarious sacrifice must be for all who have offended God– “the ungodly.”

The History of the Word

In the New Covenant writings, there is a single word translated “ungodly.” It is ἀσεβής (in various forms), which etymologically means irreverent, godless, or wicked. Doctrinally, this word means unlike God, for the nature of God Himself defines what is right and true. The “ungodly” are “irreverent” because they are not like God. They have sinned, and “come short” of His glory. They are godless and wicked by way of contrast. That is, sin, like a virus, has infected their whole nature, making them unlike God in their manners and expressions.

The Spirit uses this word thirteen times in the New Covenant writings. It is always a significant word, summoning up a sense of someone reprehensible to God.

- ▶ God justifies the “ungodly” (Rom 4:5).
- ▶ Christ died for the “ungodly” (Rom 5:6).
- ▶ The Law is for the “ungodly” (1 Tim 1:9).
- ▶ If the righteous are scarcely saved, what about the “ungodly”? (1 Pet 4:18).
- ▶ The flood came upon the “world of the ungodly” (2 Pet 2:5).
- ▶ The destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah is an example for those who live “ungodly” (2 Pet 2:6).
- ▶ The day of judgment will include the “perdition of ungodly men” (2 Pet 3:7).
- ▶ “Ungodly men” turn the grace of God into lewdness, and deny Jesus (Jude 4).
- ▶ In a prophecy of the flood, and the coming of Christ as well, Enoch mentioned the “ungodly” who had “ungodly deeds,” committed them in an “ungodly” manner, and sinful words spoken by “ungodly sinners” (Jude 15).
- ▶ In the “last time” mockers will walk in their “ungodly lusts” (Jude 18).

If a person will consider this word through the filter of Scripture, a sense of its meaning will register upon the soul. The knowledge and understanding of these expressions will summon up a whole framework of thought every time one hears the word “ungodly.”

Before Christ

Before Christ, the Spirit employed a number of different words to convey the idea of “ungodly.” Throughout the 1,500 years of the Law’s administration, the Lord was developing a concept of “ungodly” among His people Israel. In those spiritually primitive times, He would present the word by contrast, defining those who were in obvious contradiction of His law as “ungodly.”

- ▶ Beilyaal בְּלִיעַל: Often translated “Belial,” mostly “ungodly.” It means evil, worthless, good for nothing, unprofitable, base, and wicked (2 Sam 22:5; Psa 18:4; Prov 16:27; 19:28). Twice, this word is simply translated “wicked” (Deut 15:9; Nah 1:1,11).

Sixteen times, it is translated “Belial” (examples: Deut 13:13; Judges 19:22; 1 Sam 1:16; 2 Chron 13:7).

- ▶ Rasha רָשָׁע: This word means wicked, a criminal, or a law breaker. It refers to one who has sinned against God and/or man (2 Chron 19:2; Job 34:18; Psa 1:1,4,5,6; 3:7; 73:12).
- ▶ Aviyl אָוִיַל: This word means unjust, or perverse in ones ways (Job 16:11).
- ▶ Lo N לֹא־נָ: This is a modifying word closely related to our prefix “UN,” as is “UNgodly.” It is used once in the Psalms where it is used of an “ungodly nation” or people (Psa 43:1). In that text it means a body of people who are not recognized by God because they are unlike Him in their ways.

The Concept Developed

Thus, the Holy Spirit developed a conscience within men of what made a person unacceptable to God. Briefly ponder the words and ideas He employed to accomplish this.

- ▶ Worthless, good for nothing, and unprofitable.
- ▶ Breaking the law, and offending both God and man.

This is what sin produced; the crop that it yielded among the sons of men. They became “ungodly.” Men actually became more like the devil who deceived them, and less like God who made them!

- ▶ Unjust, perverse, corrupt, and defiled.
- ▶ Not like God, and not accepted.

This is what sin produced; the crop that it yielded among the sons of men. They became “ungodly.” Men actually became more like the devil who deceived them, and less like God who made them! For who is the very epitome of being worthless, lawbreaking, corrupt, and unlike God? Is it not the devil himself?

Conclusion

It is no small thing, therefore, that “Christ died for the ungodly.” He died for those who had lost their worth, who had offended God, were corrupt, and in whose persons Godlikeness could no longer be found. Men stood in need of a Savior.

“The ungodly” refers to the entirety of the human race, not a segment of it. Christ did not die only for the corrupt Gentiles. Nor, indeed, did He only die for the lawbreaking Jews. He surely did not die only for those who had reached the moral depths, like the Gentiles described in the first chapter.

It is important to get the full impact of this declaration. It will highlight the depths to which man fell, and the extent to which God has gone to save him. It is also vital to see that “ungodly” is a vivid description of the entirety of humanity. On a personal level, it is a description of us—“when WE were without strength.”

Here, real insight can be obtained concerning the effects of transgression, and the obvious need for a Savior.

DYING FOR ANOTHER IS SCARCE

“For scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet perhaps for a good man someone would even dare to die.” Here a strong appeal is made to our hearts. This is more than passing along information. It helps us to gain a perspective of the remarkable revelation of God and Christ that are found in Jesus’ death. It is exceedingly rare for anyone to die for another—for any reason.

With great power the Spirit will show us the love of God far surpasses any known to mankind. It has no equal or parallel among the sons of men. His love is not distinguished by a certain Greek word, as some incorrectly affirm. Perhaps you have heard some sophist refer to God’s love as the “agape” kind of love. This is NOT a true saying. Some examples will confirm what I have said.

Uses of AGAPE. One of the Greek words used for “love” is agape (ἀγάπη). It reflects the idea of deep interest and concern, choice and devotion to. Its use, however, is not limited to Divine expression. In the sermon on the mount Jesus said, “For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?” (Matt 5:46). Both references to “love” come from “agape” (ἀγαπήσητε and ἀγαπώντας). Scripture speaks of those who “loved the praise of men more than the praise of God” (John 12:43). The word used there is “agape” (ἀγάπησαν). Jesus once upbraided the Pharisees because they loved “the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets” (Lk 11:43). Again, the word used is “agape” (ἀγαπάτε).

Uses of PHILEO. Another Greek word for “love” is “phileo” (φιλεῖω). This word indicates a love that is emotional, where the feeling of affection is found. Although generally applied to the love of men, its use is not confined to that. Jesus said of His Father, “For the Father loveth the Son, and showeth Him all things that Himself doeth: and He will show him greater works than these, that ye may marvel” (John 5:20). The word used here is “phileo” (φιλεῖ). During His last evening with the disciples, Jesus said, “For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God” (John 16:27). Again, the word “phileo” is used of God’s love (φιλεῖ).

The rich love of God and Christ cannot be fully appreciated from a linguistic point of view. Language itself breaks down when speaking of Divine qualities. We will find that the love evidenced in Christ’s substitutionary death confirms this to be the case.

NOT TOTALLY STRANGE

It is not that one person dying for others is totally strange. Corrupt Caiaphas, the high priest who headed up the proceedings of Christ’s death, spoke of one dying for many. He reasoned, “it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not" (John 11:50). He was not thinking of redemption from sin, but of appeasing the Roman government so the nation of Israel could be spared. Yet, God had put this word in his mouth for succeeding generations—to see the truth of a vicarious atonement. Of Caiaphas' words the Spirit says, "And this spake he not of himself: but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation; and not for that nation only, but that also He should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad" (John 11:51-52).

A PERSPECTIVE IS BEING DEVELOPED

Our text does NOT say "Christ died for the offspring of God." It does NOT say, "Christ died for those created in His image." Nor, indeed, does it say "Christ died for those who had great potential." While there are elements of truth in those sayings, they are not in order when speaking of Christ's death.

Although man still bore the image of God, the need for and reality of redemption could not fully register upon our hearts unless we saw what sin had done to us. Christ did not die for us because we were like God, but because we were NOT like God. He did not die for us because we were good, but because we were NOT good. It was not our potential that compelled Him to die, but our condition. To think in any other manner dulls the significance of His death.

When properly seen, the vicarious atonement will not leave men boasting in their worth. It will not allow an exaggerated view of the attainments or potential of natural men. Rather, it will throw the spotlight of glory upon God and Christ. It will accent the love and grace of God, while showing the shame and degradation into which sin brought man.

In my judgment, there is a great need for this perception in our time. It devastates the foundation of fundamentally false views of mankind as found in evolution, psychiatry, and philosophical views of human need.

SCARCE AND DARING DEATHS

Political fervor has moved some to speak of noble souls who have laid down their lives for their country. We must be careful not to disdain such rare displays of courage. However, this falls far short of the meaning of our text.

No Such Incident in Scripture

Here is a most noteworthy observation. We have NO example in Scripture of a person stepping forward to die in the place of a righteous person, or for one deemed "good." There are records of martyrs: Abel (Gen 4:3-8), the prophets slain by Jezebel (1 Kgs 18:13), Zechariah (2 Chron 24:20-22), John the Baptist (Mk 6:18-24), Stephen (Acts 7:58-60), James (Acts 12:2), and Antipas (Rev 2:13). But they were slain for a cause, their love for the Lord, and because of their testimony.

A SOLITARY HISTORICAL EXAMPLE

"The affecting case of Damon and Pythias is one. Damon had been condemned to death by the tyrant Dionysius of Sicily, and obtained leave to go and settle his domestic affairs on promise of returning at a stated hour to the place of execution. Pythias pledged himself to undergo the punishment if Damon should not return in time, and deliver himself into the hands of the tyrant. Damon returned at the appointed moment, just as the sentence was about to be executed on Pythias; and Dionysius was so struck with the fidelity of the two friends, that he remitted their punishment, and entreated them to permit him to share their friendship; (Val. Max. 4. 7.) This case stands almost alone." (Barnes Commentary)

Whether we consider the Word of God covering the period before the Law, during the Law, or in the age of grace, we have no example of a person volunteering to die for "a righteous man," or one considered to be "good." There is no record of one stepping forward to take the place of a martyr, whether before, during, or after the Law.

An Example of Submitting to Jeopardy

There is an example of noble men who submitted themselves to certain jeopardy for a righteous man. One such occasion is recorded in the twenty-third chapter of Second Samuel. "David was then in the stronghold, and the garrison of the Philistines was then in Bethlehem. And David said with longing, 'Oh, that someone would give me a drink of the water from the well of Bethlehem, which is by the gate!' So the three mighty men broke through the camp of the Philistines, drew water from the well of Bethlehem that was by the gate, and took it and brought it to David. Nevertheless he would not drink it, but poured it out to the LORD. And he said, 'Far be it from me, O LORD, that I should do this! Is this not the blood of the men who went in jeopardy of their lives?' Therefore he would not drink it"^{NKJV} (2 Sam 23:14-17). The response of king David confirms the rarity of such nobility—just as our text says. But we still have no record of one man dying in the place of another.

Peter once told Jesus, "I will lay down my life for Thy sake" (John 13:37), but he was not speaking of a substitutionary death, and really did not realize what he had said. Jesus responded, telling Peter he would deny him three times before the night was over. Still, we have no record of one man laying down his life in the place of another.

The ONLY place this concept is pressed into the Scriptural record is in the animal sacrifices—and those were not voluntary on the part of the animals. Nor, indeed, were they effective to accomplish the desire of the Lord (Heb 10:6).

The Most Vivid Expression

The most vivid expression is found in the account of Abraham offering up Isaac at the commandment of the Lord. Before he could plunge the knife into his "only son," the angel of the Lord stopped him, saying it was now evident that he truly feared the Lord. It is then written, "And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt offering IN THE STEAD OF HIS SON" (Gen 22:12-13). The NASB reads, "in the place of his son."

What Do We Learn From This?

Herein a most wonderful truth is revealed. God has so orchestrated Scripture as to accentuate the death of His Son! While it may be conceptually possible for a one to die for "a righteous man," God did not allow any such record in Scripture. It might even be conceivable for someone to "dare to die" for a "good man." But no such account was permitted in Scripture! Throughout history, there may have been an occasion here or there where some daring soul died in order that a noble soul might live on. There is, however, no such record in Scripture. I understand this to be by Divine design. God will not share the glory of Christ's death with any other!

Our text leaves us unable to site examples of the possibilities stated. There is really only one such example, and it is that of the Lord Jesus Christ. When the Lord Jesus said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John 15:13), a solitary example leaps to the forefront of our minds!

It is the death of the Lord Jesus Christ, distinguished from all other deaths. No other death has ever been like His! Abel's death falls short, as well as that of the holy prophets, and even John the Baptist. No martyr's death can compare with this! Profane history cannot produce a solitary example of this kind of love. Jesus, and Jesus alone, proves His word to be true.

GOD HAS COMMENDED HIS LOVE

"⁸ But God demonstrates (commendeth, KJV) His own love toward us, in that while we were still sinners, Christ died for us." We are, indeed, on hallowed ground! The existence of God's love is beyond all question, for it is integral to His nature. The spirit twice affirms, "God IS love" (1 John 4:8,16). His love, however, extends beyond the perception of natural men. Creation, with all of its magnificent expanse, has never uttered a single syllable about "the love of God." It can only speak of His "eternal power and Godhead" (Rom 1:20). The concept of God has been entertained by men throughout the world, and is reflected in their idolatries. But not a single tribe or people have ever conceived of a God who "IS love." No idol has ever been made to a loving God. No philosopher, however astute and disciplined in thought, has ever conceived and declared that "God IS love." Idolatrous men have conceived of a "goddess of love," but NEVER of a god who IS love.

Even after God has revealed His great love, it is exceedingly difficult for some poor souls to perceive it. And all who have perceived it in any degree acknowledge they have seen only the hem of the garment of Divine love. This is the love that is "poured out in our hearts by the Holy Spirit who was given to us" (Rom 5:5). Only the heavenly Guest can open its fulness to us. Take, for example, "the love of Christ" that is nothing less than an expression of the love of God. It is said that the effectual ministry of the Holy Spirit includes making us able to "know the love of Christ which passes knowledge" (Eph 3:19). Divine love cannot be deciphered by word studies and academic discipline. At some point, the human spirit must be influenced by the Holy Spirit if this love is to be comprehended.

We now enter into a consideration

In the death of Christ more of God's love is seen than was perceived in His earthly ministry. It constitutes a more extensive witness, and confirms things only suspected by those who saw His marvelous works and heard His wondrous words.

of God's love that is transcendent to philosophy and human reasoning. It is described as "His OWN love." This is not a description of love from an academic viewpoint, as is so common in certain circles. Here is a love that is seen in an action rather than a definition.

A LOVE THAT IS COMMENDED

The KJV reads, "But God commendeth his love toward us . . ." Additional versions employing this word include ASV, Websters, Darby, Duoy-Rheims, and Young's Literal. Other versions read, "But God shows His love for us,"^{RSV} "But God proves His love for us,"^{NRSV} "But God has made clear his love to us,"^{BBE} "So it is proof of God's own love for us."^{NLT}

I prefer the word "commends," for it appears to carry more of the meaning of the text. Although incapable of disclosing the full intent of the expression, the word translated "commends" literally means "to stand with." The picture is that of God Himself standing along side the dying Jesus saying, "See how I love you," or "This is your evidence of My love," or "My Son is doing this because I have loved you."

This parallels a previous expression concerning the death of Christ: "Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood" (3:25). The meaning is that God has placed the death of His Son in a conspicuous place, where all of the light of glory can shine upon it. When it comes to deeds done in the earth, the Father has elevated the death of His Son above them all. The greatest witness of His love is seen here, in the vicarious and atoning death of Jesus Christ!

The greatest confirmation of Divine love is not found in your deliverance from trouble. As great as that may be, many heathen and blasphemers have experienced similar things. The greatest attestation of God's love is not found in your healing or the provision of your needs. As great as those may be, many of God's enemies can point to such occasions in their experience.

In the death of Christ more of God's love is seen than was perceived in His earthly ministry. It constitutes a more extensive witness, and confirms things only suspected by those who saw His marvelous works and heard His wondrous words. In Christ's death, God CONFIRMED His love. He EXHIBITED that love, forever removing all doubt concerning its reality from those who believe. For those who will believe the Gospel, there will be no doubt of His love.

In my understanding, the declaration of this verse is not intended to provoke thanksgiving—although it surely will. Rather, it is to move us to trust, reliance, and confidence! Thanksgiving springs from faith, and not vice versa. If the people of God can believe, they not only step into the realm where impossibilities become possible (Mk 9:23), they will be provoked to unparalleled thanksgiving and praise.

Something Noteworthy

There is something that is particularly noteworthy in this text. The expression is in the PRESENT tense, not in the past. Inadvertently, some might read it this way, “God commended His love toward us,” or God demonstrated His own love toward us.” But that is not how it reads. God COMMENDETH, or commends, His love toward us. Other versions read, “demonstrates,” “shows,” “proves.” It is in the present tense.

So, what does this mean? Is it at all significant that God speaks in this manner? Indeed it is! God is in the process of confirming His love to us. This is something He is doing now through the ministry of the Holy Spirit. This is nothing less than an elaboration of what was said earlier, “the love of God has been poured out in our hearts by the Holy Spirit who was given to us” (5:5).

Here is a facet of being “taught by God” (John 6:45). It is not possible to consider the death of Christ without the living God drawing near! He has forever associated Himself with the death of His Son! Wherever faithful souls look intently upon God’s dying Lamb, they will come under the influence of the mighty God. That, and more, is involved in this verse. God is still commending His love through the death of His Son!

WHILE WE WERE YET SINNERS

After affirming that unlikelihood that anyone would lay down their life for a worthy person, the Spirit now strongly affirms the conditions under which Jesus died. Rather than dying for righteous people, He died for sinners. He did not die for good people, but for sinners. But even that is not the whole of it. He did not die for them after they had made some attempts to reform. He did not even die for them after they had conceded they were not sufficient. He did not die because they had asked for God to supply a remedy for their sinful condition. Rather, He died “while we were yet sinners.”

The Scriptural Concept of a Sinner

Among the many deficiencies of modern religion, is the perception of “sinner” that it has fostered. Men do not tend to assign the significance to this word that is intended in Scripture. As a result, the value of Christ’s death has been greatly obscured. Until the weightiness of our state is perceived, the importance of Christ’s death will not be clearly seen, and consequently will be neglected and under-emphasized.

Ponder some of the uses the Spirit makes of this term—“sinner.” The wicked men of Sodom were “sinner before the Lord exceedingly” (Gen 13:13). The Amalekites, whose name was blotted out by God, were known as “the sinners” (1 Sam 1 5:18). Jesus said He came to “bring sinners to repentance” (Matt 9:13). Jesus was betrayed into “the hands of sinners” (Matt 26:45). The healed blind man affirmed “God does not hear sinners,” and the Spirit ratified his words by recording them in Scripture with no disclaimer (John 9:31). The entirety of Adam’s progeny were “made sinners” by his act of “disobedience” (Rom 5:19). Jesus Himself, although He came into the world “to save sinners” (1 Tim 1:15), was Himself “separate from sinners” (Heb 7:25).

“Sinners” are sinful. That is their nature, and sin is what they do. Regardless of the degree of their expression of sin, they are “sinner” by nature—because of who they are as well as what they have done.

The sin of sinners clings to them. That is another reason for them being “sinner” – not only because of what the are doing, but because of what they have done. “Sinners” are given over to sin. Such are “servants of sin” (Rom 6:17,19). When the publican sought mercy from God, it was because he knew he was “a sinner” (Lk 18:13).

All Merit Is Removed

Christ did not die for those who WERE “sinner,” for those who were “YET sinners.” All merit, or worthiness, is therefore removed. There can be no ground for boasting, for the required death was accomplished WHILE we were still sinners.

The love of God and Christ was not motivated by our love, or our response, for neither existed when Jesus died. At that time, we were “yet sinners.” Further, His death was not required because of what we COULD be, but because we were “yet sinners.”

CHRIST DIED FOR US

What a marvelous affirmation: “Christ died for us.” There is no way to improve on that word. Every major translation reads precisely this way: “Christ died for us.” Some paraphrases read “Christ gave His life for us,”^{BBE} “Christ did die for us.”^{YLT} And what is the intention of this expression? It cannot be any ordinary or common word, for the love of God is being commended in this death of Jesus Christ.

Vicarious

Here we come to the matter of substitution—of Christ’s death being vicarious. The expression “for us” does not mean because of us, but in our stead, or place. Christ’s death was vicarious.

In the English, “vicarious” is a very weighty word. It involves paying a penalty that was due another, thereby bringing an advantage to sinners that is wholly undeserved. The idea of appointment is involved in the word, so that a person who does something vicariously cannot take the matter on himself. What is done must be accepted by the one to whom it is presented, else it has no value whatsoever.

In such a substitution, the punishment due to one is inflicted upon the another—the vicarious one. But that is not all of the matter. In salvation, the punishment is inflicted by the One who was offended, and to Whom the debt is owed—the Living God.

Jesus did more than simply “die.” He did not die naturally, but supernaturally. Some affirm He died of a broken heart, as indicated medically by water and blood flowing from His side. But the Spirit makes no such statement. This is a human analysis, not a Divine one. Jesus laid down His life. No one took it from Him (John 10:17-18). He dismissed His Spirit, it was not taken from Him (Lk 23:46). He offered Himself to God (Heb 9:14).

The Requirements

TRANSFER OF SINS. In order for Christ’s death to be effectual for us, the sins of the world had to be placed upon Him. In the Kingdom, one cannot die for another unless the infractions that incurred the penalty are transferred to the substitute.

This requirement was pictured under the Law, where the sins of the people were transferred to the atoning victim. Because of the complexities involved in atonement, several sacrifices were used on the day of atonement. Most of them were killed, but one was not. It was the “scape goat.” The law specified, “And Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness:

and the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness” (Lev 16:21-22). There the Lord portrayed a key factor in a substitutionary, or vicarious, sacrifice.

The Scriptures say this of the Lamb of God. “the LORD hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all” (Isa 53:6). Again it is written, “Who His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree” (1 Pet 2:24). The placement of our sins upon Jesus, and Him carrying them in His body on the tree, fulfilled the type introduced in the scape goat.

SIN MUST BE JUDGED BEFORE THE BLESSING CAN BE GIVEN.

In A remarkable statement of what occurred when Jesus died, the Spirit says, “Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree: that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles

5:21). Here again, two requirements are fulfilled. Jesus not only carried our sins, but was “made” to be sin by God. This was no mere technicality! When Jesus was born, He was “God manifest in the flesh” (1 Tim 3:16). When He died, He was “made to be sin;” that is, He was the embodiment of sin—sin incarnate!

These are the righteous involvements of a vicarious atonement. Not only must the sin of man be addressed, the righteousness of God must be satisfied. God Himself must exact the penalty on a victim He has chosen. It must result in God being just in conferring righteousness upon those for whom Christ died—“sinner.”

Foreshadowed Complexities

The complexities of salvation were foreshadowed in the Law. A multiplicity of sacrifices, an altar, high priest, and tabernacle were all necessary to prefigure what was going to be accomplished in Christ. Christ, the vicarious sacrifice, was through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith” (Gal 3:13-14). Notice what marvelous accomplishments are here declared. The curse of God was expended on Christ. This was done that the blessing might come upon those who believe. Both accomplishments are realized by means of a vicarious sacrifice.

In order for Christ’s death to be effectual for us, the sins of the world had to be placed upon Him. In the Kingdom, one cannot die for another unless the infractions that incurred the penalty are transferred to the substitute.

Again it is written, “For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him” (2 Cor the High Priest, sacrifice, altar, scape goat, and “fit man” all in One.

All of this is involved in “Christ died for us.” His death was vicarious because we were “yet sinners.” It is effective because He was pure and undefiled. It satisfied God because the due penalty was paid. Now He could be “just and the Justifier of him that believeth in Jesus” (Rom 3:26). Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift (2 Cor 9:15). What great and unparalleled wisdom is revealed in this arrangement.

A “MUCH MORE” SITUATION

“Much more than, having now been justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him.”

Our text is doing much more than establishing an official theological position. There is a vast difference between edifying the people of God and making sure they hold to what is conceived to be, a properly structured, or systematic, theology. Sectarianism has contributed to a lifeless view of Scripture, which, in turn, has yielded a spiritually weak and emaciated people.

If people are considering the coming of Christ and the end of the world, it is not strange to find them enamored about the sequence of events, with little regard for being prepared to meet the Lord. In the matter before us, it is not uncommon to find people haggling over whether or not being justified means you can fall away or not, as though justification were the end of the matter. Now, the Spirit will launch the vessel of thought upon the sea of ultimate reality. He cares nothing for the traditions and speculations of men, but is wholly devoted to filling us with all joy and peace in believing, that we may “abound in hope” through His power (Rom 15:13).

THE “MUCH MORE” VIEW

The expression “much more” is mentioned seven times in the book of Romans—five times in the fifth chapter. This is its first occurrence (5:9,10,15,17,20; 11:12,24). The workings of God are like a swelling wave that grows larger and larger. They differ from such a swell in that they do not dissipate or grow smaller. Thus, on a very broad scale, what God is doing in salvation is infinitely larger than what He did in creating the natural order. On more focused level, what He is doing in the New Covenant is larger than what he did under the Law.

On an even more microscopic level, what the exalted Christ is doing now is on a larger and more magnificent scale than what He did in His death. I must state this with care, lest it appear as though the death of Christ has been rendered obsolete by what Jesus is doing now. God forbid! What He is doing now is based upon the accomplishments of His death. He is now building the superstructure of Divine purpose upon His indispensable and foundational death “for us.”

The phrase “Much more then” moves us from the foundation to the building, from the beginning to the culmination, from the start to the finish.

It involves, but is not limited to, the remission of sin. There is a certain mentality afoot among believers that views man’s extrication from sin as more difficult than bringing him the rest of the way to glory. This is a fatal error.

From our limited perspective, was getting Israel out of Egypt a greater work than getting them into Canaan? What answer do you suppose Moses would give you? How would Joshua and Caleb answer? And, were you able to ask ancient Lot whether getting into Zoar took more than getting out of Sodom, he would no doubt ask you to remember his wife. Time is the great tester of man. We sorely need an exalted King to bring us safely through it to the obtaining of our inheritance.

The mother of much erroneous theology is traced to this precise misconception: that bringing someone into glory who has been justified, requires little more than a word. The big work is thus perceived as coming away from servitude to Satan, and being delivered from a condemning conscience.

The mother of much erroneous theology is traced to this precise misconception: that bringing someone into glory who has been justified, requires little more than a word. The big work is thus perceived as coming away from servitude to Satan, and being delivered from a condemning conscience.

Let no one doubt that being conformed to the image of God’s Son is a most magnificent work. Jesus could not do it before He died, and He did not do it before He ascended back to the Father. But let the Lord speak for Himself on this matter. “Who is the one who condemns? Christ Jesus is He who died, yes, rather who was raised, who is at the right hand of God, who also intercedes for us”^{NASB}

(Rom 8:34). That is the “much more” picture!

If Christ could justify us when He was “crucified through weakness” (2 Cor 13:4), what will He do now that He has been enthroned in the heavens! To say it another way, if Christ could free us from the dominion of the devil at His weakest point, what will He do for us at His strongest point—in His majesty?

JUSTIFIED BY HIS BLOOD

“Much more THEN” refers back to verse eight. If God commended, or demonstrated, His love toward us when we were “yet sinners,” what will He do now that we have been justified? We ought not expect anything mediocre.

The Spirit will not let us forget the role of Christ’s blood in our justification. He fulfilled the requirement of the Law itself—“life for life” (Ex 21:23).

To this point, several different views of justification have been presented. 1-- We are justified freely by God’s grace (3:24). 2-- We are justified by faith (3:28; 5:1). 3-- We are justified by Christ’s blood, or the forfeiture of His life. Among other things, this confirms that faith lays hold of both cause and benefit. The cause is Christ’s blood. The benefit is remission and the imputation of righteousness—and faith takes hold of them all.

We are justified “NOW.” For those who believe on the Son, this is a present reality. Iniquities ARE forgiven, sins ARE covered, and God WILL not impute sin to the justified one (4:7-8)! Those in Christ NOW have their names written in heaven (Lk 10:20; Heb 12:23), are “accepted in the Beloved” (Eph 1:6), and are “heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ” (Rom 8:17). Being justified, they NOW have peace with God (5:1) and access to the grace wherein they stand (5:2). They are no longer of the world (John 15:19), are not debtors to the flesh (Rom 8:12), and are the “sons of God” (1 John 3:1-2). All of that is involved in being NOW “justified by His blood.” Sin does not make sense within the context of reconciliation.

Now that we are justified, Christ can “dwell in our hearts by faith,” while the Holy Spirit is bringing us from one stage of glory to another (2 Cor 3:18). Now God can work in us, “both to will and to do of His own good pleasure” (Phil 2:13). But lest we begin to take His work for granted, the Spirit reminds us of Christ’s blood—of the dying Lamb, whose life was required if we were to be made clean. Before God could receive us, He had to deal with our sins in the person of His Son. Life through death! Blessing by means of a cursing!

SHALL BE SAVED FROM WRATH

God did pour out His wrath upon the Son, cursing Him (Gal 3:13), forsaking Him (Mk 15:34), and making Him “taste death for every man” (Heb 2:9). But that occasion did not exhaust the wrath of Almighty God. Upon the Divine calendar, there remains “the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God” (Rom 2:5). At that time God’s wrath will be “revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men” (Rom 1:18). Then it will be poured out “without mixture” (Rev 14:10).

Jesus has delivered us from the coming wrath. As it is written, “You turned to God from idols to serve a living and true God, and to wait for His Son from heaven, whom He raised from the dead, that is Jesus, who delivers us from the wrath to come”^{NKJV} (1 Thess 1:10). That deliverance is sure to those who cling to the Son by faith. But that relationship is imperative.

THROUGH HIM

We dare not leave our “first love,” as did Ephesus (Rev 2:4). It is good to give heed to the Psalmist. “Kiss the Son, lest He be angry, and ye perish from the way, when His wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him” (Psa 2:12). You do not want Him to say to you, “I have this against you” (Eph 2:4). He is your only guarantee of deliverance from “the wrath to come.” Jesus does not deliver you from sin and Satan, and then recline until the work automatically runs its course. And, if He does not do that, how could any mere mortal justify such conduct? If God has “called us into the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord” (1 Cor 1:9), that fellowship must be maintained. We must remain sensitive to His tutelage and guidance, else deliverance will not be possible.

How appropriate is the exhortation of the Spirit to Ephesus. “Walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind, having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart: who being past feeling have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness. But ye have not so learned Christ; if so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus: That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; And be renewed in the spirit of your mind; And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:17-24). That is the process by which God is saving you now, through Christ.

If this work seems too good to believe, remember, this is the “much more” work. As you “continue in the Son, and in the Father” (1 John 2:24), standing faultless before the Father and being excluded from His wrath is “much more” possible that getting you out of sin in the first place. That is an extremely weak way of saying it. Yet, it is how the heart must reason when assailed by doubt.

Remember, this passage is intended to strengthen your faith, and to convince you of the greatness and sureness of salvation in Christ Jesus.

ENEMIES WERE RECONCILED

“^{10a} For if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God through the death of His Son . . .” Now the Spirit expands our perception of salvation, revealing what an extensive and glorious work it is. The further the Spirit takes this matter, the greater the distance that is created between the believing heart and conventional religion. We will find that our condition was much worse than ever conceived by the natural mind.

WHEN WE WERE ENEMIES

The thought of being an enemy to God is most arresting. There are people who cannot receive such a notion. They reject it forthrightly, openly affirming that God has no enemies—that He has a deep and abiding affection for everyone. However, after they have presented all of their imaginations, the Spirit refers to a time when “we were enemies.” Those who are not in the Son are, in fact, God’s enemies. Take, for example, the Jews, who are a chosen people. Of those who are not in the Son, the Spirit says, “As concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes: but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers’ sakes” (Rom 11:28). Paul mentions some teachers who were “enemies of the cross of Christ” (Phil 3:18). In a vivid description of our former state, the Spirit says, “And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled” (Col 1:21). David spoke of the scattering of God’s “enemies” (Psa 68:1), affirming He would wound their “head” (Psa 68:21). In a great Messianic prophecy, Isaiah said the coming Savior would “prevail against His enemies” (Isa 42:13). “His indignation,” the Lord declares, “is against His enemies” (Isa 66:14).

Should men be reluctant to perceive the Living God in this manner, Nahum speaks to the nations. “God is jealous, and the LORD revengeth; the LORD revengeth, and is furious; the LORD will take vengeance on His adversaries, and he reserveth wrath for His enemies” (Nah 1:2). Jesus, we are told, will rule “till His enemies be made his footstool” (Heb 10:13). Let no one question that God has enemies!

The whole matter comes even closer to home when believers who are flirting with the world are solemnly told, “Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? whoseever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God” (James 4:4). Were that single morsel of truth to be ingested by the contemporary church, a revival of epochal proportions would break forth!

If anyone should understand these sayings, it is those who “were enemies.” If anyone should be able to make sense of them and shout the “Amen” to them, it should be those who are now in the Son, who “were enemies.”

What Is An Enemy?

An enemy to God is hostile toward Him, and fights against Him. It is a futile hostility, and a vain fight, but it nevertheless exists. God’s enemies will crucify the Son of God if given a chance to do so! They will contradict His word, and vilify those who bring it—and all without a twinge of conscience.

God’s enemies hate Him. God spoke of those who “hate me” (Ex 20:5; Deut 32:41). The first chapter of Romans mentioned “haters of God” (1:30). Jehu once said to king Jehosaphat, “Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the LORD?” (2 Chron 19:2). These are very real conditions, and we were all in that category before God put us into Christ, delivering us from the power of darkness, and translating us into the kingdom of His dear Son (Col 1:13).

What Made Us Enemies?

“When we were enemies,” we were alienated from Him in our minds and because of our wicked works. Scripture puts it this way. “Once you were alienated from God and were enemies in your minds because of your evil behavior” NIV (Col 1:21). We did not think like God. To put it in words taught by the Holy Spirit, “For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts” (Isa 55:8-9). There can be no accord with God or acceptance by Him where this condition exists. These verses are preceded for a stern exhortation—one that could not be fulfilled under the Law. “Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for

An enemy to God is hostile toward Him, and fights against Him. It is a futile hostility, and a vain fight, but it nevertheless exists. God’s enemies will crucify the Son of God if given a chance to do so! They will contradict His word, and vilify those who bring it—and all without a twinge of conscience.

He will abundantly pardon” (Isa 55:7).

Those who are enemies of God have the wrath of God abiding upon them, and are condemned all ready (John 3:18,36). When at last they confront the Lord, they will be “punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power” (2 Thess 1:9). It is ever true, “But the wicked will perish; And the enemies of the LORD will be like the glory of the pastures, They vanish-- like smoke they vanish away” (Psa 37:20).

Ponder, precious soul, when you were in that classification. As an enemy of God, you were “without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world” (Eph 2:12).

RECONCILED TO GOD

From that inimical state, we were “reconciled to God!” The hostility between us was replaced with peace (Rom 5:1). The variance between our thoughts and His was replaced with the mind of Christ (1 Cor 2:16). Our disparate ways were removed when He put His law into our mind, and wrote it on our heart (Heb 8:10).

To be “reconciled” to God is to be brought into conscious harmony with Him. It is to think like Him, and no longer be set to resist His thoughts and ways. There is fellowship and accord in reconciliation.

Those who simply cannot see things God’s way are not reconciled to Him. It should be of deep concern to every believer that variance with God is so common in the professed church. As James would say, “My brethren, these things ought not so to be” (James 3:10).

THROUGH THE DEATH OF HIS SON

This marvelous reconciliation is not without cost. As great as our God is, making us one with Himself required “the death of His Son.” Without this death, you could not have “the mind of Christ.” Without this vicarious atonement, the law of God could not be put into your mind or written upon your heart. You could not have peace with God apart from Christ’s death. Apart from that death, you could not be welcome in the most holy place!

When you come to the Lord’s table, this is an area of especially fruitful meditation. As you take the bread and the cup, speak to yourself. “Father, if Your Son did not die, I could not see Him as You do—the Beloved Son in whom You are well pleased.” Think, “If Jesus did not die, I could not hate sin as I do, or desire to be with the Lord as strongly as I do.” This is involved in being reconciled to God! “If my Savior did not lay down His life for me, I could not delight in the Law of God, or comprehend something of its depth.”

When Were We Reconciled?

And when did this reconciliation take place? Provisionally, it took place when Jesus died. As it is written, “Now all these things are from God, who reconciled us to Himself through Christ, and gave us the ministry of reconciliation, namely, that God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself, not counting their trespasses against them, and He has committed to us the word of reconciliation^{NASB} (2 Cor 5:18-19). The work was done right there, when it looked to the flesh as though Jesus had been overthrown! Now the cry goes out to all, "Be ye reconciled to God" (2 Cor 5:20). It is a word backed up by eternal purpose, fortified by everlasting love, and implemented by a eternal High Priest.

And what were we when all of this took place? We were "enemies!" We were reconciled to God "when we were enemies." Christ's vicarious death, and our faith in His blood (Rom 3:25) changes our state! It corrects our condition! The thing that caused the variance --sin-- was removed.

Not to be forgotten is the fact that sin had stirred God's anger toward us. He has promised no good to His enemies. In fact, "God is angry with the wicked every day" (Psa 7:11). Yet, even though His nature moved His angry against the wicked, His great mercy compelled Him to provide a covering for their sin. While they remained His enemies, He provided a means to change them that was both righteous and effective. It was a means that would change their nature, for He could not change. As He Himself said, "I am the LORD, I change not" (Mal 3:6). A marvelous work, indeed!

ANOTHER "MUCH MORE" SITUATION

" 10b . . . much more, having been reconciled, we shall be saved by His life." Here is another "much more" affirmation. The Spirit is reasoning with us concerning the firmness of our salvation. He is confirming to our hearts that we have good reason to expect the work to be finished, performed "until the day of Jesus Christ" (Phil 1:6). Because believers are engaged in a fierce and unrelenting warfare, they require "everlasting consolation and good hope through grace" (2 Thess 2:16). Indeed, the Spirit is delivering such a precious and sweet elixir to us!

HAVING BEEN RECONCILED

Here is something human reason cannot perceive, but faith can see clearly. We are presently in the state of reconciliation! We have been reconciled to God, and can come to Him , entering into the holiest with a true heart, a conscience that is free from guilt, and bodies that have been washed with pure water.

Here is something human reason cannot perceive, but faith can see clearly. We are presently in the state of reconciliation! We have been reconciled to God, and can come to Him , entering into the holiest with a true heart, a conscience that is free from guilt, and bodies that have been washed with pure water (Heb 10:22). There is no need for any child of God to live aloof from Him, or conduct the affairs of their life while relying on human wisdom and strength!

A Sad Situation

While I do not desire to dwell upon this, we are living in a time when the truth of reconciliation is generally neglected in the church. Satan has deceived the professed church into eating from the forbidden fruit of the world's wisdom. There exists in the modern church a most profound reliance on human wisdom. It is staggering to consider! Academics have been exalted above atonement. Rudiments occupy a more prominent place than reconciliation. The wisdom of God has been replaced by the wisdom of the world. Myriad believers wander through life under the oppression of a condemned conscience, unaware they are reconciled to God. It is a sad and pathetic situation.

But it is sadder still that so little concern can be found about this condition. There is so little talk these days about the reconciliation accomplished in Christ that one wonders if the bare facts of it are known. In over fifty years of contact with religious leaders, teachers, and preachers, I am astounded I have heard so very little about reconciliation or justification. I have been in circles where more is said about the role of women in the church than of Christ in redemption. I have heard more discussion about the shepherds of the local assembly than the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls. In some circles, more is said about purported experiences of the Holy Spirit than the Savior who sent Him.

For some, these are forbidden topics, but someone must speak up about them! There is a languishing spirit in the Western church that can be changed to rejoicing by the awareness that we have "been reconciled." There is still an exchange program in place that can be enjoyed by every believer! Jesus is here to "appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, that he might be glorified. And they shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations" (Isa 61:3-4).

The Biggest Mission Field

The biggest mission field has always been, and still is, the church! The Holy Spirit, who moved holy men to write Scripture, gave us precious few words that were delivered to unreconciled people. The words of Peter to the Jews are provided (Acts 2:14-36; 3:12-26; 4:8-12). We have the words of Stephen to the Jewish council (Acts 7:2-53). There is Paul's discourse to the Athenians and Stoics (Acts 17:22-31). We also have a record of his words to some opposing Jews (Acts 22:1-22). We have some summary statements Paul made to Felix (Acts 24:24-25) and Agrippa (Acts 26:29). All of them—every single letter and syllable, and word—could fit in a rather small booklet—one of very few pages.

The only extensive words of Jesus following His enthronement are addressed to “the churches” (Rev 1:11-3:22). All of the Epistles were written to believers, and the Gospels appear to have been also. There is a resounding message that comes through in all of this writing. It concerns Jesus Christ, and the reconciliation accomplished through Him. All of the correction and practical instruction were given to guide people back within the circumference of hearing.

The church needs to be told they are reconciled to God! This necessity is not wholly due to their ignorance of the truth. Rather, it is because they have an accusing adversary who is working night and day to deprive them of this knowledge. He accuses them in their own thoughts, through distorted teaching, and through their enemies. His accusations and fiery darts can only be repelled by the shield of faith. That faith can only come by hearing, and hearing can only come by the “word of Christ.”

Before the Spirit can take us to higher realms, He must first convince us we have been justified through our faith and reconciled to God. There is a welcome sign in heaven confronting every believer who will draw near through the blood of Christ!

SHALL BE SAVED BY HIS LIFE

But this is not the end of the matter. The Spirit reasons further with us, revealing the implications of our reconciliation. If God reconciled us when we “were enemies,” what will He do now that we are “joined” to Him (2 Cor 6:17)? If Jesus’ death reconciled us, what will His life—His present life—do?

Here is the glad announcement. “Much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life.” If Jesus threw Himself into reconciling us, what do you suppose He is doing now? If, when it came time for Him to die and return to glory, “He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem” (Lk 9:51), how determined is He that we be with Him? I will tell you! It is “much more!”

Christ’s Intercessory Ministry

The expression “saved by His life” refers to the intercessory ministry of Jesus. Contrary to the benighted teaching of some, God has not put salvation on an automatic pilot. He has positioned the Son at His own right hand, and given Him all power in heaven and in earth. The purpose for this allocation is that the Son might “bring many sons to glory” (Heb 2:10). He is bringing “us to God” right through the land of the enemy (1 Pet 3:18). It is Christ’s commission to “give

Many a soul has experienced times when it was more difficult to come to God as a Christian than it was when a sinner. Because of some foolishness, or snare of the devil, their conscience has become contaminated, and a cloud of despair has settled over their soul. They learn first hand of the impotency of human wisdom and natural ability.

eternal life to as many” as God has “given” to Him (John 17:2).

Christ’s intercessory work is more challenging and extensive than His reconciling death. To accomplish the reconciliation, He appeared “once in the end of the world to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself” (Heb 9:26). He made “one sacrifice for sins forever” (Heb 10:12). It was an aggressive and difficult work, but it was a “short” one, never again to be repeated.

But what of His intercessory work? What does the Holy Spirit say about it? This is Christ’s present “life,” the life by which we “shall be saved.” Here is what the Spirit says. “But this man, because He continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood. Wherefore He is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them” (Heb 7:24-26). Those who speak simplistically of salvation do well to give heed to these words! If you are in Christ, you are presently being “saved” by Christ’s life. It is His intercession that is presently saving you. Should Jesus cease to intercede for us, we would forthwith drop into hell, and that without remedy!

Notice how the Spirit speaks. He says Jesus is “able to save completely those who come to God through him.”^{NIV} I understand such an affirmation does not fit into certain views of salvation, but what matter is that? Who should be concerned when God contradicts men? The solution is very simply. Discard what man has said, and take hold of what the Lord has said. He has declared you are being saved by Jesus AS you come to the Father through Him.

Many a soul has experienced times when it was more difficult to come to God as a Christian than it was when a sinner. Because of some foolishness, or snare of the devil, their conscience has become contaminated, and a cloud of despair has settled over their soul. They learn first hand of the impotency of human wisdom and natural ability. Such poor souls, laden with guilt, have sought the aid of their brothers and sisters. They have fallen into the slough of despondency, and wrestled with feelings of rejection and unworthiness. They will tell you there are times when it takes all the spiritual energy you have to draw near to God.

There have been champions of the faith, like Paul who have had “fears within” (2 Cor 7:5), “despaired of life” (2 Cor 1:8), and nearly had “sorrow upon sorrow” (Phil 2:27). Every child of God will become acutely aware the work is not yet finished in him. Life, with all of its complexities and difficulties can cause men to confess, “Not that I have already obtained it, or have already become perfect, but I press on in order that I may lay hold of that for which also I was laid hold of by Christ Jesus. Brethren, I do not regard myself as having laid hold of it yet” (Phil 3:12-13).

There is a message for such souls—and all believers will experience this at some time. It is this: “WE SHALL BE SAVED BY HIS LIFE!” This is even more apt to be take place than our deliverance from bondage to sin! It is a “MUCH MORE” circumstance!

You can believe our God is “able to keep you from stumbling, and to make you stand in the presence of His glory blameless with great joy” (Jude 24). He is able to do it because of an appointed and interceding King, our High Priest! The One who wrought the salvation is maintaining it.

Two Conditions

The passage has presented two conditions, contrasting them for us. There are two conditions of believers, and two of Christ. One set of conditions is in the past, and one exists now. In the past we were enemies and Christ died. In the present, we are reconciled and Christ lives. Our condition is better, and so is that of Jesus.

Our text, however, concludes that our betterment is owing both to Christ’s death and to His life. His death without His resurrected life would have left us enemies to God, dead in trespasses and sin. His life without His death would be ineffective for us now, and we would perish in the way.

Without Christ’s death, God could not reconcile us. Without His life, He could not bring us to glory. And, if we needed Christ’s death, “much more,” we need His life. Thank God He “ever lives to make intercession for” us! Put the accent where God has put it!

REJOICING IN GOD

“^{11a} And not only that, but we also rejoice in God through our Lord Jesus Christ . . .” The manner in which the Spirit speaks to the churches is both refreshing and challenging. Even after He has brought us to the mountain of justification by faith, and lifted us higher to behold a living, reigning, and interceding Christ, He does not stop. Those with small appetites for spiritual things cannot remain long with the Spirit of God. While you are still standing amazed at the insights He ministers, He continues to speak.

THE “NOT ONLY THAT” VIEW

Here is another expression, similar to “much more.” Through utterances like this the Lord expands our thoughts and assists us to grow in our understanding. He has used this terminology before, in the third verse of this chapter.

“And not only that, but we also glory in tribulations, knowing that tribulation produces perseverance.”^{NKJV}

Here, the Spirit is continuing the thoughts initiated in the beginning of this chapter. This is showing us the harvest reaped in justification. It is abundant, and it is precious. Let me remind you of them, lest they slip from your mind.

- ▶ We have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ (5:1).
- ▶ We have access into this grace wherein we stand (5:2a).
- ▶ We rejoice in hope of beholding and participating in the glory of God (5:2b).

- ▶ We glory in tribulations (5:3-a).
- ▶ We know tribulation results in endurance (5:3b).
- ▶ We know that endurance develops character, or trustworthiness (5:4a).
- ▶ We know that character results in a confident hope (5:4b).

Those with small appetites for spiritual things cannot remain long with the Spirit of God. While you are still standing amazed at the insights He ministers, He continues to speak.

- ▶ Hope does not make us ashamed (5:5a).
- ▶ God’s love for us is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit (5:5b).

Verses 6-10 are an elaboration of the love of God, which the Spirit has poured out into our hearts. They have expounded the extent and effectiveness of that marvelous love. It found us when we were sinners, and wonderfully reconciled us through the death of His Son. It provided for us when we were enemies, and resulted in our reconciliation. The love of God not only provided deliverance from sin and the world, but has supplied a way of entrance into the presence of God, now by faith, and finally in all fullness. That is the love that is poured out as a mighty river into our hearts by the Holy Spirit. It is refreshing and abundant!

Now, the Spirit resumes the unfolding of the effects of justification. In this manner, He has anchored us to Jesus instead of to the benefits. He briefly touches on the effects of justification, but lingers upon the means by which it was accomplished. This is the Divine manner, and can be seen throughout the Epistles. The accent is always placed on the redemptive role of Jesus, with the secondary emphasis upon the effects of that redemption upon the believer. After that problematic areas are addressed, and always with a mind to get back to the Savior and His “great salvation.”

REJOICING IN GOD

“And not only that, but we also rejoice in God.” Here again is a most powerful expression. Rejoicing in God is something unique to those in Christ Jesus. Prior to Jesus, some few souls rejoiced in the Lord. It was always urged upon the righteous, and most generally related to temporal deliverances. The Psalmist urged the “righteous” to “Rejoice in the Lord” (Psa 33:1; 97:12). Isaiah told his peers a day was coming when “You shall rejoice in the LORD, And glory in the Holy One of Israel”^{NKJV} (Isa 41:16). Joel urged the people to “rejoice in the Lord” because of the rain He had given them, causing their floor to be “full of wheat” (Joel 2:23). The faith of Habakkuk rose above his generation when he shouted, “Yet I will rejoice in the LORD, I will joy in the God of my salvation” (Hab 3:18).

This precise phrase, “rejoice in God,” is mentioned one other time in Scripture, and it is by David. “But the king shall rejoice in God” (Psa 63:11). But his was not as lofty a statement as our text. It was not owing to any deficiency in David. Rather, he lived during a time when greater things were not known as fully as they are now. He rejoiced at the faint outline of God. Those in Christ rejoice in a more fully revealed God!

What Does It Mean?

What does it mean to “rejoice in God,” or “rejoice in the Lord” (Phil 4:4), or “joy in God?”^{KJV} It is to make our boast in God, or to glory in Him. It is to joyfully speak of His doings, and savor the knowledge that He is for us.

Joying in God involves tracing our reconciliation back to Him. It flows from the spring of spiritual understanding that can only account for our change by pointing to the Lord.

Such rejoicing is often associated with words, although it is not limited to them.

Hear Mary rejoice in the Lord following Gabriel’s announcement to her. “My soul magnifies the Lord, and my spirit has rejoiced in God my Savior. For He has regarded the lowly state of His maidservant; For behold, henceforth all generations will call me blessed. For He who is mighty has done great things for me, And holy is His name. And His mercy is on those who fear Him from generation to generation. He has shown strength with His arm; He has scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He has put down the mighty from their thrones, and exalted the lowly. He has filled the hungry with good things, and the rich He has sent away empty. He has helped His servant Israel, in remembrance of His mercy, as He spoke to our fathers, to Abraham and to his seed forever” (Lk 1:46-55).

There are EIGHTEEN direct references to God in this joyful expression. It was the articulation of a heart filled with faith. Mary was joying in God. Her spirit, or her real person, was rejoicing in God her Savior. She believed what was said, and her heart began rejoicing.

To rejoice in the Lord is to enjoy Who He is and what He has done. It is to confess with gladness that you have been a recipient of His favor and mercy.

Before Christ, this kind of rejoicing was not common. Some few souls would break forth in this manner. However, this is no longer the case. Now those who are reconciled to God, who have been justified by his grace, DO rejoice in God. That is their manner. It is the mode, so to speak, of the Kingdom. Wherever such rejoicing is not found, there is little or no knowledge of justification. Mark it well, and see if this is not the case.

Too, this is not a commandment or an exhortation, as in Philippians 4:4. In our text, joying in God is the result of being reconciled to Him. It is something that IS done, not something that ought to be done. This is confirmed by the Spirit’s assessment of the people of God. “For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh” (Phil 3:3). The phrase “rejoice in Christ Jesus” parallels the expression of our text, “joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ.”

I will go so far as to say it is not possible to know you are reconciled to God, and have access to Him, without rejoicing in Him.

THROUGH OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST

Even rejoicing in God must go up to the holiest place “through our Lord Jesus Christ.” I am continually impressed with the Spirit’s insistence that we consider this. He will make no allowance for acceptance with or access to God apart from Christ Jesus. The marvelous change that has already been wrought in us by faith has not removed the continued necessity of Jesus. Salvation never removes the need for Jesus!

Although I do not wish to stand in judgment of others, I have often wondered if much of the modern expressions of “praise” could be classified as “rejoicing in God through our Lord Jesus Christ.” I wonder how much of it is accompanied by even a minimal awareness of God. I wonder if the Lord Jesus Christ is really in the forefront of thought.

I say this because I am impressed with how very little of God and Christ are known today. It is staggering to consider the sparsity of the knowledge of justification and reconciliation. If it is true that “joying in God” is a fruit of being justified, and being reconciled to God, how then can those who are ignorant of these things rejoice in the Lord?

Let it be clear, rejoicing in the Lord, or joying in God, is not a mere obligation. It is part and parcel of justification. The soul that has been cleansed from sin, and knows it, will be “glad in the Lord” (Psa 32:11). Such joy cannot be subdued. It will break forth when one is beaten for Jesus’ sake (Acts 5:41). It will rise above the groans of prisoners in a dark Philippian jail (Acts 16:25).

Even when hard tribulations come upon the reconciled one, this joy will erupt like an unstoppable fountain. Satan cannot stop it! Our enemies cannot stop it.

It flows as strong as your faith allows.

One of the great handicaps of much of the religion of our day is its suppression of the joy of the Lord. Because of a fleshly emphasis, reconciliation has been pushed into the background of thought. It is neither dominant in preaching nor thinking, and men are the worse for it. Where men are ignorant of reconciliation, Satan gains the advantage over them, forcing them into defeat.

RECEIVING THE RECONCILIATION (ATONEMENT)

“^{11b} . . . through Whom we have now received the reconciliation.” The KJV and The Webster Bible use the word “atonement” instead of “reconciliation.”

Atonement

The word “atonement” is anchored in Old Covenant procedures, which were a shadow of what we have in Christ. The word “atonement” is used an extraordinary number of times in the sacrificial law (Exodus through Numbers). The KJV uses the word seventy-six times. The NKJV uses it eighty-three times, the NASB seventy-nine times, the NIV ninety-three times, and the NRSV seventy-seven times. It is a prominent word under the Law, to say the least.

Under the Law, there was only a ceremonial cleansing, which left the conscience defiled (Heb 10:1-4). It actually had more to do with sparing the people from wrath rather than bringing righteousness to them. It denoted a covering for sin.

This, of course, was fulfilled in Christ, yet to a fuller extent. A real removal of sin took place, and an effective cleansing of the conscience.

Reconciliation

The English word “reconciliation” only occurs once in the Law, and that only in the KJV (Lev 8:15). Even then, the altar was the object of the reconciliation, and not the people. Other versions use the word “atonement” in this verse.

The English word “reconcile” is also used only once in the Law, also only in the KJV (Lev 6:30). There it refers to the sin offering which was brought into the holy place, whose blood had been presented for atonement, or “to reconcile.” It was to be burned with fire, and not to be eaten.

Why Mention This?

There is a reason for this brief explanation. In my judgment, there is very good cause for the KJV’s use of the word “atonement” in our text. When reading the word “atonement,” something unique would be experienced. The individual whose mind was bathed in Scripture, and who was familiar with the procedures of the shadowy Law, would at once recall those ancient ceremonies. That would provide a greater insight into the death of Christ, which fulfilled those ceremonies.

It is a principle in Scripture, that Divine provisions are to be appropriated. It is not enough to simply speak of them. The salvation of God is never to be reduced to a set of theological theorems. It is something to be experienced, just as surely as sin and alienation have been experienced.

A PIVOTAL TRUTH

Here is a pivotal truth of Scripture, and one we do well to consider deeply. It is one thing for Christ to have atoned for the sins of the world. It is quite another for that atonement to be “received.” It is one thing for God to have been “in Christ, reconciling the world to Himself.” It is quite another thing for that reconciliation to be “received.”

It is a principle in Scripture, that Divine provisions are to be appropriated. It is not enough to simply speak of them. The salvation of God is never to be reduced to a set of theological theorems. It is something to be experienced, just as surely as sin and alienation have been experienced. This is embodied in the statement of First Corinthians 4:20. “For the kingdom of God does not consist in words, but in power.”^{NASB}

It is not possible to be reconciled legally or experientially apart from Jesus Christ. Let it be clear that this is the Christ presented in the Gospel, which is “the record God has given of His Son” (1 John 5:10). Much of what is presented as Gospel today is really “not a Gospel.” The presentation of the Lord Jesus as a grand problem solver and supplier of mere temporary provisions is a gross distortion of the Christ of the Gospel.

Those who have to do with Jesus will have to deal with sin, for He is a Savior from sin. They will have to face the matter of being an enemy of God, for Christ reconciles men to God. Consideration will have to be given to the sure punishment of sin, for Jesus was “smitten of God and afflicted” because of the sins of men. Where men do not come to grips with these issues, they cannot be reconciled to God, for that is what reconciliation is all about.

Now, our text affirms that we “receive” the reconciliation, or atonement, through Christ Jesus. By that, it means He alone wrought the reconciliation, and He alone can bring us into it. That is involved in our Lord’s word to His disciples. “I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me” (John 14:6). “By me” is more than a mere legal provision. It speaks more of Jesus escorting us to God, rather than us coming using Him much like a ticket into the Divine presence. We are told Jesus “once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God" (1 Pet 3:18).

In this text "through Whom" means the Lord Jesus Himself has brought the reconciliation to us.

WE HAVE NOW RECEIVED THE RECONCILIATION

While our salvation has not yet been fully realized, we have received much. In this case, we have "NOW received the reconciliation." This is why we have access to God. It is why we have access into the grace wherein we stand. It is why we rejoice in hope of the glory of God, and can perceive the benefits of tribulation. This is why we "joy in God." It is because we have been reconciled!

Receiving the atonement always yields a crop of good things for the soul. And, if you are doubtful that you have received it, go to the banquet of salvation and receive it afresh. Drink in the good things of God as though it was for the first time.

But we must not leave the matter there, lying like a cold and lifeless stone in our hearts. We must take this truth up and reason upon it. Note the affirmation. "We have NOW received the atonement." What Christ has accomplished NOW belongs to us. Its benefits have been passed to us through our faith. We are presently enjoying Divine acceptance and favor! We have "received the atonement."

However, one may reason, "It does not seem to me that I have received the atonement." How can a timorous soul be assured of this? Consider the fruits that have been declared. They will tell you the truth of the matter. Receive their testimony, and rejoice!

Do you have "peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ?" Are you desirous to come into His presence, and feel at liberty to make your requests known to Him? Do you know you have access to this grace, and feel a freedom to seek it? Have you been liberated from the goads of a condemning conscience? If this describes you, then you have "received the atonement," for that is the fruit of being justified from sin and reconciled to God.

Are you set to rejoicing at the thought of seeing the Lord, and being forever with Him? Do you "rejoice in hope of the glory of God," finding great delight in the thought of being freed from mortality and the propensity to sin? Do you, in fact, prefer to be "absent from the body and present with the Lord?" If this describes you, then you have "received the atonement," for that is the fruit of being justified from sin and reconciled to God.

Are you able to see good that has come from your tribulations? Can you rejoice in seeing how you have become more stable, and able to endure through them? Has your hope grown as you have perceived more of the love of God? If this describes you, then you have "received the atonement," for that is the fruit of being justified from sin and reconciled to God.

And, does the thought of God delight your heart? Do you rejoice that He is your Father, and has done good to you? Does the consideration of what He has brought to you in Christ bring joy and refreshment to your heart? If this describes you, then you have "received the atonement," for that is the fruit of being justified from sin and reconciled to God.

Receiving the atonement always yields a crop of good things for the soul. And, if you are doubtful that you have received it, go to the banquet of salvation and receive it afresh. Drink in the good things of God as though it was for the first time. There are things involved in your justification that you have not yet seen, and they will rejoice your heart.

CONCLUSION

See what a rich bounty the Spirit has spread before us! The Lord Jesus, as a vicarious sacrifice assumed all of our liabilities. He bore the full brunt of Divine judgment against them. His obedience, and perfect fulfillment of every Divine requirement, has so thoroughly pleased God that He has opened the wells of salvation. Now, by the grace of God, we can draw water from them with joy (Isa 12:3). The water in them is abundant and most refreshing. Draw it out! Draw it out!

For a long time, many of these wells have been stopped by the traditions of men. Like the wicked Philistines of old, the once rich wells have been largely "stopped." As it is written, "Now the Philistines had stopped up all the wells which his father's servants had dug in the days of Abraham his father, and they had filled them with earth" (Gen 26:15). The "earth" of human reasoning and the wisdom of men has been thrown into the wells of salvation. Large clumps of religious tradition have stopped the water of life from flowing to thirsty souls. Some have even forgotten there are "wells of salvation," given to produce a "joy unspeakable and full of glory."

But that is not the end of the matter, praise the Lord. As in ancient times, those wells can be unstopped. Their restricted flow is not permanent. Isaac revisited those stopped wells, and opened them once again. "And Isaac dug again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them. And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of springing water" (Gen 26:18-19).

There are wells to be uncovered—wells that refresh the people of God. We have dealt with one in this text: the well of vicarious atonement. We have previously dealt with others: the wells of justification by faith and imputed righteousness. Have they not yielded refreshing water? And once they are opened, the saints will be encouraged to look for more refreshing wells. Perhaps you, like Isaac's servants, will dig in the neglected valley, and find "there a well of springing water!" Drink and dig, child of God! Drink and dig! You will never be the same for doing so, for Christ has unleashed a torrent of refreshing water.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 18

ONLY TWO MEN

5:12 Therefore, just as through one man sin entered the world, and death through sin, and thus death spread to all men, because all sinned; ¹³ (For until the law sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed when there is no law. ¹⁴ Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over those who had not sinned according to the likeness of the transgression of Adam, who is a type of Him who was to come. ¹⁵ But the free gift is not like the offense. For if by the one man's offense many died, much more the grace of God and the gift by the grace of the one Man, Jesus Christ, abounded to many. ¹⁶ And the gift is not like that which came through the one who sinned. For the judgment which came from one offense resulted in condemnation, but the free gift which came from many offenses resulted in justification. ¹⁷ For if by the one man's offense death reigned through the one, much more those who receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness will reign in life through the One, Jesus Christ.) ¹⁸ Therefore, as through one man's offense judgment came to all men, resulting in condemnation, even so through one Man's righteous act the free gift came to all men, resulting in justification of life. ¹⁹ For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so also by one Man's obedience many will be made righteous. ²⁰ Moreover the law entered that the offense might abound. But where sin abounded, grace abounded much more, ²¹ so that as sin reigned in death, even so grace might reign through righteousness to eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. Romans 5:12-21 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

The truth of Christ's atoning sacrifice is so significant and needful, the Spirit will elaborate extensively upon it. This involves a Divine principle, and does not conform to the world's wisdom. When, therefore, the world's pattern of thought is extensive, a special initiative is required to penetrate the heart with the powerful truth of the Gospel. While there were strong believers in Rome, they were located in a citadel of worldly power and wisdom. There was a conflict between the Roman way of thinking (political and philosophical) and the manner of the heavenly kingdom. With spiritual skill, the Apostle uses his spiritual weaponry to throw down the philosophical bastions of thought that

From heaven's point of view (which is the true view), there are only Two Men. Everything hinges on them-by Given O. Blakely dominated that region.

At the time Paul wrote Romans, Epicureanism, Stoicism, Skepticism, and Neoplatonism were the main philosophical schools in the Western world. These patterns of thought were primarily concerned with ethics and religions. The Apostle Paul encountered some of this kind of thinking in Athens (Acts 17:18). In order to show the relevance of these philosophies to our time, I beg your indulgence as I give a brief synopsis of them. This section is provided for those with an interest in seeing the remarkable likeness our society bears to the thinking of the heathen world at the time Romans was written. This kind of thinking has had a remarkable impact on the religious thought of our time.

EPICUREANISM. The essential doctrine of Epicureanism is that pleasure is the supreme good and main goal of life. Intellectual pleasures are preferred to sensual ones, which tend to disturb peace of mind. True happiness, Epicurus taught, is the serenity resulting from the conquest of fear of the gods, of death, and of the afterlife. The ultimate aim of all Epicurean speculation about nature is to rid people of such fears . . . In biology, Epicurus anticipated the modern doctrine of natural selection. He postulated that natural forces give rise to organisms of different types and that only the types able to support and propagate themselves have survived . . . Epicurean psychology is thoroughly materialistic.

The modern acceptance of the theory of evolution, and an emphasis on the seen are expressions of this philosophy.

STOICISM. Stoicism was the most influential philosophy in the Roman Empire during the period preceding the rise of Christianity. The Stoics, like the Epicureans, emphasized ethics as the main field of knowledge, but they also developed theories of logic and natural science to support their ethical doctrines. Their most important contribution to logic was the discovery of the hypothetical syllogism . . . According to them the human soul is a manifestation of the Logos. Living according to nature or reason, they held, is living in conformity with the divine order of the universe. The importance of this view is seen in the part that Stoicism played in developing a theory of natural law that powerfully affected Roman jurisprudence . . . the four cardinal virtues of the Stoic philosophy are wisdom, courage, justice, and temperance, a classification derived from the teachings of Plato . . . Thus, before the rise of Christianity, Stoics recognized and advocated the brotherhood of humanity and the natural equality of all human beings.

The exaltation of human wisdom and logic, so dominant in the academic and religious world, is a form of stoicism.

SKEPTICISM. The principles of skepticism were first explicitly formulated by the Pyrrhonists, a school of Greek philosophy deriving its name from its founder, Pyrrho of Elis. Pyrrho, whose primary concern was ethics, maintained that human beings can know nothing of the real nature of things, and that consequently the wise person will suspend judgment . . . During the Renaissance the influence of ancient skepticism was reflected preeminently in the writings of the 16th-century French philosophical essayist Michel de Montaigne. The greatest exponent of modern skepticism was the 18th-century Scottish empiricist philosopher David Hume . . . Elements of skepticism may be found in other modern schools of philosophy, including pragmatism, analytic and linguistic philosophy, and existentialism.

Systematic theology, the exaltation of language expertise, and the denial of the miraculous order are all forms of this view.

NEOPLATONISM. Neoplatonism is a type of idealistic monism in which the ultimate reality of the universe is held to be an infinite, unknowable, perfect One . . . Salvation for such a soul is still possible, the Neoplatonist maintains, by virtue of the very freedom of will that enabled it to choose its sinful course. The soul must reverse that course, tracing in the opposite direction the successive steps of its degeneration, until it is again united with the fountainhead of its being. The actual reunion is accomplished through a mystical experience in which the soul knows an all-pervading ecstasy.

The overstatement of the power of the human will, together with a virtual denial of Divine intervention, are related to this view.

WHY SO LITTLE IS BEING SAID ON THIS SUBJECT

The subjects of justification by faith, receiving a righteousness from God, and a vicarious atonement are rarely mentioned in our time. This is because they contradict the contemporary way of thinking. It is certainly not because of any lack of revelation on the subject. Nor, indeed, is there a lack of extensive teaching on these matters by the Holy Spirit. As we have found in the book of Romans, a considerable emphasis is even placed on these subjects. Not only are they themes of Apostolic development, they are among the primary ones. Where these are missing, faith cannot survive.

- VI. THE REIGN OF DEATH AND THE REIGN OF RIGHTEOUSNESS (5:21)

I am going to wax bold concerning the reason for the prevailing ignorance on the matter of a righteousness from God and the vicarious atonement of Jesus. It can be traced to two key factors, both of which are firmly rooted in the flesh.

- ⊗ First, the carnal, or natural, mind is being given the ascendancy in religion. The wisdom of men, together with the external disciplines of learning, have been assigned the greater weight in learning the truth of God.
- ⊗ Second, the truth of the Gospel is being sifted through humanly developed theologies. The Scriptures are being read with crystallized theological views in mind, rather than in faith.

As a result, the truth of the Gospel has been forfeited, and a grossly deficient church has gained prominence. I am aware these are most serious charges.

The Western world is now living in an age when religion is dominated by the purveyors of human wisdom. Academia and human logic have displaced faith, and natural reason is sitting upon the throne.

THIS WILL BECOME APPARENT

These conditions will become very apparent in the section now before us.

The reasoning will sound foreign and flawed to those who have not embraced the truth of the Gospel. However, this is the reasoning of the Holy Spirit.

If we were not speaking of salvation, the reception of a righteousness from God, and Divine acceptance, perhaps we could be more tolerant of the wayward thinking of men on these matters. We might consider being more patient if we were speaking of dietary practices, political persuasions, and economic considerations. But that is not the case.

We are rather speaking of the fall of men and their utter impotency to correct their condition on their own. We are also confronted with a Divine analysis of the situation, and are being exposed to what God has done through Christ to reconcile the world to Himself. The Holy Spirit has confronted us with the inevitability of standing before God Himself, before whom not a single righteous or good person can be found apart from faith in Christ. That is His assessment, and we are obliged to accept it in faith. All of this is associated with the following.

- ▶ God has sent His Son into the world to address our situation (1:3; 8:3).
- ▶ In due time, Christ died for the ungodly (5:6).
- ▶ Righteousness is imputed to those who believe on Him who raised Jesus from the dead (4:24).

- ▶ The forgiveness of iniquities, the covering of sin, and the refusal of God to impute sin to the individual (4:6-8).
- ▶ Having peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ (5:1).

We are dealing with weighty matters, and it behooves every person to gird up the loins of their mind and take hold of what the Lord is saying. Profit will come from giving heed to these things. God will show us that the presence of sin and the presence of righteousness are both traced to a single origin. At the root of the matter, one person stands for all who proceed from that one. As we will see, this is a significant truth.

THE ENTRANCE OF DEATH THROUGH ONE MAN

“5:12 Therefore, just as through one man sin entered the world, and death through sin, and thus death spread to all men, because all sinned.” Sin made a single entrance into the world. In the beginning, it was not here. It had a beginning, or genesis, in this world.

“Therefore, just as through one man sin entered into the world . . . ” There is a form of reasoning here that must not elude us. In order to confirm the greatness and effectiveness of our salvation, the Spirit will show us how and why we fell into sin.

The Explanation

With great effectiveness, the Spirit will now show us how all men came to be sinners. Although “all have sinned and come short of the glory of God” (3:23), that is not the root of the matter. Rather, it is the evidence of something that occurred prior to individual transgression. The human conditions that are being explained are “ungodly”(5:6), “sinners”(5:8), and “enemies”(5:10). How did men come to be unlike and hostile to the Living God? Why do men sin? Why are they enemies to God? This passage explains those conditions.

Immediately a bit of theological nonsense is exposed and cast violently down to the ground. Some teach the earth was occupied before Genesis 1:1. Because of some decadent generation, men assume, it was judged and a new creation started with Adam. Still others believe that sin entered the world through Satan, and before Adam. Other kindred speculations are put forward by men who place reason before faith, and analysis before believing.

With great effectiveness, the Spirit will now show us how all men came to be sinners. Although “all have sinned and come short of the glory of God” (3:23), that is not the root of the matter. Rather, it is the evidence of something that occurred prior to individual transgression.

Through One Man

Sin made its entrance into the world through “one man.” That man is identified in verse fourteen as “Adam.” One might wonder why it does not say “Eve,” for she was the first to partake of the forbidden tree, and was the one deceived (Gen 3:6; 1 Tim 2:14). Our text is viewing Adam as the progenitor of the race, not merely as an individual. He is the federal head of humanity. They all bear his likeness, and have come from him. As it is written, “From one man he made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth”^{NIV} (Acts 17:26). We have all “born the image” of Adam, as affirmed in First Corinthians 15:47-49. In this matter, one stands for the many, and the many bear the likeness of the one.

Neither position is true. The Holy Spirit certainly knows how to speak “expressly.” Additionally, He “searches all things, yes, the deep things of God”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 2:10). The Spirit, then, is qualified to speak on the subject of the origin of sin in this world. He will also inform us of the inception of death, confirming it did not exist in any form until after man sinned. He will show us how to think on this matter.

The Proposition

Remember, the proposition that is being proved true is this: righteousness comes from God, through Christ, and by faith. Those without understanding remonstrate at this. They imagine that God deals with each person upon the basis of individual merit. While there is an element of truth to this, it is far from being the whole of the matter. We will now see why the principle of a vicarious atonement—one dying for the many—is effective and according to Divine law and righteousness.

SIN ENTERED THROUGH ONE MAN

A Single Transgression

Sin did not enter the world in a flood-like manner, but through a single transgression. This passage will refer to that deed as “sin,” “transgression” (5:14), “offense,” “fall” (5:15,17,18), and “disobedience” (5:19). The deed is described in a single verse of Scripture—a deed which is the precise point at which sin “entered into the world.” “And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat” (Gen 3:6).

The full nature of sin was in that first transgression. Satan was its fountain, and his “wiles” were the means of Eve being deceived. God’s Person and word were ignored, and self-interests were sought. To the flesh, the transgression of reference appears inconsequential and unworthy of harsh judgment. It consisted of eating a piece of fruit. The deed through which sin entered into the world was not the murder of Abel. Sin did not enter through the violence and murder of Noah’s day. It was not brought in by the molestation of Dinah, sister to Simeon and Levi. It came into the world by eating a piece of fruit!

The nature of sin is what makes it so bad. To sin, people must forget God, listen to the devil, and blot the thought of heaven from their minds. The word of God must be thrust away and fleshly interests must become dominant. Sin is rebellion against God and the exaltation of self. It is the ultimate act of thanklessness and selfishness.

Given a Chance, Sin Will Dominate

Our text will confirm the real nature of sin. Once it makes an entrance, it rapidly gains the dominance. When sin penetrates, it at once gains a foothold. That is its nature. Those who do not learn from the Scriptural account of Adam and the entrance of sin, will not be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. Once sin had “entered into the world,” nothing or no one on earth could stop its infectious expansion. Only God can stop the spread of sin, or negate its consequences. Four thousand years of human history confirmed this to be the case. Had not God intervened in Jesus, sin would still have been ruling the world uncontested.

Give No Place to the Devil

It is no wonder we are admonished, “Neither give place to the devil” (Eph 5:27). To give him a “place” is to provide an opportunity^{NASB} for him, make room for him^{NRSV}, or make provision for him to gain a foothold.^{NIV} If you wonder what he will do, consider Adam and Eve. The dominance of sin and its ruthless rule over the children of men is traced back to a single point in time. It all began when Adam provided an area in which Satan could work, and work he did! The day he ate from the forbidden tree at the behest of his wife—even though he himself was not deceived—sin entered into the world like a mighty torrent. Now, six thousand years later, it has, and continues, to ravage every rational being until liberation from it is realized in the salvation of our God.

individual. All men die because Adam sinned. His sin is what brought the curse of death upon humanity. When sin entered, the right to live was forfeited, for the bond with Deity was broken. There is no true life where there is rebellion against God.

Spiritual Death

God told Adam he would die “in the day” he ate from the forbidden tree (Gen 2:17). On the surface, it did not appear as though that occurred. Adam did not die until 930 years later (Gen 5:5). Death, however, is no more simplistic than life. In the very day Adam ate, he died spiritually, and was therefore driven out from the presence of the Lord (Gen 3:24). He and Eve were separated from God, for death means separation.

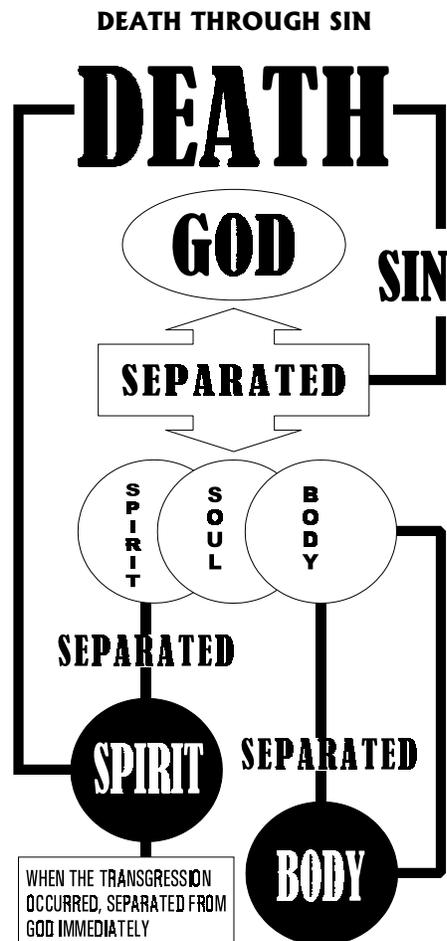

In this spiritual death, the spirit of man became “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1). There was no longer accord between God and man—no unanimity, or fundamental agreement. In a sense, man became fragmented and divided in his nature.

Death in its totality entered a realm where it did not exist previously. That is a staggering thing to consider! The ultimate death was experienced—separation from God. Death also took place in the human nature—the dissolution of the union forged in creation by the Almighty Himself. The seen and unseen part of men could no longer live in harmony, and would eventually be separated from each other. This “death” in sins was the result of being separated from God, who alone is the Source of life.

Death in the Flesh

The very moment sin entered into the world, the process of fleshly deterioration began. Ultimately, the body would be separated from man’s unseen part. The effects of the “tree of life” may account for the longevity of life that existed until the time of Abraham. However, it seems more likely to me that long life was a token of mercy from the Lord to allow for the expansion of mankind both before and after the flood. This is, of course, a matter of conjecture.

The only way for any person to avoid death is by Divine intervention. In such a case, consignment to physical

The wages of sin (Rom 6:23) are traced more to Adam than to the death would be suspended. We have three instances of such a suspension. Two have already taken place, and one is yet to come. Enoch was “translated” without experiencing, or “seeing,” death (Heb 11:5; Gen 5:22-24). Elijah was carried up into heaven in a whirlwind without experiencing death (2 Kings 2:1,11). In both cases, no body was left behind. All of the involvements of these two incidents are not known, and it is not wise to speculate upon them in carnal curiosity.

The other, and future, incident of the suspension of death will occur when the Lord comes again. At that time, there will be an entire generation that will not experience death in the ordinary manner. They will be “changed” in an instant, without a dying process (1 Cor 15:51-52). The thought of this great change is refreshing to consider.

In these three instances, although death is not experienced in the ordinary way, there is a “change,” wherein the individual is adapted for glory. In the latter case, we will receive immortal bodies. We do not know of the details of change that occurred in Enoch and Elijah.

Nature Died Also

When sin entered into the world, not only did man die spiritually, and his physical constitution begin to decay, there was also a death sentence passed upon all creation. Scripture apprizes us of this extensive judgment. “For the creation was subjected to futility, not willingly, but because of Him who subjected it in hope; because the creation itself also will be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God” (Rom 8:20-22). The shroud of death has been thrown over the entirety of the natural order. It is all headed for demise. Whether we ponder the massive universe in which our small world exists, or the unimaginable vastness of celestial bodies beyond human view, everything is dying. Like man, and because of the sin of man, nature is groaning under the weight of corruption, which is the prelude to death.

Adam and Nature Rejected!

Because sin separated man from God, all that was created for man was also consigned to death. This means the entire natural order has been written off. There is a sense in which it cannot be salvaged—either man or the environment in which he is found.

This condition is precisely why Jesus said, “You MUST be born again” (John 3:7). It is also why God promised, “Behold, I make all things new” (Rev 21:5). This is why there will be “a new heavens and a new earth” (Isa 65:17; 66:22; 2 Pet 3:13). The “new creation” is necessitated because of the total rejection of the old.

Sin is a principle that is antagonistic toward God. It moves men to commit transgression, and quickly gains preeminence over them. The universal presence of death is undeniable confirmation that sin is “in the world.” Our text affirms it is here because of what the first man, Adam, did.

When assigning values and priorities to matters, the truth just stated must be brought into our thinking. Anything that can be ultimately traced back to Adam or the natural creation cannot be allowed the place of prominence. The death sentence has been passed upon all such things. Whether it is fleshly appetites, money, earthly wisdom, or places and things, all are to be subordinated to a quest for the new creation. Ultimately, the entire natural order will “pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.” In view of this, the Spirit solemnly asks us, “Therefore, since all these things will be dissolved, what manner of persons ought you to be in holy conduct and godliness, looking for and hastening the coming of the day of God, because of which the heavens will be dissolved, being on fire, and the elements will melt with fervent heat?” (2 Pet 3:10-12).

Without dwelling upon the matter, it should be noted that a phenomenal amount of contemporary religion has its foundation in the natural order. All such religion will go up in flame, together with the foundation upon which it rests.

And All Because of Sin!

The remarkably extensive curse of death came in with sin! It did not enter with an abundance of sin, but with a single transgression! If we are ever tempted to minimize sin, or pass it off as common, we must consider its consequences. It should be abundantly evident that anything capable of causing such universal and unwavering demise, must be firmly resisted. Nothing is of any value whatsoever until a remedy for sin and its curse is realized.

Sin is a principle that is antagonistic toward God. It moves men to commit transgression, and quickly gains preeminence over them. The universal presence of death is undeniable confirmation that sin is “in the world.” Our text affirms it is here because of what the first man, Adam, did.

FOR THAT ALL HAVE SINNED

Here, the Spirit is looking at the end from the beginning. The point is that “all have sinned” because they possess a sinful nature. Adam’s offspring cannot rise higher than himself. In fact, there is a degradation in his progeny rather than improvement. Thus, our text is saying, the justification for God passing death upon all men is seen in their natural tendency toward, and preference for, sin.

“All have sinned” because “all” are by nature sinful. This truth is beyond all controversy as confirmed by the universal requirement, “You must be born again” (John 3:7). While men may argue about whether or not the term “total depravity” (an expression NOT used by the Spirit), is proper, we must agree on the facts in the case. First, “all have sinned,” and second all have been consigned to death.

THE REASONING PRESENTED

The reasoning of our text is most profound. In summary, this is what the Spirit will develop. If sin and death can enter through one man, much more can righteousness and life enter through One. The Spirit will show us that no descendant of Adam can rise higher than him. Another Man MUST appear on the scene, else the whole race will be lost. Salvation in all of its greatness is not a novelty, but a necessity!

 A PARENTHETICAL THOUGHT **

“¹³ (For until the law sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed when there is no law.¹⁴ Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over those who had not sinned according to the likeness of the transgression of Adam, who is a type of Him who was to come.¹⁵ But the free gift is not like the offense. For if by the one man’s offense many died, much more the grace of God and the gift by the grace of the one Man, Jesus Christ, abounded to many.¹⁶ And the gift is not like that which came through the one who sinned. For the judgment which came from one offense resulted in condemnation, but the free gift which came from many offenses resulted in justification.¹⁷ For if by the one man’s offense death reigned through the one, much more those who receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness will reign in life through the One, Jesus Christ.)

The Spirit now enters an extensive parenthetical thought. This is an amplification of verse twelve—an explanation of a profound utterance. [“Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned”]. In this explanation, the Spirit is addressing the objection that sin is not possible if there is no law to transgress.

The novice might reason that the cause of death being passed upon Adam is, indeed, obvious. He violated a specific command, and thus received his just dues. “How,” flesh reasons, “could death enter into the world upon the trespass of a single person? Should not everyone be judged on their own merit, without regard to Adam’s transgression?”

In addressing this objection, we are not to understand this specific objection was formally raised—although here and there that is no doubt true. Rather, this is the manner in which the flesh reasons. Frequently the Spirit anticipates what flesh will say, whether or not it has been expressed audibly or in writing. Just as the Spirit reasons in a certain way, so does fallen man. Both forms of reasoning are consistent, and never depart from their manners. Examples of the Spirit anticipating this type of reasoning are found in the following texts: “And do you think this, O man . . . You will say to me then . . . But indeed, O man, who are you to reply against God? . . . You will say then . . . But someone will say . . . But someone will say.” (Romans 2:3; 9:19,20; 11:19; 1 Cor 15:35; James 2:18).

There is such a disparity of thought between God and man that whatever truth is made known by the Spirit, flesh will object to it. That is precisely why God said to the most externally cultured people in the world, “For My thoughts are not your thoughts, Nor are your ways My ways,” says the LORD. ‘For as the heavens are higher than the earth, So are My ways higher than your ways, And My thoughts than your thoughts’ (Isa 55:8-9).

The argument will also confirm that death did, in fact, enter the world when Adam sinned, and that it reigns universally. If we are to understand vicarious atonement, it is essential that we understand the principle taught here.

1. UNTIL THE LAW

“¹³ For until the law sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed when there is no law.” The Spirit now addresses the period of history BEFORE the Law. He has already told us that the Law brought the knowledge, or consciousness, of sin: “for by the law is the knowledge of sin” (Rom 3:20). Although sin had not been defined and judged through a Divinely written code, i.e., the Law, yet the curse of God remained upon it.

SIN WAS IN THE WORLD

When sin entered the world “by one man,” Adam, it remained in the world, infecting every person by virtue of their relation to Adam. Sin was not “in the world” as an influence external to man, but as corruption resident IN man.

The presence of sin in the world is confirmed by several historic incidents. It is seen at the individual, family, city, national, and global levels.

- ▶ The murder of Abel (Gen 4:8).
- ▶ Lamech kills a man (Gen 4:23).
- ▶ Violence filling the earth prior to the flood (Gen 6:11).
- ▶ The attempt to build the tower of Babel (Gen 11:1-7).
- ▶ The grievous sin of Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen 18:20).

- ▶ Esau despising his birthright (Gen 25:31-34).
- ▶ Joseph’s brothers selling him into slavery (Gen 37:28).
- ▶ The lie of Potiphar’s wife against Joseph (Gen 39:17-19).
- ▶ The oppression of Israel by Egypt (Ex 1:14).
- ▶ The sins of the heathen nations Israel displaced when they entered into Canaan (Deut 9:4-5; 12:2-3).

The point to be seen here is that sin really did infect the entire race of man. “Sin was in the world” before the Law which defined and cursed it!

The Point Being Made

Candidly, we are dealing with a very profound verse—an example of lofty spiritual reasoning. The Spirit is teaching us concerning the effectiveness of Christ’s vicarious death. He is going to trace the effectiveness of the imputation of righteousness to ONE MAN—Jesus Christ. In order to show the validity of this reasoning, he is confirming that the dominance of sin is equally owing to ONE MAN—Adam.

Although “sin was in the world” without the presence of Divine law, that sin does not account for the presence of death. Death does not occur because Adam’s progeny sinned, but because Adam sinned! Death entered when Adam sinned, being passed upon all of his offspring. The reign of death cannot be accounted for by the depravity of men, or the presence of reprehensible sins like idolatry and sodomy, as outlined in the first chapter of Romans.

SIN IS NOT IMPUTED WHERE THERE IS NO LAW

This parallels the expression found in 4:15; “for where no law is, there is no transgression.” The One NOT imputing the sin is the Lord Himself. Transgression assumes the presence of law, without which sin is not credited to men. How, then, can we account for the fact that “all have sinned” and are under the sentence of death? If they have not transgressed a law, when can it be said they are sinners?

Some have reasoned on this verse in this manner. “If sin is not imputed where there is not law, then the fact that sin was evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die” (Gen 2:17). Because he transgressed a law, sin as imputed to him. But it was not imputed ONLY to him. It was also passed upon all his family—everyone who came from him. Thus, one stood for all, which is the point being made by the text.

Although “sin was in the world” without the presence of Divine law, that sin does not account for the presence of death. Death does not occur because Adam’s progeny sinned, but because Adam sinned! Death entered when Adam sinned, being passed upon all of his offspring.

The Spirit is making the point that death is ALWAYS the penalty for sin. But this truth must be seen correctly. Infants, and the mentally incompetent, for example, do not die because they have sinned. They, like everyone, die because Adam sinned! “By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men” (v 12).

Simply stated, when we see death ruling over all men, we must not be drawn aside to the different manners in which men die. Some leave the world in a good old age.

Others have their lives terminated abruptly by some tragedy. Still others are removed from this world in the fiery trial of persecution.

If we are asked, “Why must men die?” We simply answer, Because Adam sinned! That is the powerful point of our text, and it will set the stage for the affirmation of the effectiveness of Christ’s atoning death.

in the world before the Law confirms that some kind of law was really present.” Now, that may make sense to the flesh, but it does not make our text any clearer, for no specific law is cited.

The transgression that brought death into the world was Adam’s transgression. He violated a law; “But of the tree of the knowledge of good and

2. NEVERTHELESS DEATH REIGNED

“Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over those who had not sinned according to the likeness of the transgression of Adam, who is a type of Him who was to come.” The word “nevertheless” refers to the condition stated in the previous verse: “but sin is not imputed when there is no law.” Even though the period between Adam and Moses was not characterized by infractions of articulated law, still death dominated that time. This confirms that “thou shalt surely die” was passed to all of Adam’s offspring.

DEATH REIGNED

No person was able to reverse the Divine decree. “Death reigned!” with all of his seeming wisdom, man could not remove the curse, reduce its effectiveness, or neutralize its power. “Death reigned!” Wherever man is found, death is found with him. Whether he is in isolation or in a society, death is reigning.

Here is the longest single period in human history. It is no less than 2,500 years long, comprising 42% of all time. It is 66% longer than the 1,500 years of the Law’s administration. It is 25% longer than the “day of salvation” to date(2000 A.D.).

Great civilizations were formed during this time. The Egyptian empire, Hammurabi, Babylonian empire in Mesopotamia, Sumerian civilization, Phoenicians, Aegean civilization, Indus Valley civilizations, the Yang-shao and Lung-shan cultures (China), Danubian culture (central Europe), etc.

Legendary cities were built during this time. Troy, Athens, Stonehenge, Lagash, Ur, Tangier, and Sidon.

Remarkable skills were developed from Adam to Moses. Clay pottery, weight balances, writing, bronze implements, ships propelled by oars and sails, musical instruments, a 365 day calendar, mathematical systems, iron smelting, medical treatment, and glassmaking.

Yet, with all of these apparent advancements, “death reigned from Adam to Moses,” universally and without interruption. Death was like a monarch. As one has well said, “Under his dark and withering reign, people sank down to the grave.”^{Barnes} In his reference to death, Bildad the Shuhite referred to “the king of terrors” (Job 18:14). David referred to “the terrors of death” (Psa 55:4)—things sinned in the likeness of the offense of Adam,^{NASB} “even over those who did not sin by breaking a command, as did Adam,^{NIV} “even over those whose sins were not like the transgression of Adam.^{NRSV}

The point of the verse is NOT that death reigned over a SEGMENT of humanity whose sin was not like that of

THE FIGURE OF HIM

In saying Adam was “the figure of Him that was to come,” the Spirit introduces the Savior into the dialog. He is going to show to us the effectiveness of Christ’s vicarious atonement. Adam was not a figure of Christ in WHAT he did, but in the IMPACT of his deed upon those who came from him. He was not a “figure” in the sense of passing on blessing, or foreshadowing the good that the Savior would accomplish. Rather, as a federal head, Adam stood for all who sprang from him. By “federal head,” I mean the representative of all natural men, who bore his likeness, and participated in God’s dealings with him. He is the principal figure of natural men. As such, what happened to him was also brought upon all who are in him.

The phrase “even over them” refers to those living “from Adam to Moses.” All men were under the dominion of sin, even though sin was not the result of breaking laws given during that time. Death reigned because Adam sinned, and passed along that sinful nature to his progeny.

associated with the reign of death.

On the individual level, “it is appointed unto man once to die” (Heb 9:27). On the global level, “death reigned from Adam to Moses.” The fact is beyond all controversy! There was no culture from Adam to Moses that did not acknowledge the inevitability of death.

EVEN OVER THEM

The extensive of the curse is seen in the reign of death “even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam’s transgression.” Other versions read, “those who had not sinned according to the likeness of the transgression of Adam,^{NKJV} “even over those who had not

Adam. Those who hold to the view that this is what the text means consider this to refer to infants. If that were the case, however, he would have said “those who had not sinned,” NOT “those who had not sinned in the likeness of the offense of Adam.” The point of the text is that death reigned over EVERYONE from Adam to Moses, even though they had not broken a specific commandment.

The phrase “even over them” refers to those living “from Adam to Moses.” All men were under the dominion of sin, even though sin was not the result of breaking laws given during that time. Death reigned because Adam sinned, and passed along that sinful nature to his progeny.

At once, the flesh will remonstrate, saying this is not fair. But the flesh is wrong! This is a righteous way, for it was carried out by God Himself. That no unrighteousness is in the arrangement is confirmed by the domination of sin over the race of Adam, and the uncontested reign of death. Had it been possible to salvage a single person from Adam’s race, it would not have been written off in favor of a “new creation.” This will become more evident as we proceed through this passage.

The Spirit will confirm to us that our blessing is owing to a single Person, just as our cursing is traceable to one man. Life comes because of One just as surely as death reigned because of one. This is the principle lesson of this passage.

3. THE GIFT IS NOT LIKE THE OFFENSE

“15 But the free gift is not like the offense. For if by the one man’s offense many died, much more the grace of God and the gift by the grace of the one Man, Jesus Christ, abounded to many.” Here the Spirit begins a comparison between the two federal heads, Adam and Christ Jesus. Adam is the head of the natural order, and Jesus of the spiritual one. Each one of them determines the destiny of all who spring from them. In both cases, the effects will be traced to a single deed. Cursing will result from one, and blessing from the other. Further, the effects will spread to all of the posterity, excluding none of them.

Both Adam and Jesus, the “first man” and the “Second Man,” are uniquely responsible for the condition of their offspring. Their children are like them, bearing their likeness and the Divine assessment of them.

THE FREE GIFT

This is an explanation of the “righteousness” announced in the Gospel of Christ “a righteousness that is by faith from first to last”^{NASB} (1:17). Notice with what care and God-honoring speech this righteousness is mentioned: “free gift . . . the grace of God . . . the gift by grace . . . abounded unto many.” Having proved the whole of humanity to be under the power of sin, their reclamation can only be accounted for by the grace of God and the work of Christ. Men could not correct their condition, but were actually locked into sin because of Adam. No person should stumble at this, for Scripture clearly teaches we were “servants of sin” (Rom 6:16,17,20) and “free from righteousness” (3:20b). Jesus said, “Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin” (John 8:34). That this excludes no natural person is confirmed by our text: “so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.”

IT IS NOT LIKE THE OFFENSE

The gift is singular, as was the offense. “THE offense” was Adam’s transgression, through which sin entered into the world. “THE free gift” is righteousness, which came because of the vicarious, or substitutionary death of Christ.

Within the framework of these gracious words, the Spirit will confirm that the effects of Christ’s death are more extensive and wide-sweeping than the effects of Adam’s transgression. What has resulted from the death of Jesus far transcends what resulted from the sin of Adam. By this He means Christ elevates us above the first state of Adam, bringing a greater and more precise likeness to God than was borne by Adam at the first.

BY ONE MAN’S OFFENSE

Here again, the ails of the human race are traced to a single deed by a single man: “one man’s offense.” Without appearing redundant, that offense was eating the fruit of the forbidden tree.

And what was the effect of that single deed? It is stated so as to accentuate the extensiveness of that effect: “MANY died.” By saying “many,” the text does not suggest there were some who did NOT die. Rather, this is a way of pointing out that Adam did not simply bear the curse himself. In a very real sense, he ate the sour grapes, and his children’s teeth were set on edge (Jer 31:29; Ezek 18:2).

This is the ultimate generational curse! It dwarfs the Lord “visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation” (Num 14:18). This visitation was to all of Adam’s generation, without exception. “Many,” therefore, stands for all, and not for a portion.

“Many” frequently is used in the sense of all. Romans 6:3 refers to “as many of us as were baptized into Christ,” meaning ALL who were baptized into Him. Romans 8:14 says “as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God,” meaning ALL who are so led. The word “many” pictures the multiplicity of fruit that comes from a single seed.

MUCH MORE! MUCH MORE!

If we cannot see the extensive effects of Adam’s sin, we will not be able to see the glorious impact of Christ’s death. The manner of the Kingdom—which is ONE being the fountainhead for the many—is seen first in Adam, and then more precisely and extensively in Jesus.

Both the “grace of God” and “the gift by grace” have come to us from “ONE man.” The “grace of God” is His willingness and eagerness to bless us with salvation. “The gift by grace” is His own righteousness which He confers upon us. Neither of these can be experienced independently of the “Second Man” (1 Cor 15:47). If God does not deal with us through Christ, we are confined to the Adamic curse.

In Christ, both “the grace of God, and the gift by grace” ABOUND, or are ministered in copious supplies. The NIV reads, they “overflow to the many!” —and Christ is “the Firstborn among MANY brethren” (Rom 8:29). What they receive because of Him and through Him far exceeds the order of Adam. It reaches deeper and elevates higher. In Christ there is greater measure and greater certainty than ever there was in Adam.

The people of God must seek deliverance from small and minuscule thoughts of God and His great salvation. What we have in Christ is “abounding.” It is given in abundant measures, and increases exponentially like the waters that gushed from the wilderness rock. Ours is a “much more” salvation!

4. THE GIFT IS NOT LIKE THE RESULT OF THE OFFENSE

“16 And the gift is not like that which came through the one who sinned. For the judgment which came from one offense resulted in condemnation, but the free gift which came from many offenses resulted in justification.”

Again, “the gift” is “the gift of righteousness” (5:17), which is the theme of this passage. While there are similarities between Adam and Christ, there are also enormous differences. The likeness is seen in one standing for the many. The difference is in the nature of what is passed to their offspring.

Notice how the Spirit continues to take us back to the source of the curse:

“ONE who sinned.” Try as you may, you can only come up with two men in this text: Adam and Jesus. The clear teaching is that God deals with all men upon the basis of one man—whether Adam or Jesus.

THE JUDGMENT

Here, the entrance of sin and death into the world is called “the judgment.” Simply stated, “the judgment” was that rebellious man would not be received by God, and could not live in His presence. Further, because of these conditions, death was passed upon him, and he was condemned!

Do not miss the power of this statement. It reveals the nature of God, and the nature of sin as well. “The judgment arose from one transgression resulting in condemnation.”^{NASB} Do you wonder about the magnitude of sin? In this verse do you not see how reprehensible it is? “One single offence brought condemnation!”^{NJB}

Adam’s single sin did not bring a rebuke, but condemnation! It did not bring a mere reprimand, but condemnation! The previous verse showed us that all of the effects of sin flowed from a single man. This verse confirms the consequence of condemnation came from a single deed! At its root, the lostness of the human race is traceable to the single transgression of a single man.

THE FREE GIFT

There is a slight change in the reasoning of the Spirit here. The Spirit does not say the free gift came from Christ's death, as compared with Adam's transgression. Instead, He says "the free gift arose from many transgressions resulting in justification."^{NASB} The idea is that the free gift removed the "many transgressions".

The "gift of righteousness" undoes the effects of sin, causing men to stand pure and acceptable before the Lord whom they had offended. Thus, they are no longer condemned.

When God took the sins of the world—the "many transgressions"—and placed them upon the Son, the result was "justification," or the imputation of righteousness, upon all who believe (3:22). That single deed had more far-reaching effects than the sin of Adam. This will be confirmed with unusual power.

You see, then, the superior work wrought through Jesus Christ, the "Second Man." In Adam, God started with a single sin, and condemned the whole of humanity. In Christ, He started with many transgressions and justified all who are in Him!

CONCLUSION

The sin of Adam was like a spiritual virus injected into the spiritual bloodstream of humanity. It produced a flood-tide of sin which quantitatively far exceeded the transgression of Adam. The wisdom of God is seen in Him taking those many offenses—all flowing from a single transgression—and through them bringing about the reconciliation of fallen man. Just as surely as all who are in Adam die, all who are in the Son will be freed from both sin and death!

5. THE REIGN OF DEATH AND THE REIGN OF LIFE

"¹⁷ For if by the one man's offense death reigned through the one, much more those who receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness will reign in life through the One, Jesus Christ."

The reign of death is traced to one man—Adam. The reign of "the gift of righteousness" is traced to one Man—Jesus Christ. Men die because of Adam. They live in a state of righteousness because of Christ. Two men, and only two, determine the ultimate state and destiny of all men!

By nature, all men are the offspring of Adam. Regardless of their attainments, death "reigns" over them because of that association. They are "made sinners" because of that relationship. They are in a state of "condemnation" because of that connection. These are the unwavering declarations of our text.

SOME IMPLICATIONS

We MUST see that whatever does not come from Christ ultimately is traced back to Adam, brings condemnation, and promotes sin. I understand these are strong words, yet they must be said. Much of today's religion is more related to Adam than to Jesus. It is more natural than spiritual. At some point, the individual must rely completely upon Jesus Christ and His atoning death, else its benefits will not pass to him.

Although I have said this before, it bears repeating. God has written off development of a vicarious atonement as the basis for conferring righteousness upon those who have sinned and come short of the glory of God.

By nature, all men are the offspring of Adam. Regardless of their attainments, death "reigns" over them because of that association. They are "made sinners" because of that relationship. They are in a state of "condemnation" because of that connection.

The Spirit keeps taking us back to Adam and his single recorded sin. He reaffirms that the human condition is owing to a single individual and a single transgression. "By the trespass of the one man, death reigned through that one man."^{NIV} It was the single sin of Adam that enabled sin to reign over all men! You will rarely hear this truth affirmed in our day—or any other, for that matter. It so contradicts the wisdom of men that they will not take these words into their mouths. Notwithstanding, this is the truth. To refuse to declare it is to cause the mist of ignorance to descend upon men, robbing their hearts of the joy of salvation and the confidence and assurance that can be possessed.

This is true because the powerful effects of Christ's death are only as clear to us as the pervasive impact of Adam's sin are seen.

MUCH MORE THOSE . . .

Here we make the transition from Adam to his offspring who "receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness." Here another difference is seen between the offspring of Adam and those of Christ. Adam's children had the Adam and the natural man. He has declared no good to be in them. Whatever has its genesis in Adam or nature has been rejected by God, regardless of its seeming worth. Only those created anew in Christ are acceptable, and a "a new heavens and a new earth" are a suitable habitat for all who are a "new creation" (2 Cor 5:17). The comprehension of this by faith will quickly resolve many difficulties and assist all, from the least to the greatest, in developing a proper focus.

ONE MAN'S OFFENSE

Remember, we are beholding the sentence of death passed upon them independently of their sin. They did not “receive” the sentence, but had it imposed upon them. They do not have sinful natures because they chose to have them, but because, by virtue of their relation to Adam, they were born with them.

Those who come from Christ, however, are quite different. They possess what they have “received.” It has not been imposed upon them, but they have received it by faith. Notice how refreshingly this is stated. “Those who receive God’s abundant provision of grace and of the gift of righteousness.”^{NIV} In general, they receive God’s loving favor, coming into the area of blessing. In specific, they receive His “gift of righteousness,” whereby their sins are covered and His own righteousness is imputed unto them.

And what can be said of these people? What effect does grace and the gift of righteousness have upon them? How does it compare with what they received from Adam?

On a scale more grand and expansive than what they were in Adam, they “exercise dominion in life through the one man, Jesus Christ.”^{NRSV} Rather than being a slave, they become “kings and priests unto God” (Rev 1:5-6). They reign over the very lusts that once reigned over them! Once death reigned, now they reign! Death belongs to them (1 Cor 3:22), and cannot separate them from “the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord” (Rom 8:39). There is a note of triumph in their life.

Now death is a blessing to them, for “Blessed are the dead who from now on die in the Lord. ‘Yes,’ says the Spirit, ‘they will rest from their labors, for their deeds follow them’” (Rev 14:13). Although it is an enemy, it is their “last enemy,” and they will soon mock it shouting, “O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?” (1 Cor 15:55).

In the meantime, life belongs to them, and they reign in it. Whether “Paul or Apollos or Cephas or the world or life or death or the present or the future—” everything belongs to them, and they belong to Christ, and Christ belongs to God (1 Cor 3:22). In a kingly act, they refuse to let “sin reign” in their “mortal body” (Rom 6:12). As princes, they buffet their bodies and bring them into subjection (1 Cor 9:27).

And how is it that such a “reign in life” is realized? It is NOT because of disciplined habits, or learned conduct. It is not because they follow a manual of conduct, or adhere to certain fleshly regimens. No! They “reign in life by one, Jesus Christ!” Their triumph in life is traceable to “one Man.” Their victory in its totality is owing to Him! Remove Him, and they have nothing.

END OF PARENTHETICAL PARAGRAPH

ONE MAN EFFECTS ALL MEN

“¹⁸ Therefore, as through one man’s offense judgment came to all men, resulting in condemnation, even so through one Man’s righteous act the free gift came to all men, resulting in justification of life.” The Spirit now returns to the argument at hand, showing the effects of Christ’s vicarious atonement. In verses 14-17, the Spirit has emphasized the PERSON OF CHRIST, as compared with the person of Adam. He has referred to the Savior as “Him that was to come” (v 14), “one man Jesus Christ” (v 15), the One to whom “many offences” were imputed (v 16), and “one, Jesus Christ” (v 17). Now, the Spirit will shine the light upon Christ’s death, showing what marvelous effects have come from it.

other to a commandment from God.

One Can Effect Many

A single deed can have sweeping effects upon other people. Some lesser deeds that come to mind are as follows.

ONE MAN’S OFFENSE VERSUS ONE MAN’S RIGHTEOUS ACT

Not only does the condition and destiny of all men narrow down to two people were spared from Divine judgment because of the blood of that sacrifice (Ex 12:27).

What we are considering, therefore, is not a strange teaching. The principle of one being the fountain of either cursing or blessing is found throughout scripture.

A SINGLE OFFENSE

Because this is so contradicting of the wisdom of the world, the Spirit places great stress upon it. Whenever such an emphasis is found in Scripture, the truth expounded is always a key to the opening of large vistas of Kingdom reality.

Think of it! What is described in Genesis in these words, “she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat” (Gen 3:6), is here called “the offense of one,^{2KJV} or “one man’s trespass,^{2NKJV} or “one transgression,^{2NASB} or “one trespass.^{2NIV} One time, one man, one sin! And what was the result of that dreadful moment, for it was not an extended period like the building of Babel, or the corruption of Sodom.

“Judgment Came!”

Here is what happened, and our hearts must take these words in. “Judgment came to all men, resulting in condemnation.^{2NKJV} Other versions read, “there resulted condemnation to all men,^{2NASB} “the result of one trespass was condemnation for all men,^{2NIV} “one sin brought condemnation upon everyone.^{2NLT}

Everyone was condemned because of “one transgression!” From this fact we learn of the malignancy of sin, God’s utter hatred of it, and the impotency of men to stop the spread of sin once it has entered. If men are unable to behold sin in themselves, they ought to consider that condemnation has come to them because of Adam’s sin—“one sin.” To be sure, Adam’s nature is in them, and they have sinned also. But if they cannot see that yet, they are in a state of condemnation by act of obedience, just as Adam’s act was the premier act of disobedience.

“Justification of Life”

What a difference there is between the effects of Adam’s “offense” and Christ’s “righteous act!” The phrase “justification of life” means acquittal that results in life—spiritual life. Adam’s

One vicarious sacrifice became the basis for the conferment of righteousness and life upon all who believe. If the Father has such a high regard for the death of His Son, He will surely bless those who hear the record He has given of His Son, and embrace it heartily by faith!

virtue of their identity with Adam! His sin resulted in “condemnation for all men!”

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF ONE

Now the Spirit powerfully affirms the reality and effectiveness of Christ’s vicarious atonement. “Even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.” The “righteousness” which He mentions is not the sinless life of Christ, but the righteous deed He accomplished when He died. Thus other versions read, “through one Man’s righteous act,^{2NKJV} “even so through one act of righteousness,^{2NASB} and “the result of one act of righteousness.^{2NIV}

This is the “act” formerly declared in this chapter. “Christ died for the ungodly” (5:6), “Christ died for us” (5:8), “the death of His Son” (5:10). That single deed is the basis for the undoing of all Adam brought upon us. It is the premier transgression introduced sin into the world. Christ’s righteous deed brought exoneration from sin. Adam’s sin brought death, Christ’s righteous act brings life.

Other versions read, “leads to justification and life for all,^{2NSRV} “justification that brings life for all men,^{2NIV} “leads to acquittal and life for all men.^{2RSV} The idea is that once our sin was put away, we became alive and sensitive to the God from whom we were estranged by sin. Where once there was death and a lack of response, now there is life and an acute sensitivity to, and love for, God. And it is all because of “one righteous act” accomplished by the Redeemer! One vicarious sacrifice became the basis for the conferment of righteousness and life upon all who believe. If the Father has such a high regard for the death of His Son, He will surely bless those who hear the record He has given of His Son, and embrace it heartily by faith!

DISOBEDIENCE AND OBEDIENCE

“¹⁹ For as by one man’s disobedience many were made sinners, so also by one Man’s obedience many will be made righteous.” The Spirit has not yet finished with establishing this truth to our hearts. He has traced our sinfulness and dead condition to one man. He has traced our release from sin and our triumph in life to one Man. Our condemnation is traced to a single deed committed by a single man. Our release from condemnation to the condition of being alive unto God is traced to a single act of righteousness. Now the Spirit drives the point even deeper into our heart.

ONE MAN’S DISOBEDIENCE

Fix In your mind how the Spirit speaks of the entrance of sin. What appears rather simplistic in Genesis is seen as much more complicated in Romans. The Gospel has not only brought “life and immortality to light” (2 Tim

1:10), it has opened to us the magnitude of sin as well. As it is written, “For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith. For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness”

From heaven’s point of view (which is the true view), there are only Two Men. Everything hinges on them--by Given O. Blakely (Rom 1:16-18).

Here, Adam's sin in the garden is called "one man's disobedience." One man disobeyed God! The reference is not to a life of disobedience, as lived by Hophni and Phinehas (1 Sam 2:22). It is again to a single act committed at a point in time. Adam's "disobedience" occurred when he ate the fruit of the forbidden tree!

We know very little about the life of Adam, even though he lived for nine hundred and thirty years.

- ▶ He gave names to all cattle, birds, and every beast of the field (Gen 2:20).
- ▶ He received a wife from God and called her "Woman" and "Eve" (Gen 2:23; 3:20).
- ▶ He begat Cain, Abel, Seth, and many sons and daughters (Gen 4:1-2,25; 5:4).
- ▶ He lived 930 years and died (Gen 5:5).

The thing for which Adam is noted in this text is his "disobedience." That is the thing that most impacted our race!

MANY WERE MADE SINNERS

The result of "one man's disobedience" was devastating. It is of such a remarkable nature that theologians still have a difficult time with the affirmation. This was not the result of the "disobedience" of a family, or a city, or a nation, or even a world. It was the result of "one man's disobedience."

Here is the revealed result of Adam's "disobedience." "Many were MADE SINNERS." Nearly every version of the Scripture reads the same. Some alternate readings are, "the many have been constituted sinners,"^{BBE} and "many people became sinners."^{NLT}

Why are people sinners? Some will respond, "Because they sin, for sinning is what makes people sinners." But that is not what the Spirit says in this text. He affirms they are sinners because of the "disobedience" of Adam.

By affirming we have been "made sinners," the Lord removes any temptation for men to claim innocence.

God did not make men sinners judicially. That is, He did not simply pronounce them sinners. By virtue of Adam's federal headship, and because all of his offspring partake of his nature, "many were MADE sinners." While it may appear but a technical point, it is necessary to strongly affirm it. Men are not sinners because they sin, but sin because they are sinners. They were "made sinners" because of "one man's disobedience," not because of their many acts of disobedience.

It is again to a single act committed at a point in time. Adam's "disobedience" occurred when he ate the fruit of the forbidden tree!

The Adam-nature, shared by everyone that comes into the world, is a corrupted nature. Knowing this, David confessed, "Surely I was sinful at birth, sinful from the time my mother conceived me"^{NIV} (Psa 51:5). Speaking of all men, the Psalmist also says, "Even from birth the wicked go astray; from the womb they are wayward and speak lies"^{NIV} (Psa 58:3). Job was correct when he lamented, "Who can bring what is pure from the impure? No one!"^{NIV} (Job 14:4). Later, Paul would say we were "by nature children of wrath" (Eph 2:3).

All of this is affirmed in our text, and that with great power. "By one man's disobedience many were made sinners."

THE OBEDIENCE OF ONE

All of the preceding statements are leading up to this grand announcement—the effects of a vicarious atonement. "So also by one Man's obedience many will be made righteous."^{NKJV} The New Living Translation reads, "But because One other Person obeyed God, many people will be made right in God's sight."

What is the "obedience" to which our text refers? Although Jesus did "always those things" that pleased the Father (John 8:29), that is not the "obedience" of reference. Even though our blessed Lord did "nothing" of Himself, but spoke only as His Father had "taught" Him (John 8:28), that is not the "obedience" mentioned here. Jesus did nothing of His own accord, but only what He saw the Father doing (John 5:19). Still, that is not the "obedience" to which the Spirit refers. In all of the above reference many words and deeds were covered. But our text speaks of a single act of obedience—one righteous act!

It is the death of Christ that is called "the obedience." Like Adam received one commandment, there was a sense in which Jesus also received a single commandment. He put it this way, "Therefore My Father loves Me, because I lay down My life that I may take it again. No one takes it from Me, but I lay it down of Myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This command I have received from My Father"^{NKJV} (John 10:17-18).

Paul also mentioned this singular act of obedience in his remarkable exposition of what was involved in Jesus coming into the world. "And being found in appearance as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient to the point of death, even the death of the cross" (Phil 2:8). Jesus laying down His life in the death of the cross, therefore, is the "obedience of One Man."

MANY WERE MADE RIGHTEOUS

Just as the one act of disobedience in Adam constituted all men sinners, one act of obedience by Jesus constituted many men righteous. That is the express statement of our text: "so by the one man's obedience the many will be made righteous."^{NRSV} You must exercise your faith to take hold of this truth.

This very truth is strongly affirmed in the fifth chapter of Second Corinthians. Here again is a remarkable statement of justification. “For He [God] hath made Him [Jesus] to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him” (2 Cor 5:21). The NIV reads, “God made Him who had no sin to be sin for us, so that in Him we might become the righteousness of God.”

The point is strong here, and must be reaffirmed. As needful as our obedience is., we are not made righteous by our obedience, but by the obedience of Christ! Further, it was not Christ’s obedience to the law that made us righteous, but His obedience “unto death, even the death of the cross.” If Jesus had not died, bearing our sins in His body on the tree (1 Pet 2:24), His sinless life would have carried no significance for us. We would have remained sinners by virtue of our descent from Adam, and personal involvement in sin as well.

Our “faith in His blood” (Rom 3:25) brings the imputation of righteousness to us from God! When we believe what God has declared of His Son, He is kindly disposed to make us righteous by giving us His own righteousness.

For those who feel this minimizes the necessity of obedience on our part, the following should be considered. Our text says that through the “obedience of One” we are made righteous. With a thorough familiarity with “the deep things of God,” and total expertise in expressing the truth precisely and with power, this is how the Spirit declared the matter. We do well to forthwith abandon any view of Scripture that does not permit us to speak in words “taught by the Spirit, combining spiritual thoughts with spiritual words”^{NASB} (1 Cor 2:13).

I have a growing discontent with powerless teaching that insists on neutering the text of Scripture by pressing it through the colander of the wisdom of men. It is always best to say it like the Spirit did. Our text is surely one that must be so approached.

ABOUNDING OFFENSE AND ABOUNDING GRACE

“²⁰ Moreover the law entered that the offense might abound. But where sin abounded, grace abounded much more . . .” Here the Spirit takes up the matter of sin being in then world before the Law. He is going to show us that the Law “entered” to accentuate the reality and wickedness of sin, causing it to “abound.” Remember, from Adam to Moses, “sin was in the world.” It was not, however viewed within the structure of a moral code. Men were constituted sinners because Adam disobeyed God. Nevertheless, they were really sinners, and the Law would show that to be the case.

THE LAW ENTERED

There came a point in time when “the Law” came into the world. This entrance is described in a number of ways. From one perspective, “the law was given through Moses” (John 1:17). From another view, “it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator” (Gal 3:19b). From yet another, the law “was added because of transgressions, till the Seed should come” (Gal 3:19a). The entrance of the Law was a hallmark in human history.

THAT THE OFFENSE MIGHT ABOUND

Contrary to the ideas of some, the Law was not given to enable men to become righteous. It was not intended to correct the human condition. Our text plainly states it “entered that the offence might abound,”^{KJV} or “that the transgression might increase,”^{NASB} or “to multiply the offences.”^{NJB}

Here the Spirit takes up the matter of sin being in then world before the Law. He is going to show us that the Law “entered” to accentuate the reality and wickedness of sin, causing it to “abound.”

How is it that “the offense” was caused to “abound” by the entrance of the Law? There are, in my judgment, at least two ways in which this took place.

- ▶ FIRST, the perverse nature of sin, which already existed, was seen more clearly. In this sense, that very sin “by the commandment might become exceeding sinful” (Rom 7:13). Thus, the dreadful plight of the sinner became more apparent, whetting a desire for deliverance from sin.
- ▶ SECOND, man’s corrupt nature, received from his father Adam, was provoked to even more sin through God’s holy law. Sin had brought hostility toward God as well as alienation from Him. Thus, in his most excellent treatise of the ministry of the Law, Paul confessed his own experience. “But sin, seizing the opportunity afforded by the commandment, produced in me every kind of covetous desire. For apart from law, sin is dead. Once I was alive apart from law; but when the commandment came, sin sprang to life and I died”^{NIV} (Rom 7:8-9).

Thus sin burst from its banks, flooding into the whole of life in unprecedented levels because of the Law. The Israelites, for example, which were not noted for indulgence and fornication in Egypt (at least not according to the record), broke over the boundary of morality at the very foot of Mount Sinai. They were naked, worshiped an idol, danced, drank, and indulged in revelry (Ex 32:19-25; 1 Cor 10:7). All of this occurred with the arresting sound of the Law still in their ears. Sin had become “exceeding sinful!” Or, in the words of our text, “the transgression increased.”

To sensitive souls, who did not practice such corruption, their hearts became more sensitive to the sin they had.

Under the bludgeon of the law, like David, they would cry out, “O LORD, pardon mine iniquity; for it is great” (Psa 25:11). “My strength fails because of my iniquity, And my bones waste away” (Psa 31:10). “Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin. For I acknowledge my transgressions: and my sin is ever before me. Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight: that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest” (Psa 51:2-4).

Thus, the “offense” abounded, and the transgression increased. The Law, then, was most effective in its work. It entered to cause the transgression to increase, and increase it did—both in perception and in quantity! In this, God’s assessment of humanity was confirmed to be true, and thus He was justified.

WHERE SIN ABOUNDED, GRACE ABOUNDED MUCH MORE

The increase of sin, however, was not the end of the matter. As great as sin is, grace is greater! The capacity for sin to increase is significant, but the capacity of grace to proliferate is more significant! “But where sin increased, grace abounded all the more.”^{NASB} “But where there was much sin, there was much more grace.”^{BBE} “But however much sin increased, grace was always greater.”^{NJB}

There are at least three ways to view this text, and all of them are certainly true.

FIRST, as sin abounded in the first man Adam, so grace abounded even more in the second man Jesus. More grace was in him than sin was in Adam. Thus, the “second man” far exceeds the “first man” in every way. Jesus was “full of grace and truth,” proving the superiority of both (John 1;14).

SECOND, grace was able to reach into the depths and retrieve man from sin and degradation, then set him in the heavenly places in Christ—higher than Adam was in all of his innocence. Grace can take the same powers blasted by sin, restore and fill them with the Divine nature. It can regenerate an unregenerate, lift the fallen, and raise the dead to everlasting life. The worse the condition, the more adequate grace becomes.

THIRD, the effects of Christ’s obedience far transcend the effects of Adam’s disobedience. Christ’s one act of righteousness has produced much more than Adam’s single offense. What Christ’s death has accomplished has wrought a multitude of benefits in a multitude of people that has superabounded over the trespass of Adam.

If you are able to receive it, the more readily sin is seen in truth, the greater and more effective the grace of God becomes. Thus, in this great salvation, sin itself works against the old serpent. The Law identified it, causing it to spring forth in its real nature. But then the Gospel comes, proclaiming with power the grace of God who can not only eradicate the guilt of sin, but also impute His righteousness to the person once enslaved to sin. Then it also brings an eternal inheritance, reserving it in heaven for us. All the while, we are “kept by the power of God through faith” until the appointed time, when we will have an abundant entrance ministered to us into the everlasting Kingdom.

In every way, grace has abounded over and exceeded sin, enormous though it was. In every way, Jesus has outdone

If you are able to receive it, the more readily sin is seen in truth, the greater and more effective the grace of God becomes. Thus, in this great salvation, sin itself works against the old serpent.

Adam. In every way, grace has proved more effective than sin. What sin has done, grace has done much more. Whatever Adam has brought, Jesus has brought more. Thank God for His grace! Obedience has out-shined disobedience.

THE REIGN OF DEATH AND THE REIGN OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

“²¹ so that as sin reigned in death, even so grace might reign through righteousness to eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.” Everyone is under the reign of someone or something. Either Satan rules men or Jesus Christ does. Either sin reigns in death, or grace reigns through righteousness. These contrary reigns cannot take place simultaneously. Men are governed by either Satan or Christ, but not by both. Sin or grace rules them, but never at the same time!

SO THAT . . .

This is an explanation of WHY grace abounds “much more” where sin abounds or increases. Everything God does is for a “cause” (Ezek 14:23). The reason for grace abounding is that it might exercise the dominion. Ordinarily, men do not think of grace as a ruling or governing factor. They tend to think of it in terms of tenderness. While God’s grace is tender and gentle with wounded sinners, it has a nature that rules.

SIN REIGNED IN DEATH

Sin reigns in an environment of death. Wherever there is separation from God, insensitivity to His Person and will—wherever men do not have eyes to see and ears to hear—sin is ruling. When men were severed from God, sin got up on the throne and began its ruthless rule.

Wherever dull and spiritually listless souls are found, sin is governing the individual. There are no exceptions to this rule, for sin reigns “in death.” That is the habitat in which it flourishes.

Sin and death are wed together, and work together. Those who are gripped with the “fear of death,” for example, are, by virtue of that condition, in bondage. As it is written, “who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage” (Heb 2:15).

GRACE REIGNS THROUGH RIGHTEOUSNESS

When grace abounds, however, it changes the entire situation. Death is no longer the environment in which the believer is found. Because of that, sin can no longer reign, for sin and life cannot mingle.

Grace reigns “through righteousness,” or justification.^{NRSV} That is, when the individual is aware of his acceptance by God, and knows his name is written in heaven, grace takes the throne of life, exercising a beneficent rule. This righteousness is what is imputed to us. It is the righteousness that comes from God by faith in Christ Jesus. It is the righteousness announced in the Gospel, and procured by the vicarious death of the Son of God.

Stated another way, when we are in right standing with God, His favor rules over us, subduing our enemies and lifting us up to higher realms. His grace effectively teaches us to “to say ‘No’ to ungodliness and worldly passions, and to live self-controlled, upright and godly lives in this present age” (Tit 2:12). Empowered by the Holy spirit, we refuse to allow sin to reign in our mortal bodies (Rom 6:12). Rather than yielding to the “deeds of the body,” they are “mortified” under the capable leadership of the Spirit (Rom 8:13). Thus grace reigns within the environment of imputed righteousness, empowering us to maintain a heavenly stance in a condemned world.

TO ETERNAL LIFE

There is an objective to the reign of grace. It is not simply to cause us to live acceptably in this world. That is a requirement, to be sure. But it is a means to an end, and not the end of itself.

The real aim is to obtain “eternal life.” That is “the promise that He hath promised” (1 John 2:25), the sum of Divine commitment. While we have eternal life now, it is only in the first fruit sense. The bulk of it is yet to come. Thus we are admonished, “Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life” (1 Tim 6:12). Such a fight is a kingly one. The objective is to know we have eternal life now (1 John 5:13), and enter into the fulness of it at the appearing of the Lord Jesus. And how will such a condition be achieved? It is by grace reigning through righteousness. It is by our sins being removed from us, God’s righteousness imputed to us, and the knowledge of both being realized through faith.

THROUGH JESUS CHRIST

Sin has so infected and affected men that they can make absolutely no progress toward God without Christ. But men must not despair because of this situation. Rather, they must take hope, for Christ has already confirmed His willingness to “bring us to God” (1 Pet 3:18). God has received His sacrifice, and exalted Him to His own right hand in order to “bring many sons to glory” (Heb 2:10). Every child of God has good reason to be optimistic about being fully equal to the challenges of life in this present evil world, and fully prepared for a future with the Lord.

CONCLUSION

Try as you may, you cannot find more than two men in the passage we have covered. The condition of all men is traced to these two men: Adam, the first man, and Jesus, the Second Man. Both stand for all those who come from them, and are the cause for their condition. The establishment of this reality is more than a mere doctrinal treatise—although it is surely one of the premier examples of “sound doctrine.” The truth that has been effectively expounded is that of the vicarious death of Jesus. Not only has “One died for all,” He becomes the basis for the conferment of the blessing of God.

Ponder the marvels of what has been revealed in this section of Scripture. Behold the effects of the first and Second man, the “first man Adam and the last Adam” (1 Cor 15:45,47). See how extensive and effective they are!

ADAM	JESUS CHRIST
Sin entered the world	Grace entered the world
Death entered the world	Life entered the world
Committed an offense	Brought a free gift
Many are dead	Grace and gift abound
One that sinned	The free gift
Judgment to condemnation	Many offenses to justification
Death reigned by one	We reign in life by One
All men condemned	Justification and life
Disobedience made many sinners	Obedience made many righteous

Although men may boast of their independence, it is only an imagination. What we are by nature is traced to Adam, and what we are by grace is traced to Christ Jesus.

The reason for Christ’s atoning death is seen more clearly in view of these things. Because the fall of humanity came through one man, the rescue of humanity must also come from one Man. A Champion had to come that could assume all of the liabilities of mankind, absorb the full brunt of Divine wrath, and come back to rule from heaven.

Jesus is truly “the Firstborn of the new creation.” He has set the tone for the children of God. He is not a mere pattern to be emulated, any more than Adam was as example to be followed. By virtue of being the federal head of a new creation, all who are in Him partake of His nature. They are blessed by God because of Christ, and not because of their personal achievements.

Two men. Both are effective in what they have passed on to their constituency. Both are the patterns of those who follow them. The first man brought in sin, death, and all of the dreadful things associated with them. The Second Man brought in righteousness and life, and all of the blessed things associated with them.

The environment brought about by the first man was death. Within that framework, no good could be produced, and no one could become righteous. It was a hopeless situation that could only be resolved by God making "all things new." To this day, death cannot produce anything acceptable to God. There must be life, response, sensitivity, and alertness to walk with God. One must have eyes to see and ears to hear.

Where life is not found, Adam is the prominent one. In such a condition, the individual is not accepted, and all effort is futile. If what we have can be traced back to Adam, it is unacceptable, for the whole Adamic order has been rejected. A remake is required.

Where life IS found, Christ is the prominent one. He is the One behind the life, and the Reason the life has been conferred. God has blessed the individual because of Christ. It is His obedience that has brought the blessing of righteousness, and His act of righteousness that has lifted us up on the eagle's wing.

All men are sinners by virtue of who they are, not what they have done. They were "made sinners" by the offense of Adam, and sin because of that. This by no means excuses what sinners do. It rather explains their conduct, and confirms their need of a Savior.

God is greatly to be praised for such a marvelous arrangement. His salvation provides for the rescue of all sinners.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 19

DEAD TO SIN, ALIVE TO GOD

^{6:1} What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? ² Certainly not! How shall we who died to sin live any longer in it? ³ Or do you not know that as many of us as were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into His death? ⁴ Therefore we were buried with Him through baptism into death, that just as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. ⁵ For if we have been united together in the likeness of His death, certainly we also shall be in the likeness of His resurrection, ⁶ knowing this, that our old man was crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves of sin. ⁷ For he who has died has been freed from sin. ⁸ Now if we died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him, ⁹ knowing that Christ, having been raised from the dead, dies no more. Death no longer has dominion over Him. ¹⁰ For the death that He died, He died to sin once for all; but the life that He lives, He lives to God. ¹¹ Likewise you also, reckon yourselves to be dead indeed to sin, but alive to God in Christ Jesus our Lord. ¹² Therefore do not let sin reign in your mortal body, that you should obey it in its lusts. ¹³ And do not present your members as instruments of unrighteousness to sin, but present yourselves to God as being alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness to God. ¹⁴ For sin shall not have dominion over you, for you are not under law but under grace. – Romans 6:1-14 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

Because men are prone to be merely speculative and philosophical in their religion, the Spirit will elaborate on the impact of justification upon human conduct. When righteousness is imputed to us through faith, it has an immediate effect upon our persons. Both thought and deed are influenced by the imputation of righteousness. However, this is not automatic: i.e., it does not occur without the conscious involvement of the individual.

THE REALITY OF THE NEW BIRTH

The new birth is very real. The stony unreceptive heart is actually removed, and a new and pliable heart is given (Ezek 11:19; 36:26). The “laws” of God are “put” into the mind and “written” upon the heart (Heb 8:10). Showing the thoroughness of this Divine work, it is also stated conversely. “I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them” (Heb 10:16). This is another way of describing the change that takes place when a person is born again, justified, or made righteous. A certain accord is created within the redeemed in which they participate in the Divine nature, brought into harmony with God.

A very real peace is realized between the justified one and the Justifier. There

- IX. DO NOT LET SIN REIGN (6:12)
- X. WHAT TO DO WITH YOUR MEMBERS (6:13)
- XI. THE IMPACT OF GRACE UPON SINNING (6:14) is an undeniable sharing of the Divine nature, and a cleansing of the conscience from the guilt of sin. The change that takes place is not metaphorical. It is not theoretical or idealistic. However, neither is it mature, or fully developed.

AT FIRST

At first, our new life is more intuitive than cognitive; more instinctive than intellectual or thoughtful. The “newborn babe” in Christ is not able to fully explain the change that has taken place in him, or satisfactorily interpret why his preferences have changed. The new believer is much like the blind man who was healed. He could not explain all of the ramifications of his healing, but could only say, “One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see” (John 9:25).

In a sense, in the beginning of our new life, feeling or disposition, is more advanced than the mind. Although we expect “new born babes” to be changed, have new appetites, and be determined to advance, we should not expect them to be articulate about their justification and its effects.

Because of this circumstance babes in Christ speak more in terms of “This is what I think,” than with sound spiritual reasoning and Scriptural concepts. But this is not intended to be a permanent situation.

JUVENILITY MAKES VULNERABLE

Furthermore, true confidence and assurance cannot be brought to maturity while remaining in this spiritually juvenile state. Satan directs a flood of erroneous teaching toward such souls, seeking to dislodge them from the moorings of their faith. This inundation of error is so massive and powerful there is little hope of surviving it unless the individual grows up into Christ (Eph 4:15). In Christ Jesus, growth, or going “on to perfection” (Heb 6:1-3) is a necessity, not a luxury or casual option.

WHAT OUR TEXT WILL SHOW

Our text will show how justification changes our entire circumstance. It will reveal how unreasonable sin is because of where we are and the power that surrounds us. With unusual power, the Spirit will declare that we have been identified with Christ in every aspect of the Gospel: Christ’s death, His burial, and His resurrection. He will further relate this participation with a point that can easily be identified. Like the stones that were stacked in Jordan to testify of the crossing of Israel, so the Holy Spirit will erect an unforgettable memorial to our participation in the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ.

In doing this, allowance is made for the development of a hearty faith and a strong confidence in the believer. In Jesus we have really died and really been raised. The effects of that death and resurrection are equally real.

WHAT SHALL WE SAY?

^{6:1} What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? ² Certainly not! How shall we who died to sin live any longer in it?” As I have said before, it is the manner of the Spirit to lead us into a thoughtful frame of mind. He is not content for us to be dominated by mere excitement or be placed under the control of inferior feelings. As is characteristic of the Spirit, He will ask the questions before He gives the answers (Rom 3:5; 4:1,3; 7:7; 9:14,30; 11:4; Gal 4:30). There is a reason for this approach. Because believers have the laws of God written upon their hearts and put into their minds, the answer of the Spirit will be more a confirmation than a revelation. He so instructs us, enabling us to be able to recognize the answer, as opposed to merely memorizing it or giving it by rote.

WHAT SHALL WE SAY THEN?

The statement we are to consider more deeply is this: “That as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord” (5:21). The reign of grace is now to be considered – the reign of grace within us. This reign is as real as the reign of death! Its effects are as pronounced as those of death’s rule. In fact, they are even of a greater magnitude. “MUCH MORE, we shall be saved from wrath” through Jesus (5:9). “MUCH MORE, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life” (5:10). “MUCH MORE the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many” (5:15). “MUCH MORE they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one,

Jesus Christ” (5:17). “But where sin abounded, grace did MUCH MORE abound” (5:20).

What will we say in regards to this great salvation? How will we relate it to our daily lives? Have we really entered into a new dimension of living? Are we still vassals of Satan, or can we expect to turn the tables on him, living no longer in sin and disobedience? Are we to expect that God’s grace is given to us without causing newness of life? Are we to expect nothing new to transpire within us when we experience the remission of sin and the consequent imputation of righteousness?

SHALL WE CONTINUE IN SIN?

The flesh will reason that we should continue in sin. If grace abounds “much more” when sin abounds, then, flesh reasons, the more we sin, the more grace we receive.

This is the logic of the flesh, not its precise words. Men might reason in these words. "No matter how often I sin, the Lord always forgives me." Or, "Even when I forsake Him, He never forsakes me." Or, "No matter what I do, or how deeply I fall into sin, the Lord will bring me back, because He loves me."

But all such reasoning is foolish, and unbecoming of those who have been justified. If the reason for justification is to rid us of sin, the grace that effects justification can certainly not promote sin or excuse its presence.

A continuance in sin is a denial of the grace of God. It evidences a refusal to be taught by grace to deny "ungodliness and worldly lusts," and live "soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world" (Tit 2:11-12). The grace of God, when received, will not allow the individual to persist in sin. One may concoct a doctrine that affirms no sin or deviation from the truth can cause a person to fall away from grace. But that foolish affirmation does not make it so. In fact, a fall from grace can be effected by resorting to a system of Law to be justified. As it is written, "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace" (Gal 5:4). How much more is this true of the one who continues to transgress that law?

It might appear strange that such reasoning is introduced, for rarely will you hear someone put forth an argument like this. The Spirit, however, is not referring to a specific argument of the flesh, but to the manner in which the flesh reasons. It leads a person to continue to sin in the expectation of receiving grace and repeated forgiveness.

But this reason is flawed to the core. Sin is not the cause of grace. Rather, it is the cause of Divine wrath and indignation! Is it not written, "for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience" (Eph 5:6; Col 3:6). Grace comes to us because of what Jesus has done, not because of our sins!

CERTAINLY NOT!

"Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid." The KJV reads, "God forbid!" While this is not technically a good translation, it is a good one spiritually. It means God has not allowed for any such conclusion. Other translations read, "God forbid," ^{KJV,ASV,} Douay-Rheims "By no means," ^{NIB,Websters} "Far

If the reason for justification is to rid us of sin, the grace that effects justification can certainly not promote sin or excuse its presence.

be the thought," ^{Darby} "In no way," ^{BBE} "Let it not be!" ^{Youngs} "Of course not," ^{NLT} and "Out of the question." ^{NJB}

The intent of this expression is simply this: It is not possible for such a things to even occur! It is not possible for sin to be encouraged by grace, or for it to continue where God's favor is received. When the reign of grace begins, the reign of death ends! Furthermore, grace cannot be increased by continuance in sin. It does not abound BECAUSE sin abounds, but WHERE it once, or formerly, abounded.

This expression reflects an utter abhorrence for sin, and particularly continuing sin. Those who persist in sin do not need grace, but repentance. As it is written, "In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth; and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will" (2 Tim 2:25-26).

Those who are standing in "the true grace of God" (1 Pet 5:12) develop such a distaste for sin, that the thought of continuing in it is repulsive to them. Grace not only removes sin, but makes sin detestable. This is involved in the marvelous promise, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9).

Let it be clear, this expression "God forbid!" or "Certainly not!" refuses to allow us to entertain the notion that grace allows for or encourages sin. It will not permit us to imagine we may indulge in sin expecting to receive grace.

HOW CAN WE LIVE IN SIN?

"How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" Other versions read, "How shall we who died to sin live any longer in it?" ^{NKJV} "We died to sin; how can we live in it any longer?" ^{NIV} "How can we who died to sin go on living in it?" ^{NRSV}

To this point, only two deaths have been mentioned. First, the death into which all men sank because of Adam's sin (5:12,14,15,17,21). Second, the death of Christ (5:6,8,10). No reference has been made to any death toward sin, only death IN sin, and a death FOR sin. Now, however, a third type of death will be expounded: death TO sin.

Think of the magnitude of the expression "dead to sin." Among other things, this shows that becoming righteous before God is more than a mere legal transaction. Grace, which takes sin away, cannot nourish sin, encouraging its continued expression. When sin is found in the child of God, grace has been suppressed and, to some degree, rejected. It is necessary to speak strongly about this matter, else our text will have no real significance for us. Keep in mind, this is not a description of what we were when grace found us, but what we are after grace has raised us.

"Dead to Sin"

Sin is related to death in at least three ways. Two of these ways have already been mentioned. The spirit will now develop the third relationship.

- ❑ There is a death “IN” sin (Eph 2:1; Rom 5:12; 7:9). This is the condition of all men by nature.
- ❑ There is a death “FOR” sin (1 Pet 3:18; 1 Cor 15:3). This is Christ’s vicarious death, that fully addressed all of the ramifications of sin.
- ❑ Death “TO” sin (Rom 6:2,7,11; Col 3:3). This dead occurs when we are reconciled unto God, justified, and made righteous.

There are two fundamental senses in which we are “dead to sin,” and they are both glorious.

- ❑ First, we have been “justified from all things,” thereby freeing us from the guilt of sin (Acts 13:39). Our sins are not imputed to us, as God refuses to do so (Rom 4:8). The guilt of sin can no longer dominate those living by faith, and cannot condemn them. Their conscience has been “purged” (Heb 9:14). They are “dead to sin.”
- ❑ Second, since Jesus is made unto us “sanctification” (1 Cor 1:30), we have been separated from servitude to sin. We no longer have an obligation to sin, for we have been freed from its rule as well as its guilt. The “new man” has no appetite for sin, and finds it detestable. That is why grace can teach the child of God to say “NO” to sin in all of its forms (Tit 2:11-12).

As the Spirit will establish in the seventh chapter, the child of God is not without exposure to the principle, or law, of sin. In fact, that “law” dwells within him. “But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members” (Rom 7:23). On the surface, this may appear to contradict the affirmation that we are “dead to sin.” However, death to sin does not mean we are insensitive to it or wholly incapable of responding to it. It DOES mean that the part of us that is united to Christ IS fully separated from sin. As John says, “Whoever has been born of God does not sin, for His seed remains in him; and he cannot sin, because he has been born of God” (1 John 3:9). And again, “We know that whoever is born of God does not sin; but he who has been born of God keeps himself, and the wicked one does not touch him” (1 John 5:18). Just as surely as our old self was alive to sin and dead to God, so our new self is dead to sin and alive to God.

As the seven chapter substantiates, however, the believer is not either an “old man” or a “new man.” Instead, while he is “in the body,” he is a complex dichotomy in which both the “old” and “new” man reside. Elsewhere, the Spirit strictly charges us to “put off the old man” and “put on the new man,” yielding our whole persons to the “new creation” (2 Cor 5:17).

Beginning in this chapter, the Holy Spirit will develop the reality of the “new creature”—that which is “born of God.” He will firmly establish that justification has yielded very real and marvelous results.

We have been freed from the guilt of sin, and thus owe no allegiance to it. We have been joined to Christ, and are thus superior to it. We have been taught by God of its malignity and condemning power, and thus should have no appetite for it. For the child of God, sin is totally unreasonable and thoroughly distasteful.

Not the least of these results is death “to sin.” There is a part of us to which sin has no attraction. We “died to sin.” ^{»NKJV,NASB,NIV,NRSV} We were separated from its guilt and power, and owe no obligation or debt to it. Our justification, therefore, was more than simply liquidating our indebtedness to God, or forgiving our sin. It involved extricating us from the tyranny, or dictatorship, of sin itself.

This deliverance is confirmed by the response of believers to the Gospel of Christ. When men cried out “What shall we do” (Acts 2:37), or “Here is water, what doth hinder me from being baptized” (Acts 8:36), or “What must I do to be saved” (Acts 16:30), they confirmed sin was losing its power over them. Satan would never have permitted them to cry out in such a manner if he could have stopped it. Sin itself was unwilling to let them go. Yet, their initial calling upon the name of the Lord revealed a death to sin was beginning, and would be culminated when they “put on Christ” (Gal 3:27). This is the death to sin of our text.

How Can We Live in Sin?

A stirring question, indeed! How can those who have been disentangled from sin maintain their identity with Jesus and continue sinning? What form of reasoning would support such a postulation?

To live in sin, or continue to transgress, would be to return to death IN sin, and consequent separation from God. As we will see, the Spirit is not saying it is impossible for believers to sin, for He will admonish us to cut loose from sin. Rather, He is affirming that it is unreasonable and foolish to sin! We have been freed from the guilt of sin, and thus owe no allegiance to it. We have been joined to Christ, and are thus superior to it. We have been taught by God of its malignity and condemning power, and thus should have no appetite for it. For the child of God, sin is totally unreasonable and thoroughly distasteful.

What Is Required to Live in Sin

In order to “live in sin,” or continue to sin, several things must take place. Living in sin is never innocent, never accidental, and always deliberate. To continue in sin, one must:

- ❑ Resist the Spirit, fighting against His relentless influence (Acts 7:51).
- ❑ Quench the Spirit, refusing to hear what He is saying to the churches, and choosing to thrust His influence from from us (1 Thess 5:19).
- ❑ Grieve the Spirit, choosing to indulge in things that offend Him, stifle His influence, and compete against His gracious leading (Eph 4:30).

- ❑ Allow the entrance of an evil heart of unbelief, from which we were once delivered (Heb 3:12).
- ❑ Make a place in which the devil can work, influencing us to turn away victory that overcomes the world (1 John 5:4-5).

- ❑ Spurn walking in the Spirit, which assures we will not fulfill the lust of the flesh (Gal 5:16).
- ❑ Reject the consideration of the return of our Lord, which hope leads us to

In a sense, it is not easy to sin. It requires a change of focus—from the Lord Jesus Christ to “this present evil world.” It demands earth-centeredness and worldly-mindedness. To live in sin, one must think primarily of himself, refusing to do the will of the Lord. He must return to the pit from which he was “digged”( from Christ and follow him (Eph 4:27).

- ❑ Allow Satan to get an advantage of us, even though we have been delivered from him (2 Cor 2:11a).
- ❑ Be ignorant of the devices of the devil, even though God has revealed his ways and subtleties (2 Cor 2:11b).
- ❑ Refuse to hear Him who is speaking from heaven (Heb 12:25).
- ❑ Cease to seek those things which are above, where Christ sits on the right hand of God (Col 3:2).
- ❑ Refuse to set our affection on things above, and not on things on the earth (Col 3:2).
- ❑ Fail to put on the whole armor of God, that we might stand against the wiles of the devil (Eph 6:10-18).
- ❑ Decline to add to our faith those things God has supplied in abundance (2 Pet 1:5-8).
- ❑ Refuse to hear Christ and be taught by Him (Eph 4:20-21).
- ❑ Fail to resist the devil by continuing steadfast in the faith (1 Pet 5:8-9).
- ❑ Refuse to live by faith, which is the purify ourselves as He is pure (1 John 3:3).

- ❑ Withdraw from fellowship with Christ, who of God is made unto us “wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption” (1 Cor 1:30).
- ❑ Fail to confess our sins to God, who is “faithful and just to forgive us our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness” (1 John 1:9).
- ❑ Stop walking in the light, thereby losing the fellowship of kindred believers and the cleansing power of Christ’s blood (1 John 1:7).
- ❑ Be beguiled by the Devil, from whose kingdom we have been delivered (2 Cor 11:3; Col 1:13).
- ❑ Refuse to live by “every Word of God,” thrusting it from us rather than desiring and eating it (Lk 4:4).
- ❑ Reject the injunction to seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness (Matt 6:33).
- ❑ Fail to pay attention, giving due heed, to the message of the Gospel, allowing ourselves to drift away from it (Heb 2:1).

In a sense, it is not easy to sin. It requires a change of focus—from the Lord Jesus Christ to “this present evil world.” It demands earth-centeredness and worldly-mindedness. To live in sin, one must think primarily of himself, refusing to do the will of the Lord. He must return to the pit from which he was “digged” (Isa 51:1). To continue in sin is to once again be under the domination of Satan, from whom Jesus delivered us.

Sin, particularly continual sin, is never an innocent matter. It defies all sound reasoning, or spiritual thought. It contradicts the work of redemption, conflicts with the grace of God, stifles the work of the Holy Spirit, and negates a profession of faith.

When we are tempted to sin, we must shout to our souls, “How can I, who am dead to sin, live any longer in it?” We must reply as Joseph did to the wicked wife of Potipher: “How then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?” (Gen 39:9). If Joseph could reason in such a manner without the Ten Commandments, without a Bible, without the indwelling Spirit, and without the Gospel of Christ, how much more are those in Christ Jesus able to so think. For those in Jesus, sin is really illogical and unreasonable.

One of the great blights of our time is the casualness with which sin is approached within the professed church. A sense of its malignity and offensiveness can scarcely be perceived. It is tolerated within local congregations, and often even erupts among its leaders. All of this confirms there is very little awareness extant in the professed church of what has really occurred in salvation. Within this context, our text is most relevant. It will reason with us with great power and persuasiveness.

DO YOU KNOW?

“³ Or do you not know that as many of us as were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into His death?”The Spirit will now confirm that believers really are “dead to sin.” The death is not a figurative or symbolic one, but a very real one. It is not external, but it is real. It cannot be perceived with the eye, but it is real. It is a death accomplished in our association with the Lord Jesus Christ. The arguments that will now be set before us are unusually powerful. Evidence will be presented that is common to every person in Christ.

DO YOU NOT KNOW?

The interrogation “Do you not know?” is rhetorical, but not only rhetorical. It is like saying, “Are you really ignorant of what has happened to you?” or, “Don’t you realize what has really taken place?” The Spirit uses this form of teaching again in verse sixteen. It is again used in chapter seven (7:1). Frequently the Spirit asks “do you not know?” i.e., in First Corinthians (3:16; 5:6; 6:3,9,15,16,19,24). This is a way of introducing something that can and should be known. It is obvious to faith, but is obscured when men walk in the flesh.

AS MANY OF US

This introduces a common experience—something that occurs to everyone involved in the ordinance that is mentioned. What follows happens to everyone participating in the activity that is specified. It should also be observed that few, if any, were aware of this reality to easy measurable degree.

The Purpose of this Teaching

Let it be clear, this is not a diversion from the Spirit’s teaching on justification. It is not the development of a new subject. The sixth chapter of Romans puts a handle on the truth of justification and imputed righteousness. For this reason, an event will be expounded that is both common and perceptible. The Spirit will not refer to an emotion, or a spiritual occurrence that is difficult to identify. To proceed in such a manner would only obscure the truth that is being declared.

BAPTIZED INTO CHRIST JESUS

“ . . . as many of us as were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into His death?” As soon as the word “baptized” is mentioned, a host of speculative arguments are introduced by those in the grip of sectarianism. There are religious ranks in which baptism is not common. Their theology is challenged by this forthright statement, and thus they seek to neutralize what is said with fanciful explanations.

Some say it is a spiritual baptism that is placed before us—one that cannot be seen or sensed in any way. It can only be identified by understanding, and cannot be associated with a point in time. It is, they say, a general statement like “we, being many, are one body in Christ” (Rom 12:5).

Others say this refers to a baptism in the Spirit. It may be associated with some physical phenomena, depending on the teaching embraced, but is basically an unseen happening.

These views, and others related to them, rob the text of its power. They throw the truth declared into a dark and mystical pit in which the precious and needed truth required cannot be easily seen. If the event of reference—“baptism”—is not readily apparent, it will not be able to convey the confidence intended.

Baptism

To assist us in our understanding of this most controversial subject, the Spirit reveals there is only “one baptism” (Eph 4:5). The word “baptism” (the noun form) is used twenty-two times in Scripture. Three different occasions are referenced by this word.

- βάπτισμα – The “baptism” of John the Baptist (Matt 3:7; 21:25; Mk 1:4; 11:30; Lk 3:3; 7:29; 20:4; Acts 1:22; 10:37; 13:24; 18:25; 19:3,4; βαπτισματος Acts 1:22)
- βάπτισμα – Also used for being overwhelmed with suffering, or suffering unto death. Christ referred to this as His own baptism (Matt 20:22-23; Mk 10:38-39; Lk 12:50).
- βάπτισμα – Also used of the baptism that is common to all believers (Eph 4:5; 1 Pet 3:21; βαπτισματος Rom 6:4; βαπτισματι Col 2:12).

In its noun form, “baptism” is never referred to being baptized “with the Holy Spirit” – never. The phrase “the baptism of the Holy Spirit,” or “the baptism of the references: John and repentance, the latter being another view of John’s baptism.

There should, then, be no controversy over the baptism common to believers! Christ’s baptism of suffering unto death is certainly not common to all believers, nor is martyrdom, which is a similar baptism (1 Cor 15:29). John’s baptism was obviated with the enthronement of Jesus, as it was instituted in anticipation of Christ (Acts 19:4), and was not accompanied with the “gift of the Holy Spirit” (Acts 2:38).

A Common Baptism

This is the baptism that is common throughout the book of Acts, and pertains to all who have obeyed the Gospel (Acts 2:38,41; Acts 8:12,13,16,36,38; 9:18; 10:47,48; 16:15,33; 18:8; Acts 19:5; 22:16). It should be obvious to all that this involved a bodily action in which the individual being baptized took a certain initiative.

- Those who “gladly received the Word were baptized” (Acts 2:41).
- Both “men and women were baptized” (Acts 8:12).
- The Ethiopian eunuch wanted to be, and was, baptized in water (Acts 8:36,38).
- Saul of Tarsus “arose and was baptized” (Acts 9:18; 22:16).
- Peter asked who could forbid water that Cornelius and his house could be baptized (Acts 10:47-48).

As soon as the word “baptized” is mentioned, a host of speculative arguments are introduced by those in the grip of sectarianism. There are religious ranks in which baptism is not common. Their theology is challenged by this forthright statement, and thus they seek to neutralize what is said with fanciful explanations.

Holy Ghost” is not found a single time in any version of Scripture. In fact the words “the baptism of” are ONLY used in this way by the Spirit: “the baptism of John” (Matt 21:25; Mk 11:30; Lk 7:29; 20:4; Acts 1:22; 18:25), and “the baptism of repentance” (Mk 1:4; Lk 3:3; Acts 13:24; 19:4). Every version of Scripture limits the words “baptism of” to these two

- The Philippian jailor was baptized “the same hour of the night” (Acts 16:33).
- The Ephesians were rebaptized in the same outward manner as John baptized, but for a different reason (Acts 19:4-5).
- Peter associates baptism with water, declaring by the Spirit that it “now saves us" (1 Pet 3:21).

Those insisting that the baptism of Romans six is a spiritual baptism, or that it has nothing whatsoever to do with being baptized in "water," are simply wrong. There is only "one baptism," and it is common to all who are in Christ. The accounts of actual baptisms in Scripture leave no question about the action involved.

"Baptized Into Christ"

Baptism, however, involves more than an external activity. Both "water" and "Spirit" are involved in the new birth (John 3:5-8). There is an action that takes place within as well as without. In fact, it is the inward action that validates the outward one. Also, it occurs simultaneously with the outward action. The two are not to be divorced.

Think of the magnitude of the words "baptized INTO Jesus Christ." This phrase is also used in Galatians 3:27: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." At the point of our baptism, we actually become one with the Lord Jesus. We are "joined" to Him, becoming "one spirit" with Him (1 Cor 6:17).

This is the unity for which Jesus

The Spirit is strengthening our faith and revealing the implications of our justification. When a person is "made the righteousness" of God (2 Cor 5:21), there is no place for sin. Lest the believer be discouraged with the thought that he is a helpless vassal of sin, the Spirit will now show us that we have been linked up with Jesus, and consequently with omnipotence. He will not relate that vital association with a mystical experience that is unsure and difficult to identify. Rather, the Spirit will point to our baptism, declaring with power what actually occurred to us at that time.

BAPTIZED INTO HIS DEATH

"... as many of us as were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into His death?" In the New Covenant, the believer actually participates in the Gospel.

Not only did Jesus die for us, we died with Him! Keep in mind that the Spirit is here expounding our death TO sin: "How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" (Verse 2). This is not a theoretical death to sin, but a very real one. In participating in Christ's death, we cease to participate in sin, for Christ has nothing to do with sin.

It is true that sins are "washed the powerful effects and benefits of Christ's death now belong to us! Ponder the revealed associations of the death of Jesus Christ.

- He gave His life as a ransom for many (Matt 20:28).
- His blood was "shed for the remission of sins" (Matt 26:28).
- In His death, as the Lamb of God, He took away "the sin of the world" (John 1:29).
- He gave His "flesh" for "the life of the world" (John 6:51).
- He laid down His life for the protection of the "sheep" (John 10:11-17).
- He died that He might gather into one the scattered people of God (John 11:51-52).
- He died that He Himself might bring forth much fruit (John 12:23-24).
- When He died, the "prince of this world was cast out" (John 12:31).
- In His death, a means was provided through which He would draw all men to Himself (John 12:32-33).
- Through His death Jesus purchased "the church of God" (Acts 20:28).
- In His death is justification, redemption, and remission of sin through God's righteousness (Rom 3:24-25).
- We were reconciled to God by the death of Jesus (Rom 5:10).
- In Christ's death, God "condemned sin" in the flesh of His son (Rom 8:3).
- Jesus died that He might be Lord of the living and the dead (Rom 14:9).
- Through Christ's death, our bodies and spirits were purchased (1 Cor 6:19-20).
- Jesus died that we might live to God, and no longer for ourselves (2 Cor 5:15).
- In dying, Jesus was made to be sin for us that we might be made "the righteousness of God in Him" (2 Cor 5:21).
- He died that we "through His poverty might be made rich" (2 Cor 8:9).
- In His death, Jesus delivered us "from this present evil world" (Gal 1:4).
- In dying, Jesus delivered us "from the curse of the Law" (Gal 3:13).
- Jesus died to redeem us, that we might receive "the adoption of sons" (Gal 4:5).
- We have been made nigh to God through Christ's blood (Eph 2:13).

We are baptized "into" the death of Christ. This means that all of the powerful effects and benefits of Christ's death now belong to us! Ponder the revealed associations of the death of Jesus Christ.

prayed on the even of His betrayal. "That they all may be one, as You, Father, are in Me, and I in You; that they also may be one in Us" (John 17:21). It speaks of accord, harmony, and spiritual oneness. Christ, therefore, is "in" the believer (Col 1:27), and the believer is "in Christ" (2 Cor 5:17).

The Point Being Made

This text is not an argument for the validity of baptism. The validity and necessity of baptism does not need to be proved. It is affirmed to be a commandment (Acts 10:48; 22:16), and is now associated with being in Christ.

away" when we are baptized. But that is certainly not the whole of the matter. We are also baptized INTO Christ's death—which is WHY our sins are washed away. When young, I heard many a person attempt to show the necessity of baptism by saying we contacted the blood of Christ in baptism, and it alone could wash away sin. The argument had an element of truth in it, yet was not found in Scripture. It was a feeble attempt on the part of man to justify the need to be baptized.

Our text speaks much more strongly on the matter! We are baptized "into" the death of Christ. This means that all of

- ❑ On the cross Jesus put to death the enmity between Jew and Gentile, making us one new man before God (Eph 2:14-15).
- ❑ Jesus gave Himself for the church in order that He might present it to Himself "a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish" (Eph 5:25-27).
- ❑ He "made peace" through the blood of His cross (Col 1:20).
- ❑ In His death, He "blotted out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross" (Col 2:14).
- ❑ In His death Jesus "spoiled," or plundered, principalities and powers, making a triumphant public display of them in His cross (Col 2:15).
- ❑ Jesus died that we might "live together with Him" (1 Thess 5:10).
- ❑ He died to "redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Tit 2:14).
- ❑ Jesus "tasted death for every man" (Heb 2:9).
- ❑ Through His death, He destroyed "him that had the power of death, that is, the devil" (Heb 2:14).
- ❑ By means of His death, Jesus delivered "them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage" (Heb 2:15).
- ❑ Jesus obtained "eternal redemption" for us through his death (Heb 9:12).
- ❑ In the New Covenant, and because of Christ's death, "we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all" (Heb 10:10).

This is by no means an exhaustive list. It does, however, confirm the magnitude of the benefits that flow from the death of Jesus Christ. His was not a that receiving the gift of righteousness is, in fact, God's answer to the sin problem. The power of sin is diffused in Christ, and we are now long obligated to obey it.

All of this remarkable benefit is associated with our baptism! The fact that people argue about the necessity and validity of baptism only confirms their ignorance and blindness to the truth of the Gospel. For those, however, who believe, great consolation will be

Let no person question whether or not they should be baptized, or whether or not any blessing is associated with it! simplistic death, and the fruit that comes from it is not small or undistinguished.

When the Spirit says we have been "baptized into His death," a truth of unspeakable magnitude has been affirmed. This means all of the benefits resident in that death become ours! What God has declared flows from that death, flows to those who are baptized into it!

There is no way to justify continued sin when we are baptized into Christ's death! There is no place for sin in His death, and no reason why it should dominate us. That is the point of this passage. The Holy Spirit is showing us experienced, and confidence to resist the devil received. What a great God, who can pack such a vast body of truth into a single seemingly insignificant act.

Let no person question whether or not they should be baptized, or whether or not any blessing is associated with it! As for those who say baptism has nothing whatsoever to do with salvation, their own speech betrays them. They have denied the truth of this text, which says baptism is "into" Christ's death. Who is the fool who would say Christ's death has nothing to do with salvation? That is what the opponents of baptism have really said, and it is inexcusable! Actually, to oppose baptism is to oppose Jesus.

BURIED AND RAISED WITH CHRIST

"⁴ Therefore we were buried with Him through baptism into death, that just as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." The text is based upon the foundation of the previous statement: "as many of us as were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into His death."

The teaching of verse four cannot be true if the reality of verse three has not been experienced. The Spirit will now elaborate upon that death. He will show us that just as a resurrection followed Christ's death, so a resurrection follows our identity with that vicarious death.

BURIED WITH HIM

The burial of Christ is an essential part of the Gospel. "The Gospel . . . how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; and that He was buried . . ." (1 Cor 15:1-3). In order, therefore, to be saved, we must not only be joined to Jesus in His death, but in His burial as well. We must participate with Him there.

Notice precisely how we are “buried with Him.” It is “through baptism.” Other versions say “by baptism.” The New Jerusalem Bible reads, “by our baptism.” The baptism of reference is the one that is “into His death.” It occurred when we, like Saul of Tarsus, “arose and was baptized” (Acts 9:18). It occurred when you, like those on the day of Pentecost, “gladly received the Word” and “were baptized” (Acts 2:41).

Buried Into Death

In nature, first men die, then they are buried. In the Spirit, however, we are “buried . . . into death.” Nearly every translation says the same thing of this burial with Jesus. It is “into death.” The ASV and Darbys reads “unto death.” The BBE reads, “We have been placed with Him among the dead.” The NJB reads “by our baptism into His death we were buried with him.”

The teaching is that in our baptism we entered into the domain of death to sin, for that is what is being expounded: “How shall we who died to sin live any longer in it?” (V 2). We entered into a realm where sin is neither allowed nor encouraged. Sin cannot survive in this spiritual province. From the standpoint of a Person, this domain is Jesus Christ. From the view of an expanse, it is the “heavenly places.” Here sin is out of place. Nothing about Christ or the heavenly places will lead a person to believe it is all right to sin. No person in fellowship with Christ will ever conclude there are advantages to be had in sin. No individual dwelling in heavenly places will be attracted to sin. Here is where men die TO sin! It is where they lose their appetite for it, and sin becomes repulsive to them.

Valid Form Must Agree with the True Doctrine

Endless Arguments

Men have longed argued about “the form” of baptism. Some choose to sprinkle water upon the candidate, calling that baptism. Others pour a modest amount of water upon the head of the person, calling that baptism. Some merely dip their finger in some water and smear it upon the head of the individual, calling that baptism. As you may suspect, fanciful arguments are advanced to justify these practices. They range from claiming personal preference to saying mere convenience is sought.

Sprinkling

Some have justified sprinkling as a form of baptism by pointing to the prophecy of Ezekiel. Referring to the era of salvation Ezekiel prophecies, “Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness” (Ezek 36:25). That, however, is something God said He would do, not something men would do. Further, it spoke of sanctification, or setting apart, and not of an outward form. The New Covenant equivalent of this sprinkling is the purging of the conscience from dead works in order that we might serve God (Heb 9:13-14; 1 Pet 1:2).

The teaching is that in our baptism we entered into the domain of death to sin, for that is what is being expounded: “How shall we who died to sin live any longer in it?” (V 2). We entered into a realm where sin is neither allowed nor encouraged. Sin cannot survive in this spiritual province.

Pouring

Those who seek to justify pouring as the form of baptism point to the manner in which God Himself baptized. On the day of Pentecost, the promise of Jesus was realized: “but you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit not many days from now” (Acts 1:5). We know this is the case, because Peter alludes to that experience as specifically fulfilling Jesus’ word (Acts 11:15-16).

When Peter explained that experience, he referred to the prophecy of Joel. “And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh . . . and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy” (Acts 2:17-18). Thus, the proponents of pouring say, “If pouring was good enough for God, it is good enough for us.”

The idea of “pouring,” however is associated with unimaginable abundance—not water trickling from a small vessel. When God “poured out” His Spirit, men were inundated with it. They were engulfed with His Spirit, just as surely as if they had been plunged into a vast ocean.

It would, indeed, be valid to baptize someone by pouring water upon them. It would, however, require a vast amount—something like pouring a ton of dirt upon a casket that had been placed in the earth.

Immersion

Others, myself included, contend that immersion, or being plunged beneath the water, is the manner in which we are buried with Christ “through baptism.” From the standpoint of etymology, or language, this is beyond all controversy. The word used in our text (“baptism”), comes from the Greek word βαπτίζω, which means “to dip repeatedly, immerse, submerge.” It also has a secondary etymological meaning, “to cleanse by dipping, or submerging, to wash, to make clean with water.”^{Thayer’s Greek Lexicon}

This is the word used in Luke sixteen, when Jesus said the rich man in hell asked Abraham to have Lazarus “DIP” the tip of his finger in water, and cool his tongue (Lk 16:24).

Notice, the technical meaning of the word “baptize” includes at least three things. (1) Submerging, (2) Cleansing, and (3) The use of water (“with water”). How marvelously this accords with the words of Scripture! A burial, or submerging, and a cleansing associated with water.

The Strength of Doctrine

Even though these arguments, taken from language, are most impressive, they do not carry the weight of Scripture. In my judgment, they should not be used to convince men of the form of baptism, for they are not “the sword of the Spirit” (Eph 6:17). The doctrine, or teaching, concerning baptism will convince the believer of the only acceptable manner in which baptism is to be carried out.

First, there really are no “forms” of baptism. Baptism is itself the form. Later, in this very chapter, it is referred to as “the form of the doctrine” (6:17). Though seemingly simplistic, this wording is critical to our understanding of baptism. The “form” is of the doctrine, not the act. This means that in baptism there is a precise likeness to the thing into which we are baptized. In this case, it is Christ’s death. Because baptism is a “burial,” it perfectly depicts that action in an external manner. If the means by which baptism is accomplished are at variance with the truth it affirms, the action becomes meaningless.

Jesus was “buried” in a tomb (John 19:40-42). His entire body was placed into it. His head or His feet were not hanging out of it. He was not in the tomb figuratively, but bodily. Others buried His body, He did not bury it Himself.

Thus we are “buried” in water, being placed in it, and covered by it (Acts 8:38). The action perfectly correlates with the “burial” of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Just as surely as Christ was really “buried,” so we were really “buried with Christ.” In the body, someone else baptized us, like Philip baptized the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:35-39). Our burial “with Christ,” however, was accomplished by the Lord through the Holy Spirit. In our identity with Christ, we also became identified with the body of Christ. As it is written, “For we were all baptized by one Spirit into one body--whether Jews or Greeks, slave or free--and we were all given the one Spirit to drink” (1 Cor 12:13).

JUST AS CHRIST WAS RAISED

At this point we rise above petty arguments into the domain of sound doctrine. It is not enough that we died to sin, or that we died with Christ, or that we were buried with Christ. We will find that the point of our baptism was not going down but coming up. It is life, not death, that is the ultimate point.

Death First, Then Life

In nature, life precedes death. In the Spirit, it comes after death! In the beginning, first there was darkness, then there was light (Gen 1:2-3). First there was Cain, then there was Abel (Gen 4:1-2). Esau was born first, then Jacob (Gen 25:25-26). In the realm of the Spirit, the worst is first and the best last. As “the Second Man,” Jesus is the best man (1 Cor 15:47).

In regeneration, death not only occurs first, it is in order to the experience of life. There must FIRST be a death to sin before there can ever be life toward God. Many a poor soul is not sensitive toward God simply because they continue to nurture their appetite for sin.

One further thing is seen in this pregnant text. In regeneration, death not only occurs first, it is in order to the experience of life. There must FIRST be a death to sin before there can ever be life toward God. Many a poor soul is not sensitive toward God simply because they continue to nurture their appetite for sin.

By the Glory of the Father

In our baptism we are raised just like Jesus was – “by the glory of the Father.” Bodily, John the Baptist raised Jesus out of the water. Philip raised the eunuch out of the water. But in our baptism, “the glory of the Father” raises us from death TO sin. That is, God was personally involved in our baptism. His Person, purpose, and power were there! Therein we became His “workmanship” (Eph 2:10).

The same power that raised Jesus from the dead raised us, who were dead in trespasses and sin – from death to sin (Eph 1:20-2:1).

An Important Distinction

It is true that prior to coming into Christ, we were “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1). But that is not the death which required our burial! The point being expounded by the Spirit is that we have become “DEAD TO SIN,” not that we were “dead in sins.” Our burial with Christ constituted the beginning of our departure from a life of sin. Not only were our sins washed away, our servitude to sin was terminated!

In baptism, our resurrection was in order to a new life. We embraced new loves, new hates, new purposes, and new desires. We began a new life, which is the point of the text.

WALKING IN NEWNESS OF LIFE

The only reason we have died to sin is in order that we might live unto God! If there is no “newness of life,” there really is no point to being “buried with Christ.” The burial and the resurrection are in order to “walk in newness of life.” Most versions read the same. The NIV reads, “live a new life.” Others read “might be living a new life,”^{BBE} “begin living a new life.”^{NJB} These translations are an accommodation to a shallow thinking generation for which words have little meaning.

“Walking”

“Walk in newness of life” is a very descriptive expression. The word “walk” comes from a word meaning “spending some time in a place, walking around.” In this text, the secondary meaning of the word is employed: “How one conducts his daily life; behave, live, , or the manner or kind of life that is lived.” There is also the idea of “progress, and taking advantage of the opportunities.”^{Strong’s, Thayer} A strong word, indeed! We can expect a great deal of liberating truth to be found here.

Walking in the newness of life involves occupying the heavenly places into which we have been placed (Eph 2:6), and where all of the spiritual blessings are realized (Eph 1:3). It consists of living in view of these spiritual blessings, and so conducting our lives as to never be beyond their reach. There is progress in walking in “newness of life,” as we are “changed from glory unto glory, even as by the Spirit of our God” (2 Cor 3:18).

By saying that, like Jesus, we are raised “by the glory of the Father” in order to walk in “newness of life,” the Spirit means we are empowered by God to do so. Not only is this the Divine objective, we are marvelously enabled to do precisely that—“walk in newness of life.” Where such a life is not being lived, “the power thereof” is either not known, or it is being denied (2 Tim 3:5). In the case of the former, where the power is not comprehended, our teaching and prayers must be devoted to the eyes of their understanding being opened so they will know “what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power” (Eph 1:19).

As we will see, baptism is not an empty and powerless symbol! It is not a lifeless liturgy! Further, it is not a subject about which men are to speculate or argue. God has spoken on this subject, and we are obliged to believe what He has affirmed.

One Further Thing

I have long observed the miserable failure of those who constantly preach baptism, to project the newness of life into which baptism inducts us. Those who aggressively affirm the necessity and benefits of baptism must be exhibits of its effectiveness and power. Where these exhibitions are not found, it would be best to allow others who are more familiar with “the newness of life” to declare the revealed role of baptism in the Divine economy. The reason for this should be obvious. The doctrine is weakened by a deficient walk.

UNITED WITH CHRIST IN DEATH AND RESURRECTION

“⁵ For if we have been united together in the likeness of His death, certainly we also shall be in the likeness of His resurrection.”

The Spirit will now embark on a most powerful form of spiritual reasoning. Not only does death to sin precede being raised to walk in a new life, those who die to sin WILL be raised to walk in newness of life. Just as surely as death follows life in the natural realm, life follows death in the spiritual realm! The only real question is whether or not we have been united with Jesus in His death. If we have, we will also be joined to Him in His resurrection.

UNITED TOGETHER

Prior to this, the Spirit said we were “baptized into Jesus Christ,” “baptized into His death,” and “buried with Him by baptism into death.” The point is that a very real union between Christ and the believer is formed in our baptism. We may not have been fully aware of it, but it happened. We may not have been able to articulate it, or speak with confidence about it, but it happened. Even if we were handicapped by weak and beggarly doctrines taught to us, if we were united with Jesus in the “likeness of His death,” we were just that certainly united with Him in the “likeness of His resurrection.” There is a real and effective oneness with Jesus that is accomplished in baptism.

“PLANTED”

Again emphasizing the “form of the doctrine,” the Spirit refers to our baptism as being “planted together” with Christ. The word “planted” means “planted together, grown together, united with, and closely identified with.”^{Strong’s}

The point is that a very real union between Christ and the believer is formed in our baptism. We may not have been fully aware of it, but it happened. We may not have been able to articulate it, or speak with confidence about it, but it happened.

Ungodly people are referred to as plants the Father “has not planted” (Matt 15:13). In the sense of our text, we were “planted” in expectation of the fruit that would follow – like the planting of a vineyard (Matt 21:33; Mk 12:1; Lk 13:6). Planting is much like burial. What is planted is placed beneath the ground. But here an additional aspect of our baptism is unveiled. Our burial has been like placing a seed in the ground from which new things will come.

In a strict etymological sense, the word “planted” can mean engrafted, or becoming a part of. Looking at our baptism from this perspective, we come into a union with Christ’s death whereby its benefits pass to us, like the life of the tree passes into the branch that has been engrafted into it.

THE LIKENESS OF HIS DEATH

Why does the Spirit say the required death is a “likeness?” The word “likeness” comes from a specific term meaning “that which is made after the likeness of something.” It also means “an outward resemblance.”

This word is used five times (including our text) in the New Covenant writings, and enforces the intention of this text. (1) Gentile idolaters changed the glory of God “into an image made like unto man,” birds, four-footed beasts, and creeping things (Rom 1:23). (2) Romans 5:14 reminds us that those between Adam and Moses died, even though they had not sinned “after the similitude of Adam’s transgression.” (3) Jesus is said to have been sent into the world “in the likeness of sinful flesh” (Rom 8:3). (4) He is also said to have taken upon Himself “the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men” (Phil 2:7).

Christ’s death is the preeminent death. The death in our text has validity only because we are joined to Him. Our death has no efficacy of its own. Christ’s death is powerful, ours is only in the likeness of His death.

The Tone of the Text

The tone of the text is undeniable. In nature, there is a finality to death that is morose. But here, death leads to life. Death is not the end of the matter, but rather is its beginning. By using the expression “planted together in the likeness of His death,” the Spirit is saying a resurrection is expected, and will come.

CERTAINLY WE SHALL BE

“... certainly we also shall be in the likeness of His resurrection.” Other versions read, “we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection,”^{KJV} “we will certainly also be united with him in his resurrection.”^{NIV} This is something that is sure and unwavering. It is not possible for those united with Jesus in His death to come short of being united with Him in His resurrection life.

Again, our resurrection is a “likeness,” deriving all of its power from Christ’s resurrection. Apart from Christ’s resurrection life, we are confined to the old life. Thus, our baptism becomes effective because Jesus is risen from the dead. This is precisely what First Peter 3:21 states. “... in the days of Noah, during the construction of teaching is rarely heard in the Christian world. Even though it is given to assure the hearts of “God’s elect” (Rom 8:33), it has been withheld in preference of teaching that promotes sectarianism, personal careers, and institutionalism.

It is not possible for those united with Jesus in His death to come short of being united with Him in His resurrection life.

the ark, in which a few, that is, eight persons, were brought safely through the water. And corresponding to that, baptism now saves you . . . through the resurrection of Jesus Christ.^{NASB}

CONCLUSION

As you can see, the teaching of the Spirit in this section is very powerful. It is an exposition of what occurred when our sins were remitted and we were given “the gift or righteousness” (Rom 5:17). It should also be apparent to you that this

What little is being said about baptism these days generally serves to only obscure what this passage teaches. God’s people are suffering at the hand of preachers and self-acclaimed teachers. Many choose to ignore the subject altogether, while others argue against baptism, relegating it to the class of “works,” whereby men cannot be saved. In all of this nonsense, the people of God have suffered hurt. They have been deprived of a spiritual touchstone from which remarkable confidence can come.

THE OLD MAN IS CRUCIFIED

“⁶ Knowing this, that our old man was crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves of sin.”

Here is something that is intended to be known, or comprehended with understanding. This is not a dead tenet of some creed, but a life-sustaining statement of reality. Already, the remarkable power of spiritual knowledge has been emphasized.

- We know the Law speaks to those under it, to stop the mouths of all men and render them guilty before God (3:19).
- We know that tribulation results in endurance, or spiritual stamina (5:3).
- We know that endurance results in experience, or proven character (5:4a).
- We know that proven character results in a confident hope (5:4b).
- We know that all who have been baptized were put into Christ’s death (6:3).

We are not, then, dealing with religious speculations or opinions. This is experiential knowledge—knowledge that is acquired in our participation with Christ. What will now be declared by the Spirit is already known intuitively by the one united with Christ. It is not enough, however, to sense these things. They must be comprehended or Satan will gain the advantage over us through his subtleties and delusions

OUR OLD MAN

“... our old man was crucified with Him.” Our death to sin will now be explained in a most vivid way. This passage will also prepare us for the teaching of the following chapter, which expounds more fully on the nature and presence of OUR “old man.”

What Is OUR “Old Man?”

First, it is something that belongs to us—“OUR old man.” Other versions translate it “our old self,”^{NASB,NIV,NRSV} “our old sinful selves,”^{NLT} and “our former self.”^{NJB} The Amplified Bible reads “our old (unrenewed) self.” These later versions are actually more of a commentary than they are translations. I have observed that those with a penchant for precise translations rarely, if ever, deal with passages like this.

For those who are interested, the Greek words employed here are παλαιός ἡμῶν ἄνθρωπος. They are all simplistic and uncomplicated words. Translated literally, and in the sequence written, they are “old and worn out, our man.” The word translated “old” means “opposed to what is new, antiquated, worn out, obsolete, and an old part.” The word translated “man” is transliterated (letter for letter) “anthropos,” and means “a human being, man, or person.”

There is, then, a part of us that is not changed in regeneration—“our old man.” He is not rendered extinct, but must be “crucified,” or pinioned upon the cross with Jesus, until he finally expires. Theologically, this is called “the sinful nature,” although that is too impersonal, as though we were dealing with a sort of force that lacks personality.

“The old man” is “the flesh” of Romans seven and eight. It is “the natural man” of First Corinthians 2:14, and “the flesh” of Galatians 5:17. This is the part of us coming from Adam, whose image we have surely born (1 Cor 15:45-49).

Even though we died and been buried with Christ, there remains a part of us that must be subdued in the power of the resurrection. This is “the old man” that is to be “put off” in preference for putting on “the new man” (Eph 4:22-24; Col 3:9-10). This is the part of us that sins, and is only capable of sinning.

When we begin our life in Jesus, “our old man” is crucified for us. He is put upon a place of confinement and restraint, so that he cannot exercise control over us. Like the impenitent thief, he cries out to be released. “And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on Him, saying, If thou be Christ, save Thyself and us” (Lk 23:39).

The essential thing to learn in this passage is that this part of our nature is restrained by the cross. But we must know this in order to gain the victory. If we are joined to Jesus in His death, burial, and resurrection, the unregenerate part of us has been “crucified with Him.” This parallels “dead to sin” (6:2).

THE BODY OF SIN

“ . . . that the body of sin might be done away.” The reason for crucifixion of the old man is precise and large. It is in order that “the body of sin might be done away,” or “destroyed.”^{KJV} Most translations, with very few exceptions, read “the body of sin.” Some, tainted by the limitations of their translators, read, “sinful body,”^{RSV} “that sin may lose its power in our lives,”^{NLT} and “the old self which belonged to sin.”^{NJB}

This is not our flesh and blood bodies, although they are certainly “vile” (Phil 3:20). This is the mass of sin, the totality of what we are apart from Christ. It is another way of saying “You must be born again” (John 3:7). Not only must the new come to us, the old must go. That “going” process begins when we are baptized into Christ and the “old man” is crucified. Then, he begins to die. Because this “old man” is tied to our bodies, and remains as long as they do, his presence cannot be eliminated until they have been separated from us in death.

“The body of sin” is also mentioned in the second chapter of Colossians. There its destruction is also related to our baptism. “In Him you were also circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, by putting off the body death apart from the cross of Christ. He cannot be “destroyed” by disciplines and procedures contrived by men (Col 2:19-23). This is a critical aspect of redemptive truth that is scarcely mentioned in our time. I should not be surprised if myriad of believers, in fact, have never so much as heard the truth shouted out in this text.

NO LONGER SLAVES

“ . . . that we should no longer be slaves of sin.” If the “old man” is of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ, buried with Him in baptism, in which you also were raised with Him through faith in the working of God, who raised Him from the dead” NKJV (2:11-12). In this text, the removal of the mass of sin is related to the “circumcision of Christ” rather than to His cross. The cross is WHERE the “old man” is dealt with. “Circumcision” is HOW Jesus separates the “old man” from our essential person. He cuts the “flesh,” or “old man,” away from us. While it resides with us, living, as it were, in our house of clay, it is really not a part of us. In Christ we are a complex, and oft confusing, dichotomy—an “old man” and a “new man” dwelling in a frail tent.

Every advantage is given to us when we become a new creation in Christ Jesus. Our sins are remitted. Our conscience is purged. We are reconciled to God. We are given the Holy Spirit. We have peace with God. We are granted access into the grace of God, wherein we stand. Our old man is crucified.

The “old man” cannot be made good, nor can he be reformed. His destiny is “destruction.” Thus he is “crucified” in order to end his ruthless rule. Our text will affirm precisely WHY this action was taken. Beginning with regeneration, the “old man” dies by degrees, just as we are changed from “glory to glory” by degrees (2 Cor 3:18).

An important thing must be seen here. The “old man” cannot be put to not crucified, we will not cease to serve sin. Everyone begins new life in Christ with the crucifixion of the “old man.” That is standard procedure.

Every advantage is given to us when we become a new creation in Christ Jesus. Our sins are remitted. Our conscience is purged. We are reconciled to God. We are given the Holy Spirit. We have peace with God. We are granted access into the grace of God, wherein we stand. Our old man is crucified. In view of that, and much more, it ought to be apparent that we “should no longer be the slaves of sin.”

It goes without saying that as long as men are not joined to Christ in His death, burial, and resurrection, sin has dominion over them, and they are slaves to it. “No longer” means we were slaves of sin until we were joined to Christ.

Once again, you can see that sin has no place in Christ. Provision has been made for the remission of sin, but none has been made for continuance in it. A propitiation has been supplied for sin, but no allowance it made for it to remain. Life must be toward God, or it will not remain. Apart from God, we cannot survive.

DEAD AND FREED FROM SIN

“For he who has died has been freed from sin.” Here is the genius of the New Covenant. Sin is overcome by death. Sin, like the Law, which is its “strength” (1 Cor 15:56) can only dominate a person who is alive to it. This is not a death that can be effected by men. We are “buried with Him by baptism INTO death.” We actually participate in Christ’s death. Not only did He die vicariously in our place, we also died with Him. As it is written, “For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God” (Col 3:3). The words “are dead” equate to those of our text, “has died.” It is an action that has already taken place. The passage with which we are dealing traces your death back to your baptism, when you died with Christ, were buried with Him, and raised with Him.

To be “freed from sin” does not mean the believer no longer has to grapple or struggle with it. It does not mean he will never again have to acknowledge sin, or that he no longer requires an Advocate before the Father. Rather, it means that in Christ we are free from the dominion of sin and from servitude to it.

The word translated “freed” is δικαιώται, and is the word elsewhere translated “justified.” The idea here is that we are free from the guilt and power of sin—“justified from all things” (Acts 13:39). Our baptism into Christ’s death resulted in our procurement of the forgiveness that was based upon that death. This “freed from sin” speaks of a release from the guilt of sin and from its domination. It follows, therefore, that until remission is experienced, sin will dominate over us.

Once more, it is our identity with Christ’s death that brings death to sin. That death involves complete justification from every infraction of the law. It also includes the imputation of the righteousness of God. It is not possible for sin to dominate the individual that lives with an acute awareness of these two realities. That awareness, brought by faith, diffuses the power of sin.

WHAT WE BELIEVE

“^s Now if we died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him.” If you were to ask the average Christian today what they approached that way in Scripture. “Believing” speaks of what we have embraced—things on which we are depending. Chiefly “believing” centers in

When men do not live for Christ, it is because they have not died to sin. If they have not died to sin, it is because they are not been united with Christ in His death, and not risen to walk in newness of life.

If you have been in Christ for any length of time, you know how exceedingly rare this kind of life is. It should be a great concern to us when the principle aspect of spiritual life is rare among professed believers. I have even witnessed its rarity among religious leaders—preachers and teachers. It is time for God’s people to insist those who teach and preach declare the truth of the Gospel.

When men do not live for Christ, it is because they have not died to sin. If they have not died to sin, it is because they are not been united with Christ in His death, and not risen to walk in newness of life. We know this is the case because of the certainty of our text. “Now if we have died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him.”^{NASB} We believe that because it is the truth. Faith does not doubt this affirmation, but takes it for granted, knowing that what God has promised, He is “able to perform” (4:21).

While we will surely be gathered to the Lord and be forever with Him, that is not the life of reference. This text refers to living now—being sensitive to the Lord, and in active fellowship with Him. Spiritual life is to be expected! Walking in the light is not the exception, but the rule. We believe and delight in this reality.

believe, you would be faced with a host of contradicting answers. Very few would probably answer in the manner described in Scripture. “But WE BELIEVE that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they” (Acts 15:11). “Now if we be dead with Christ, WE BELIEVE that we shall also live with Him” (Rom 6:8). “For if WE BELIEVE that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him” (1 Thess 4:14). “And he answered and said, I BELIEVE that Jesus Christ is the Son of God” (Acts 8:37).

Notice the absence of a creedal emphasis, or the citation of a prepared list of theological tenets. Although that approach is quite common, believing is not Christ Jesus and what He has done.

“IF we died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him.” The life of reference is the “newness of life” in which we walk following our baptism. This is not a new way of life, or a new discipline of life. It is not living according to a new set of rules, or adhering to a new set of doctrines. As valuable as all of those things may appear to be, they are totally lacking of spiritual power. Living with Christ is being in His “yoke” (Matt 11:29-30), walking in fellowship with Him (1 Cor 1:9), and remaining seated with Him in heavenly places (Eph 2:6). If we have really “died with Christ,” this is exactly what we will do. There is no way to be united with Christ in His death and not come alive.

DEATH IS ONCE

“⁴⁶ Knowing that Christ, having been raised from the dead, dies no more. Death no longer has dominion over Him. ¹⁰ For the death that He died, He died to sin once for all; but the life that He lives, He lives to God. Christ's death stands for all valid death – it was “once.” the Scriptures make a point of the singularity of Christ's death.

- “For such an High Priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens; Who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this He did ONCE, when He offered up himself” (Heb 7:27).
- “But now ONCE in the end of the world hath He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment: so Christ was ONCE offered to bear the sins of many . . . ” (Heb 9:26-28).
- “By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ ONCE for all” (Heb 10:10).

HAVING BEEN RAISED

Although death is powerful, it is no match for resurrection life! Christ's resurrection vaulted Him beyond the reach of death. Having conquered the domain and prince of death, death was rendered impotent against the Lord's Christ.

The telling point being driven home by the Holy Spirit is that when we were raised up with Christ, we were moved into a realm that is superior to death. He will prove His point by showing us the effect of Christ's resurrection.

DIES NO MORE

The NIV reads, “For we know that since Christ was raised from the dead, He cannot die again.” Notice, this is something that “we know,” and that knowledge is most powerful.

There is a Kingdom principle to be seen here. Deliverance renders impotent the one or thing which held us captive. This is confirmed in Christ Jesus. He did descend into “the deep” once (Rom 10:7). However, having risen from that low place, he will never again descend into it—for any reason!

These words are particularly relevant for us, since we have died with Jesus, been buried with Him, and have been raised with Him.

DEATH NO LONGER HAS DOMINION OVER HIM

The dominion death had over Jesus differs significantly from the dominion it had over us. It only dominated Jesus because He bore our sins in His body, and it only did that for only three days. Ultimately, it was not possible for the Son of God to be held in the grip of death (Acts 2:24). Even then, our Lord submitted to death. It did not take Him captive.

The poignant point being made is that resurrection is the ultimate triumph. It was so with Jesus, and it is so with those who have been joined to Him.

In view of this, our baptism has implications for the future, as well as for our past. In it, we were loosed from the power of Satan and cleansed from the defilement of sin. But that means we are no longer servants of sin. It means sin has no more power over us. As we will find in the exhortation following verse ten, that victory actually depends upon whether or not we grasp this truth by faith.

HE DIED TO SIN

Jesus did not “die to sin” in the sense of ceasing to commit it. Emphatically, He was “without sin,” though “tempted in all points “as we are” (Heb 4:15).

When God the Father “laid” upon Jesus “the iniquities of us all” (Isa 53:6), the transaction was very real. These sins were felt by Jesus as He bore them. In fact, He shuddered at the thought, and sought to have the bitter cup taken from Him (Matt 26:39-44). In bearing the sins of the world, He became personally responsible for them.

In some sense, the defilement of them was felt by Him, and unspeakable suffering resulted. The soul of Jesus had never been touched with the contamination of sin. He had never felt the pangs of regret that accompany transgression. Nor, indeed, had He ever sought forgiveness or experienced alienation from God. But when He bore the sins of the world in His body on the tree, He entered into the most bitter experience of His life. No one will ever fully know the involvements of that death, and what it took to rescue fallen humanity.

Under the administration of the Law, many spotless and innocent victims died because of man's sin. Jesus “died to sin once.” When the temple was dedicated, Solomon offered 22,000 oxen and 120,000 sheep as “peace offerings” (1 Kgs 8:63). In Christ's case, one Lamb was offered one time, and it was adequate for all sin of all time. “For the death that He died, He died to sin, once for all.”^{NASB} It was an effective death, and thus never again needed to be experienced. It did what was required, and thus was sufficient.

The second verse of this chapter affirmed that we died “to sin.” We are not, however, dead to its influence, for we still struggle with it, as confirmed in chapter seven. We died to sin in the sense of being freed from guilt. To the degree we see this, sin does lose its power over us.

A parallel occurs when we die with Jesus to sin. It is an effective death, and thus need only be experienced once. It is the kind of death God required, and thus it too is sufficient.

The second verse of this chapter affirmed that we died “to sin.” We are not, however, dead to its influence, for we still struggle with it, as confirmed in chapter seven. We died to sin in the sense of being freed from guilt. To the degree we see this, sin does lose its power over us.

Christ's death to sin is in the same sense as verse two. He did not die to the power of sin, for sin never did have power over Him. He died to the guilt of sin—our guilt, which he bore.

HE LIVES TO GOD

In nature, life has a purpose, and death is merely the conclusion of that life. Death, apart from Christ, has no purpose, other than to validate the penalty for sin.

This is not the case, however, in salvation. The purpose of death is to allow us to enter into life. Thus it was with Jesus. The life Jesus now lives is “to God.” This is not His life on earth, but His life in heaven. Further, this is Christ's life as a glorified man. His sole purpose for living now is to fulfill the will of God.

In a sense, this was also true when He was upon the earth. There were, however, some mitigating factors. When young, He was “subject to His parents” (Lk 2:51). In consideration of those who received tribute money, Jesus paid tax for Himself and Peter (Matt 17:27). All of this prepared Him to make a complete and satisfactory sacrifice.

Now, Jesus is living “to God” in a fuller sense. He “ever lives to make intercession” for the saints according to the will of God (Heb 7:25). He is “bringing many sons to glory,” thus fulfilling the requirement of God. This is the appointed consequence of being raised from death—life toward God!

RECKONING AND HOW TO DO IT

“¹¹ Likewise you also, reckon yourselves to be dead indeed to sin, but alive to God in Christ Jesus our Lord.” Now we come to the point of being established. It is founded upon the firm realities of Christ's death and resurrection. It confirms the truth of remission and the consequent imputation of righteousness. When we died with Jesus, were buried with Him, and raised to walk in the newness of life, a very real condition began. It is something on which we can “reckon.”

RECKONING

things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think (λογίζεσθε) on these things.”

In Matthew 11:31 the word is translated “reasoned.” In Mark 15:28 it is translated “numbered.” Other translations include “despised” (Acts 19:27), “thinketh” (Rom 2:3), “counted” (Rom 2:6), “conclude” (Rom 3:28), “esteemeth” (Rom 14:14), “thought” (1

read, “Even so consider yourselves to be dead to sin,” ^{NASB} “In the same way, count yourselves dead to sin,” ^{NIV} “So you also must consider yourselves dead to sin,” ^{NRSV} “So do you also reckon that you are dead to sin,” ^{Douay-Rheims} “Even so see yourselves as dead to sin,” ^{BBE} “In the same way, you must see yourselves as being dead to sin.” ^{NLT}

It may appear on the surface as though this is a forced way of thinking, and does not comport with reality. But that is NOT the case! We really did die with Christ. We really were buried with Him and raised with Him. The fact that these were spiritual transactions does not mean they were not real. Their reality is in another realm.

The reason this kind of thinking—“dead indeed to sin”—does not seem right is because of the presence of the “old man,” or the Adamic nature. The vigor with which he speaks to us can lead us to believe he has more strength that he really does. Our thinking, however, must not be driven by the awareness of our unregenerate portion, but by the “new man”—who we are in Christ Jesus.

When we are confronted with temptation, we must reason: “I have died with Jesus. I have been buried by baptism into Christ's death. I have been raised up by the glory of the Father to walk in the newness of life. Sin has no claim on me now, for I have been released from all guilt, and by God's grace can say “NO” to all ungodliness and unrighteousness.” That is reasoning after a godly manner,

As you can see from this usage, reckoning involves thinking that motivates. It allows for a certain perspective of things—a specific mind-set. “Reckoning” enables a person to see things from a particular perspective.

The word “reckon” reflects a sort of Kingdom logic—a proper way of thinking. The word comes from λογίζεσθε (log-iz-es-the), from which our word “logic” comes. It reflects a WAY of thinking more that WHAT is thought. It is reasoning that proceeds from the comprehension of what God has revealed. Linguistically the word literally means “thinking according to logical rules.” It includes the subordinate meaning, “to take into account, to make an account of, to count up and weigh the reasons, to gather or infer, and to consider or take into account.” ^{Thayer}

This precise word is also used in Philippians 4:8. There it is translated “think.” “Finally, brethren, whatsoever Cor 13:11), “suppose” (2 Cor 11:5), and “charge” (2 Tim 4:16).

As you can see from this usage, reckoning involves thinking that motivates. It allows for a certain perspective of things—a specific mind-set. “Reckoning” enables a person to see things from a particular perspective.

Our text will instruct us on how to think—how to approach living in “this present evil world.” This manner of thinking will be based upon reality.

DEAD INDEED TO SIN

“... reckon yourselves to be dead indeed to sin...” Other versions and in strict harmony with the truth. When you reason in this way, faith rises to its full strength, laying hold of Divine power and being sensitive to the leading of the Holy Spirit.

Notice, you are to reason that you are “dead INDEED to sin.” The word “indeed” means “surely, truly, and certainly.”^{Strong’s} Our death to sin is as real and effective as the death of Jesus, in which you have participated. The truth of this will be confirmed to you through your faith. When it is confirmed, you will be able to reason, or “reckon” upon the basis of truth.

ALIVE TO GOD

“...reckon yourselves... alive to God in Christ Jesus our Lord.” To be “alive to God” means that you are able to live for His glory, and do so with joy and satisfaction. Regeneration sensitizes the heart to God. It really does! Because of Christ, God has effected a very real change in us. Our stony hearts have been removed, and we have been given hearts of flesh—hearts that are malleable and can be enlarged (Psa 119:32).

Being alive to God is living in concert with our new heart. It involves walking in the Spirit and living by faith (Gal 5:16,25; Heb 10:38). It is walking in the light and looking unto Jesus (1 John 1:7; Heb 12:1-2). It is being led by the Spirit and being taught by Jesus (Rom 8:13; Eph 4:20). It is putting off the old man and putting on the new man (Eph 4:22-24; Col 3:9-10).

All of this, however, does not take place automatically. I have often heard men preach and teach that bearing fruit takes no effort. They say you never hear a fruit tree groaning in an effort to bring forth fruit. It all may have a pleasant ring to it, but it is utterly false. Spiritual life cannot be maintained without extensive effort by the redeemed.

Not Mere Self-Effort

This effort is not mere self-effort, but is joined by the mighty power of God. One of our chief involvements is that of reckoning—of reasoning from the proper perspective. Having Kingdom logic, so to speak, is anything but simplistic. Ponder how often you have been distorted in your thinking, and the effects that were resulted from that thinking. You had to employ spiritual weaponry to cast down those imaginations, and take captive every thought to make it obedient to Christ (2 Cor 10:4-5). What person is willing to say that is easy, and requires no effort?

Reckoning in harmony with the truth of God is an intensive activity, and is vigorously opposed by the devil. It requires constant exposure to the Gospel, a strong faith, and an alert spirit. Accept the Spirit’s challenge to “reckon.”

IN CHRIST JESUS OUR LORD

Our aliveness to God is strictly owing to our affiliation with Jesus. Being united with Him in death, burial, and resurrection has brought the life upon which we are to reckon. In view of this, our reasoning will be sound and effective only if we remain in conscious fellowship with Christ Jesus. There is no way to reason properly apart from Jesus.

DO NOT LET SIN REIGN

“¹² Therefore do not let sin reign in your mortal body, that you should obey it in its lusts.” The manner in which the Spirit reasons is unusually powerful. When your heart is able to receive and delight in these words, their impact will be most effective. Again, it should be observed that this kind of talk differs significantly from what is regularly served up to many believers.

By saying “Therefore,” the Spirit builds upon the truth that has just been affirmed. It is as though He said, “In view of the fact that we are dead to sin and alive to God . . . ”

DO NOT LET SIN REIGN

Other versions read, “do not let sin exercise dominion,”^{NRSV} “Do not let sin be ruling,”^{BBE} “Do not let sin control the way you live,”^{NLT} “you must not allow sin to reign.”^{NJB}

We learn from this that it is sin’s nature to rule, or dominate. It refuses to be subordinate, demanding to sit upon the throne of our lives. Prior to being in Christ, sin did exercise control over us. But that situation has been changed by our unity with Christ. Now we can reject sin’s demand for dominion. One man has said, “Since grace in you, sin should not.”^{John Gill}

This exhortation is not based upon a moral requirement, but a spiritual condition. We are not told to into which we have been placed encourage us to do it. Our unity with Christ in His death, burial, and resurrection demands that we do it!

If sin reigns over those in Christ, it is not out of any necessity. Nothing about life in Christ encourages sin or gives it permission to rule over us. Everything about salvation discourages sin and refuse to allow sin to reign because it is a requirement, but because it can be done. The remission of our sins enables us to do this! The imputation of the righteousness of God to us empowers us to do it. The gift of the Holy Spirit provides the direction and power to do it. The heavenly places provides for dominion over it.

This exhortation is not based upon a moral requirement, but a spiritual condition. We are not told to refuse to allow sin to reign because it is a requirement, but because it can be done. The remission of our sins enables us to do this! The imputation of the righteousness of God to us empowers us to do it.

YOUR MORTAL BODY

The Spirit is very specific here. He does not say not to allow sin to reign in our minds, but in our mortal bodies. This is the part of us that is temporal, and will pass away. It has been consigned to “dust,” and is the vehicle through which sin is expressed. The challenge of the Spirit makes the matter doable.

We are to stop sin from erupting in man,” or “flesh,” from us, its remnants remain in our bodies. Do not imagine that “remnant” means assertiveness is not possible, or that “the flesh” is not a formidable foe. Such a thought will surely provide a place where Satan can work.

kingdom of Christ and God” (Eph 5:3-5).

This commission is much like that given to Israel – driving out the unwanted inhabitants of the land. “But if ye will not drive out the inhabitants of the land from before you; then it shall come to pass, that those which ye let remain of them shall be pricks in your eyes, and thorns in your sides, and shall vex you in the land wherein ye dwell” (Num 33:55).

Keeping sin from expressing itself in our bodies is particularly important. Our bodies have been “bought with a price,” and do not belong to us (1 Cor 6:15-20). Thus sins of the body are not to be named among believers. The eruption of sin in our bodies brings unusual defilement.

So it is with those in Christ Jesus. If they do not refuse to allow sin to reign in their “mortal bodies,” they are in for a difficult time, and eventual defeat. It may even mean their condemnation. Christians who fall into transgression have allowed sin to reign in their bodies. They have not reckoned, or reasoned, correctly, and thus have sinned.

us—that is our first responsibility. James put it this way, “Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness” (James 1:21). The word “superfluity” means “overflow,” ^{NKJV} “rank growth,” ^{NRSV} “abounding of wickedness,” ^{Darby} “overweight of evil,” ^{BBE} and “superabundance of evil.” ^{Young’s}

Keeping sin from expressing itself in our bodies is particularly important. Our bodies have been “bought with a price,” and do not belong to us (1 Cor 6:15-20). Thus sins of the body are not to be named among believers. The eruption of sin in our bodies brings unusual defilement. It is written, “But fornication and all uncleanness or covetousness, let it not even be named among you, as is fitting for saints; neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor coarse jesting, which are not fitting, but rather giving of thanks. For this you know, that no fornicator, unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, has any inheritance in the

There is no need to attempt to explain the eruption of sin. It is best to confess it quickly, and get back to the business of not allowing sin to control our bodies. There is grace to do this, but it does have to be appropriated by the believer. It requires earnestness and diligence. It is possible, however, because we have been united with the Lord Jesus Christ.

The idea is that the remnant of sin remaining in us breaks out in expression. Several versions convey this thought. “All that remains of wickedness,” ^{NASB} “all that remains of wickedness,” ^{RWB} and “remnants of evil.” ^{NJB} Remember, although Jesus has circumcised the “old

WHAT TO DO WITH YOUR MEMBERS

“¹³ And do not present your members as instruments of unrighteousness to sin, but present yourselves to God as being alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness to God.” We are custodians of all of our faculties or “members”—the means through which we express ourselves. Other versions read, “the members of your body,” ^{NASB} “the parts of your body,” ^{NIV} “your members,” ^{NRSV} and any part of your body. ^{NLT}

Every part of our persons can be employed in either good or evil, righteousness of unrighteousness, for God or for the devil. Internally our minds, emotion, and will are involved. Our temperament, attitude, loves, and hates, are involved. Thoughts, purposes, desires, and intentions are included. Think of outward faculties. Our eyes, ears, and mouths, or tongues, are involved. There are hands, feet, and the whole body itself. All of these are a stewardship, and are to be controlled by the “new man.”

DO NOT GIVE YOUR MEMBERS TO SIN

Your various faculties are not to become “instruments of unrighteousness to sin.” Other versions read “to sin, as instruments of wickedness,” ^{NIV} “as instruments of iniquity unto sin,” ^{Douay-Rheims} “to sin as the instruments of wrongdoing,” ^{BBE} “become a tool of wickedness,” ^{NLT} “to sin to be used as instruments of evil.” ^{NJB}

While men are prone to excuse their actions, the Spirit solemnly admonishes us not allow our faculties to promote iniquity and commit sin. Since we have died with Jesus, been buried with Him, and raised with Him, such concessions are inexcusable.

GIVE YOUR MEMBERS TO GOD

“... but present yourselves to God as being alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness to God.” Notice the comparison. Presenting our “members” to sin is compared with presenting them “to God.” God can use our thoughts, words, and deeds. He can use our hearing, our wills, and our objectives. He can use our eyes, ears, and mouth. But they must be “presented” to Him.

This is the very thing described in the twelfth chapter of Romans. “Therefore, I urge you, brothers, in view of God’s mercy, to offer your bodies as living sacrifices, holy and pleasing to God—this is your spiritual act of worship. Do not conform any longer to the pattern of this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind. Then you will be able to test and approve what God's will is--his good, pleasing and perfect will." (Rom 12:1-2). Here we see that spiritual progress and comprehension depend upon the presentation of our faculties to God.

This is the reason for subduing the rise of sin in our members--that we might give ourselves fully to the Lord.

The word "instruments" means instruments of war, or weapons. The word comes from δπλα and means "arms used for warfare, weapons," and are of an offensive or aggressive nature. This word is translated "armor" in Romans 13:12 and "weapons" in 2 Corinthians 10:4).

Think of it: your various "members" are actually weapons to be used against sin and for righteousness, or against righteousness and for sin. Those who engage in unrighteous acts are engaged in a war against the truth of God. Their unrighteousness actually "holds back" or suppresses the truth (Rom 1:18). There is a militant posture assumed in unbelief.

On the other hand, those who use their "members" as instruments of righteousness are fighting against iniquity. Their expressions have a suppressing effect upon sin as well as promoting truth. What a stewardship have been given!

THE IMPACT OF GRACE UPON SINNING

¹⁴ For sin shall not have dominion over you, for you are not under law but under grace. "What a wonderful sound to the ears of the elect! "For sin shall not be master over you, for you are not under law, but under grace," NASB "For sin shall not be your master, because you are not under law, but under grace," NIV "For sin will have no dominion over you, since you are not under law but under grace," NRSV and "Sin is no longer your master, for you are no longer subject to the law, which enslaves you to sin. Instead, you are free by God's grace." NLT

Settle it in your mind that this is a precise statement of the case. It is said with our unity with Jesus in mind: in His death, burial, and resurrection. Our situation in Christ is real, and therefore so are the effects of being in Him. If this single statement of truth were fully embraced by the religious multitudes, there would be such a dramatic and noticeable change in their behavior

SIN WILL NOT DOMINATE

What a powerful affirmation! It is declared within the context of presenting our members as instruments of righteousness unto God. This will not happen automatically, for we have already been admonished to not let sin reign in our mortal bodies. If we exert ourselves in response to the Word, this will happen: sin will not have dominion over us.

The Real Situation

This word brings great comfort to the believer--the one who is trusting in Christ and presenting his members to God. Because the remnants of sin remain in us, we walk in a sort of halting way--much like Jacob after he was blessed. In order for the patriarch to be blessed, his thigh was dislocated (Gen 32:24-26). The result was "he limped on his hip" NKJV

The presence of the "old man" is like having a hip out of joint! If I would do good, "evil is present with me" (Rom 7:21). The flesh lusts against the Spirit, causing us to limp like Jacob because of the muscle that shrank (v 31).

So it is with us! The presence of the "old man" is like having a hip out of joint! If I would do good, "evil is present with me" (Rom 7:21). The flesh lusts against the Spirit, causing us to limp like Jacob (Gal 5:17). Thus, when we read this word, "Sin shall not have dominion over you," our hearts leap, with joy. This is the Word of the Lord--what the Spirit is saying to the churches. It can be heartily embraced without any fear of being disappointed.

It is to be understood that this promise is contingent upon faith, which alone can take hold of Divine commitments (Heb 6:12; 11:33).

YOU ARE NOT UNDER LAW

One of the reasons cited for sin failing to dominate us is that we are "not under law." This expression does not mean we are "without law," or are under no obligation to our Creator and Savior.

We are not under a covenant of works: i.e., "For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them" (Rom 10:5). To be "under law" is to be governed by such an arrangement. Sin results from this because the demands of the law exceed the capabilities of men. Because of this, sin gains the dominance.

We are not under the yoke of the Law. That is, we are not rebels against God, being controlled by a law that contradicts our nature. We are not under the letter of the law, which kills because of its contradiction to our nature (2 Cor 3:6). Where this circumstance exists bondage to sin ensues, for "the strength of sin is the law" (1 Cor 15:56). Because the law cannot change our affection or nature, it vigorously opposes all who are not born again. It is like a great fan that causes the lusts and wicked desires to flame up in expression (Rom 7:8,11).

When, however, we are identified with Jesus in His death, burial, and resurrection, our nature is so changed that the Law becomes our friend, not our ruler. We love to ponder it, hide it in our heart, and meditate upon it night and day. That very law is written upon our hearts and put into our minds (Heb 10:16).

YOU ARE UNDER GRACE

The other reason cited for the failure of sin to dominate us is that we are “under grace.” In this situation, God is “for us,” not against us (Rom 8:31). We are under a covenant of blessing, first promised to Abraham (Gen 12:3; 22:18), then confirmed in Jesus (Acts 3:26).

Being “under grace” is being in a state of reconciliation to God (2 Cor 5:18-20), having access to God (Rom 5:2), and being accepted by God (Eph 1:6). Sins have been remitted, your name is written in the Lamb’s book of life, and “the gift of righteousness” has been received (Rom 5:17). That is involved in being “under grace.”

Here, “under grace,” we have a Divine commitment. “I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee” (Heb 13:5). Let there be no timorous souls among us! Throw yourself into the holy work of yielding your members as instruments of righteousness. Give yourself to God! Refuse to yield them as instruments of unrighteousness to sin. You are not under law, but have died to the sin which sin reveals. You are under grace, and thus can triumph over sin.

CONCLUSION

When the Holy Spirit traces our death, burial, and resurrection with Christ to our baptism, He puts the truth well within our reach. He also confirms the utter absurdity of looking at baptism as though it was a purely human work, unrelated to salvation. This view of baptism is to be preached with power to the people of God. It is a great booster to confidence, as well as a solid exhortation to holiness, presented on a firm foundation.

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 20

FROM SERVING SIN TO SERVING GOD

6:15 What then? Shall we sin because we are not under law but under grace? Certainly not! ¹⁶ Do you not know that to whom you present yourselves slaves to obey, you are that one's slaves whom you obey, whether of sin leading to death, or of obedience leading to righteousness? ¹⁷ But God be thanked that though you were slaves of sin, yet you obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine to which you were delivered. ¹⁸ And having been set free from sin, you became slaves of righteousness. ¹⁹ I speak in human terms because of the weakness of your flesh. For just as you presented your members as slaves of uncleanness, and of lawlessness leading to more lawlessness, so now present your members as slaves of righteousness for holiness. ²⁰ For when you were slaves of sin, you were free in regard to righteousness. ²¹ What fruit did you have then in the things of which you are now ashamed? For the end of those things is death. ²² But now having been set free from sin, and having become slaves of God, you have your fruit to holiness, and the end, everlasting life. ²³ For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord. – Romans 6:15-23 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

The revelations of this section of Scripture are some of the most arresting in all of Scripture. Throughout history, few believers have been able to apprehend them. There have even been lengthy periods of time where they have been almost totally obscured. It is evident that Satan has done his utmost to remove these proclamations from man's consideration.

However, whenever the focus of believers has been placed on these things, renewal has taken place, and vast bastions of false thought have been cast down. The power of the Reformation Movement, for example, is seen in the way in which it toppled false theology that had dominated the Christian world for over 1,000 years. When men can see the truth of the Gospel, Satan can no longer hold them. The Gospel proclaims deliverance to the captives and the setting at liberty of those who are bruised (Lk 4:18). There is no bondage as fierce and unrelenting as religious bondage, and no bruise so grievous as that inflicted by spurious religion. Throughout history, only the faithful and powerful proclamation of the Gospel has been able to bring freedom to such souls.

A BRIEF SUMMARY

Because of the strength of this section of Scripture, I want to labor to keep before you the wonderful revelations contained in it. Our faith will be as solid as our apprehension of these realities.

- RIGHTEOUSNESS ANNOUNCED. The announcement of a righteousness from God is made by the Gospel of Christ (1:16-17).
- NEED DECLARED. The need for this righteousness is proclaimed in 1:19-3:20.
- MEANS PROCLAIMED. The means of appropriating this righteousness is faith, as affirmed in 3:21-4:25.
- EFFECTS DECLARED. The effects of righteousness are powerfully delineated in 5:1-11.
- THE SOURCE IS AFFIRMED. Righteousness, just as sin and death,

In Regeneration, the Entirety of Life is changed as we become willing Servants of God--by Given O. Blakely

LESSON OUTLINE

- I. SHALL WE SIN? (6:15)
- II. DO YOU NOT KNOW? (6:16)
- III. GOD BE THANKED! (6:17)
- IV. SET FREE TO BECOME SLAVES (6:18)
- V. SPEAKING ACCOMMODATINGLY (6:19)
- VI. WHEN WE WERE FREE FROM RIGHTEOUSNESS (6:20)
- VII. WHAT FRUIT DID YOU HAVE THEN? (6:21)
- VIII. NOW THAT YOU HAVE FRUIT (6:22)
- IX. WAGES AND THE GIFT (6:23)

came through one—the Man Christ Jesus (5:12-19).

- ❑ THE ROLE OF THE LAW. The Law entered that “sin might increase,” confirming the absolute need of the remission of sin and the possession of a righteousness from God (5:20).
- ❑ THE EFFECTIVENESS OF GRACE. Counteracting the devastating effects of Adam’s transgression, the grace that comes through Jesus Christ reigns “through righteousness to bring eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord” (5:21).

- ❑ SIN NOT ENCOURAGED BY GRACE. The grace of God does not encourage, excuse, or condone sin in any way (6:1-2).
- ❑ DEATH TO SIN. A death to sin occurred when we were baptized into Christ’s death (6:3-14). We began life in Christ with our “old man” crucified, owing it nothing, and no longer under the dominion of the sinful nature.

Because men tend to speculate and philosophize about grace rather than embrace it, the Spirit will now teach us extensively about its effects. His teaching will assist in freeing us from the shackles of impersonal and impractical theology, which are blights of our time.

These corruptions have been popularized in our time by an emphasis on academic approaches to the things of God. A significant percentage of the church is being held captive by professed scholars and analysts. Their hold, however, can be broken by apprehending the message before us.

There will be no question about the effectiveness of grace to enable the believer to live triumphantly. Grace must be ignored and despised in order to sin. It will become apparent that God hates sin. It is contrary to His nature, and He cannot abide it. He has gone to an unimaginable extent to free us of the guilt and power of sin. His provisions are effective against sin.

The thought that men would seek to justify or excuse their involvement in sin is unthinkable. Yet, men have even created theologies that permit sin to continue in them. The Spirit will now strike down their spurious reasoning with Divine power. He will powerfully confirm that not being “under the Law” makes absolutely no provision for sin in any form. Salvation gets rid of sin, and makes no allowance for it to remain. The knowledge of this brings comfort to us. It also empowers us to fight the good fight of faith.

SHALL WE SIN?

“ 6:15 What then? Shall we sin because we are not under law but under grace? Certainly not!” It is the nature of “flesh” to justify sin. If it can do so at the expense of the grace of God, it is so much the better for it. Under the seductive influence of demons and their doctrines (1 Tim 4:1), men actually justify their sin by their theology. This is a reprehensible practice. Thus men view God as so loving, He tolerates the indulgence of His children. He is seen to be One who loves men in spite of their insolence and disobedience, even though no such representation is found in Scripture. Also, God is understood to never reject those whom He has accepted, even though there are numerous examples in Scripture that sharply conflict with that delusion: i.e., Esau (Heb 12:16-17), Saul (1 Sam 16:1), Israel (Psa 106:40), Judas (Acts 1:17-22), and etc.

The above cases represent sins of commission—of doing what was wrong.

There are others who simply do not do what is right. They fail to put on the whole armor of God (Eph 6:10-18), be sober and vigilant (1 Pet 5:8-9), and set their affection on things above (Col 3:1-3). Their lukewarmness is of little concern to them, because they entertain the notion that God is pleased enough with their profession. Their neglect is also sin, and is an attempt to exploit the grace of God, whether they are aware of it or not.

WHAT THEN?

The words “What then” mean “What is the implication?” The NLT reads, “So since God’s grace has set us free from the law, does this mean we can go on sinning?” Remember, the Spirit has affirmed, “For sin shall not be master over you, for you are not under law, but under grace.” Does this imply there is more of a tolerance of sin under grace than under Law? Are we free from any obligation to the Law. Does the fact that nothing is able to separate believers from the love of God (Rom 9:37-39) mean that sin is no longer of any consequence?

Does personal iniquity no longer have the power to separate men from God (Isa 59:2)? Some doctrines teach this is true. However, the Spirit will now show us this is NOT true. First, the Spirit will declare that sin is totally unreasonable. Second, He will confirm it is not necessary. Third, He will reveal that those who live in sin are the servants of sin, just as surely as those who do not live in sin are servants of righteousness. What we do reveals what we are and whom we serve!

Again, the Spirit forbids us to entertain the thought that grace will allow for, or encourage, sin: “God forbid!” The redemption that is in Christ Jesus makes no room for sin, only for the removal of sin! What is even more, when sin is removed, or forgiven, we are also “cleansed from all unrighteousness” by the blood of Christ (1 John 1:9). That deals with the matter of our character, and further conformity to the image of God's Son (Rom 8:29). Grace will not allow the entrance of what is removed.

SHALL WE SIN BECAUSE WE ARE NOT UNDER LAW?

Precisely in what sense are we "NOT under the law?" Does this mean we are no longer responsible to Divine law? Does it mean we have no interest in it, or that the Law has, so to speak, died? Indeed not! WE are the ones who have died, not the Law! We have become "dead to the Law through the body of Christ" (7:4). As already declared in this chapter, we are "dead with Christ," having been buried into His death through baptism (6:8).

In our death with Christ, we were moved into the realm of the Spirit. The Law that once condemned us was written upon our hearts and put into our minds (Heb 8:10; 10:16). We were brought into harmony with the Law because of the separation of the "body of sin" from us (6:6). In Christ our BASIC nature is that of the "new man" (Eph 4:24; Col 3:10). That is why we are "not under the law." The Law has no jurisdiction in the realm of the New Creation, for sin has no place there.

We are not under the "letter" of the Law, which kills, and gives no life (2 Cor 3:6). That is, the Law, by its spiritual and accurate code, cannot change the individual. It cannot get rid of sin or the desire to sin. To put it another way, man cannot be changed by means of a Law he carries out in his own strength. Therefore, we become a new creation in Christ, with the "body of sin" being cut away from us through the "circumcision of Christ" (Col 2:11-12). That condition has removed us from the administration of the Law.

As our text will show, we have become slaves of Another, and He makes no provision for continuance in sin.

It is foolish to excuse sin by saying we are "not under the Law," for we ARE under the Lord Jesus Himself, who came to "magnify the Law and make it honorable" (Isa 42:21). The One who gave

We are not under the "letter" of the Law, which kills, and gives no life (2 Cor 3:6). That is, the Law, by its spiritual and accurate code, cannot change the individual. It cannot get rid of sin or the desire to sin. To put it another way, man cannot be changed by means of a Law he carries out in his own strength.

We are not, however, without law. We are now subject to a higher law that is powerful against sin, as well as condemning of it. This is the condition to which Paul refers in First Corinthians 9:21: "... though not being without the law of God but under the law of Christ." Under Christ we hate what the law condemns and love what it commends.

Himself for our sins will not overlook continuance in sin. If we thought the Law was demanding, what shall we say of the Lord Jesus, who is leading us to glory. He is bringing us to the realm where sin CANNOT exist, and total purity and holiness are found. Shall He abide indulgences in sin among His people along the way? Indeed, He will not!

Those in Christ Jesus are subject to Him, and obliged to obey Him. No anarchy is allowed in His Kingdom, and sin IS anarchy and rebellion. Thus, "not under the Law" does not mean without Law, or without responsibility to another.

The following verses will show the utter stupidity of such a notion. Sin will not in any way be condoned by Jesus. The entirety of His salvation is set against sin, determined to utterly destroy it. Those to come to Jesus come away from sin!

DO YOU NOT KNOW?

"¹⁶ Do you not know that to whom you present yourselves slaves to obey, you are that one's slaves whom you obey, whether of sin leading to death, or of obedience leading to righteousness?" Now we come to the crux of the matter. Neither sin nor righteousness can issue from the Christian without the individual presenting himself to obey it. Both sin and righteousness demand that we yield to them. Life in Christ does not provide for either sin or righteousness to overpower us, or be imposed upon us against our will. We must "yield" to one or the other.

DO YOU NOT KNOW?

The expression beginning this line of reasoning is in the third verse: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" By saying, "Do you not know," the Spirit is showing how unreasonable it is to continue in sin. It requires a sort of spiritual insanity to sin after we have been forgiven of it and delivered from its power. This is not to say such a condition never arises, for provision has been made for the forgiveness of those who are already in Christ (1 John 1:7,9; 2:1). Yet, when sin takes place, delusion and distorted thought preceded it. It was an act of foolishness, and must therefore be acknowledged and confessed before the Lord.

"Between the yoke of Christ and that of sin there is so much contrariety, that no one can bear them both; if we sin, we give ourselves up to the service of sin; but the faithful, on the contrary have been redeemed from the tyranny of sin, that they may serve Christ: it is therefore impossible for them to be remain bound to sin."
- John Calvin

This is not a mere technicality. Sin is not allowed in the presence of the Lord. Those who insist on clinging to it will be excluded from His presence. Either their sin goes, or they will do! Thus, by saying, “Do you not know,” the Spirit is reminding us of what our “inner man” already knows. He is gently leading us back to the only acceptable manner of thought. At the same time, He is answering the foolish reasoning of men who continue to delight in sin, yet choose to be identified with Christ.

Living by faith will NEVER lead a person to sin (Rom 1:17)! Fellowship with Christ will NEVER lead a person to sin (1 Cor 1:9). Walking in the Spirit will NEVER lead a person to sin (Gal 5:17). Walking in the light will NEVER lead a person to sin (1 John 1:7). Being led by the Spirit will NEVER lead to sin (Rom 8:14). Men sin when they are “drawn away” by their own “lust, and enticed,” and yield to that enticement (James 1:14). They sin when they cease to walk by faith. They sin when they turn from fellowship with Christ. They sin when they are not walking in the Spirit. They sin when they are not walking in the light.

It is no wonder we are admonished, “If we confess our sins, He is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness” (1 John 1:9). Far be it for anyone to imagine that life in Christ reserves a place for transgression, and for involvement in the very thing from which Jesus frees us.

The Spirit will now reason with us about this matter. He will be forthright with us so that we may gain confidence to resist the devil on every quarter.

PRESENTING OURSELVES

“... to whom you present yourselves.” Here, the picture of being a slave differs from the ordinary perception. Slavery is here perceived as something that is willing—something preferred. To “present yourselves” is to choose the one to whom you prefer to be a slave. It is to step forward and say to the chosen master, “What do you want me to do?”

Willing Submission

Presenting ourselves is an act of willing submission. This is a unique view of those who are in Christ Jesus—they are free to pick their master! This is NOT true of those outside of Christ. They are not free, but are in “bondage” (Gal 4:3,9,25). Thus, prior to our baptism into Christ’s death, we were “slaves of sin” (6:20). While technically we chose sin, from another viewpoint we had no choice, for we were “by nature children of wrath” (Eph 2:1). We had to be alerted by the call of the Gospel before we could even desire accord with our Creator and Redeemer.

SLAVES TO OBEY

The point being made is simply this: our conduct reveals which master we are under. That is a startling thought, to be sure. But it will serve to awaken lethargic souls who are, like Eve, being deceived by the wicked one.

In a sense, all of life is really presenting ourselves to do the will of another. It is stepping forward to our chosen master and saying, “What wilt thou have me to do?” Like it or not, “you are slaves to the one whom you obey.”^{NIV} The NLT reads, “whatever you choose to obey becomes your master?” The NJB reads, “you are the slave of him you obey.” The BBE extends the thought, “you are the servants of him to whom you give yourselves to do his desire.”

Slavery to the master is contingent on presenting ourselves to him. It occurs when we make allowance to do the will of that master, whoever or whatever it is. In other words, we WILL become obedient to the one to whom we subject ourselves.

Notice the wording of this text. It serves to alert us to the seriousness of sin, yet not crush the tender heart. Slavery to the master is contingent on presenting ourselves to him. It occurs when we make allowance to do the will of that master, whoever or whatever it is. In other words, we WILL become obedient to the one to whom we subject ourselves. We are the slaves of the one whose work we do, and whose cause we promote. Those who do the devil’s will are not God’s servants! Conversely, those who do the Father’s will are not Satan’s servants.

This is a rather technical point, but it must be grasped by faith. Men tend to overestimate their ability, thinking they can extricate themselves from the effects of bad decisions through the exercise of their will. But this is not at all the case! The will of man is impacted by the one to whom he presents himself. When we make ourselves available to either Satan or God, certain results will follow. Neither God nor Satan will ignore our willingness to be subject to them.

When we present ourselves to the Lord as “a living sacrifice” (Rom 12:1-2), this proves to be a great blessing. However, when we make place for the devil (Eph 4:27), we bring upon ourselves a most grievous situation.

No Guarantee

Scripture offers no guarantee that we can recover from such foolishness. It is true, God can give such poor and ignorant souls repentance, but it is a “perhaps,” or “perchance” matter (Acts 8:22; 2 Tim 2:25). Men cannot flirt with sin without paying the consequences!

Viewed retrospectively, this is yet another way of saying, “You will know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes from thornbushes or figs from thistles? Even so, every good tree bears good fruit, but a bad tree bears bad fruit. A good tree cannot bear bad fruit, nor can a bad tree bear good fruit” (Matt 7:16-18).

This is to be common knowledge among us: i.e., “Do you not know?” It is not only wrong to be ignorant of this reality, it out of harmony with the nature of the New Covenant. Keep in mind, “No man can serve two masters” (Matt 6:24).

SIN LEADING TO DEATH

“... whether of sin leading to death...” Other versions read, “sin resulting in death,”^{NASB} “sin, which leads to death,^{NIV} “if to sin, the end being death.”^{BBE}

There is an outcome to all action! If men choose to sin—and sin must be chosen—they must know that sin leads to, or results in, death. Other versions read, “sin leading to death,”^{NKJV} “sin resulting in death.”^{NASB}

The Seriousness of Sin

Sin thrusts one into “the sleep of death” (Psa 13:3). It dulls the heart, putting it to sleep, and sears the conscience so that the individual no longer desires the things of God. Sin is like a bludgeon that pounds the heart into a state of unconsciousness. The will is weakened by sin, and spiritual understanding begins to wane. It is not long until the things of God are not loved or sought, and soon they are forgotten. Because of this, sin drives a wedge between the individual and God.

Men must not allow themselves to embrace a theology that rejects this Divine utterance. If “sin leads to death,” it is certainly not inconsequential. The degree of death is not the point here, as though there was no hope for the child of God who sins. The point is that sin always leads to death. Death is unavoidable unless men cease to serve sin. How, then, can anyone treat lightly the matter of transgression? Who can justify a light regard for sin, or a casual approach to it? Sin surely leads to death!

OBEDIENCE LEADING TO RIGHTEOUSNESS

“... or of obedience leading to righteousness.” This is a most powerful affirmation, revealing the true nature of life in Christ Jesus. Other versions read, “obedience resulting in righteousness,”^{NASB} “obedience, which leads to righteousness,”^{NIV} “to do the desire of God, the end being righteousness,”^{BBE} “you can choose to obey God and receive his approval.”^{NLT}

Here is an expression that conflicts with some theology. It may at first appear self-contradictory, for righteousness has been declared as “imputed” and “without the law” (4:6-8, 11, 22-24). If righteousness is imputed to us upon the basis of our faith, how is it that obedience leads to righteousness?

Different Expressions

Notice the difference in the expressions concerning sin and obedience. Sin leads to “death,” but obedience leads to “righteousness.” It might appear that obedience should lead to “life,” as compared to sin leading to “death.” There are two critical matters to be considered. How we view them impacts on this text.

- ❑ The type of obedience. This is not obedience as viewed under the Law.

Sin thrusts one into “the sleep of death” (Psa 13:3). It dulls the heart, putting it to sleep, and sears the conscience so that the individual no longer desires the things of God. Sin is like a bludgeon that pounds the heart into a state of unconsciousness. The will is weakened by sin, and spiritual understanding begins to wane.

The Spirit has already identified obedience with faith: “obedience to the faith,”^{NKJV} “the obedience of faith,”^{NASB} or “the obedience that comes from faith”^{NIV} (1:5). This is the obedience that springs from faith—obedience from the heart (6:17).

- ❑ What leads to spiritual life. Life does not come from obedience, but is “the gift of God” (6:23). Therefore, with care, the Spirit does not affirm that obedience leads to life, but that it leads to righteousness.

The “righteousness” that results from the obedience coming from faith is a godly life. This is the “righteousness” to which believers are to awaken, and is the opposite of sinning. As it is written, “Awake to righteousness, and sin” (1 Cor 15:34). It is the “righteousness” which is DONE by the person born of God (1 John

2:29). Here, in the matter of righteous living, is where the children of God are manifested, or made known. As it is written, “Little children, let no one deceive you; the one who practices righteousness is righteous, just as He is righteous . . . By this the children of God and the children of the devil are obvious: anyone who does not practice righteousness is not of God, nor the one who does not love his brother”^{NASB} (1 John 3:7,10).

Conduct Is Important

This passage is emphasizing the importance of our personal acts, or behavior. The Spirit will not permit the truth to be divorced from conduct. We daily face contradicting influences which we cannot ignore. In fact, we will invariably yield to one of the other. We cannot remain neutral, imagining that we are governing our own lives. There really is no condition in which we are the masters. We are always under the mastery of another. That is how we have been created. Our text affirms our master is the one to whom we yield.

There are only two manners in which yielding is evidenced: sin or obedience. That is a remarkable statement of the case, and conducive to sobriety and profitable thought. The person who sins has already yielded to his master. Conversely, the one who obeys has also yielded previously to his Master.

The character of every person is bent toward death or toward righteousness. It is attracted primarily to either good or evil. In this regard, disobedience is anything in which God is not served—any condition in which we do not yield ourselves to obey God. Disobedience can be a manner of life as well as a particular thought or deed. It always is the result of failing to yield to God, and choosing to yield to the devil. Disobedience is never inadvertent.

Faulty thinking

Here, we also come to grips with the faulty thinking of the natural man. Flesh views obedience to God as depriving one of the enjoyment of some benefit. It is seen as primarily restrictive, with no real profit realized for the individual.

There is not a grain of truth to all of these imaginations. You see, however, how successful Satan was in deceiving Eve on this very matter. He reasoned with her, “For God knows that in the day you eat of it your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God, knowing good and evil” (Gen 3:5). When “the woman saw that the tree was good for food, that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree desirable to make one wise” (Gen 3:6), she did not see the tree as it really was, but through the filter of Satan’s words. Her disobedience, together with that of Adam, led to death, just as our text affirms.

Obedience is Best

Obedience, on the other hand, yields a righteous life, characterized by holiness, and filled with “all joy and peace in believing” (Rom 14:17). All the children of God can “yield,” or “present” themselves as slaves to obedience. This is made possible when righteousness is imputed to us because of our faith. It only remains for those who receive this righteousness to be stirred up by the truth of it, and walk by faith. Then practical righteousness will be found in them as they eagerly seek to do the will of their Lord.

GOD BE THANKED!

“¹⁷But God be thanked that though you were slaves of sin, yet you obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine to which you were delivered.” With comforting power, the Holy Spirit assesses the condition of those in Christ Jesus. He has already declared their baptism to have effectively united them with Christ’s death, burial, and resurrection. Now He will further comment on their baptism, showing it to be a pivotal expression of their faith, and the point at which they participated in the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

GOD BE THANKED!

God is thanked for things in which He Himself is perceived as being active. The Lord is present in every aspect of salvation, and He is to be thanked and praised for that circumstance.

God is thanked for things in which He Himself is perceived as being active. The Lord is present in every aspect of salvation, and He is to be thanked and praised for that circumstance.

Active in Every Aspect of Regeneration

☐ The Father gave the Son “power over all flesh,” so the Son could “give eternal life” to “as many as” the Father gave to Him (John 17:2).

- ☐ Jesus “found” us when we were lost (Lk 19:10).
- ☐ We were drawn to Jesus by the Father (John 6:44,65).
- ☐ God gave us “ministers by whom we believed” (1 Cor 3:5).
- ☐ The Gospel was preached to us “with the Holy Spirit send down from heaven” (1 Pet 1:12).
- ☐ The Holy Spirit convicted us of “sin, righteousness, and judgment” (John 16:8-11).
- ☐ God opened our hearts so we could respond to the Gospel (Acts 16:14).
- ☐ We “believed through grace” (Acts 18:27).
- ☐ God the Father and the exalted Christ gave us repentance (Acts 11:18; 5:31).
- ☐ The Father revealed Jesus was His son, thereby provoking our confession of Him (Matt 16:16-17).
- ☐ We confessed Jesus was Lord by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor 12:3).
- ☐ By one Spirit, we were baptized into one body (1 Cor 12:13).
- ☐ Our hearts were circumcised by Jesus (Col 2:11-12).
- ☐ God made us alive when we were “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1).
- ☐ We were raised up from baptism by faith in the “operation of God” (Col 2:12).
- ☐ We were raised up “by the glory of the Father” (Rom 6:4).
- ☐ Our “old man” was “crucified” for us when we died with Jesus (Rom 6:6).
- ☐ We were “born of the Spirit” (John

- 3:8).
- ☐ God the Father has “begotten us again to a lively hope” (1 Pet 1:3).
- ☐ God, of His own will, “begat He us with the word of truth” (James 1:18).
- ☐ The Lord removed our stony heart (Ezek 11:9).
- ☐ We were given a new heart of flesh (Ezek 36:26).
- ☐ We are God’s “workmanship,” created in Christ Jesus (Eph 2:10).
- ☐ God has put His laws into our hearts and written them upon our minds (Heb 10:16).
- ☐ We were “added to the church” by the Lord Himself (Acts 2:47).
- ☐ Our sins were personally remitted by God, who “forgave us all trespasses” (Col 2:13).

You can no doubt think of many more Divine involvements in our regeneration. I have just listed twenty-six of them. These only have to do with our initial conversion. The work continues to an even greater degree once we are in Christ and living by faith.

Deity continues to be prominent in our lives as we advance to glory. There is no point in spiritual life where Divine involvement is not required. A mere sampling of such activity will confirm its prominence.

- ☐ God the Father is working in us to will and to do (Phil 2:13), teaching us to love one another (1 Thess 4:9), sending “every good and perfect gift” (James 1;17), and giving us the “spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him” (Eph 1:17).
- ☐ Jesus the Son is teaching us (Eph

4:20), interceding for us (Heb 7:25) bringing us to glory (Heb 2:10), and manifesting Himself to us (John 14:23).

□ The Holy Spirit is changing us from glory to glory (2 Cor 3:18), strengthening our inner man (Eph 3:15-17), leading us (Rom 8:13), and making intercession for us (Rom 8:26).

The proclamation of Divine involvement in every aspect of salvation is so unmistakably clear throughout Scripture, one wonders how it can be missed. In my judgment, the conspicuous absence of these realities in much of the preaching of our day reveals a most serious condition.

When the Apostle cries out "GOD BE THANKED!" it is with all of this, and more, in mind. It is tragic beyond description that multitudes of believers rarely hear of these realities. They are brought to associate their conversion with their own decisions. This circumstance is one of the reasons for the text before us. In it, the Holy Spirit rips from our thinking any view that would minimize sin, or move us to excuse it. The presence of sin is evidence of the absence of God. To the degree that sin dominates us, God is not with us.

THOUGH YOU WERE SLAVES

Here is a vivid description of our former lives: "slaves," or "servants," of sin!" Sin ruled us! We "obeyed" its dictates, and were shackled to it. The word "slaves" or "servants"^{KJV} describes a servile or subservient condition. It is a state where the purpose of another is being served—in the case of our former lives, it is Satan. A synonym is "bondman," which emphasizes a twofold condition. First, the individual is formally enslaved, and is not free to serve another. Second, there is shackling or restraint, so that the person is forced to serve the one to whom he is bound.

When we were "slaves to sin," we were "children of disobedience," and the "prince of the power of the air" worked in us (Eph 2:2). We were "taken captive" by him "to do his will" (2 Tim 2:26). This was a helpless state from which we could not extricate ourselves. We had to have a Savior, One who would deliver us from the devil and from sin.

The glory of our text is that we "WERE slaves to sin"—it is a state that formerly existed, but does not now! This is much like the expression describing the Corinthian believers: "And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God" (1 Cor 6:10).

An Important Point

Although I have said this before, I am constrained to say it again. Our preaching and teaching must assist people

Our preaching and teaching must assist people in seeing who they WERE outside of Christ and who they ARE in Him. They are not to be addressed as though they were still servants of sin. Nor, indeed, are they to be approached as though they never were slaves to sin.

in seeing who they WERE outside of Christ and who they ARE in Him. They are not to be addressed as though they were still servants of sin. Nor, indeed, are they to be approached as though they never were slaves to sin. If men and women are to gain the victory in life, they must be made acutely aware of the greatness of their deliverance from servitude to sin. They must be convinced their very conversion is evidence of the powerful working of God Almighty.

OBEDIENCE FROM THE HEART

"... you obeyed from the heart." Other versions read, "you became obedient from the heart,"^{NASB} "you wholeheartedly obeyed,"^{NIV} "you have obeyed with all your heart,"^{NLT} "You have given whole-hearted obedience."^{NJB}

Obedience Under the Law

A lot is involved in obedience from the heart. This obedience is compared with submission under the Law. In that case, men were motivated by fear and dread, for the Law held constant threats over their heads. The thundercloud of death hovered over the people: "the soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezek 18:4,20).

Thus Jesus came to "free those who all their lives were held in slavery by their fear of death" (Heb 2:15). Even though men failed in their efforts to perfectly keep the Law, yet these words sounded in their ears: "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them" (Gal 3:10; Deut 27:26; Jer 11:3).

Obedience under the Law was not wholehearted. This was largely owing to the fact that the people did not have a new heart, and thus could only be moved by fear. It was a slavish obedience that thought more of the reappraisals of disobeying than the advantages of obedience.

A New Kind of Obedience

How different obedience is in the New Covenant. The prophets declared a day was coming when men would be forward to obey God, and would not need to be threatened. "And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh: that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God" (Ezek 11:19-20). "And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them" (Ezek 36:27). "And David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them" (Ezek 37:24).

Obeying "from the heart" is being motivated by a "new heart" rather than an old law. It is having a preference for the will of God, and being aggressive to seek it out and conform to it. This is the very thing Moses promised would happen. How strange it must have sounded to Israel of old, yet how it must have captured the attention of those who believed. “And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live” (Deut 30:6). Those promises are fulfilled in Christ Jesus.

Willing Obedience

Throughout the book of Acts, the result of a stony heart being removed is revealed. Upon hearing the word of the Gospel, people became aggressive to do the will of God. Do you not remember some of their expressions? “Men and brethren, what shall we do?” (Acts 2:37). “See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?” (Acts 8:36). “Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?” (Acts 9:6). “Sirs, what must I do to be saved?” (Acts 16:31).

Obedience Motivated by Faith

This is obedience motivated by the belief of the Gospel of Christ. People become “willing in the day” of God’s power (Psa 110:3), something rarely found during the administration of the Old Covenant. Faith exercises a powerful constraint upon the soul. As it is written, “But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women” (Acts 8:12). “And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized” (Acts 18:8). “When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus” (Acts 19:5).

It is not our business to talk people into being baptized, using arguments from language or threats of future condemnation. It IS our business to preach the Gospel with power, that men may be constrained to believe. Then they will obey! Ponder how blessed the Gospel is. “Then Peter said to them, ‘Repent, and let every one of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit’” (Acts 2:38). “God, having raised up His Son Jesus, sent Him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities” (Acts 3:26). “And by Him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses” (Acts 13:39). In the wake of such powerful proclamations, people can become willing!

Gladly Obeying

Obedying from the heart involves a certain gladness. Obedience is cheerfully rendered to God because His Gospel is perceived and believed. Thus it is written, “Then they that gladly received his word were baptized” (Acts 2:41). “And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did. . . . And there was great joy in that city” (Acts 8:6-8). “And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed” (Acts 13:48).

What About Our Day?

When the Lord is working, a jailor can believe in the midst of an earthquake aftermath, while about to take his life with a sword. Gentiles can rejoice and believe while subjected to the opposition of Jewish leaders. An Ethiopian eunuch can believe in the middle of a desert.

It is possible for obedience to be joyfully rendered in this day! This is, after all, “the day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2), and we ought to expect obedience to be “from the heart.” The current prevalence of psychological preaching, “seeker-friendly” environments, and marketing the Gospel with carnal salesmanship, are anything but admirable. It is all too artificial, and the responses produced by these circumstances are anything but commendable.

When the Lord is working, a jailor can believe in the midst of an earthquake aftermath, while about to take his life with a sword. Gentiles can rejoice and believe while subjected to the opposition of Jewish leaders. An Ethiopian eunuch can believe in the middle of a desert. Surroundings and methods are not the appointed means of producing heartfelt obedience. It is the proclamation of the Gospel, which is God’s unique “power unto salvation” (1:16).

The believers in Rome had heard that “glorious Gospel” (2 Cor 4:4; 1 Tim 1:11), believed it with joy, and eagerly obeyed from their hearts.

THE FORM OF THE DOCTRINE

“. . . you became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching to which you were committed.” ^(doctrine) ^{NASB} Obedience has a beginning point—i.e., “you BECAME obedient.” In Scripture, that beginning point is identified with our baptism into Christ; i.e., “buried with Him through baptism into death” (6:4). Thus responses to the Gospel are expressed as follows: “when they believed . . . they were baptized.” Other references are provided under “Willing Obedience.”

Our initial obedience was not a mere formality, like fulfilling a technical requirement. It was motivated by a heart that had been “purified by faith” (Acts 15:9). That obedience also involved the “form of the doctrine,” which was baptism itself. This sacred ordinance, much disputed in the Christian community, is the only ordinance given to men that can be called “the FORM of the doctrine.” In this case, the doctrine is the Gospel. In its essence, or at its foundation, the Gospel is the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus, as affirmed in First Corinthians 15:1-4. In our baptism we die, are buried, and are raised with Jesus. We were baptized “into His death,” “buried with Him,” and “raised” to walk in the newness of life (6:3-4).

This was a very real participation in the Gospel of Christ, in which we were united with Jesus in every aspect of the Gospel. We became dead to sin, put away the old man, and were given new life. Is it not uplifting to ponder our union with Jesus in death, burial, and resurrection?

There should be no question about the manner in which we are baptized. If baptism is the “form of the doctrine,” its appearance must agree with the doctrine of which is it the “form,” or likeness. Thus, we go down into the water, and are raised up out of the water.

WHICH WAS DELIVERED YOU

what was delivered, but the believers. They were delivered to the doctrine. Both the “doctrine” (the Gospel of Christ) and the “form of the doctrine” (baptism) are teachers. Believers are delivered, or handed over, to them in confidence they will be effectively taught by them.

If the Law was an effective

In this case, the doctrine is not what was delivered, but the believers. They were delivered to the doctrine. Both the “doctrine” (the Gospel of Christ) and the “form of the doctrine” (baptism) are teachers. Believers are delivered, or handed over, to them in confidence they will be effectively taught by them.

The wording of the text is peculiar: “that form of doctrine which was delivered you.”^{KJV} Other versions read, “that form of doctrine to which you were delivered,”^{NKJV} “that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered,”^{ASV} “that form of teaching to which you were committed,”^{NASB} “the form of teaching to which you were entrusted,”^{NIV} and “the form of teaching into which ye were instructed.”^{BBE}

Men Delivered to Doctrine

Ordinarily, one would think of the doctrine as being delivered to men. Here, however, men are delivered to the doctrine. In this case, the doctrine is not “schoolmaster” to prepare us for Christ (Gal 3:24), how much more will the Gospel illuminate us concerning God’s great salvation? If the “copy and shadow of heavenly things” found under the Law (Heb 8:5; 10:1) was instructive concerning what was coming, how much more will the “form” of the Gospel open great things to us.

In this text, the Spirit is affirming the powerful effects of both the Gospel and our baptism into Christ. By God’s grace, we have been handed over to them both, to learn from them and be instructed more perfectly in the ways of the Lord.

Our Baptism Confirmed This

Our baptism into Christ confirmed this to be true. It was the result of the effective working of the Gospel within us: the Gospel which is the power of God unto salvation. In a very real sense, true Gospel preachers deliver the people who hear them into the care of the powerful glad tidings of Christ.

Through the ministry of the Holy Spirit, that Gospel will work within the people, effectively teaching and leading them. There is a remarkable liberty to be realized in believing that. Hearers can be handed over to the Gospel of Christ with great confidence. This is no doubt involved in the following texts: “having confidence in you all . . . I have confidence in you . . . the great confidence which I have in you . . . I have confidence in you through the Lord . . . we have confidence in the Lord touching you . . . Having confidence in thy obedience” (2 Cor 2:3; 7:16; 8:22; Gal 5:10; 2 Thess 3:4; Phile 1:21).

It is comforting to associate your obedience in being baptized with the powerful effects of the Gospel of Christ. It was no coincidence that the good news of Christ worked effectually within your heart. In a very real sense, you were led into obedience, escorted, as it were, out of the realm of darkness and into God’s marvelous light. Your obedience confirmed Divine working.

SET FREE TO BECOME SLAVES

“¹⁸ And having been set free from sin, you became slaves of righteousness.” Notice the confidence with which this announcement is made. There is no Sinaitic tone here; i.e., you SHOULD have been set free, and you SHOULD have become slaves to righteousness. All too often, words like this are shouted at believers as though nothing really happened to them when they were “baptized into Christ.” How differently the Spirit speaks to us.

HAVING BEEN SET FREE

The point of reference is our baptism. It is not our feeling, not our theological persuasion, but our baptism into Christ. We were identified with Jesus’ death “BY baptism” (6:3-4). There is where we were “planted together in the likeness of His death” (6:5). There is where our “old man” was “crucified” with Jesus (6:6).

Upon the basis of these realities, the affirmation was made, “For he who has died has been freed from sin” (6:7). In view of this believers are told, “reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin” (6:11). The glad announcement is then made, “For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace” (6:14). In Christ there is strength to have our thinking conformed to these proclamations.

Those in Christ have “been set free from sin.” While it is true we have been freed from the guilt of sin in justification, that is not the sense of this verse. This verses declares those in Christ have been freed from the DOMINION of sin! Sin can no longer rule them as a tyrant, dragging them down into perdition!

Let me be more precise. This text does not affirm we are free from the influence of sin, but from the domination of sin. We have not been freed from the sinful nature, which remains with us. We do have to struggle with sin, but we are no longer slaves to it. The glory of this is seen when we remember we WERE slaves to sin (6:17), but now we are no longer.

We have been “delivered from the power of darkness” (Col 1:13), which can no longer hold us against our will. Under the teaching of the grace of God, we can “say ‘NO’ to ungodliness and worldly passions”^{NIV} (Tit 2:12).

This is the “freedom” declared in Galatians 5:1. “It was for freedom that Christ set us free; therefore keep standing firm and do not be subject again to a yoke of slavery.”^{NASB} The phrase “Christ set us free” equates to the words “having been set free” in our text.

In view of this, not only is it right for us to turn away from sin, it is gloriously possible! However, if the saints are deprived of this understanding, Satan will more easily deceive them, bringing them into bondage once again. For this reason, the Spirit nails this truth into our conscience, convincing us of what really happened when we were “baptized into Jesus Christ.”

YOU BECAME SLAVES

Here, we rise higher than the flesh or natural mind can reach. We were set free in order to become slaves! Unless a person is convinced of the graciousness of God and the gentleness of Christ, this does not sound good. But it IS good, for men have no choice but to be slaves to someone. Before we were in Jesus, we were “slaves to sin.” How much better it is to now be serving righteousness.

What does it mean to be a “servant of righteousness?” It should be obvious this does not mean we are unwilling slaves of righteousness, forced by Divine coercion to do what is right. This refers to the manner of the new creation. It is the condition described in Ephesians 2:10. “For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand that we should walk in them.”^{NASB} These pierce his ear with an awl; and he shall serve him permanently” (Ex 21:5-6).

This precise passage is applied to Jesus in the fortieth Psalm. There the Savior is pictured as delighting to do

In view of this, not only is it right for us to turn away from sin, it is gloriously possible! However, if the saints are deprived of this understanding, Satan will more easily deceive them, bringing them into bondage once again.

“ordained”^{KJV} works are the expressions of righteousness, which is served by believers. Not only were these works “prepared in advance for us to do,”^{NIV} the new creation is wonderfully adapted for, and inclined to, those works. Thus, it is written, “put on the new man which was created according to God, in true righteousness and holiness” (Eph 4:24). This is the result of having a “clean heart” created within us and a “right spirit” renewed within (Psa 51:10). When “all things become new” (2 Cor 5:17), righteousness becomes our preference, and we eagerly and willingly serve it.

God’s will in offering Himself for the sins of the world. The words of the pre-incarnate Word are found in verses six through eight. “Sacrifice and offering You did not desire, but my ears you have pierced ; burnt offerings and sin offerings You did not require. Then I said, ‘Here I am, I have come-- it is written about Me in the scroll. I desire to do Your will, O my God; Your law is within my heart.”^{NIV} The tenth chapter of Hebrews makes clear that this Psalm applies to Jesus (Heb 10:5-10).

Slaves Like Jesus

We are “slaves to righteousness” like Jesus was the “Servant” of God (Isa 42:1). He chose to be a servant, as typified under the Law. The law specified that a freed slave had the option of remaining with his master. If that slave had acquired a wife and children while serving his master, he could opt to remain with them and be a permanent servant. The Law made this provision in these words. “But if the slave plainly says, ‘I love my master, my wife and my children; I will not go out as a free man,’ then his master shall bring him to God, then he shall bring him to the door or the doorpost. And his master shall

The parallel is seen in our own freedom from the tyranny of sin. Having been freed by the Lord Jesus, we joyfully declared we would serve none but Him. We then put our ears to the post of the door, so to speak, and received the confirming mark of willing servitude to God.

In a very real sense, this occurred at our baptism. It was there that we publically acknowledged our allegiance to God, rising from the waters to “walk in the newness of life.” Servitude to sin can only take place in a Christian when this truth is forgotten. Sin cannot dominate us while we hold this truth by faith, looking to the Author and Finisher of our faith.

SPEAKING ACCOMMODATINGLY

“¹⁹*I speak in human terms because of the weakness of your flesh. For just as you presented your members as slaves of uncleanness, and of lawlessness leading to more* lawlessness, so now present your members as slaves of righteousness for holiness.”

There is a significant point being made by the Spirit here, and it is being made with careful deliberation. He is showing us the utter unreasonableness of sin, and the seriousness of trying to justify its presence. This is particularly true when men use the grace of God as an excuse to sin, or as a means of making sin less serious than it really is.

Ponder how utterly preposterous it is to affirm that the liberty we have in Christ is actually LESS influential over men than the slavery they experienced to sin. Notwithstanding the apparent absurdity of such a postulate, it should not surprise you that throughout the centuries professed believers have sought to use grace as a soothing salve for sin rather than a Divine remedy for it. This tendency continues to this very day, making the passage before us of utmost relevance. It is the manner of the flesh to find an excuse for sin in the very grace provided by the God against whom sin is committed.

I SPEAK IN HUMAN TERMS

“I speak in human terms . . .” Other versions read, “I speak after the manner of men,”^{KJV} “I am putting it in human terms.”^{NJB} On the surface, this may appear to contradict what Paul says elsewhere. “Which things we also speak, not in words taught by human wisdom, but in those taught by the Spirit, combining spiritual thoughts with spiritual words”^{NASB} (1 Cor 2:13).

The language of the text is unique. The expression “after the manner of men,” or “in human terms” comes from the Greek words ἀνθρώπων λέγω. Literally, the phrase would read, “I speak humanly,” or “I speak as a man would speak.” In a sense, this is a form of apology, not because of any wrongness found in his words, but because the language used does not strictly describe our servitude to God. It is like he is saying, “In saying we are slaves to righteousness, I am using limiting speech that does not fully describe our relationship to Christ.” This he says because there is a sense in which we are NOT in bondage now, but have been liberated.

In my judgment, “the manner of men” is not the way the Romans would speak, but the manner in which the Law addressed the matter of serving (Ex 21:1-6). The language and manner of men does not allow for bondage and liberty to occur simultaneously. In the flesh, these are antithetical words. Yet, in the Spirit we are slaves and free at the same time – precisely as described in the twenty-first chapter of Exodus, already referenced.

One further observation on this text. Since the salvation of God is for men, and not for angels, it is couched in terms that can be best understood by men. In this, God condescends, so to speak, in order to bring the truth within our reach.

Additionally, we should note that the reality of spiritual liberty is too large to be contained in the language of men. Yet enough of it can be seen to induce men to seek heartily after it.

Additionally, we should note that the reality of spiritual liberty is too large to be contained in the language of men. Yet enough of it can be seen to induce men to seek heartily after it.

THE WEAKNESS OF YOUR FLESH

“ . . . because of the weakness of your flesh.” Other versions read, “because of the infirmity of your flesh,”^{KJV} “because you are weak in your natural selves,”^{NIV} “because of your natural limitations,”^{NRSV} “on account of the weakness of your flesh,”^{DARBY} “because your flesh is feeble,”^{BBE} “because you are still weak human beings.”^{NJB}

Our freedom in Christ is, in a sense, neutralized by our presence “in the body.” Having this “treasure in earthen vessels” requires a certain accommodation. This very situation is designed to emphasis that salvation is of God–i.e., through His power and grace. “But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the surpassing greatness of the power may be of God and not from ourselves” (2 Cor 4:7).

Yet, this humiliating situation--of having a treasure in a weak and frail vessel--does not mean we cannot know much about it. This is why Paul speaks “after the manner of men,” in order to bring the truth of our situation as close to us as is possible. He will not chide us about our situation, but will seek to penetrate through it as deeply as is possible.

JUST AS YOU PRESENTED

“For just as you presented your members as slaves of uncleanness, and of lawlessness leading to more lawlessness, so now present your members as slaves of righteousness for holiness.” Once again, the matter of our “members” is brought up. Verse thirteen admonished us to “present” our “members as instruments of righteousness unto God.” Our “members” involve our abilities of expression. They are also the means by which we make ourselves available for service to another. This includes the faculties of our soul (intellect, emotion, and will), and the parts of our bodies as well (eyes, ears, tongues, hands, feet, etc.).

Our Former Lives

Formerly, these capacities were given over to “uncleanness,” or impurity--things that defile and make one unsuitable to be in the presence of God. Under the Law, God tutored men concerning uncleanness, showing them there were involvements that excluded them from His presence (Lev 15:31; 16:16,19; 22:3,5-7). Prior to being in Christ, therefore, our entire lives were devoted to things that disqualified us from coming into the presence of the Lord.

The activities of reference may not have had an appearance of being “lawlessness leading to more lawlessness.” But we must not view our former lives according to appearance (John 7:24). The fact is that outside of Christ a steady declination takes place. Men become the more enslaved to godless living, so that they think nothing of purposing and working without the Lord in their minds. He is excluded from their purposes, and they engage in no conscious effort to serve Him. Their primary interest is themselves, and thus they plummet downward in the cauldron of iniquity.

Our former lives are vividly described in Titus 3:3. “For we ourselves were also once foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving various lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful and hating one another.”^{NKJV} Our desires before we were in Christ are

This is not a mere technical point. We cannot be “laborers together with God” (1 Cor 3:9) unless we are devoted to His cause! If we have not presented our bodies “a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God” (Rom 12:1), we will not be profitably employed in His Kingdom.

While this may appear rather simplistic, there is a remarkable absence of this type of mentality in the professed church. Men have even developed who craves the things that are above. The new must be sought with great zeal!

All of this involves a promptness, zeal, and a willingness to do “the will of God from the heart” (Eph 6:6). Those who are not advancing in the committal of themselves to the Lord have not presented themselves to Him. You may be sure, God will not turn away any who are eager to be utilized in His work!

THE REASONING USED

The reasoning employed in this passage is most powerful. We have been freed from bondage to sin, and transferred into the Kingdom of a beneficent and loving Lord. How, then, can anyone justify continuance in sin? What form of reasoning can be presented to justify lukewarmness or a lack of commitment to the Lord. We were not released from the dominion of sin to occupy a spiritual vacuum, living a life with no purpose or commitment. We have been called into activity—a work of faith. We have been re-created with capacities for that appointed work, and placed into an area where they may be done.

In view of this, sin becomes utterly absurd. When we stumble and sin, it causes shame, and thus it should. With dispatch we are to run to the Savior, appropriating forgiveness and experiencing cleansing (1 John 1:9). We will find that availing ourselves of these provisions will be conducive to a walk “in the light, as He is in the light.” That ever-increasing walk will bring glory to God and satisfaction to the soul.

The promise of God will be realized by those who wait upon the Lord—those who are eagerly looking to Him, to do His will. “But those who wait on the LORD shall renew their strength; They shall mount up with wings like eagles, They shall run and not be weary, They shall walk and not faint” (Isa 40:31). Yield your members to God and see if this is not the case. You will find His Word to be true, and will be the stronger for it.

Deliverance from sin presumes commitment to a more noble cause—the purpose of God. Freedom in Christ presumes being liberated to do something in service to the One who liberated us.

described as “the former lusts which were yours in your ignorance” (1 Pet 1:14). Our lives were marked by a certain eagerness to fulfill our corrupt appetites, and continue living with our own desires upon the throne of our hearts.

What About Now?

Now that we are in Christ, should we live with less commitment than when we were in sin? Is it comely for Jesus to be given less of our persons that Satan received? Indeed, it is not! It is not appropriate to serve the Lord with less energy than we served sin.

Just as sin led steadily downward, so true righteousness leads inexorably upward. The condition of “lawlessness to lawlessness,” is now replaced by presenting your members in “slavery to righteousness leading to holiness.”^{NIV} The idea is that we become usable to God when we are devoted to righteousness. Only then can we be entrusted with heavenly goods.

religious structures that allow for uncommitted people to seemingly serve God, while entertaining a fundamental desire for the things of this world. They labor in vain!

Practical Observations

Deliverance from sin presumes commitment to a more noble cause—the purpose of God. Freedom in Christ presumes being liberated to do something in service to the One who liberated us.

If ones eyes have been given to reading the things of this world, in Christ they are to be devoted to the reading of Scripture and things pertaining to life and godliness. If the individual was a person of appetite, giving himself over to wine, liquor, or some other form of stimulant or narcotic, all the more should he be devoted to being “filled with the Spirit,” and energized with the life of God. The one who eagerly sought to satisfy immoral fleshly desires, should more aggressively seek the gratification of the “new man,”

WHEN WE WERE FREE FROM RIGHTEOUSNESS

“²⁰ For when you were slaves of righteousness.” The Spirit will not condition in which the Lord found us. The sin, you were free in regard to allow us to forget what we were, or the recollection of that condition will assist us to recall with joy the great deliverance we have experienced. Motivated by that recollection, we will give ourselves more heartily to the pursuit of holy things.

In Regeneration, the Entirety of Life is changed as we become willing Servants of God--by Given O. Blakely

The fact that we were slaves to sin proved we were unrighteousness, and sorely stood in need of a righteousness from God. To put it yet another way, the fact that we lived without due regard for pleasing God confirmed that we were under the domination of sin—slaves to it.

Our circumstance was much like that of Israel of old. “As for your nativity, on the day you were born your navel cord was not cut, nor were you washed in water to cleanse you; you were not rubbed with salt nor wrapped in swaddling cloths. No eye pitied you, to do any of these things for you, to have compassion on you; but you were thrown out into the open field, when you yourself were loathed on the day you were born. And when I passed by you and saw you struggling in your own blood, I said to you in your blood, ‘Live!’ Yes, I said to you in your blood, ‘Live!’ . . . when you were naked and bare, struggling in your blood” (Ezek 16:6,20).

The picture is that of being born with a sinful nature—wed to the world, and of the lineage of Adam. From a human point of view, it was a hopeless situation. Had the Lord not sought us out and quickened us, we would have been shut out from His presence forever.

But He did not leave us as He found us! He said “LIVE!” He quickened us, or made us alive. As it is written, “And you hath He quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1). “Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ” (Eph 2:5). “And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath

He quickened together with Him, having forgiven you all trespasses” (Col 2:13). Now, the Spirit will reason with us about our former lives.

FREE FROM RIGHTEOUSNESS

The flesh is not willing to concede it has no goodness and profits nothing (Rom 3:12; John 6:63). When pressed, it will admit life outside of Christ was not the best possible. Notwithstanding that humiliating circumstance, flesh will not acknowledge the total absence of righteousness.

Because this is not a peripheral matter, and because much hinges upon the acknowledgment of this truth, the Spirit will press this issue. He has already affirmed “there is none righteous” (Rom 3:10). The Gospel of Christ has also been declared as the vehicle through which a righteousness from God is made known. As though the devotion of sixty verses to the proof of a NEED for righteousness was not enough (1:20-3:18), the Spirit now clearly affirms our state regarding righteousness when we were without Christ.

We were “free in regard to righteousness.” The KJV reads, “free from righteousness.” Other versions seem to muddy the waters by reading, “free from the control of righteousness.”^{NIV,NIB} “You weren’t concerned with doing what was right,”^{NLT} and “you felt no obligation to uprightness.”^{NJB} The expression contains more than conventional words can convey. The idea is that we lived independently of righteousness, and thus were totally unaffected by it. It is another way of saying we were unrighteous, or without any righteousness of our own.

The text is reasoning from effect back to cause. The fact that we were slaves to sin proved we were unrighteousness, and sorely stood in need of a righteousness from God. To put it yet another way, the fact that we lived without due regard for pleasing God confirmed that we were under the domination of sin—slaves to it. Righteousness can have no control over such individuals.

To put it another way, the promises of Romans 5:17 and 21 CANNOT be fulfilled in those who are “free from righteousness.” Behold what a different circumstance those promises represent. “Those who receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness will reign in life through the One, Jesus Christ . . . even so grace might reign through righteousness to eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.” Servitude to sin would be brought to a grinding halt in Christ Jesus!

WHAT FRUIT DID YOU HAVE THEN?

“ 21 What fruit did you have then in the things of which you are now ashamed? For the end of those things is death.” Because the truth of God conforms to and promotes sound reasoning, the Spirit will call upon us to assess our former lives. Not only were we “free from righteousness,” living for self and with no regard for our Creator, our former lives are now a source of shame to us. It is with grief that we recall our former ignorance and manner of life.

WHAT FRUIT DID YOU HAVE?

What a telling question! “What fruit did you have then in the things?” Other versions read, “Therefore what benefit were you then deriving?”^{NASB} “What benefit did you reap at that time?”^{NIV} “So what advantage did you then get?”^{NRSV} “But then what return did you get?”^{RSV} “and what did you gain from living like that?”^{NJB}

Such strong reasoning is designed to show us the lunacy of continuing in sin. No matter how reasonable temptation makes sin appear, we must ask ourselves this question: “What kind of return did sin yield when we were under its control?” What did it do for us? What was the harvest it produced?

Our ancient parents died “in the day” they gave themselves to sin! Cain received a mark from God that made him miserable the rest of his life. The world of Noah's day reaped utter destruction. The people at Babel were confused in their language and dispersed throughout the world. Pharaoh and his armies drowned in the very sea crossed by the Israelites, whom they pursued. Achan and his entire family were stoned and burned because of his sin. The Israelites who failed to believe God, could not enter the promised land. Israel tasted the fruit of the Babylonian captivity for their sin in disregarding the land-sabbaths. These are some of the more conspicuous harvests of sin. They are sufficient to alert us to sin's harvest.

Sin has never yielded a good crop. It has never given a person the real advantage. Even "the pleasures of sin" are but "for a season" (Heb 11:25). Whatever may have appeared an advantage was found to be but an illusion.

Moses

There came a time in Moses' life when he had to acknowledge life in Egypt was not to his advantage. Thus it is written, "By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward. By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, as seeing Him who is invisible" (Heb 11:24-27).

Moses did not see that portion of his life (no less than one third of his 120 years) as productive, or having fruit. Once he left Egypt, you never again hear him referring to that time of his life. He never mentioned his life in the palace, or any benefits he may have received in the capacity of "the son of Pharaoh's daughter." This man of God never wrote of any education he received in Egypt, or any riches accumulated there. He "forsook Egypt," and never returned to it until God sent him there to lead His people out of that nation. You never get the idea Moses missed what he had in Egypt.

Our former lives were like living in Egypt. It yielded no lasting fruit. Like Moses we have to come to the point where we refused identity with the world at any cost, and gave our allegiance to the Lord.

Paul

Paul frequently mentioned his former life. From the fleshly point of view, like the life of Moses, it was a productive one. He acknowledged he was a Jew, a member of the only ethnic group every preferred by God. He was born in Tarsus, brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, a respected Jewish teacher. He was taught according to the "perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward were an advantage to him, and gives a perspective of them all. "Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ" (Phil 3:8).

That is a very pungent confirmation of the power of our text. If there was NO fruit in the prior lives of Moses and Paul, who is the fool who will affirm there was an advantage in his life before being baptized into Christ's death.

Spiritual Caution

Caution must be taken not to say more than our text is saying. It is not saying the Lord was not leading and directing our paths in such a way as to bring us ultimately to Himself. The question is whether we had fruit at the time we were out of Christ. The answer is emphatically NO! Any advantage came AFTER we were in Christ.

YOU ARE NOW ASHAMED

Rather than being a source of glory, or a time of advantage, our former lives are a source of shame. Well into his Apostleship, Paul acknowledged, "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief" (1 Tim 1:15). His former life continued to be a source of shame, and not of glory.

There is a tendency in our time to glorify the past life of professed believers. Myriad books have been marketed about what well known Christians WERE, with little being said about what they ARE. It does not appear that contemporary religion promotes a sense of shame for life apart from Christ. Notwithstanding that condition, our former lives ARE a source of shame. We are ashamed we ever attempted to live without due regard for God and His great salvation. We are ashamed that we moved ahead with our own agenda, with a total disregard for the will of God.

THE END OF THOSE THINGS

As if it was not strong enough to point put the futility of our former lives, and the fact that they are a source of shame, the Spirit drives home one more pungent point. "For the end of those

Sin has never yielded a good crop. It has never given a person the real advantage. Even "the pleasures of sin" are but "for a season" (Heb 11:25). Whatever may have appeared an advantage was found to be but an illusion.

God" (Acts 22:3).

Paul also said he was "Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee; Concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless" (Phil 3:5-6).

During that seemingly advantageous time, Paul "persecuted" the "Way to the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women." He also stood by at the stoning of Stephen, "consenting to his death, and guarding the clothes of those who were killing him" (Acts 22:20).

When accessing his former life, Paul did not give thanks that he had sat at the feet of Gamaliel, or that he had the advantage of being among the Pharisees. He sited no superiority gained in an education in Tarsus. He did, however, give his assessment of that former life, and it reflects the truth of our text. He takes all of the best things, so to speak, things that things is death.” Other versions read, “For the outcome of those things is death,” ^{NASB} “Those things result in death!,” ^{NIV} “things that end in eternal doom,” ^{NLT} “that sort of behavior ends in death.” ^{NJB} The death was as real as the sin that led to it. Sin is no myth, and neither is the death resulting from it. The latter always comes from the former.

This is death from every vantage. It is moral death, where discernment of right and wrong is lost. It is spiritual death, where the soul is separated from God. Sin also results in the death of the body, when the human spirit is separated from it. This death is appointed to every person (Heb 9:27), and is a consequence of the entrance of sin into the world..

Death in all of its facets is the result of sinning—the effect of DOING things of which we are now ashamed. It is good for us to frequently consider these things. Due consideration of them will serve to make sin utterly unreasonable, and thus we will be able to avoid it. It is most difficult to continue doing what is hated, and proves painful to the soul.

NOW YOU DO HAVE FRUIT

“²² But now having been set free from sin, and having become slaves of God, you have your fruit to holiness, and the end, everlasting life.” The language of this passage is arresting. It is so unlike the Christian jargon that is being spewed out by the contemporary church. The thought of being “free from sin” is rarely expressed. When did anyone last hear the phrase “slaves of God?” How about “your fruit unto holiness?” Or, “everlasting life” being associated with “your fruit” which leads to “holiness?”

FREE FROM SIN, SLAVES OF GOD

The repetition of our change underscores the importance of taking hold of this truth. No person will be able to live an acceptable and satisfying life for God if this reality is not comprehended to a measurable degree.

Suffice it to say, freedom from sin is in order to serving the Lord. If the word “slave” seems too harsh for the flesh, ponder the expression of Jesus Himself: “nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done” (Lk 22:42). That is the posture of a slave of God! It is willing servitude that is prompted by thanksgiving and sustained by faith. There is no higher activity than serving God! But it cannot be done without being freed from sin!

FRUIT UNTO HOLINESS

“Fruit,” in this case, is the benefit, or result, of being “enslaved to God.” ^{NASB} Other versions read, “you derive your benefit, resulting in sanctification,” ^{NASB} “the benefit you reap leads to holiness,” ^{NIV} “the advantage you get is sanctification,” ^{NRSV} “the return you get is sanctification,” ^{RSV} and “your gain will be sanctification.” ^{NJB}

Holiness Is Not an Option

There is an important truth to be seen here. Holiness, or sanctification is not an option in the Kingdom of God. Solemnly we are admonished, “Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord” (Heb 12:14). The word used is the same as in our text. Other versions also use the word “sanctification” ^{NASB} This word is like a threefold cord that includes purity, belonging to God, and upright behavior. As you can see, holiness is not nonobligatory. Unholy people will not dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

Not Achieved in the Flesh

A person can pursue holiness by human effort alone, struggling in the energy of the flesh to be acceptable to God. Such efforts, honorable though they may appear, will not make one holy, or suitable for Divine use.

The Secret

Our text gives the secret to holiness, or purity of life. It is found in being “free from sin and servants to God.” ^{KJV} When we do not serve sin, but consent to serve the Lord, we will become holy! Holiness is the fruit, or result, of such a life. The Holy Spirit is free to work in such persons, producing Divine qualities within them.

Our text is speaking of the spiritual maturity that comes when we live for the Lord. It is expressed in Second Corinthians 7:1. “Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.” God has called us to such a life, and will not receive those who continue to live in sin. That is the meaning of 1 Thessalonians 4:4 and 7. “That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honor . . . For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness.”

None can effectively argue that this requirement is beyond their capability. God has re-created us with the capacity to be holy. As it is written, “*And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24). But this cannot happen if we do not present ourselves as servants to God!

Those who live primarily for themselves, with no regard for God, have put themselves beyond the reach of holiness, without which they cannot see God. That is a most sober consideration!

THE END, EVERLASTING LIFE

The outcome of sanctification, or holiness, is “everlasting life.” Again, this does not comport with some theology. Some would argue that everlasting life in no way depends upon us being holy. But the Spirit says it is the outcome of “fruit unto holiness.” Fruit that yields the harvest of holiness is the result of freedom from sin. Eternal life is the result of that holiness—“the end” of it.

There is a progressive nature to spiritual life. As we yield to God, holiness begins to grow within us. As holiness advances, eternal life is more fully realized, for eternal life is knowing God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent (John 17:3). That knowledge is not static, but is one of vitality and advancement. It is marvelous to see how this all grows out of being freed from sin and becoming servants, or willing slaves, to God.

There is an especially pungent word concerning this text I would like to share with you—one expressed over 400 years ago. “These things, unless we are beyond measure stupid, ought to generate in our minds, a hatred and horror for sin, and also a love and desire for righteousness.” JOHN CALVIN

It is enough to say, there is no salvation without holiness, and no holiness without willing servitude to God. Let us devote ourselves heartily and expectantly to the service of our Lord! It will prove to be a most joyous pursuit, and will prepare us for employment in the eternal purpose of God.

WAGES AND THE GIFT

“²³ For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord.” Here is the final explanation of the case. The Spirit here summarizes the rationale He has presented. In these words He shows us why sin is altogether unreasonable, and righteousness is absolutely logical. It is always insane to yield our members to sin, and it is always the highest and most flawless form of logic to yield our whole person to God.

THE WAGES OF SIN

Sin is here personified, as though it were a great monarch who rewards those who serve it. It is the nature of this dark monarch to give death to those who serve him. The imagery, in my understanding, presents death as the natural consequence of sin—something that cannot be avoided. Men do not sin in order that they may gain these wages.

Mortals do not think of the consequences of sin when they yield to it. Rather, they are seduced into thinking of the momentary pleasure they may gain from it. However, they gain the wages of sin because they commit sin, whether they want them or not. Sin hires us so it can kill us!

The word “wages” comes from the Greek word μισθόνια, and refers to military wages, or the allotment received to buy food and subsistence. It is the same word used by John the Baptist in his counsel to the soldiers. They asked him, “And what shall we do? And he said unto them, Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your wages” (Lk 3:14). The other place the word is used also refers to military wages. It is First Corinthians 9:7. “Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charges [expense]?”

Sin is here personified, as though it were a great monarch who rewards those who serve it. It is the nature of this dark monarch to give death to those who serve him. The imagery, in my understanding, presents death as the natural consequence of sin—something that cannot be avoided.

The imagery is not that of an abundant salary, to be spent on luxurious living. Rather, it is of a soldier given a meager allowance for the bare necessities of life. And what does sin pay those who serve it—yea, those who are enslaved and shackled by it? It gives them death: separation from God in outer darkness, without ray of hope or a drop of comfort to assuage eternal grief. God is greatly to be praised for delivering us from such wages!

THE GIFT OF GOD

How differently the Spirit speaks of our lot in Christ Jesus. God has brought us to a most pleasant place!

A Sense in which we Receive Wages

There is a sense in which we receive wages. Jesus said, “And he who reaps receives wages, and gathers fruit for eternal life, that both he who sows and he who reaps may rejoice together.” NKJV (John 4:36). The wages in this case are more eating the first fruits than receiving a salary—like the ox that treads out the corn (1 Cor 9:9-10). As the Spirit says elsewhere, “The hard-working farmer ought to be the first to receive his share of the crops” NASB (2 Tim 2:8). What gracious wages are found in these tastes!

Everlasting life, however, is in a different category, and thus it is referred to in a different manner.

“Eternal life” is “the gift of God.” Some versions, capturing the full sense of the word, say “FREE gift of God.” NASB The New Jerusalem Bible reads, “the gift freely given by God is eternal life.” Unlike “wages,” eternal life is not a temporary provision to be expended according to the fleshly appetites of those receiving it. It is not given to us because of what we have done, but “through Jesus Christ our Lord.” It is His toil that has brought us the gift! It is granted in His behalf, and on account of His labors.

Notice, He does not say, “The wages of sin is death, but the wages of righteousness is eternal life.” The comparison is between death and righteousness, not death and life. Wages are a just due, but a gift is freely granted

(John 3:36; 6:47). Gracious words have been written to us that we might “know” we “have eternal life” (1 John 5:13). But this is “ETERNAL life,” and thus cannot be fully received while we occupy these

It is a gift, to be sure, but gifts must be received—particularly the gift of eternal life!

All of this becomes more clear when we realize “eternal life” is an intimate relation with God rather than an impersonal possession. To have eternal life is to “know” the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom He has sent (John 17:3). That is not a right you earn, but a gift you receive THROUGH Jesus Christ our Lord.

Knowing God does not result from academic study. It is a gift from God, and is realized by all who believe on His Son. That life is realized to the degree that we present ourselves and our “members” as instruments of righteousness. In the crucible of that presentation we come to know the Lord.

by one who has a heart for us. The ultimate promise is eternal life, and thus it is the ultimate comparison (1 John 2:25).

Eternal life is an exceedingly large gift. Mortals are totally incapable of entertaining an adequate conception of this marvelous gift. It begins now, while we are yet in the body, for “He who believes in the Son has everlasting life” frail bodies. There is more to come.

Jesus spoke of “inheriting” eternal life (Matt 19:29). He said those who abandoned all for Him (thus becoming willing slaves to God) would be compensated “a hundredfold now in this time.” But in “the world to come,” they would receive “eternal life” (Mk 10:30). Until we receive the fulness of it, we are to “lay hold on eternal life,” ensuring that we have a firm grasp upon it (1 Tim 6:12).

Knowing God is not the result of mere academic study. It is a gift from God, and is realized by all who believe on His Son. That life is realized to the degree that we present ourselves and our “members” as instruments of righteousness. In the crucible of that presentation we come to know the Lord. Those who so live know the blessedness of this gift! It is never vain to serve the Lord, but always productive, invigorating, and joyous. Truly, our labor is not vain in the Lord (1 Cor 15:58).

CONCLUSION

We have been confronted with some of the most profound reasoning in all of Scripture. It is spiritual reasoning, and totally unlike the manner of men. The Holy Spirit throws down carnal reasoning as though it were nothing more than a frail barrier of paper. He takes the very arguments that have shackled men to sin, and dashes them into pieces.

This reasoning is profound in the sense of being incontrovertible, not in the sense of being beyond our grasp. Concerning the attempt to justify sin, there is no aspect of flawed thought that is not addressed and conquered in this text. He does not wait for flesh to raise its objections, but anticipates what it will say, and shows their utter foolishness.

The Spirit has dealt a devastating blow to the reasoning of the flesh, and well He should. Men continue to concoct teachings that permit them to sin with impunity. They continue to go to great extent to justify continuing to sin. But the Spirit will have none of it. He has shown us there is no place for sin in Jesus. Grace will not permit its presence. Wherever sin is found, it must be remitted, forgiven, and washed away, else the person cannot come into the Lord’s presence. To every principle of thought that seeks to justify sin, the Spirit answers with a resounding “God forbid!”

The Law of God does not allow sin, and grace does not either. The fact that we are not “under the Law” does not make provision for some sin, or for a relaxed attitude toward it. In fact, grace is a far greater disciplinarian than Law. Under grace we die to sin. Under grace, our old nature is cut away from us and crucified with Christ. How can sin be justified under such a circumstance? The answer is that it cannot, and those who attempt to do so only reveal their servitude to sin.

I am greatly impressed with the powerful effects of yielding – making ourselves available. If we make ourselves available to sin, we will be dominated by

it. On the other hand, if we yield ourselves to God, we will be graciously governed by Him. He is a good Master, and will employ us in His vineyard, providing, leading, and teaching us along the way.

The power of the Gospel is confirmed in the conferment of righteousness upon those believing in Jesus. That righteousness impacts upon the heart and mind of the individual, producing a revulsion for sin and a love of righteousness. It accomplishes what the Law could not do. As that righteousness is maintained by faith, it cultures a life of holiness, out of which a precious acquaintance with God is developed. When men receive a righteousness from God, it is effective in accomplishing the will of God. This is no lifeless imputation.

Once again, ponder the affirmations made in this passage. They reveal the greatness of salvation as well as its nature. They are all as certain as God Himself, and can be trusted to buttress sound and spiritual frame of mind. Those who embrace them will surely triumph! They serve to clarify the nature of spiritual life, the importance of the good fight of faith, and the surety of our hope.

- We are not under law, but under grace (6:15).
- We are servants to the one to whom we yield to obey (6:16).
- We WERE the servants of sin (6:17a).
- We obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine to which we were delivered (6:17b).
- We were made free from sin (6:18a).
- We became the servants of righteousness (6:18b).

- We once yielded our members as slaves to uncleanness, and lawlessness that led to more lawlessness (6:19).
- When we were the servants of sin, we were free from righteousness (6:20).
- The end of the things we once did was death (6:21).
- We have been made free from sin (6:22a).
- We have become servants to God (6:22b).
- We have fruit unto holiness, and the end of everlasting life (6:22c).
- The wages of sin is death (6:23a).
- The gift of God is life everlasting (6:23b).

These are the pillars of sound spiritual reasoning, and we are to reckon upon the truth of them. They are not suggestions but affirmations: declarations of the way things really are. As we approach life with them in our hearts and minds, we will be strengthened to do what is right and good.

If you are ever prone to minimize sin, or speak accommodatingly of it, remember what it did to you when you were dead in it—when the Lord found you. Remember how utterly fruitless life was then, and how it produced shame as you stood before God. Sin is still that way!

The Epistle to the Romans

Lesson Number 21

LIBERATED FROM THE LAW

7:1-6 Or do you not know, brethren (for I speak to those who know the law), that the law has dominion over a man as long as he lives? 2 For the woman who has a husband is bound by the law to her husband as long as he lives. But if the husband dies, she is released from the law of her husband. 3 So then if, while her husband lives, she marries another man, she will be called an adulteress; but if her husband dies, she is free from that law, so that she is no adulteress, though she has married another man. 4 Therefore, my brethren, you also have become dead to the law through the body of Christ, that you may be married to another; to Him who was raised from the dead, that we should bear fruit to God. 5 For when we were in the flesh, the sinful passions which were aroused by the law were at work in our members to bear fruit to death. 6 But now we have been delivered from the law, having died to what we were held by, so that we should serve in the newness of the Spirit and not in the oldness of the letter. – Romans 7:1-6 ^{NKJV}

INTRODUCTION

The Spirit has introduced the subject of the Law – the Divinely given standard of moral conduct. It was given specifically to Israel as a covenant. It also had a specific relationship to the entire world. The Law was more than a mere code, or moral standard. It revealed key aspects of the very nature of God. Although it did not unfold all of His Being, it did reveal enough to lead men to the conclusion they were coming short of His glory (3:23).

□ We have read of sinning “without the Law,” and sinning “in the Law” (2:12).

- Again, the Spirit spoke of the “hearers of the Law” and the “doers of the Law” (2:13).
- The Gentiles are said to “have not the Law” (2:14a).
- The consideration of Gentiles doing “by nature the things contained in the Law” is brought before us (2:14b).
- By being inclined toward things written in the law, the Gentiles are said to “show the work of the Law written in their hearts” (2:15).

- The Jews “wrested in the Law” (2:17).
- The Jews boasted that they were “instructed out of the Law” (2:18).
- The Law has a “form of knowledge and of the truth” (2:20).
- The Jews made their “boast in the Law” (2:23a).
- The Jews broke the Law (2:23b).
- Circumcision was of profit only if the Law was kept (2:25).
- The Spirit refers to “the righteousness of the Law” (2:26).

- ❑ Sin will not have dominion over believers, for they "are not under the Law, but under grace" (6:14).
- ❑ God forbid that we should sin "because we are not under the law, but under grace" (6:15).

Thus far, there have been thirty-one references to "the Law" in this book (2:12 thru 6:15). That is a most remarkable circumstance! It confirms that our confident understanding of justification requires some grasp of "the Law." Its true role in the redemption of humanity must be perceived, else deliverance from it will matter little to us.

MAN'S PENCHANT FOR LAW

Man has an unfortunate penchant, or tendency, toward being governed by law. While on the surface this appears to be the most strict way of governing man, it is not at all. Government by law presumes waywardness within those it governs. That is, of course, the reason for law: to restrain the outbreak of lawlessness. If man was not basically and fundamentally sinful, there would be no need for Law.

While the Jews rested in "the Law," making their boast in it, the Gentile church has promoted a dependency upon its own man-made laws. Whether it is a list of denominational requirements, or solicitation to be under a certain routine aware of their consistent shortcomings. This is accented by the fact that the Law offers no strength, provides no grace, and never bends to accommodate those who are weak. It is not lenient with sinners, and makes no provision for release from guilt or the cleansing of the conscience.

THE TEXT BEFORE US

The Spirit will now elaborate on the fact that we are "not under Law." This condition was not accomplished by a Divine mandate. Rather, it is the result of a Divine work. Believers have actually been moved beyond the reach of a condemning Law.

The point is not that we are beyond rules, requirements, or Divine commands. Rather, we can no longer be condemned by the Law, even though imperfection can still be found within us. This is a critical matter, and must be comprehended. Those who are under a system of Law, even if they are conscientious in their devotion to God, will never be confident before Him. Their lack of assurance will actually become the occasion for their fall.

Because this matter of not being "under the Law" is the basis for much contention among professed believers, the Spirit will not leave us in a state of ignorance. The Law of God is not at fault, and we are to maintain the utmost respect for it. The Law "was weak through the or discipline of life, the principle of law is being advanced. This is largely a heartless approach, and encourages men to live mechanically, and without real commitment to the Living God. Such living is more related to the Old Covenant than he New one.

Those who take God's Law seriously are convinced its demands are greater than their ability. They have the utmost respect for the Law, but are painfully flesh," and not because of anything that was in it (Rom 8:3). It could not change those who were under it. It could not remove their past or give them a fresh start. All it could do was point to their miserable flaws. However, God made a way of escape for us.

The passage before us will show us precisely how this was accomplished. It will also prepare us to understand the involvements of new life.

THE DOMINATING TENDENCY OF THE LAW

"^{7:1} Or do you not know, brethren (for I speak to those who know the law), that the law has dominion over a man as long as he lives?" Once people are added to the church (Acts 2:47), born again (John 3:7), or baptized into Christ (Gal 3:27), they need to know what really took place at that time. All too often, energy is put into bringing people TO Christ, without due regard being given to teaching them IN Christ. Although men are often prone to place the emphasis on conversion, the Scriptural stress is clearly placed upon nurture and edification. Conversion is necessary for deliverance from the guilt and power of sin. Growth in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ is essential for being found in Christ at His appearing.

Beginning Is Not Enough!

Although numerous doctrines have been invented by men that cause them to feel secure in merely beginning the race, there is no promise of good to those who do not finish it. Grace is never promised to those who do not keep the faith! There is no such thing as a justified person who does not live by faith (Heb 10:38-39). It is not possible to maintain the fellowship of Christ, into which we have been called (1 Cor 1:9), if we do not walk in the light as He is in the light (1 John 1:7). There is not a single blessing pronounced upon those who quench or grieve the Holy Spirit (1 Thess 5:19; Eph 4:30). Try as you may, you will not be able to find a solitary word from God that commends or promises to sustain those who do not "go to perfection" (Heb 6:1-6).

Although these things are commonly known among the faithful, yet they must be affirmed, lest we forget them. We are living in an era and place when Christians are subjected to doctrines that lead them to think as though these things were not true. A remarkable lack of interest in the things of God exists among professing believers. They insist on infrequency of gatherings and brevity in Scriptural presentations when they do gather. All of this clashes sharply with both the text and nature of Scripture.

This Is Not Pointless

It may appear as though all of this has little to do with our text, but that is not the case. In this section of Romans, the Spirit is reasoning with us concerning the unreasonableness of sin. He is showing us that we died to it when we were baptized into Christ's death. For the believer, sin is not merely committing certain wicked and reprehensible acts. It is returning to the old manner of life – living as though there was no God: i.e., returning to a vain life. It is "drawing back," or failing to live by faith (Heb 10:39). It is NOT going on to perfection (Heb 6:1), refusing to press toward the mark (Phil 3:14), and NOT growing up into Christ in all things (Eph 4:15). It is NOT laying hold on eternal life (1 Tim 6:12), and NOT running with from the power of darkness, they were "translated into the Kingdom of His dear Son" (Col 1:13). Not only were they released from guilt and condemnation, they were called to obtain "an inheritance among all them which are sanctified" (Acts 20:32).

When failure to grow in Christ occurs, it is because of the dominance of sin. Whether men admit it or not, when professed believers are not growing, they are sinning. When they are not advancing to glory, they are drawing back to perdition. If they are not pressing toward the mark, they are living in the flesh. That is the way it is, and our hearts must embrace that truth, and live in an acute awareness of it.

Grace is never promised to those who do not keep the faith! There is no such thing as a justified person who does not live by faith. It is not possible to maintain the fellowship of Christ, into which we have been called (1 Cor 1:9), if we do not walk in the light as He is in the light.

These conditions have dictated the reason for our text. This is not merely religious philosophy, or the development of a lifeless creed. The Spirit is showing us WHY we have been accepted by God. He is unveiling the true nature of spiritual life. We have no obligation to sin! In Christ we are freed from both its guilt and power. While we do have to contend with it, if we are overcome by it, it is because we yielded ourselves to it.

In order to assist us to triumph over sin consistently, the Spirit will now show us precisely how we were delivered from the Law. In doing this, He will encourage and equip our hearts to be determined to fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, and finish the course appointed to us.

DO YOU NOT KNOW?

This is the third time this expression has been used (6:3,16; 7:1). Although I have said this before, it bears repeating. The phrase "Do you not know?" means "Are you ignorant?" This introduces the Kingdom manner of thought. It is the way faith directs us to think. When the grace of God is received, it encourages this kind of knowledge. It is wrong to think in contradiction of what follows this expression. When the Spirit says, "Do you not know," He means salvation makes no provision to think in any patience, or endurance, the race set before us (Heb 12:1-2). While these conditions are common in the professed church, they are not acceptable to God. Unless they are corrected, they will be the cause of condemnation, for they are clear and unmistakable evidence of a rejection of the life and grace of God.

In order to correct these things, people must be made aware of the real nature of spiritual life. It is imperative that their conscience be trained, or exercised, concerning what happened when they came into Christ. They were not only delivered from darkness, they were brought into God's "marvelous light" (1 Pet 2:9). They were not only delivered other way. This IS the manner of the Kingdom, and it is our business to see to it that it is our way of thinking and living.

The new creation is endowed with the capability of thinking in this manner, and a lack of ability to think in any other way. In speaking in this manner, the Spirit clearly addresses the “new man,” thus encouraging the readers to put on that “new man,” in order to understand, and make progress in, life in Christ Jesus. By saying “Do you not know,” the Spirit is or engine, of the Law. The various statutes that surrounded the Law dealt with its implications, spelling out how it was to be applied. The summation of the Law consisted of two commandments. “The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor shining a light on the truth, showing it to be the only acceptable context of thought.

Law in any form, as it relates to mankind, presumes recalcitrance, waywardness, and the inclination to do what is wrong. Law also presumes some degree of ignorance and insensitivity. If these conditions did not exist, there would be no requirement for law.

THOSE WHO KNOW THE LAW

Here the Spirit makes a special appeal to those who have an understanding of the Law. This is the law of Moses, not the law of nature. There are at least two reasons for speaking in this manner. First, a special appeal is being made to those with more advanced understanding of the principle of Law. Second, those who lack this understanding will be exposed to needed understanding, thereby enabling them to expand their perception of the Kingdom.

The Premier Example of Law

The Law of Moses is the premier example of the principle of Law. The term “law,” in this case, relates to a means of becoming just before God. It has to do with measuring up to a moral code—a revealed standard of right and wrong. The Ten Commandments were the heart, as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these”(Mark 12:29-31; Deut 6:5; Lev 19:13).

When, therefore, we read of “the Law,” the reference is not to civil law, natural law, or other laws that are not directly related to being accepted by God.

Law In Any Form

Law in any form, as it relates to mankind, presumes recalcitrance, waywardness, and the inclination to do what is wrong. Law also presumes some degree of ignorance and insensitivity. If these conditions did not exist, there would be no requirement for law.

For the sake of clarity, this is moral law, or principles relating to the identity and enforcement of right and wrong. It has to do with regulating human conduct, which by nature is lawless. Therefore, it is written, “the law is for the lawless” (1 Tim 1:9).

Scriptural Use of “Law”

In Scripture, particularly in Romans and Galatians, “law” is compared with grace (Rom 4:16; 5:20; 6:14,15; Gal 2:21; 5:4), and “works” are men’s efforts to keep the law (Rom 9:32; 11:6; Gal 2:16; 3:2,5,10). “Law” is, therefore, a means of gaining God’s approval and “works” are the attempts of men to measure up to the requirements of the Law. With great care, the Spirit has confirmed to us that righteousness and Divine approval cannot come by the Law. All efforts to keep the Law failed, as attested by the Divine affirmation, “There is none righteous, no not one” (3:10).

When Paul says he speaks to those who “know the law,” therefore, he is not referring to a mere technical acquaintance with the precepts of the Law. Rather, he speaks to those who are acquainted with the PRINCIPLE of law as revealed in the Law of Moses, or the First Covenant.

DOMINION WHILE THEY LIVE

“Know ye not . . . how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth?” Here is an important principle upon which profound teaching will be built. The Law pertains ONLY to life in this present world. It exclusively addresses life in the flesh. The Law has no relevance whatsoever in the tomb, where the dead body lies. It also has no pertinence in the unseen world where those separated from their bodies reside. It will have no application in the glory, when we will ever be with the Lord.

The Law is for men “in the flesh,” and in the world. It is for those who are alienated from God and are under the dominion of sin. As soon as an individual dies, he is no longer under the Law. His state is fixed, and thus he is no longer subject to the Law. Using these principles, the Spirit will unfold the blessed state we now enjoy in Christ Jesus. There is every reason for the believer to be confident in the good fight of faith.

THE NECESSITY OF A DEATH ILLUSTRATED

“²For the woman who has a husband is bound by the law to her husband as long as he lives. But if the husband dies, she is released from the law of her husband.³ So then if, while her husband lives, she marries another man, she will be called an adulteress; but if her husband dies, she is free from that law, so that she is no adulteress, though she has married another man.” The Spirit now cites an illustration of the case before us. It deals with marriage at its root, and not with the various complications and exceptions with which the Scriptures deal.

In view of our Western culture, and the infamy into which marriage has sunk, our text will sound unusually strong. But we must not balk at the language employed by the Spirit. This is the Word of the Lord, and consequently the thought is expressed in “pure” language (Psa 119:140; Prov 30:5). It is not intended to deal exhaustively with the subject of marriage. It does, however, approach marriage from the ideal viewpoint. It represents it as God intended for it to be.

In keeping with the subject before us, the remarriage of the woman will be the point. The Spirit will affirm that death must occur before remarriage can take place. Once again, the teaching of the text does not pertain specifically to marriage, but to our union with Christ Jesus. That is the point of bringing up this illustration.

A BRIEF DIGRESSION

Because of the deterioration of marriage in our society, and within the professed church itself, it is necessary to briefly deal with marriage and remarriage. Men have become too loose in their views on this subject. Divorce has become so common in our time and culture that one out of three marriages are severed by divorce. The rate is slightly higher among those who all themselves “Christian.” Divorce is sought for the most foolish of reasons, and the whole matter of marriage has been greatly obscured because of this circumstance.

The reason for bringing up this matter, is that our text recognizes death as the only thing that frees the woman from her husband. I have already said this is viewing marriage from the ideal perspective, and not from the view of exceptions and unusual circumstances that may occur. It is not intended to be an overview of marriage in its entirety.

Divorce Under the Law

The law was comparatively lenient on the matter of divorce. This, Jesus affirmed, was because of the “hardness” of men’s hearts (Matt 19:8).

A “certificate [or ‘bill’] of divorce” was allowed if a husband found some form of indecency in his wife. The woman given such a certificate was free to marry another man (Deut 24:1-2). If her second husband also put her away, her first husband could not remarry her. It is written, “her first husband, who divorced her, is not allowed to marry her again after she has been defiled. That would be detestable in the eyes of the LORD” (Deut 24:3-4).

In keeping with the subject before us, the remarriage of the woman will be the point. The Spirit will affirm that death must occur before remarriage can take place. The teaching of the text does not pertain specifically to marriage, but to our union with Christ Jesus. That is the point of bringing up this illustration.

If an Israelite man saw a woman among the captives of a nation they defeated, and desired her, he could take her to be his wife. Certain rules were to be followed in bringing the woman into accord with the customs of Israel. If the man was not pleased with the woman, he could let her go her wherever she desired when she left him (Deut 21:10-14).

Even under the Law, however, God spoke clearly concerning how He felt about divorce: “I hate divorce!” [“putting away,” ^{KJV}] (Mal 2:16). It was never His intention for marriage to be dissolved. His tolerance of both multiple wives and divorce was not owing to any acceptance of those circumstances. Until Jesus, sin had such a grip upon the human race that things were permitted that were of themselves not acceptable. Without God’s longsuffering in these matters, He would have been moved to destroy the whole of our race. He therefore “winked” at, or “overlooked” these conditions in prospect of the coming Savior. But He no longer overlooks them. As it is written, “Truly, these times of ignorance God overlooked [‘winked at,’ ^{KJV}], but now commands all men everywhere to repent, because He has appointed a day on which He will judge the world in righteousness by the Man whom He has ordained. He has given assurance of this to all by raising Him from the dead” (Acts 17:30-31).

Jesus Spoke of Divorce

As you might expect, the professed experts of the Law questioned Jesus about the matter of divorce. They seemed to sense He was more gracious toward some circumstances than they were, and more strict concerning others.

The Sermon on the Mount

In His sermon on the mount, Jesus drew a sharp distinction between the tradition of the elders and the truth of God’s word. He introduced these comparisons with the words, “But I say unto you” (Matt 5:22,28,32,34,44).

One such saying concerned the matter of divorce. “It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement: But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery” (Matt 5:31-32).

Here an exception is made—fornication, or marital unfaithfulness. Under this condition divorce and remarriage are approved.

The Pharisee’s Question

Revealing how they read the Law, the Pharisees once came to Jesus asking, “Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?” Jesus appeared to totally ignore their question, going straight to the heart of the matter. “Have ye not read, that He which made them at the beginning made them male and female, and said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh? Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.” These men had asked the wrong question! In the origin of marriage, God had made no provision for the dissolution of it. Men were not to separate what God had joined together—something that occurs when husband and wife become “one flesh.”

The Pharisees were not satisfied with the answer. Seeking to snare the Savior, they responded, “Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away?” In his answer, Jesus revealed they had missed the spirit of the Law, viewing it as a lifeless code. “Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, permitted you to divorce your wives, but from the beginning it was not so.” ^{NKJV} The provision of Moses, therefore, was a concession to protect the woman and keep God from destroying the men. It was not an ideal provision at all, for God has never intended such things: i.e., “from the beginning it has not been this way.” ^{NASB}

Jesus then rose to magnify the law and make it honorable, thereby fulfilling the prophecy of Isaiah (Isa 42:21). “And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery.” Other versions read “except for sexual immorality,” ^{NKJV} “except for immorality,” ^{NASB} “except for marital unfaithfulness,” ^{NIV} and “except for unchastity.” ^{NRSV}

The words were as startling to Christ’s disciples as they are to some in our day. Knowing that handing out bills of divorce had become popular, they responded, “If the relationship of the man with his wife is like this, it is better not to marry.” ^{NASB} They certainly had caught the drift of our Lord’s words. Marriage was serious business with Him! His answer has caused much discussion among professed believers. “Not all men can accept this statement, but only those to whom it has been given. For there are eunuchs who were born that way from their mother’s womb; and there are eunuchs who were made eunuchs by men; and there are also eunuchs who made themselves eunuchs for the sake of the kingdom of heaven. He who is able to accept this, let him accept it” ^{NASB} (Matt 19:7-12).

The “statement,” or “saying,” ^{KJV} to which Jesus refers is not the one He had just made concerning unlawful divorce causing one to commit adultery when remarrying. Rather, it is the statement made by His disciples: “It is better not to marry.” That is the statement that is not adapted to everyone. Some people were “given” the ability to refrain from marriage, but such abstinence was not intended to be the standard for men. Some were born with no desire for marriage. Some had the condition forced upon them by others, such as those taken captive by Babylon (2 Kgs 20:18). Still others chose this manner of life to give themselves to the work of the Lord, like Paul (1 Cor 7:7). Only such individuals could embrace that it was “better not to marry.” For all others, as with Adam, it was not good “for man to be alone” (Gen 2:18).

In Romans, the Spirit is not basing an argument upon the marriage with all of its involvements, but with marriage in its ideal form. It would not be comely to base a truth calculated to produce confidence on a shifting circumstance. That would be counter-productive.

The point is that Jesus appears to be in conflict with our text. Romans 7:2 states a woman can only remarry if her husband dies. Jesus allowed for an exception: fornication, or marital infidelity. In Romans, the Spirit is not basing an argument upon the marriage with all of its involvements, but with marriage in its ideal form. It would not be comely to base a truth calculated to produce confidence on a shifting circumstance. That would be counter-productive. Rather than resulting in assurance, such an approach would cause even more confusion.

God Is Divorced

It may sound a bit crude, but God Himself has given a bill of divorcement to Israel, putting them away because of their unfaithfulness to Him. Here is what the Scriptures say. “This is what the LORD says: ‘Where is your mother’s certificate of divorce with which I sent her away?’” (Isa 50:1). He refers to Israel’s “mother” because He had rejected a generation of Israelites, and not all the seed of Abraham. And again, “I gave faithless Israel her certificate of divorce and sent her away because of all her adulteries” (Jer 3:8). He says “faithless Israel” because He did not put the whole nation away—only those who were unfaithful to Him. There is still “a remnant, according to the election of grace” (Rom 11:5).

Paul Speaks on Divorce

Paul gives some extensive teaching on marriage and divorce in the seventh chapter of First Corinthians. He speaks in view of the conditions at Corinth. There were apparently numerous homes where one mate had turned to the Lord and the other had not. Some were hasty to dissolve the marriage at once, not desiring to be unequally yoked with unbelievers.

His counsel to the people is straightforward. “And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, Let not the wife depart from her husband: but and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife.” That was the general rule, and strictly comports with our Lord’s words concerning marriage. The wife who insists on leaving, however, is told to remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband. All of this is to be considered in light of what Jesus said about separations that allowed for remarriage.

The Apostle then addresses those who are unequally yoked with unbelievers. Whether it is a believing husband and an unbelieving wife, or a believing wife and an unbelieving husband, the admonition is the same. If the unbeliever is “willing to live”^{NIV} with the believer he/she is not to be put away. The marriage and the children are “sanctified” through the believer. If this was not the case, the children resulting from that marriage would be “unclean.”

If the unbeliever is not willing to remain, the believer is told, “Yet if the unbelieving one leaves, let him leave; the brother or the sister is not under bondage in such cases, but God has called us to peace.” I understand the “bondage” to refer to the marital bond. The individual loosed from that bond is free to remarry. A special condition has been introduced, and a remedy is provided that is not standard, but is accepted.

In order to encourage determination to do the best they can under unfavorable circumstances, Paul reminds believers that they may actually save their unbelieving mates. “For how do you know, O wife, whether you will save your husband? Or how do you know, O husband, whether you will save your wife?”^{NKJV} (1 Cor 7:10-16).

Why the Lengthy Explanation?

There is a reason for this rather lengthy, but by no means thorough, explanation. First, it is important that no person uses this text to bludgeon believers who have been divorced. There are some things that cannot be undone, and this is one of them. We know from Christ’s dealings with the woman at the well, that there is grace for such people. He told that woman, who had five husbands, and was living with one that was not her husband,

“If you knew the gift of God, and who it is who says to you, ‘Give Me a drink,’ you would have asked Him, and He would have given you living water” (John 4:4:10).

Second, the text should be an encouragement to the unmarried to approach marriage with all solemnity. It must not be entered into with the thought that it can be quickly dissolved. It is intended to last until parted by death. A disregard for the view of marriage set forth in this text will yield disastrous and

The intention of this passage is to explain WHY we are no longer under the Law. By that, I mean we are no longer subject to its curse, for “Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them” (Gal 3:10).

The Spirit has already declared that we have entered into a state of death. We “were baptized into His (Christ’s) death” (6:3). Verses two and three are establishing how the Law considers death. Death removes one from the dominion of

The text should be an encouragement to the unmarried to approach marriage with all solemnity. It must not be entered into with the thought that it can be quickly dissolved. far reaching consequences.

Third, there is a certain manner of reasoning that is inherent in the Kingdom of God. The basis of reasoning is always founded on the ideal and sure foundation of truth. Our views of Scripture must NOT be molded by circumstances that vary, such as custom and tradition. To approach the Word of God with inconsistent circumstances as our foundation can only result in confusion and the removal of confidence.

Fourth, our view of God-ordained institutions, such as marriage and government, must be shaped by Divine intention, not the customs or abuses of our times. Marriage, in this case, is to be seen from the standpoint of what God intended, not from how men have corrupted it.

THE INTENT OF THE PASSAGE

the law. That is the whole intent of the passage.

The expression “free from the law” applies to the wife who was bound by the law to remain with her husband. When her husband dies, she is released from that law of marriage. She is now at liberty to be married to another man without becoming an adulterous, or infracting the Law in another area. DEATH FREES FROM THE LAW. That is the point. It moves the individual beyond the jurisdiction of Law. The Law is made for those alive in the flesh, not those who have died.

We must take care not to press the text too far. It is a general statement, and must be so taken without attempting to impose traditions on men. It is not intended to be either a bludgeon or an elixir of delusive oil. We will find that the application of this truth appears to contradict the very illustration given.

DEAD THROUGH THE BODY OF CHRIST

“^{4a} Therefore, my brethren, you also have become dead to the law through the body of Christ . . .” On the surface, this does appear to be at variance with the illustration taken from the Law. In the case adduced concerning

Our death with Christ has yielded Liberation from the Tyranny and Condemnation of the Law--by Given O. Blakely marriage, the husband died and the woman was free to remarry. In the application before us, it is the woman who dies—the one under the law of the husband. There is a reason for this line of thought. The Law of God cannot die! It came from God, and it cannot succumb. We cannot be freed from the tyranny of law by it dying. It is “holy,” “just,” “good,” and “spiritual” (Rom 7:12,14; 1 Tim 1:8). It is “light” (Prov 6:23), bringing the “knowledge of sin” (Rom 3:20), and witnessing to “the righteousness of God” (Rom 3:21).

There is no scenario in the Law that precisely depicts what occurs to us in salvation. However, the principle that declares what must happen IS here.

It is not the Law that has died, but us! The Law did not need to be joined to someone else, we did! By saying we have “become dead,” the Spirit shows our death was a Divine accomplishment, not something we ourselves did.

Before we can be joined to the Lord, a death must occur! Once death occurs, the jurisdiction of the Law is obviated. Until it occurs, we cannot be released from the condemnation of the Law or be joined to the Lord.

WE ARE THE ONES WHO DIED

It is not the Law that has died, but us! The Law did not need to be joined to someone else, we did! By saying we have “become dead,” the Spirit shows our death was a Divine accomplishment, not something we ourselves did.

The Spirit reasons, “that if One died for all, then were all dead” (2 Cor 5:14). In Christ, our death is as real as His! Once we were “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1). Now we are “dead to sin” (Rom 6:2). Because we are “dead,” we are “freed from sin,” and shall “also live with Him” (Rom 6:7-8). We are now “dead with Christ” (Rom 6:8), and are to reckon ourselves to be “dead indeed unto sin” (Rom 6:11). Again, it is written, “For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God” (Col 3:3).

Let no one doubt the reality of this death. It is spiritual, but not metaphorical. It is our union with the death of Christ. We were “baptized into His death” (6:3). If He had not died, we could not have died to the Law.

This death occurred when our sins were remitted and the righteousness of God was imputed to us. When we came into union with His death, we came out of union with sin’s guilt. As soon as that happened, the Law had no more dominion over us. It could no longer condemn us or drive us from the presence of the Lord. The Law could not defile our conscience or accuse us before the Lawgiver. As already illustrated, the Law has no jurisdiction in the realm of death, and we really died!

Freedom from the Law does not mean freedom from obligation, but freedom from condemnation. It does not mean freedom from the restraint of the flesh, but freedom from condemnation. It does not mean freedom from the responsibility to obey God, but freedom from condemnation. In Christ, we are out of reach of the condemnation of the Law, although we delight in it after our renewed “inward man” (Rom 7:25).

THROUGH THE BODY OF CHRIST

We have not become “dead to the Law” through any doing of our own. We have not cancelled its unbending requirement of perfect obedience by fulfilling its demands. We have not measured up to its standard so that condemnation has now been withdrawn. The law cannot retract the sentence it passes! God can repent (Gen 6:6; Ex 32:14), but Law cannot. God can forgive sin, but Law cannot. God can give repentance, but Law cannot.

A Sacrificial Body

Our death to the Law was “through the body of Christ.” This is Christ’s body from the sacrificial point of view—an offering for sin. Scripture makes much of Christ’s body from this point of view.

- ❑ A PREPARED BODY. “Wherefore when He cometh into the world, He saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but A BODY hast thou prepared Me: In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin Thou hast had no pleasure. Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of Me,) to do thy will, O God” (Heb 10:5-7). In His body, Jesus came to grips with the circumstances faced by the ones He came to redeem. His body was also the vehicle through which a pleasing sacrifice for sin would be presented to God the Father.
- ❑ BORE OUR SINS. “Who His own self bare our sins in HIS OWN BODY on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed” (1 Pet 2:24). The sins of the world were localized and judged in the body of the Lord Jesus Christ.
- ❑ COMMUNION WITH. “The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of THE BODY of Christ?” (1 Cor 10:16). At the table of the Lord we come into fellowship with Christ’s body and the benefits that resulted from its sacrifice.
- ❑ REMEMBERED. “And when he had given thanks, He brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is MY BODY, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of Me” (1 Cor 11:23). Christ’s body is remembered because of what was effected in His death.
